Signor Ministro, Signori :

Anzi tutto desidero ringraziarla dell'invito fatto questa sera a me ed ai miei ufficiali e per le gentili espressioni nei nostri riguardi. Come Lei a detto, questa riunione segna un altro passo avanti nell'evoluzione dell'Italia e del suo nuovo Esercito dopo le giornate tristi ed oscure della recente guerra.

Noteremo che ho usato il termine "nuovo Esercito". Lo faccio di proposito. Dopo l'armistizio del mille nove cento quaranta tre fu organizzata una Forza Armata Italiana forte di oltre tre cento mila uomini; ed i suoi considerevoli sforzi e contributi, sia di sangue che di lavoro, per la vittoria degli Alleati, sono stati pubblicamente elogiati dallo stesso Comandante Supremo Alleato, il Maresciallo ALEXANDER.

Loro stanno attualmente procedendo alla trasformazione di questa forza in un nuovo Esercito. Ciò costituisce un vasto problema. Le cose si prospettano in modo completamente diverso. Come si sta verificando in altri Paesi, la loro organizzazione per la pace dovrà essere riformata con un Esercito ridotto di molto rispetto a quello del mille nove cento nove.

Non si tratta di definire piani per il domani o per il giorno dopo, ma per un lontano futuro. Come già mi risulta, loro hanno ricambiato col deciso proposito di propugnare un nuovo spirito, nuove idee e principi di progresso, tali da eliminare le debolezze del passato.

Si e' già fatto molto nel campo del ringiovanimento. Ma sono certo che loro converranno con me, che rimane molto da fare. Sotto tanti aspetti l'evoluzione deve necessariamente essere graduale. Non si può ~~has~~ ¹⁹⁵⁶ un intero esercito in poche settimane. Ma l'importante e' che si sia iniziato bene, che loro abbiano cioè

Come per il passato, Loro avranno in questo grande compito la più fattiva continuo progresso e dotato di un nuovo spirito conforme agli ideali della democrazia.

Come lei dico, ciò comporta per loro un grave peso. Ma loro devono anche riconoscere^K che ciò vale per tutte le Nazioni di questo mondo post-bellico. Ci si deve impegnare con serietà^K e laboriosità, tanto per la conquista della pace, quanto per il conseguimento della vittoria in guerra. Ciascuno deve dare il proprio contributo^K per il bene comune e per assicurare un mondo migliore. Io so che loro faranno effettivamente^K la propria parte in questo difficile compito comune.

Personalmente ed a nome del mio Conrado Anglo-Americano^K approfitto di questa occasione per ringraziare lei, caro Ministro, i suoi predecessori^{Ch}, Gen. Orlando e Conte Casati, e tutti i suoi ufficiali per la piena collaborazione dataci nello svolgimento dei nostri compiti dall'armistizio in poi. Senza tale collaborazione si sarebbe potuto compiere ben poco. I risultati ottenuti ma sono una conferma^K di un augurio per la continuazione delle nostre cordiali relazioni.

Il destino mi condusse in Italia sia durante la guerra quattordici - diciotto^K che nella recente. Sono molto soddisfatto^K che ciò sia accaduto e che mi siano stati affidati i compiti^K che mi sono toccati nei riguardi dell'Italia. Nessuno avrebbe potuto essere condannato dal personale del suo Conrado, sia Britannico che Americano, più di quanto lo sono stato io; nessuno avrebbe potuto ricevere maggiore buona volontà e cooperazione di quanto io ricevo da loro.

Auguro loro la migliore fortuna per il futuro. Confido che loro sapranno superare tutti gli ostacoli ed infine riuscire. Credo che stia sorgendo l'alta di una nuova era per il nuovo ^{Esercito} ~~esercito~~ Italiano.

Auguro ogni successo^{Ch} a lei ed all'Esercito Italiano.

It would be appreciated if at the next Allied Publications Board meeting you would mention the frequent attacks made on the Italian Army by certain sections of the Italian Press with a view to devising some means of countering the effects of these attacks.

This H.Q. takes a serious view of the matter and, though justified criticism is not resented nor is undeserved praise expected, it is felt that everything possible should be done to present a fair picture of the Italian Army at a time when its morale and prestige are of great importance.

1. The proclamation in question is by no means an isolated instance of anti-militaristic propaganda. Articles of a similar nature have frequently appeared in the Italian Press, particularly in the "Voce Repubblicana" as the Italian Army is suspected, not entirely without reason, of having strong monarchist tendencies.
2. With regard to the sentiment expressed that "We all want to go home", a most understandable wish, it is pointed out that the 1913-1918 Classes inclusive have already been demobilised and further demobilisation will take place in due course (i.e. 1919 Class in Nov).
3. In view of the policy of freedom of speech and of the press the publishers of this proclamation should only be proceeded against if it is considered that this proclamation constitutes an incitement to mutiny. This HQ is not entirely satisfied that it does constitute such an incitement nor that any action would be worth-while in this case, particularly as the inevitable reply would be that the Allies take suppressive action solely because they support the House of Savoy.

EQUALITY

The Voice of the Italian Soldiers

Brothers, listen to the cry of pain which goes up from our brothers who are still under arms, constrained to support that traitorous House of Savoy which is now trying with underhand manoeuvres to regain power. WE DO NOT WANT our fate to be in the hands of a man who has shown himself unworthy of leading us, who flung us into the slaughter of this disastrous war, and then betrayed us in the most critical moment. WE DO NOT WANT for our leader a man who by tradition is the patron of the people's enemies. We soldiers no longer want to be exploited by war-mongering generals, and by ambitious and unscrupulous officers.

WE WANT and we have the right to have, that holy liberty for which suffered our brothers who are now returning from German prison camps, and our partisans behind the enemy lines, and our families under the Nazi-Fascist oppression.

WE ALL WANT TO GO HOME to reconstruct our Italy, our beloved Italy which will be republican, because the monarchy is a synonym of tyranny, of oppressor of the people and continual warlike adventures, and must disappear from the constitution of our country.

We also want our liberty not to be menaced again: if we wish to safeguard the prosperity and safety of our children LET US DO AWAY ONCE FOR ALL with militarism and those who sustain it.

Once more the fate of the country depends on us! This is the moment to speak clearly and to act. Our fallen call for justice and justice will be done.

view for the consumption of its readers, a scandal sheet. But we must admit that even what is said is partially and maybe true.

I can see where we can do nothing about such attacks. Even the British

The difference here is that the criticism

At Cesano di Roma, where the C.A.C.F.I.C. (a misleading sounding group of initials which only mean Rit. Ing. Centre for It. Combat Forces) vegetates, today it seems as if one relived the first days of the war. Packs of soldiers, wearing every conceivable form of dress or even civilian clothes, dirty, hungry, loaded with an assortment of parcels or bundles are seen arriving uninterruptedly.

"Re-called" as the fascists used to call them? Some of them, yes. The only difference is that on the call-up card the King's heading has been over-printed with that of the Lt. Gen. of the Realm. Most of them have returned from the Balkans, from disbandment, have been sent by the disbanded mob centres, are ex-co-operators. The latter, after three or four years of service either in Africa, in prison camps or in co-operation with the Allies, were sent home on 60 days leave by the Ministry of War and have now been presented with the pleasant surprise of having to return after only 14 days.

The reception they get when they reach Cesano is the traditional one: they sleep, they get dressed, they get covered according to the mercy of the most pious Minister Jacini, often in the open!

Only one hope smiles at these eternal wonderers: release, but every two or three days they get pecked and despatched North or South. The Combat Groups demand reinforcements. (These Groups won honours in the liberation campaign but, is it true that when they were formed Umberto di Savoia Pescara entrusted one of his most faithful with the mission of taking charge of them once the war was finished in order to rid the country of the so-called national unity dissolving currents?) However there is one person at least, probably the only one ^{info} is enthusiastic about Cesano. And that person is, The Lord be praised, the one and only, the saintly Minister Jacini, who during a visit, some months ago, to the "Centre", said he had felt moved by the three clicks of the "Shun" with which he was received. Afterwards he spoke of the re-birth of the Army and of democratic style. Very debatable this democratic style of his since: 1) he generously granted Officers, NCOs

And that person is, The Lord be praised, the one and only, the saintly Minister Jacini, who during a visit, some months ago, to the "Centre", said he had felt moved by the three clicks of the "Shun" with which he was received. Afterwards he spoke of the re-birth of the Army and of democratic style. Very debatable this democratic style of his since: 1) he generously granted Officers, NCOs and men the facility of being able to read more than one political newspaper; 2) he encouraged all Italians, generally speaking, to behave in a praiseworthy way, that is to say, to abstain from any form of reform as thus they would retain the goodwill of the Allies, on whom, as it is known, we depend; 3) he admitted free discussion but immediately afterwards limited it subjecting it to a disciplinary routine standard worthy of the zeal of one of Carlo Alberto's Generals.

At the close of that unforgettable day, the Minister ended his sermon by stating, between one quotation of St. Paul's and another, that he felt moved by the reception he had been the object of and even more by the magnificent sight of the resurrection of the army which he had witnessed during the short hours spent at Cesano.

Perhaps he was not aware of the market activities carried out by the C.A.C.F.I.C. HQs (such is said of a lorry load of "Milit" cigarettes assigned to the troops and sold complete in Rome, of fuel depots of the "Piceno" Div. stationed in Cesano and found in town ready to feed the black market and it is even known that in Rome the little public service passenger vans used to run and possibly still run of "Piceno" petrol), of the lorries detached for "service" carrying out black market activities all over Italy, of the profits made by the military stores, capable of selling even their souls?

