VISITS BY ARCHIVIST
MAY 1944 - FEB. 1945

NOTE FOR FILE.

I visited Southern Region on 27th February 1945 and discussed with Capt. Kearin, Adjutant, the transmittal of records to Archives.

I explained the necessity for complete and accurate lists being supplied by the offices which were sending files. I showed to Capt. Kearin the two lists relating to records from the old Region II office, and in particular the lists referring to the Brindisi Province files. In view of the fact that neither of the lists was accurate, and that the two lists did not agree with each other, it was impossible to say exactly what files were supposed to have been sent to Archives, and what were missing from the purported covering list. I mentioned also that some consignments of files had been received with no covering note or list of any description.

Capt. Kearin said that he had already written to the different offices in the Region explaining the way in which records should be prepared for Archives, but some of the papers now being received by Archives had been received at Southern Region before he himself had handled the job, and before instructions had reached some of the Zones and Provinces.

I informed Capt. Kearin that I would send a further letter embodying the main points of our conversation; he would then send further instructions out, to both HQ offices and to those in the field. In reply to my suggestion that it might be helpful if I were to visit different branches at HQ, Capt. Kearin said that he would prefer to send out uniform instructions from his office.

SUBJECT : Paroled P.O.W. Records.

1. On arrival at Palermo I made enquiries at HQ Region I and found that the only person there who could give me any information regarding Paroled P.W. was Captain Manuel of Public Safety.

Captain Manuel was very obliging, but said that he could not add anything to the information he had already given to Headquarters ACC.

2. Authority for the issue of Parole cards was given by 7th and 8th Armies; 7th Army dealing with the West side of the island, 8th Army with the East side. C.A.O.s were responsible for the issues, and sending of the duplicate copies to HQ AMG. In 7 Army Area, C.A.O.s were too pressed to continue the issue of the cards. This work was then handed over in the main to P.O.W. camps themselves, and the duplicates henceforth were sent direct to various Carabinieri stations throughout the West half of the island.

Captain Manuel thinks that the cards may still be at these stations, but it would take about a month to call them in. Captain Manuel wishes to know if he is to collect these cards.

3. A record of all Paroled PW was kept by the Provost Marshall of I.B.S. in Palermo, but unfortunately I.B.S. has been broken up and this record cannot be traced. Captain Manuel suggested that (1) The Provost Marshall may have taken the record with him to P.B.S. or (2) A duplicate copy was made and sent to NATOMIA.

4. As a last source of information Captain Manuel contacted Col Alberg, Liaison Officer to the Italian forces in Sicily. Col Alberg was no better informed on the subject but said that he had written to the following address in the hopes of obtaining the information required.

COMMANDING GENERAL

A.P.O. 534. U.S. ARMY.

(Attention PROVOST MARSHALL GENERAL)

S.O.S. Representative for P.W. Directory Service.

5. Paroled PW are still reporting in Palermo, and whilst there, I visited the office set up by the Carabinieri for that purpose. Here they had a nearly complete nominal roll of PW who should report to this office but only 40% approx were still reporting.

6. With regard to the 8th Army Area (East half of the island) I visited 56 Area HQ - Catania, as No 1 District had been handling the matter of Paroled PW and might have passed their records over.

I contacted a Sgt GODDARD of "A" Branch, 56 Area, who produced all the Parole cards handed to them by No 1 District, plus a nominal roll which is attached.

As 56 Area are very shortly going to replace 57 Area - Naples, I arranged with Sgt Goddard that he takes the Parole cards with him to Naples where they can be collected if required. Sgt Goddard said that he would like to be notified in order that he may dispose of them.

Dear Knell:

Many thanks for the typed copy of my notes, which reached me yesterday. Enclosed is a statement, dictated to the best of my recollection, on the talk I had with you and Leone. If I have unwittingly left anything out or have mentioned anything in what seems to you to be a distorted perspective, please do not hesitate to let me know, and I can get a new statement typed out incorporating any alterations. If you think that the statement is satisfactory as typed, I should be glad of a couple of lines from you to say so.

Yours sincerely,

ARCHIVES DISCUSSION

REGION I

Owing to Lt. Col. Morley Fletcher not being available, Capt. Collins' notes were discussed with Captain Knell and CWO Leone.

