NOTES ON WIRELESS SECURITY AND THE USE OF CODES

A. GENERAL

1. It must be remembered that the enemy can hear ~~EVERYTHING~~ that is said on the wireless.
2. The undermentioned should NEVER be sent in clear.
 - (a) Names of units or formations (use Code Signs)
 - (b) Names or appointments of Officers (use appointments Code)
 - (c) Locations (except when the unit concerned is actually in contact with the enemy. See para B below).
 - (d) Numbers of troops, rations, etc, or any similar information which would disclose the strength of the unit or formation.

B. CODES

1. When speaking on the wireless the SLIDEX code should normally be used.
2. It should be remembered that SLIDEX may be combined with plain language in the same conversation, but NOT in the same sentence. R/T conversations may therefore consist of alternate sentences of SLIDEX and plain language.
3. When using plain language the points in para A above must be borne in mind.
4. In the case of an Infantry Battalion or an equivalent unit which is actually in contact with the enemy however it is usually advisable to make R/T conversations in clear. If SLIDEX is used under such circumstances it may cause unnecessary waste of time, or may compromise the code.
5. It must be remembered that the SLIDEX code does not effect a great measure of security. It is designed solely to disguise R/T conversations in the field. The SLIDEX code should never be used for
 - (a) For matters of great security value.
 - (b) For matters for which a security of more than a day is required (e.g. future intentions). If used for such matters the code may be broken down and counter-action taken by the enemy.

For such matters a written message should be originated, with the appropriate security classification. This message will then be transmitted in cipher.
6. SLIDEX is not designed for long running messages. Returns etc should never be sent in SLIDEX.

B. CODES

- (d) Members of troops, nations, etc, or any similar information which would disclose the strength of the unit or formation.
1. When speaking on the wireless the SLIDEX code should normally be used.
 2. It should be remembered that SLIDEX may be combined with plain language in the same conversation, but NOT in the same sentence. R/T conversations may therefore consist of alternate sentences of SLIDEX and plain language.
 3. When using plain language the points in para A above must be borne in mind.
 4. In the case of an Infantry Battalion or an equivalent unit which is actually in contact with the enemy however it is usually advisable to make R/T conversations in clear. If SLIDEX is used under such circumstances it may cause unnecessary waste of time, or may compromise the code.
 5. It must be remembered that the SLIDEX code does not ^{provide} ~~effect~~ a great measure of security. It is designed solely to disguise R/T conversations in the field. The SLIDEX code should never be used for
 - (a) For matters of great security value.
 - (b) For matters for which a security of more than a day is required (e.g. future intentions). If used for such matters the code may be broken down and counter-action taken by the enemy.

For such matters a written message should be originated, with the appropriate security classification. This message will then be transmitted in cipher.

6. SLIDEX is not designed for long routine messages. RENEWED returns etc should never be sent in SLIDEX.

C. THE SIGNS

1. The Code Sign system has been evolved to avoid the necessity of mentioning names of units or formations in clear on the wireless.
2. A weekly code sign extract is issued by the Signal Company. This allots three letter code sign.
 - (a) To all HQs, down to and including HQs of Infantry Battalions and Artillery Groups.
 - (b) To Rear Link wireless sets operating at Regimental HQs and Group HQs.
 - (c) To any other set operating at and above Regimental HQ (e.g. Sets at O.P.s, Commanders Recon Bats).
3. The Code Sign extract consists of two parts.
 - (a) Part I consists of the code signs which are actually used as link signs on the various wireless nets.
 - (b) Part II consists of code signs allotted to HQs and Signal Offices.
4. It will be realised that all HQs down to and including Regimental HQ have a HQ code sign allotted in addition to the link sign for use on the wireless nets.

Below Regimental HQ however (e.g. for Infantry Battalions and Artillery Groups) only one code sign is allotted. This is used both as a wireless link sign and as a HQ code sign.

5. When speaking on the wireless all reference to units or formations should be made by use of the appropriate three letter code sign. Either the link sign or the HQ code sign made be used for this.

D. CONCLUSION

It should be remembered that the wireless is NOT a telephone.

Before speaking on the wireless it is necessary to think carefully what is to be said, and to have the necessary code signs ready to hand.