All these are realities, if not altogether metaphysical, with which St. Paul will have nothing to do, but, let us quote Minister Jacini: "at times it is best to close one eye". It would be necessary to bandage both eyes of the Italian people who, out of their own pockets have paid and are paying for armistice and military expenses that which others ("Piceno" Div. for example) are profiting, feeding the black market and encouraging administrative and fiscal corruption to such an extent that, unless many gold braided, long-fingered persons are sent home soon, the results of the national loan threaten to be totally absorbed by the Ministry of War's budget.

And then one must again put one's finger in that national wound of the inefficiency of the various Commands so well known universally that Minister Jacini has not yet deemed it advisable to take some far reaching exemption measures.

But why mention all these things and others such as the despair of the soldier always waiting? Why mention the other stations of the C.A.C.F.I.C., such as Bracciano where recruits of the 102nd. Arty. Regt. last June swore an oath of allegiance to... the King? Why mention such things if Minister Steiano Jacini is satisfied?

He says that it is only possible to deal with these matters as individual cases i.e. to send a letter to the paper concerned giving true explanation which it will almost certainly print. There is now no censorship and it is both undesirable and impossible for Public Relations to send, so to speak, a directive to the Italian press asking them to be just in their dealings with the Italian Army. It is undesirable because it would certainly give rise to allegations that the Allies were supporting reactionary monarchist tendencies. If on the other hand a press conference or something of the kind were held it is extremely likely that the papers would twist the answers to suit their own ends and it would be difficult to manage such an affair in such a way as to prevent it from becoming polemical & acrimonious.

In view of the above I raised this matter at Esce Com meeting where Mr Stewart Brown & Big Fish were present. My refusal to order the press, so we must get M.d.W. to bring pressure to bear

1. JACINI had already complained to ARPINATI (Undersecretary to the P.M.) about the article in UNITA, on the grounds that it is an incitement to the tps to disobey and mutiny. NOT a very strong complaint, I gather, but he has promised to follow the matter up.
2. LOBARDI's comment on the resignation of GERVASONI was "good - one less colonel to sack!". This is obviously an unsound comment: will you please accept action.
3. Action against the culprits (tps) has already been taken by General GERICA and by 209 Div; the latter has recommended to DIA LO 1 District that units in the PUMI district NOT now fully employed be moved away or disbanded and I have taken this up with AFHQ.

Dear Colonel

I enclose a copy of "L'UNITA" which has caused a stir here. The immediate re-action has been the resignation of Col. GERVASONI, Comd 21 REGT, who is one of our best Officers. His point is that the Government is apparently taking no action about this political demonstration by Italian soldiers, mainly directed against their Officers. He therefore does NOT wish to remain a servant of such a Government. I must confess that I see his point.

Generale PREMIERI is, I believe, forwarding on GERVASONI's resignation asking that it be NOT accepted, but it is quite possible that others may follow GERVASONI's example.

I think the unfortunate officers require some form of re-assurance from their Government that they will NOT be penalised for attempting to do their duty.

I don't know if MMIA can do anything about it. I think this is a serious matter.

Yours love

Excerpt of the reports on the morale of the troops during the month of July 1945.

Excerpt of the reports of HQs

Notes of this Office

MORALE the morale of the troops is influenced by a strong feeling of fatigue which is spreading out especially among senior classes, some of whom have been serving for seven, eight, nine years and see in their home towns men of very young classes that should be in the army.

This ill feeling, which is spreading also among Emergency Reserve officers has been but poorly checked by the moral action that has been taken to counteract it. Soldiers, in this grey and uncertain situation, although they continue to do their duty and are disciplined, show an impatience which can no longer be overlooked.

It is therefore desirable that discharge of senior classes should take place as soon as possible.

GENERAL CAUSES

OF DEPRESSION : Senior classes that have not been discharged

- the feeling that those who evaded military service are now living undisturbed and can resume civilian activities
- family allowances and wages which are inadequate to meet the actual cost of living especially for those who have a family.
- The slowness and irregularity of the military postal service, causing all ranks to avoid availing themselves of it whenever

This matter is well known and it has already been pointed out in previous reports, and discussed during meetings at Rome with the C/Os of higher formations. The measures that can be taken, will not be sufficient to improve the morale of the troops.

The disorder of the uniform of our soldier, and the tolerance in allocating him to wear the strangest of clothing (which is a consequence of irregular issues) discredit our Arms Forces and facilitate the propaganda that a great part of the Press leads against them

- + the issue of soap which is not sufficient to meet requirements
- the cancelling of the issue of tobacco on re-payment and the reduction of the free issue
- the fact that it is almost impossible for the Sardinian troops to enjoy leave owing to lack of transport.
- the persistent deficiency of clothing and footwear. Sabauda Div Hq inform us that it is impossible to issue the kit recalled Milit. personnel who wear clothing and footwear of their own property.
- the continuous propaganda led by almost all the Press against the Army.

PARTICULAR CAUSES OF DEPRESSION.

Piceno H.Q. DIV. remark that; owing to the disbandment of Raviscanina, Astroni, and Fr sinone Camps, masses of disordered and undisciplined men report to Cesano Centre and any effort made by the officers to organize and discipline these men is nullified by the constant coming and going of soldiers who cause disorder in the units.

PROPOSALS AND REQUESTS

CP UNITS UNDER CURFEW: react with adequate means and without losing time against the spreading of the campaign against the Army.

- Lay down a system of efficient transport between the mainland and the islands and improvement of transport on the mainland.

- make a greater and more adequate issue of clothing items

- increase the monthly issue of soap to improve hygiene of the troops

- increase the wages of officers and NCOs which are at present below the standard wages of the various categories of workers and employees

- Take severe action against deserters and absentees.

- increase the issue of cigarettes and again issue tobacco on repayment.

- value and acknowledge the service of the Admin. Divs and Combat Groups now being disbanded.

- increase to 10 Lire the messing improvement allowance.

- increase welfare funds.

SPECIAL REMARKS OF

SOME Hqs : Concerning the economical position of officers and NCOs, Mantova Combat Group Hq informs us that "Wages of Officers are ridiculous and are inferior to the wages of workers and employees.

These matters have already been pointed out in the previous reports. Very little, almost nothing has been done to solve them and this is deprecated by Hqs and units U/C that do not realize the difficulties handicapping the Central Branches. But whereas officers can easily understand this, soldiers generally do not, owing to lack of education and to the propaganda that is carried out by agents who operate with very doubtful intentions.

For instance: Is noticed that...

SPECIAL REMARKS OF

SOME HQs : Concerning the economical position of officers and NCOs, Mantova Combat Group HQ informs us that "rages of officers are ridiculous and are inferior to the wages of workers and employees.

For instance: We noticed that the work contract for industrial workers of Liguria (published in issue n. 77 of the newspaper "Lavoro Nuovo" dated 1st of August) allows each employee 3000 lire monthly as "contingency allowance" 8000 " " as minimum wages. The same wages are laid down for labourers. My General 2nd in command, draws a monthly pay of lire 11600: our Chief of Staff (who has 3 sons) 10216 and whereas a/m employees and labourers live with their families, officers and NCOs who are married are away from their kith and kin and must provide for themselves and for their family.

Piceno Div. Hq warns us of the consequences of circ. 558 concerning the discharge from the Army due to special family reasons. A/2 Hq remark "a worrying exodus of military personnel and particularly of young soldiers".

This is due to the extreme ease with which the Communes, Doctors and the C.C.R.R. themselves grant certificates allowing the poor conditions and earning impossibility of families of military personnel serving in the Army, etc.

Piceno Div. Hq reports moreover the insufficient screening action of the military Districts, who generally send to the Camp military personnel having the right to be discharged, repatriated PWs and even war disabled personnel that (having their families out of Italy - especially in Northern Africa -) cannot be discharged from the Army.

GENERAL NOTES OF THIS OFFICE :

- Higher Formation Hqs do their best to keep up the morale of personnel under command; but if we want their work to be really efficient it is necessary that the problems and difficulties reported by them should be taken into consideration by the Central Branches with a greater interest.
- The soldier is tired of promises, articles in the press and idle talk; he wants facts. He regards with suspicion not only his officers (whom he thinks are the cause or the victims of this general situation) but also politicians in general; he no longer relies upon the leading classes and therefore he looks forward to a revolutionary system which may change the state of things (without worrying about consequences). Commanding officers agree that there is still time to prevent the total disintegration of discipline, by solving the main problems thus :-
- ending the Press campaign against the Army,
- unbalancing the importance of the contribution of Units of the Army to the liberation,
- Granting the war disabled, wounded and sick personnel admitted to hospital the respect and fair dealing they are entitled to,
- improving the equipment,
- discharging senior classes, calling up younger personnel and putting an end to all unlawful privileges.
- The problem pointed out by Piceno Div. concerning military personnel to be discharged and who cannot reach their families, is a general problem and I have already informed the Hqs and the Recruiting Directorate and the Cabinet of W.V. with letter 06640/BS dated 10 Aug. 45. Piceno Centre is not suitable to admit these men who fulfil strongly against being subjected to further delays and since I have been informed that several Unfortunately the truth of this remark has been noted by this office on examining applications in favour of military personnel and their families. Repatriands and circulars are useless; it is a question of civil education.

