German troops, withdrawing from the coastal sector under the threat of Allied thrusts across higher ground inland, had apparently withdrawn from the bathing resort town before it was entered by 8th Army forces. Although official reports made no mention of enemy resistance along the coastal highway, Route Number 16, clashes between German paratroopers and New Zealand armored forces were reported in the meadowlands lying between the salt flats just west of Cervia and the lower reaches of the Savio River, main German defense line in this sector.

Canadian troops yesterday forced a second crossing of the Savio River, at a point two miles north of Cesena, and by nightfall had consolidated their hold on a mile-wide and 1,000-yard-deep strip of the heavily defended west bank of this stream.

British troops, holding a bridgehead across the Savio west of Cesena, yesterday further expanded their grip on the eastern end of the 11-mile strip of Highway 9 stretching from Cesena to the town of Forli, one of the principal towns of the Romagno district. Despite flood current now racing in the swollen Savio, engineers have bridged the stream to move forward tanks to support the bridgehead forces, it was reported today.

Despite a sudden renewal of bad weather which had the threefold effect of restricting artillery observation, grounding the air support which has proved one of the most effective aids in attacking the German mountain defenses, and softening roads into almost impassable quagmires American troops of the 5th Army by yesterday had made gains of up to half a mile in their slow and strenuous advance toward Bologna.

Leading American forces were reported to be within a mile of Pianora, a small town on the Savena River 7½ miles south of Bologna, in the first gain reported in this sector in three days. The advance, made on both sides of the road,

The advance to Cervia by 8th Army forces yesterday marked a gain of four miles in the direction of Ravenna, and places these troops some 18 miles northwest of Rimini, in the third day of renewed movement along a sector which remained without change for over three weeks, during most of which the 8th Army troops were held south of the swollen lower stretches of the Fiumicino River.

Despite rainy weather, which flooded the low marshlands, these troops pushed forward more than eight miles in little over four days. Reports from Cervia indicated that the Germans had dismantled the local wireless station, although no other demolition was mentioned.

On the extreme southwestern flank of the 8th Army line, British and Indian troops attacked across the Borello River to storm Monte Cavallo, 11 miles southeast of Forli, while other troops crossed the Rabbi River some 15 miles south of this important Romagna town. (PRO)

JAP LEYTE DEFENSES CRUMBLE: PALO CAPTURED

AFHQ, LEYTE, October 23 — Palo, last Japanese stronghold on the west coast of Leyte Island, was captured by American troops today while in other sectors of the landings area enemy defense positions cracked wide open and the Japanese were in retreat, it was officially announced.

Two and a half-miles inland, and virtually in the center of the 20-mile front secured by the landing troops, Palo fell to the 24th Division of the U.S. 10th Army Corps only a few hours after an assault began on the town's outer defenses.

On the southern front of Leyte, American troops also successfully stormed Japanese strongholds and forced the enemy to retreat hurriedly in an attempt to avoid a trap being set in the Leyte Valley.

The Japanese were reported moving back to the hills in the face of a push by 7th Infantry Division troops, led by tanks which were moving inland from Dulag, where one of the first American beachheads were established. The terrain northwest of Dulag is flat and ideal for tank warfare.

As they retreated into their hideouts, however, the Japanese were threatened with an acute supply problem. Allied bombers are in position to pounce on the slighest sight of a Japanese concentration of either troops or materials, and infantry troops are moving swiftly to cut off all enemy supply routes.

Further to aggravate the enemy position, American engineers are readying captured airfields and ports for use soon as springboards for greater air and sea attacks.

Constitutional Government Restored

Meanwhile, Tacloban, provincial capital above Palo, became the site of the first constitutional government in the Philippines since the islands were occupied by the Japanese more than 2½ years ago.

General MacArthur's communique reported today that the Japanese had made minor air raids on American shipping in the Gulf of Leyte. A correspondent noted, however, that the few enemy planes that have appeared over the Leyte landing areas have been chased hurriedly by heavy anti-aircraft fire.

Allied ground forces in some areas continue to receive support from Navy units cruising near the shore, another correspondent said. Big naval guns have concentrated on enemy resistance pockets, and have wiped out small isolated groups of Japanese, he added.

Allied troops are still landing on the east coast, and equipment continued to be unloaded through the night, with barges emptying their cargoes under bright lights, it was reported.

Allied bombers were active also in bombing Japanese bases in the Philippines and other southwest Pacific areas today.

8TH LIBERATES CERVIA, 13 MILES FROM RAVENNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 23 — Eighth Army forces, after forced marches through coastal boglands, have captured the town of Cervia, only 13 miles by main highway from the key communications city of Ravenna ,it was announced here today.

German troops, withdrawing from the coastal sector under the threat of Allied thrusts across higher ground inland, had apparently withdrawn from the bathing resort town before it was entered by 8th Army forces. Although official reports made no mention of enemy resistance along the coastal highway, Route Number 16, clashes between German paratroopers and New Zealand armored forces were reported in the meadowlands lying between the salt flats just west of Cervia and the lower reaches of the Savio River, main German defense line in this sector.

Americans near Pianora

Leading American forces were reported to be within a mile of Pianora, a small town on the Savena River 7½ miles south of Bologna, in the first gain reported in this sector in three days. The advance, made on both sides of the road, places the American forces within a few hundred yards of the crossroads at Zala, but still south of the rocky escarpment guarding the entry into the Savena River Valley.

Although enemy forces have been considerably reinforced by fresh troops in an effort to check the 5th Army's drive toward Bologna, American forces have now consolidated their recently captured positions on the broken hill masses of the Apennines fringe against possible German counter-attacks, today's reports stated.

On the right flank of the 15-mile-wide front south of Bologna, where American forces yesterday expanded to a depth of two miles their salient into the western edge of the Sillaro River Valley, heavy fighting was reported today in the outskirts of Frassineto, a small settlement a mile north of the river and 5½ miles southwest of Castel San Pietro, on the Rimini-Bologna Highway.

Midway between these forces and those engaged along the Florence-Bologna Road south of Pianoro, other American infantrymen were fighting their way along both sides of the Idice River, in the vicinity of the villages of Pizzano and Chiusura.

British troops reported progress in their thrust northward through the hill country between the Sillaro and the Santerno Rivers, while patrol forces reached Fontanelice, 9½ miles southwest of Imilo.

Two and a half miles inland, [illegible] of the 20-mile front secured by the landing troops, Palo fell to the 24th Division of the U.S. 10th Army Corps only a few hours after an assault began on the town's outer defenses.

Heavy bombers unloaded 94 tons of explosives on Mindanao Island to the south of the Leyte fighting, smashing buildings and other installations. Among the targets was Cacayan, principal communications center in the northern part of Mindanao. Fighters destroyed 23 trucks on a highway in Mindanao, and two small vessels were destroyed off its coast.

Medium bombers, hitting the Visyan Islands in the central Philippines, sank three more small freighters. Four other freighters probably were sunk.

YUGOSLAVS LIBERATE MOST OF ZEMUN

LONDON, October 23 — Liberation of a number of towns in widely separated regions of Yugoslavia was reported in yesterday's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio.

Crossing the Sava River near Belgrade, Soviet and Yugoslav troops captured the airdomes and most of the town of Zemun, three miles northwest of Belgrade.

To the south, in northern Serbia, the ring around the German troops at Krusevac was drawn tighter and the enemy pressed back toward Pristina, 65 miles to the south.

In Slovenia, 500 enemy troops were killed when seven railway trains were derailed.

Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy by Yugoslav troops in heavy fighting on the Bregalnica River in Macedonia.

The communique also reported the liberation of Drnis, 30 miles northwest of the Dalmatian port of Split.

Omis, important strongpoint and harbor southeast of Split, has been liberated by Yugoslav forces, today's communique said.

Near the Hungarian border, units of the Yugoslav National army of Liberation continued to advance westward, freeing the town of Topola on the main railway from Belgrade to Budapest and only 20 miles from the important rail center of Subotica, on the Hungarian frontier.

Farther southwest, in the rear of German troops, other Yugoslav troops liberated Backa Palanka, on the main Zagreb-Belgrade line, 24 miles east of the railway junction of Novisud. (OWI)

2,500 PLANES ATTACK REICH WITHOUT LOSS

LONDON, October 23 — RAF bombers and fighters this afternoon attacked gun emplacements on Walcheren Island, while Halifaxes and Mosquitoes swooped on shipping off Norway.

Two merchant ships, one escort vessel, and a flak ship were set on fire. The attacks on shipping were made without loss, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire.

The 2,500 British and American planes which flew hundreds of miles into Germany yesterday attacked six separate targets with complete mastery of the air, and returned without a single loss. This is the first time an armada of this size had escaped at least some minor casualties.

Only one enemy aircraft was seen, and it was destroyed. Ack-ack fire generally was moderate and inaccurate.

The bombers worked in three waves, two in daylight and one at night, attacking German industries and communications in the Hamm, Münster, Hanover, and Brunswick areas. Returning, they passed a formation of RAF Lancasters with strong fighter escort going out for a night attack on the inland port and railway center of Neuss, near Düsseldorf.

A small force of British Mosquitoes also attacked Hamburg and other objectives in western Germany last night.

Mustangs strafing the Hanover vicinity knocked out 13 locomotives and 25 railroad cars, wrecked five barges and five small steamboats in a Holland inlet, and shot up gas works installations.

The Germans have used flying bombs for the first time against Americans on the western front, the BBC reported today.

M.A.A.F. STRIKES IN CZECHO-SLOVAKIA, GERMANY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 23 — Escorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF, flying through stormy skies, today struck at strategic targets in Czecho-Slovakia, Germany, and Italy, by means of recently developed instrument bombing techniques, it was announced here late this afternoon. The targets attacked in Germany were located in the Munich, Augsburg, and Regensburg areas, while the Italian targets were along the Brenner Pass route, main rail link between Germany and the Balkan and Italian fronts.

Fighter-bombers were also out despite the day's unfavorable weather, and skimmed below low-lying clouds to strafe enemy road, rail, and water transport from the battle area as far north as Savona in the Gulf of Genoa. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. OPERATIONS SLOWED BY WEATHER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 23 — Squally weather yesterday grounded all heavy and medium bombers of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, and restricted fighters and fighter-bombers to a few hundred sorties, mainly against rail and road transport north of the battle areas, it was announced here today.

Coastal and Balkan Air Force carried out strafing sweeps against enemy transport in Albania, Yugoslavia, and Greece. (PRO)

ITALIAN ARMY UNITS SPED ALLIED SUCCESSES

HQ, AAI, October 23 — Allied military successes would not have been so quickly realized but for the work of Italian Army pioneer units working behind the 5th and 8th Armies, Allied military officials here reported, paying the highest tribute to these units which currently are delivering ammunition and supplies to Allied mountain fighters, rebuilding military bridges, and keeping the Allied supply lifeline open.

Today, high in the mountain battlefront, Italian soldiers and their mule teams are carrying artillery shells, food, water, and medical supplies to Allied soldiers. It has been impossible to measure the tonnage these Italian units have delivered, but they have kept the supply line open, and have paid a price in performing their duties. Battle casualties among these units have not been light.

On the 5th Army Front, there is a full Italian Infantry Division performing vital duties. They have been with the 5th Army all the way up the Italian mainland, beating a path to forward positions where Allied troops have set up mountain mortar, machine-gun, and artillery positions.

These units have moved supplies to the front, kept supply lines open, built bridges, sometimes under heavy enemy fire; rebuilt railroads destroyed by the retreating Germans; built jeep tracks into the mountain frontlines, rebuilt roads blasted by German demolition crews, loaded and unloaded military cargo from ships and trains, rebuilt wrecked port facilities.

On the 5th Army front, the Italian division attached to that army has 10 mule companies, three engineer battalions, and three other regiments assigned to supply duties. It is commanded by an Italian general, and has its own administration staff, all of whom wear 5th Army insignia patches.

The Italian units first joined the Allied troops with the 8th Army near Reggio Calabria more than a year ago. They followed the Army northward, performing their outstanding work at the crossing of the Sangro where under enemy fire, they built the bridges which made the Allied crossing and subsequent advance possible.

Later, they brought up the vast amount of supplies needed by the Allied armies to shatter the Gustav and Hitler lines south of Rome, and more recently the Goth line. Their bridge-building was outstanding, according to Allied military engineers. Their handling of one of the most valuable Allied engineering weapons — the Bailey Bridge — has brought praise from Allied engineer troops, who agreed that Italian engineering units were as good as British, American, Indian, Canadian, and New Zealand units. ITALIAN OFFICER LEADS ARTILLERY PARTY

WITH 8TH ARMY, October 23 — Today the amazing story of how an Italian Army officer and nine Canadians made an important contribution toward the Allied capture of Cesenatico may be told, now that the town is firmly in Allied hands and New Zealand troops are now pushing the enemy north of the town.

The name of the 19-year-old Italian second lieutenant who was chiefly responsible for the success of the mission cannot be told because of possible German reprisal against members of his family in northern Italy. But this deed may be related as another vital contribution which the Italian Army is making toward the Allied cause in Italy.

The lieutenant was chosen by high officers of the 8th Army to accompany an artillery spotting mission behind the enemy lines, to act as guide and interpreter to a group of nine Canadians, of which two were officers. The trip began in an Allied motor torpedo boat and ended in a rubber craft from which they were landed on an enemy-held coast. There was a mistake of calculation, and the party was put ashore in the wrong spot.

danger. Each day, their host handed them food through a small hole in the ceiling. With the food came important information about enemy concentrations in the vicinity. The Italian lieutenant translated the information.

The Germans must have wondered how a lucky hit from New Zealand artillery blew up an ammunition dump near the house. Their wonder must have turned to chagrin as the Allied artillery continued blowing up critical targets, such as supply convoys and gun positions.

On the ninth day, their host urged them to leave. The Germans were becoming suspicious of the almost uncanny accurancy of Allied artillery and the resulting «lucky» hits. He had heard German officers talk of a house-to-house search. That night, the party left and made for the coast. Soon they were back in Allied lines, and heard that their spotting had paved the way for the Allied advance. (UNN)

GERMANS IN ITALY OUTFLANKED BY RUSSIANS

NEW YORK, October 23 — Among the significant features of the Russian advance into Hungary and Yugoslavia, discussed by the informed military commentator Max Werner in yesterday's PM, is the outflanking of the German forces in Italy.

«With the Russian break-through into the middle Danube area,» wrote Werner, «the Balkan campaign is being brought to its final conclusion. Marshal Von Weich's Balkan armies cannot make a last stand in the Dinaric Alps or the Rhodope Mountains because they are outflanked and intercepted far to the north.

«German forces trying to escape through western Yugoslavia are squeezed between the Danube and the Adriatic, with Marshal Tito's forces holding exits from the trap. The German forces in Italy are outflanked too. The Alps are no longer a defensive barrier for Germany. Germany cannot be defended at the Brenner Pass, because the Red Army has access into southern Germany through the Danube Valley, an ideal avenue of invasion.»

Werner said the Russian southern front is no mere appendage to the front which runs from southwestern Poland to Memel, but is a new front, with objectives of its own. The strategic meaning of the battle for Hungary was the unleashing of a new avalanche of Allied forces in the Balkans who were gaining new Allies and becoming progressively stronger as the German retreat was disorganized and the Wehrmacht crippled.

«In the last few months,» he wrote, «the strategic space of the Wehrmacht has been steadily shrunk from „Fortress Europe" to „Fortress Central Europe" and now to „Fortress Germany".» (OWI)

EL ALAMEIN BIRTHDAY CELEBRATED IN ACTION

LONDON, October 23 — Today, the second anniversary of the Battle of El Alamein, elements of the original British 8th Army are spearheading one of the prongs of General Sir Miles Dempsey's 2nd Army into western Holland.

El Alamein marked the first decisive battle lost by the Germans and Italians, and heralded a succession of Allied victories against vaunted German defense lines that have been smashed and broken from El Alamein back to the Siegfried Line, last barrier before Reich territory to topple.

Today, from his 21st Army Group headquarters, Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery addressed an anniversary message to his old comrades of the «Original 8th,» now scattered to all corners of the globe.

«Today, our armies stand triumphant on the threshold of Germany,» Field Marshal Montgomery declared.

For two days they hid in the woods near the Adriatic shore. The Italian lieutenant, at the end of the second day, saw and spoke to an Italian civilian, who left at once. That night was a nightmare for the party. They did not know whether the civilian would carry out his promise to get them shelter and food. The party had but four days' rations.

On the third night, they heard footsteps and, from among the trees, another man emerged.

«You better come with me and stay at my house», he told the Italian lieutenant. «It is too dangerous here. The whole town knows you are here, but the Germans do not».

Hidden in Attic

The man led the party to his house, where he had a ladder prepared outside. He told the Italian officer to climb to the roof, remove tiles which had been carefully marked, and bring the party into the attic. Food, he assured them, would be provided.

The party climbed into the attic through the roof, replacing the tiles after them. They brought their wireless broadcasting equipment with them.

For nine days they remained cramped in the tiny attic, but their stay was more than worth their discomfort and

LONDON, October 23 — Today, the second anniversary of the Battle of El Alamein, elements of the original British 8th Army are spearheading one of the prongs of General Sir Miles Dempsey's 2nd Army into western Holland.

El Alamein marked the first decisive battle lost by the Germans and Italians, and heralded a succession of Allied victories against vaunted German defense lines that have been smashed and broken from El Alamein back to the Siegfried Line, last barrier before Reich territory to topple.

Today, from his 21st Army Group headquarters, Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery addressed an anniversary message to his old comrades of the «Original 8th,» now scattered to all corners of the globe.

«»Today, our armies stand triumphant on the threshold of Germany», Field Marshal Montgomery declared.

«»The victory at El Alamein was the turning point of the war for the Allies. Since then, the soldiers of the British Empire, America, and Russia have flung the enemy back on every front». (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 23 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The dump located in the tunnel near La Lanterna, in Genoa, which Patriots blew up on October 10, contained a huge quantity of explosives which the Germans proposed to use for the destruction of the factories in the area at the time of their withdrawal. The explosion caused the destruction of two other tunnels at Calata Molo Nuovo and Calata della Sanità. Damage was also caused to two more tunnels farther distant. Three auxiliary navy ships were sunk and several escort vessels were damaged. About 200 Germans were killed. Repair work in the harbor is still in progress.

In Piedmont, the Nazi-Fascist forces which took part in the mopping up operations in Val di Lanzo and in the Canavese were withdrawn after they had suffered notable losses. Garrisons have been left only at Mathi, Lanzo, and Ciriè. Patriots immediately took advantage of the situation to carry out new attacks.

On October 12, a Garibaldi patrol captured a truck, along with its German occupants, which had to stop because of motor trouble while passing through the Susa Valley.

On October 14 two truckloads of Nazi-Fascists on their way to Susa and Turin were machine-gunned in the neighborhood of Novaretto. One truck was damaged. The number of enemy dead and wounded has not yet been ascertained.

The Fascists, who recently took 87 hostages at Vayer, in Turin Province, entered Almese, also in the Province of Turin, on October 15, and proceeded to carry out lootings in the manner of the German soldiers. Garibaldi Brigade members, advised of the situation, intervened to prevent looting and destruction. An engagement followed which lasted more than an hour. Sixteen Fascist militiamen were killed, and others were wounded or taken prisoner. Only six succeeded in escaping by swimming the Dora Riparia.

The enemy offensive in Carnia, carried out with great superiority of men and materiel, has resulted in the occupation of the Monte Croce Carnico Pass. Patriots resisted till their arms and ammunition gave out. After bitter fighting, they withdrew to the mountains.

Enemy rail traffic on the Genoa-Turin and Genoa-Milan lines was further curtailed by frequent acts of sabotage.

Outside a Turin restaurant, on October 9, a truck which had been used to transport personal baggage blew up while a group of Germans was busy unloading it. Twelve German soldiers were killed. Without even the formality of an investigation, the German command, believing it was faced with an assassination attempt, ordered nine hostages shot in the streets.

In the Ligurian countryside, the Germans are continuing to carry off livestock. (UNN)

White Russian Front, launching their offensive with the support of massive blows of artillery and aviation, broke through the permanent and deeply-echeloned German defenses covering the boundary of East Prussia, and invaded the Eastern Prussian boundary 30 kilometers in depth over a front of 140 kilometers. In the course of this offensive, troops of this front captured the following powerful strongpoints: Schilvin, Naumiestis (Vladislavov), Willuhnen, Virbalis, Ghibartary (Ghibarty), Eidkunnen, Stalufennen, Millunen, Walterkehmen, Pillipenen, Wistynie, Melkemen, Rominten, Gross-Rominten, Wissainy, Schipkenen, Schatzel, Goldap, Pillizu, and Suwalki, and occupied in fighting up to 900 other populated localities, of which over 400 are on the territory of East Prussia.

In Czecho-Slovakia, southeast of Mukacevo, our troops fought advance battles, in the course of which they occupied several populated localities and the railway stations of Nizhnye-Novoselitse, Tachevo, and Bushtino.

In northern Transylvania, our troops, operating jointly with Rumanian troops, captured the town and railway station of Villye-Deklarli, and also occupied over 50 other populated localities.

On Hungarian territory, north and northwest of Nyiregyhaza, our troops reached the south bank of the River Tisza, and occupied several populated localities.

West of Belgrade, our troops, operating jointly with units of the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, continued fighting for expansion of their bridghead on the western bank of the River Sava, and captured the large populated locality of Bezanye.

Bulgarian troops operating against the Germans jointly with units of the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia and our troops, occupied in fighting on the territory of Yugoslavia the town of Kochana, and several populated localities.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 22, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 187 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by antiaircraft fire, 31 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of October 22/23, our long-range Air Force bombed German transports at the ports of Windau and Liebau. At the time of the raid on the port of Windau, 10 enemy transports were there. As a result of bombardment at the piers and port, fires broke out, which were followed by explosions, especially strong ones in the area of the customs warehouse.

in the mopping up operations in Val di Lanzo and in the Canavese were withdrawn after they had suffered notable losses. Garrisons have been left only at Mathi, Lanzo, and Ciriè. Patriots immediately took advantage of the situation to carry out new attacks.

On October 12, a Garibaldi patrol captured a truck, along with its German occupants, which had to stop because of motor trouble while passing through the Susa Valley.

On October 14 two truckloads of Nazi-Fascists on their way to Susa and Turin were machine-gunned in the neighborhood of Novaretto. One truck was damaged. The number of enemy dead and wounded has not yet been ascertained.

The Fascists, who recently took 37 hostages at Vuyer, in Turin Province, entered Almese, also in the Province of Turin, on October 15, and proceeded to carry out lootings in the manner of the German soldiers. Garibaldi Brigade members, advised of the situation, intervened to prevent looting and destruction. An engagement followed which lasted more than an hour. Sixteen Fascist militiamen were killed, and others were wounded or taken prisoner. Only six succeeded in escaping by swimming the Dora Riparia.

The enemy offensive in Carnia, carried out with great superiority of men and materiel, has resulted in the occupation of the Monte Croce Carnico Pass. Patriots resisted till their arms and ammunition gave out. After bitter fighting, they withdrew to the mountains.

Enemy rail traffic on the Genoa-Turin and Genoa-Milan lines was further curtailed by frequent acts of sabotage.

Outside a Turin restaurant, on October 9, a truck which had been used to transport personal baggage blew up while a group of Germans was busy unloading it. Twelve German soldiers were killed. Without even the formality of an investigation, the German command, believing it was faced with an assassination attempt, ordered nine hostages shot in the streets.

In the Ligurian countryside, the Germans are continuing to carry off livestock. (UNN)

GERMAN

Western Front:

North and northeast of Antwerp, our troops, by counter-attacks and a stubborn resistance, in general frustrated the Canadian attacks. The British divisions which attacked east of Hertogenbosch also gained only little ground.

In the Würselen sector, the grim fighting in and for pillbox positions continued.

Yesterday, grim local fighting was in progress east of Lunéville and in the Bruyères sector.

German counter-attacks halted the enemy, who had advanced at some points, after small initial successes.

Italy:

In the Etruscan Apennines, the formations of the U. S. 5th Army launched several attacks which were frustrated.

On the Adriatic coast, our divisions smashed enemy formations which had been assailing our positions throughout the whole day.

Only north of Cesena, the enemy established a small bridgehead on the northern banks of the Savio.

In the Gulf of Genoa, armed ferry boats of the Navy sank a British motor assault boat, and damaged another one without suffering any damage.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, our troops who had held their positions in the Niso sector for days in the face of superior enemy attacks, beat off enemy encircling attempts, and linked up with our main forces.

In southern Hungary, the enemy increased his pressure toward the Danube.

Northwest of Szeged, German and Hungarian troops frustrated repeated Bolshevik attacks.

East of Szolnok, the annihilation of encircled Rumanian and Soviet divisions makes further progress. They were split up in single groups after a stubborn though unsuccessful defence.

North of Debrecen, our troops cut off the communications of Soviet formations which had advanced to the upper reaches of the Tisa, and inflicted heavy losses on them.

In the eastern Beskides, where the enemy again attacked unsuccessfully, our grenadiers ousted him from a penetration of the previous day.

In eastern Slovakia, troops of the Army and the Waffen SS, in some weeks of bitter mountain fighting, smashed strong groups of Partisans and captured a large booty.

In central Slovakia, further operations against bands, which were reinforced by Bolshevik parachutists, are in progress.

On both sides of the Serok, our formations are engaged in grim fighting against enemy divisions which attack with strong forces.

In the frontier area of East Prussia, the battle extended southward to the Augusto sector. Between Sudauen and Goldap, the Bolsheviks punched major gaps into our lines. Goldap was captured by the enemy after fierce street fighting.

South of Gumbinnen, our grenadiers cut off the communications in the rear of the Soviets, who had advanced.

On both sides of Ebenrode, Bolshevik attempts at breaking through were frustrated with bloody losses for the enemy.

In the frontier area of East Prussia, bombers and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force successfully participated in the grim fighting, and smasher Soviet spearheads and destroyed many tanks. In this sector, 616 enemy tanks have so far been destroyed or captured in a seven-day battle.

Bolshevik attacks on the bridgehead of Memel failed.

In the neck of the Sworbe Peninsula, our grenadiers pushed back the enemy, who had penetrated, in a northerly direction. They were effectively supported by the fire of German light naval forces and armed ferry boats.

In the Arctic Zone, at Kolosjoki and the Arctic Road, the enemy continued his attacks with strong bomber support. Grenadiers and mountain troops repulsed the Bolshevik attacks, and frustrated encircling attempts of the enemy.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers, favored by an overcast sky, attacked Hanover, Münster, Brunswick, Neuss, and Hamburg. They dropped some bombs on western Germany.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMANY

Aachen: After having denied the fall of Aachen for two days after it was announced by the Allies, the German Radio, now admitting the city's capture, is engaged in building up Aachen as a symbol of German «heroism,» and as an object-lesson for the future. Thus an evening broadcast states:

«The heroic fighting of the garrison of Aachen went our country to fight until victory... With the heroism of Nibelungs, they did not lay down their weapons until the last man had been disabled.» Aachen is also treated as an object-lesson teaching the German people the strategic value of fighting to the end, in order to play for time. «If our units have been enabled to hold the enemy in new positions, then it is thanks to the men of Aachen,» who had thus gained the «necessary time.»

Eastern Front: Although the recent propaganda trend on the eastern front has been to present it as becoming stabilized in the East Prussian area, tonight's broadcasts, as well as those of yesterday, are notable for the candour with which Russian gains in this area are conceded. So strong a phrase as «major gaps» is used in today's Wehrmacht communique.

New Army of Fighting Fanatics: With this phrase, the German Radio characterizes the new reserve army, the Volkssturm. The major trend of today is the effort to instil into German audiences a faith in the efficacy of this new reserve army. The commentary of Dr. Semmler over the German Home Radio describes the Volkssturm in the strongest confidence-evoking terminology as the final bulwark of patriotic resistance. Meanwhile, the German Overseas Radio cites figures to show the supposed enthusiasm of the German people for the Volkssturm, to which huge numbers of Germans are flocking «voluntarily.»

Bologna Front: Apparently Allied attacks between Bologna and Loiano were concentrated and intensive, yet fruitless, owing to «strong German resistance.»

Allied Advances on the Adriatic: In the Adriatic sector, the Allied push was admittedly successful, resulting in penetrations of the German line north of Cesena. The 8th Army bridgehead across the Savio River appears to have been sustained and widened, despite midday reports of fluctuations.

Palermo Incidents: The Palermo incident, (or incidents) has become a sustained theme. The origin of the riots is still said to be agrarian collapse in Sicily, abetted (with cynical intent) and embittered by the non-arrival of Anglo-Americano-Bonomi promised relief. An alternative to the Separatist Movement's complicity was offered tonight; namely, that «the official communiqués are mentioning radical Left Wing elements, which have arrived from abroad for the purpose.» The comprehensiveness and the urgency of the situation are proved by the alleged fact that students, state officials and other representative elements in Sicily have entered the fray. The implication here is that the Allies, unless they take extreme measures, will have an insuperable problem to face. In reporting the supposed widespread appearance of Allied warnings, threatening posters, etc., Freemasonry («international and secret») is blamed and condemned.

Anti-Fascism and Pro-Italianism: The day's strongest editorial note was struck on the theme of the Italian dilemma. The article makes anti-Fascists inevitably anti-nationalists, and postulates colony-losing subservience to the Allies as the result. The conclusion is that, perforce, the anti-Fascists will return to Fascism.

HUNGARY

Horthy: In answer to the conflicting rumors concerning the ex-Regent of Hungary, Radio Budapest shortly before midnight tonight issued the following statement concerning Horthy: «The fact that Admiral Horthy resides in Germany was revealed by a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman... Horthy was forced to make certain decisions by certain people, decisions which he bitterly regretted a few hours later. With Horthy, the last visitor always was in the right... When Premier Lakatos asked for German protection for Horthy, ... he received the following answer on the Führer's orders: «Horthy may count on the chivalrous protection of Ger-

100,000 TROOPS ASHORE IN PHILIPPINES PRIMARY OBJECTIVES SECURED

AFHQ, LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, October 22 — More than 100,000 American troops are ashore on the island of Leyte in the central Philippines and many thousand more are disembarking, the BBC announced tonight.

Invading troops under the command of General Douglas MacArthur have already secured the first four primary objectives on the island and have advanced inland to a depth of four miles in their campaign to liberate the Philippines, it was officially announced.

Tacloban, the principal town and capital city of Leyte, was overrun in the first 24 hours of fighting by troops of the 1st Cavalry Division. The city's airfield was also taken in this drive with a loss of less than a dozen men. Allied forces are now in control of the San Joanico Straits between Leyte and the island of Samar.

The two other objectives were the town of Dulag and its airfield, 20 miles to the south, which were taken by the 96th sels, large and small, were sunk or damaged and 50 Japanese aircraft were destroyed.

Further neutralization attacks against Japanese bases were reported. Halmahera, Ceram, Celebes, Timor, New Britain, New Ireland and Bougainville were all hit. Japanese shipping, airfields, defense installations, troops concentrations and oil installations were the main targets.

Lieut. General George C. Kenney, commander of Allied air forces in the Pacific, inspected the Tacloban and Dulag airfields today and stated that while the airstrips were too short for use by American bombers, fighter planes will be operating from the fields in a few days, after American engineers put the fields into shape. PHILIPPINE PRISONERS RESCUED AFTER 2 1/2 YEARS

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, October 22 — The dramatic story of 83 American officers and enlisted men who were rescued from the Philippines a few weeks ago after being held prisoner by the Japs for 2½ years was revealed here today by U. S. Army officials.

An Associated Press dispatch tells how the men, imprisoned in the hold of a Japanese prison ship, made their escape when the transport was torpedoed. Reaching the Philippine jungle, they were cared for by Filipino Patriots until American troops rescued them from the islands.

Many of their comrades did not escape and were shot by Japanese guards as they lay helpless in the hold of the ship or as they tried vainly to swim the two miles to shore. Others who managed to get into the water were picked up by enemy patrols and at least 30 of these were later executed, the Associated Press dispatch added. (OWI)

The two other objectives were the town of Dulag and its airfield, 20 miles to the south, which were taken by the 96th Infantry Division of the 24th Corps after they repulsed two strong Japanese counter-attacks. This southern prong of the invasion forces is now pushing toward San Pablo in the Leyte Valley.

General MacArthur's communique tonight stated that the Japanese are already showing signs of a lack of maneuverable cohesion in the face of skillful attacks by local American commanders. General MacArthur credited these attacks, and the successful envelopment maneuvers which have by-passed well-equipped Japanese defense positions, with the small American casualties.

American forces are now consolidating the invasion perimeter and are fanning out to wipe out remaining Japanese resistance. Most of the Japanese pillboxes and gun emplacements are already knocked out and the few that remain cannot hope to hold out much longer.

Japanese air activity against the beachhead and shipping was officially announced as limited to dawn and dusk raids by small groups of aircraft. Three Japanese bombers were destroyed by ship anti-aircraft fire when they attempted to bomb the beachhead.

Meanwhile, carrier-based planes of the United States Pacific Fleet continued to support General MacArthur's ground forces with heavy attacks on Japanese shipping and aircraft throughout the Philippines. Eleven additional vessels were sunk and 17 damaged in the Philippines and Ryukyus, Admiral Nimitz announced today. Fifty-seven Japanese planes were destroyed in the air and 30 on the ground, he said. LATE BULLETINS

HIMMLER WOUNDED

STOCKHOLM, (Monday), October 23 — An attempt on the life of Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler, Commander of the German Home Army, was made Saturday in Budapest, it was disclosed here early this morning by a London Daily Mail correspondent. Himmler was only wounded, the dispatch said.

Himmler had gone to Budapest to take control of the Hungarian situation following Admiral Horthys announcement that he was suing for an armistice with the Allies.

There was no further confirmation or details available. (Reuter)

GERMANY'S FUEL PRODUCTION 25 PERCENT NORMAL

LONDON, October 22 — Lieut. General James H. Doolittle, commander of the 8th USAAF, declared here yesterday that the production of Germany's oil and gasoline refineries has been reduced to 25 per cent of normal.

General Doolittle stated that Bruex in western Czechoslovakia, is the site of the largest oil refinery left to the German war machine and that it has been bombed repeatedly recently with great success. The increased defenses of the refinery, he said, indicated the value of it to the Germans. At the start of the attacks, photographs showed 80 anti-aircraft guns guarding the refinery but now more than 200 of the heaviest caliber weapons are situated there. (OWI)

SOVIETS REACH NORWEGIAN FRONTIER CAPTURE HUNGARIAN STRONGHOLD

MOSCOW, October 22 — While Soviet units in Hungary moved nearer Budapest on a 170-mile arc, Russian forces in the extreme north of the front reached the Norwegian frontier.

Red Army units, including Don and Kuban Cossacks, today captured Nyireghaza in their drive northward from Debrecen, taken two days ago. Marshal Stalin, in an order of the day to Marshal Malinovsky, said this large communications center and German stronghold was taken as a result of a swift tank and cavalry blow.

The left wing of Marshal Malinovsky's army is now on the Danube bank at Baja, 85 miles south of the Hungarian capital, while his right wing is only 30 miles south of the Czechoslovak border. His front is developing a great sickle-like movement bringing Budapest under a double threat.