Mr. Leone said that the notes gave a pretty accurate picture of the situation and agreed that most of the filing was duplication.

Capt. Knell said it seemed that much of the correspondence now kept in the central files could be discontinued without serious disadvantage, but since the various offices of the region were scattered in different parts of Palermo, it had been considered advisable to retain at HQ any papers which the Regional Commissioner himself had been handling. There was bound to be a certain amount of delay, if the Regional Commissioner required papers which had to be brought in from outlying offices. Capt. Collins asked what was meant by the expression "matters which the Regional Commissioner had handled." He said that these might fall broadly into three categories; (a) matters referred in the first instance to the Regional Commissioner and handled personally by him, (b) matters referred initially to the Regional Commissioner, passed by him to other officers for their observations, and then returned to him for subsequent action, (c) matters referred initially to the divisions, sent by them to the Regional Commissioner in the form of a finished, typed letter, requiring nothing more than the personal signature of the Regional Commissioner. Capt. Collins said that categories (a) and (b) would be filed centrally, but that category (c) would, he assumed, be returned to the divisions for filing. Mr. Leone said that category (c) also would be filed centrally. Capt. Collins said that the existence of outside offices undoubtedly added to the difficulty of discontinuing the central files and that he felt it rather beyond his province to pursue the question of the Regional Commissioner's convenience. Capt. Knell agreed that we could not profitably discuss further anything which would hinder the production of papers for which the Regional Commissioner might call.

Capt. Collins said that, from the Archives point of view, the files as at present maintained would be of little value; Archives would not be in a position to "merry up" separate pieces of correspondence on the same subject scattered among two or more files. He suggested that one method of securing this would be for the central files to be discontinued except for the Regional Commissioner's papers. The latter could then be examined periodically, and sent out to the offices concerned for incorporation in their own files, when it was considered that the Regional Commissioner would be unlikely to call for the papers again. Capt. Knell said that he appreciated the difficulty from the Archives point of view of having parts of a story scattered amongst two or more files. After discussions with Mr. Leone, he said that he could make arrangements for all material for Archives to be sent in through Mr. Leone, who would be responsible for filling in any gaps. Capt. Collins stressed the importance of the files coming in as self-contained units but said that the method by which this would be achieved was a matter for the region to arrange. Capt. Collins asked if there would be any point in his visiting any of the offices which maintained files of their own. Capt. Knell said that he felt this would be inexpedient until he had had an opportunity of showing Captain Collins' earlier notes to Lt. Col. Morley Fletcher and of discussing the position with him.

Capt. Collins will send to Capt. Knell a supply of the Archives circulars for distribution to the offices and provinces within the Region. Capt. Knell will discuss with Lt. Col. Morley Fletcher the question of sending a covering note from Regional HQ when the circulars are distributed.

TO: Lt. Col. Morley-Fletcher. (Copy)

I have had a talk with C.G.C. Leone as you suggested. You asked me to speak quite frankly, and I am therefore doing so.

There are no files of the old A.S.C./A.C.C. HQ. office. These were all taken by the different Sub-Commissioners when the HQ. left Palmero. The only files left behind were those pertaining to Regional matters only. File on Regional matters are available from the date on which the Region was constituted - 28 Oct. 1943.

The central files are kept on the letter Despatch system, and consist of one large series, arranged numerically. There is no division by date, except where bulk has necessitated the creation of a second (or more) volume of an existing file. (The absence of a "date" division is not mentioned as a criticism but as a statement of fact.) scattered throughout the numbered series are a number of "dead" files, e.g. a file of circulars issued by A.M.U. since July become A.S.C. territory, normally, of course, has been added to such files. If they are not needed for reference purposes, they might be turned over to Archives.

Complete files are maintained of serially numbered documents, e.g. Administrative Memorandum, Executive Orders, etc. copies of these documents are sent also to the offices affected by the subject matter of the contents.

Files of Incoming and Outgoing cables are maintained, but these are incomplete, since they do not include cables relating to Economic & Supply. It was under the impression that American administration requires complete master files of all Incoming and Outgoing cables, but I am open to correction on this point. In either event, it is an advantage to maintain such files, arranged chronologically. But incomplete files seem to me to be of questionable value.

A large number of correspondence files is maintained on a wide variety of subjects. A copy of every outgoing letter is retained by the originator, and another copy is sent to central files. The incoming letter to whom it applies, (or the incoming letter received in reply) is filed by the originator of the outgoing letter.