It should be borne in mind that Districts have an enormous work to carry out and very few means available. The insufficiency of means is well known to Central Authorities.

Dear Langley,

I am replying to your letter of 24th August, as Sinclair has now left the appointment of D.M.I.

You may have heard by now through other channels that the War Office have not been able to sanction your proposed broadcast, as it was considered unsuitable that officers on the active list should give broadcasts about foreign armies.

This decision had nothing to do with the merits of the text you submitted, and I understand that there would be no War Office objection if a somewhat similar broadcast were to be made anonymously by a B.B.C. announcer.

My dear

On return from a visit to England I have seen your letter of 16 July to my G.S.O.I, Lt. Colonel Ingledow.

As regards further news about the Italian Army: I enclose herewith Appendix 'A' which gives what the Italian Ministry of War have produced for me, and Appendix 'B' which is a shorter resume of Appendix 'A'.

As regards a broadcast by myself, I attach a proposed one at Appendix 'C'. The Foreign Office in London have seen my proposed broadcast at Appendix 'C' and were very keen for me to give it. They then asked the War Office if they had any objection. The Foreign Office also were most anxious that I should give this broadcast over the proper B.B.C. wave-length instead of on a private one, and also that I should give it in English and Italian, which I can do and would like to do. I might say that I have broadcast before.

Perhaps you would let me know what you are doing about all this. I feel that now is the time to give this broadcast and not at some future date when interest may have evaporated considerably.

(a) DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED IN THE BUILDING OF THE ARMY.

The disastrous events which quickly followed the signing of the Armistice with the Allies left Italy, or at any rate that small part of it, under the control of Marshal BADOLIO, with practically no army. On September, 8th 1943 owing to lack of clear orders and complete mental and physical demoralisation, the greater part of the Italian Army disintegrated. The physical and mental structure of the army which, under Fascian and totalitarian discipline, kept the army together, crumbled like a house of cards. The difficulties encountered in the reconstruction of the Italian Army under Allied auspices and primarily for Allied employment were vast. A moral, material and financial breakdown had taken place. The army had lost most of its better units, better leaders, nearly all its equipment, guns, tanks, clothing and ammunition. In North Africa and Sicily - not to mention whole divisions squandered uselessly in Russia and the Balkans. Destruction caused by war, requisitioning by the Germans, the few remaining industries in the North in German hands. Soon after the Armistice - Italy declared war on Germany and expressed a desire to form a motorised corps to fight alongside the Allied Armies in Italy. The difficult task of reforming the Ministry of War, the reorganisation of the Territorial layout and the mastering and ~~building~~ of new combatant units, the organisation of auxiliary units and the services was immediately undertaken with the scanty material at hand. By the beginning of December 1943, the motorised group known as the Italian Liberation Corps, consisting of four Battalions and four

Soon after the Armistice - Italy declared war on Germany and expressed a desire to form a motorized corps to fight alongside the Allied Armies in Italy. The difficult task of reforming the Ministry of War, the reorganization of the Territorial layout and the mustering and holding of new combatant units, the organization of auxiliary units and the services was immediately undertaken with the scanty material at hand. By the beginning of December 1943, the motorized group known as the Italian Liberation Corps, consisting of four Battalions and four Artillery Batteries, had been trained and equipped with Italian equipment and was in the line. The strength of these units was gradually increased until the Italian Liberation Corps reached a total strength of 25,000 men including the famous "TOMASO" Parachute Bde, brought over from Sardinia.

(b) Details of the Army Group by Group.

When hostilities ceased the strength of the Italian Army was 17,700 officers and 535,340 O.R., of which 54,000 were Carabinieri. This Army consisted of the following set-up :-
The Ministry of War and General Staff.
Five Combat Groups, each 10,000 strong - completely equipped with British arms and equipment and fed on British rations.

195,000 auxiliary troops (20% with the Operational Armies divided up as follows : -

- One Div. with Fifth Army.
- One Div. with Eighth Army.
- One Div. - classed as an Army Corps controlling Italian troops under the U.S. Peninsular Base Section.
- One Div. with the U.S. Air Force.
- Three Divs. under command 1 and 3 British District H.Qs.
- Various Units under Allied Garrisons in SICILY AND SARDINIA and twenty-five Special Coy's under command of the Allies in CORSICA.
- The "ACOSTA", "SABUDA" and "CALABRIA" Divs were taking care of the Internal Security in SICILY and SARDINIA.

All arms and specialists have taken part in the Allied war effort. They consist of :

- (a) Infantrymen who constituted the mass of combatant forces in every field and with a great variety of duties.
- (b) Grenadiers men of great physical fitness and a long established tradition.
- (c) Arditi specially trained for war at close quarters and hard to hand fighting - mainly volunteers.
- (d) Bersaglieri. troops of great mobility, suitable for rapid transfer and highly trained for intense and prolonged effort. These men wear the characteristic

- (a) Infanteria who constituted the mass of combatant

- (b) Granaderos men of great physical fitness and a long

- (c) Arciti specially trained for war at close quarters and hand to hand fighting - mainly volunteers.
- (d) Bersaglieri, troops of great mobility, suitable for rapid transfer and highly trained for intense and prolonged effort. These men wear the characteristic plumes in their hats or on their helmets.
- (e) Alpini trained to live and fight in the highest mountain regions.
- (f) Paracadutisti who have given an excellent account of themselves, not only as specialised infantry in the line, but also in small groups of saboteurs dropped by parachute behind the lines to assist patriot formations, supply intelligence information and carry out specialised sabotage.

(g) Cavalry - transformed in Pack Transport Units for the supply of troops in the mountains inaccessible to motor transport. These units have done excellent work and have often worked under enemy fire, sustaining heavy casualties.

(h) Artillery, forming pack Artillery Units, Ack-Ack and Anti-Tank units and light mountain Artillery Batteries.

(1) Engineers, who have given ample proof of their work with their pioneers in defence constructions, roadbuilding, repair and maintenance of Allied L of C and airlifting units.

(j) Carabinieri, who normally wear the characteristic Napoleon hats have satisfactorily carried out their duties as military police, P.S. Sections, etc.

(c) Development of the Army.

Since September, 1943 the Italian Army has grown and developed by leaps and bounds. The first problem to be tackled was the formation of Service Units, the setting up of the territorial organisations for dealing with call-ups, re-calls, demobilisation of older classes and unfit personnel, pack tpt. coys. etc.

1917

From the Italian Liberation Corps the first two Combat Groups - the "LAGHAIRO" and "FOLGORE" were re-formed, re-equipped with British arms and equipment and trained in British methods. Four more Groups were formed, armed and trained for combat under command of General ALEXANDER's Armies.

(c) Development of the Army.

Since September, 1943 the Italian Army has grown and developed by leaps and bounds. The first problem to be tackled was the formation of Service Units, the setting up of the Territorial organisations for dealing with call-ups, re-calls, demobilisation of older classes and unfit personnel, pack tpt. coys. etc.

From the Italian Liberation Corps the first two Combat Groups - the "LEGNANO" and "FOLGORE" were re-formed, re-equipped with British arms and equipment and trained in British methods. Four more Groups were formed, armed and trained for combat under command of General ALEXANDER's Armies. These Combat Groups formed a fighting force of some 55,000 men.

At the same time auxiliary units were increased. In December 1944 their strength had reached 160,000 men (20% with the operational units) and by April 1945, 195,000 men formed the bulk of Service Units working almost entirely for the Allied war effort.

(d) Equipment in Use.

Immediately after the armistice, by means of search and recovery of Italian materials it was possible completely to equip the 1st Motorised Bde. which, in the line, proved to the Allies the ultimate possibilities of the Italian Army.

Later this No. was increased and converted into the Italian Corps of Liberation, still equipped and supplied with Italian materials with the exception of rations and fuel which were supplied by the Allies. In addition, at the beginning and where possible, the first units formed at the request of the Allies (Eng. units, pack Sgt. units, stretcher bearers, pioneers, etc.) were also equipped with Italian materials. These units have been gradually supplied and equipped by the Allies with the exception of arms and ammunition which continues to be supplied by the Italian Administration.

Lately the Combat Groups are completely equipped and supplied by the British.

At the present there are three types of equipment in use:-

- (i) British for troops under British control (BR-ITL)
- (ii) American for troops under American control (US-ITL)
- (iii) Italian for all the remaining troops (Internal Security Divs, Territorial H.Qs. and units, service units, etc.)

whose requirements are met with :-

- (i) Stocks in Military dumps
- (ii) Salvage and recovery materials
- (iii) Allied assistance for unobtainable items.

(e) Transport and Supplies. (organisation and means)

(1) We have :-

a central organisation: It is based at the Ministry of War (General Directorate) and supplies the warehouses of the various services drawing their stocks either from Italian production or from Allied sources, with railway or maritime transport with vehicles of a

- whose requirements are met with :-

a central organization: It is based at the Ministry of War (General Directorate) and supplies the warehouses of the various services drawing their stocks either from Italian production or from Allied sources, with railway or maritime transport with vehicles of a Special Transport Coy.

a local organization: based at the Mil. Territorial H.Qs which provide for the requirements of the units in the territory under jurisdiction employing railway transport exceptionally and vehicles of the Special Administrative Transport Coys. (one for each Territorial H.Q.) and, finally, animal transport (whenever possible for light loads over a short distance). Combat Groups and other units of the Administrative Divs are also supplied by the same organisation employing their own transport (road).