Soviet tank and storm troop spearheads are stabbing hard at keypoints along the curving front. Already the Red Army controls the only rail bridge across the Danube on a 90-mile stretch south of Budapest. The Soviet Danube flotilla is thrusting upstream from Belgrade to harry German shore positions, while the Red Air Force in lightning dawn and dusk raids has established air supremacy over the German supply lines.

The Russian bridgehead along the Tisza River established on Friday night has been expanded, despite furious German counter-attacks.

As a result of the latest Russian successes, the German and Hungarian troops in northern Transylvania are virtually cut off, and their only way of escape is by roundabout rough lanes and marshy roads.

West of Szeget, Russian troops occupied a number of towns in Hungary. In Yugoslav territory they captured the big rail junction of Sombor, the hub of a rail network connecting Hungary with Slovenia.

5TH ARMY CAPTURES HEIGHTS OVERLOOKING PO

AFHQ, ITALY, October 22 — American forces of the 5th Army have captured three key heights overlooking the approaches to Castel San Pietro and the valley of the Po, as a result of a large scale infantry, air and artillery attack launched on the right flank of the deadlocked battle front south of Bologna, it was announced here today.

While fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force shattered enemy gun positions and bombed and strafed German troop concentrations, American infantrymen rushed the slopes of the three hills at the western edge of the Silaro River Valley under cover of a heavy artillery barrage which pounded German troops and positions on the reverse slopes. The coordination of the air and artillery attack with the advance of American ground forces enabled forward elements to reach and hold the mountain crests while reinforcements and artillery were rushed up to consolidate the newly-won positions. Enemy forces launched two heavy counter-attacks in an almost immediate effort to win back their lost positions, but American troops repulsed them with heavy losses.

The three hill masses, Monte Cuccoli, Monte Grande and Monte Cerere, are all located within a two-mile-wide and two-mile-deep salient driven into the Apennines foothills at the extreme right of the 15-mile-wide front south of Bologna, as a result of a series of actions culminating in the large-scale assault which began late on the night of October 19. The foremost of the mountain positions in this salient, Monte Grande, is within five miles of the Rimini-Bologna Road at a point just northwest of Castel San Pietro.

Along the center and left flank of the American line south of Bologna the only advance reported yesterday was the capture of Castel De Zena, a hilltop castle converted into a stronghold by the enemy to bolster their mountain face defenses guarding the entrance into the Savena River Valley.

Official reports for the second day made no mention of fighting on Monte Belmonte, center peak in the German mountain escarpment defenses, which American troops first attacked five days ago. Castel del Zena is fully a mile to the south of Monte Belmonte, on a lateral mountain road linking the Florence-Bologna road with secondary roads leading along the Idice River Valley and a tributary stream.

8th Continues Advance

On the 8th Army Front, Allied forces were yesterday continuing their advance through the marshlands north of Cesenatico, swimming, or crossing in flat-bottom boats, the deeper drainage streams, and pushing forward along the embankments and drier spots with bicycles and every other available means of transport. New Zealand armoured units on the left of these forces, yesterday crossed the Granarola River and despite the handicaps of marshy ground and frequent enemy demolitions, advanced to within a mile of the Savio River crossing at Mensa. These forces, furthest north of any pinpointed on the 8th Army Front, are within 13 miles of Ravenna, principal city of the Romagna district.

Eighth Army forces yesterday enlarged their small bridgehead across the Savio River west of Cesena, despite extremely heavy enemy shelling and nebelwerfer mortar fire. Eighth Army troops are now along the east bank of the Savio River for a distance of more than four miles, as a result of advances made through thickly mined approaches. German forces are entrenched in strength on the west bank of this river, manning defensive positions originally constructed to contain a possible sea-borne landing north of Rimini.

Eighth Army patrol forces which crossed the Savio River, north of the bridgehead at Cesena yesterday, were subjected to heavy enemy shelling which prevented rein-

In the Belgrade area, Russian and Yugoslav units forced the River Temes and captured the town of Semlin, as well as three other places south and southwest of Belgrade.

German troops of the Belgrade garrison, falling back westward across Yugoslavia, retreated 40 miles in 48 hours, according to the German news commentator von Hammer, and have reached the Save River in the Sabac area.

Tonight's Soviet communique lists the prisoners and war material taken during the fighting for Kragujevac, south of Belgrade, which fell yesterday. The bag included seven aircraft, 13 tanks, 200 guns, 150 machine guns, 1,000 wagons with military supplies, 19 trains, 900 horses and 25 ammunition dumps. More than 4,000 enemy dead were left on the battlefield.

On the Arctic front Soviet troops advancing in the Petsamo area to reach the Norwegian frontier captured some nickel mines in addition to a number of inhabited places.

A Finnish communique said tonight that the Germans are fighting delaying actions in their retreat northward. Finnish troops are advancing along the eastern bank of the Vammas River after breaking through German defense positions at Marrasjaervi.

Russian troops disabled or destroyed 79 German tanks and shot down 26 planes on all fronts during yesterday's fighting. (OWI - Reuter) at the extreme right of the 15-mile-wide front south of Bologna, as a result of a series of actions culminating in the large-scale assault which began late on the night of October 19. The foremost of the mountain positions in this salient, Monte Grande, is within five miles of the Rimini-Bologna Road at a point just northwest of Castel San Pietro.

Along the center and left flank of the American line south of Bologna the only advance reported yesterday was the capture of Castel De Zena, a hilltop castle converted into a stronghold by the enemy to bolster their mountain face defenses guarding the entrance into the Savena River Valley.

Official reports for the second day made no mention of fighting on Monte Belmonte, center peak in the German mountain escarpment defenses, which American troops first attacked five days ago. Castel del Zena is fully a mile to the south of Monte Belmonte, on a lateral mountain road linking the Florence-Bologna road with secondary roads leading along the Idice River Valley and a tributary stream.

On the 8th Army Front, Allied forces were yesterday continuing their advance through the marshlands north of Cesenatico, swimming, or crossing in flat-bottom boats, the deeper drainage streams, and pushing forward along the embankments and drier spots with bicycles and every other available means of transport. New Zealand armoured units on the left of these forces, yesterday crossed the Granarola River and despite the handicaps of marshy ground and frequent enemy demolitions, advanced to within a mile of the Savio River crossing at Mensa. These forces, furthest north of any pinpointed on the 8th Army Front, are within 13 miles of Ravenna, principal city of the Romagna district.

Eighth Army forces yesterday enlarged their small bridgehead across the Savio River west of Cesena, despite extremely heavy enemy shelling and nebelwerfer mortar fire. Eighth Army troops are now along the east bank of the Savio River for a distance of more than four miles, as a result of advances made through thickly mined approaches. German forces are entrenched in strength on the west bank of this river, manning defensive positions originally constructed to contain a possible sea-borne landing north of Rimini.

Eighth Army patrol forces which crossed the Savio River, north of the bridgehead at Cesena yesterday, were subjected to heavy enemy shelling which prevented reinforcements from reaching them. The patrol was finally withdrawn. In other fighting further inland along the line of the Savio, Indian troops fought a sharp engagement at San Carlo, on the western banks of the river four miles southwest of Cesena. Polish troops captured the height of Monte Grosso, between the Bidente and the Rabbi Rivers, and within 14 miles of the town of Forli, next town to the northwest of Cesena on the Rimini-Bologna road. Other Troops captured several mountain features in this same general area, after sharp clashes with German troops believed to be preparing to hold the line of the Rabbi River in strength.

British troops of the 5th Army, fighting on the right of the American forces thrusting toward Castel San Pietro, yesterday captured Monte dell'Acqua, a hill mass west of the Santerno River and within eight and a half miles of the Rimini-Bologna road northwest of Imola. (PRO)

FIGHTERS ATTACK BRIDGE WEST OF VENICE

AFHQ, Italy, October 22 — Marauder bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday attacked a bridge across the Piave River near Neversa, west of Venice, while fighters and fighter-bombers supported Allied ground troops in Italy, it was announced here today.

In addition to their attacks on enemy gun positions and troop concentrations, fighter-bombers struck a flotilla of enemy barges unloading ammunition at Porto Corsini, near Ravenna, and blew up large stores of munitions piled along the beach.

Strategic Air Force fighters, in sorties over Hungary, destroyed and damaged a score of enemy planes at Seregeyles and Szombathely airdromes, as well as several hundred freight cars, locomotives and motor vehicles. In an offensive sweep over the Lake Largo area, RAF Spitfires encountered eight enemy intereeptors, one of which was shot down, one probably destroyed, and two others damaged. (PRO)

ALLIES LAND ON ISLE OF LEMNOS

AFHQ, ITALY, October 22 — Allied troops have landed on the Isle of Lemnos, in the Aegean, 40 miles southwest of the straits of the Dardanelles, and the islands' biggest town, Mudros, has been captured along with over 400 enemy prisoners, a naval announcement said here today.

After sharp fighting, enemy forces attempted to withdraw by sea but naval gunfire set one boat ablaze and drove several others ashore. Casualties were inflicted on the German troops in the remaining craft. The original landing on the island was made at dawn, October 16, and the port of Mudros, was occupied the following day.

In other naval actions in the Aegean, the British cruiser Argonaut destroyed a large enemy tank landing craft off Lemnos on October 18, while on the following night, the British destroyers Termagant and Tuscan intercepted and engaged an enemy destroyer, forcing it aground at the entrance to the Gulf of Salonika where it was destroyed by gunfire. Naval aircraft bombed the Isle of Kos and continued attacks on the port of Volos. (PRO)

780,000 TONS OF SUPPLIES FOR GREECE

AFHQ, Italy, October 22 — Military Liaison Force, Greece, the organization created for aid to liberated Greece, has ready some 780,000 tons of supplies, including food, medical supplies and clothing — enough for six months' needs, it was announced here today.

The stockpiles, created as a result of findings by relief agents sent into Greece while it was under enemy occupation, have already begun to arrive at the port of Piraeus, it was said. The Military Liaison Force, Greece, is a part of Allied Force Headquarters, created to perform a civil relief task, which, because of unstable conditions and crucial needs of Greece, required an army organization. It has been entrusted with a variety of tasks, from the restoration of public utilities to the cataloguing and recovery of archeological treasures which have been removed by the enemy. (PRO)

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE CANADIANS GAIN GROUND

SHAEF, October 22 — British 2nd Army troops launched two new attacks this morning on the northern and western flanks of their Netherlands corridor.

West of Nijmegen, between the Waal and the lower Rhine Rivers, the British thrust forced the Germans out of the towns of Ophuesden and Dodewaard. Both villages were left heavily mined and booby-trapped but they have been occupied by Allied forces.

[illegible] launched this morning

Progress of the two forces driving toward Breda along the east and west side of the Breda-Antwerp road was unreported late tonight.

The port of Breskens on the seaward side of the southern Schelde pocket was captured by Canadian troops tonight as the remaining German troops pulled out to take up positions on the western side of the river which bisects the town. To the north across the Schelde Estuary, German gun positions on Walcheren Island have been silent since yesterday's attack by 120 RAF Lancaster bombers.

Following the breaching of the dam two miles southeast of Dieuze, the American 3rd Army attacked German positions south of the town and threw the German forces back two miles. The towns of Bezange la Petite and Moncourt, southwest of Dieuze, have been cleared. The 10-mile expanse from Dieuze to Vic sur Seille has been submerged and the River Seille has risen, flooding Pettoncourt, 15 miles west of Dieuze.

To the south, six German counter-attacks east of the Moselotte River failed to halt the progress of French troops of the 7th Army toward the Alsatian plain. Allied troops are within seven miles of Bussang Pass, which leads to the big communications center of Mulhouse. (OWI-BBC-Reuter-AP)

1,850 AMERICAN PLANES BOMB WEST GERMANY

LONDON, October 22 — More than 1,100 heavy bombers of 8th USAAF escorted by 750 fighter planes today attacked industrial and communications targets in the Hamm, Munster, Hannover and Brunswick areas of Germany.

Meawhile, RAF bombers carried our a heavy attack this afternoon on Neuss, the German inland port and rail center near Dusseldorf.

These daylight attacks followed night sorties by RAF Mosquito bombers into western Germany. No bombers are missing from either today's or last night's RAF attacks on Germany.

German citizens arriving in Stockholm testify to the effectiveness of Allied bombing. A woman from Stuttgart said only one house in every 25 is left standing. Berlin householders have been warned that there will be no central heating this winter.

This afternoon, rocket-firing Mosquitos and Beaufighters of the RAF Coastal Command, weaving through fierce anti-aircraft fire, attacked shipping in Haugesund harbor, on the southwest coast of Norway. They set two medium merchant vessels afire and hit an armed trawler. One Mosquito bomber is missing.

A Canadian bombardier returning from the bomber attack on enemy gun positions near Flushing reported that he saw one stick of explosives fall right across the target, an Associated Press dispatch said. Other crew members saw ships docked at Flushing hit and set afire, the dispatch added.

Fighter-bombers of 9th USAAF, operating 500 strong from Aachen down the Rhine Valley to the U. S. 3rd Army front yesterday, shot down 22 German aircraft, destroyed two on the ground, and damaged 15 against a loss of three fighter-bombers.

The 9th USAAF planes also destroyed rail cars, motor trucks and locomotives and cut railway track in 24 places.

Suspected Nazi headquarters buildings near Breskens in the Schelde pocket were attacked yesterday evening by 2nd TAF planes, and 12 hits were scored. Mosquitoes of the 2nd TAF also bombed and strafed road and rail crossings in northwestern Holland and the Ruhr district of Germany, despite very bad weather.

Flying bombs were sent against the southern counties of England, including London, last night, causing damage and casualties. (Reuter-OWI)

West of Nijmegen, between the Waal and the lower Rhine Rivers, the British thrust forced the Germans out of the towns of Ophuesden and Dodewaard. Both villages were left heavily mined and booby-trapped but they have been occupied by Allied forces.

Another two-pronged attack was launched this morning against Hertogenbosch, a junction for roads to Utrecht and Nijmegen on the western flank of the British salient in Holland.

The northern thrust was made from the area of Oss and by late today British troops were astride the Hertogenbosch-Nijmegen rail line at Heeseind and Helzenhoek, five miles from the city.

The southern thrust was made from the area of Veghel and progress along this road was slow. Remnants of the German garrison at Middlerode, five miles from Hertogenbosch, are outflanked on both sides and are facing a frontal attack.

The offensive was begun after a massed artillery barrage smothered all known German gun emplacements and concentration points in advance of British troops. The entire area is unsuitable for tank operation, as rain has made a swampland of the sector and it is criss-crossed by numerous canals.

North of Antwerp, troops of the Canadian 1st Army driving on Roosendaal captured the border city of Esschen and have continued to gain ground. The Germans have thrown in tanks and paratroops in an attempt to halt the drive, which is advancing slowly over booby-trapped and mined roads.

RETURNING FRENCH CHILD EVACUES WELCOMED

PARIS, October 22 — Few civilians are permitted to travel in France, but one recent trainload of them arrived here from Nancy recently, and they received a tremendous welcome. TWO VICHY MINISTERS EXECUTED

PARIS, October 22 — Rear Admiral Charles Platon, a former Vichy cabinet minister, was sentenced to death and executed by an FFI court in the Gironde department of Southern France on August 16, for communicating with the enemy, Minister of Justice François de Menthon officially confirmed here yesterday.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Platon kidnapped by the FFI, at his Puhole Estate in Gironde on July 21, was tried by a secret resistance Military Court, and was executed after he was allowed to write a letter to his wife announcing his condemnation, Minister de Menthon revealed. Former Secretary of State for Navy and Air in the Vichy regime, Platon was later Secretary of State to Petain until March 1943.

After the fall of France, he cooperated with the Nazis, and broadcast an appeal to French troops in North Africa, asking them to resist their «felonous leaders» and the Allies. Six months earlier he had urged the French to collaborate with the Germans in order to «avoid misfortune which would be worse than defeat.»

Darquier de Pellepoix, former Vichy Commissioner for Jewish Affairs, whose death was previously reported at the same time as that of Platon, also was executed in Gironde, amid circumstances still unknown, de Menthon added. A newspaper report said the two men were executed together. (OWI)

UNITED NATIONS

GERMANY WILL NOT BE ENSLAVED - ROOSEVELT SAYS — NO RACE ETERNALLY CONDEMNED

NEW YORK, October 22 — «The German people are not going to be enslaved — because the United Nations do not traffic in human slavery,» said President Roosevelt in his major foreign policy speech before the Foreign Policy Association here last night.

The speech was briefly reported yesterday, but the full text is now available.

President Roosevelt said that it will be necessary for Germany to earn her way back into the fellowship of peace-loving and law-abiding nations and that in her climb up that steep road, we shall have to see to it that she is not encumbered by having to carry guns.

«We bring no charge against the German race as such, for we cannot believe that God has eternally condemned any race of humanity,» he said, «for we know in our own land how many good men and women with German ancestry have proved loyal, freedom-loving, peace-loving citizens.»

Describing Germany as «that tragic nation which has sown the wind and is now reaping the whirlwind,» the President said: «We and our Allies are entirely agreed that we shall not bargain with the Nazi conspirators or leave them a shred of control, open or secret, of the instruments of government.

«But I should be false to the very foundations of my religious and political convictions if I should ever relinquish the hope — and even the faith — that in all peoples without exception there live some instinct for truth, some attraction toward justice and some passion for peace — buried as they may be in the German case under a brutal

The President said that he did not exaggerate the mission. He said that we shall not achieve the Utopia. «Indeed in our own lands the work to be done is never finished,» the President added.

United Nations Power to Act

Referring to the recent recomendations made at the Dumbarton Oaks Security Conference, President Roosevelt said that the council of the United Nations must have the power to act quickly and decisively and keep the peace by force if necessary.

«If we do not catch the international felon when we have our hands on him, and if we let him get away with his loot because the town council has not passed an ordinance authorizing his arrest, then we are not doing our share to prevent another world war,» the President said.

«The people of the nation want their government to act, and not merely to talk, whenever of wherever there is a threat to world peace.»

The President said that America cannot attain her great objective by herself.

«Never again after cooperating with other nations in a world war to save our way of life, can we wash our hands of maintaining the peace for which we fought,» he said.

«The Dumbarton Oaks conference did not spring up overnight. It was called by Secretary Hull and me after years of thought, discussion, preparation and consultation with our Allies. Our State Department did a splendid job in preparing for the conference and leading it to a successful termination. It was another chapter in the long process of cooperation with other peace-loving nations — beginning with the Atlantic Charter Conference, and continuing through conferences at Casablanca, Moscow, Cairo, Teheran, Quebec and Washington.»

Basis of Peace

Mr. Roosevelt said that the kind of world order which the peace-loving nations must achieve must depend essentially on friendly human relations, on tolerance, and on unassailable sincerity and goodwill.

«We have achieved that relationship,» he said «to a remarkable degree in our dealing with our Allies in this war — as the events of this war have proved. If we fail to maintain that relationship in the peace — if we fail to expand it and strengthen it — there will be no lasting peace.»

Mr. Roosevelt had said earlier: «When the first world war was ended I believed — and I believe it now — that enduring peace in the world has not a chance unless this nation is willing to cooperate in winning it and maintaining it. I thought that then — I now know that we have to back our words with deeds.

«All of our thinking about foreign policy in this war must be conditioned by the fact that millions of our American boys are today fighting many thousands of miles from home for the defense of our country and perpetuation of our American ideals.

«The leaders of this nation have always held that concern for our national security does not end at our borders. President Monroe and every American president following him, was prepared to use force if necessary to insure the independence of other American nations threatened by aggressors from across the sea. The principle has not changed, though the world has. It was in recognition of that fact that in 1933 we took as the basis for our foreign relations the good neighbor policy — the principle of a neighbor who resolutely respects himself and equally

No Easy Task

President Roosevelt said that the task ahead of us in relation to the handling of Germany will not be easy. «Indeed it will be as difficult and complex as any task that has ever faced an American administration,» he said.

«I will not say to you now or ever,» said the president, «that we of my party know all the answers. I am certain for myself that I do not know how all the unforseeable difficulties can be met. What I can say to you is this — that I have unlimited faith that the job can be done. And that faith is based on knowledge gained in the arduous practical and continuing experience of these past eventful years.

«I speak to the present generation of Americans with reverent participation in its sorrows and in its hopes. No generation has undergone a greater test, or has met that test with greater heroism and greater wisdom. This generation must act not only for itself, but as a trustee for all those who fell in the last war — a part of their mission unfulfilled.

«It must also act for all those who have paid the supreme price in this war — lest their mission too be betrayed.

«And finally it must act for the generations to come — which must be granted a heritage of peace.»

«Never again after [illegible] a world war to save our way of life, can we wash our hands of maintaining the peace for which we fought,» he said.

Universal Application of Goodwill Policy

«We and the other American Republics have made the good neighbor policy real in this hemisphere. It is my conviction that this policy can be and should be made universal.»

Mr. Roosevelt spoke of the Philippines saying that the United States action with respect to the independence of that country was a step in making good the same philosophy which animated the good neighbor policy.

«I like to think,» he said, «that the history of the Philippine Islands in the last 44 years provides in a very real sense a pattern for the future of other small nations.»

Turning to Soviet Russia, the president said that he was proud of the recognition in 1933 of that country by the United States.

«For 16 years before them the American people and the Russian people had no practical means of communicating with each other. We reestablished those means. And today we are fighting with Russians against common foes, and we know that Russian contribution to victory has been, and will continue to be gigantic.»

Praises Aid of Opposition Party

Mr. Roosevelt praised many distinguished men and women of vision and courage both in and out of public office who belonged to the Republican Party and who vigorously supported the aid America was giving to her Allies.

«These Republicans have rendered magnificent services to our country in this war. I am happy that one of these distinguished Americans is our great Secretary of War, Henry Stimson. Let us remember that this very war might have been averted if Mr. Stimson's views had prevailed when in 1931 the Japanese ruthlessly attacked Manchuria.»

The great national debates during the recent critical years through which the American people have gone were described by the president as «soul searching.» There were debates which reached from every city to every village and every home, he added.

«Obviously,» said the President, «we could have come to terms with Hitler and accepted a minor role in his totalitarian world. We rejected that!

«We could have compromised with Japan and bargained for a place in a Japanese-dominated Asia by selling out the heart's blood of the Chinese people. And we rejected that!

«The decision not to bargain with the tyrants rose from the hearts and the souls and the sinews of the American people. They faced reality. They appraised reality. And they knew what freedom meant.» (OWI)

CHURCHILL HOME FROM MOSCOW

LONDON, October 22 — Prime Minister Churchill, who returned to Britain from Moscow by air this afternoon, is expected to make a statement in the House of Commons this week, a Reuter dispatch stated.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, who went to Moscow with the Prime Minister, did not return to London, the BBC reported tonight. The broadcast stated that Mr. Eden is undertaking certain discussions which can best be conducted on a personal basis.

The Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk and the other members of the Polish Government in London's delegation to Moscow also arrived here tonight.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF LIBERATED COUNTRIES

WASHINGTON, October 22 — UNRRA resources will not absolve liberated countries from responsibilities to themselves, Morse Salisbury, director of the association's public relations, told a women's conference on international affairs here yesterday.

«It should be clearly understood,» he said, «that UNRRA's resources are not the only resources that will be drawn on to provide supplies for relief in liberated areas.

«During the period of military control the armies of liberation will provide for the relief of civilians, but when that military control ends and liberated peoples resume self-government each nation will, of course, do all it can to bring in supplies that are needed from outside, to reëstablish welfare services and to bring back farm production to its full volume.

Salisbury explained that in addition to feeding people, UNRRA services include the repatriation of displaced persons, health programms for stemming epidemics, and other social functions.

«But aside from these international services which will go on everywhere, the fundamental provisions of necessities of life will be drawn on most heavily by liberated nations which through Nazi looting have lost most of their foreign

POST-WAR MERCHANT SHIPPING

NEW YORK, October 22 — The American Merchant Marine Conference, in a resolution adopted at its closing session here yesterday, recommended steps to be taken «in the interest of restoring and maintaining an expanded American foreign trade and American merchant shipping after the war.»

The resolution called for the adoption of a comprehensive national program of port modernization and the formation of a special group from within the ranks of the shipping industry to confer with industrial companies or programs of foreign trade.

The U. S. State Department has authorized the initial steps toward formulating proposals to be submitted to an international maritime conference after the cessation of hostilities in the European theater, it was revealed.

Vice Admiral R. R. Waesche, Commandant of the U. S. Coast Guard, said that a number of foreign nations undoubtedly will undertake new construction to replace their lost tonnage whenever that is practicable.

Another spokesman said trade opportunities for maritime and other forms of commerce will depend entirely on developing more trade and more production. «We must consciously invest in the production of other countries if we are to utilize fully our own productive capacity and our own transportation services,» he said. «If we do so, we can lay the foundation for many years of peaceful and expanding international development and trade.» (OWI)

AIR TRANSPORT COMMAND SETS RECORD

WASHINGTON, October 22 — A new record in operating a year without a single fatal accident was set by the Central African Division of the USAAF Air Transport Command, the War Department announced here yesterday.

Flying over the longest and most hazardous route flown by the command, the announcement said, this division carries personnel and supplies for the aid of China from Accra, on the West African Gold Coast, to Karachi, India, and operates more planes than any American airline.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF LIBERATED COUNTRIES

WASHINGTON, October 22 — UNRRA resources will not absolve liberated countries from responsibilities to themselves, Morse Salisbury, director of the association's public relations, told a women's conference on international affairs here yesterday.

« It should be clearly understood, » he said, « that UNRRA's resources are not the only resources that will be drawn on to provide supplies for relief in liberated areas.

« During the period of military control the armies of liberation will provide for the relief of civilians, but when that military control ends and liberated peoples resume self-government each nation will, of course, do all it can to bring in supplies that are needed from outside, to reëstablish welfare services and to bring back farm production to its full volume.

Salisbury explained that in addition to feeding people UNRRA services include the repatriation of displaced persons, health programms for stemming epidemics, and other social functions.

« But aside from these international services which will go on everywhere, the fundamental provisions of necessities of life will be drawn on most heavily by liberated nations which through Nazi looting have lost most of their foreign exchange resources, » he said. (OWI)

AUSTRIANS TOLD TO MAKE THEIR CHOICE NOW

WASHINGTON, October 22 — Austrans were told today to «strike their final blow for liberation» in a broadcast from London by George Franckenstein, Austrian ambassador in London for 18 years prior to the German occupation of Austria.

«You have now to make the choice upon which your future will depend,» he said. «If you remain chained to Nazi Germany against the United Nations, you will share its fate. But if you break your bonds and support the oncoming armies which will soon liberate you, then Austria will rise again worthy of its great and honorable past and certain of a happier future.»

easy egress from Italy, it was reported yesterday by Edgar Rosen, international political commentator for the Christian Science Monitor.

The writer said that the struggle between Mussolini and Farinacci for the rather dubious power in the «social republican» government has precipitated a series of quarrels, during which the Germans threw their influence behind Mussolini. Commentator Rosen stated:

«For some time it was all quiet on the Fascist political front. Four weeks ago however, the Fascist press was compelled to deny reports... that clashes had broken out within the party. Yet a few days after the latter arrived unexpectedly in Milan, where he addressed a gathering of Fascists, Farinacci, in the newspaper Regime Fascista, launched violent attacks on the party secretary accusing him of not having removed officials who still had not sworn the prescribed oath of loyalty.

«Possibly the new flareup was occasioned by the increasingly critical military situation leading to an important discussion among Fascist leaders. In recent weeks there has been a number of meetings of the Fascist Council of Ministers presided over by Mussolini. On September 18, for example, there was a lengthy discussion about the attitude to be adopted when the Germans evacuate Liguria, Lombardy and Piedmont.

«An especially difficult problem is the fate of hundreds of Fascist hierarchy and Fascist troops in northern Italy.» (OWI)

«VOLKSSTURM» MAY SEE ACTION IMMEDIATELY

MOSCOW, October 22 — East Prussian units of the «Volkssturm» — the so-called German people's army — may see action without training, and immediately, Radio Tass said today, quoting Stockholm reports.

The Chief of the German Forces of the Interior, Heinrich Himmler, is said to have held a recent conference, somewhere in East Prussia, with German Army and Nazi leaders, to discuss measures for hastening the formation and training of the «Volkssturm» in East Prussia. It was emphasized at the conference, Tass reports, that upon the orders of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hilter, the «Volkssturm» units formed in that state would be hurled to the front at once, and could not afford to be given further training.

GERMANS NOW PLUNDERING THEIR OWN PEOPLE

LONDON, October 22 — The German soldiers are plundering the homes of their own people in addition to their looting activity in occupied countries, a BBC correspondent reported tonight.

Evidence of this has been found in a document signed by Field Marshal Keitel and captured by the 1st Canadian Corps on the Adriatic front in Italy.

The order accused German soldiers of plundering the goods of evacuated German families, and said that even officers had taken part in what Keitel called «shameless behavior.»

The correspondent reported that the captured document had another order pasted on the back of it and was signed by the commander of the Panzer Grenadiers. This commander wrote: «It is the greatest shame for us that such an order was even necessary. Even here in Italy the looting of houses is so shameless that one must feel sick of the filthy state of mind of such soldiers.» (PWB-BBC)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 22 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The Germans were forced to evacuate the Gran Sasso Bernardo Valley after destroying many highway communications. In Aosta, Fascist guards and police have been replaced by German soldiers, who, anticipating a new withdrawal, are beginning to carry off telephonic equipment.

In Liguria the Germans have carried out various troop movements to counter the Patriot offensive. In the Torriglia sector, in Genoa Province, 3000 Germans arrived to cover the line of retreat south of this district. During the month of September the Lunense Division inflicted the following losses on the enemy: 50 killed, including a general, 37 vehicles captured or destroyed, and 13 bridges destroyed.

Hard fighting took place in the Province of Parma, where a daring Garibaldi Division holds control over Lupazzano, Compora, Sasso and Ruzzano.

In the valley between Tolmezzo and Ampezzo the enemy is continuing his attempts to break down Patriot resistance in order to keep open the shortest route to Austria. Other clashes took place near Highway 52. The Germans have now been stopped before the destroyed bridge of Cedarchia, which they are trying to repair. The Patriot defense, although limited, because of the scarcity of weapons, is still vigorous. They carried out effective acts of sabotage against the fortifications built by the Fascists in the above-mentioned sector and succeeded in rendering them unserviceable.

In the Udine-Tarcento sector a train of 50 freight cars loaded with war materiel was derailed on the night of October 15. The locomotive and eight freight cars were upset. The line was interrupted for 24 hours. An interruption of the same length of time was caused on the line leading to Brianze, in Vercelli Province.

The attack against German troops on the Cavaglia-Ivrea highway was carried out by a group of Patriots of the Giustizia and Liberta Division. A group of the same division in the same sector occupied the station of San Germano, disarming the soldiers on guard there. (UNN)

In the Wuerselen sector, pillbox positions continue to be bitterly contested. The enemy was ousted from several pillbox groups by German counter-attacks, prisoners were taken and encircled German garrisons were extricated.

The sectors west of Luneville and of Bruyeres, in the western foothills of the northern Vosges continue to be focal points of grim fighting. Our advanced posts were pushed back by the attacks of enemy regiments at some points. At some points of penetration, counter-attacks are in progress. At Cornimont, a dominating height was recaptured.

West of the Dukla pass, Bolshevik attacks were repulsed except for one penetration which was sealed off in the meantime.

In the Narew bridgehead, at Serok, our troops halted resumed enemy attacks and, at Rozan, cleared up penetration of the previous day in a counter-attack.

In the border area of East Prussia, on both sides of the Heath of Romintern, a fierce battle is in full swing. At Goldap and south of Gumbinnen, some isolated Soviet tanks which had broken through, were stopped.

On both sides of Ebenrode, enemy attempts at breaking through failed.

Bombers and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force inflicted serious losses on the attacking Soviet columns and destroyed 40 tanks.

On both sides of Tilsit, we withdrew to the southern banks of the Memel in fierce fighting in order to shorten the front.

In Kurland, also yesterday, all local enemy attacks failed. At the neck of the Sworbe Peninsula, the Bolsheviks gained a little ground after fluctuating fighting.

On both sides of the Arctic road and in the Norwegian frontier area, the fighting continues. Attempts at encircling our troops made by Soviet troops pressing hard on our heels were frustrated. Grim dogfights developed in the course of the defence against numerically superior bomber and fighter-bomber formations. Our fighters brought down 31 enemy planes.

In the Norwegian waters, escort vessels of German convoys set an enemy motor assault boat on fire and damaged several others in a grim encounter.

Aachen - A German success?! — Stiffening German resistance in the Aachen area compelled the British public to revise their belief in the early end of the war, writes the London correspondent of Svenska Dagbladet. London military circles believe it possible that German tenacity will turn every major German town into another Aachen. According to British war correspondents American soldiers no longer believe in an early end either.

Western Front — Correspondent Walter Plato states that main Allied efforts in this theatre culminate in the attempt to open the mouth of the Scheldt in order to get access to Antwerp, which is badly needed for bringing up heavy supplies for the offensive against Germany.

Eastern Front: For four weeks a German fighting group was completely isolated in the Belgrade area, getting its supplies by plane only; yet this determined group of men has prevented the Russians who had entered the Northern outskirts of Belgrade quite some time ago, from occupying the city before. They were claimed to have been annihilated by the Russians; in reality they fought their way back to the main bulk of the German Army, at the same time enabling the German bridgehead at Belgrade to withdraw to prepared positions.

In the valley between Tolmezzo and Ampezzo the enemy is continuing his attempts to break down Patriot resistance in order to keep open the shortest route to Austria. Other clashes took place near Highway 52. The Germans have now been stopped before the destroyed bridge of Cedarchia, which they are trying to repair. The Patriot defense, although limited, because of the scarcity of weapons, is still vigorous. They carried out effective acts of sabotage against the fortifications built by the Fascists in the above-mentioned sector and succeeded in rendering them unserviceable.

In the Udine-Tarcento sector a train of 50 freight cars loaded with war materiel was derailed on the night of October 15. The locomotive and eight freight cars were upset. The line was interrupted for 24 hours. An interruption of the same length of time was caused on the line leading to Brianze, in Vercelli Province.

The attack against German troops on the Cavaglia-Ivrea highway was carried out by a group of Patriots of the Giustizia and Libertà Division. A group of the same division in the same sector occupied the station of San Germano, disarming the soldiers on guard there. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 22 — The Supreme Command of the Armed Forces announces:

Western Front:

In Holland, yesterday, our troops which are for weeks being engaged in uninterrupted fighting prevented the enemy from punching major gaps into the bridgehead at the outer part of the Westerscheldt while he succeeded in penetrating the eastern part of Breskens.

North-east of Antwerp, the enemy continued his strong attacks. Fresh German units launched counter-attacks on the Canadians who had penetrated into our positions. Northwest of Turnhout, enemy attacks failed and thirteen tanks were destroyed.

In the Wuerselen sector, pillbox positions continue to be bitterly contested. The enemy was ousted from several pillbox groups by German counter-attacks, prisoners were taken and encircled German garrisons were extricated.

The sectors west of Lunéville and of Bruyères, in the western foothills of the northern Vosges continue to be focal points of grim fighting. Our advanced posts were pushed back by the attacks of enemy regiments at some points. At some points of penetration, counter-attacks are in progress. At Cornimont, a dominating height was recaptured.