Oct. 1945.

The central files are kept on the Denby Decimal system, and consist of one large series, arranged numerically. There is no division by date, except where bulk has necessitated the creation of a second (or more) volume of an existing file. (The absence of a "date" division is not mentioned on a criticism but as a statement of fact.)出入ed throughout the numbered series are a number of "dead" files, e.g. a file of circulars issued by A.S.C. since nicely become A.G.C. territory, nothing, of course, has been added to such files. If they are not needed for reference purposes, they might be turned over to archivists.

Complete files are maintained of serially numbered documents, e.g. Administrative Memorandums, Incentive Orders, etc. Copies of these documents are sent also to the office affected by the subject matter of the contents.

Files of Incoming and Outgoing cables are maintained, but these are incomplete, since they do not include cables relating to Economics & Supply. I was under the impression that American administration requires complete master files of all Incoming and Outgoing cables, but I am open to correction on this point. In either event, it is an advantage to maintain such files, arranged chronologically. But incomplete files seem to me to be of questionable value.

A large number of correspondence files is maintained on a wide variety of subjects. A copy of every outgoing letter is retained by the originator, and another copy is sent to central files. The incoming letter to which it relates, (or the incoming letter received in reply) is filed by the originator of the outgoing letter.

[WAW] If, however, an incoming letter is referred to, say, Finance, and the writer is referred again to the Regional Commissioner for personnel abstraction, then the Incoming and Outgoing letters are sent to central files, and a copy of the Outgoing letter is sent to Finance. Thus, there are two sets of files in operation, one being the central files and the other, the set maintained by Finance, or Legal, or Public Safety, etc. But, neither of these sets in itself presents a complete picture.

The files maintained by the divisions are, I should say, much more complete than central files, except as regards "W" above.

I understand from C.U.O. Leone that each office has modelled its filing system on an adoption of the "boxy" Regional system, but he is not certain, and I have not checked up. But, whatever the system, the central filing now places a letter in the file of its own selection, without regard to the file reference given to it by the originator.

I understand also that, except as in "an above, every paper in the central correspondence files is duplicated in the files of the different offices of the Region. The purpose of the central correspondence files seem obscure; and if papers in the "A" category were to be sent for filing to the office "functionally" concerned, there would seem to be no point in continuing a duplicate system for the remainder - a system which, at best, is only fragmentary.

Only a very small proportion of the files have any form of fastening, and the papers are loose. I am told that file binders are difficult, if not impossible, to obtain. This shortage is appreciated, and inquiries are already in hand to try to improve the supply.

I can extract that I have transgressed the rather nebulous line of demarcation between archive creation and office administration, but the two are closely related.

The file system at Region I is, for all practical purposes, an exact replica of the system in use at the old Brandis HQ. The central files were of very limited value! most of the Sub-Commissioners set up files of their own, and it was to the latter that one went for any real information.

The central files from Brandis are now - belatedly - being broken up. Every paper is being sent to the office concerned with the subject matter. If the office requires the document to file in case in its own files, the document is retained. If not, it is redundant.

NOTE FOR FILE

I visited Region VII HQ, Gunturaco on 3rd June and discussed activities with Major Walter and Sergeant Garbett.

Major Walter has had considerable administrative experience and it very soon became evident to me that he knew exactly the kind of thing we wanted, and there was not a great deal to add to the circulars.
He said that he appreciated the importance of filing and gave the matter his personal supervision.

Sgt. Garbett, who maintains the files in a central system had obviously a real and live interest in the job and a most intelligent appreciation of its importance. He too endorsed all the views expressed in our circulars and said that he was endeavoring to operate his files on the lines we had suggested even before our suggestions had been sent out. Region VII have, as was expected, nothing which they can release at present, but their material will be sent to us as and when it becomes obsolete.

Sgt. Garbett added that he joined Region VII when it was constituted and was having to build up his filing system by methods of trial and error. At the time of our visit he had not completed his reorganization of the system, but it was well on the way.