(ii) MEANS.

(a) At present about 5,500 motor vehicles of the Italian W.D. are on the road. Most of them have been obtained through recovery after the liberation of the National territory. They have been maintained in running order employing every form of resourcefulness and using parts obtained from the dismantling of unserviceable vehicles. They are insufficient to meet requirements.

An improvement of the situation is to be expected due to :

- (i) The new repair organisation now in force.
- (ii) The return to the Italian of all ex-Italian military vehicles however recovered.
- (iii) The reactivation of the industries in the North.
- (iv) A strict control over the assignment of vehicles and over motor traffic.

(b) About 1,200 carts of various types (animal drawn) are now being issued for light loads over a short distance. They supplement the above all in order to reduce wear and tear and to save fuel.

(c) Non-political aspect of the Army.

The policy that the Army should be without any above political controversy is enforced in the new Italian Democratic Army. This is an old tradition of the Italian Army.

The Army is meant to serve the Nation and is not a political party. This policy is not meant to deny the soldier-citizen the right to have a political idea, but refuses him the right to belong to a political party or carry out political propaganda as long as he forms part of the Army.

I forgot when I saw you at the War Office the other day to say that when I was at the Foreign Office they told me that they were most anxious for me personally to give a broadcast on the Italian Army as soon as possible. They had a copy of a suggested broadcast which I had written out and which I attach hereto. They asked me to ask you to push it along at the War Office and as a matter of urgency, so I hope you will do so on receipt of this letter.

I might add that the chap who is dealing with all the business with the B.R.C. is Captain A.C. DUNCAN, Political Intelligence Department of the Foreign Office, Centre Block, Bush House, Aldwych, London, W.C.2 (Phone 1910 Temple Bar 1581)

It was so nice seeing you again and that you are flourishing.

They had a copy of a suggested broadcast which I had written out and which I attach hereto. They asked me to ask you to push it along at the War Office and as a matter of urgency, so I hope you will do so on receipt of this letter.

I might add that the chap who is dealing with all the business with the B.B.C. is Captain A.C. DUNCAN, Political Intelligence Department of the Foreign Office, Centre Block, Bush House, Aldwych, London, W.C.2 (Photo 191)

It was so nice seeing you again and that you are flourishing.

Au revoir.

1. The notes which you enclose have already been used by the B.B.C. but we would welcome further news about the Italian Army, under the following headings:-

- (a) Details of difficulties encountered in the build-up of the army.
- (b) Details of army group by group, character study of typical (soldiers).
- (c) Regular news of its development.
- (d) Equipment.
- (e) Transport and supply.
- (f) Non-political outlook.
- (g) Any further points of interest.

2. The B.B.C. and ourselves feel that it would be an excellent idea for General Browning to broadcast over the B.B.C. Would you ask the General to write a talk of anything between 400 and 1200 words. This he could give in Rome over a private wavelength.

I am sending a copy of this letter to the Radio Department, Press Attache's office so that the necessary arrangements can be made.

3. As P.W.B. has now ceased to exist could the material mentioned in para 1 please be sent to me c/o Press Attache, British Embassy, Rome?

Press Release - For Release 10 June 1945

Re-created out of the confusion and chaos of 18 months ago, a brand-new, efficient and compact Italian Army has arisen which has made invaluable contributions to the Allied war effort both in support of military lines of communications and in the final assault on the Nazi lines in Italy, the Land Forces Sub-Commission of the Allied Commission said today in a special report.

The sub-commission's report, which summed up the history of the Italian Army's re-organization under Joint Italian and Allied leadership, paid tribute both to the tremendous saving in Allied manpower made by Italian service troops and to the valiant battle record of the four combat groups which participated in the fighting with the 8th Army in April.

The strength of the Italian Army was publicly revealed for the first time as consisting of more than 300,000 officers and men. Apart from Combat Groups, thousands of troops were used to guard import installations. The service troops numbered 175,000 and worked directly under Allied Commands. Fort labor battalions have broken many records in the unloading of Allied ships. Road construction units have maintained vital communications under enemy fire to allow armored forces to advance.

The strength of the Italian Army was publicly revealed for the first time as consisting of more than 300,000 officers and men. Apart from Combat Groups, thousands of troops were used to guard import installations. The service troops numbered 175,000 and worked directly under Allied Commands. Fort labor battalions have broken many records in the unloading of Allied ships. Road construction units have maintained vital communications under enemy fire to allow armored forces to advance without delay. Mine clearance companies have lifted nearly 600,000 mines.

The Land Forces Sub-Commission, which also has the title of Military Mission to the Italian Army, is headed by Major General Langley Browning (B). It is the agency which from the beginning has been responsible, with the Italian Ministry of War, for re-organizing and re-disciplining the Italian Army. General Browning said in his report:

"Great credit must go to the officers of the Italian War Ministry and General Staff under the good leadership and untiring efforts of H.E. Count Casati - the War Minister. Many cross-currents have tended to hamper and even divert the re-creation of this truly national army. The task of the Minister of War has been a heavy one. Yet, with true patriotism, he has overcome all difficulties and has undoubtedly succeeded in restoring much of the prestige of the Italian Army in the eyes of the United Nations."

In the new Order of Battle of the Italian Army appear hundreds of Italian units, Combat Groups, Guard Battalions, Service Units, Territorial Headquarters. These units represent Italians from every walk of life, and every part of Italy - hardened soldiers repatriated from the Balkans, Patriots, Grenadiers, Bersaglieri, Alpine Troops, Parachutists, Assault troops - many of whom have seen fighting in the Balkans, in Africa, on the Gerigliano, at Cassino, on the Gothic line, and in the final assault, whilst others have seen serving the Allied Armies in the Ports, on the roads or with their mules.

The birth of the new Italian Army goes back to September 8, 1943. A new Italian Army was essential to the smooth-running of, and assistance to, the Allied war effort and for the internal security of both the Allied Armies and the Civilian population.

Work of reconstruction was started at once. The Italian Ministry of War and General Staff sought out Generals and staff officers from all quarters in order to set up the vital administrative machinery necessary for the formation of an Army.

The first Italian formation chosen to fight with the Allies was concentrated in Apulia for re-organization and training.

Work of reconstruction was started at once. The Italian Ministry of War and General Staff sought out Generals and staff officers from all quarters in order to set up the vital administrative machinery necessary for the formation of an Army.

The first Italian formation chosen to fight with the Allies was concentrated in Apulia for re-organization and training. Fitted throughout with Italian arms and equipment, this first Motorized Group became known the Corps Italiano di Liberazione (C.I.L.). Overcoming great difficulties owing to shortage of equipment and arms, the corps was ready for battle by December 1943, when it went into the line under command of the American 5th Army.

This C.I.L., made up of Infantry, Bersaglieri, Alpini, Parachutists and Artillery men, handicapped by poor equipment and lack of modern arms, with very little transport, met the enemy for the first time at Monte Lungo, sustaining heavy casualties. In this action, the C.I.L. gave a good account of itself and won the praise of General Mark W. Clark, then commanding general, 5th Army, who said:

"This action shows the determination of Italian soldiers to liberate their country from German domination, a determination which may well serve as an example to the oppressed peoples of Europe."

After four months in the line, the C.I.L. passed to under command 8th Army and took part in the brilliant action which seized the height of Monte Serrone on March 31, 1944. After months of patrol work and holding, Pilottrano was captured by the "Nembo" paratroopists, sustaining over 300 casualties. Many brilliant actions were to follow before the C.I.L. was pulled out of the line in August, 1944.

Behind the fighting line, the Italian Army was by no means inactive. A far greater number of Italian troops were working and co-operating for the Allied War effort. Labor battalions, 1900 road construction units, mine clearance units, signal and line telegraph companies, docks operating companies had been formed and put to work on the maintenance and safe-guarding of the Allied lines of communications.

Many brilliant actions were to follow before the C.I.L. was pulled out of the line in August, 1944.

Behind the fighting line, the Italian Army was by no means inactive. A far greater number of Italian troops were working and co-operating for the Allied War effort. Labor battalions, road construction units, mine clearance units, signal and line telegraph companies, docks operating companies had been formed and put to work on the maintenance and safe-guarding of the Allied lines of communications.

Italian mule pack transport companies were carrying supplies and ammunition right forward in the mountainous regions of the Apennines, where no vehicles could move. Much work had to be carried out under enemy shell fire and many casualties were sustained. Recognition and praise was freely given by Allied commanders employing these units.

At the Ministry of War, hard work and loyal cooperation was being given by the Italian staffs. Difficulties of equipment, transportation and documentation were daily problems. Italian staff procedure had to be changed to conform with Allied procedure and directives. The Italian Territorial lay-out was put into effect as territory was handed over to Italian administration.

Call-ups and recalls to the colors were re-started.

Allied equipment and material, however, were not available to maintain a large Italian fighting force. Allied commitments in Europe and in the Far East being very heavy.

Finally, in response to the strong desire of the Italian nation and the Army for a greater representation of Italian fighting troops in the line, and the successes of the C.I.L. combined with the work of the service units, brought about the decision of the Allies in July, 1944 to form six Italian combat groups to be employed in combat with the Allied Armies. British arms and equipment for these groups were made available and Italian and British staffs set to work.