In the western approaches to Dunkirk, some Canadian tanks were destroyed and prisoners as well as booty captured. Successful shock detachment operations were also reported from Lorient.

London continues to be harassed by « V-1 ».

Italy:

In Italy, in the Vergato sector, our troops frustrated again all U.S. attacks. North and east of Loiano, enemy attacks also failed.

On both sides of Cesena, British attacks on our new positions broke down in the defensive fire. Nine tanks were destroyed.

In Italy, during the last two days, anti-aircraft batteries shot down 25 Anglo-American planes while repelling enemy air attacks.

In the Gulf of Rapallo, patrol forces of the Navy sank a British motor assault boat and damaged two others.

Eastern Front:

South-east of Belgrade, a strong German formation broke through the Soviet ring and linked up with our lines, west of the city.

In southern Hungary, west of the Tisa, enemy spearheads advanced to Baja on the Danube.

President Roosevelt's address: Diplomatic Correspondent Siegfried Horn says the President's address was mainly meant for internal consumption for his election campaign. It contains, however, some astonishing confessions which are noted with interest by Berlin. Beside reiterating the unconditional surrender stunt, Roosevelt also confirms the Allied aim of breaking the backbone of Germany. His assertion that the German people as such is not to be enslaved is only a feeble attempt to veil the destruction plans already announced. Roosevelt believes that the way to Berlin will cost streams of Allied blood but he tries to make this more palpable to his voters by referring to the unique opportunity of America assuming leadership in a coming world coalition. Thus the President has at last dropped his disguise and revealed that he had rejected every possibility of understanding with Germany and Japan in order to gain world power by brute force.

English Disappointment on Moscow Negotiations: Correspondent Helmut Lindemann quotes various English dailies in stating that there is no illusion in that country about the Stalin-Churchill meeting solving the major problems of post-war co-operation between the two countries. Their differences centre mainly round the Polish question and the treatment of a defeated Germany, the greatest of all being the allocation of spheres of interests in the Balkans, especially as far as Yugoslavia is concerned, with the Soviet Union backing Tito and Great Britain King Peter and his emigre government.

U. S. FORCES CONSOLIDATE LEYTE BEACHHEADS MEN, EQUIPMENT CONTINUE TO POUR IN GENERAL MACARTHUR'S HQ, LEYTE, October 21 — American ground forces have consolidated all beachheads on Leyte and are moving inland, General Douglas MacArthur announced today in the second communique on the landings in the Philippines.

Ground casualties in the preliminary stages of the operations have been light, although press dispatches from the front said that in some sectors there is hard fighting.

A brief but fierce counter-attack took place at Palo, just below Tacloban Bay in the northeastern sector of Leyte, a dispatch said.

The communique said that the Japanese Air Force, partly crushed by assaults on Luzon and the central Philippines, attacked in small numbers and succeeded in damaging one warship with an aerial torpedo. Another vessel was hit by shore fire. Japanese forces sank four landing ships.

A radio broadcast from the beachheads said tonight that landing craft continue to bring ashore men and mechanized equipment. Bulldozers, jeeps, tanks, and all implements of American mechanized warfare are being put ashore at a fast rate and are utilized immediately by the attacking U.S. 6th Army and some Australian troops.

The Canadian 1st Army today launched a three-pronged assault north of Antwerp on the road to Roosendaal and east and west of the Breda-Antwerp Road in an effort to relieve the pressure on Allied positions at Woensdrecht. Hundreds of RAF planes supported the attacks, hitting targets only a few hundred yards ahead of the troops.

The drive is rapidly developing in size, and Canadian troops have advanced to the area of Loenhout against fairly light resistance but over rain-soaked fields. On the western side of the Breda Road, Canadian troops advanced beyond Wuestwezel. In the drive toward Roosendaal, Canadian infantry and tanks captured Calmpthout, and are nearing the Roosendaal Canal.

New Leopold Canal Crossing

The drive to clear the southern side of the Schelde Estuary to open the harbor of Antwerp to Allied use continued to gain ground. The pocket is now 15 miles wide from Zeebrugge to Breskens, and seven miles deep from Aardenburg to the sea. Canadian forces made a new crossing of the Leopold Canal, on the western side of the pocket, north of Bruges, and captured the town of Oostkerke.

RAF Lancaster heavy bombers today struck at remaining gun positions near Flushing which have been harassing the Canadian advance on the southern Schelde pocket. The

The landings in the Philippines caught the Japanese by surprise and have made the enemy jittery on all fronts in the Pacific and in southeast Asia, American correspondents commented today.

A dispatch by a New York Times correspondent, said today that when General MacArthur completes the severance of Japan's lifeline by pushing on toward Manila, all routes to Japan proper will be cut, the China coast laid open to assault, and Singapore isolated.

Supporting this view, a Chinese military spokesman in Chungking said today that as a result of the Allied landings in the Philippines, the Japanese are reported to be rushing preparations to meet any Allied landing on the China coast.

He added that Japanese are building submarine bases at Amoy, Foochow, and Wenchow, and are reinforcing the fortifications between Hengchow Bay and Shanghai.

Japanese Navy Challenged

While the Japanese Navy continued to avoid encounters with Allied sea forces, another invitation to the Japanese to come out and fight was contained in an announcement today in London by A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, that part of the British Fleet is en route to the Pacific with the ultimate hope of engaging the Japanese fleet.

In Washington, Secretary of State Cordell Hull reasserted President Roosevelt's pledge to the Filipino people that they will be liberated and their independence established.

Further details of the preparatory attacks which softened up Leyte for the American liberation forces were given in today's announcement. On October 18 and 19, carrier aircraft of the 7th Fleet ranged over Panay, Negros, and Cebu Islands, destroying 80 planes. At least 12 gun positions were hit and a truck convoy of 50 troop and supply vehicles was destroyed on Leyte. In the same action, a 5,000-ton naval craft and 11 barges and coastal vessels were sunk.

An airfield is known to be located on Leyte, near Tacloban, but as yet there has been no official confirmation of a correspondent's report that the field has fallen to the liberating troops.

Among the divisions participating in the landing was the United States 7th Division, which captured Attu.

Facing MacArthur forces on Leyte was the Japanese 16th Division. MacArthur told correspondents he was eager to get at the division, «because it was the outfit that did the dirty work on Bataan.»

MacArthur Goes Ashore

MacArthur returned to the Philippines aboard the United States Cruiser Nashville. An American correspondent in a beachhead broadcast described the general's return to the Philippine shore:

«MacArthur was in fine spirits as his barge headed toward the shore. The general fixed his eyes on the Leyte coast and said, 'Believe it or not, we are back.' Stepping out of the barge, escorting President Osmena, General MacArthur waded through the surf to the shore. The word of the general's arrival spread throughout the beachhead, and soon soldiers were rushing forward to greet him.»

The landings in the Philippines will be followed by accelerated and increasing pressure against Japan at a number of points, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal said yesterday in New York.

«We have the power in the Pacific and, so far as the Navy is concerned, the unequivocal determination to wipe the Japanese shadow from the map once and for all,» Forrestal said. He added that «the mighty blow ... will be followed by others that will be planned and coordinated to occur in rapid sequence, and they will be delivered in many places, some of which will probably shock the Japanese as Patrols which crossed the river farther to the south reported that enemy forces were drawn up in strength along this natural defense line.

For the second successive day, hard-fighting American forces were held without gain in their gruelling battle to drive the Germans from their mountain wall guarding the entry into the Savena River Valley along Route 65, south of Bologna.

Special reports today indicated that German resistance is still increasing in this grim battle, which is developing into one of the most savage engagements in the Italian campaign. Backed by murderous artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire, and with tanks and self-propelled guns, German forces are defending with fanatic determination the rocky escarpment lying athwart the main approach to Bologna.

American infantry forces yesterday captured the tiny hamlet of Pietrafitta, on the northern slopes of Monte Della Vigna — a southern spur of towering Monte Belmonte, center post of the enemy's rocky fortress — but there was no mention in today's official reports of fighting on Monte Belmonte itself, which American forces moved forward to storm some four days ago.

Although 5th Army forces were locked in a savage stalemate 9½ miles south of Bologna in the Apennines foothills rimming the southern edge of the Lombardy Plain, 8th Army forces, in more favorable terrain at the southeastern end of the valley itself, made swift advances almost everywhere along its front.

Three Mile Advance

Most spectacular of the 8th Army's gains was in the coastal sector, where for some weeks the swollen lower stretches of the Fiumicino and Pisciatello Rivers have held up any advance. Here, Allied forces pushed nearly three miles along the coast to occupy the town of Cesenatico, 13 miles northwest of Rimini. New Zealand armor and infantry forces farther inland pushed even farther northward to cross the Montaletta Creek and reach the southern banks of the Granarola, a stream emptying into marshlands north of Cesenatico and within 15 miles of Ravenna in this sector. Although no particulars were given of this swift advance, official reports stated that it had followed the crushing break-through past enemy rearguards.

Equally important gains were made in the Bidente River Valley, where Polish troops, reported back in the 8th Army line for the first time in over a month, captured the town of Civitella di Romagna, within 15 miles of the important Po Valley city of Forli. Galatea, a few miles to the south, and San Sofia, in the same area, were also captured. An enemy counter-attack against Galatea was repulsed.

Fifth Army forces, although held to a bitter standstill in their attack along the Florence-Bologna Highway, yesterday scored several minor gains to the east and west of this main sector. American forces captured some high ground just west of Monte Grande, key height north of the Silliaro River and only five miles from the Rimini-Bologna-Road, while Indian troops captured Pianoreno, on the Sintria River, 14 miles south of Castel Bolognese.

South African forces in the area of Monte Pezza, near Vergato on the Reno River, reported the capture of high ground overlooking this German stronghold on the Pistoia-Bologna Road. German counter-attacks failed to reestablish their lost positions. (PRO)

8TH ARMY CROSSES SAVIO RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 21 — Eighth Army forces have pressed forward to the line of the Savio River on a four-mile front north and south of Cesena, and have crossed the river at several points to establish a still-small bridgehead at the southwestern edge of this Po Valley town, it was announced here today.

The crossing of the Savio followed heavy fighting in the streets of Cesena, in which British and Canadian troops poured into the town from the south and north to aid British and Indian troops battling to drive German rearguards from the Emilia Highway town.

So hard-pressed were these German rearguards, that the demolition of the main highway bridge over the Savio, at the southern edge of the town, was undertaken only at the last moment, enabling forward elements of the 8th Army to seize their foothold on the western banks of the stream.

RUSSIAN CARPATHIAN DRIVE CONTINUES

MOSCOW, October 21 — The victorious troops who yesterday occupied Belgrade and Debrecen today swept forward to take more towns and villages in Yugoslavia and Hungary.

Kragujevac, a big railway junction 55 miles south of Belgrade, was liberated today by Red Army units in conjunction with the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation. Yagodina, southeast of Belgrade, and Sivac, southwest of Subotica, were also among the towns freed today.

Mosquito boats of the Soviet Danube flotilla have tied up at Belgrade quays after taking part in the final stages of the battle for the liberation of the capital yesterday.

Marshal Tito in a special order of the day hailed the fighters of seven Yugoslav divisions who took part in the battle for the city.

In Hungary, Marshal Malinovsky's forces surging north and northeast of Debrecen today captured over 40 places. Meanwhile, other Soviet forces, operating with Rumanian troops in northern Transylvania, advanced despite apalling weather conditions to increase their threat to the German pocket in Ruthenia.

A new push is now developing against the border town of Satu-Mare, 55 miles northeast of Debrecen. The Germans in northern Transylvania are groping for a new main line of retreat after the loss of the Debrecen rail center.

More than 1,000 German and Hungarian prisoners were taken in the fighting for Debrecen, said tonight's Soviet communique. The booty captured included 12 aircraft, 157 guns, 13 locomotives, 23 trains, and 10 ammunition dumps.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

In a drive north and west of Szeged, near the Hungarian-Yugoslav border, some 30 towns were captured, including the Danube town of Baia, 85 miles south of Budapest.

The Germans continued their attacks in eastern and southeastern Slovakia, a Czecho-Slovak communique reported tonight. Clashes occurred in the areas of Vernar, Rijavska, Bana, and Kruplina.

In Finland, two parallel Finnish columns are racing nothward along the Polar Circle Highway toward a junction with the Russian forces driving down from Petsamo and along the Finnish-Swedish frontier, a communique from Helsinki announced today. Such a junction would cut off the German forces fleeing from Rovaniemi, the last large base in northern Finland, liberated on Tuesday.

Finnish troops today captured the important river and road center of Sodankylae, several miles northeast of Rovaniemi.

The destruction caused by the Germans there will «mean a big setback for Lapland country for many years to come,» the Swedish radio said yesterday.

Moscow is still silent on the Russian drive in East Prussia announced by the Germans. Berlin today admitted another retreat there, and said Russian tanks have driven a wedge 15 miles wide, with a maximum penetration of 16 miles, in the area of Gumbinnen.

Tonight's Soviet communique reported 91 enemy tanks destroyed or damaged on the Russian front. Commentators consider these high German tank losses as corroborating the German reports of furious fighting in East Prussia.

FIGHTERS ACTIVE; DIEUZE DAM BREACHED

LONDON, October 21 — Eighteen German planes were shot down in dogfights over Cologne and Coblenz yesterday by 9th USAAF fighter-bombers. In all, 86 German aircraft challenged the fighters. Dive-bombers destroyed or damaged 228 railroad cars, disabled 15 locomotives, sank two barges, and shot up 21 trucks.

More than 1,100 sorties were flown yesterday by Continent-based American and RAF planes. Nine American and two British fighters are missing.

A group of 24 Thunderbolts blew a deep gap in an old earthen dam near Dieuze, 25 miles of Nancy, yesterday afternoon, to hamper German communications. Each plane carried two 1,000-pound bombs. Six direct hits made a breach 50 feet wide in the dam, which impounded a lake of 1,300 acres. Aerial photographs showed water spreading to a depth of two feet or more as far as Dieuze, an enemy supply center. The attack was made through intense flak, but none of the planes was lost.

Important war plants and vital communication points in the area of Mainz, on the west bank of the Rhine, were badly damaged in the attack by 8th USAAF bombers on Thursday, air reconnaissance photographs revealed today. Among the targets hit was a large armored combat vehicle plant at Gustavsburg, a few miles west of Mainz, which also produced Diesel submarine engines, structural steel, and other war supplies. Bombs blanketed the assembly and machine shops and administration buildings.

Parts of the ordnance plant at Mainz Castel were covered with incendiaries, and several buildings suffered direct hits. A road bridge over the Rhine was struck by high explosives, and several near hits were made on the Kaiserbrücke double track rail bridge connecting Mainz with Wiesbaden.

Flying bombs were directed against southern England and the London area early today. No casualties or damage have been reported.

a Reuter correspondent with the British task force said in a delayed dispatch received today.

As the sea assault blasted the island, the correspondent said, there was not even one reply from the shore. Apparently shore batteries did not exist, he added, «so the Japanese had to sit helplessly for hours watching the warships take positions around them.»

The attack by the fleet climaxed three days of cruising by the fleet up and down the sea lanes which have been Japan's outer defenses covering the East Indies and Malaya, 300 miles east of the Nicobars.

Although the fleet sailed within easy reach of Japan's western bases, neither enemy submarines, ships, or planes appeared, and it was evident that Allied mastery in the Indian Ocean is firmly established, the correspondent said.

On three occasions, the fleet bombarded Car Nicobar. Two of the attacks were made in daylight without opposition. The next day, the main fleet returned and again bombarded the island, while planes blasted Nancowry. Japanese fighters offered light opposition in the third attack.

In land action, several successes also were registered by Allied forces in Burma. Haka, in the southern Chin Hills, of north Burma, was captured by the 14th Army as the Japanese garrison withdrew eastward. The railway center of Mobnyin, 10 miles south of Hopin and 89 miles southeast of Myitkyina, was occupied by the British 36th Division. Haka is 120 miles south of Imphal. (OWI-Reuter)

BRITISH PATROLS APPROACH LAMIA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 21 — British patrols are approaching the town of Lamia, 93 miles northwest of Athens, and just north of the famed Thermopylae Pass, it was announced here today in a communique of Land Forces Greece.

The official announcement said that German forces had been reported to have withdrawn from the town. German evacuation of all southern Greece has been accelerated by increased Greek Patriot activity, and enemy forces have been subject to air attack, as well, from air forces now operating from the Greek mainland.

Fresh stores and Allied troops are being landed daily at the harbor of Piraeus, it was stated.

Thermopylae, a narrow pass near the sea on the main road north from Athens to Thessalonika, was the scene of one of the most famed battles of ancient times, in which Leonidas, a Spartan general, with 300 brave men defended to the death the approaches to Attica against the Persian invaders.

No enemy interceptors and little flak were encountered by the formations of heavy bombers, and escorting fighters ranged as far as the Czecho-Slovakian border in attacks on rail transport and other targets of opportunity, it was said.

The Gyor yards lie midway between Budapest and Vienna, while the Szombathely rail center is near the Austrian border, 30 miles south of Vienna, and is the hub for five major rail lines leading into Italy and the Balkans.

LONDON, October 21 — Eighteen German planes were shot down in dogfights over Cologne and Coblenz yesterday by 9th USAAF fighter-bombers. In all, 36 German aircraft challenged the fighters. Dive-bombers destroyed or damaged 228 railroad cars, disabled 15 locomotives, sank two barges, and shot up 21 trucks.

More than 1,100 sorties were flown yesterday by Continent-based American and RAF planes. Nine American and two British fighters are missing.

A group of 24 Thunderbolts blew a deep gap in an old earthen dam near Dieuze, 25 miles of Nancy, yesterday afternoon, to hamper German communications. Each plane carried two 1,000-pound bombs. Six direct hits made a breach 50 feet wide in the dam, which impounded a lake of 1,500 acres. Aerial photographs showed water spreading to a depth of two feet or more as far as Dieuze, an enemy supply center. The attack was made through intense flak, but none of the planes was lost.

NICOBARS BLASTED: HAKA CAPTURED IN BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, October 21 — Airfields and harbors in the Japanese-held Nicobar Islands have been blasted by carrier planes and units of the British Far Eastern Fleet, which have been roaming the Indian Ocean off Malaya virtually without opposition, it was announced today.

The bombardment of the Nicobars, which guard the seaward approaches to Burma, began October 15, a special communique said today. The naval assault began with an attack on Car Nicobar, the most northerly island of the group, and an air attack on Nancowry harbor in the center of the Nicobar Group.

The communique added that in this action one medium-sized enemy ship was sunk and several small vessels damaged. Shore installations also were set afire.

The first attack evidently caught the Japanese by surprise, and no resistance was met, the announcement said. In a second assault, eight intercepting Japanese fighters were shot down. Four Allied aircraft failed to return, but the fleet suffered no damage or casualties.

The operation against Car Nicobar was deliberate and almost leisurely — spread over two hours — as British, Australian, and Dutch warships of the fleet sent more than 2,000 shells against every worthwhile target on the island, southeast of Myitkyina, was occupied by the British 36th Division. BELGRADE KNOCKED OUT BY APRIL BOMBINGS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 21 — Belgrade, Capital of Yugoslavia, now liberated by Partisan and Russian forces, was strategically knocked out of the war when 15th USAAF heavy bombers destroyed the last remnants of the big aircraft factories in the city last April, a Mediterranean Allied Air Force announcement said this afternoon.

More than 2,500 tons of bombs were dropped on the Ikarus and Rogozarski aircraft components plants and the adjacent Zemun airfield, in a campaign which began in the middle of April and was completed before the end of the month, the announcement said.

Belgrade continued to be of tactical importance, the statement declared, because it formed a main link in German communications in the Balkans, the center of main lines radiating to Zagreb, Austria, Italy, Hungary, Rumania, Greece, and Bulgaria. But constant 15th AAF attacks pounded the Pancevo bridge over the Danube and the Sava River bridge near the city, so that at no time during the critical phase of the campaign was this later span serviceable for enemy troop movements between Yugoslavia and the Russian front. LIBERATED ITALY

NEW ITALIAN ARMY TO ENTER BATTLE

ROME, October 21 — A new Italian Army will soon enter the field of battle to liberate its soil from the Nazis. The army has been in training for several months, Gene Rea, correspondent for Il Progresso of New York, revealed here today.

Because of military security reasons, the number of men who will shortly leave for the front cannot be revealed. The commanding general is a well known figure, and has had much battle experience. The formation of this new army was made possible through the coöperation of the British and American military leaders, and most of the equipment comes from Allied sources.

The Italian Army will be an integral part of the 5th and 8th Armies, now fighting the Nazis at the approaches of the Po Valley. The Italians have been especially trained for the type of warfare that is being waged in the mountainous country to the north. Each soldier was picked for the task.

When this new army enters the battle zone, it will add thousands of men to the Allied forces and will mark the first time that an Italian military force, especially trained and equipped with Allied arms, goes to the front.

In conformity with the declarations made by Roosevelt and Churchill, tens of thousands of other Italian troops will start active training for combat duty.

Conscription is now progressing throughout liberated Italy for the formation of a greater army, and it can now be revealed, for the first time, that several divisions of Italian troops are being activated for combat duty.

General Paolo Berardi, Chief of Staff of the Italian Army, declared today that the troops in preparation for battle were in high physical and moral shape.

«We have waited for this opportunity to take our places alongside the Allies,» he said. «We want to share in the same sacrifices that our brothers-in-arms, the British,

the Americans, the Poles, the French, and the Greeks are now making to liberate our country. The Italian soldier is proud to fight with his gallant allies. We have a high stake to fight for. Many of our soldiers have families in northern Italy, and they will fight ferociously to drive the Nazis out so that they may free their parents, their sweethearts, their sisters, and wives.»

Some of the divisions now in training are formed from the nucleus of Italian units that fought with the 5th and 8th Armies and were sent back for reorganization and reëquipment. The battle-toughened men of the Legnano and Folgore are training the new troops in up-to-the-minute tactics which were employed successfully against the Nazis. (UNN)

A.A.I. DELIVER 2,300,000 TONS OF RELIEF SUPPLIES

WASHINGTON, October 21 — In a review of the relief work done in Italy by the Allied armies, Col William Chanlor, Deputy Director of the Civil Affairs Division of the War Department General Staff, today disclosed that they had delivered 2,300,000 tons of relief supplies to civilians since the beginning of the campaign in Italy.

«The Army has really done a big relief job in Italy,» he said, «in addition to fighting a stiff, winning campaign. The 2,300,000 tons of relief supplies required ocean tonnage equal to 250 Liberty-type freighters, as well as thousands of Army and Merchant Marine personnel engaged in handling the supplies.

«This vast amount of civilian assistance has been made available by the Army despite the pressing need for all-out military effort, and wrecked port, road, and railway facilities.

«But it is not the intention of the Army to continue relief work a minute longer than is necessary. A number of UNRRA people are now in Italy working with the Army to set up an UNRRA organization. As soon as the supply and transportation situation has improved, UNRRA will take over.» (OWI)

Here are some of the 31-year-old physician's achievements:

1. Saved 95 per cent of the 6,000 skilled workmen at the Galileo precision instrument factory in Florence from deportation to Germany by convincing the Germans that most of the workmen were too ill to travel and work.

2. Organized and executed a campaign to hide the valuable Galileo machinary from the Germans, and devised the plan to fill packing boxes full of scrap metal instead of machinery. The Germans used 400 trucks to remove what they thought was the factory's precision machinery.

3. Organized the plan in Florence to hide medicines and foodstuffs when it became obvious that the Allies would liberate Florence and the Germans would begin a general looting spree. This move prevented an epidemic in Florence, because the doctor's plan sent all available vaccines, sera, and water-purifying chemicals into hiding from the Germans.

4. Hid three of the city's ambulances, which the Germans had planned to steal.

5. Set up 35 first-aid stations throughout Florence when the Germans turned the city into a battlefront.

6. Moved throughout the city during the crisis with his teams of nurses and doctors amid shellfire, German snipers' bullets, and German machine-gun fire to minister to the wounded and sick.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

7. Was wounded when he went to San Gervasio, a village near Florence, to attend 200 persons wounded in that village, where he performed 15 major operations despite the bullet wound in his left leg. During his trip his car was destroyed by German machine-gun fire, although he had allegedly received « safe conduct » under the Red Cross flag from the Germans. He brought the wounded out with the assistance of American Field Service volunteers and ambulances.

8. Broke into the « Parterre, » which the Germans had used as a food warehouse for their army, and took out flour and canned milk for the sick and wounded and for babies.

9. Nipped the beginning of a cholera epidemic on the south bank of the Arno by rushing vaccines to those stricken.

10. Traced a supply of milk from the shop of a black market ice-cream seller to nearby farms. He persuaded the farmers to sell only to his coöperative to provide fresh milk to maternity hospitals. Between five and six quintals a day are now reaching these hospitals.

Two weeks ago, officials arranged a small ceremony at the Palazzo Vecchio to voice the city's appreciation of the doctor's efforts. The doctor failed to appear. He returned two days later, and reported he had heard of some sick and wounded civilians north of Florence and was too busy treating them to attend the ceremony. (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR PEACE ORGANIZATION

NEW YORK, October 21 — President Roosevelt called tonight for completion of a United Nations peace organization « without delay and before hostilities actually cease. »

In his major foreign-policy speech of his campaign, the President said that peace is possible « only where there is a will to enforce it and where there is available power to enforce it. »

He reasserted the agreed policy of the United Nations that « we shall not bargain with Nazi conspirators, » adding that not a single element of military power or potential military power is to be left in Germany after her defeat.

President Roosevelt said that the German people would not be plunged into enslavement, but that there would be stern punishment for those Germans « directly responsible for this agony of mankind. » He added that world peace is not possible unless The United States coöperates in winning and maintaining it.

Words must be backed by action, Mr. Roosevelt continued, as he cited failure in the last 23 years to organize a world in which future generations would live in freedom.

« Opportunity knocks again, » he said. « There is no guarantee that it will knock a third time. »

President Roosevelt added:

« Today, Hitler and the Nazis continue to fight — desperately, inch-by-inch — and may continue to do so all the way to Berlin.

« We have another important engagement in Tokyo. No matter how long or how hard a road we must travel, our forces will fight their way under the leadership of General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz. » (Reuter)

« PRAVDA » ON STALIN-CHURCHILL TALKS

MOSCOW, October 21 — The Churchill-Stalin talks just concluded here are of immense international significance, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said today.

« These meetings constitute a new stage of Anglo-Soviet collaboration, thus favoring an extension of the scope of the anti-Hitlerite coalition of freedom-loving peoples headed by the great Allied powers, » the newspaper stated.

« The military decisions taken in Moscow, closely following those taken in Quebec by the British and American leaders, will no doubt have a beneficial effect on future military operations on all fronts. The strength and unanimity of the Allies in these questions are the most important conditions of a future, lasting peace in Europe.

« With regard to the political questions, the all-important significance of the Polish question is no secret. The rise of the Soviet Union in the place of Czarist Russia, with the consequent policy of peace and friendship among the nations, has created the indispensable pre-conditions for a more propitious solution of the Polish question, » the article concluded. ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 21 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The attacks of Nazi-Fascist troops against positions defended by the Patriots in Udine Province and in several regions of the northern Apennines continue.

After winning a battle in Liguria, Patriots took prisoner and disarmed 400 Fascists, and went on to occupy Santo Stefano d'Aveto. Enemy traffic on the Genoa-Campo line has been considerably reduced following continued Patriot attacks. The same has happened on the Genoa-Serravalle line. In order to protect traffic the enemy was forced to construct fortifications along tracks of strategic importance on the main communication lines from Genoa.

Patriots have extended their control over large zones of Piacenza Province. On October 8, German troops supported by tanks attacked Patriot-held positions east of Borghetto di Borbera, near Arquata Scrivia, in Alessandria Province. The enemy was thrown back after hard fighting. Losses were heavy on both sides. On Via Emilia, German tanks and armored vehicles were captured.

A large group of Patriots is now operating successfully in several zones north of the Po.

Venetian Patriots damaged a rail bridge on the Venice-Padua line, interrupting traffic for seven days. After 90 days of bloody fighting and a huge use of material in a narrow sector, the gallant but numerically reduced defenders of Aix la Chapelle again yesterday repelled strong attacks on the northern fringe of the town, which suffered extensive damage in weeks of U. S. artillery fire and fierce raids. Fierce fighting at close quarters is still in progress for single groups of buildings. Since October 10, the garrison destroyed 25 tanks.

BELGRADE LIBERATED, DEBRECEN CAPTURED

MOSCOW, October 20 — Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia and fifth European capital to be freed from the Nazis, was liberated by Russian and Yugoslav forces today. Simultaneously, Debrecen, third-largest city of Hungary, was captured by Red Army troops advancing over the Hungarian plain toward Budapest, 116 miles farther west.

Gun salvoes here in Soviet celebration of the double victory, announced in two orders of the day by Marshal Stalin, also marked the end of savage street fighting in Belgrade.

Southeast of Belgrade, the annihilation of the encircled German force was completed. Almost 5,000 German prisoners were captured, and up to 1,000 Germans were killed on the battlefield. Booty captured included 3,000 horses, 2,000 trucks loaded with food supplies, 3,000 horse-drawn carts and 20 armored troop carriers. It also included 150 motor cycles, 24 tractors, and 20 ammunition dumps.

A communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters this morning announced that the Yugoslavs alone had killed 5,000 Germans in Belgrade.

The importance of the link-up between Marshal Malinovsky's forces in Transylvania with General Petrov's army from Ruthenia on Wednesday was stressed by the The Times Moscow correspondent today:

"Petrov, famous defender of Sevastopol, chose the moment to advance over the Carpathians when the defection of Hungarian units was causing Germany much embarrassment in Carpatho-Ruthenia. The attack was launched from the mountains at a time when it is most likely to have rapid results. Transylvania has been virtually cleared of the enemy, and the serious threat to communications through northeastern Hungary has placed the Ruthenian garrisons in a highly dangerous salient."

In the far north, Finnish forces today drove the Germans to Sodankyla, 68 miles above Ivalojoki, in north central Finland. Today's Finnish communique said the retreating Germans, supported by artillery and aircraft, are putting up stiff resistance.

Near the Swedish-Finnish border approximately due west of Sodankyla, the Finns have reached Kolari, 105 miles along the German last main escape highway to Norway.

In Latvia, Soviet forces continue to eliminate German resistance pockets along the Gulf of Riga coast. Yesterday they captured the town of Rajgorods, 20 miles west of Riga.

ALLIES LAND ON LEYTE COAST IN PHILIPPINES PROGRESS IS SPLENDID; LOSSES SLIGHT

APHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 20 — Allied landings were made yesterday on the eastern coast of Leyte Island in the Philippines in an amphibious and air operation described by eye-witness reporters as the greatest of the war.

A message of light from General Douglas MacArthur to President Roosevelt said that there were extremely light losses, that all operations had proceeded according to schedule, and that progress is splendid.

A MacArthur communique today said that the area of Tacloban, the capital of Leyte, has been secured, and ground troops are rapidly extending their positions. It said that the beaches were landed "strategically unaware," because the enemy anticipated an attack more to the south.

Japanese broadcasting reports said tonight that landings were made at five points along a front varying from 10 to 20 miles on the Leyte coast. They reported that the Japanese troops were meeting suffering resistance from the enemy about three miles south of the most northerly point found on Leyte.

Gun salvoes here tonight celebrated the double victory, announced in two orders of the day by Marshal Stalin, and marked the end of savage street fighting in Belgrade.

Southeast of Belgrade, the liquidation of the encircled German force was completed. About 8,000 German prisoners were captured, and up to 9,000 German dead were left on the battlefield. Booty captured included 3,000 lorries, 2,260 trucks loaded with war supplies, 3,500 horses, 20 tanks and 20 armored troop carriers, 318 guns, 150 motor cycles, 24 tractors, and 26 ammunition dumps.

A communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters this morning announced that the Yugoslavs alone had killed 5,000 Germans in Belgrade.

In his order of the day to Marshal Malinovsky, Stalin described Debrecen as a large industrial and communications center and a powerful center of enemy resistance. It was captured, he said, as the result of an outflanking maneuver carried out by cavalry troops and tank formations, combined with a frontal attack.

Among the troops who took part in the assault on the city were Kuban and Don Cossacks, and a Rumanian infantry division, henceforth to be known as Debrecen troops.

Soviets Leaving Mountains

On the Carpathian front, the Red Army is leaving the mountains and is breaking into easier country of the western Carpathians, where the terrain is more favorable to battles of maneuver.

Tonight's Soviet communique reported the capture of the town and railway junction of Backalmas, in Hungary. In Yugoslav Transylvanian territory, Russian troops fought their way into a number of towns and railway stations, including Bajmok, Backa-Topola, Novi-Vrbac, and Thor-Ban.

Russian spearheads converging on Mucsceva, a junction of roads to Budapest and Bratislava, are within 18 miles of the city. They are meeting very fierce resistance here.

ALLIES LAND ON LEYTE COAST IN PHILIPPINES PROGRESS IS SPLENDID; LOSSES SLIGHT

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 20 — Allied landings were made yesterday on the eastern coast of Leyte Island in the Philippines in an amphibious and air operation described by eye-witness reporters as the greatest of the war.

A message tonight from General Douglas MacArthur to President Roosevelt said that there were extremely light losses, that all operations had proceeded according to schedule, and that progress is «splendid.»

Dispatches from correspondents said tonight that landings were made at five points along a front varying from 3 to 20 miles on the Leyte coast. They reported that the landing troops were meeting stiffening resistance from the enemy about three miles south of the most northerly beachhead on Leyte.

57 MORE JAP SHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED

PEARL HARBOR, October 20 — Pacific Fleet Headquarters announced today that carrier-based Navy planes, in strikes at the Philippines coordinated with the landings by General MacArthur's forces, sank or damaged 57 more Japanese ships and small craft and 87 enemy planes from Manila to Leyte. Installations in the Philippines were also damaged, the announcement added. (OWI) was caught by surprise by the action on the Leyte coast. The Japanese reports had said that the landings were made at Suluan, in the Sulu Archipelago at the southwest corner of the Philippines, whereas the actual landings were made about 600 miles to the northwest.

Leyte is about 335 miles southeast of Manila and is just north of Mindanao Island, one of the largest in the Philippines group. There are more than a million persons on the island, which is the eighth largest in the Philippines.

Japs on Mindanao Cut Off

President Roosevelt announced at a press conference in Washington that the landings had eliminated Japanese forces on Mindanao as a threat, because Mindanao had been cut off. He asserted that «Leyte is only a waystation on the road to Japan,» and that «now we are going to teach Japan her lesson.»

In the tremendous operation, which was made under a terrific air and naval bombardment, General MacArthur was among the first to make a landing. He returned to the islands which he left under order in March, 1942, with the promise: «I will be back.» In a broadcast today from Philippine soil over the «Voice of Freedom» radio, MacArthur told the Filipino people: «We have returned.»

Sergio Osmena, President of the Philippines, made the landing with General MacArthur, and read a message from President Roosevelt to the Filipinos, in which President Roosevelt said:

«We promised to return. We have returned.

«We have landed in the Philippines to redeem the pledge that we made over two years ago, when the last American troops surrendered.»