He said that he had been chief clerk to the chief of staff at Tizi Ouzou; had gone to Displaced Persons Sub-Commission with Colonel Kirkwood to reorganize it, and as mentioned above was one of the first members of Region VII staff. He made the suggestion that the chief clerks in other regions not yet activated might like to profit by his own experience; He felt that it would be valuable instruction for the chief clerks of such regions to spend a week or ten days with a region that had been going for some time so that they could see the main channels of regional filing systems. He assumed, and I think he is right, that the fundamental essentials of one region are much the same as those of another.

Region VII have an adequate supply of file folders, but are short of fasteners and would welcome a supply of whatever type is available.

MEMORANDUM FOR FILE.

I discussed Archives with Major Benton-Jones, of ANG & Army, on 31 May 1941. I explained that, as mentioned in the letter, I did not propose visiting him in the immediate future in view of current operations, but proposed to do so when convenient to him.

He said that in his view there was no real necessity for me to visit his HQ. They were not static; their office was always under canvas, and for reasons of mobility their paper work was kept down to an absolute minimum. At present the bulk was less than 100 files and it was essential, in order to preserve their mobility, that this number should not be increased. In fact, the batch of files recently sent to us represented surplus papers which embarrassed their mobility. Their office staff was very small, consisting of 3 or 4 clerks only.

Major Benton-Jones said that he would bring the contents of the Archives circulars to the notice of the clerical staff so that files could be maintained in the condition which would be of greatest value to the Archives.

Visited Region V on the 25th of May and discussed anomalies with Captain Murphy and C.S.M. Clark.

All the files of the Region are maintained centrally. All open files are numbered in the series beginning 200. The following examples illustrate the operation of the system, but the notation is not guaranteed as correct.

All legal files are 212/

All finance files are 214/

All Public Safety files are 216/ etc.

Each of these file groups is broken down by the addition of another numeral; e.g., 212/1, 212/2, 212/3, etc., as required. The system also arranges that whenever possible one sub-number in one file group is used for another aspect of the same subject in another file group. For instance, if the Finance Division have a file on Black Market Activities numbered 214/7, the Public Safety Division file on Black Market Activities will be 212/7, etc.

Thus any group of papers is classified as SECRET, & file under 200 series with the same sub-numeral is opened; CONFIDENTIAL papers are filed in the 700 series, and REFUGEE in the 800 series, again with the same sub-numeral.

If more than a group of papers is classified as SECRET and other papers are unclassified, all the papers are filed together according to the most highly classified document, so that it is not necessary to refer to more than one file to get the complete story. It so happens that a file cannot conveniently be assigned according to classification, the file itself is normally numbered to conform to the appropriate classification group.

C.S.M. Clark is personally responsible for the files. He eliminates redundant papers and the himself decides into which file every document shall be put. The filing work for the last year and with the technique in use at present could be said to extend the use of index fasteners if supplies can be made available. The files generally create a very good impression.

I discussed at some length the object and purpose of the markings, and Captain Murphy very assured me that we would cooperate to the fullest, and would see that our clerks were pleased round to provincial commissioners and other officers concerned.

In view of these file groups it is broken down by the addition of numbers 0001, 0002, 0003, 0004, etc., as required. The system also arranges that whenever possible the sub-numeral in one file group is used in another group of the same subject in another file group. For instance, if the Finance Division have a file on Block Market Activities, number 0004/7, the Public Safety Division file on Block Market Activities will be 0005/7, etc.

When any group of papers is classified as secret and other 600 sections with the same sub-numeral is opened, it becomes necessary to use 1000 to 1200 series, and so on in the 800 series, dealing with the same sub-numeral.

If part of a group of papers is classified as secret and other papers are unclassified, all the papers are filed together according to the most highly classified document, so that it is not necessary to refer to some other file to get the complete story. It so happens that a file cannot conveniently be split according to classification, the file itself is normally renumbered to conform to the appropriate classification group.

C.S.I. Clerk is personally responsible for his files. He eliminates redundant papers and by himself decides into which file every document shall be put. His files were for the most part bound with the two-hole fastener and the pages would be glued to extend the use of these fasteners. It is sometimes done to bind the files generally called a very good impression.

It is suggested that the object and purpose of the archives, and certain documents may suggest that an index card or file card should be used but our clerks were never told of this and other offices conducted.

MEMORANDUM TO: SECRETARY GENERAL

Following is report on my visits from 5 - 10 May 1944.