The work of re-equipment, organization, training in British methods and clothing in khaki battle dress was initiated by a relatively small staff of British and Italian personnel. Units were formed, training pamphlets and manuals were translated into Italian, training schools were opened and bi-lingual Italian officers and non-commissioned officers were found, trained and instructed. The vast task entailed was carried out by hard work and loyal cooperation of the Italian staffs and British instructors.

Towards the end of 1944, five months after its formation, first Italian combat group - the "Cremona" - went into the line under the command of the 6th Army, having been completely re-formed, re-equipped and trained in British arms and methods - an achievement of original character and considerable speed.

Such other combat groups were ready and by March 2, 1945, four groups were in the line and "Cremona" had already achieved success in an attack south of Fo di Primano when over 300 German prisoners were taken. A fifth group - "Mantova" - was about to enter battle when the Germans in Italy surrendered.

During the last great assault of the Allies in Italy, the Italian Combat Groups - CREMONA, TRIULI, LECORNO, and POLACRE - all played their part. The "TRIULI" sustained 500 casualties in the attack on Bolgna - units of the "LECORNO" were amongst the first to enter the city. The "CREMONA", for example, pursued the enemy across the R. SANTARO, and won the praise of the Commander of the 5th British Corps who said:

"You and your Group have admirably carried out operations assigned to you and your officers and men have shown great courage and zeal during the recent fighting."

In addition to the praise given by the Commanding Generals of 15th Army Group and of the 5th and 8th Armies, the Supreme Allied Commander himself, Field Marshal Alexander, under whose over-all command the more than 300,000 Italian soldiers operated, has always been the first to appreciate the good work of the Italian Army, and has said so publicly on many occasions, the report concludes.

Subject : Publicity for Italian war effort

1. In order to stimulate interest and sympathy in Italian events, the Foreign Office are anxious for the release to the British press and British Broadcasting Corporation of as much information as possible regarding the performance of the Italian armed forces and their contribution to the Allied war effort.
2. His Majesty's Embassy in Rome have requested me to ask you whether you would now be prepared to release information of this nature which has previously been withheld for operational reasons. H.M. Embassy suggest, if you agree, that they might get this information direct from the Navy, Land Forces and Air Sub-Commissions.
3. H.M. Embassy have also asked whether you will give authority for the use of any material which S.O.(M) are able to provide regarding the activities of Italian patriots.
4. H.M. Embassy suggest that a further useful source of information might be the Allied Screening Commission who have a vast amount of data concerning the care and assistance given by Italian peasants and others to our escaped prisoners of war in Italy. Hitherto there has been a ban on the publication of any such material but perhaps the moment has come when this may now be lifted.
5. Presumably the normal channel for the release of such information would be the Public Relations Officer either at A.P.H.Q. or at the Commission, but H.M. Embassy state that if their Press Department could be of any assistance in the matter they will be only too glad to help. 1890
6. I should be most grateful for your advice on this question.

14 July, 1945.

My dear

Reference your letter of 5 July in connection with the B.B.C. build-up of the prestige of the new Italian Army, we sent the attached to Captain A.C. DUNCAN in London.

As you see I have suggested that I should give a broadcast myself on this matter! It would give me amongst other things a very good reason for having a trip home! But apart from that I know that it is considered of more interest if a talk is made personally instead of just read out as a statement. I have broadcast before for the B.B.C. I have therefore drafted out a possible short talk for the B.B.C. on the Italian Army, of which I enclose 2 copies. You may perhaps send these personally to DUNCAN yourself as a suggestion. I reckon it would take me about 10 minutes to deliver this statement on the radio. I could of course expand it and include such things as the excellent Anglo-American cooperation in M.M.I.A. (where we are completely integrated to all ranks) which made this possible, some remarks on the quality of the Italian officer and man (the officer and N.C.O. is on the whole pretty bad but the man has great potentialities if properly led) etc. Anyway I leave that to you and if the B.B.C. want me to broadcast I would like to do it in London and not from Naples! and not before 28th in view of certain commitments here.

Your brother Henry left us en route for home a few days ago. We were all very sorry to lose him. He did an excellent job and we all liked him immensely.

With best wishes.

1885

Yours

A.B.

I have therefore drafted out a possible short talk for the B.B.C. on the Italian Army, of which I enclose 2 copies. You may perhaps send these personally to DUNCAN yourself as a suggestion. I reckon it would take me about 10 minutes to deliver this statement on the radio. I could of course expand it and include such things as the excellent Anglo-American cooperation in M.M.I.A. (where we are completely integrated to all ranks) which made this possible, some remarks on the quality of the Italian officer and man (the officer and M.C.O. is on the whole pretty bad but the man has great potentialities if properly led) etc. Anyway I leave that to you and if the B.B.C. want me to broadcast I would like to do it in London and not from Naples! and not before 28: in view of certain commitments here.

Your brother Henry left us en route for home a few days ago. We were all very sorry to lose him. He did an excellent job and we all liked him immensely.

With best wishes.

DRAFT FOR SHORT B.E.C. TALK ON THE ITALIAN ARMY

I have been asked to tell you something about the new Italian Army, as I have been head of the Anglo-American Mission formed to recreate and reorganise the Italian Army during the past year and a half under the orders of Field Marshall Alexander.

This Army had reached a total of over 300,000 by the time the Germans surrendered, including 5 fighting divisions, and it has no doubt played a considerable part in the liberation of Italy and the final victory over the Germans there.

The creation of the Army represents, I think a unique feature in the history of war, formed as it was in war out of a defeated nation, and in a country the greater part of which was held by the enemy. The Italians determined that they would do their best to "earn their passage" (as the Prime Minister put it) and they cooperated with us wholeheartedly to overcome the very considerable difficulties involved in this unusual task.

The birth of this Army goes back to early Sept. 1943. Conditions at that time were chaotic. Morale was at zero. There was no Ministry of War, no organisation, hundreds of thousands of Italian soldiers milling about. There were 800,000 soldiers in Sardinia alone, no supply organisation, no records, nothing. We had to start from zero, but it was the Italian who had to do the job although of course we supplied the direction and initiative. A new Ministry of War was organised at LECCO in the heel of Italy, Prisoner of War Generals and staff were brought from England, clerks were organised, typewriters produced, etc. and soon this central organisation was starting to function. Information was obtained as to the number and location of troops in our part of Italy and these were organised into formations under Italian Generals.

The primary need at that time was for Service Units, such as Labour Battalions, Dock Companies, Engineer Units, Bridge Building Units etc., and these soon started to take shape, being formed gradually into Divisions which came under the command of the Allied District or Army Commanders. Literally hundreds of units were formed in this way and eventually these Service Units reached the imposing total of nearly 800,000 - a great contribution to the war effort.

While all this was proceeding, an Italian fighting formation was being organised. This became known as the "Corpo Italiano Liberazione" or C.I.L. for short. It was a very "mixed bag" and was collected and organised under very great difficulty. It was composed of all kinds of soldiers or Infantry, Bersaglieri, Alpini, Granatieri, Parachutists, Artillery men etc. and was equipped with such Italian equipment as could be found. Nevertheless, it did very well in action and gave a good account of itself. Moreover, it showed that, given proper direction and assistance, the Italian soldier could be of great value to us as fighters.

It was composed of all kinds of soldiers - Infantry, Bersaglieri, Alpini, Granatieri, Parachutists, Artillery men etc., and was equipped with such Italian equipment as could be found. Nevertheless, it did very well in action and gave a good account of itself. It moreover showed that, given proper direction and assistance, the Italian soldiers could be of great value to us as fighting troops.

The next development was the formation of the fighting divisions, about the middle of 1944. Authority was obtained from the British Government to organise and equip throughout with British equipment a number of such divisions. Time was short as they were urgently needed. We therefore had to design an establishment for these Divisions as a compromise between a tactical organisation which the Italians had been used to working on and an organisation which suited the British weapons and equipment that the British provided. British training schools, through interpreters, trained Italian instructors, who in turn went back and trained their own units; British Liaison Units were appointed to each division (commonly known as "Combat Groups" or "Gruppi"); mechanics were trained and so on. The language question, was, of course, one of the greatest difficulties. But the Italians are very interested in, and quick to pick up, new mechanisms and they were delighted to have this chance of shedding their blood in the liberation of their country. And so, the first of the Gruppi became ready for action in 5 months.

Other Gruppi crystallised progressively and at the time of the German surrender 4 of them had fought valiantly, while the fifth was just about to go into the line. The Allied Commanders were full of praise for the fighting qualities of these Gruppi. Field Marshal Alexander, who has always taken the greatest personal interest himself in this Army, has publicly praised them on many occasions; and as a further example, the G.O.C. 5 British Corps issued an order for the day to the G.O.C. "Cremona" Gruppo saying "You and your Group have admirably carried out operations assigned to you, and your officers and men have shown great courage and zeal during the recent fighting".

I should have mentioned earlier that the Service Units I referred to, included many mule companies, lorry companies etc., working under fire in the forward area. In any event, this new Italian Army fighting with us in Italy sustained 8,000 casualties, composed of about 2,000 killed, 5,300 wounded and 700 missing. Incidentally, the Italian Army suffered another 3,000 casualties in driving the Germans out of Corsica and a further 32,000 in fighting the Germans in the Balkans, Dalmatia etc. - a grand total of about 43,000 casualties including 17,000 killed.

