1. Please see the Report with Appendices A + B at p. 2 at seq. 1.

2-2C

2. Please see also the charts prepared by the Ministry of the Interior at pgs. 1-1C. These summarize graphically the figures presented in this S/C's Report at pgs 2-2C. Thus:-

1-1C

(B) The chart at p. 1 gives a picture of the distribution of votes in the 115 Communes that voted by proportional representation: it should be compared with p. 2B.

(C) The chart at p. 1 A gives a picture of the seats gained by the various parties & party groups in the same 115 Communes: it should also be compared with p. 2B.

(C) The charts at pgs 1B & 1C show the distribution of seats in all the 5,722 Communes (i.e. the 115 that voted by proportional representation + the 5607 smaller Communes that voted by the majority system).

3. Only these single copies are available of the Ministry's charts. Further, only 3 copies of App. B. to this S/C's report (p. 1C) have been made, as the preparation of them would have considerably delayed the presentation of these papers.

4. Copies of the S/C's Report + App. A + B are sent herewith for distribution. It is suggested that these be circulated with the file & that addresses

 5. The 2 spare copies of App-B. have been attached to the Polads' copies of the S/C's Report, as they are usually out of the building & have not such ready access to the file.

SUBJECT: Results of Communal Elections

Tel: 314

TO : (See Distribution below)

1. Detailed figures giving the votes cast for each party are now available in respect of all Communes which voted by proportional representation in the recent local elections. Such Communes are those with a population exceeding 30,000 and those of less population which are provincial capitals. These figures have been analyzed by this Sub Commission and the analyses are set forth in the Appendices.

2. Sixty-six provincial capitals voted and 49 other Communes with populations exceeding 30,000. The gross totals for all these 115 Communes are set forth in Appendix A.

3. In Appendix B the figures have been analyzed according to the "College" (= constituency or election district) for the Constituent Assembly elections, i.e. in each College the Communes which have voted by proportional representation have been isolated and the figures for these have been added up and are separately stated in Appendix B.

4. Italy is divided into 32 Colleges. Only 28 of them are listed in Appendix B. The 4 Colleges omitted are:-

- a. College XII (Venezia Giulia)
- b. College VIII (Trento - Bolzano)
- c. College XXIV (Salerno - Avellino)
- d. College XXII (Val d'Aosta)

in which no elections took place of the type illustrated in this report. The total population of the 28 Colleges listed in Appendix B is 40,112,172. The population of all 32 Colleges is 42,993,602.

5. The main interest of these figures lies probably in their value as an indication of the possible behavior of the electorate at the political elections. In examining the Appendices from this point of view the following considerations should be borne in mind.

6. The first column of Appendix B sets forth the total population of each College. In the third column of the same Appendix is stated only the total populations of those Communes which have voted. The totals of these columns show that the figures in any case represent the political trends of a population of 7½ million out of a total population of nearly 43 million, or roughly 1/6th. Moreover, the extent to which the figures can be considered to be representative in which no elections took place of the type illustrated in this report. The total population of the 28 Colleges listed in Appendix B is 40,112,172. The population of all 32 Colleges is 42,993,602.

6. The first column of Appendix B sets forth the total population of each College. In the third column of the same Appendix is stated only the total populations of those Communes which have voted. The totals of these columns show that the figures in any case represent the political trends of a population of 7½ million out of a total population of nearly 43 million, or roughly 1/6th. Moreover, the extent to which the figures can be considered to be representative varies considerably from College to College. For instance, in College IV (Milan - Pavia) the figures represent about 54% of the population, and in College XII (Perugia - Terni - Rieti) about 73%. On the other hand, in College XX (Rome - Viterbo - Latina - Frosinone) only .3% of the total population is covered. In most of the Colleges a small percentage of the population voted.
7. Although the smaller provincial capitals and other towns have largely rural interests, yet the figures are preponderantly an analysis of an urban vote. The small country towns and villages, however, outnumber the larger urban centers both in number and in population in Italy.
8. On the other hand the system of proportional representation adopted for the communal elections in those centers which are the subject of this report is in its essentials the same as that which will be used for the Constituent Assembly election. The figures now submitted are for this reason possibly a rather better indication of general political trends than they would be if they had been more comprehensive. If figures for all the communes under 30,000 which have voted had been included, the resulting picture would be possibly less representative because:-

a. These smaller Communes voted by the majority system. This system is quite unlike that which will be used at the political elections and has led to some of the strangest party groupings (e.g., Demo-Christians + Communists), thereby obscuring the general lines of the party battle.

b. Moreover, under the majority system there is no correspondence between seats won and votes obtained, because a party gaining a majority of only a few votes over another can thereby obtain 4/5ths of the seats on the town council. This has actually happened.

c. In the small Communes local politics and personalities have had more weight, to that extent lessening the value of the results of the local elections in such Communes as an indication of feeling on national issues.

9. As regards these smaller Communes voting by the majority system, only partial figures are available, and it is anticipated that complete figures will not be had until late this month and possibly not until after the political elections. The Ministry of Interior have had great difficulty in obtaining accurate returns from the inexperienced and comparatively unqualified municipal officials of the small towns.

10. Apart from the use of these figures as a forecast for the political elections, there are two other important facts which emerge from a study of these.

11. Firstly, the figures fully bear out what all previous reports have shown, namely, the very high poll. The total poll is 80% of the electorate, and in no individual College on the Mainland is it lower than 65%. In Eastern Sicily, the lowest of all, the poll is 60%.

12. Secondly, a comparison between the number of electors voting (the 9th column from the left in Appendix B) and the total valid votes cast (the last column on the right of Appendix B) is interesting. The difference between these two figures gives the number of spoiled ballots and this is an indication of the extent to which the electors have understood what they were doing. The number of spoiled ballots is surprisingly low and bears out the indications of previous reports. A mere 2.8% of the voters spoiled their ballots, a figure which compares favorably with any election in the United States or Great Britain.