Correspondents accompanying the landing troops said that the huge landing fleet, described as «the greatest ocean-going amphibious armada in history,» sailed from New Guinea on October 13, and the trip was made without interference. They said the convoy of ships stretched as far as the eye could see.

Participating in the landings by the 6th U.S. Army was every available man who escaped from Corregidor before it fell two years and seven months ago, and some Australian troops. Before the troops went ashore, the Leyte coast was pounded by a barrage of 16-inch shells from warships of the 3d and 7th Fleets, and fighter planes of the Far Eastern Air Force raked the shore with machinegun fire.

The landing operation on Leyte climaxed a three-day assault by air and sea on the central Philippines.

As the troops established beachheads, heavy artillery, tanks, and flame-throwers quickly followed the assault troops. Naval planes provided cover, dive-bombing Japanese positions and strafing areas of great concentrations. There was some moderate fire from the Japanese, who scored four hits on landing ships, according to radio reporters, but the Americans smashed through Japanese resistance with bayonet charges.

There was a complete lack of Japanese naval resistance, not a single Japanese ship appearing as the armada travelled across the ocean; nor was there any evidence of Japanese vessels as the push ashore began.

Reports tonight from the Leyte beachheads said that reinforcements and supplies were pouring ashore in an unending stream, and that ships still are entering Leyte Gulf.

Landings at 5 Points

A Reuter dispatch said that the landings were made at five points simultaneously. One force seized beachheads at San Ricardo, the nearest point to Tacloban, and at Palo, three miles south. About 12 miles south of that point, a force landed at San Jose, also at Dulag, to open the way to the

Either flank will be vulnerable, and can be rolled up at will.»

Leyte Island is irregularly shaped, its greatest length being 120 miles from northwest to southwest. It is mountainous, the principal plains lying on the northeast side, where the American troops landed. (OWI - Reuter - CBS)

ALLIES CAPTURE AACHEN AND BRESKENS BRITISH LAUNCH NEW DRIVE NEAR ANTWERP

SHAEF, October 29 — The city of Aachen has fallen. American 1st Army troops completed the capture of their first major German town at 1530 hours this afternoon, when the last big stronghold, defended by 100 SS men, was knocked out by direct fire. Tonight, General Hodges' men are mopping up the last remnants of the German garrison trapped on the city's outskirts.

Aachen, gateway to the industrial Ruhr Valley and burial place of Charlemagne, is today a mass of wreckage, as the Germans were warned it would be in an Allied ultimatum issued 10 days ago, demanding its surrender or total destruction.

The Germans turned their own artillery on the city during the night. They fired from positions northeast of Verlautenheide in a fanatical attempt to delay the fall of the city.

There are over 10,000 German prisoners. Allied casualties in taking the city were very light — probably among the lightest ever sustained in an operation of this kind.

Simultaneously with the fall of Aachen, a new British and Canadian offensive was launched today north of Antwerp. A report from General Eisenhower's headquarters said the drive was opened on a 2,000-to-3,000 yard front 14 miles northeast of Antwerp, in the vicinity of St. Leonard Brecht.

The drive, which is going well, is made by two columns pushing northward toward the German defense line 20 miles north of Antwerp, running from Bergen op Zoom on the coast to Roosendaal, 10 miles inland.

If successful, the drive will protect the flank of the Allied troops at Woensdrecht, dominating the isthmus to Beveland and Walcheren, and will eliminate elements of at least two German divisions concentrated there.

Canadian tanks and flame-throwing infantry began pushing forward on both sides of the main road and railway to Roosendaal, through wooded country, at dawn today. At the same time, a British column jumped forward from the Brecht area further east, in a parallel drive on the Canadians' right flank.

Allied tanks and infantry are supported by fighter-bombers roaring overhead, ready to bomb and strafe German positions on call from the ground forces. The German line is reported to be protected with a thick screen of paratroopers operating with S.S. troops.

At the extreme west of the Scheldt Estuary, Canadian troops last night entered Breskens, opposite Flushing. The capture of Breskens is expected to be effected before the Germans can complete the demolition of the port facilities. Already the Germans are deprived of Breskens as a means of evacuation by sea.

A Reuter dispatch said that the landings were made at five points simultaneously. One force seized beachheads at San Ricardo, the nearest point to Tacloban, and at Palo, three miles south. About 12 miles south of that point, a force landed at San Jose, also at Durag, to open the way to the Leyte Valley airfields.

Another force landed on Panaon Island, to dominate the Panaon Straits leading to the west coast of Leyte Island, virtually giving the landing troops positions along a wide front of the east coast of Leyte.

Tanks and guns fanned out rapidly inland as beachheads were established, but were slowed down at the northern beachheads, where bitter fighting was said to be developing in Japanese effort to prevent consolidation of the salients.

An American radio commentator said in a broadcast from one of the beachheads that three days before the landings, combat-team elements of the 6th Army landed on Leyte, and that several days before that, minesweepers and Navy demolition squads began clearing the Leyte Gulf of mines and other obstructions, making a channel through which the convoy, said to be upward of 600 ships, passed with relative safety.

A communique today said that the «strategic results of capturing the Philippines will be decisive» because it will cut in halves the enemy's so-called «co-prosperity sphere,» which Japan has depended on for vital war supplies. The communique explained:

«The islands and the atolls to the south, comprising the Dutch East Indies and the British possessions of Borneo, Malaya, and Burma, will be severed from Japan proper, and the great flow of transportation and supply upon which Japan's vital war industries depend will be cut.

Scheldt Pocket Compressed

Allied gains today have pushed the Germans further back into the Scheldt pocket. South of Breskens, Canadian troops from the original Leopold Canal bridgehead have now linked up with another force from Biervliet. The junction was made a mile south of Oostburg, the local point of German resistance in the Scheldt area.

The Canadians, fighting in mud, floods, and ceaseless rain, have taken more than 500 prisoners in the past 24 hours. Middelbourg and Aardenburg were overrun in their advance. The Germans are making no effort to evacuate their troops, although any evacuation at this stage would be difficult.

British 2nd Army troops south of Venraij, advancing toward Amerika, made only slight progress in the face of the heaviest enemy resistance. Two hundred prisoners were taken yesterday, raising the total to 1,700 since the British drive began a week ago.

On the American 3rd Army front, roads are deep in mud after a long period of bad weather. One dispatch said American doughboys there are living in some of the same trenches the Americans used in that sector in the last war.

In the Belfort Area, where for the time being the heavily fortified gap appears to be sealed by the enemy, French 1st Army troops repelled six German counter-attacks and improved their positions in some places. Forward elements came within three miles of Alsace.

French units supported by tanks reached the entrance to the Bussang Pass, a vital road through the Vosges. More than 350 prisoners were taken in this sector in the past 24 hours. (OWI - Reuter)

BRITISH AND INDIAN TROOPS ENTER CESENA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 20 — British and Indian troops of the 8th Army yesterday entered the town of Cesena, 17 miles northwest of Rimini in the Po Valley, and have cleared all German resistance from the main part of this ancient town east of the Savio River, it was announced here today.

The capture of the substantial part of this town of nearly 35,000 inhabitants, the first of the string of 11 important Po Valley towns stretched out along the Emilia Highway from Rimini through Bologna to Milan in the heart of industrial North Italy, came as 8th Army troops expanded their bridgehead across the Pisciatello River to a width of more than three miles and a depth of more than a mile and a half.

With 10 German divisions, supported by tanks and formidable concentrations of heavy artillery, massed south of Bologna, American troops of the 5th Army yesterday were unable to make any further gains in their push along the Florence-Bologna Road toward the Po Valley.

Enemy forces holding Monte Belmonte, center peak in the three-to-four-mile rocky escarpment guarding the entry into the Savena River Valley, launched heavy counter-attacks spearheaded by tanks and with covering mortar and artillery fire, with undisclosed results. Monte Belmonte, key to the enemy's all-out defense of the Bologna approaches, has been under American attack for several days, with leading American forces reported at one point to have reached the southern slopes of the towering escarpment.

Bologna Defences Tripled

German troop concentrations defending the Bologna approaches to the Po Valley have increased nearly threefold since the beginning of the 5th Army offensive on September 10, it was announced today. In this period of nearly 40 days, bitter enemy resistance has held 5th Army gains in this sector to some 25 miles. In the last half of this period, stiffening German opposition cut American advances to less than nine miles in this area.

Eighth Army forces pushing into the southeastern end of the Po Plain have met equally heavy enemy resistance. In their battle to stem this advance, German forces have made maximum use of the numerous rivers in this area, swollen now with autumn rains, as defensive lines. New Zealand troops first reached the canalized Pisciatello River on October 16, and it was not until two days later that British, Indian, and Canadian forces were able to establish themselves in strength across this narrow stream.

After consolidating, British and Indian forces thrust westward to enter Cesena. Here again, the Germans have fallen back to behind another river line, that of the Savio, one of the principal streams at this edge of the Po Plain.

According to latest reports today, 8th Army troops approaching Cesena from the south had not yet entered the town, but had reached high ground immediately to the south after capturing the village of Celincordia, one mile south of Cesena. Considerable numbers of prisoners were being taken in this sector, it was said.

American forces of the 5th Army, battling slowly forward in the most heavily defended sector of the German lines, were reported today to be engaged in heavy fighting just north of Poggioli, some 9½ miles south of Bologna's outskirts. For the past several days, gains in this crucial sector have been measured in yards, and during the entire [illegible] counter-attacking as they fall back, reports today said. Main positions in this sector remained substantially unchanged, it was stated. (PHO)

TITO'S FORCES LIBERATE DUBROVNIK

LONDON, October 20 — Dubrovnik, an important port on the Adriatic, has been liberated by Marshal Tito's forces and the Germans' entire southeastern Balkan formation has accordingly been cut off from further retreat to the north or west, the Yugoslav communique said today. The German garrison in the town was annihilated.

In Zagreb, capital of puppet Croatia, electric power works have been destroyed by shellfire from Free Yugoslav artillery.

HORTHY TAKEN TO SOUTHERN GERMANY

STOCKHOLM, October 20 — Admiral Nicholas Horthy, former Hungarian regent, has been taken to southern Germany and General Lakatos, ex-premier of Hungary, has been taken to Vienna, according to information received here today by Svenska Dagbladet.

Meanwhile, The New York Times reported that the Nazi Puppet Premier Szalasi has flown to Germany to make a final appeal to Hitler for help in his efforts to consolidate his position in Hungary.

Widespread resistance to the Nazi regime in Hungary was indicated in reports reaching neutral countries. German soldiers and motor cars are frequently attacked, and the railway strike is said to have cut off material and reinforcements for the German divisions in Hungary.

According to an admission of the German-controlled Hungarian radio, fighting broke out in northwest Hungary when workers were ordered to return to their jobs on threat of martial law.

The critical hour for the Hungarian Nazi Government is impending, said a Moscow broadcast, which reported resistance has reached such proportions that German SS troops are using tanks in the fighting. Ten divisions of the Hungarian 1st Army, which refused to recognize the puppet government, are reported to be closing in on the capital. (Reuter)

CHUNGKING, October 20 — A Japanese destroyer of the Mutsuki class was sunk Wednesday night, 90 miles southwest of Hong Kong, by a 14th USAAF Liberator, a communique from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters said today.

ROOSEVELT CALLS LEYTE ONLY A WAY-STATION

WASHINGTON, October 20 — In his statement today announcing the Allied landings on the Philippines, President Roosevelt said also that Leyte is another rung in the long ladder which General MacArthur's men have been climbing for two years.

To the east of these forces, other American infantrymen — meeting equally savage resistance — finally captured Monte Della Vigna, a spur extending some miles to the south of key Monte Belmonte. Five miles farther east, American troops captured the tiny hamlet of Lorenzone, midway between the Idice and the Sillaro rivers, and two miles northwest of San Clement, a village on the Sillaro River. These troops are now the closest 5th Army units to the Valley of the Po, being only 5½ miles from the Rimini-Bologna Highway.

Official dispatches for the first time mentioned American armored units advancing along the Pistoia-Bologna Road, within six miles of Vergato, German strongpoint on the Reno River, 18 miles from Bologna.

British forces on the right flank of the 5th Army yesterday captured several objectives in the area of Monte la Pieve, in the Santerno River Valley some nine miles from the Emilia Highway.

In the Bidente River Valley farther to the east, 8th Army forces reported the capture of hill features a mile and a half south and four miles southeast of Galatea, 17 miles southwest of Forli.

ROOSEVELT CALLS LEYTE ONLY A WAY-STATION

WASHINGTON, October 20 — In his statement today announcing the Allied landings on the Philippines, President Roosevelt said also that Leyte is another rung in the long ladder which General MacArthur's men have been climbing for two years.

«Starting on the under side of New Guinea in the autumn of 1942, when Australia herself was in danger, pushing over the Owen Stanley Mountains, burning and blasting the Japanese from Buna and Gona, digging them from Wewak, starving them at Hollandia — the advance has been a slow and tough struggle by our jungle fighters,» the Chief Executive said.

«Now they have reached Leyte.

«In the six years before the war broke out, the Philippine government, acting in harmonious accord with The United States, made great strides toward the complete establishment of her sovereignty.

«The United States promised to help to build a new nation in the Pacific, a nation whose ideals, like our own, were liberty and equality and the democratic way of life — a nation which in the shortest time would join the friendly family of nations on equal terms.

«We are keeping that promise. When the war came and our work was wrecked, we pledged to the peoples of the Philippines that their freedom would be redeemed, and that their independence would be established and protected.

«We are fulfilling that pledge now. When we have finished the job of driving the Japanese from the island, the Philippines will be a free and independent republic.

«We are glad to be back in the Philippines, but we do not intend to stop there.

«Leyte is only a way-station on the road to Japan,» Mr. Roosevelt added. «It is 700 miles from Formosa and 850 miles from China.

• Our attacks of last week have been destructive and decisive, but now we shall strike an even more devastating blow at Japan.

• We have learned our lesson about Japan. We trusted her and treated her with the decency due to a civilized neighbor.

• We were betrayed. The price of the lesson was high. Now we are going to teach Japan her lesson.

AIR BLOWS PRECEDED LANDINGS

PEARL HARBOR, October 20 — For three days preceding the Allied landings in the Central Philippines, carrier planes from Admiral William Halsey's 3rd U. S. Fleet levelled attack after attack against the Japanese base at Manila, virtually neutralizing this key defense position with the destruction or damage of 29 Japanese ships and 119 planes, a U. S. Pacific Fleet communique announced last night.

General MacArthur's communique last night reported that air activity was widespread over the entire southwest Pacific area, in a bombing arc extending from Bougainville to Borneo. One of the heaviest blows against Mindanao in the southern Philippines, resulted in heavy damage to enemy oil cargo ships, dock installations, buildings, and barracks. More than 50 Liberators flew through heavy anti-aircraft fire to drop 106 tons of bombs on the area.

Other escorted heavy units struck again at Balikpapan, the blasted oil center of Borneo, while Hainanera, enemy base by-passed by the Allies, was again hit. Oil storage tanks at Boela, Ceram, and adjacent Amboina Island were attacked, while more than 100 Dauntless dive-bombers and Corsairs attacked enemy airbases and troop concentrations in the by-passed island of New Britain.

Manado, enemy air and supply base at the northernmost end of Celebes Island was blasted with 58 tons of bombs, while light and medium bombers hit targets in the New Ireland area.

All major Japanese air repair, assembly, and modification centers on Formosa have been levelled as a result of the recent U. S. Superfortress B-29 bombings of this island, Major General Curtis Le May, commander of the 20th U. S. Bomber Command in the China-Burma-India theater, said yesterday. General LeMay said the destruction of the installations would at least temporarily curtail the range and scope of enemy air activity in the South China Sea area. (OWI-Reuter)

PEARL HARBOR, October 20 — In a satirical comment on Japanese claims of having sunk a great part of the U.S. 3rd Fleet, Admiral Chester Nimitz, U.S. Commander in the Pacific, announced today he had received from Admiral William Halsey, Commander of the 3rd Fleet, « the comforting assurance that he is now retiring toward the enemy following the salvage of all the 3rd Fleet ships recently sunk by Tokyo. » (Reuter)

1,000 BOMBERS ATTACK STUTTGART, NUREMBERG

LONDON, October 20 — More than 1,000 RAF bombers attacked the important German engineering centers of Stuttgart and Nuremburg last night. RAF planes also bombed Wiesbaden and objectives in western Germany.

Stuttgart, one of Germany's important aircraft and submarine industry centers, was hit twice and the pilots reported many fires after their first visit. Also an important rail hub, it lies on the main railroads connecting Germany's industrial Ruhr and Rhineland with northern Italy and southern France.

Fires and large explosions were noted in Nuremburg, which is situated 60 miles to the north, at the crossing of the route from the Ruhr to Vienna and the line from Berlin to Munich. It is a vital engineering and transportation center.

Night fighters of the Bomber Command supported the bombers and attacked airfields. At least four enemy aircraft were destroyed.

Nine aircraft of the Bomber Command are missing, the announcement said.

Meanwhile, a correspondent with the British forces said that the day-to-day bombing attacks are systematically cutting the enemy's road and rail communications in Holland and those in Germany leading to Holland. Forming part of a very careful plan, he said, they are preventing the movement of enemy troops and are starving enemy units of supplies and reinforcements. (OWI-Reuter)

GREEKS COMPILE LIST OF GERMAN CRIMES

ATHENS, October 17 (Delayed) — The record of wanton destruction by the Germans during their 3½-year occupation of Greece is now being officially compiled and full justice will be demanded, Themistocles Tsatsos, Minister of Justice in the Greek Government, told the press today.

At least 1,200 Greek villages are known to have been destroyed by the Germans; more than 200,000 houses were burned or otherwise demolished in reprisal for Patriot activities. On numerous occasions, German troops put the torch to villages on mere rumors that Greek Patriots were hiding in them.

Vast forest areas have been set afire. The Corinth Canal is in ruins, and the great port of Piraeus has been destroyed.

The Germans shipped foodstuffs and livestock out of the country, despite the International Red Cross agreement which Germany had signed. A total of 450,000 died from starvation during the German and Italian occupation, most of them during the critical winter of 1941. Since that time, the situation steadily improved, due to the work of the International Red Cross, which brought in supplies of food, medicine, and clothing from Canada, The United States, and Britain.

One of the most disastrous effects of the occupation was the destruction of the Greek currency. The Germans flooded the country with new and valueless drachma, which they printed at will. As a result, the drachma is without value to all practical purposes, and an ordinary purchase entails billions. A single cigarette costs about 50 million drachma.

«We expect that the Germans will be made to pay for these crimes,» M. Tsatsos said, «and we count on our great Allies to help us see that justice is done.» (UNN)

«They gave as the excuse that Allied submarines were sinking the food ships. Or they said that the stores were at Trieste, and they could not get them through. Frequently we were told that the supplies were at some distant place, and we were told to go and fetch them: we were without any means of transport.

«It must be said, however, that the Germans did not touch the supplies that the Red Cross imported, although there was widespread belief among the people that this was the case.

«But they did take everything they could from the land, despite the agreement. Olive oil and currants, for example, which are among our chief products, had to be imported by the Red Cross. These are facts which cannot be controverted.

«Despite these activities, the I. R. C. managed to do its work well, and it is due to its efforts that mass starvation such as we experienced in the winter of 1941 was prevented. The Swiss did magnificent work».

An I. R. C. inquiry disclosed that the Germans were issuing thousands of food cards under fictitious names as bribes or as rewards for services. This situation persisted until the end, despite numerous official protests from the I. R. C.

«There are many more examples I could give you,» the official continued, «but they are in the same vein. We Greeks have learned much about the Germans in the past 3½ years». (UNN)

CABINET DISCUSSES SICILY PROBLEMS

ROME, October 20 — Particular attention was devoted to the present situation in Sicily and to yesterday's outbreak of violence in Palermo at today's meeting of the Italian Council of Ministers.

The meeting, presided over by Premier Ivanoe Bonomi, heard the Sicily High Commissioner attribute unrest in the island to shortage of food and to dissatisfaction with the scope of cost-of-living allowances measures.

A law was passed which ratifies the agreement reached a few days ago between employers and workers covering cost-of-living bonuses. A similar law was adopted granting improved financial treatment to personnel belonging to local administrations.

Agreements leading to these measures had previously been reached between the Minister of Industry, Commerce, and Labor, Giovanni Grouchi, and representatives of the Italian General Confederation of Labor. (UNN)

PALERMO COMMISSION TO INVESTIGATE RIOTS

ROME, October 20 — Following yesterday's riots in Palermo, Sicily, which resulted in 19 deaths and 107 persons being injured, it was announced here tonight that a special commission has been set up to investigate and fix responsibility for the demonstration.

Speaking at a press conference here today, the High Commissioner for Sicily, Salvatore Aldisio, said that he had little to add to the Government's statement of last night.

The Commissioner said the trouble started when employees of local concerns decided to go on strike when they realized that they were not included in the recent cost-of-living measures passed by the Government.

The latest information from Palermo, the Commissioner pointed out, indicated that the private employees insisted on bank, postal, and other government employees' joining the strike.

It would also seem, the Commissioner continued, that

GERMAN SABOTAGE OF I.R.C. IN GREECE DESCRIBED

ATHENS, October 18 (Delayed) — The story of how German and Italian occupation officials in Greece obstructed the relief program of the International Red Cross was told today to a United Nations News correspondent by a former I. R. C. executive.

The German-Italian behavior was superficially correct, he said, but through numerous subterfuges they effectively impeded a good part of the program.

Through the intercession of Sweden, the occupying nations signed an agreement whereby the International Red Cross undertook to import 15,000 tons of cereals and other foods per month from Allied countries. The Germans and Italians agreed to supply an equivalent amount for the Greek population. The agreement also stipulated that the occupying nations would requisition foodstuffs in the country only to the extent that they were in excess of the normal consumption.

The committee to administer the agreement arrived here in August, 1942. It consisted of Germans, Italians, Swiss, and Greeks.

«The Germans did not by any means fulfill their agreement,» he said. «What food they supplied was on a most irregular basis. There were many months when they supplied nothing.

«There are many more examples I could give,» the official continued, «but they are in the same vein. We Greeks have learned much about the Germans in the past 3½ years.» (UNN)

The latest information from Palermo, the Commissioner pointed out, indicated that the private employees insisted on bank, postal, and other government employees' joining the strike.

It would also seem, the Commissioner continued, that irresponsible provocateurs who intermingled with the crowd were responsible for the attempt to loot stores and stocks of flour which were being hauled through the district where the rioting took place.

When the crowd, which gathered in front of his office, assumed a threatening attitude, Aldisio said, and also in view of the fact that the police guard on duty there was considered insufficient to cope with the situation, a truck-load of Italian infantry was called out as a precautionary measure.

The soldiers were met by the hurling of a bomb, which hit the truck, and by pistol shots. Nine soldiers were injured.

The soldiers replied with bombs and rifle shots.

Commissioner Aldisio said he was leaving immediately for Palermo, adding that it was particularly disheartening that such disturbing events should take place just at the time the Government was discussing measures essential to the revival of Sicily. (UNN)

Due to the mopping-up operations undertaken by the Germans on October 6 in the mountainous sector to the west of the Tagliamento River, it was learned that Patriots refused the ultimatum to lay down their arms and abandon the sector. If the ultimatum is not accepted, the Germans threaten to set fire to the villages of the vicinity.

In the fighting that followed the Patriots' refusal the enemy lost 220 men. Patriots captured six machine guns, four vehicles, and a large quantity of war materiel. In spite of the use of tanks and armored cars, the enemy did not succeed in overpowering the Patriots. On October 4, groups of Patriots of the Veneto sector disrupted the highway to the south of Pontebba for a stretch of two kilometers, and on October 7 captured two large vehicles full of arms and munitions in the vicinity of Casarsa.

The highway which leads to the Monte Croce Carnico Pass, on the Italian-Austrian border, was interrupted for about 10 days. The bridge on the Canova highway, in Udine Province, was destroyed.

On a highway south of Modena, groups of Patriots ambushed four German motor columns. The results of the daring undertaking have not yet been ascertained. NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN PROPAGANDA TRENDS

Western Front: The most striking trend in the presentation of news from this front is that the German Radio continues to play up the presumed continuation of resistance at Aachen at a time when the Allied Radio has already announced the complete capture of Aachen. Although Allied sources claim the capture of Aachen during the afternoon, a German broadcast for German home consumption at 2000 hours, which said that the Allies had pushed to within nine miles of Bologna, the Fascist Radio late broadcast referred to the situation south of Bologna as « unchanged. »

Bologna: Contrary to the BBC broadcast of 1900 hours, which said that the Allies had pushed to within nine miles of Bologna, the Fascist Radio late broadcast referred to the situation south of Bologna as « unchanged. »

Badoglio and Azzolini Compared: Particular emphasis and ironic contrasts were established between the relative financial records of Badoglio and Azzolini. Drawing inspiration from a Radio London broadcast which had revealed the Azzolini misappropriations, the Fascist Radio bears down heavily on the reputed fact that Badoglio, during the 45 day period of his regime, withdrew nearly 4 ½ million lire from Il Duce's fund for charitable and public works. The figures and dates of withdrawal are presented in detail, and the inference is that the money was disposed of in two ways: to sustain Badoglio's family in Switzerland and, more significantly, to effect Badoglio's own escape.

Sicilian Riots: Radio Tevere and other Fascist radios, relaying London sources, mention popular riots in Palermo. Radio Tevere attributes them to « extremely poor living conditions, which lead to seizure of foodstuffs. » The casualty figures given were 19 dead and some 160 wounded, which is higher than the German figures. It is notable, however, that the German radio gave more space to the incidents than the Italian Fascist broadcasts.

Soviet Industrial Council Tours Italy: The lengthiest, and most emphatic commentary of the day is found in the Fascist Radio broadcast of 1300 hours. A propos the comprehensive tour of the Soviet labor committee through southern Italy, the article draws a sharp contrast between war-heightened misery and collapse in Allied-occupied Italy, and the social and economic conditions in Communist-dominated Russia. Both sides are depicted with heavy, sustained irony; the penury in Italy admitted, but blamed on the Allies, and the idea of an « ideal » Russia discredited. Stating mockingly that « the invaders aim at obtaining a progressive increase in the cultural and professional level of the Italians, » the article presumes that the task has been divided, the Anglo-Americans seeing to the instructive, educational side, the Russians shouldering the

RUSSIANS CAPTURE FIRST EAST PRUSSIAN TOWN TWO RED ARMIES LINKED ON CZECH BORDER

MOSCOW, October 19 — The deepest penetration into German territory was made today by Russian troops who captured Eydtkau, inside the East Prussia border, and pushed ahead several miles in what the German News Agency reported as one of the most furious battles of the war.

The fall of Eydtkau to the Russians was reported by the German agency, but no confirmation was received from Allied sources. Eydtkau is an important communications center through which main line traffic between Germany and the Baltic states passes. It is 31 miles east of the important center of Insterburg.

It is the first time in this war that the Germans have admitted the fall of a town in East Prussia.

Other Soviet troops, striking from the Carpathian mountains, linked up with Red forces in Slovakia, 15 miles from the Czech border, and captured Svidnik, 30 miles southeast of Bardejov, Moscow announced tonight.

Soviet troops in Hungary, meanwhile, launched a terrific onslaught tonight as the Red drive gained momentum in all sectors. A Yugoslav communique today said that southeast of Belgrade, two German divisions have been encircled, halved, and faced with annihilation. Strongpoint after strongpoint was reported being reduced by Yugoslav and Soviet troops tightening the grip around Belgrade. An announcement tonight by the German News Agency said that the Germans' position at Belgrade had become acute in the last 24 hours, and that «the sector is under continuous air bombardment.»

A Russian offensive with the ultimate aim of reaching Danzig began this morning, according to a German broadcast. It said that the assault was concentrated on a 60-mile front between Serek and Nevograd, with the purpose of severing the German front there by simultaneous blows from the right and left. JAPS REPORT ALLIED PHILIPPINES LANDING

WASHINGTON, October 19 — A major Allied land, sea, and air offensive in the Philippines was reported today by the Japanese News Agency Domei in the wake of Allied operations which resulted in heavy destruction and damage to enemy installations, ships, and planes in the last week.

Japanese reports said that Allied landings have been made at Suluan in the Sulu Archipelago at the southwest corner of the Philippines, and that warships are bombarding the coast in Leyte Gulf, about 350 miles south of Manila. Enemy reports added that the landings at Suluan began Tuesday morning, but there has been no Allied confirmation.

A Tokyo broadcast said today that an Allied task force was conducting a naval and air bombardment against Car Nicobar, northernmost island in the Japanese-held Nicobar Islands in the Pacific Ocean. Car Nicobar is 400 miles south of Burma and about 200 miles northeast of the northern tip of Sumatra. The broadcast added that the attack began last night and was still continuing tonight. Car Nicobar was seized by the Japanese in 1942. There was no confirmation either of this report.

An announcement from Admiral Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor, however, said that new U. S. carrier-borne raids on enemy shipping, installations, and defense plants in the Luzon area of the Philippines are under way. Earlier, the Japanese-controlled Radio Manila reported that 270 carrier-based planes attacked Manila and nearby Clark Airfield this morning.

The Nimitz announcement reported that in the latest attacks on Formosa and nearby areas, 915 Japanese planes were destroyed from October 7 to 15, and that reports of the tremendous toll were not yet completed. A third of the aircraft were destroyed on the ground, indicating the swiftness of the American attacks which evidently caught the Japanese unawares in many instances.

In the Southwest Pacific, Allied aircraft under General MacArthur's command continued to search out Japanese ships and installations throughout the Celebes, New Guinea,

It is the first time in this war that the Germans have officially admitted loss of a German town to the Red Armies. A German military commentator said in a Berlin broadcast that a battle is raging in East Prussia of «unprecedented fury,» and that Red troops have numerical superiority.

11,000 Prisoners Taken

On the Czecho-Slovakian border, the Red Armies also registered important military successes today when troops of Marshal Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army and General Petrov's 4th Ukrainian Army linked up near Sighet, and began a gigantic pincer movement on the Slovak and upper Hungarian fronts. Petrov's troops occupied Sighet, and Malinovsky's forces moved up from the south near the Transylvanian frontier to entrap the Germans in the northwest corner of Transylvania, while the Russians poured through the key passes to the north and northeast.

The Soviet communique tonight reported that Red forces fighting on the Hungarian plain south of Debrecen captured 11,000 German and Hungarian officers and men from October 13 to 18. London commentators said today that it has been reported that the commander of the Hungarian 1st Army and most of his men surrendered after the Russian penetration of the Carpathian passes yesterday.

German positions along the eastern front were facing Danzig began this morning, according to a German broadcast. It said that the assault was concentrated on a 60-mile front between Serek and Novograd, with the purpose of severing the German front there by simultaneous blows from the right and left. JAPS REPORT ALLIED PHILIPPINES LANDING

WASHINGTON, October 19 — A major Allied land, sea, and air offensive in the Philippines was reported today by the Japanese News Agency Domei in the wake of Allied operations which resulted in heavy destruction and damage to enemy installations, ships, and planes in the last week.

Japanese reports said that Allied landings have been made at Suluan in the Sulu Archipelago at the southwest corner of the Philippines, and that warships are bombarding the coast in Leyte Gulf, about 350 miles south of Manila. Enemy reports added that the landings at Suluan began Tuesday morning, but there has been no Allied confirmation.

A Tokyo broadcast said today that an Allied task force was conducting a naval and air bombardment against Car Nicobar, northernmost island in the Japanese-held Nicobar Islands in the Pacific Ocean. Car Nicobar is 400 miles south of Burma and about 200 miles northeast of the northern tip of Sumatra. The broadcast added that the attack began last night and was still continuing tonight. Car Nicobar was seized by the Japanese in 1942. There was no confirmation either of this report.

An announcement from Admiral Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor, however, said that new U. S. carrier-borne raids on enemy shipping, installations, and defense plants in the Luzon area of the Philippines are under way. Earlier, the Japanese-controlled Radio Manila reported that 270 carrier-based planes attacked Manila and nearby Clark Airfield this morning.

The Nimitz announcement reported that in the latest attacks on Formosa and nearby areas, 915 Japanese planes were destroyed from October 7 to 15, and that reports of the tremendous toll were not yet completed. A third of the aircraft were destroyed on the ground, indicating the swiftness of the American attacks which evidently caught the Japanese unawares in many instances.

In the Southwest Pacific, Allied aircraft under General MacArthur's command continued to search out Japanese ships and installations throughout the Celebes, New Guinea, the Bismarcks, and the Solomons.

Allied night patrols started a large fire at Balikpapan in Borneo, in Darvel Bay, and at Halmahera; a freighter was left burning in each place. (Reuter-BBC)

BITTER RESISTANCE LIMITS A.A.I. GAINS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 19 — Fierce German resistance, utilizing to the utmost terrain obstacles such as mountains and rivers, and in some sectors strengthened by reinforcements of troops and heavy guns, yesterday held both the 5th and 8th Armies to limited gains in their two-pronged drive into the Valley of the Po.

Eighth Army forces, closing in on the former German headquarters town of Cesena at the southeastern edge of the Po Valley, yesterday forced a crossing of the Pisciatello River to establish a small bridgehead on the low ground a mile and a half east of this Emilia Highway town.

But on the 5th Army front, the American troops battling northward toward Bologna made only the slightest gains in their furious assault on the German mountain-face defenses guarding the entry into the Savena River Valley.

In all vital sectors of the Italian front, German resistance has stiffened to fanatic intensity, which has contested every yard of Allied progress in an all-out stand to hold the Lombardy Plain and industrial north Italy.

Pisciatello River Crossed

Canadian troops forced the crossing of the narrow, canalized Pisciatello River, at a point due east of Cesena and north of the main Po Valley railway line which links the string of important industrial cities between Milan, Bologna, and Rimini. The crossing was made in the face of the heaviest opposition, and only a small foothold was obtained on the west banks of the waterrourse at latest reports today.

Due south of Cesena, British troops were fighting fiercely at the edges of the village of Celincordia, one mile from Cesena, to draw tighter the arcing 8th Army front closing in on the Po Valley town from the east 90° around the compass to the south.

On the northern fringes of this quadrant facing Cesena, New Zealand troops occupied the village of Ruffio, just east of the Pisciatello River and 14 miles northwest of Rimini, while, on the southern edges, troops of an Indian division captured the hamlet of Acquarola, a mile and a half southwest of Celincordia, and cleared remaining enemy resistance from the village of Roversano, on the east banks of the Savio River, four miles south of Cesena.

Fighting on the 5th Army front south of Bologna yesterday focussed on the approaches to two important crossroads along routes leading to Bologna through the Savena and the Idice river valleys. A three to four-mile-long mountain escarpment east of the Florence-Bologna Road dominates the entrance to the Savena River Valley, and runs eastward almost to the Idice River, and it is this towering mountain face with Monte Belmonte in its center, that the Germans have chosen as the backbone of their all-out defense of Bologna's approaches.

Struggle for Monte Belmonte

The bitter fight for Monte Belmonte, whose southern slopes were reached Tuesday by American forces, continued unabated and without decision yesterday, although American forces captured the tiny hamlet of Poggio la Fabbrica, within a mile of the key crossroads of Zola, within the Savena Valley itself.

Just southeast of Monte Belmonte, leading elements of American troops reached the hamlet of Corce, increasing their hold on the lateral road winding along the base of the enemy-held escarpment to join Highway 65 at Zola.