All this could not have been possible unless the Allies had supplied this new Italian Army with vast quantities of rations and equipment of all sorts which was lacking to them. As you know, the main manufacturing facilities are in the North and this was held by the Germans. Nevertheless, a large salvage and repair organisation was set up so as to save Allied shipping and resources. Old boots and Old Allied battle-dress, for example, was put at the Italian Army's disposal, where it was pulled to bits in some 30 factories and renovated for use by the troops. This developed into one of the biggest old clothing and old boots business in the world, I suppose. The output of renovated old boots, for instance, was, at the time of the German surrender, at the rate of 90,000 pairs of boots per month or one million per year. Despite this, of course, the Allies had to supply a large part of the rations and of the equipment necessary. I don't propose to weary you with statistics or details but I am sure you can imagine from what I have said what a vast business it has been creating this new Italian Army of over 300,000 out of nothing, in such a short space of time. I think the Italian deserve great credit for the way they put their backs into it and really got it going. One thing that helped us considerably was the capture of Rome, with the original War Ministry Building, complete with records, intact - but that was not until much later.

I hope I have been able to give you some idea of the part played by the new Italian Army. The point is, was it worth while? Has it paid a dividend? To those questions the answer is undoubtedly - Yes. It saved Allied manpower, Allied shipping and Allied resources. It enabled Allied Divisions to be taken from Italy for the Western Front; it raised Italian morale; it gave Italy a new confidence, a new hope for the future, and a foundation on which they will build their smaller and better Army. The officers and men have worked and fought with the many other nations, whose soldiers, under the genius and guiding hand of Field Marshal Alexander, have combined in the about 40,000 casualties including 20,000 Allied.

They have seen the way the Allies do things, and the camaraderie between officer and man. They have realised more fully the ideals for which we fought this war. All that cannot but be of a good for the future, both of Italy and of mankind.

2. I am directed to state that Major-General L. Browning CBE OBE MC, GOC MIA, would be delighted to deliver a talk on the B.B.C. if it could be arranged. This would be eminently appropriate because as you will see from para. 4 of the Appendices MIA is the agency which, from the beginning, has been responsible with Italian Ministry of War for reorganising and redisciplining the Italian Army, which played so important a role in the Italian campaign.

Dear Sir,

I have had a message from the officer who acts as liaison between the Political Intelligence Department of the Foreign Office and the B.B.C. requesting for information about the Italian Army.

I understand the B.B.C. wishes to help to build up the prestige of the Italian Army but has no material on which to base its talks. I should be very grateful if this material could be provided and at the same time any directions with regard to the way in which it should be used.

This material should be addressed to:

Captain A.C. Duncan, and delivered to the Central Service Desk, PWB, Via Veneto 188, for forwarding.

LA RICOSTRUZIONE DELL'ESERCITO NEL PENSIERO DEL MINISTRO JACINI

Un redattore dell'agenzia «Orbis» ha chiesto al nuovo ministro della guerra on. Stefano Jacini quali saranno le direttive che il nuovo governo seguirà nella ricostruzione dell'esercito e nella assunzione delle forze partigiane. L'on. Jacini ha testualmente dichiarato: « Nel succedere ad Alessandro Casati, la cui opera ricostruttrice non potrà essere adeguatamente valutata se non dalla generazione venuta, io non posso aver altro fine che di contribuire ad estenderla, sotto la guida decisa e lungimirante del mio vecchio amico e compagno d'arme Ferruccio Parri.

La ricostruzione dell'esercito non è opera di un giorno: essa deve svolgersi di piena intesa con gli alleati, nel quadro tracciato dalle condizioni dell'armistizio, allargato però ed integrato man mano che la nostra posizione nei confronti delle nazioni unite si andrà consolidando.

In questo piano rientrano la valorizzazione e la parziale incorporazione delle forze partigiane che un così decisivo contributo hanno dato alla resistenza contro l'invasore ed alla liberazione del suolo nazionale. Queste forze, le cui colonne sono state infatti nell'ultimo mese combattivano, ho stretto amicizia con i loro alleati: esponenti, ho avuto parenti stretti in tutti i loro Caduti gloriosi. Essi sanno di trovare in me un deciso sostenitore delle loro ri-vendicazioni legittime e delle loro aspirazioni più sane; di quelle cioè che non sono dettate da motivi egoistici ma dall'interesse superiore del paese.

Tener alto nell'esercito la fede in se stesso, il culto delle migliori tradizioni che non sono o classe o di parte, ma schiettamente democratiche; ridare al Paese l'orgoglio e la fiducia nelle sue forze armate; tener alto nei cittadini il culto dell'esercito presidi della libertà delle nazioni ».

Se grandi avvenimenti si verificano nella storia del mondo, si verificano anche nella storia dell'umanità.

RISORSE LIBERATE L'ESERCITO DI LIBERAZIONE

Se questa è grave è stata la catastrofe che si è abbattuta sul Paese con 18 settembre 1943, nondimeno, cessato il primo momento d'incertezza e comprensibile smarrimento, la Nazione dimostra per chiari sintomi nei più vari campi e settori la sua volontà di riprendere l'Esercito, la data dell'8 settembre se da un lato segna il dissolvimento del vecchio esercito, dall'altro registra la nascita del nuovo organismo militare.

In tutti questi mesi, qua e là attraverso notizie sia pure incomplete ed addirittura monche abbiamo potuto seguire, a fianco della armata alleata, la marcia e le azioni belliche delle nostre unità: i nomi di Monte Lungo, Monte Marone, Filotriano — tanto per accennare alle località più note — hanno fatto con il divenire familiari. Oggi che la guerra è terminata, gli Stati Maggiori scelgono il naturale riserbo nell'annuncio delle operazioni militari una relazione della Stato Maggiore per le Forze armate terrestri della Comunità alleata — ossia della Missione militare presso l'Esercito italiano — ed un'ampia testimonianza del contributo dell'Esercito di Liberazione alla guerra contro il regime fascista.

Il compito della ricostruzione era in quell'ormai lontano autunno del 1943 assai arduo e difficile, ciò non ostante nel dicembre di quello stesso anno le prime unità del Corpo Italiano di Liberazione (C.I.L.) entrarono in campo. Insufficienti le armi, i vestiti, le razioni dei veterani, ma c'era in quei primi animosi soldati di liberazione — una decina all'Italia, agli Alleati, al mondo — il nostro concreto apporto alla guerra di liberazione. Quanto grandi, di quei primi combattenti, sia Mark W. Clark allora comandante della 1^a Armata, il quale a proposito dell'azione di Monte Lungo dichiarava: « Questa azione è stata prova della volontà dei soldati italiani di liberare il loro paese dalla dominazione tedesca, volontà che più benissimo servirà d'esempio ai popoli oppressi di Europa ».

A quel primo gruppo se ne aggiunsero altri: soldati di ogni grado e di ogni arma confluiti armate alleate, la Sicilia e le isole. Le battaglie delle nostre unità: i nomi di Monte Lungo, Monte Marro-ne, Filotriano — tanto per accen-nare alle località più note — han-no finito con il divenire familiari.

 Oggi che la guerra è terminata, gli
 Stati Maggiori sciogliono il naturale riserbo sull'andamento delle operazioni militari: una relazione della S.I.S. (Commissione per le Forze armate terrestri della Commissione alleata — ossia della Misione militare presso l'Esercito italiano — dà volentieri testimonianza del contributo dell'Esercito di libe-razione alla guerra contro il co-mune nemico.

Il compito della ricostruzione era in quell'ormai lontano autunno del 1943 assai arduo e difficile: ciò non ostante nel dicembre di quello stesso anno la prima unità del Corpo
 Italiano di Liberazione (C.I.L.) en-travano in campo. Insufficienti le armi, i vestiti, le razioni dei civari: ma c'era in quei primi animosi
 — ufficiali e soldati — una deriva costosa di battori, di dimostrare all'Italia, agli Alleati, al mondo il nostro concreto apporto alla guerra di liberazione. Quanto grande sia stato l'impegno ed il corag-gio di quei primi combattenti, sta
 a dimostrare l'elogio del generale
 Mark W. Clark allora comandante della 1. Armata, il quale a proposito dell'azione di Monte Lungo dichiarava: « Questa azione è una prova della volontà dei soldati italiani di liberare il loro paese da la dominazione tedesca, volontà che può benissimo arrivare d'esem-pio ai popoli oppressi di Europa ».

A quel primo gruppo se ne aggiunsero altri; soldati di ogni grado e di ogni arma conflui-ro verso i centri di raccolta da quando inveneremo i piccoli, altero C.I.L., ormai incapace di accogliere nei suoi quadri le nuove energie, era frantumato nelli da militari in prima linea a fianco degli Alleati. Le difficoltà in conseguenza aumentavano: ilricorrendo a che venivano superate il grave inconveniente di equipag-giare, addattare i reparti italiani ai metodi ed alle armi britanniche.
 Anche questa volta se ne veniva accorto, però in un tempo relativa-mente breve: nelle ultime azioni belliche sul fronte italiano era an-cora la Cronaca Infallibile a distri-buire in un affare a sud del Po di Primiero. Soltanto la creazione delle unità impediva l'altalenan-te ingresso in campo delle nuove unità.