REGION II

I saw Colonel Zellers; Lt. Col. McCleary, Executive Officer, (a very recent appointment); and his assistant, Captain Edmund Young (who is probably taking up another appointment shortly). The latter, who has had considerable experience in Region II, accompanied me around the various offices, but pointed out that the following up on archives would be done by Lt. Col. McCleary.

I saw the great majority of the sections at regional HQ, all of whom keep their own files, and I discussed with them the various points mentioned in our circulars. One box of out-of-date files had been placed aside for storage, and this has now been taken into the Archives. Otherwise, all files are in current use, and nothing further can be released at present. A general complaint was that very few clerks are available for filing, and several officers have to keep their own files. Bearing in mind this limitation, endeavor will be made to maintain files in the condition suggested in our discussions with Mr. Jenkins. One of the sections had made recent modifications to its filing system which were not apparent from the papers. I suggested the addition of a brief note to the files concerned, so that an explanation would be available to a reader unfamiliar with the administrative changes.

I enquired also that, whilst we did not wish any documents to be destroyed which were likely to be of permanent interest and value, we did not want to receive whole files or purely routine papers. I stressed the point that what may be needed were files on the work of the Commission and not, generally speaking, on the working of the Commission; e.g., correspondence regarding telephone directories, reports to Commission vehicles, stationery requisitions, etc., were not matters peculiar to the ACO and would not normally be required for archives.

Lt. Col. McCleary welcomed the suggestion that two-hole file binders should be used, and asked if they could be supplied by HQ. I promised to explore the possibility and to let him know. He would also like copies of our circulars, which he will send with a covering note to the sections and provincial offices in this region.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

I saw Colonel Tellier; Lt. Col. McCleary, Executive Officer, (a very recent appointment); and his assistant, Captain Edmund Young (who is probably taking up another appointment shortly). The latter, who has had considerable experience in Region II, accompanied us around the various offices, but pointed out that the following up on archives would be done by Lt. Col. McCleary.

I saw the great majority of the sections at Regional HQ, all of whom keep their own files, and I discussed with them the various points mentioned in our circulars. A general complaint was that very few documents available for filing, and several officers have to keep their own files. Bearing in mind this limitation, endesver will be made to maintain files in the condition suggested in our discussions with Mr. Jeckinsen. One of the sections had made recent modifications to its filing system which were not apparent from the papers. I suggested the addition of a brief note to the files concerned, so that an ordinanceman could be available to a reader unfamiliar with the administrative changes.

I explained also that, whilst we did not wish any documents to be destroyed which were likely to be of permanent interest and value, we did not want to receive whole files of purely routine papers. I stressed the point that what were needed were files on the work of the commission and not, generally speaking, on the working of the commission; e.g., correspondence regarding telephone directories, repairs to Commission vehicles, stationery requisitions, etc. We will make available notes to the sections and provincial offices in the region.

Lt. Col. McCleary welcomed the suggestion that two-hole file binders should be used, and asked if they could be supplied by us. I promised to explore the possibility and to let him know. He would also like copies of our circulars, which we will send with a covering note to the sections and provincial offices in the region.

DISPOSED EXECUTIVE SUB-COMMISSION

I saw the Adjutant, Captain Giacomo and his chief clerk (S.O. L.). The discussions proceeded on much the same lines as those with Section II. There is a batch of old files which are occasionally used for references, and may be ready for archives in a few months time. The chief clerk apologized for their unsatisfactory condition; he had inherited these files from his predecessor, but was in process of building up a new system. This is nearly complete and a copy of the new file register will be sent to us. Both he and Capt. Giacomo have evidently given a good deal of thought to their files, and I think we shall find their material in good shape.

This excludes, of course, the obsolete batch mentioned above; I explained that their presence of work was appreciated, and if they would send this batch into Archives with an adequate explanatory list, Archives would undertake to clear up the project.

A supply of two-hole binders would be welcomed.

AIR FORCE SUB-COMMISSION

I spoke to S/L Walton, again on the same lines, and was impressed by his very ready appreciation of the essentials of the problem. He keeps a watchful eye on the files of the office and makes periodic examination of them. Whilst I was with him he instructed his clerk to open an Archives file on the spot: he is placing in it a note of our suggestion for future reference when sending out obsolete material. It was evident to me however, although I did not examine the files, that S/L Walton's ideas are so sound that very little guidance, if any, was necessary. He spontaneously made the remark that his idea of filing was that, were he removed at a moment's notice, his files would be in such a condition that his successor could see at once from them what had been going on and could carry on the job.