Other American forces yesterday were slowly converging on the second of the two key crossroads, that at Monte Armato in the Idice River Valley.

On October 17, naval aircraft destroyed six enemy craft and set a merchant vessel afire in waters off the Isle of Lemnos, only 40 miles from the entrance to the Dardanelles.

The communique added that some 15 or 20 smaller craft had also been disposed of in these waters.

The destroyer HMS Argonaut sank an armored enemy caique containing 200 infantrymen in waters offshore from the island of Psathura, in the northern Sporades Group, while HMS Termagant sank a Siebel ferry laden with valuable enemy equipment. Some survivors were picked up.

The enemy garrison of the island of Santorin, in the Cyclades Group north of Crete, surrendered to the crew of the cruiser HMS Ajax. (PRO)

A.E.F. PREPARES FOR FINAL ASSAULT ON RHINE

SHAEF, October 19 — The military operations on the western front were viewed tonight by Allied staff officers as a build-up for one of the war's decisive battles. Preparations for a large-scale and sustained Allied jump-off toward the Rhine are now approaching an end, they declared, adding that the start will depend upon two major factors — favorable weather and the establishment of a shorter route of supply.

Meanwhile, the battle to open the undamaged docks of Antwerp to Allied shipping is moving into the final phase. Canadian 1st Army troops have squeezed the Germans in the south Schelde pocket into an area 12 miles wide and 10 miles deep. German guns, however, still command both sides of the 50-mile stretch of the Schelde Estuary guarding Antwerp down to the sea.

Canadian forward elements advanced through mud and driving rain to within less than a mile of Breskens, German strongpoint on the northern flank of their line. Some advance Allied units were reported late tonight to have entered the town. Part of the city is under heavy mortar bombardment, and the Germans appear to be preparing to evacuate after the demolition of the port facilities is completed.

In the center of the pocket, Canadian troops have thrust to within one-half mile of Oostburg, pivot town in the center of the new German defense line, and tonight Allied troops are preparing for an assault of the town. To the southwest of the pocket, German resistance appears to be slackening.

Allied forces holding the town of Woensdrecht, dominating the road and rail line leading from Walcheren and Beveland Islands, are consolidating their positions for a thrust westward to clear the northern side of the Schelde Estuary. Aerial reconnaissance photos show that Walcheren is successfully flooded, and that German gun positions have been moved to higher ground.

Venraij Captured

British 2nd Army troops struck swiftly after capturing Venraij on the eastern flank of the Dutch salient, and pushed 3½ miles southward toward the railroad town of Amerika, upon which an American armored column is converging. The British drive linked with another armored column which cut across the Deurne Canal.

This advance is taking Allied forces along roads and a railway toward the Dutch communication center of Venlo, on the far side of the Meuse (Maas) River, and they have less than six miles to go. Fighter-bombers are attacking a wide area ahead of the ground forces.

American 1st Army troops are pushing into Aachen from all sides and almost half the town is in Allied hands. They are advancing on the last German stronghold inside Aachen.

On the northern fringes of this quadrant facing Cesena, New Zealand troops occupied the village of Ruffio, just east of the Pisciatello River and 14 miles northwest of Rimini, while, on the southern edges, troops of an Indian division captured the hamlet of Acquarola, a mile and a half southwest of Collinerdia, and cleared remaining enemy resistance from the village of Roversaro, on the east banks of the Savio River, four miles south of Cesena.

Just southeast of Monte Belmonte, leading elements of American troops reached the hamlet of Coroe, increasing their hold on the lateral road winding along the base of the enemy-held escarpment to join Highway 65 at Zula.

Other American forces yesterday were slowly converging on the second of the two key crossroads, that at Monte Armato in the Idice River Valley.

American troops were located today at three points all within two miles of Monte Armato, and roughly a mile and a half apart. Castel Rocco, westernmost of the three points, is located on one of the roads leading to Monte Armato, while Castelvecchio, the easternmost point, is astride the other. Castel Vaglie, a third point captured by the Americans south of Monte Armato, is located midway between Castel Rocco and Castelvecchio.

Castel Rocco, nearest of the three points to the road leading along the Idice River Valley to the plain of the Po, is only eight miles south of the Emilia Highway.

Throughout this area, enemy resistance was heavy, and gained ground was retained only after sharp German counter-attacks had been repulsed.

Elsewhere on the 5th Army front, South African forces captured Monte Pezza, a height 2½ miles east of Vergato, German stronghold along the Pistoia-Bologna Road some 18 miles southwest of Bologna. In the coastal sector, troops of the 92nd Division, an American Negro unit, captured Monte Castiglione, some nine miles north of Viareggio and just west of Seravezza.

On the western flank of the 8th Army's front, Allied troops were engaged in renewed fighting in the Gulatea sector, 17 miles southwest of Forli on the Bidente River.

American 1st Army troops are pushing into Aachen from all sides and almost half the town is in Allied hands. They are advancing on the last German stronghold inside Aachen.

Fighters and fighter-bombers pin-pointed strongpoints ahead of the ground forces as they moved toward the northwestern quarter.

Five German counter-attacks to break the American lines to the east were held last night. They succeeded, however, in retaking a road block. Inside the city, the Germans have massed tanks, self-propelled guns, and mortars to make a last stand.

Infantry of the American 3rd Army made a gain of one mile in their new offensive north of Metz while to the southeast, around Baccarat, the Germans are trying to halt the Allied advance.

American troops are advancing in the vicinity of Bruyères, northeast of Epinal, but are being slowed down by heavy fire from small arms, grenades, and mortars.

Positions in the Vosges slopes are holding firm. Lively patrolling and frequent raiding parties constitute the activity in the higher Alps, where the Germans are meeting French ski troops and are suffering considerable losses.

Farther south, the French repelled six German counter-attacks against their deepened bridgehead over the Moselotte River, where the French are probing the approaches to the Schlucht Pass. (OWI-Reuter-AP-BBC)

INDIAN 14TH ARMY TROOPS CAPTURE TIDDIM.

KANDY, October 19 — Tiddim, Japanese base in north Burma, has been captured by Indian troops of the British 14th Army, Southeast Asia Command Headquarters announced today.

British troops had been closing in slowly on Tiddim for several weeks after pursuing the retreating Japanese 100 miles southward from Imphal in northeastern Burma, which the enemy unsuccessfully attempted to seize.

The fate of the Japanese garrison at Tiddim was not immediately disclosed, the Associated Press reported. Small British forces have been reported operating along the Japanese escape route to the south after filtering through the jungles.

Capture of Tiddim brings the winding road from Imphal completely under 14th Army control, and opens the way for further operations against the Japanese line running east and west from Tiddim through a series of strongly-fortified positions along the road to Kalewa and Chindwin.

Japanese defenses covering the northern approaches to Tiddim collapsed under heavy air attack and the Indian troops pushed into the town from two directions.

Tiddim was taken by the Japanese in 1942, and it was from there that the Japanese launched their attack into Manipur State, India. Tiddim is at the southern end of the important road to Imphal and Kohima, and is 20 miles from the India-Burma frontier. It marks the first gain of strategic importance since the monsoon season ended and the new campaign began.

In the drive on the Burma Road, a Chinese High Command communique said today that Chinese troops on Monday captured Yangkungyilen, five miles southwest of the Burma Road town of Mangshih, in Yunnan Province. American planes continued to hammer enemy positions along the Burma Road. A strong force of planes of the Eastern Air Command attacked airfields in the Rangoon area yesterday.

On the central China front, Japanese troops reached points 12 miles southwest of Hingan to put them approximately 19 miles northeast of the major Chinese base of Kweilin in south central China, a Chinese communique said.

Aircraft of the 14th USAAF destroyed eight Japanese steamers and barges and damaged at least 20 others in strafing attacks on river shipping in the Wuchow, Taihing, and Tunchuk areas. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

MANNHEIM HIT IN DAY AND NIGHT ASSAULT

LONDON, October 19 — More than 1,000 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by more than 700 fighters, today attacked important military targets in southwestern Germany at Mainz and in the areas of Ludwigshafen and Mannheim. The three Rhineland cities have large railyards and numerous war industries including armored vehicle works, ordnance and oil depots, and chemical plants.

The daylight operation in which headquarters said 11 bombers and 11 fighters were lost was the first time in six days that the 8th USAAF attacks have been directed beyond the Rhineland city of Cologne, news dispatches said.

Mannheim was also hit last night by the RAF, which attacked objectives in western Germany, including Hanover.

Mustangs of the Air Defense of Great Britain, on patrol off Denmark, yesterday afternoon destroyed six enemy aircraft according to an Air Ministry communique which said that one Mosquito is missing from the operation.

Spitfires and Typhoons of the 2nd TAF pounded enemy installations near The Hague yesterday and supported by ground operations, the planes cut enemy routes between the Ruhr and Holland. In the Breskens area, a German headquarters building was hit by four 500-pound bombs.

Rail lines from the Ruhr to German garrisons in Holland were cut in five places yesterday by Norwegian, Polish, British, and Dominion aircraft which flew 400 sorties in unfavorable weather and lost five planes.

In yesterday's American assault on Cologne and Kassel a communique from 8th USAAF headquarters today announced that 10 heavy bombers and 23 fighters are missing.

Meanwhile, the Norwegian Telegraph Agency here said today that the RAF heavy bomber attack on the German U-boat base at Bergen, Norway, on October 4, sank two floating dry docks and wrecked other important enemy locations. About 17 U-boats were said to have been in the pens at the time of the attack and the report said two surface ships were sunk, and that a third vessel loaded with aircraft and other war material was severely damaged.

To counter German attempts to supply U-boat bases and the German land forces in Norway by sea at night, the RAF Coastal Command has formed a new anti-shipping wing, composed of RAF, Canadian, and Norwegian squadrons, which are already playing havoc with enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast.

For the eighth successive night, flying bombs came in over the east coast of England last night. They were met by a heavy barrage. Some were intercepted at sea, and others crashed in southern England, causing some damage and casualties. Almost 600 flying bombs have been destroyed by British Tempest fighters, according to an official announcement today.

During the blitz in Britain, the Germans dropped 2,600 high explosive bombs on the south coast of Southhampton as well as 32,000 incendiary bombs and 36 parachute mines, it has been revealed. The figures disclosed that 633 civilians were killed, nearly 2,000 injured; 4,269 houses were destroyed and, altogether, more than 43,000 properties were destroyed or damaged. (OWI - Reuter)

GERMAN SHIPPING HIT OFF TRONDHEIM

LONDON, October 19 — Carrier-borne aircraft of the British Home Fleet struck at German shipping and shore installations at Trondheim on the Norwegian coast, an Admiralty communique stated tonight. Hits were scored on a medium-sized supply ship, and two anti-aircraft ships were hit and left burning fiercely.

A number of shore batteries and other installations were attacked, and mines were laid in coastal waters, the communique said.

GERMAN SOLDIERS HINDER NAZI EVACUATION

LONDON, October 19 — Several German soldiers have been shot for telling Rhineland civilians they would come to no harm in Allied hands, a correspondent of The Daily Mail said today in a despatch from Aachen.

Thousands of civilians — who took the soldiers' advice and went into hiding after the police had issued orders to leave — caused hindrance in the Nazis' evacuation plans, the correspondent continued.

A clash between the Nazi leaders and the war-weary Rhineland people is coming to a head, and a steam may break over the question of evacuation, the correspondent said.

The German commander at Aachen has ordered his soldiers to shoot civilian men and women trying to reach Allied lines, the correspondent concluded. (Reuter)

108 AIRFIELDS BUILT IN FRANCE SINCE D-DAY

WASHINGTON, October 19 — Approximately 108 airfields were constructed in France between D-Day and October 12 by the U. S. Air Force Engineer command, it was disclosed here today.

This record was made possible by the development of a prefabricated surfacing, first conceived by Canadian and British engineers, and later improved by American manufacturers, a USAAF spokesman said.

Lighter than the steel landing mat, the new surfacing is consequently easier to transport in large quantities. After grading off the soil, the process takes about 15 hours to construct a runway 120 feet by 3,600 feet, and makes a landing field that carries military planes up to the fighter-bomber class. NEW BELGIAN ARMY BEING FORMED

WASHINGTON, October 19 — A new Belgian Army will be trained as speedily as possible and provided with modern equipment, said Belgian Defense Minister Fernand Demets last night in a broadcast over Radio Brussels. The army will «take part with the least delay in the victorious fight being waged by our glorious allies,» he said.

GERMAN GENERALS DENOUNCE THE VOLKSSTURM

MOSCOW, October 19 — Because Himmler and Hitler must perish, Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler is asking the German people to commit national suicide.

That accusation was broadcast over Radio Moscow today by the Free German Committee — an organization of captured German generals and German political refugees now living in Russia.

Analyzing the Hitler proclamation calling for organization of the Volkssturm — a People's Army to stay the Allied invasion — and also analyzing the Himmler recruiting speech made in East Prussia yesterday, the committee declared:

First, that defeat and collapse of Germany are certainties in the eyes of every person capable of reasoning.

Second, that the call-up of men from 16 to 60 years of age, to take up arms in the countryside, is an indication that the Wehrmacht has been drained of its blood.

Third, that the selection of Nazi Party men as commanders of the Volkssturm clearly indicates that the war is a Party war — continued to safeguard its members and its organizations.

Fourth, that Himmler now attempts to recruit everyone into a Party-controlled Volkssturm to head off the possibility of a mass uprising against Hitler.

Reuter dispatches from London recalled today that the idea of a Volkssturm has been mulled over by the Nazis for some time. Policy has varied. Hitler was once said to have been fearful of creating a force against himself, were the people of the countryside trained in the use of arms.

Army commanders were opposed, holding that a true People's Army could be effective only if it were composed of volunteers; and Hitler's own Volkischer Beobachter said at the time that the German national character is «not easily excitable,» and unlikely to rise up unguided.

But now, said Reuter today, the reason for risking the outcome of the formation of a Volkssturm is obviously that Germany's regular forces could not be increased sufficiently to cope with the immediate danger of an encircling Allied onslaught on the Reich.

Radio Moscow had this to say:

«There is nothing that Hitler, Himmler, or Goering can possibly do to stop the final Allied onslaught against the Reich. The German nation is being called to arms solely for the purpose of facilitating the escape of high Nazi officials. Germany will be a battlefield.» (Reuter)

AUSTRALIAN ROLE IN WAR AGAINST JAPAN

CANBERRA, October 19 — Australia has been organizing for months to serve as a base for extensive operations against Japan, Prime Minister John Curtin said yesterday.

Curtin said that under present plans, Australia will play much the same role as England had during preparations for the invasion of Europe. He said that Australia is supplying food to Allied forces based in Australia, to the British Admiralty, and to British forces overseas.

Australian munitions production has been redirected, he said, and is now supplying United States forces with machine tools, engineering equipment, and radio equipment. (OWI)

U. S. CASUALTIES IN WEST TOTAL 174,780

WASHINGTON, October 19 — American casualties on the western land front from June 6 through October 3 numbered 174,780, the War Department announced here today. The total does not include Air Force casualties.

108 AIRFIELDS BUILT IN FRANCE SINCE D-DAY

WASHINGTON, October 19 — Approximately 108 airfields were constructed in France between D-Day and October 12 by the U. S. Air Force Engineer command, it was disclosed here today.

This record was made possible by the development of a prefabricated surfacing, first conceived by Canadian and British engineers, and later improved by American manufacturers, a USAAF spokesman said.

Lighter than the steel landing mat, the new surfacing is consequently easier to transport in large quantities. After grading off the soil, the process takes about 15 hours to construct a runway 120 feet by 3,600 feet, and makes a landing field that carries military planes up to the fighter-bomber class. NEW BELGIAN ARMY BEING FORMED

FINNISH DISARMAMENT OF GERMANS LAGS

MOSCOW, October 19 — The Finnish Government has carried out all provisions of the Soviet-Finnish armistice agreement except for a satisfactory disarmament of German soldiers, Radio Moscow said yesterday.

The broadcast said that only a small part of the available Finnish Army is being used in operations against the Germans still remaining in the country.

The broadcast said that among obligations fulfilled were the transfer of airdromes in southern Finland to Allied control, breaking of relations with former German satellites, liberation of war and political prisoners, dissolution of Fascist-type organizations, and handing over of German military property.

The Finnish Radio said yesterday that 15 British members of the Allied Armistice Control Commission have arrived in Helsinki.

The broadcast said the British were met by Soviet members of the committee and by officials of the Finnish Foreign Ministry. (OWI) of a mass uprising against Hitler.

Reuter dispatches from London recalled today that the idea of a Volkssturm has been mulled over by the Nazis for some time. Policy has varied. Hitler was once said to have been fearful of creating a force against himself, were the people of the countryside trained in the use of arms.

Army commanders were opposed, holding that a true People's Army could be effective only if it were composed of volunteers; and Hitler's own Volkischer Beobachter said at the time that the German national character is «not easily excitable,» and unlikely to rise up unguided.

But now, said Reuter today, the reason for risking the outcome of the formation of a Volkssturm is obviously that Germany's regular forces could not be increased sufficiently to cope with the immediate danger of an encircling Allied onslaught on the Reich.

Radio Moscow had this to say:

«There is nothing that Hitler, Himmler, or Goering can possibly do to stop the final Allied onslaught against the Reich. The German nation is being called to arms solely for the purpose of facilitating the escape of high Nazi officials. Germany will be a battlefield.» (Reuter)

AUSTRALIAN ROLE IN WAR AGAINST JAPAN

Curtin said that under present plans, Australia will play much the same role as England had during preparations for the invasion of Europe. He said that Australia is supplying food to Allied forces based in Australia, to the British Admiralty and to British forces overseas.

Australian munitions production has been redirected, he said, and is now supplying United States forces with machine tools, engineering equipment, and radio equipment. (OWI)

STATE DEPARTMENT DENIES DEWEY'S STATEMENT

WASHINGTON, October 19 — The State Department tonight issued a statement in reply to Governor Thomas Dewey's assertion that the Rumanian armistice was «not a military armistice» because it dealt with future frontiers and economic matters, and also in reply to Governor Dewey's assertion that Secretary Cordell Hull had not received the terms from Moscow in time for study.

The official Government statement declared that the Rumanian armistice was a «military document and not a peace settlement» — which was the reason why a Russian official signed it on behalf of The United States, Great Britain, and the Soviet Union.

The State Department announcement also declared that the United States Government had participated in all stages of the armistice negotiations.

Referring to Governor Dewey's statement that the pact «disposed of Bessarabia and Transylvania,» the State Department said that the armistice «merely restores» the Bessarabian frontier as established by the Soviet-Rumanian agreement of 8 June 1940, and that the disposition of Transylvania would depend on «confirmation at the time of the general peace settlement.» (OWI)

DEWEY CALLS FOR COMPLETE VICTORY

NEW YORK, October 19 — Governor Thomas Dewey, Republican presidential candidate, last night called for complete and absolute defeat and disarmament of Germany and Japan as a prerequisite for a post-war world freed of the threat of future wars.

The Dumbarton Oaks conference, Dewey declared, represents a good start toward full partnership of small as well as big nations in planning for future peace but, he warned, the building of a world organization for peace must not await final victory.

«A beginning has been made,» he declared. «It is imperative that the small nations of the world be brought into full partnership in this work... The treatment of small nations is the test of the conscience of civilization... No single nation can make itself impregnable to attack... We can and must have a world organization to prevent future wars. We must have two unities on which to build. One is unity of the United Nations. The other is the unity of the American people. With that unity, we can give leadership in bringing a lasting peace to a stricken world.»

Dewey proposed a post-war international organization to include a general assembly of all peace-loving nations of the world, and a council small enough for almost continuous meetings and prompt action.»

«This world organization must be enabled, through the use of force where necessary, to prevent or repel military aggression,» he said. «It must be supplemented by a World Court to deal with international disputes.»

Stating that an improvised administration had been set up in Italy, Dewey maintained that in the 15 months since Italy's surrender, not enough has been done to relieve the Italian people.

Post-war treatment of Germany may require the prohibition of an aircraft industry within the Reich, Dewey said. He advocated the internationalization of the Ruhr, and also demanded that the war criminals be brought to justice.

«The people of Germany and Japan must be taught, once and for all, that war does not pay,» he declared. (OWI)

The Germans suffered heavy losses totalling 150 dead without gaining full control of the highway artery. More fighting took place in Reggio Emilia Province, where the enemy reoccupied Minozzo and Villaminozzo.

On the border between Liguria and Tuscany, the Nazi-Fascists last week started mopping-up operations in the Mulazzo and Suvero sectors. As a result of the violent reaction of the Patriots, the enemy had to retire to Val di Magra, after having burned houses and killed civilians in reprisal. The Patriots have regained control of the situation in this sector.

The German offensive against the Patriots of the Carnia sector entered its third phase on October 13, when the enemy marched on Amperzo. Patriots with their tactics of movement are compelling the Germans to move from one sector to another with an expenditure of men and materials

SHAEF, October 19 — Today's communique:

In south Schelde, the Allies made progress westward to within 3,000 yards of Bresken.

We made good gains east of Schoondijke and southwards to Ijzendijke.

On the east side of the Dutch salient, we captured Venraij yesterday.

To the southwest, our forces are now two miles south of the Venraij-Deurne Road.

Gains were also made along the north side of the railway east of Düren.

Fighters and fighter-bombers supported our ground forces in Holland. Other fighter-bombers, striking at enemy supply routes to Holland, attacked railway targets north and west of the Ruhr.

Our units continuing the battle of Aachen are meeting stubborn resistance in house-to-house fighting. Fighters and fighter-bombers made concentrated attacks on buildings in the northwest section of the city, where the enemy forces are holding out. Just to the northwest of Aachen, our forces destroyed a large number of pillboxes, and made gains against strong opposition.

Units which closed the gap northeast of the city repulsed two counter-attacks by infantry and tanks.

Railway targets along the Düsseldorf-Düren-Aachen line and elsewhere on lines leading westward to Aachen were attacked by fighter-bombers. Small counter-attacks were repulsed.

We consolidated and improved our positions at several points in the Vosges foothills, where the enemy continued to oppose our advances stubbornly and made more vain counter-attacks. Two hundred enemy prisoners were taken in a series of successful local actions southeast of Cornimont.

A strong force of heavy bombers with fighter escort attacked industrial targets and railway yards in the Cologne-Kassel areas. Other escorted heavy bombers struck at the railway center of Bonn. (Reuter)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 19 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In Holland, east of Helmond, our troops smashed enemy attempts at breaking through which were made with extremely strong artillery forces and bomber support.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Southwest of Wurselen, in the bitter battle for Aix la Chapelle, our tank grenadiers frustrated enemy attacks and seized a certain number of pillboxes, which had been temporarily lost, from the Americans. Every house on the fringe of Aix la Chapelle was bitterly contested against the enemy, who attacked from the north, east, and south.

Fast German day and night bombers attacked enemy supply centers in this sector with good success.

In the Rotgen Forest, the positional warfare goes on. Northwest of Epinal, in the Bruyères sector, fierce fighting has been in progress for some days.

Southeast of Remiremont, counter-attacks by our troops ousted the enemy from his positions. Our artillery set an enemy fuel dump on fire.

Italy:

In central Italy, the attacks of the U. S. 5th Army grew in intensity during the day. Some minor penetrations were cleared up by determined German counter-attacks. An important height was recaptured.

At dusk, at the Bologna Road, the enemy achieved some minor penetrations. He suffered losses. In the Cesena sector, the strong British pressure continues.

Numerous bands were smashed in the course of mopping up operations in the Italian rear. We captured a large booty found in their camps.

Eastern Front:

In central Greece, the town of Theben was evacuated in the course of our withdrawal.

In Serbia there is fighting, particularly in the sectors east of Krajevo and Kragujevac, as well as southeast of Belgrade.

At Debrecen, our troops are engaged in grim fighting against the enemy, who advances in a northerly direction. German bomber squadrons destroyed more than 100 Soviet vehicles and numerous guns.

On the front of the forest Carpathians, west of the Verecker and Dukla passes, local fighting is in progress.

West of the Dukla pass, strong enemy attacks were repulsed.

On the borders of East Prussia, between Sudauen and Schirwindt, the battle goes on with growing intensity. Eydtkau was lost, but our gallant troops prevented the Soviets from breaking through.

Thus far, 250 enemy tanks were destroyed during the three-day battle.

In central Finland, our withdrawal in a northerly and northwesterly direction is being carried out according to plan.

Bolshevik attacks on the Arctic Sea road and north of it having failed, the enemy attacked again this morning. The fighting is in full swing.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers made an attack on Bonn and seriously hit the town area. The University, many cultural institutions, and 16 hospitals also fell victim to the bombs.

Further terror attacks were launched on Kassel and Cologne.

HITLER ORDERS CREATION OF «PEOPLES ARMY» UNDER GESTAPO CONTROL

Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief and leader of the German home forces, has been given the job of organizing the Volkssturm, in his capacity as commander-in-chief of the German Forces of the Interior.

The Hitler proclamation decreed that members of the People's Army would be soldiers under the army code; that they would not wear uniforms, but would wear identifying arm bands.

Later today the deputy chief of the Nazi press section Helmut Sundermann announced formation of the Volkssturm, and said all men «at home» would take up arms just as soon as the areas in which they live are threatened.

The statement instructed the German people to join the combatant forces, and explained that they would defend German soil in accordance with the Hague Convention regulations for land war. Sundermann likened the organization to the British Home Guard, to which he said it will «correspond roughly».

5TH ARMY BATTLES ON MONTE BELMONTE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 18 — American troops of the 5th Army, closely supported by fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, yesterday fought their way into the steep mountain face of 1250 foot-high Monte Belmonte, towering center position of the German defenses guarding the entrance into the Savena River Valley leading to Bologna and the Plain of the Po, it was announced here today.

Fierce fighting for control of the mountain height, only a mile and a half east of the Florence-Bologna Road and just 8½ miles south of Bologna's outskirts, continued yesterday, according to latest reports. German resistance was unrelenting, and several fierce counter-attacks were staged in enemy efforts to hold this dominating central height in the three-mile-long escarpment northeast of Livergnano, which the Germans have made into a fortress wall to halt the American drive toward the Po Plain.

Near Emilia Highway

On the right flank of the American advance toward Bologna and the Po Plain, other troops captured high ground to the north of the Sillaro River to approach within 6½ miles of the Emilia Highway, the main traffic link connecting the string of cities across the southern edge of the Po Valley. In this sector also, German forces fought back savagely, to hold the growing threat to this vital supply link, already under American artillery fire.

Along the Florence-Bologna Road, where German resistance has been vicious and determined, American troops yesterday were able to advance only 500 yards, to a point less than a mile north of Livergnano, captured Sunday after a four-day battle. But, considering the heavy enemy resistance and Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's evident intent of making an all-out stand south of Bologna, even so small a gain must be regarded as «encouraging,» official reports today stressed.

At the southeastern end of the Po Valley, 8th Army forces yesterday were closing in on Cesena, a city of more

LONDON, October 18 — Adolf Hitler revealed over Radio Berlin today that all German men between the ages of 16 and 60 are to be recruited into a Volkssturm — a «People's Army» — for final defense of the streets and the hedgerows of the Reich.

The Reichsführer's announcement was issued in a broadcast proclamation in which he told the German people — in effect — that every man capable of lifting his hands would be expected to fight against Allied invasion in an effort to force Russia, Great Britain, and The United States into an act of compromise with the Nazi warlords.

Hitler recalled that the German people were first mobilized on a large scale in the autumn of 1939, and declared:

«We are now resolved to carry out a second large-scale mobilization. We must, and we shall succeed, not only in breaking the enemy's determination to destroy us, but in driving the hostile forces back, and in keeping them clear of the Reich until a peace is guaranteed which safeguards the future of Germany and her allies — and thereby Europe».

This proclamation followed by less than 24 hours the Soviet Government's reiteration of the Red Army's unswerving determination that «German Fascism must be wiped off the face of the earth». This was broadcast over Radio Moscow, which added:

«The Hitlerite regime and its instigators must be exterminated».

The statement instructed the German people to join the combatant forces, and explained that they would defend German soil in accordance with the Hague Convention regulations for land war. Sundermann likened the organization to the British Home Guard, to which he said it will «correspond roughly».

At the southeastern end of the Po Valley, 8th Army forces yesterday were closing in on Cesena, a city of more than 22,000 inhabitants, from the east and from the south, and had expanded their hold on the eastern banks of the Pisciatello River to a four-mile front from the Emilia Highway northward to the village of Macerone.

of the Pisciatello River, whose canalized course the Germans have utilized as an anti-tank moat and defense line just a mile and a half from Cesena's outskirts. But other 8th Army troops, pushing up along the Savio River Valley from the south toward the ancient town, yesterday captured hilly ground within two miles of Cesena and west of the Pisciatello at its lower stretches. Eighth Army forces are also across the Savio River farther south, and yesterday they occupied the village of Tombetta and the nearby height of Monte di Vecchiano, overlooking the Borello River, a western tributary of the Savio, main stream in this area.

Slight gains along the Setta, Idice, and Sillaro River Valley routes into the Po Plain south of Bologna were reported by 5th Army forces, in addition to their main thrust northward toward the Savena Valley. American troops were nearing Monteramici, 12 miles southwest of Bologna and just east of the Setta River, in extremely heavy fighting, while other forces captured the village of Santa Anna, only two miles south of the important crossroads at Monte Armata, on the Idice River.

Still other American forces took the hamlet of Trepo and a hill feature, on opposite sides of the Sillaro River some 11 miles southeast of Bologna. (PRO)

RED ARMY BREAKS THROUGH CARPATHIANS

MOSCOW, October 18. — The Russians broke through the Carpathian ridges today, capturing seven mountain passes in advance from 12 to 30 miles into Czecho-Slovakia on a 170-mile front.

An order of the day by Marshal Stalin announced also the liberation of 14 towns and villages in Czecho-Slovakia and capture of the town of Sighet and 50 villages in northern Transylvania.

Russian troops have been battling through the Carpathians for weeks, finding strong German resistance in the wedge-like passes through the hills. Earlier Moscow dispatches revealed that strong Russian tank armies were bringing up the rear of the infantry push, waiting for a front on plains country from which to strike at German and Hungarian forces holding this eastern end of Slovakia.

The Soviet communique said that six major passes through the Carpathians are now firmly in Russian hands — giving the Red Army broad highways over which they can bring their tanks into battle.

This push over the mountains from southern Poland constitutes a northern attack on German-held territory now under assault by Russian armies coming up through northern Transylvania.

Strategically, it is closely associated with the drive on Budapest. This push for the Hungarian capital has been diverted for the moment into a drive on Debrecen, in eastern Hungary, a rail-junction city controlling the routes of escape for enemy forces now in danger of entrapment in Slovakia.

In northern Transylvania, Russian forces continued their advance through 50 small towns and villages, including several rail junctions.

Further gains were made on the Riga front also, where trapped German forces are delaying the opening of the full offensive against East Prussia.

Planes of the Red Air Force last night carried out a heavy raid on the East Prussian rail-junction city of Goldap, about eight miles from the East Prussian-Polish border. Several large fires were started in the rail yards. Several military trains were in the yards at the time.

Battle-line dispatches told of continued heavy street fighting in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade. Southwest of the city, Red Army units encircled what was described as a considerable number of important German units.

The German news agency, DNB, revealed today that another German general has died on the German eastern front. He was identified as Major General Count Bothlay

On the eastern flank of the Dutch salient, British 2nd Army troops with bayonets and grenades today cleared Venraij, junction of five main roads, and continued to advance south and southeast of the town. Three British forces linked up along the Deurne-Venraij Road and hold a firm line to the south.

The Germans are falling back in good order to the Meuse (Maas) River under heavy pressure but they have continued to shell the town. Both forces have suffered heavy casualties. Fighter-bombers are giving close support to ground troops despite heavy rain, and are attacking German gun positions. British troops have taken about 800 prisoners since the battle for Venraij began a week ago.

The armored ring around Aachen is tightening, and inside the city American troops are blasting open pillboxes and strongpoints as they advance toward its core. Some 3,500 German civilians have evacuated the city, but reports stated that about 10,000 still remain. House-to-house fighting continues, and troops are mopping up sections of the Siegfried Line.

The Germans threw in their first counter-attack in 30 hours early today when infantry, supported by a few tanks, assaulted Allied positions south of Wurselen. The counter-attack was not made on a large scale, and Allied infantry and artillery fire forced the Germans back.

East of Aachen, reinforced German troops are battling hard to break up Allied preparations for a drive on Cologne, the metropolis of the industrial Ruhr, which has been heavily bombed three times in four days.

American 3rd Army troops, in a 1,500-yard advance along the Moselle River in the southern sector of the Allied front, have reached a point four miles from Metz. On the western side of the river, heavy mobile guns have been brought up, including 240-millimeter howitzers, to bombard the fortresses guarding the city, which have so far withstood all attacks.

American 7th Army troops in the Vosges foothills near Belfort have made a substantial advance south of the road junction of Bruyères and northeast of Le Thillot. The advance was made despite stubborn German resistance and strong counter-attacks.

It was officially announced today that 610,541 prisoners have been taken since D-Day, representing an increase of nearly 4,000 since the total of 606,666 was announced yesterday. (OWI-Reuter)

MANILA RAIDED; 7 CAROLINES ISLANDS CAPTURED

WASHINGTON, October 18 — The air assault on the Philippines continued today when 30 carrier-based planes struck at Manila, the capital of the islands. The planes raided the city this morning in three waves, while other aircraft attacked Clark Airfield and Legaspi, about 200 miles from Manila.

A few hours earlier, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal told a press conference that recent operations against the Philippines, Formosa, Palau, the Ryukyus, and the Marianas were the opening moves in an unremitting pressure that would be applied against Japan.

"No one of these operations is in itself an overwhelming victory," he said, "but the steady accumulation of these blows is steadily and relentlessly crowding back the Japanese into their own corner."

Further evidence of the intensive drive to chase the Japanese back into their "own corner" was contained last night in a communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz, which revealed that on September 20 and 21 American Army troops occupied Ulithi Atoll and six neighboring islands in the western Carolines, to put American forces within easy striking power of Yap, a Japanese stronghold 100 miles from the Ulithi Group and 1,150 miles from Manila.

The Ulithi Atoll and six neighbor islands were captured

CANADIANS MAKE SLIGHT GAINS; FRONT STATIC

SHAEF, October 18 — Canadian 1st Army troops today continued to contract the German pocket south of the Scheldt in an effort to free the approaches to the intact harbor of Antwerp, which would shorten the main Allied supply lines by 500 miles. There has been a decrease in German resistance on the eastern edge of the pocket, but to the north, fairly heavy fighting is going on in the Hoofdplaat area.

After capturing the town of Ijzendijke, Canadian troops resumed their advance and forward elements are now less than six miles from Breskens, terminal of the Flushing ferry and main German port of escape. Press reports stated that the Germans are demolishing the Breskens port facilities.

At the neck of the Beveland Peninsula, Canadian troops firmly hold the town of Woensdrecht, dominating the escape corridor leading out of Walcheren and Beveland Islands, north of the Scheldt. The Germans have repeatedly counter-attacked with tanks from the direction of Bergen op Zoom and have suffered severe casualties.

and artillery fire forced the Germans back.

