FIGHTER TRAINING SYLLABUS.

Herewith copy of the Fighter Training Syllabus which is in use in the Squadrons of the Royal Air Force Middle East Command.

2. This is a post war syllabus based on the experience gained in fighter training during the war and intended for squadron training in peace time.

3. It is suggested that you have this syllabus translated and that you then send copies to the Fighter Squadrons with instructions to implement their unit flying and ground training along these lines.

FLYING TRAINING SYLLABUS

1. Reference is made to your letter AHQI/300/4/Air dated 29th November, 1946 concerning the supply of syllabi for the use of the Italian Air Force.
2. Air Ministry have been approached for information on the future policy of supplying publications to the Italian Air Force.
3. Herewith two copies of the Day Fighter Training Syllabus in use in this Command. It is regretted that a separate Tac R syllabus is not at present available; but the basic training for both Tac R and Fighter pilots is the same, and the Day Fighter Training syllabus may be applied to both.

NO. 537681 SGT. FOLEY W. F/ARM.

It is requested that the above named Sergeant be attached for a short period to a Spitfire IX Squadron in an AIR Italy Fighter Wing.

2. This Sergeant was posted to the Air Forces Sub-Commission, Allied Commission to instruct the I.A.F. in the maintenance of armaments supplied by the R.A.F.

3. He has now completed his preliminary work and pending the authorization for supplies of armaments and the approval of a training programme for the Italian Fighter Wing, he could be employed on an RAF Squadron where he would be kept in up to date practice in his trade.

4. A final decision has not been reached on the type of aircraft to be supplied to the I.A.F. and if possible Sergeant Foley should have some experience in armament maintenance on Mustangs.