AVP
S/1515
M

I mentioned the two-hole file binders; I understand that the Air Vice Marshal had very strong views against their use, and I considered it imprudent to press the point.

AIR FORCE SUB-COMMISSION

I had a similar discussion with Major Cuttance. He makes periodic local examinations of the files, and sees but what he considers of no importance or interest, and these documents are destroyed. I selected the information that elimination was properly handled, but deplored the destruction of papers. I explained that, although papers might well cease to be of any administrative value, they might - and probably would - continue to have value from the archival point of view. This point will be borne in mind.

Major Cuttance said that many of their files related to A.A.C. batteries (Q.F. 25 lb), and he wondered if they would be of interest. I said that, insofar as they related to personnel, organization, supplies and equipment of the Marine Forces, they would be, because they aspect that interests and purpose of the day to day work of the Air Sub-Commission.

A new diary is also kept. This is the only OCC office yet visited which keeps a new diary, and it was agreed that in view of the predominant military nature of this Sub-Commission's work, it would be advisable to continue it.

having ready appreciation of the essentials of the problem. He keeps a watchful eye on the files of his office and makes periodic examination of them. Whilst I was with him he instructed his clerks to open an Archives file on the spot; he is placing in it a note of our discussion for future references when weeding out obsolete material. It was evident to me however, although I did not examine the files, that S/L Maitland's ideas are so sound that very little guidance, if any, was necessary. He spontaneously made the remark that his idea of filing was that, were he removed at a moment's notice, his files would be in such a condition that his successor could see at once from them what had been going on and could carry on the job.

1 mentioned the two-hole file binders; I understand that the Air Vice Marshal has very strong views against their use, and I considered it imprudent to press the point.

ARMY SUB-COMMISSION

I had a similar discussion with Major Butterworth. He makes periodic examinations of the files, and weeds out what he considers of no importance or interest, and those documents are destroyed. I welcomed the information that elimination was properly handled, but deplored the destruction of papers. I explained that, although papers might have ceased to be of any administrative value, they might - and probably would - continue to have value from the Archives point of view. This point will be borne in mind.

Major Butterworth said that many of their files related to A.A. matters (G.I. & G.H.), and he wondered if they would be of interest. I said that, insofar as they related to personnel, organization, supplies and equipment of the Italian Forces, they would be, because they showed the nature and purpose of the day to day work of the Army Sub-Commission.

A war diary is also kept. This is the only AGC office yet visited which keeps a war diary, and it was agreed that in view of the predominantly military nature of this sub-Commission's work, it would be advisable to continue it.

Major Butterworth said that his office was neither strongly wedded to the British photocopies method of fastening, but would be interested to see a sample of the two-hole binder.

Conclusions:

As expected, my business did not evoke wild enthusiasm, and although the attitude of the people I visited varied from mild interest to polite tolerance, I am satisfied with results and I personally found my visit instructive.

The point which made the greatest impression on me was that there is a noticeable increase in the element of stability in the Commission's organization, and this was to some extent reflected in the filing systems.

It is inevitable with any organization such as the AGO that its internal administration suffers from growing pains, and procedure by trial and error is frequently necessary before the most convenient filing system is devised. Several offices had already scrapped one or even two systems, and had either established a new orders or were in process of cleaning up the old and assimilating into the new. Filing generally was in much better shape than I had been led to believe by the sample of files received from some of the earlier offices. That being so, I felt it unnecessary to risk causing irritation by what might have seemed unnecessary detail. After all, good files mean good archives.

The question of elimination is difficult. Without a pretty close scrutiny of the work of each office, one can give only a vague decision - and that probably a wrong one. The Commission is not like a Government Department or Municipality with 50 years experience on recurrent matters of administration, which guide it in the preparation of a schedule for the destruction of documents.

The principles which guided me in my tasks were as follows: - Good filing is the basis; if this is carried out conscientiously, there is little more we can reasonably expect from the sub-commissions, etc. If they are in doubt, they should preserve material and send it to Archives. The regions, sub-commissions, etc., are heavily pressed with matters of current administration of the country. The academic interest of posterity must yield place to the practical interest of the present. Provided no guard against arbitrary destruction, Archives can deal at some future date with any further purging which may be desirable. If sub-commissions and regions in their day to day work can help Archives by good filing from the outset, so much the better.

