1. May I please request that this Subcommission be allowed to proceed to ROME at the earliest possible date.

2. At present we are performing no function that could not better be performed there. Major De Wald reports that he is working under great difficulties in the absence of office staff and files and that there is an enormous amount of work awaiting us that can only be done there, notably in the compilation of central registers of art objects which have been displaced by hostilities and other work involving the use of central Italian records. Our liaison arrangements with the Italian Government (which are not at ministerial level) can be performed equally well there.

3. We are moreover becoming very much out of touch with ^{precisely} those parts of occupied territory where our work is most important and pressing, and are unable to make any satisfactory use of our reserve of specialist knowledge.

ADMIN ACCOMMODATION

Sir,

I have to report that in my view the allotment of accommodation in ACC HQ has been made on a most unsatisfactory basis. No sound or logical basis of allotment is in evidence and the result shows neither political understanding nor businesslike efficiency.

There are two principles which should have governed the allocation.

First to ensure that officers who would require to receive frequently Italian Ministers, senior officials or managers of important utility or commercial undertakings were suitably housed both as to the accessibility of their offices and the manner in which their importance should impress those with whom they deal.

Secondly, the amount of space allotted to the various branches should be in proportion to the number of officers in those branches.

Both these principles have been flagrantly ignored.

As regards the first, the Admin and Econ Secs whose whole business is concerned with the Italian Ministries and concerns are housed on the 5th and 6th floors while RCMG which is only concerned with the internal machinery of government is housed on the 2nd, 3rd and 4th floors.

How far the second has been ignored is shown by the following table:

Admin Sec	with 90 officers	has 44 rooms	density 2. per room.
Econ Sec	with 150 officers	has 90 rooms	density 1.7 per room.
RCMG Sec	with 120 officers	has 150 rooms	density .8 per room.

No rooms have been deducted for clerks so that the density is in fact greater than that shown.

The comparison is in fact worse than this as some of the 120 RCMG officers (Adj Gen, HQ Comdt etc and their staffs) are housed on the first floor and I do not know either the numbers of the officers concerned or how many rooms they occupy and have made no allowance for this.

Further, when considering the Admin and Econ Secs figures it must be realised that many officers have to be suitably housed to receive important visitors and that the other officers will have to be still more overcrowded.

There are two ways in which the accommodation could have been planned, horizontally and vertically. This is a matter of principle which should be decided before proceeding to allocation.

In this building, the main staircase leads up to the third floor upon which the principal rooms are located. The second floor cannot be reached from this staircase at all but only by subsidiary stairs or lifts of which there are five.

On a vertical organisation of accommodation, all senior officers who have to receive important visitors would be located on the principal floor where they would be not only readily accessible to visitors but also to the ~~103~~ ¹⁰² senior officers, each other and the conference room. Their staffs would be immediately above or below them connected by telephone or buzzer readily accessible by stairs or lift. Very few rooms are more than five doors from a lift or staircase. This would absorb the second, third and fourth floors and probably some of the fifth.

Branches with little need for contact with Italian nationals would be located

On a vertical organisation of accommodation, all senior officers who have to receive important visitors would be located on the principal floor where they would be not only readily accessible to visitors but also to the higher senior officers, each other and the conference room. Their staffs would be immediately above or below them connected by telephone or buzzer readily accessible by stairs or lift. Very few rooms are more than five doors from a lift or staircase. This would absorb the second, third and fourth floors and probably some of the fifth.

Branches with little need for contact with Italian nationals would be located on the sixth and seventh floors. There is for instance little advantage in the HQ Comdt, the QM, billeting and transport officers having the best rooms on the first floor, their work is purely internal and they should be located accordingly. They can be as easily found by the officers who want them on the sixth floor as on the first.

...../On a

On a horizontal organisation, the floors would be allocated to branches in the order of the importance attached to their place in the machinery of governing Italy and the degree of availability desired.

When a decision has been made as to whether a horizontal or vertical plan should be adopted, conveniently situated blocks of rooms should be allocated to branches in proportion to their actual strengths of officers and clerks.

In my view, the present allocation is intrinsically unsound, inefficient, inequitable and politically and physiologically undesirable. The whole scheme should be remodelled before it is too late.

I attach a copy of the sub-allotment I have made of the rooms allotted to this Section. In my view the accommodation is insufficient. Many of the Sub-Commissions say they cannot function in the accommodation I have given them.

Personal Accommodation and Messing.

It is proposed to allot accommodation in different hotels according to rank. Cols and upwards at the GRANIE. Lt Cols and Majors at the FLORA. Cpts and Lieuts at a hotel not yet requisitioned.

This cuts right across all office organisation and prevents the formation of any team spirit.

There is no set time for meals, messing is on a restaurant principle with tables for four. Officers come in in ones or twos, prop their newspapers or books up in front of them and read. There is nothing to develop a corporate spirit and it would be impossible to invite notable Italians as a "Mess Guest".

Dear White

Col. Lippman is determined to have rooms 28-30 & 32 included ^{as office space} is our office space. The Legal Sub-Commission will need a number of Station advisers of definite standing, who must be housed with us.

He has spoken to C. Tanogate, Denmore & Cripps about it and I am sure they are in agreement.

In any case he has over this accommodation and if you have some very strong reasons to take this space away from us, kindly take the matter up with him when you return.

For reasons too long to explain here, we also need a reception room hence are requesting rooms on the other side of the passage.

Yours
