and text-books.

We have received the standard syllabus of training for the RAF College at Cranwell which you kindly forwarded to us and arrangements have been made for its translation and perusal by this College Staff.

Everything was found very interesting and attention will be given to your programs for possible future re-arrangements of the studies in this College.

References to text-books and handbooks which appear to be used at the Cranwell College have been found in the course of the syllabus. Such books would help our understanding of your methods and would give us a better opportunity to compare them with ours.

Any action on your part intended to let us have a set of these books for thorough examination would, therefore, be very much appreciated by us.

Will you accept ours best regards.
