1. A school is much needed. A great deal of tpt is being needlessly ruined due to lack of knowledge in Units and Formations, and shortage of mechanics and fitters.
2. I advocate making a start as soon as the Ministry can get its team together. It would probably be wise to kick it off in a small way in order to give the C.O. an opportunity of testing his programmes, methods and staff.
3. For this reason I do not think it essential to wait for the premises at present on loan to Allcom. Let the school test itself in a small way and then move to permanent quarters.

1. Personnel to run the school would have to be found from existing ITI-ITI units. They are not available elsewhere.
2. If the school could train mechanics it would probably be worth while as there are always big deficiencies in all categories.
3. It may be two or three months before ALCOM can release the premises. Would it not be better to delay consideration of this unit until that time, when the requirements of the Italian Army in the future will be better known.