East of Aachen, reinforced German troops are battling hard to break up Allied preparations for a drive on Cologne, the metropolis of the industrial Ruhr, which has been heavily bombed three times in four days.

American 3rd Army troops, in a 1,500-yard advance along the Moselle River in the southern sector of the Allied front, have reached a point four miles from Metz. On the western side of the river, heavy mobile guns have been brought up, including 240-millimeter howitzers, to bombard the fortresses guarding the city, which have so far withstood all attacks.

American 7th Army troops in the Vosges foothills near Belfort have made a substantial advance south of the road junction of Bruyères and northeast of Le Thillot. The advance was made despite stubborn German resistance and strong counter-attacks.

It was officially announced today that 610,541 prisoners have been taken since D-Day, representing an increase of nearly 4,000 since the total of 606,680 was announced yesterday.

MANILA RAIDED; 7 CAROLINES ISLANDS CAPTURED

WASHINGTON, October 18 — The air assault on the Philippines continued today when 80 carrier-based planes struck at Manila, the capital of the islands. The planes raided the city this morning in three waves, while other aircraft attacked Clark Airfield and Legaspi, about 260 miles from Manila.

A few hours earlier, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal told a press conference that recent operations against the Philippines, Formosa, Palau, the Ryukyus, and the Marianas were the opening moves in an unremitting pressure that would be applied against Japan.

«No one of these operations is in itself an overwhelming victory,» he said, «but the steady accumulation of those blows is steadily and relentlessly crowding back the Japanese into their own corner.»

Further evidence of the intensive drive to chase the Japanese back into their «own corner» was contained last night in a communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz, which revealed that on September 20 and 21 American Army troops occupied Ulithi Atoll and six neighboring islands in the western Carolines, to put American forces within easy striking power of Yap, a Japanese stronghold 100 miles from the Ulithy Group and 1,150 miles from Manila.

The Ulithi Atoll and six neighbor islands were captured in an amphibious operation in which not a shot was fired. A small Japanese garrison had fled several weeks ago.

The communique also disclosed that heavy bombers since Saturday have attacked the Pagan Island in the Marianas, Wake Island, the Eten Islands in the Truk Atoll, and Haha Jima, in the Bonin Islands.

New Assessment of Damage

Accounts today of the damage inflicted in the Superfortress attack on Formosa on October 14, and of the coordinated mission against Japanese shipping at Hong Kong on October 16, revealed that the enemy received heavier blows than at first reported.

A communique tonight from Pearl Harbor said that 37 ships and 68 small craft were sunk or damaged in the raid on Formosa, in addition to those previously announced. A supplementary 14th USAAF communique today from Chungking showed that eight enemy ships totaling more than 40,000 tons were sunk, seven ships totaling more than 23,000 tons were damaged, and five probably were damaged. In addition, bombers sank two ships, destroyed five vessels, and damaged six ships.

The heavy toll of Japanese shipping has been inflicted not only by aircraft and sea power, but also by American submarines, Secretary Forrestal said at his conference.

He disclosed that in the latest action, American submarines destroyed 32 Japanese vessels, including seven warships, one of the most successful submarine operations reported by the Navy Department since 7 December 1941. The total of Japanese shipping casualties, by submarine action, now exceeds 804.

Forrestal also announced that the U.S. 3d and 5th Fleets in the Pacific since June have sunk or damaged 995 Japanese ships, while planes and flak weapons of the two fleets shot down 1,827 planes and destroyed 1,253 planes on the ground in the last 4½ months.

Another blow to the Japanese Navy was reported by the German radio today quoting a Tokyo dispatch that three more Japanese admirals have died. The broadcast said two «died in battle», and the other «died of illness at the front.»

Allied artillery has shelled Japanese positions near Buthidaung on the Arakan front in Burma for the second consecutive day. An ammunition dump was among targets hit. Despite bad weather, aircraft of the Eastern Air Command successfully attacked enemy concentrations in the same region. (OWI-Reuter)

HIMMLER MAKES RECRUITING SPEECH

LONDON, October 18 — Heinrich Himmler, newly appointed Commander-in-Chief of the German Forces of the Interior, broadcast a speech delivered before a mass meeting in East Prussia today, in which he pleaded for German resistance until the Allied armies become tired and give the order to cease fire.

Himmler's radio address — his first nation-wide broadcast since 1937 — was made immediately after Hitler's proclamation had announced the formation of the Volkssturm today.

Himmler, who is probably the number-two man on the Allied list of war criminals, pleaded with the German people to take up scythes and pitchforks — in emulation of the forces which contributed to the German victory over Napoleon at Leipzig in 1813.

The Gestapo chief painted pictures for his radio audience. He foresaw men and boys, women and girls, fighting for every farmstead in the countryside, every tenement house in the cities, as Allied armies advanced through rivers of blood.

He told his prospective recruits that their service in the line was necessary to give the Wehrmacht time to organize its «oncoming offensive» and its rearmament program.

«Every house, every ditch, every bush, every tree,» said Himmler, «will have to be defended by our men, our lads, and our aged people, and, if necessity arises — by our women.

«Hard trials are ahead in the weeks and months to come. But we shall go on fighting until our enemies realize the invincibility of the German people, and give the sign: 'Cease fire.'» (Reuter)

NAZI HOME GUARD FORMED TOO LATE

LONDON, October 18 — Reuter dispatches reflecting military opinion here in London said today that Hitler has left formation of his home guard until too late.

The dispatch pointed out that street-fighting tactics of a home defense army require long training, and said that, unless the Germans are able to hold off Allied advances into the heart of the Reich for another full year, the Himmler forces of the interior «are likely to remain ineffectual — and not at all comparable to the highly-trained British Home Guard».

General Eisenhower has intended that severe but just treatment shall be meted out to the German people, and a fair and equitable control will be set up during the rough-and-tumble period preceding the cessation of hostilities.

The Allied governments will establish machinery designed to solve long-range economic, social, industrial, and political problems in conquered Germany. A vast organization of trained British and Americans has been set up. The plans will also be enforced by the French.

The lives and well-being of all foreigners in Germany will be protected. German laws discriminating against race, religion, and political opinion will be abrogated. ENEMY BATTLES IN «DESPERATION»

NEW YORK, October 18 — «We are opposed by an enemy battling with utter desperation. There will be bitter fighting ahead.»

These words were contained in a message cabled yesterday by General Dwight Eisenhower to the Herald Tribune Forum on Current Affairs.

The message added, in part:

«I assure you that the American and British fighting forces are a strong unity tempered and hardened by the ordeal of sacrifice, combat, and victory. Your own American soldiers, sailors, and airmen are seasoned, tough, and resolute fighters. They can be counted on in any crisis. They will not fail you.» (OWI)

HUNGARIAN, CZECHO-SLOVAK AIRFIELDS RAIDED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 18 — Fast Mosquito bombers of the Royal Air Force struck at dawn yesterday at German airfields and other objectives in Hungary and central and eastern Czecho-Slovakia, in deep intruder attacks helping to snuff out the rekindled German interceptor activity around central European targets, it was announced here today.

At least three enemy planes were destroyed, two in the air, and several others were severely damaged in the low-level strafing attacks.

Planes escorting heavy bombers of the 15th AAF met scores of German fighters on Monday — larger numbers than have been encountered at any time in the past month. (PRO)

S.H.A.E.F. PLANS FOR GERMANY COMPLETED

SHAEF, October 18 — Allied plans to govern Germany until organized resistance ceases have been completed and already enforced in German towns now in Allied hands.

A SHAEF spokesman said tonight that the plans provide the death penalty for any German who carries on partisan warfare against the Allies, or who makes any effort to interfere with the progress of the Allied armies in Germany.

Announcing the plans, Brig. Gen. Julius C. Holmes, deputy chief of the U.S. Army's Civil Affairs Division at SHAEF, emphasized that there will be a German surrender, and no armistice. Drastic steps will be taken to obliterate the Nazi Party and to prevent its emerging again. Its records, property, and funds will be seized, and Nazis will not be allowed to work with the Allied administration except in exceptional cases.

ATHENS LANDINGS CONTINUE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 18 — British troops are continuing to pour into the Athens area from sea and by parachute, a special communique issued by Land Forces Greece, under command of Lt. Gen. Richard Scobie, stated today.

The communique, first to be issued independently by the British Forces which have been sent in to aid in the policing and restauration of Greece subsequent to the German evacuation of the peninsula, stated that many of the public services of Athens are now functioning satisfactorily, due, in part, to effective counter-sabotage measures by Greek Patriot forces.

The dock areas of Piraeus, harbor section of Athens, have been severely damaged by German demolitions, the communique said. Supplies, stores, and troops are, nonetheless, being disembarked according to plan, the communique declared.

A naval announcement today reported that the British destroyers HMS Terpsichore and Cleveland had landed naval shore forces yesterday on the Dodecanese Island of Scarpanto, across the straits of the same name from the Isle of Rhodes. The Greek population of the island, roughly 200 square miles, and long and narrow, was already in control of the small German garrison.

The naval announcement said that the island, «ex-enemy territory,» was taken over «in the name of the United Nations,» and that the populace had given the unopposed landing party a hearty welcome. Scarpanto, like the other Dodecanese Islands, has been Italian territory since the Turco-Italian war of 1911.

Previous communiques relating to operations in Greece have been made by the Balkan Air Force, which was the coordinating unit of the combined land, sea, and air forces which carried out the original landings on the Peloponnese late in September. The issuance of today's reports by the Land Forces Greece evidently indicates a transition to predominantly ground force operations in the area.

MILITARY LIAISON ORGANIZATION TO AID GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 18 — A military liaison headquarters, under command of British Major General I. T. Hughes, has been established in Athens to organize delivery of food, stores, and drugs for distribution by Greek authorities, it was announced here today.

The organization, begun over a year ago by General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, comprises both British and American personnel. It will distribute, through existing Greek governmental and local authorities, supplies, seed, agricultural implements, motor transport, post and telegraph equipment, fishing gear, and other necessary items to restore the Greek economy, as well as temporary relief commodities such as food, medicinals, and clothing. Stockpiles have been built up, insofar as shipping space and other European demands have allowed, of medicines for six months and food until Christmas.

As part of its preparations for its formidable task, the organization carried out practice landings at Tripoli, in which the procedure now being followed in Greece was tried out.

Although Military Liaison Headquarters, Greece, is a Military organization, functioning under Allied Force Headquarters, it incorporates both civilian volunteer organizations such as the American Red Cross, the Friends' Committee, and other charitable organizations, and UNRRA, which in time is expected to take over the main task of supplying Greece when the immediate emergency is past. The Swedish and Swiss Red Cross, which have performed invaluable work in Greece during the years of German occupation, will also continue their help under the new organizations.

Meeting Emergency Needs

A spokesman for the organization stated that, although available supplies were not as large as had been hoped, and that much of the arrangements for bringing in more materials had been upset by demands of northwestern France and Italy and other liberated countries, Military Liaison Headquarters expects to be able to provide for most of Greece's emergency requirements.

Famine, the spokesman said, was not rife in Greece, despite exaggerated reports to that effect. Clothing was scarce, he declared, and at the moment this need could not be met, except to about 10 per cent of requirements, because of shortage of materials.

The Military Liaison headquarters spokesman, one of the highest-placed officials in the organization, also said that German atrocities, though widespread in the mountain communities of the peninsula, had not seriously affected the great mass of the Greek population. Athens, with its population swollen to an estimated million and a half, and Salonika, with an equally expanded population, represented the principal relief problems.

LONDON, October 18 — King George of Great Britain, in a message to King George of the Hellenes expressed his joy at learning that, after 3½ years of enemy rule, German tyranny had been broken and Athens had regained her freedom.

«During these dark years of oppression and suffering,» said the King, «the people of Athens, in common with all Greeks, never lost faith in victory, and have given a shining example of courage and steadfastness.

«I trust that the early liberation of all Greece will bring relief to the tribulations of the Greek people, and that after the final defeat of all our enemies, Greece will enjoy peace and prosperity, which her people's valour has so well deserved.»

STATUS OF DODECANESE IN ABEYANCE

LONDON, October 18 — The post-war status of the Dodecanese Islands cannot be decided at present, but the islands' inhabitants will be treated as friends, Richard Law, British Minister of State, said in the House of Commons today, according to BBC.

Replying to a question by a member of Commons, Mr. Law also said that there is no question of maintaining or reimposing Italian administration in the interim period before the future of the islands has been decided.

Referring to inhabitants of the islands, he said: «I can certainly give the assurance that after liberation and until the settlement is reached, they will be treated not as ex-enemies, but as friends.»

HEAVIES ATTACK COLOGNE, KASSEL, BONN

LONDON, October 18 — Allied heavy bombers today made a three-pronged air assault on German rail and supply centers behind the west front. They bombed Cologne, Kassel, and Bonn after the Reich had had its second raid-free night in a month.

For Cologne it was the seventh attack in seven days. A fleet of 550 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 450 Mustangs and Thunderbolts, concentrated on this Rhine city's industrial targets and freight yards, where 1,300 bombers had dropped 3,000 tons of bombs only 24 hours earlier.

Both Cologne and Kassel were bombed through instruments, on account of cloud over the targets.

LONDON, October 18 — Allied heavy bombers today made a three-pronged air assault on German rail and supply centers behind the west front. They bombed Cologne, Kassel, and Bonn after the Reich had had its second raid-free night in a month.

For Cologne it was the seventh attack in seven days. A fleet of 550 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 450 Mustangs and Thunderbolts, concentrated on this Rhine city's industrial targets and freight yards, where 1,300 bombers had dropped 8,000 tons of bombs only 24 hours earlier.

Both Cologne and Kassel were bombed through instruments, on account of cloud over the targets.

The attack on Bonn, 20 miles south of Cologne, was carried out by fighter-escorted RAF Lancasters.

Reconnaissance photographs taken after last Saturday's attack showed four large marshalling yards and the Cologne-Mulheim railway station damaged, in addition to a number of hits on the Imbert Plant, manufacturing producer-gas units for German transport, and on the Klockner-Humbolt Deutz motor transport and engine plant.

Meanwhile, 9th USAAF aircraft attacked without loss the Euskirchen railway bridge, about 32 miles southeast of Aachen — an important link in enemy communications behind the Siegfried Line.

Spitfires of the 2nd TAF, operating between Dusseldorf and the German Army in Holland, cut railway supply lines in nine places yesterday. Allied pilots, including Norwegian airmen, hit communication targets at Kempen, Venlo, Neuss, and Munchen-Gladbach, east of Dusseldorf, with 500-pound bombs.

Other aircraft bombed and strafed road and rail transport, strongpoints, and petrol dumps in the Breskens pocket. Rocket-firing Typhoons hit farm buildings used as an enemy headquarters near Sluis.

Six German aircraft were destroyed by Allied aircraft on patrol off Denmark this afternoon, while yesterday RAF

Mosquitoes set fire to an armed enemy trawler off the Norwegian coast.

Flying bombs again were launched against the east coast of England last night for the seventh consecutive night. There were big explosions along the shores and over the London areas as ack-ack gunners raked the path of the bombs and blew up a number of them in flight.

The benefits to Allied air striking power which have resulted from the Allied land advance to the borders of Germany were outlined by a BBC commentator today.

Western Europe has been virtually cleared of bombing targets, he said. Allied bomb loads can now be dropped almost entirely on Germany. This has more than doubled the capacity of Allied heavy bomber forces in one month alone.

In addition, enormous numbers of medium and light bombers, fighter-bombers, and rocket fighters of the British 2nd TAF and the 9th USAAF are assembled on the fringes of the Reich and are striking with great power at its western provinces.

Moreover, the commentator said, bombing tactics have so improved this summer that comparatively small forces numerically have been able to do as much damage as much larger forces a year ago.

Another improvement, he added, is that Germany has lost much of the territory from which her advance warning system worked, so that Allied planes now load straight into unprepared defenses, since their approach is now over friendly territory.

This, in turn, has reduced the casualties to about a quarter of the rate suffered in the past.

At the same time, the commentator pointed out, strategical and tactical aims are blending, so that one bombing attack can now do two jobs. Bombers can strike blows at Germany's long-term war potential, while at the same time striking in tactical support of the Allied armies on the Reich border. Of such a kind was the attack on Duisburg recently — the climax of the war in heavy bombing so far. (OWI-Reuter-MOI)

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUING IN AACHEN

WITH U. S. IST ARMY, October 18 — American infantry troops are continuing to clear the city of Aachen in difficult house-to-house fighting, Drew Middleton said in a dispatch to The New York Times. His dispatch stated:

«With the strengthening of American lines east of Aachen and the failure of the first phase of the German counter offensive to relieve the garrison, this shell of a city has once more become a most active sector.

«American infantry is pouring into the city. There is no such thing as light resistance in Aachen. Every position has to be taken by assault. German prisoners are being taken, but they are taken with a foot of steel against their bellies or when a hand grenade is about to be tossed at them.

«As the American soldiers move through the streets ducking from doorway to doorway to escape snipers, they poke their rifles through holes blown in walls by bombs and shells and play a nightmarish game of hide and seek with German snipers. If the Germans are holding out in a civilian air raid shelter, an American self-propelled gun will rumble up to blast the garrison out with short-range fire.

«But the usual end comes after a few minutes of silence. An American voice shouts 'Let's go!' and soldiers dash forward with grenades and bayonets. A few minutes later, some grimy, dirty, unkempt German soldiers emerge. About 150 of them have been brought out by this method.» (OWI)

The Gestapo-controlled Radio Budapest appealed to members of the Hungarian armed forces to return immediately to their barracks or their homes. Later, a musical program broadcast was interrupted by a Hungarian Partisan, who stated: «Hungarians, Partisans! You are in the hands of traitors. Don't despair — we are only 55 miles away.» The broadcast was then jammed and the program was inaudible.

Continued street fighting in Budapest, and Hungarian resistance to curfew restrictions, have forced the Minister of Home Affairs to modify the newly-established regulations by extending the curfew to 2200 hours.

The situation in Hungary is serious, the newly appointed Minister of Agriculture, Count Palffy, said over Radio Budapest. «Lightning and earthquakes are shaking Hungarian life,» he said. «It is not our neighbor's house that is ablaze, but our own.»

The new Foreign Minister of the Fascist Arrow Cross regime proclaimed that the party intended to carry on the fight at the side of Germany. He paid abject tribute to Hitler, to the Japanese rulers, and to Hitler's puppets in northern Italy.

The German news agency announced that Arrow Cross members have been put in charge of the Hungarian National Bank, and that the Arrow Cross Party was exempted from the earlier ban on party activity. Confiscated property of its members has been returned, said another German broadcast.

The Hungarian Legation in Copenhagen, the Finnish radio stated, supports the regime of Admiral Horthy, and approves his request for armistice terms. (OWI)

On the other hand, General Jodl, who was injured in the attempt on Hitler's life, has always been a political general. (OWI)

AMERICAN PLEA FOR INCREASED AID TO ITALY

NEW YORK, October 18 — An alarming picture of food, health, and mortality conditions in Italy was painted yesterday by Justice Juvenal Marchisio, President of American Relief for Italy.

He declared that American relief to Italy was inadequate, and urged greater assistance.

«Italy,» he said, «offers a challenge to the intelligent men and women of America. Reduced to poverty and in many cases famine, the population is in a state of helpless confusion.»

Marchisio said the entire test of democracy was involved in the manner in which the first liberated territory in larger forces a year ago.

Another improvement, he added, is that Germany has lost much of the territory from which her advance warning system worked, so that Allied planes now lead straight into unprepared defenses, since their approach is now over friendly territory.

This, in turn, has reduced the casualties to about a quarter of the rate suffered in the past.

At the same time, the commentator pointed out, strategical and tactical aims are blending, so that one bombing attack can now do two jobs. Bombers can strike blows at Germany's long-term war potential, while at the same time striking in tactical support of the Allied armies on the Reich border. Of such a kind was the attack on Duisburg recently — the climax of the war in heavy bombing so far. (OWI-Reuter-MOI)

HEAVY FIGHTING CONTINUING IN AACHEN

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, October 18 — American infantry troops are continuing to clear the city of Aachen in difficult house-to-house fighting, Drew Middleton said in a dispatch to The New York Times. His dispatch stated:

« With the strengthening of American lines east of Aachen and the failure of the first phase of the German counter offensive to relieve the garrison, this shell of a city has once more become a most active sector.

« American infantry is pouring into the city. There is no such thing as light resistance in Aachen. Every position has to be taken by assault. German prisoners are being taken, but they are taken with a foot of steel against their bellies or when a hand grenade is about to be tossed at them.

« As the American soldiers move through the streets ducking from doorway to doorway to escape snipers, they poke their rifles through holes blown in walls by bombs and shells and play a nightmarish game of hide and seek with German snipers. If the Germans are holding out in a civilian air raid shelter, an American self-propelled gun will rumble up to blast the garrison out with short-range fire.

« But the usual end comes after a few minutes of silence. An American voice shouts 'Let's go!' and soldiers dash forward with grenades and bayonets. A few minutes later, some grimy, dirty, unkempt German soldiers emerge. About 150 of them have been brought out by this method. » (OWI)

EUROPE FEDERATION FOR PEACE, AUTHOR SAYS

ROME, October 18 — The key to world peace is the federation of European nations, Ignazio Silone, anti-Fascist author who lived in exile for 15 years, told a UNN correspondent today.

Silone said certain of the sovereign rights of the states must be given up in order to form the federal union, but that the union must not encroach upon the right of each member to solve its own problems.

Security will be in permanent danger, he said, if the states do not cede to the federation the defense of their territory, their diplomatic relations with other continents, and international communications.

In regard to the problem of Germany, Silone declared that German chemical and heavy industries must be taken out of the hands of capitalistic monopolies and out of the control of the military caste. The centralized state, he asserted, must be destroyed, otherwise, the education of German youth toward peace will be futile.

Failure to punish war criminals, he concluded, would be both an insult to the war dead and a threat to the future. (UNN)

ARCHBISHOP COMMEMORATES ALLIED DEAD

VATICAN CITY, October 18 — At a requiem mass for war dead held recently in Santa Maria del Fiore and reported today by the Vatican Press Service, Cardinal Della Costa, Archbishop of Florence, asked his congregation to pray particularly for the Allied fallen, and called for Italian unity to complete the salvation of Italy which the Allies began.

«The Allies,» said the Archbishop, «delivered us from an oppressive, torturing, and unbearable yoke.» Italians, he added, must be united and abandon party strife, in order that Italy shall not again fall into the chaos from which she was rescued by the powerful hand of the Allies. (UNN)

T. U. CONGRESS INDICTS GERMAN PEOPLE

BLACKPOOL, ENGLAND, October 18 — The Anglo-Soviet Trades Unions Congress decided today, by a decisive majority vote, that the German people must share responsibility for the crimes of the Nazis, a Reuter dispatch said.

Sir Walter Citrine, General Secretary of the Congress, said that at the very least, the German people have been «acquiescent,» and that German troops have been active «accessories.» He added that it would be a generation before Russia resumed the place she occupied at the outbreak of the war.

Russian and British speakers joined in opposing any «appeasement» policy, and a fraternal delegate from the Russian Trade Unions said the German invaders must be forced to replace everything they destroyed. (Reuter)

INCREASED FRENCH CIVIL CONTROL

NEW YORK, October 18 — General Eisenhower has agreed to relinquish a larger measure of control over civil affairs in France to General Charles de Gaulle's de facto authority, a Washington dispatch to The New York Times said today. The agreement, it added, was conditioned upon a pledge of full cooperation in the war against Germany.

Heretofore, the French authority has had control of civil affairs in Normandy and certain other liberated areas, but subject to the over-all powers of General Eisenhower. Now, for the first time, the dispatch said, an agreement has been reached for the Allied commander-in-chief to step aside and permit the control to be exercised in full by General de Gaulle. (GWI)

FRENCH ARMY-F.F.I. MERGER FORESHADOWED

NEW YORK, October 18 — The French Army of the future will be composed of FFI units, trained French soldiers from outside France, and the regular French Army, and a gradual synthesis will result which will be important both psychologically and militarily, recently declared Rene Payot, editor of the Journal de Geneve.

Already more than 50,000 members of the FFI have joined the French Army, and more than 10,000 are already in the front lines, he said, after visiting French military headquarters.

A dispatch from Paris to The New York Times reported last night that an agreement had been reached between the French Minister of War and the Committee of Military Action (which heads the French Forces of the Interior), concerning the amalgamation of the FFI and the regular Army.

The Committee and the National Council of Resistance announced last night that they had informed FFI units of the agreement, but the Government has not yet announced it.

The Committee says it will act as an «Army Committee» in the War Ministry, and will be consulted on all important questions, besides being represented in all departments of the General Staff.

French Government circles express the hope that an early recognition of the de Gaulle Government by the Allies will strengthen its hand inside France.

It is pointed out that de Gaulle enjoys great prestige in France, and has a vast majority behind him, but he lacks the aid of local political leaders, who have been sidetracked by the FFI and other new groups which took charge during the uprising against the Germans.

The FFI problem, which is basically a conflict between the regular Army and the Communist-influenced committee representing the FFI, is probably the main problem for General de Gaulle's authority. (OWI)

BRITISH PRISONERS KILLED IN GERMAN CAMPS

LONDON, October 18 — A number of British prisoners of war have been killed in Allied air raids on the continent, Minister of State Richard Law said today replying to a question in the House of Commons.

«Some German prisoner-of-war camps have been or are situated near legitimate military targets, in contravention of Article 9 of the Geneva Convention,» the Minister continued. «The British Government made strong representations to Germany, but in several cases the German authorities have not complied with these demands.»

Law added that there was no evidence to show that casualties in prisoner-of-war camps said to be due to bombing were, in fact, executions. (Reuter)

KOCH KILLED BY PATRIOT'S MACHINE-GUN FIRE

ROME, October 18 — Pietro Koch, ill-famed Italian torturer, was killed with three other Fascist agents by machine-gun fire in mid-July, while speeding through Turin by car on his way to Milan, a United Nations News Service correspondent reported today in giving the first full details of Koch's death.

A day before Koch made his last ride, a Patriot leader in Turin obtained information that included the type, color, and number of the car, the hour it would leave, and the route chosen — the Autostrada. On the road between Turin and Chivasso, he had organized an observation post and an ambush for the attack. Early the next morning, the car carrying Koch and three compatriots was barraged by hand grenades and machine-gun fire. All four occupants were killed instantly.

Born in Benevento in 1915, Koch was a former resident of Florence. During the Nazi domination of Rome he was at the disposal of the German SS. He set up his premises first in the «Oltremare» boarding house, then in the «Jaccarino» boarding house — both of which became notorious.

His cooperation with the German SS was so effective that their treacherous commander, Colonel Kappler, considered him as his best aide. Koch was paid enormous wages for his tortures of anti-Fascists.

Koch had a big part in the massacre of «Fosse Ardeatine», giving Kappler the names of several innocent people murdered on that occasion. He often boasted of having killed, with his own hands, several hundred anti-Fascists. (UNN)

Attacks are being launched against Patriot positions, in order to reopen traffic through the Monte Crove Carnico and Sappada passes. On October 12, after four days of fighting, the Germans occupied Highway 52 from Tolmezzo to Timau, in Udine Province. Advancing from Tolmezzo toward the north and from Pontebba to Paularo, they succeeded in regaining possession of the localities held by the Garibaldi Brigades. But in spite of the large deployment of forces, the use of armor and the heavy losses sustained, the enemy did not succeed in reaching his preestablished positions.

Patriots of the Veneto sector, besides maintaining their positions firmly, continue their attacks without respite.

In the Emilia region, two railway bridges were blown up and four trains were attacked along the Parma-Spezia and Parma-Piacenza lines.

Twelve German motor columns and 25 isolated vehicles were damaged or dispersed on the road leading to Cisa Pass.

In the battle of Aix la Chapelle, superior Anglo-American infantry and tank forces succeeded in two weeks of bloody fighting in closing the ring southwest of Aix la Chapelle and approaching to the borders of the town from a southeasterly direction. East of Epinal, and southeast of Remiremont, intensified American attacks did not achieve particular successes.

Yesterday, London was again harassed by «V-1».

Italy:

South of Bologna, yesterday, our troops also repelled extremely heavy attacks which the enemy, in some sectors, resumed up to nine times, despite heavy losses.

In the Cesena sector, the enemy also attacked our positions unsuccessfully.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, west of Kosovac, German counter-attacks make good progress.

The interior of Belgrade, which is being cleared of bands and Bolsheviks, is quiet.

South and southeast of Debrecen, strong Bolshevik attacks were repulsed in fierce fighting, with German bombers joining in the battle.

Between Trestenburg and the southern part of the Forest Carpathians, our troops, according to orders received, withdrew in a northwesterly direction to shorten the front. In the Cziroka Valley and in the Dukla Pass, all Bolshevik attacks launched with strengthened forces failed.

In the central sector of the eastern front, yesterday, the Soviets, after some unsuccessful attempts at breaking through, made only minor attacks at Rozan.

On the frontiers of East Prussia, the enemy, having extended his attack from the Kalvarja-Schirwindt front southward, continued his major attack with strong tank and bomber formations. He was halted in fierce fighting, and 41 tanks were destroyed. Wirballen was captured by the enemy after a stubborn defense.

In Kurland, at yesterday's points of penetration, the Bolsheviks were repulsed by counter-attacks of our tanks. Twenty-nine enemy tanks were destroyed, bringing the total enemy losses in the period from October 1 to October 16, in the Baltic sector, to 558 tanks.

In central Finland, our troops, although hampered by the bad conditions of the roads, reached their daily objectives with the Finns continually pressing on their heels.

On the Arctic Front, our mountain troops frustrated large-scale Bolshevik encircling attempts in grim fighting.

In the course of the last two days, the Soviets lost 180 planes, 156 of them in dogfights, the others by the action of anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force, patrol vessels, and anti-aircraft guns of the Navy.

USAAF terror flyers attacked Cologne, Vienna, and upper Silesian territory. Anti-aircraft guns of the Air Force brought down 34 planes, for the most part four-engined bombers.

FORMOSA BATTERED; JAP CRUISER BLOWN UP

CHUNGKING, October 17 — Bombers of the 14th USAAF joined in the continued, widespread attacks on the Formosa area yesterday with a heavy raid on Japanese shipping which had sought refuge in Hong Kong harbor.

As a result of the raids on Formosa, continued today with still another assault by 11-29 Superfortresses, Radio Tokyo warned ships in the South China Sea to speed for the shelter of the one-time British Crown Colony.

American bombers early yesterday caught a convoy in the war's one 5,000-ton Japanese cruiser was blown up, west end of Formosa contains the island's most concentrated industrial developments. Takao, according to last available reports, was being improved as a large navy and seaplane base. Its harbor is a convoy assembly point.

Admiral Chester Nimitz, on a statement released from Pacific Fleet headquarters today, said that his task force groups operating off Formosa have been under day and night attack by Japanese aircraft since Friday.

The Nimitz statement said also that Japanese Fleet units have approached the Formosa attacking forces, but that they fled when American warcraft steamed off to intercept them.

In a special broadcast from Pearl Harbor last night, Admiral Nimitz said American forces in the Pacific have destroyed an average of 100 Japanese planes and 10 ships each day since October 9.

"These results would have been much greater, except for the scarcity of profitable targets," Nimitz said. The total score of the American forces since October 9 reaches 73 Japanese ships sunk and 670 planes destroyed.

Attack on Luzon Continuing

Shortly after the admiral's broadcast, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced that carrier-based planes of the U. S. 3rd Fleet, in the second attack in three days, swept across Luzon to bomb airfields in the Manila Bay area. A communique this morning said the attack was continuing.

Today's communique revealed also that the three days' air attacks on Formosa centered on the towns of Taihan, Takao, Okayama, and Heito. These towns, scattered over all of Formosa, indicate the comprehensive nature of the assault.

Thirty warehouses were destroyed at Takao, the communique said. Fourteen buildings were wrecked at Heito, and at Taihan seven hangars were destroyed and several barracks demolished.

Reconnaissance photos of damage resulting from Saturday's Superfortress attack on Formosa revealed that at least 50 Japanese aircraft were destroyed on the ground and 37 buildings wrecked.

A large group of carrier aircraft which attacked Manila Bay Sunday was intercepted by 50 Japanese aircraft, of which 30 to 40 were shot down. Another 15 to 20 were destroyed on the ground at Nichols, Nielsen, and Mariveles airfields in the bay area.

Admiral Nimitz also revealed that minor damage has been suffered by surface units of his attacking task forces.

The Japanese radio said tonight that other aircraft of the 14th USAAF carried out strong attacks on the Canton port area of China today. The airfields around Canton have repeatedly been targets for General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing.

The Chinese communique reported that General Chennault's airmen were extremely active during the past week over all the Japanese-held areas of the old Burma Road. Almost every Japanese-occupied town on the old supply route is said to have been hit, with resultant large fires.

CHUNGKING, October 17 — Bombers of the 14th USAAF joined in the continued, widespread attacks on the Formosa area yesterday with a heavy raid on Japanese shipping which had sought refuge in Hong Kong harbor.

As a result of the raids on Formosa, continued today with still another assault by B-29 Superfortresses, Radio Tokyo warned ships in the South China Sea to speed for the shelter of the one-time British Crown Colony.

American bombers early yesterday caught a convoy on the way in. One 5,000-ton Japanese cruiser was blown up, and a Japanese destroyer probably was sent to the bottom.

In addition, in Hong Kong harbor itself, 14th USAAF bombers sank two oil tankers, three freighters, and one other large cargo vessel, an estimated total displacement of 48,000 tons.

Hong Kong's Kowloon docks were also heavily damaged by close bombing. Large fires and secondary explosions were observed. The cruiser and the destroyer were targets of a single B-24 Liberator.

Bombs Pierced Decks

The aircraft's bombs apparently penetrated the cruiser's decks and exploded in the magazine. The warship jackknifed, rising fore and aft as her middle burst with a tremendous explosion that shot shattered armorplate and other debris high in the air.

The Superfortress attack on Formosa again today was carried out from bases in western China. They struck Japanese installations at Taihan, on the southwest coast of the island, even as lighter bombers struck at several targets on the northern end of the island.

The huge heavies hit Kinancho airbase, a defensive field for the heavily fortified naval port at Takao. This south-

CHUNGKING, October 17 — Strongly reinforced Japanese columns were reported by the Chinese High Command to be advancing tonight on the West River town of Pingnan, 80 miles southeast of the rail terminus of Liuchow, in lower Kwangsi Province.

Liuchow is the site of a strong United States airbase. It was indicated that Chinese defenses had failed to hold the initial assaults.

5TH ADVANCES MILE TOWARD BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — American forces of the 5th Army yesterday advanced more than a mile in their slow, hard-fought battle to reach Bologna and the Valley of the Po against German resistance that has now stiffened into an 'all-out' defense of the valley approaches south of the city, it was announced here today.

The American forces have now battled their way to the rim of the three-mile-long, heavily-defended mountain escarpment guarding the entry into the lower Savern River Valley, along which the main Florence-Bologna Highway winds down into the city at the edge of the broad Plain of the Po.

Leading American troops are now within 9½ miles of Bologna, while, on the extreme right flank of the 10-mile front on which they are advancing through the Apennines foothills, other American forces are only seven miles from the Emilia Highway cutting across the lower edge of the Lombardy Plain.