MEMORANDUM

I visited Region III on 4 May 1944, and discussed Archives with Captain Neufeld, Executive Officer. Captain Neufeld gave me a copy of Region III Staff Memo No. 1, attached, dealing with administrative procedure within the Region.

Files are generally maintained by the different divisions of the Regional Headquarters, but certain files are maintained centrally. These files are:

- Outgoing letters, nonclassified
- Outgoing letters, classified
- Incoming letters, classified

The procedure is that copies of all outgoing letters are sent to the central files (classified or non-classified, as the case may be), in addition to a copy being retained by the division from which they emanate.

Incoming classified documents are sent to the divisions concerned for perusal and then returned to the central files of classified documents. I mentioned that, whilst not wishing to interfere with the internal administration of the Region, it seemed that files under this system were bound to be fragmentary, and in order to produce a complete picture it would be necessary to call for at least two files. Further, the arrangement of the central files of classified documents does not correspond to the arrangement of files maintained by the divisions. I suggested (and Captain Neufeld agreed) that it would make for simplification if the central files were abolished and if each division were entirely responsible for the safe custody of documents affecting their business whether they are classified or not.

Captain Neufeld suggested that before making any alteration it would be advisable to see Captain Heath, Security Officer, in order to enquire if he had any reason for classified documents to be separately filed. I saw Captain Heath, who said that there was no objection, from the security angle, to divisions maintaining classified documents affecting their own work.

The matter was further discussed with two NCUs responsible for the central files, and arrangements were made to disperse the contents of the central classified files to the divisions concerned, and to discontinue the use of these files for the future.

Captain Neufeld asked for 30 copies of each of the two circulars already issued regarding Archives, for distribution to divisions and provincial commissioners.

It was agreed that any office producing numbered series of documents would be responsible for maintaining master files for ultimate transmission to the Archives. It was uncertain that the Region holds a number of spare copies of circulars of different kinds, and I suggested that these should be sent to the Archives to assist in building up master files of documents previously issued, in respect of which no master files are at present ~~now~~ known to exist.

In answer to an inquiry by Sgt. Lewis, I said that from the Archives point of view, we did not wish to receive documents extracted piecemeal from files. We should prefer the Region to hold the files until they could be turned over intact. I added that files so received would not be broken up or rearranged in any way, but would be kept in the same condition as handed over to the Archives, and that the files would be readily available for reference if required at any time.

ARCHIVES

- I. I visited AMG 2 Army on 6 April 1944 and discussed Archives with Major Jones, Administrative Staff Officer.

There are no files which can be sent to Archives at the moment; Major Jones is engaged in overhauling the filing arrangement, and on the day before my visit had submitted a draft circular to all branches of AMG (Field) 2 Army to Colonel Ashley for approval.

The files are housed in a central file office, but each branch, subcommission, etc. has its own clerk who is responsible for ensuring that papers find their way into the proper files. Major Jones mentioned that this system has advantages over the employment of a general filing clerk. Under his arrangement, each clerk becomes familiar with the subject matter of his particular job, and is thus enabled to take an intelligent interest in what he is doing, rather than act as a routine filing machine.

Under the arrangement which Major Jones has in mind offices will be held responsible for checking through their own files periodically and for maintaining them in a satisfactory condition.

An up to date register of files is being prepared and Major Jones will let us have a copy of this when it is complete, together with a copy of his "internal" circular on the keeping of files. It is not expected that there will be any files available for Archives for at least two months.

Major Jones was most helpful. I am confident that we shall have his full cooperation.

- II. Whilst at Caserta I took the opportunity of visiting Major (now Lt. Col.) Ames, C. A. Section. As was anticipated, there are no files from this section available for Archives yet, but I informed Major Ames of the Archive plans which were being made and asked that he also keep in mind the fact that his files would be required in due course.

Here, too, the filing system was in process of organisation. GWO Germane had prepared a draft office circular on Major Ames instructions, and I discussed the draft with them.

I suggested modification of one instruction in the circular which to my mind would have rendered the files unnecessarily complicated. The modification was accepted and GWO Germane will send us a copy of his circular in its final form together with a copy of the file register.