Dear

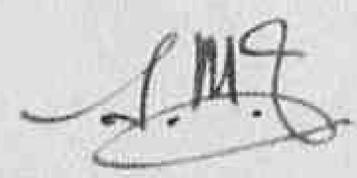

Lt. Col. Howard, MMIA Senior Liaison Officer, who has been visiting our LO's and Allied and Italian HQ's up North tells me that urgent steps are necessary to remedy the ignorance amongst the northerners of the war effort of the Italian Army.

General Browning is very keen that a propaganda campaign on the Italian Army is started at once in newspapers up North and Lt. Col. Howard says that you are the right man to see that articles and features appear in the northern papers.

I am enclosing an English and Italian version of an Article which has been produced by us and edited by P.R., A.C. for general release. We would much appreciate your using this to open a campaign for spreading the gospel and so easing the present feeling of distrust which the northerners have for the Italian Army.

THE ITALIAN ARMY'S CONTRIBUTION TO THE ALLIED WAR EFFORT AND THE LIBERATION OF ITALY

DEMobilIZATION

On 8 Sep 43, the Italian Army had reached its lowest ebb, except in a few isolated cases, complete chaos reigned. Units disintegrated and dissolved of their own accord. Officers and men went home, Generals and staffs, because of lack of orders, gave in to the state of complete disorganization and lack of discipline in the Army and deserted their posts. The greater proportion of the Army was spiritually and physically demoralized. There was no organized General Staff or Ministry of War.

BIRTH OF THE NEW ITALIAN ARMY

The Italian Armed Forces, after the Armistice, came under the direct command of the Allies. A new Italian Army, reorganized and re-disciplined, was essential to assist and for the smooth-running of the Allied war effort and for the Internal Security of both the Allied Armies and the civilian population.

Under the direction and control of the Allies through the Military Mission to the Italian Army, work of reconstruction was started at once. The Italian Ministry of War and General Staff sought out Generals and staff officers from all quarters in order to set up the vital administrative and directive machinery necessary for the formation of an Army, and on 13 Oct 43, Italy declared war on Germany and became a co-belligerent with the Allies.

The first Italian formation chosen to fight with the Allies was concentrated in Apulia for re-organization and training. Fitted throughout with Italian arms and equipment, this 1 Motorized Group known to the Italians as the Corpo Italiano di Liberazione (C.I.L.) 1874, overcoming great difficulties owing to shortage of equipment and arms, was ready for battle by December when it went into the line under command of the American FIFTH Army.

This C.I.L., made up of Bersaglieri, Alpini, Parachutists and Artillery men, handicapped by poor equipment and lack of modern arms, with very little transport, met the enemy for the first time at Monte Lungo, sustaining heavy casualties. In this action, the C.I.L. gave a good account of itself and won the praise of General Clark who said, "This action shows the determination of Italian soldiers to liberate their country from German domination, a determination which may well serve as an example to the oppressed peoples of Europe."

the direct command of the Allies. A new Italian Army, reorganized and re-disciplined, was essential to assist and for the smooth-running of the Allied war effort and for the Internal Security of both the Allied Armies and the civilian population.

Under the direction and control of the Allies through the Military Mission to the Italian Army, work of reconstruction was started at once. The Italian Ministry of War and General Staff sought out Generals and staff officers from all quarters in order to set up the vital administrative and directive machinery necessary for the formation of an Army, and on 15 Oct 43, Italy declared war on Germany and became a co-belligerent with the Allies.

After four months in the line, the C.I.L. passed to under command EIGHTH Army and took part in the brilliant action which seized the height of Monte Marrone on 31 March.

After months of patrol work and holding, Filottrano was captured by the "Nembo" parachutists, sustaining over 500 casualties. General Leese, 8 Army Commander, in a message to the "Nembo", said, "I send you and your troops my best congratulations for the success of the capture of Filottrano after hard fighting." Many brilliant actions were to follow before the C.I.L. was pulled out of the line in August.

SERVICE UNITS

Behind the fighting line the Italian Army was by no means inactive. A far greater number of Italian troops were working and co-operating for the Allied War effort. Labour Bns, road construction units, mine clearance units, signal and line telegraph coys, docks operating coys had been formed and put to work on the maintenance and safe-guarding of the Allied L of C.

Italian mule pack tpt coys were carrying supplies and ammunition right forward in the mountainous regions of the Appenines, where no vehicles could move. Much work had to be carried out under enemy shell fire and casualties were sustained. Recognition and considerate praise was attributed by Allied commanders employing these units.

At the Ministry of War, hard work and loyal cooperation was being given by the Italian staffs. Difficulties of equipment, transportation and documentation were daily problems. Italian staff procedure had to be changed to conform with Allied procedure and directives.

The Italian territorial lay-out was implemented as territory was handed over to Italian administration. Call-ups and recalls to the colours were re-started.

By 1945, the Italian service units working directly for the Allies numbered some 175,000 men. Mine clearance coys had lifted over 580,000 mines. Port labour bns held the record for the unloading of Allied ships. Road construction units, often working under enemy fire, had maintained vital communications without which the speed of the Allied advance could not have been maintained.

In addition to work done Italian Service Units were replacing Allied manpower, thus contributing further and in an important way to a war effort in which everyone was involved.

Much praise has been given to these vital service units by employing Allied commanders.

THE ITALIAN COMBAT GROUPS

All parties in the Italian Government had been pressing for a greater Italian participation in the Allied war effort. Allied equipment and material however was not available to maintain a large Italian fighting force. Allied commitments in Europe and in the far East were very heavy.

But the strong desire of the Italian nation and the Army for a greater representation of Italian fighting troops in the line and the successes of the C.I.L. combined with the work of the service units brought about the decision of the Allies in July 1944 to form

All parties in the Italian Government had been pressing for a greater Italian participation in the Allied war effort. Allied equipment and material however was not available to maintain a large Italian fighting force. Allied commitments in Europe and in the far East were very heavy.

But the strong desire of the Italian nation and the Army for a greater representation of Italian fighting troops in the line and the successes of the C.I.L. combined with the work of the service units brought about the decision of the Allies in July 1944 to form six Italian combat groups to be employed in combat with the Allied Armies. British Arms and equipment for these Groups were made available and Italian and British staffs set to work.

This work of re-equipment, WE's, training in British methods and clothing in khaki battle dress was initiated by a relatively small staff of British and Italian personnel. Units were formed on the approved WE's, training pamphlets and manuals were translated into Italian, training schools were opened and bi-lingual Italian Officers and NCO's were found, trained and instructed. The vast task entailed was carried out by hard work and loyal cooperation of the Italian staffs and British instructors.

Towards the end of 1944, five months after its formation, the first Italian combat group - the "CREMONA" - went into the line under the command of 8 Army, having been completely re-formed, re-equipped and trained in British arms and methods - an achievement of original character and astounding speed. Soon other combat groups were ready and by 2 Mar 45, four groups were in the line and "CREMONA" had already achieved success in an attack south of Po di Primano when over 200 German prisoners were taken.

During the last great assault of the Armies in Italy, the Italian Combat Groups - CREMONA, FRIULI, LEGNANO, and FOLGORE - all played their part.

The "FRIULI" sustained 500 casualties in the attack on BOLOGNA - units of the "LEGNANO" were amongst the first to enter the city.

The "CREMONA", for example, pursuing the enemy across the R. SANTARO, won the praise of the Commander of the 5 Br Corps who said, "you and your Group have admirably carried out operations assigned to you and your officers and men have shown great courage and zeal during the recent fighting."

SUMMING UP

In reviewing this new Italian Army, it is evident that, out of the chaos and confusion of 18 months ago, a good, efficient new army has been formed. Praise for its soldiers has been generous and well deserved. Field Marshal Alexander himself, when visiting the Italian Reinforcement Centre for the Combat Groups, said, "It is enough for me to see good soldiers to recognize them at once as such, and what I have seen today, watching you and your work, I know that you are excellent soldiers."

During the final stages of the Great Allied victory in Italy, Field Marshal Alexander had over 300,000 Italian soldiers under his command. The Field Marshal has always been the first to appreciate the good work of the Italian Army, and has said so publicly on many occasions.

But great credit must go to the officers of the Italian War Ministry and General Staff under the good leadership and untiring efforts of H.E. Count Casati - the War Minister. The task of this staff has been a heavy one, yet throughout, cooperation and loyalty have been the prominent and all important theme.

The new Order of Battle of the Italian Army produced by the Military Mission to the Italian Army in conjunction with the War Ministry shows hundreds of Italian units, their WE's, strengths and locations. Combat Groups, Guard Bns, Service Units, Territorial Hqs, all appear. These units represent Italians from every walk of life, and every part of Italy - hardened soldiers repatriated from the Balkans, Patriots, Grenadiers, Bersaglieri, Alpine Troops, Parachutists, Assault troops - many of whom have seen fighting in the Balkans, in Africa, on the Carigliano, at Cassino, on the Gothic line and in the final assault, whilst others have been serving the Allied Armies in the Ports, on the roads or with their mules.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785020

In 1944, before the Combat Groups were formed, Maj Gen L. Browning, G.O.C. the Military Mission to the Italian Army, expressing his appreciation of the Italian Army, ex-witness of its work said, I think few people realize how well the Italian Army has done. They have, with our help, organized out of chaos an Army of over 300,000 ab initio - with scratch staffs, ex-POW Generals brought from abroad. The C.I.L. has fought well and had many casualties. The Minister for War himself has lost his only son, fighting with the C.I.L. The service and labour portion has done an immense task in repairing communications, dock labour etc thus saving Allied manpower. They have cooperated loyally as co-belligerents (with practically no fuss or friction). I would like people to realize all this and the Italian Army to get its deserved and just need of praise both in the Press and in the minds of the Allies for its valuable assistance to the Allied cause."