Eighth Army forces, pushing into the southeastern edge of the Po Plain, yesterday thrust westward to within a mile and a half of Cesena, the first of the important towns strung out along the Rimini-Bologna Road.

German Tactics Change

Official reports today stressed the change in German resistance south of Bologna. The enemy forces are no longer slowly falling back in stubborn delaying action, the reports stated, but now have stiffened their defense into an all-out stand atop the stone wall of the mountain escarpment stretching across the broken country northeast of Livergnano and guarding the main approach to Bologna.

To enable them to hold these key positions, the German forces have brought up hundreds of heavy guns, mostly concentrated in the area bordering the Florence-Bologna Road, and have launched frequent, costly counter-attacks in an effort to break the momentum of the 5th Army's avalanche-like advance northward. In a 12-hour period, reports today stated, more than 1,000 rounds of artillery fire fell in the forward lines of the American forces in this small sector.

New Zealand troops fighting with the 8th Army yesterday gained more than a mile in thrusts from their bridgehead across the heavily defended Scolo Rigossa Canal, and pushed along the axis of Highway 9, the Rimini-Bologna Road, to the eastern banks of the canalized Pisciatello River, a mile and a half east of Cesena. There are two main bridges, carrying the road and the highway across the river, in this vicinity.

Official reports gave no indication whether or not these bridges, or several other secondary bridges to the north and south, were blown up. The river, although narrow, would form an effective anti-tank moat until bridged.

Farther southwest, British infantry and armored forces consolidated their positions, while other troops stormed and captured Monte Romano, a high hill feature 2½ miles south of Cesena, and only a mile east of the Savio River, which flows through the Po Valley town. Farther south, patrols reached the Borello River, a tributary of the Savio.

The 5th Army's hard-fought gains came within 24 hours of their capture of the strongly-held enemy village of Livergnano, where German forces had held 5th Army leading troops to a standstill for four bitter days of battle. After clearing the village of remaining pockets of resistance, the port of Antwerp, necessary to the supplying of Allied armies in northwestern Europe. At the mouth of the Scheldt Estuary, Canadian and British troops have constricted the pocket containing 10,000 Germans to an area 17 miles wide by 10 miles deep.

At the eastern edge of the pocket, where two Allied forces driving north and south joined two days ago, Canadian troops have advanced three miles westward to Ijzendijke. German troops in this area are falling back to a line from Breskens to Sluis.

On the southwestern flank of the pocket, other Allied forces, driving northward from their original bridgehead over the Leopold Canal, repulsed a German counter-attack and resumed their advance toward Sluis.

Meanwhile, another Canadian force is attempting to cut off 15,000 to 20,000 German troops on the islands of Walcheren and Beveland, heavily fortified positions guarding the northern side of the Scheldt Estuary. They hold the important town of Woensdrecht, junction of the only road and rail line leading to the two islands at the base of the Beveland Peninsula.

Strong German counter-attacks with tanks have failed to retake the town, and all attacks have been thrown back with heavy losses of men and material. Aerial reconnaissance photographs revealed that the Germans have blown up sections of the Beveland seawall, flooding large areas, in an attempt to prevent an Allied landing.

British 2nd Army troops, 75 miles to the east, advanced 5,000 yards against heavy German artillery fire and thick minefields, to cut the road from the vital communications center of Venraij to Deurne. Street-to-street fighting is raging in Venraij itself. East of the city, there is no defensible position in the five-mile stretch of flat country before the Meuse River.

A British armored column to the north in the Vierlingsbeek area is continuing its drive toward the Meuse and is pushing the Germans back to the border, four miles away.

Aachen Ring Tightened

American 1st Army troops tightened their ring around Aachen today, after smashing several German counter-assaults, which cost the Germans 25 per cent of their attacking force. German forces within the smouldering city were scantily reinforced with supplies dropped by parachute last night, and by a few German trucks which dashed through the American lines.

American troops in the city, backed up by self-propelled 155-millimeter guns, tank destroyers, and phosphorous-firing mortars, continued their task of methodically clearing the Germans out of their pillboxes and dug-in positions.

To the north, at Gellenkirchen, American troops underwent the heaviest barrage of German artillery fire seen in this sector. A German report stated that strong Allied reinforcements were seen moving up behind the lines here.

American 3rd Army troops who withdrew from Fort Driant, near Metz, now hold the German strongpoint in a state of seige. Action has been limited, rarely exceeding battalion strength. To the northeast, at Marrières les Metz, infantry troops continued to move slowly forward against German flame-throwers and small arms.

At the southern end of the 400-mile western front, the Germans counterattacked repeatedly in the Vosges foothills, where the American 7th Army is attempting to outflank the Belfort Gap in a drive to the north. The German thrusts were held, and the Allies made only slight gains.

It was officially announced that the total number of German prisoners captured in western Europe since D-Day is now 608,666. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

ALLIES INCREASE PRESSURE ON 50-MILE FRONT 10,000 GERMANS IN SCHELDE POCKET

SHAEF, October 17 — British and American troops increased their pressure against the Germans on a 50-mile front from Venraij in Holland south to the German town of Aachen. The military situation along this sector is similar to the one preceding the Normandy breakthrough.

The present phase of the battle for Germany along the entire western front is not a period of lull, an Allied tactician said today, even though gains of only several hundred yards have been made. The Allies, he said, are keeping up the offensive, and are probing for a point where the German defense will yield.

The main forces of the Canadian 1st Army are now engaged in clearing the approaches to the great undamaged [illegible] up sections of the Beveland seawall, flooding large areas, in an attempt to prevent an Allied landing.

MOSCOW VOWS ANNIHILATION OF NAZIS BELGRADE BATTLE RAGES

The Soviet communique reported street battles raging in the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade.

The German pocket on the west bank of the Dvina River at Riga was further constricted as Russian troops advanced toward Sloka, on the Gulf of Riga, taking another rail station on the Sloka-Jelgava line.

Further gains were made in northern Transylvania and in Yugoslavia. On all fronts, 98 German tanks were destroyed and 73 Nazi aircraft were shot down.

Meantime, Radio Moscow tonight pledged the Red Army to the task of wiping out Hitler's armies on German soil. A Soviet commentator said:

«The Red Army is first and foremost an army of liberation. Together with its allies, it will completely rout and annihilate the Hitlerite army on German soil.

«Without that, victory will not be complete and final.

«German Fascism must be wiped off the face of the earth. The Hitlerite régime and its instigators must be exterminated. The Hitlerite army and its commanders must be wiped out. The Hitlerite 'new order' and its architects must be swept away from European soil. This is our task.»

Radio Yugoslavia, speaking of the fighting in Belgrade, said the Germans "are apparently intending to do all they can to destroy our cities and our homes, even if they themselves are buried in the ruins." The radio said fighting in the capital was bitter, house-to-house.

Russian battle-line dispatches said Red Army units had driven a deep wedge into the German defenses along the Czech border, and that Russian pressure from the Carpathian salient was increasing along the Slovak frontier.

Only other front-line dispatches came from German sources which broadcast reports of continued fighting along the East Prussian border. The German radio said the Russians had driven through German defenses near Neustadt, directly on the frontier, but added that the breaches had been closed.

From the far northern front, Finnish headquarters reported further advances and the capture of several towns as they continued their fight to drive the Germans into captivity. Bitter fighting continued in the Tornio Valley. Finnish troops were reported crossing the Arctic Circle at several points in their push northward into Lapland.

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES ATTACK AUSTRIAN TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — Escorted heavy bombers of the 15th AAF, in unrevealed strength, today struck strategic targets in Austria for the second successive day, it was announced here late this afternoon. Liberator bombers which carried out the attacks on targets in the Vienna area were forced to bomb by instrument, due to heavy cloud formations, the announcement said.

Communications targets in southern Austria were also hit, as well as military targets in Upper Silesia, by Flying Fortresses.

Preliminary reports indicated that some enemy fighter opposition had been met again today, although no definite encounters were reported nor were bombing results yet available.

Other formations of heavy bombers today attacked communications in the Maribor area, and rail yards at Nagykanizsa, both in southern Hungary, as well as communications targets in northern Yugoslavia along the German escape route from the Balkans.

19 OF 100 GERMAN FIGHTERS SHOT DOWN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — As strong formations of up to 750 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF yesterday attacked Austrian railyards and aircraft factories, escorting fighters battled with formations of more than 100 German interceptors, largest number encountered in recent months, it was announced here today.

The Mustang escort planes shot down 19 of the German interceptors, after first mistaking the large formations of enemy planes for friendly bombers — so rare has the sight of the Luftwaffe in the skies over 15th AAF targets become.

The German fighter formations were encountered in the vicinity of Brux and Dresden, and in the brisk air battle, one American pilot, 2nd Lieutenant Sheldon K. Anderson, shot down five enemy aircraft in five minutes. Three of the German craft struck by the pilot's guns exploded in mid-air, while the others fell out of control, from dizzy heights of five miles to low altitude level.

In night missions, RAF planes bombed Zagreb railyards, key point in the German retreat lines from the Balkans.

Heavy bombers of the South African Air Force made a 1,800-mile round trip flight to Poland, to drop supplies to Patriot forces, a pre-sentence announcement this morning stated. Further particulars would be available later, the announcement declared.

Fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out [illegible] close-support operations in front of both 5th and torpedoed, another beached and destroyed by gunfire, and a seventh lighter, of the fast F-type used for coastal supply purposes, was possibly sunk. Two PIL-boats, used for ferrying troops and small stores, were sunk, with a third possibly sunk. Only one British E-boat was sunk and one damaged.

Air crews of heavy bombers which attacked targets in the Bologna area on October 12 reported a naval engagement of some consequence in the northern Adriatic as they returned to their bases around noon. Photos were taken on the ships engaged, and two seemed to be sinking. At least two ships in the formation were still firing at that time, the air crews reported.

150 ALLIED WARSHIPS IN AEGEAN OPERATION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — More than 150 warships of the British, Canadian, South African, Greek, French, and Polish Navies took part in the landings at Piraeus, Athens and in other recent actions in the Aegean, it was announced here today.

Included in the flotilla were four British escort aircraft carriers, Stalker, Attacker, Hunter, and Emperor; the Polish destroyer Garland, the Greek cruiser Averof, seven Greek destroyers, and French and Greek submarines.

BRITISH TROOPS DISEMBARK AT ATHENS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — The British troops carried to Athens by the force of cruisers and destroyers under command of Rear Admiral J. M. Mansfield were disembarked yesterday afternoon, it was announced here late this afternoon. Supplies and equipment are being unloaded swiftly, it was said, and it was hoped that the original schedule, delayed by difficulties encountered in negotiating minefields outside the Piraeus, would be resumed by this afternoon.

Members of the Greek Cabinet are expected to make their official arrival at Athens tomorrow, when they disembark from the Greek cruiser Averof. They will be accompanied by the Allied military and naval forces commanders, it was said.

R.A.F. REGIMENT RIOTOUSLY WELCOMED IN ATHENS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 17 — The men of an R.A.F. armored car regiment, among the first Allied troops to enter Athens, were given a delirious two-day welcome Saturday and Sunday, it was announced here today.

The armoured car detachment, part of forces which were landed on the Peloponnesian Peninsula three weeks ago, made their way across the Corinth Canal and reached the Megara airfield, to hold it while British parachute forces were landed to reinforce them and threaten the German escape route northwest from Athens to Erithrai, it was said. Although enemy forces brought up artillery to shell this field and blow up all bridges on the road toward Athens, the paratroopers reached Athens Saturday night.

The city was glowing with illumination in celebration of the German departure, in the subsequent victory celebration, R.A.F. Spitfires flew in formation over the cheering city.

Only one action was reported in the drive on Athens. It occurred near Megara, when a German patrol of 20 men was wiped out as they crept forward into a house from which to open fire on landing paratroopers.

Desert Air Force planes destroyed two German headquarters, north of Cesena and west of Meneo, near the Savio River on the 8th Army front. Other targets around Cesena were heavily bombed. Concentrated attacks were also carried out against German troop concentrations and guns in the area south of Bologna.

Reconnaissance and bomb-strike photos of yesterday's targets in Austria indicated that damage was caused to the Tiger tank factory at St. Valentine, near Linz, and at the Graz-Neudorf aircraft engine works. Other targets were either not hit at all or only slightly damaged, due to poor visibility. (PRO)

COLOGNE AGAIN HEAVILY BOMBED

LONDON, October 17 — More than 1,300 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 800 fighters, bombed the German city of Cologne for the sixth time in six days. Their assault followed on the heels of an attack last night by British Mosquitoes.

The daylight bombers dropped more than 8,000 tons of bombs on Cologne in an attack lasting about an hour. This latest bomb-load is greater than heavies have dropped in any comparable period on any other German city, and tops the 7,500 tons dumped on Munich in July.

Only 40 miles from surrounded Aachen, Cologne is a vital center for the assembly of German front-line reserves. Today's concentrated assault, coming immediately after the heavy battering of the week-end attacks, appears to be in support of the American armies thrusting toward the city.

When 8th USAAF heavies returned to Cologne today, many of the fires started on Saturday were still burning. Bombing was done by means of instruments.

Except for an attack on a straggling bomber separated from its formation, there was no enemy air opposition today, although some of the returning fighter pilots reported seeing a few jet-propelled enemy planes in the distance. Anti-aircraft fire varied "from meager to intense," 8th USAAF headquarters reported.

From this great 1,309-bomber attack, 13 bombers and three fighters are missing. The night attack was made without loss.

London commentators draw attention to the new phase in heavy RAF and USAAF attacks on German cities close to the main battle areas. They pointed out that when strategic bombers are used against tactical targets, such as Duisburg or Cologne, the results are seen not only on the battlefield, but also in secondary results, such as the destruction of German industries and German power to continue the war.

This afternoon, a force of RAF Lancasters, escorted by Spitfires, again attacked the sea-dike at Walcheren Island, dropping a heavy bomb load.

The attack was made near West Kapelle to widen the breach made at the beginning of this month, and to increase the floods which had swept over the island from the west, the Air Ministry stated. Today's mission was carried out without loss.

Fighter-bomber of 2nd TAF yesterday staged a heavy attack on Oostburg in support of the advancing Canadian forces constricting the Scheldt pocket.

They dropped forty 1,000-pounders and nearly a hundred 100-pounders on German defense positions, gun batteries, and other strong points in the neighborhood of this key road center between Breskens and Sluis.

Other squadrons of the TAF strafed trains on both sides of the Dutch-German frontier. Two trains were wrecked, and another was hit South of Metz. Typhoons poured 36 rockets and many cannon shells into a German field gun battery.

A squadron of RAF Tempests and Lightnings — fast fighters which were first used to chase flying bombs — flew over Germany for the first time yesterday. They found two trains and set both on fire.

Flying bombs sent over Britain last night were shot down by anti-aircraft gunners and night fighters, both over the sea and in open country shortly after crossing the coast.

Kiel Canal Blocked

Some of the achievements of the Allied air forces in the west were revealed today by Allied and neutral sources. Danish shippers in Stockholm said their German agents informed them that the Kiel Canal between the Baltic and the North Sea has been blocked since Sunday, when a railway bridge collapsed into it. The canal will be useless for three or four months, the shippers were told.

The shippers said it was believed that time-bombs dropped by Allied planes in the canal during a daylight assault on Kiel blew up the bridge's supports.

A report of the 9th USAAF's achievements between October 1 and 15 revealed that their medium, light, and fighter-bombers flew 13,000 sorties in support of the American 1st and 3rd Armies and in attacks on enemy supply lines in the Rhine Valley.

More than 450 locomotives and 2,000 rail cars were disabled or destroyed; rail tracks were cut at more than 500 places, and more than 200 gun positions were put out of action. Hits were scored on 24 bridges in Holland and Germany in the fortnight, and 136 enemy planes were destroyed.

The 9th USAAF lost 87 planes during this period.

Air-Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory announced today the huge German losses in the Falaise pocket in August. Allied fighters and fighter-bombers destroyed 12,441 transport vehicles; 1,413 tanks; 3,025 railway wagons; and 400 river barges.

Sir Trafford said that about 7,000 German dead were found among the wrecked transports near the Seine crossings where 3,000 vehicles were hit in three days by the RAF.

HUNGARY DESCRIBED AS COLLAPSING

Bela Miklos von Dalnok, commander-in-chief of the army, was the first to go, and that he was joined by his chief of staff.

Meanwhile, Russian forces battered with tank armies at the last German lines 50 miles from the capital city, and the Associated Press wrote:

«It is questionable whether the Germans can expect any further effective military assistance from this last remaining ally.»

The quisling Minister of War, General Karoly Barocky, was broadcasting from Radio Budapest an urgent plea for support of a vanishing cause. Said he: «We have lived for a thousand years in alliance with the Germans. We have them to thank for everything.»

Shortly before, the Gestapo-controlled transmitter had announced formation of a new government, under Szalasy as Prime Minister. Prime Minister Lakatos was said to have resigned.

According to the Geneva newspaper, La Suisse, all these events have caused panic in Austria — the next stop in the path of Russian invasion.

To the Austrians, Radio Moscow said:

«Let events in Hungary be a warning that the hour of decision for Austria has come.»

Austrians were called upon to rise — to make a contribution to their own liberation by cutting Fascist throats.

NAZI PARATROOPERS FAIL TO CAPTURE TITO

MOSCOW, October 17 — German paratroopers several days ago attempted to capture General Tito's headquarters, but the attempt was frustrated and two-thirds of the paratroopers were killed, Radio Moscow said today.

The broadcast said that a Soviet plane removed Marshal Tito and his staff to safety, and soldiers of the Yugoslav Peoples Army of Liberation then gave battle to the German paratroopers.

How Marshal Tito was rescued by a Red Army plane during a surprise German paratroops swoop on his headquarters in southwestern Serbia five months ago was also told today by Radio Moscow.

The Soviet pilot, Captain Kulinkin, said: «We took off at night from a base in Italy, heading for a secret base in Yugoslavia.

«The flight across the mountains was hazardous. The landing was a problem. Bonfires marked a small strip of level ground tucked away in the hills, and we nearly came to grief when we narrowly missed a cliff we had not noticed in the darkness.

«Tito boarded the plane. With him were his closest collaborators. We set off, swerving sharply at the end of a short runway to avoid crashing into a hill. We made another trip to rescue Marshal Tito's remaining aides».

WASHINGTON, October 17 — Internal Hungary was said to be in process of collapse today.

Clashes between Nazi forces and Hungarian peace elements were reported in the streets of Budapest.

The German news agency, DNB, admitted that Nazi machine guns have been mounted — and that blood of Hungarian mobs has run in the gutters.

Martial law has put the city in the hands of the Gestapo. Nazi Storm Troopers were erecting barricades, while tanks cruised the streets of the capital to enforce a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

The workers of the city have struck. The strike was reported by Radio Moscow tonight to have spread to municipal and state institutions. The peace movement, said Moscow, is spreading across the country. Said the Associated Press: «Hungary is in chaos.»

Radio London said Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler has flown to Budapest to take charge of the situation personally.

From many sources there was evidence that the Fascist attempt to set up a new government under Ferenc Szalasy has failed.

Workers everywhere, said Moscow, have clashed with Szalasy's guards of the «Arrow Cross.»

Troops and officers of the 1st Hungarian Army have gone over to the Russians. DNB said tonight that Maj. Gen. Austrians were called upon to rise — to make a contribution to their own liberation by cutting Fascist throats. (OWI)

The communications will be permitted without a Treasury license, the circular continued, so long as they are not actual business or financial transactions. For example, banks and other financial institutions may reply without a license to requests for information from their depositors in liberated Italy; documents such as birth, death and marriage certificates and legal notices may also be transmitted.

The announcement further said that Italian and United States concerns may freely exchange business information and correspondence with respect to the resumption of business relationships, but no license will be granted for private trade transactions at the moment, since trade with Italy is now being carried on only through governmental agencies.

Treasury officials said that freezing regulations remain in effect with respect to Italian property in the United States, and that a license will continue to be required to effect any financial or property transactions on behalf of, or involving, persons in Italy.

It was emphasized that the status of Italian assets in the United States is not affected by today's action. (OWI)

REHABILITATION PROGRESS CALLED NOTEWORTHY

ROME, October 17 — Although decidedly heavy tasks remain, noteworthy progress has been accomplished in the rehabilitation of liberated Italy in the field of public works and utilities.

For example, mile upon mile of roads, sewer pipes, water mains, gas conduits, and electrical transmission-wires have been put back into service under direction of the Allied Control Commission.

Shackled by material shortages dovetailing so fantastically that an attempt even to list them would leave an economist dizzy, this reconstructive work has moved forward without a halt, reports of ACC's Public Works and Utilities Sub-Commission showed today.

«House that Jack Built»

If arranged like the familiar «house that Jack built,» these shortages with which the Allied and the Italian engineering staffs have wrestled might be outlined like this:

First and above all, they lacked automobiles even to go out to find where and what repairs were needed.

Even if they had found cars, they could not find the simplest constructional materials like cement, timber, bricks, tile, and steel.

If they could have found power to string over to a factory to make cement, bricks, or tiles, they could not find kiln fuel to «burn» these products.

If these factories could have made cement, bricks, and tiles, they could not find lorries or trucks to haul them away.

If they did find trucks, they lacked tires and tubes and parts, and they still lacked crushed stone and asphalt to repair the cratered roads.

If they found an asphalt plant, they lacked belting to turn its wheels.

If they had a stone quarry, they had no quarrying machinery.

If they could have hauled the stone to the roads, they had no steam rollers.

And anyway, if they did find a power plant, they lacked simple castings to repair the power plant to run the factory to make the castings to repair the power plants, and so on, like the nursery rhyme.

«Immediately after the armistice in September, 1943, the Italian Public Work Department (Genio Civile) found itself almost completely without transport, plant, or equipment,» the report prepared recently by Lt. Col. I. A. Jenny (USA), the director of the P. W. and U. Sub-Commission, and Lt. Col. G. E. Rhodes (British), the deputy director, pointed out.

«The same applied to the Genio Civile's principal firms of contractors,» the report continued. «Almost everything had been either taken north by the Germans or (if they couldn't cart it away) destroyed by them.»

Being pushed so rapidly out of Sicily and southern Italy, the Germans did not have time to arrange as many demolition charges as they did in the winter of 1943-44, when they were able to complete a well-planned program of destruction in central Italy.

Power Stations Demolished

«This work was done by persons experienced in demolitions and likewise familiar with electrical power machinery,» the report revealed.

«In the liberation of Italy, electricity is the heart

Plans call for eventual repairs of many lines, this amount when large machinery, tailored to each task, can be designed and completed.

The Germans also carted off many copper «conductors» (wires) from the transmission lines. They likewise leveled about 60 per cent of the high voltage towers in central Italy.

Until now, more that 1,500 kilometers of high tension transmission lines have been repaired under Allied supervision.

Many castings, forgings, and machined parts have been needed for even a slight rehabilitation of the electrical power plants. But the lack of electrical energy for steel works and machine shops has delayed production of these parts needed to make electrical energy — the vicious circle again!

How Allied officers and their Italian colleagues have overcome handicaps in rehabilitation was illustrated in Sicily, where they salvaged most of the overhead trolley-wire of the city of Messina to repair the 70,000-volt electric trunk line connecting the east and the west sides of the island.

Submarines' Generators Used

Another improvisation was the use of submarines. In the early days of the liberation of Naples, the electrical generating equipment in submersibles in Naples harbor helped to produce enough power to get part of the water pumping system working and to supply water to some important establishments.

Lack of maintenance in power plants under Fascism in both Sicily and Sardinia, and even in Rome, also contributed to difficulty of rehabilitation.

As a part of the rehabilitation, rationing of the scant power obviously has been necessary.

«In southern Italy, as a result of controls maintained over use of the power, the levels of water in storage were improved until equal to the best year in the last four years,» the Sub-Commission's report said.

«This program has permitted the orderly resumption of some important industries, and has assured power to operate them would be available when needed.»

In the field of highways and bridges, systematic demolition by Germans again was found to be more serious in the whole area from Cassino to Florence than elsewhere.

«German destruction in central Italy was carried out in a methodical and scientific manner, and one cannot help wondering if that destruction has not been carried out to spite the Italian people, as well as to hinder Allied armies, or if it has been done as a part of the German love for destruction,» the Sub-Commission reported after an expert survey.

Under innumerable handicaps, 3,832 miles of roads nevertheless have been repaired or rebuilt under army engineers' or ACC supervision, plus several thousand miles of secondary roads requiring only minor repairs or maintenance, and many miles improved or repaired by ACC regional engineering staffs.

Bridges completed or under reconstruction on main roads now total 230, and on secondary roads they total hundreds more.

On highways of military importance alone, the average employment has been 23,500 workmen. Additional laborers employed on public works of all kinds under ACC supervision total about 50,000.

Further employment has been given to 4,000 civilians in clearing debris, dismantling machinery, and repairing electrical plants under ACC supervision.

In Naples, although throughout the last four years under Fascism maintenance was completely lacking, a number of the main roads have been put into better condition.

Work will be completed shortly on Naples main sewers, [illegible] in the ACC report as in «deplorable condition.»

Power Stations Demolished

«This work was done by persons experienced in demolitions and likewise familiar with electrical power machinery,» the report revealed.

In the rehabilitation of Italy, electricity is the heart of the problem. Italy lacks fuel for producing power. Hence, the whole life of the people is geared to hydroelectric power, both industrial and domestic.

Keeping this in mind, the Germans with ruthless cunning took care to demolish similar parts of machinery in each power station, so that one station could not «borrow» from another.

Factories, railroads, and food-processing plants have been unable to function, unemployment has resulted, and extra imports have been needed to keep the population alive, the report continued.

In central Italy, 94 per cent of the electric-generating facilities was destroyed intentionally by German expert demolition squads. The few plants left intact were either obsolete or in disrepair.

Repairs in the forward area normally have been done by Allied army engineers' units, which attempt to make electricity for army hospitals, water-pumping, army cooking, and living quarters, and the combat troops' other needs.

Farther back, army engineers' units also have furnished large amounts of materials for repair and reconstruction work done by ACC and the Italian electrical and other companies.

So far, small electrical generating plants, totaling about 18,000 kilowatts, have been repaired for service.

early days of the liberation of Naples, the electrical generating equipment in submersibles in Naples harbor helped to produce enough power to get part of the water pumping system working and to supply water to some important establishments.

Lack of maintenance in power plants under Fascism in both Sicily and Sardinia, and even in Rome, also contributed to difficulty of rehabilitation.

As a part of the rehabilitation, rationing of the scant power obviously has been necessary.

«In southern Italy, as a result of controls maintained over use of the power, the levels of water in storage were improved until equal to the best year in the last four years,» the Sub-Commission's report said.

«This program has permitted the orderly resumption of some important industries, and has assured power to operate them would be available when needed.»

In the field of highways and bridges, systematic demolition by Germans again was found to be more serious in the whole area from Cassino to Florence than elsewhere.

«German destruction in central Italy was carried out in a methodical and scientific manner, and one cannot help wondering if that destruction has not been carried out to spite the Italian people, as well as to hinder Allied armies, or if it has been done as a part of the German love for destruction,» the Sub-Commission reported after an expert survey.

Under innumerable handicaps, 3,832 miles of roads nevertheless have been repaired or rebuilt under army engineers' or ACC supervision, plus several thousand miles of secondary roads requiring only minor repairs or maintenance, and many miles improved or repaired by ACC regional engineering staffs.

Bridges completed or under reconstruction on main roads now total 230, and on secondary roads they total hundreds more.

On highways of military importance alone, the average employment has been 22,500 workmen. Additional laborers employed on public works of all kinds under ACC supervision total about 50,000.

Further employment has been given to 4,000 civilians in clearing debris, dismantling machinery, and repairing electrical plants under ACC supervision.

In Naples, although throughout the last four years under Fascism maintenance was completely lacking, a number of the main roads have been put into better condition.

Work will be completed shortly on Naples' main sewers, described in this ACC report as in «deplorable condition,» mainly through negligence under the last decade of Fascist rule.

Cooking Gas Restored

For preparing food, the importance of gas can be underlined by the fact that in Italy there is virtually no wood, no oil, no charcoal, no coal, and now no electricity.

At Messina, the gas works are gone beyond redemption, German mine squads having finished the damage done in combat operations.

But at Naples, Catania, Rome, and Palermo, repairs under ACC supervision have been attempted, to supply gas for a two-hour period a day to permit cooking of one hot meal at least.

Other cities, like Bari, also were receiving some gas under ACC rehabilitation plans.

In Rome, distribution of gas began on a limited and partial basis on August 29.

In Naples and Palermo, many miles of gas mains have put back into service.

Aqueducts at Rome, Naples, Bari, Florence, and Palermo, and reservoirs at Palermo, all have been rehabilitated after being smashed by German demolition mining. Similar work is being accomplished at full speed in many places behind the front.

Repairs to canals and land-drainage systems wrecked by the German systematic demolitions also have been planned under direction of the Public Works and Utilities Sub-Commission — known as «the handmaid of the army,» because every week this Sub-Commission takes over fresh tasks in heavy engineering (mainly bridge construction) from the army engineers.

One of these tasks is a 50,000,000-lire project to drain the Pontine Marshes, where the Germans flooded 12,000 hectares last March in a way calculated best to spread malaria.

One of the more spectacular projects being aided by ACC experts is a 120,000,000-lire scheme to build supporting walls to prevent landslides from the new cone on Mt. Vesuvius, which now is 10 to 20 times larger than it was before the violent eruption last March. (UNN)

SARDINIA, CORSICA MALARIA CONTROL EFFECTIVE

NEW YORK, October 17 — The control of malaria over great areas on the islands of Corsica and Sardinia which has saved the lives of hundreds of Italian and French people has been accomplished by American army malaria control units.

For the first time in their memory, native farmers remain in their homes, rather than retreat to the hills before darkness. Cattle have become fat. Great areas of plain-land have been reclaimed from stagnant waters. Waiting hospital beds have remained empty. Millions of man-hours of both the civilian population and the American armed forces on the islands have been saved.

American malaria control units, operating in coordination with the Army Air Forces, have made air base locations free of malaria. Entomologists analyzed the mosquitoes inhabiting the area. Engineers drained large sections of swampland breeding places for the mosquitoes. American pilots dusted entire areas with Paris green. Soldiers sprayed houses, barns, and buildings with the same material. Rain-pools were sanded or oiled.

In addition the report said, large quantities of atabrine and quinine were made available to the population as a preventive against malaria, and instructions were issued to keep well-clothed after dark. (OWI)

CIVILIANS HELP RECONDITION TRANSPORT

WITH 5TH ARMY, October 17 — Over 2,000 Italian civilians, many of them skilled mechanics and artisans, are working side-by-side with 5th Army ordnance men in reconditioning and maintenance of transport and other equipment, a UNN correspondent reported today.

As a result of their efforts, 75 per cent of all transport used to maintain 5th Army communications is made up of battle-damaged vehicles rebuilt or refitted at salvage depots where the Italian workers are employed.

Not only Allied equipment goes through the reconditioning process. The workers have also had considerable success in working on captured enemy equipment, and for example, 5th Army units are now using against the Nazis rebuilt 88-mm. German guns.

The workers — including machinists, electricians, mechanics — work on all types of equipment in well organized industrial plants. Some of them are close to the front, working with 5th Army ordnance units.

In one month, Italian civilians in a single unit reclaimed 800 2½-ton trucks. Other items made suitable for combat include axle assemblies, generators, all kinds of small but essential mechanical items, heavy equipment, and machinery, and machine tools used in front-line maintenance work. (UNN)

NATIONALIZATION OF GERMAN INDUSTRIES

PARIS, October 17 — The Secretary of the French Socialist Party, Daniel Mayer, suggested that the nationalization of Germany's mines, iron and steel works, and chemical industries, together with the reeducation of the German people, would prevent future German aggression.

« When all traces of Nazism have been removed from Germany, we must stretch out our hand to the German people and permit republican Germany to enter the international community with the same equal rights as other nations.

« Any other measures, and in particular any policy of dismemberment of Germany, would provoke reactions dangerously threatening the peace of the world. » (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 17 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In operations carried out between October 5 and 7 on the Vetto-Ciano d'Enza Road in Reggio Emilia Province, a Garibaldi Brigade killed 32 Germans, wounded many others, and captured important war booty. Patriot losses were insignificant.

Following this operation, the Germans launched an offensive against Patriot positions and occupied the Villa region after fierce house-to-house fighting. In this single operation, which resulted in an insignificant tactical gain for the enemy, the Germans suffered very severe losses in killed, and still higher losses in wounded.

The «Giustizia e Liberta» Division, which controls Route 45 between Genoa and Piacenza, took 400 Germans prisoner.

A captured enemy document reveals that the Fascist Major General Crisolli, commanding the 20th GAF Division, died as a result of wounds received in a battle with Patriots October 12.

The enemy, after crossing the Tagliamento River for an attack in strength against Venetian Patriots, reoccupied the villages of Trasaghis and Avasinis in Udine Province.

During the period from August 26 to September 11, Patriots of the Vicenza region carried out 137 surprise attacks on rail lines, derailing two trains and destroying five engines and eleven coaches. The same Patriots also blew up a munition depot.

In Piedmont, hard fighting continues in many valleys, where Patriots are holding their own against numerically superior enemy forces. It is calculated that in encounters which took place in this region during the second half of September, the Nazi-Fascists lost 250 dead and 350 wounded. On September 27, Piedmontese Patriots destroyed a munition depot three kilometers west of Pinerolo, damaging, among other things, two guns.

In a battle in Spezia Province, 32 Germans were killed. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 17 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The fierce fighting for the West Scheldet continues. In this sector, the general situation remained generally unchanged.

East of Bruges, strong enemy attacks were repulsed.

Patrol vessels sank a British motor assault boat and damaged another off the Dutch coast.

East of Belmond, an enemy penetration was cleared up.

At Aix la Chapelle, yesterday, the fierce battle of material reached a new peak. The Americans tried to complete the encirclement of the town with two fresh infantry divisions and one tank division, and with the support of bombers flying at a low level. They succeeded in narrowing down the corridor which connects Aix la Chapelle with our positions, but failed to cut it. Thirty Americans deserted to our troops.

For several weeks, the enemy has been making single attacks on our bridgehead at Metz, but achieved only little success.

The Fort Briant on the banks of the Moselle, southwest of the city, after a temporary enemy penetration, is again completely in our hands.

In the Parroy Forest, east of Epinal and on both sides of the Moselotte Valley, southeast of Remiremont, the fighting for forest land and high ground positions continues.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, fighting against Bulgarian and Soviet formations is reported from the Nis sector and from the region west of the lower reaches of the Morawa.

At Belgrade, the situation is consolidated.

On the lower reaches of the Tisa, a battle-proved Hungarian formation captured numerous heavy weapons and prisoners in a thrust.

South and southwest of Debreczen, the battle grew in intensity.

The defenders of a locality destroyed 28 tanks out of a force of 40.

On the front of the Forest Carpathians, west of the Cziroka Valley and the Dukla Pass, the enemy pressure on our mountain positions temporarily diminished.

North of Warsaw and at Seron, the Soviets, after the heavy losses suffered in the course of the previous fighting, made only minor and unsuccessful attacks. Proceeding from the Narew bridgehead, from Rozan, they continued their attempts at breaking through. In this sector, our stubborn troops achieved a complete defensive success.