Today fighting has ceased in Europe, but the role of this truly national Italian Army continues to be of vital importance to the Italian people. It is above party. It represents worthily the main organized power sanctioned and supported by the Allies for the internal security of Italy, and for the assurance of peace in the great reconstruction which lies ahead.

1. As a result of an article in "L'UNITA" of MILAN - the ITALIAN organ of the Communist party - written by EMILIO TOGLIATTI, Vice President of the Council under Sig BONICCI, and also one of the founders of the above paper, General SCATTINI GOC FRIULI has requested this office to make certain representations to both MIA and HQ FIFTH ARMY. The original cutting from this paper is fwded to MIA and HQ FIFTH ARMY. The following cutting from this represent General SCATTINI's views.

2. It is felt - and there is evidence for it - that the present propaganda by the Communist Party against the ITALIAN Gruppi is undermining discipline within this Gruppo.

(a) There are known to be nuclei of anti-regular Army bodies, incl officers, in this Gruppo. These bodies are outwardly good officers and soldiers, but they are in fact working for the disintegration of the Gruppo.

(b) The deserter rate came down to almost NIL during this Gruppo's three months of active operations. In the past ten days the total number of deserters has risen from 160 to 340 and this increase is NOT believed to be due to change of location, as leave is now granted on a reasonably liberal scale.

3. The major objection to the utterances of TOGLIATTI is NOT that he is head of the Communist Party - freedom of the Press would demand that - but that he is Vice President of the Council and therefore a leading member of the government and senior to the War Minister. Hence his views expressed in the Press assume something like governmental authority and consequently place the GOC of a Gruppo in a very invidious position. In this connection it is pointed out that apart from Allied officials, General SCATTINI can see only the Minister for War and the Chief of the ITALIAN General Staff, both of whom presumably carry less weight than TOGLIATTI.

General SCATTINI is however at present visiting ROSE with the object of seeing the Minister of War, Chief of Staff and possibly General SPORLING, Head of MIA. But he feels that unless some weight is given to his case by Allied authority, he will not get much done.

4. It is felt that the Gruppi are a great deterrent to Communist activity on a possibly disorderly scale. General SCATTINI expresses the view for himself and for the majority of his Gruppo that the Regular Army is NOT necessarily ROYALIST, but is in fact non-party. Finally, he feels that the Gruppi having been formed to assist Allied military operations in ITALY, are now in fact a stabilising influence (ITALIAN) as opposed to a stabilising influence (ALLIED) in the country, but that unless Allied

"IT IS NECESSARY TO DISARM RE-ACTIONARY FORCES".

Our policy will continue to be national unity, which means we pledge ourselves to maintain the principles of freedom and democracy in our Country. We have not the slightest intention of staging a "coup de main" against this or that party at the expense of the freedom we have now. We feel certain we can achieve our ends in freedom and democracy because we have the support of the majority of the population for such achievement and it would be criminal on our part to embark on any senseless adventure. If we are asked whether this means disarming and laying down arms my answer is

"My dear friends the Communist Party has never run an army or armed organization; the Communist Party only organizes armed groups to fight for Italian independence and has always put forward the purpose to fuse these groups with those of other parties into one great National Army of Liberation.

Today we want disarmament but first of all we want all reactionary elements to be disarmed. We do not want to see those so called independent groups to carry arms - those so called independent groups among whom we know existed remnants of the old ruling classes who under the monarchial banner aimed at disrupting the national forces and while pretending to fight the Germans were in reality intriguing against us.

If at the head of some "gruppi di combattenti" of the Army there are any generals of a re-actionary type who are nursing the illusion that they might be able to make use of the arms entrusted to them by the nation for the purpose of effecting or fomenting some "coup de main" against the advance guard of the democratic forces, we demand that such units be disarmed and such generals removed from office.

We want the Army to be fundamentally changed, we want fundamental changes in the police forces so that these forces, who should be armed forces in a well ordered state, cannot be used against the people to twist or thwart the will of the people.

Therefore there is no such policy of force in the Communist Party who only wish to pursue a policy of liberty, a policy designed to solve immediate problems confronting us and all workers in the grave and tragic situation we find ourselves. Our directive is one of a national anti-fascist solidarity which means above all else this: That the enormous efforts which confront us in order to start on the reconstruction of the country should fall not on those who have suffered at the hands of fascism but on those who were responsible for it 186 or abetted fascism.

National anti-fascist solidarity means that we shall not discourage private enterprise but that we shall definitely discourage speculation. We do not wish to see today speculation profiting by the miseries of the people.

National anti-fascist solidarity means, in addition that we must see the factories re-opening as soon as possible. We know that in order to achieve this we shall require in most cases the assistance of the State and of foreign economic institutions; we shall require coal and some raw materials. Later

TRANSLATION

General BOLOGNA and soldiers of Mantova:

It has been a great pleasure for me to have seen you soldiers of the Mantova Group on the eve of your departure for the front.

I have just returned from the front where I saw among other units the Cremona, Legnano and Friuli Groups, who, as I had foreseen are making a splendid contribution to our present offensive.

I know that you are impatient to get into the front line - a praiseworthy and understandable desire which all good soldiers have - to take part in and to share with the others the honour and glory of the final battles.

I have very much enjoyed my day amongst you soldiers of Italy. From what I have seen today I am sure that you will be the equals in battle of your comrades in the other Groups.

It is enough for me to see good soldiers to recognize them at once as such, and from what I have seen today, watching you and your work, I know that you are excellent soldiers. I am sure that you will fight as valourously as the soldiers of the Folgore, Legnano, Friuli and Cremona are fighting. We will see each other again at the front

We are now without doubt in the last phase of the war in Europe. The destruction of the German Army in the West is rapidly being completed: the great Russian spring offensive has not yet started and here in Italy our 15th Army Group has just begun what we hope will be the last great battle, to which the Cremona Group has already contributed with valour

If you look at the map of Europe you will see that a third and even more of Germany, including Austria, has already been occupied by the Allies - and we know that every day thousands of German soldiers are killed and captured.

Germany is already beaten - there is not the smallest shadow of a doubt about that. It now remains to the isolated garrisons and encircled pockets of what was once the mighty German Army. This may still require some sacrifices and a little time. It is a task which we must face here - a task for which I need jolly good soldiers, well trained

CADORNA -

1. Speaking frankly:-

- (a) as one soldier to another
 - (b) as an independent judge of what the Patriots have done and what the I.A. has done to liberate ITALY and help the Allied cause
 - (c) as a friend of ITALY who wishes to see ITALY quickly and properly settled, so that she may again take her place as one of the great nations of EUROPE. That is a British just as much as an Italian interest.
- 2.
- (a) We will leave the sorry past and start with the Armistice
 - (b) A year ago there were 1 million disorganized soldiers; no M. of W.; all orgn. broken down,
 - (c) Within one year a new It. Army has been formed with an organized M. of W; Terr. SQ's; 4 million service tps in units and fms; 5 Combat Gps.
 - (d) A stupendous feat under incredible difficulties of equipment, transportation, accommodation, data and documents etc. M.W.I.A. has, I admit, controlled and been the driving force but success could not have been achieved without the excellent and whole hearted cooperation and good work of the Italian Mil. authorities themselves. It has been one of the most astounding RISORGIMENTO'S in history and the Italian Mil. authorities deserve the greatest credit for it.

4. Perspective of patriot effort

War won by Allies plus I.A. plus patriots.
But Allies mainly.
Patriots did excellently but I.A. just as excellently.
On basis of numbers and total effort I.A. more than Patriots.

5. Coalescing of North and South.

ITALY is one and indivisible.
Existing I.A. authorized and set up by SACRED who is still supreme.
Can only have on Army - cannot have private armies - that way lies civil wars.
Allies have set up the I.A. but, to give credit for the patriots, are doing their best to recognize the patriot effort.

5. (cont'd) Patriots are being taken into Arm as individuals - by bands means private armies.
 Terr. Reg. HQ's set up with 3 staff open to patriots.
 CADORNA made COS to shew recognition.
 Essential to get these Terr. HQ and their authority functioning.

6. Yet, what do I find and what is reported to me?
 Patriot attitude (even CADORNA's) is that the patriots liberated ITALY.
 I.A. is no good (only Combat Gps)
 Senior offrs I.A. and M. of W. no good.
 Terr. HQ's not being allowed to be set up in North owing to patriot opposition (cf. TRAUCCI).
INTOLERABLE -- holding to ransom.

7. My reply to above
 Patriots did NOT liberate ITALY -- the Allies did.
 I.A. is good -- not their fault there were not more Combat groups.
 Only equipment angle.
 Drastic purges of senior I.A. officers (Brigadier Gen. upwards) either from Eputation or inefficiency.
 Allied wishes and orders re Terr. HQ's flouted, particularly by TRAUCCI who has charges against him.

Whole patriot attitude is un - patriotic, sectional NOT national as it should be -- completely one sided based on inadequate knowledge.
 Majority of Terr. HQ's functioning. 186/
 8. CADORNA's own position
 Primarily COS, SMRE.
 Secondly watching brief to see that Patriots get deserts.
 Thirdly -- use great name, influence and experience to sort out matters and bring patriots to proper frame of mind.