On both sides of Wilowishken, the Bolsheviks, after a barrage of several hours, launched a major attack with numerous infantry and tank formations on a front 14 kilometers broad. They were supported by strong bomber formations. The frontier of East Prussia was reached at one point. One hundred and fourty-five enemy tanks were destroyed, 70 of which by a People's grenadier division. In this sector and on the Narew Front, the enemy lost 56 planes in grim dogfights and by the action of antiaircraft guns of the Air Force.

Southeast of Libau and at Doblen, the enemy also resumed his bitter attacks. He was repulsed in grim fighting. According to incomplete reports, the enemy lost 37 tanks in this sector.

On the Arctic Front, our mountain troops repulsed attacks with the enemy sometimes pressing hard on our heels.

Air:

USAAF terror flyers dropped bombs on several localities in southern Germany during the day. They also bombed the centre of Salzburg.

Fighters and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 19 Anglo-American planes.

Last night, Soviet planes attacked Gumbinnen.

During the period from August 26 to September 11, Patriots of the Vicenza region carried out 197 surprise attacks on rail lines, derailing two trains and destroying five engines and eleven coaches. The same Patriots also blew up a munition depot.

In Piedmont, hard fighting continues in many valleys, where Patriots are holding their own against numerically superior enemy forces. It is calculated that in encounters which took place in this region during the second half of September, the Nazi-Fascists lost 250 dead and 350 wounded. On September 22, Piedmontese Patriots destroyed a munition depot three kilometers west of Pinerolo, damaging, among other things, two guns.

In a battle in Spezia Province, 32 Germans were killed. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 17 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The fierce fighting for the West Scheldet continues. In this sector, the general situation remained generally unchanged.

East of Bruges, strong enemy attacks were repulsed.

Patrol vessels sank a British motor assault boat and damaged another off the Dutch coast.

East of Helmond, an enemy penetration was cleared up.

At Aix la Chapelle, yesterday, the fierce battle of material reached a new peak. The Americans tried to complete the encirclement of the town with two fresh infantry divisions and one tank division, and with the support of bombers flying at a low level. They succeeded in narrowing down the corridor which connects Aix la Chapelle with our positions, but failed to cut it. Thirty Americans deserted to our troops.

For several weeks, the enemy has been making single attacks on our bridgehead at Metz, but achieved only little success.

The Fort Briant on the banks of the Moselle, southwest of the city, after a temporary enemy penetration, is again completely in our hands.

In the Parroy Forest, east of Epinal and on both sides of the Moselotte Valley, southeast of Remiremont, the fighting for forest land and high ground positions continues. Yesterday also, the stubborn enemy attacks broke down after small initial successes.

On the Western Front, 3,259 prisoners were taken during the first two weeks of October; 765 tanks and armoured reconnaissance cars, and 49 guns of all models, as well as numerous other weapons and war material, were either captured or destroyed. Our coastal strongpoints report continued enemy artillery fire.

London continues to be harassed by « V-1 ».

Four enemy motor assault boats were seriously damaged during the defense against repeated attacks on German convoys by enemy motor assault boats and bombers off the coast of northern Norway. Two of them were probably sunk. Ten attacking bombers were brought down. One German vessel was lost.

Italy:

In central Italy, yesterday, strong American forces after a barrage, again attacked our positions.

East of Verdato, our grenadiers frustrated the attacks.

North and northeast of Loiano, the enemy made some progress, but was checked in a counter-attack.

Southeast of Cesena, British attacks failed.

numerous infantry and [illegible] meters broad. They were supported by strong bomber formations. The frontier of East Prussia was reached at one point. One hundred and fourty-five enemy tanks were destroyed, 70 of which by a People's grenadier division. In this sector and on the Narew Front, the enemy lost 56 planes in grim dogfights and by the action of antiaircraft guns of the Air Force.

Southeast of Libau and at Doblen, the enemy also resumed his bitter attacks. He was repulsed in grim fighting. According to incomplete reports, the enemy lost 37 tanks in this sector.

Air:

USAAF terror flyers dropped bombs on several localities in southern Germany during the day. They also bombed the centre of Salzburg.

Last night, Soviet planes attacked Gumbinnen. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN OVERSEAS RADIO.

Sector of Parroy Forest: « In the sector of Parroy Forest, the U.S. 79th Infantry Division stands opposite the German 15th Tank Grenadier Division. The German fighters are from the Rhenish Palatinate, and ferociously defend their own fatherland behind the front. In the forest of Parroy alone, the American troops, coming from Texas and the American Middle West, suffered more than 1,000 casualties and disabled wounded. »

Hungary: « The Honved armies are fighting on all their fronts, with the German troops assisting them. For example, a Hungarian tank division west of the lower Tesa has repelled Soviet forces by a determined defence. »

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Allied Claim of Cutting Off Aachen: « Contrary to Anglo-American reports, Aachen is still connected with the main German fighting line. Its true corridor, connecting the city with the front, has been further narrowed during the past 24 hours, but the encirclement of the city has not been accomplished. »

Eastern Front: Transocean reports: « German troops have completely cleared Belgrade of the enemy, and have fought to free the city as well as all its suburbs. » According to DNB, « Colonel General Miklos, hitherto commander of the Hungarian 1st Army, has joined the Soviets, taking along all the money of the Hungarian 1st Army. »

FASCIST RADIO

War in Italy: According to the Fascist Radio, the British 8th Army has intensified its pressure and violent fighting has taken place between the Rubicon and the Savio. The advance of the 8th Army's left flank, however, was checked by the strong German barrage position, which runs from southeast of Rocca San Casciano to Cesena.

The focal point of the struggle is still the region between Pistoia and Loiano, where the enemy renewed his recent attacks against German positions.

In the Adriatic sector, British forces repeatedly tried to achieve infiltrations in the main German defence line, but were repelled everywhere with heavy losses.

Radio Litorale Adriatica announces that the enemy attacked all day along the Loiano-Bologna Road, after having received new reinforcements. For the first time in many weeks, says the same radio, the enemy employed searchlights with the aim of hampering the German supply system.

HUNGARY ASKS FOR ARMISTICE

ROME, October 15 — Admiral Horthy, in a proclamation broadcast monitored here, announced that Hungary, Germany's last satellite, has asked for a «preliminary armistice» and has ordered Hungarian troops to cease fighting.

The Chief of the Hungarian General Staff, General V. «I have therefore informed Germany that we have asked for a preliminary armistice, and I have ordered my troops to cease fighting,» he declared.

«We hope to get from our enemies what we did not get otherwise, a continued peaceful future,» he continued. Quoting Bismarck, Horthy said no nation can sacrifice itself to its allies on the altar of loyalty.

The diplomatic correspondent of the London Observer wrote this morning that the Allied leaders now meeting in Moscow are believed to have approved the armistice terms to Hungary.

German spokesmen have been issuing assurances today that Hungary will be defended by the Wehrmacht as if she were German soil.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung in a comment circulated by Transocean News Agency, said: «Hungary is militarily, geographically and politically part of the inner European fortress. She is of the same importance as East Prussia or the Rhineland.» (BBC)

DUISBURG GETS 10,000 TONS OF BOMBS

LONDON, October 15 — RAF night bombers returned to Duisburg in very great strength last night, in the wake of the daylight bombers which dropped the record weight of 4,500 tons of bombs on the city yesterday. The glow from burning Duisburg was visible 200 miles away, and bomber crews could distinguish the outlines of the city at 40 miles.

The bomb tonnage dropped into the flaming city last night brought the total weight in 18 hours to 10,000 tons. This weight of explosives is more than London got during the worst full month of Hitler's blitz.

The British Air Ministry announced that during the record assault on London by the German air force in September, 1940, German planes dropped just under 10,000 tons, but lost 1,124 aircraft. The RAF lost 18 aircraft in the two attacks delivered in 18 hours of this week-end.

When the last pilots left the target area at 0300 hours today, this great inland port at the junction of the Rhine and Ruhr rivers was burning from end to end of its area of 45 square miles. Great explosions were still rocking the shattered city.

Air crews were met by moderate to intense flak over the target area and in a futile attempt to ward off the second attack the Germans put up night fighters.

In addition to Duisburg, Brunswick, Berlin, Mannheim, and Hamburg were attacked last night. It was Berlin's 175th attack of the war.

Another German city to suffer a repeat attack was Cologne, bombed three times in 36 hours. More than 1,200 American heavy bombers today attacked this Rhine River fortress with more than 3,500 tons of bombs.

Another force of American Liberators attacked oil plants at Monheim and Heischob, south and southwest of Dusseldorf, both within 50 miles of the Siegfried Line.

HUNGARY ASKS FOR ARMISTICE

ROME, October 15 — Admiral Horthy, in a proclamation broadcast monitored here, announced that Hungary, Germany's last satellite, has asked for a «preliminary armistice» and has ordered Hungarian troops to cease fighting.

The Chief of the Hungarian General Staff, General V. Veres, in a later order of the day, denied that Hungary was laying down arms. Veres stated: «No one should infer from the recent radio speech of the Regent Admiral Horthy that Hungarian troops have ceased or will cease to fight.»

«Up to now,» Veres declared, «we can only speak about armistice negotiations, the outcome of which is as yet uncertain. All Hungarian units and formations will carry on the fight and defend themselves against any attack.»

Dispatches from Zurich reported, however, that as soon as the armistice negotiations became known, «large groups of Hungarian Army units laid down their arms.»

Count Michael Karolyi, 68-year old ex-President of Hungary in London, exiled since 1919 when the People's Republic was overthrown, said if the Hungarian people wanted him and the Allies raised no objection, he would return.

Hungary's reasons for deserting the Axis camp were explained in a proclamation by Horthy, broadcast by the Budapest radio.

Horthy accused Germany of failing to give the promised military help, and of intervening in internal affairs. The Gestapo had abducted the Commander of the Budapest Army Corps, Lt. Gen. Stiffard Bakkay, early in October. Furthermore the Germans had planned to take over the whole government, Horthy said.

German spokesmen have been issuing assurances today that Hungary will be defended by the Wehrmacht as if she were German soil.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung in a comment circulated by Transocean News Agency, said: «Hungary is militarily, geographically and politically part of the Inner European fortress. She is of the same importance as East Prussia or the Rhineland.» (BBC)

HUNGARY CAPITULATION ATTEMPT FRUSTRATED

LONDON, October 16 — The German controlled Budapest Radio said early this morning that Regent Horthy's attempt to take Hungary out of the war by capitulation had been frustrated.

The announcement presumably came from the radio station over which Horthy yesterday broadcast the Hungarian governments intention to send on armistice delegation to Moscow and indicated that the Germans may have seized complete control of communications facilities in the Hungarian capital.

The Nazi broadcast from Budapest said German authorities in Hungary «have been ordered to protect the Hungarian population.» (Reuter)

Thunderbolt fighters escorted the 1,200 bombers. Returning fighter pilots reported seven German planes shot down.

Three fighter groups strafed ground targets at Hanover, Brunswick and Kassel, and knocked out 54 locomotives, 125 freight cars an ammunition train, three troop carriers, one tank, a radar station and a barrage balloon.

Of the 2,000 American aircraft engaged in the attack on Cologne, 23 bombers and four fighters are missing.

Mosquitos of the 2nd TAF operating over northwest Germany and northern Holland last night, attacked over 50 barges near Dordrecht. Earlier in the day an important railway bridge over the River Zuthen was bombed by Mitchells and Bostons.

Some 450 sorties were flown throughout the day in support of front-line forces in the Breskens area and east of Beveland in Holland. The rail station at Woensdrecht received a 500-pounder bomb hit.

RAF bombers this morning struck at another German dam — the Sorpe Dam 20 miles southeast of Dortmund. They scored direct hits on the dam with 12,000-pound bombs without loss to themselves.

The recent bombing of the Kembs Dam on the upper Rhine by British Lancasters has reduced the former 20-foot water level behind the dam to a level where it now represents no serious threat to any crossing of the Rhine, Brig. Gen. Gordon P. Saville, commander of the 12th Tactical Air Command, told a press conference yesterday. General Saville said it was unlikely that that dam could be quickly repaired.

Although the complete blockage of enemy transport movement which was achieved in some localities in Italy was not possible in the road networks of the highly industrialised areas east of the upper Rhine, the results of attacks on trains, motor transport and communications targets had been good, said General Saville.

Announcing the results of the Command's operations from D-Day to September 30, the general said 2,188 motor vehicles were destroyed and 1,555 damaged. The 12th TAC had also destroyed 400 locomotives and 1,311 rail cars, and damaged 142 locomotives and 2,387 rail cars. In addition, bridges, gun positions, road blocks, and naval vessels were attacked during this period, with excellent results, he said.

'EARTHQUAKE BOMB' DETAILS RELEASED

LONDON, October 15 — Details of the 12,000-pound "earthquake bomb," the most destructive air weapon yet used, were given today by the British Air Ministry.

The "earthquake bomb" is the first to combine great blast effect with extraordinary penetrative power, even from moderate heights. It is fitted with a delayed-action fuse and has a thick casing, so that it does not explode until it is under the target.

During recent attacks on Brest submarine pens, four "earthquake bombs" penetrated 21-meter-thick concrete roofs, and exploded inside the pens.

ROMMEL DEAD, SAYS DNB

LONDON, October 15 — The German news agency today announced that Rommel is dead.

"General Field Marshal Rommel has died as a result of severe injuries to his head, which he received in a motorcar accident while Commander in Chief of the Army Group in the west," the announcement said.

Hitler has ordered a state funeral for Rommel, who was one of his most successful army commanders, remembered as the "Desert Fox." Rommel was 53 years old.

At the base of the Beveland Peninsula, German troops made a strong counter-attack against Canadian forces, driving them back to the road and rail causeway south of Woensdrecht. The Allied forces, however, fell back to high ground, from which they can still dominate this last escape road from Walcheren and Beveland islands. The German counter-thrust was a delaying action, as neither supplies nor troops can be moved out.

Allied dive-bombers resumed their heavy attacks on Aachen today as American troops within the city continued their slow advance toward the center of the city in grim hand-to-hand and house-to-house fighting. German troops within the city have been reinforced with food, water and ammunition, which was parachuted to them by six German planes last night.

Northeast of Aachen, the gap was narrowed to 300 yards as troops comprising the northern arm of the pincers slowly advanced against fire from dug-in tanks and light artillery guns. Over 570 prisoners were taken from the German forces attempting to hold open the gap.

The Germans, who have been massing reserves five miles north of Aachen, launched a strong armored and infantry attack southward from Weiden, on the main Aachen-Duesseldorf road. The German assault was the largest made since the beginning of the Aachen battle, and overran advanced American positions. American heavy artillery and anti-tank guns hurled a thunderous barrage against them, smashing the assault and forcing their armor back.

British Advance Continues

The British 2nd Army advance south of Overloon, on the eastern flank of the Dutch salient, continued on a 5,000 to 6,000-yard front despite rain and mud. They moved forward another 1,000 yards through thickly wooded and strongly defended country. A German observation point was destroyed by Allied aircraft.

American 3rd Army forces combed the Parroy forest for remaining German troops and advanced one mile beyond the forest to the east.

Northeast of Metz, fierce street fighting continues in the town of Malieres Les Metz, while at Metz itself the situation remains unchanged. The fortifications around the city are as intact and impenetrable as they were six weeks ago, when the siege began. The German garrison has been reinforced and trains move into the city daily from the east. Four double jet-propelled Messerschmidt 262 fighters were sighted high over the city, but they did not interfere with Allied planes active in the area.

CANADIAN BRIDGEHEADS JOIN

SHAEF, October 15 — Canadian 1st Army troops made a second crossing of the Leopold Canal and in 30 minutes drove two miles northward over heavily flooded land to Watervliet. The juncture on the eastern flank of the German pocket formed a new fighting front six miles long.

British and Canadian forces who were landed by sea now control an eight-mile stretch of the railway running from Biervliet, northwest to Breskens. Allied forces in the Breskens area have not been able to regain ground lost yesterday.

The original bridgehead over the Leopold Canal north of Maldegem has been extended. Allied troops are reported to be within two miles of effecting another junction with the amphibious forces, which would completely encircle the Germans south of the Schelde estuary. The Germans have so far lost three battalions in their effort to stem this advance. Sherman tanks swept around the perimeter of the German defenses and shot up their positions.

The Germans have apparently decided to shorten their line south of the Schelde and fall back on easily defended waterlines nearer the coast. Any attempt to escape to Walcheren Island over the estuary by barges, however, would be strongly opposed by Allied aircraft.

DE GAULLE CALLS FOR RENEWED EXERTION

PARIS, October 15 — Calling for a greater effort from the French people in a radio broadcast yesterday, General Charles de Gaulle said:

« In spite of the terrible reverses suffered by the enemy, he has been able to reestablish a front from Breda in the Netherlands to Belfort.

« The Germans are fighting hard in Italy so that new efforts are required. »

The enemy was crumbling, said de Gaulle, and had been forced out of French territory by the decisive action of the armies, the fleets and air forces of the Allies, and by the actions of the French people.

« But, » he warned, « Germany will be beaten only by renewed and bloody exertion, » adding:

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 760021

General de Gaulle said France had paid heavily during this war. She had suffered 300,000 casualties «on the battlefields and before the firing squads.» French ports had been destroyed, railways paralyzed and 4,000 bridges had been blown up. France was without coal or electricity and her mines were in a dreadful condition.

«In addition,» he said, «what rolling stock, ships and stores we still possess must, in most cases, be put at the disposal of the Allied high command for military purposes.»

Those who thought that Allied aid toward restoration and production would be rapid and powerful were deluded.

«The first task of the Allies,» he said, «is to feed a voracious war, a duty which imposes heavy burdens and vast problems even on France.

«For the present we have to take things as they are and recognize that in our present difficulties we must above all rely on ourselves and understand that our greatness will tomorrow, as in the past, spring not from the good will of others but only from our own endeavors.

«Though hard, these difficulties will not make the French people lose heart. On the contrary, we never underestimated the cost to us. Indeed, we have always known what trials we would have to overcome after liberation.»

«We welcome these trials because they give us a chance of demonstrating to ourselves and to the world what we are worth.» (OWI)

FORMOSA, LUZON STRUCK AGAIN JAP FLEET JOINS BATTLE

PEARL HARBOR, October 15 — American carrier-based aircraft have struck again at Japanese positions on Formosa and on Luzon Island in the Philippines.

A communique from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's head-

On the Island of Timor, patrol planes bombed Cape Hero, Lautem and Guiloro, causing heavy explosions in «what was probably an ammunition dump.»

Southwest Pacific aircraft also have turned their attention again to the Japanese troops at Wewak in New Guinea. Troop concentrations have been attacked by heavy and medium bombers.

Other air operations covered a wide area ranging from the Solomons to the Philippines. Their targets included airdromes, oil storage depots, ammunition dumps and installations.

Super Fortresses in their first nine raids set the amazing record of not losing a single plane shot down by enemy fighters, Maj. Gen. Curtis Lemay of the 20th Bomber Command was quoted as telling the Associated Press yesterday.

General Lemay said that B-29's had shot down 37 Japanese planes, probably destroyed 36, and damaged 59 others. Four Super Fortresses are still unreported following the Formosa attack. (OWI)

JAP KWEILIN DRIVES BROKEN

CHUNGKING, October 15 — The Chinese High Command said tonight that the Japanese offensives against the Kwangsi capital of Kweilin have been smashed.

Strong Chinese forces lying in wait for the oncoming Japs north and south of the city were said to have attacked with shattering results.

The Nipponese who approached the Kwangsi capital from Hunan Province to the north were said to have been routed. Chinese troops were reported rounding them up tonight.

The Jap column attacking the Kwangsi rail terminus city of Liu-chow, preparatory to a drive on Kweilin, were broken up by Chinese counter-attacks.

The Chinese operations were supported by aircraft of General Joseph Stilwell's 14th USAAF. They strafed and bombed motor pools and Japanese troop concentrations and scored three direct hits on a Jap headquarters.

These aircraft ranged far and wide over the face of China, striking at convoys, river shipping, airfields, supply and communications lines, and Japanese gun emplacements.

OFFENSIVE TOWARD BOLOGNA CONTINUES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 15 — The heavy offensive of 5th Army troops, moving on Bologna, went into its third day today, with local advances being made against strong German resistance. 7,300 prisoners were captured since the start of the forward push Friday.

Inching ahead on a front that stretched roughly 20 miles across the Florence-Bologna highway, from Vergato on the west to Gesso on the east, Allied troops were able to improve their positions in the Livergnano area, where strong German defenses have been encountered, and moved forward east of the city in bitter fighting.

Five miles to the east of Livergnano, in the Monterenzio area, about 14 miles from the outskirts of Bologna, American troops crossed the Castel nel Rio-Castel San Pietro road.

FORMOSA, LUZON STRUCK AGAIN JAP FLEET JOINS BATTLE

PEARL HARBOR, October 15 — American carrier-based aircraft have struck again at Japanese positions on Formosa, and on Luzon Island in the Philippines.

A communique from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters here said the attacks were carried out on Friday, and that at least 91 Japanese aircraft were destroyed.

(The Japanese news agency, Domei, said that the Manila area was hit today by American carrier-borne bombers, escorted by fighters. The Japs also reported earlier today that large-scale American attacks continued over the Formosa Island region, and that the Nipponese fleet had joined the battle.)

Late reports from headquarters of the United States Pacific Fleet indicated a continuing battle around Formosa and the Philippines.

The Japs were described as putting up their heaviest defense since the attacks were begun, on Wednesday, with smashing assaults against Formosa and the Pescadores Islands. These attacks were continued yesterday by heavy formations of B-29 Superfortresses.

U.S. Navy patrol bombers continued the relentless pounding of Japanese bases by striking at the southern Philippines, causing large explosions at Sasa airdrome on Mindanao and sinking a 1,000-ton fuel-laden freighter-transport and a coastal vessel off Basilan Island, today's communique reported.

Two additional 1,000-ton enemy freighters were sunk by other patrol planes in the Makassar Straits between Borneo and Celebes.

JAP KWEILIN DRIVES BROKEN

CHUNGKING, October 15 — The Chinese High Command said tonight that the Japanese offensives against the Kwangsi capital of Kweilin have been smashed.

Strong Chinese forces lying in wait for the oncoming Japs north and south of the city were said to have attacked with shattering results.

The Nipponese who approached the Kwangsi capital from Hunan Province to the north were said to have been routed. Chinese troops were reported rounding them up tonight.

The Jap column attacking the Kwangsi rail terminus city of Liu-chow, preparatory to a drive on Kweilin, were broken up by Chinese counter-attacks.

The Chinese operations were supported by aircraft of General Joseph Stilwell's 14th USAAF. They strafed and bombed motor pools and Japanese troop concentrations and scored three direct hits on a Jap headquarters.

These aircraft ranged far and wide over the face of China, striking at convoys, river shipping, airfields, supply and communications lines, and Japanese gun emplacements.

OFFENSIVE TOWARD BOLOGNA CONTINUES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 15 — The heavy offensive of 5th Army troops, moving on Bologna, went into its third day today, with local advances being made against strong German resistance. 7,800 prisoners were captured since the start of the forward push Friday.

Inching ahead on a front that stretched roughly 20 miles across the Florence-Bologna highway, from Vergato on the west to Gesso on the east, Allied troops were able to improve their positions in the Livergnano area, where strong German defenses have been encountered, and moved forward east of the city in bitter fighting.

Five miles to the east of Livergnano, in the Monterenzio area, about 14 miles from the outskirts of Bologna, American troops crossed the Castel del Rio-Castel San Pietro road.

The Germans threw in reinforcements in the Vergato sector, 20 miles southwest of Bologna astride the Bologna-Pistoia highway.

After several days of violent fighting in this area, South African troops recaptured Mt. Stanco and pressed forward towards Grizzana. A considerable number of Nazi prisoners was taken in the advance.

8th Meets Stubborn Resistance

Enemy troops are still keeping a tenacious hold in the Fiumicino line in the Adriatic coastal sector of the 8th Army front. Positions there, in the vicinity of the Bologna-Rimini railway, remained virtually unchanged during the day.

German resistance was particularly stubborn at San Angelo in Salute, two miles north of the railway line, but to the southwest Canadian units, in close contact with strongly-resisting Nazi troops, had moved up the Rimini-Bologna highway and are across the canal. Patrols of both sides were active in the flat country south of the road.

Elements converging on the key junction of Cesano were within three and a half miles of the town, at one point where British troops reached the Carpineta road junction west of Montiano and fought off strong enemy resistance to push beyond the junction.

There were enemy counter-attacks in this area Friday night.

Tanks were thrown into the fighting at a point five miles southwest of Cesena and, moving across the upper reaches of the Rubicon, captured a strategic ridge beyond. German units are still holding out in Ardiano, in the same sector, but troops of an Indian division captured Mt. Bora, a dominating height.

Several fierce counter-attacks six miles south of Cesena were beaten off, and 8th Army troops consolidated their positions in this area, capturing Mt. Chicco, a 1,400-foot hill overlooking the Savio Valley.

Cerfoglio, three miles west of Mercato Saraceno on the main southern artery leading to Cesena, was also taken. (PRO)

R.A.F. OPERATING FROM GREEK AIRFIELDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 15 — Royal Air Force planes landed this morning on an Athens airfield, and an advance echelon is already operating from the field, it was announced here this noon.

It was also announced that other RAF airfields have been established in Greece, one in the Peloponnesus having been in operation since the end of last month.

An unopposed paratroop landing yesterday afternoon at Megara and its airfield, about 28 miles from Athens, put the town and airport firmly in British hands, and preparations are now under way for making the field serviceable.

German troops had withdrawn from Megara on Thursday, but not before they had blown up all airfield installations and extensively mined the landing-ground area. Advance patrols of British troops, which had pushed on from Corinth, were on the field when the parachutists descended from Dakota carriers, and with a group of local inhabitants greeted the reinforcements.

On Thursday, it was announced, British glider-borne troops in very bad weather landed on a field west of Athens and cleared the area of mines in time for the landing of the main body of parachute troops yesterday morning.

Meanwhile, an eye-witness account of the liberation of Athens was given by an RAF officer who witnessed the scene from the first plane to fly over the capital yesterday after the Germans had been ousted.

"Thousands of men, women and children thronged the streets," he said. "We circled the town at 4,000 feet first of all, to see if there was any opposition, but as there was none, we came down to 200 feet. The people were very excited. The streets were decked with flowers of all sorts. There was a long procession, waving flags and banners, winding its way through the streets as we roared over the city." (PRO)

GULF OF PATRAS BEING CLEARED FOR SHIPPING

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 15 — In support of Allied operations in Greece, the Gulf of Patras is now being cleared of mines preparatory to the entry of Allied shipping, it was announced here this morning.

British minesweepers, working under what were described as dangerous and difficult conditions, have already cleared the channels in the southern Dalmatian Islands.

Reuter dispatches tonight declared that the Russian command was clearing up its southern salients, preparatory to an attack on Austria.

Reuter said also that Russian and Yugoslav troops were closing in on Belgrade from a well-established front on the fringes of the city.

Yesterday, 61 German aircraft were shot down by Russian pilots or by anti-aircraft fire on all sectors. (PWB)

STOCKHOLM, October 15 — The temporary truces on various west front sectors to allow fetching of dead and wounded, and removal of the civilian population, has resulted in a clash between the Nazy Party and the Wehrmacht, said the Swedish newspaper Aftontidningen yesterday.

The party leadership had demanded that such agreements be prohibited, even at the expense of the lives of the civil population, maintaining that every agreement with the Allies is against its directives. The population of Germany is warned by the Party that they must harbor only feelings of hatred and uncompromising fighting determination against the Allies, the newspaper said. (OWI)

PETSAMO FALLS

MOSCOW, October 15 — Troops of the Russian Karelian front have taken Petsamo, large Finnish Arctic Ocean port, and last escape route for German forces trapped in Finland.

Russian aircraft last night laid down heavy raids on the German-held Baltic harbors of Memel and Libau, in Lithuania, and on the East Prussian rail city of Tilsit.

The fall of Petsamo followed swiftly on a breakthrough of Russian forces northwest of the Soviet port of Murmansk. Warships and landing craft of the Northern Russian fleet supported the assault on the Finnish city, described by the Soviet communique as an important naval base and powerful German stronghold.

Southwest of the Latvian capital of Riga, and in Yugoslavia, the communique spoke of minor Russian gains. Nothing was said of any further advances against the East Prussian defenses standing before Tilsit.

LIBERATED ITALY

TYPHUS PREVENTION TOUR STARTS

ROME, October 15 — Latest methods of typhus prevention will be demonstrated by teams starting from here today on a tour through all of liberated Italy, the Allied Control Commission announced.

Among the measures undertaken to safeguard the health of the Italian population during the coming winter, this demonstration will be conducted under the auspices of ACC's Public Health Sub-Commission.

Dusting techniques that were so successful last winter in one of the greatest mass-control experiments in modern medical history will be shown at conferences beginning today at Naples and continuing at Bari, Taranto, Catanzaro, Catania, Palermo, Rome and Chieti.

On-the-spot methods of dusting will be demonstrated in prisons. Representatives from each province will be given a dustpump and a 10-pound can of DDT powder as emergency supplies.

The Allied Control Commission has stockpiled enough dusting powder — the most effective means of typhus control — to dust more than 500,000 persons, as part of a campaign to prevent recurrence of typhus epidemic such as broke out in Naples last year.

Because the health of the civilian population has a direct effect on the health of the military units stationed in Italy, Army stocks of powder sufficient to dust several hundred thousand other civilians will be accessible to ACC officers.

Start of the demonstration teams' tour coincided with a report on the Naples typhus epidemic, in which 429 persons died among the 2,020 cases recorded in the 17 months from January 1, 1943, to May 31, 1944.

This is approximately a 20 per cent mortality rate among typhus cases and contrasts significantly with the 50 to 70 per cent mortality rate in other epidemics. The energetic measures undertaken by the Allied health authorities in giving 3,265,786 dusting treatments to the people of Naples and vicinity was the chief factor in keeping the epidemic under control, the report pointed out.

The role of the Allied Control Commission in taking the initial steps to suppress the typhus epidemic in Naples, the incorporation of the experience and scientific knowledge of the Rockefeller Foundation's typhus team into military government service, and the scope and complexity of modern measures to combat a dread epidemic are outlined in the report.

Epidemic Suppressed in Naples

Word was received on September 28, 1943, that typhus had been reported in Naples, which the 5th Army soon was to liberate. The next day, in North Africa, officials of the Rockefeller Foundation and the Public Health Sub-Commission hurriedly conferred to plan against the danger.

They decided to give control of the technical phases of the typhus battle to the Foundation's scientists, and to use the louse-powder disinfestation method to best guard the civilian population.

Requisitions for spray guns and 100 tons DDT powder were forwarded, and preparations were made to move into Italy as soon as military operations would permit.

Meanwhile, AMG public health officers of the 15th Army Group studied the situation daily as the disease began to spread. They took steps to energize the Italian health authorities, such as the warning they sounded on November 22, 1943, that an epidemic threatened.

A few days later (December 8, 1943,) the ACC typhus team arrived and went into action. The typhus specialists came with dusting powders developed at Orlando, Florida, by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Rockefeller Foundation. They brought methods developed in tests upon thousands of Arabs in North Africa, and in Egypt and Persia.

The powders used for dusting — first MYL and then the sensationally-successful DDT — killed the lice that carried the typhus germs. These powders produced no toxic effects on the human skin.

The next big step was spraying the powder upon the skin and garments of men and women without need of disrobing them. This made the technique so simple that virtually anyone could handle it. Everybody liked the powder because it gave immediate relief in a convenient way.

The program was systematized down to the point where one pound of powder could be counted on to spray 15 to 20 persons.

Direction of typhus control from the liberation of Naples on October 1, 1943, until January 2, 1944, was by the 15th Army Group AMG. Then the United States Typhus Commission directed it until February 19, when the ACC Public Health Sub-Commission took it over.

But the overhead administrative changes did not affect in any way the program worked out in North Africa months earlier for the Italian typhus campaign.

Field work was under supervision of the public health officer for Region III, AMG.

The first group of dusters began their training on December 11. At first they were volunteers. But soon AMG found that paying workers was the only means of getting adequate personnel.

The requisitioned power and spray-guns had not arrived, so the Army's Peninsular Base Section came to the rescue with a loan of 20,000 two-ounce tins of MYL powder, and 100 dusting guns.

Allied Force headquarters sent in 400 pounds of DDT powder, and authorized ACC to draw on 500,000 tins of

The other main type infected were the mothers who nursed members of their families ill with typhus, and then fell ill themselves.

Most deaths occurred among the old.

An appalling handicap to control was the extraordinary migration and changes-of-address among the Neapolitan population. Often they gave the address of their bombed-out home from which they had shifted long before.

Or else they were so mixed up in the crowded air-raid shelters and tenements that to locate them for contact delousing was almost impossible.

Fear among populace was another handicap. It led to thousands of false alarms. More than 1,000 visits were made to places where no typhus was found.

Summary

Recorded cases for the 17 months from January 1, 1943, to May 31, 1944, were:

Classification	Illness	Death
Civilian in Naples	1,404	318
Civilian outside Naples	510	82
Italian military personnel	25	3
Italian civil prisoners	37	11
Others	46	15
Totals	2,020	429

The number of dustings given to persons by the typhus control teams up to May 31, 1944, were:

At mass delousing stations	2,625,193
Contact and block dusting service	471,572
Ricovero (air-raid shelter) service	112,284
Special services	56,725

Whole Blocks Deloused

The first move was the dusting of all sufferers and known associates on the spot. This was called delousing the "contacts" of the victims. Often whole blocks of homes were thus deloused.

The next step was delousing the masses as a preventive. For this the first station opened on December 28. About 50 stations were set up. This protection became popular overnight. Neapolitans stood around watching each other getting dusted. Families and friends gathered from blocks around to go for a dusting.

On one day more than 72,000 were dusted. In fact, officers had to discourage many persons from coming too often since one dusting was considered usually effective for two weeks.

On January 6, 1944, flying squadrons went into about 50 localities near Naples. Passengers on all trains leaving Naples were dusted also to keep the epidemic from spreading.

The epidemic touched its peak on January 6. After that the number of cases reported began to fall off. Boys between 15 and 19 were conspicuous among the ill, apparently because they were homeless or at least footloose, and made all sorts of contacts.

AGREEMENT ON GERMAN OCCUPATION FORESEEN

WASHINGTON, October 15 — An early agreement of general American policy for the long-range control of Germany is foreseen by wellinformed United States officials, an Associated Press dispatch said today.

Several points reported to be generally acceptable to the officials are said to include:

The breaking up of large German estates and their conversion into small farms to be distributed among the German people and returning German soldiers.

The preservation, or restoration under rigid Allied control, of some industries and mining operations considered necessary to the economy of Europe as well as to the existence of the German people.

Strict policies in dealing with the German people, either individually or in political groups, but making provision for the relief of the people to prevent hunger and sickness.

The restoration of the transportation system to allow the exchange of products within Germany, to provide deficient areas lacking food with supplies from areas having surplus stocks.

The indefinite control of German industry, and to some extent economic organizations, in order to prevent cartels, as well as of political organizations, so that the old union of politics and industry can never be revived to start another war.

The degree in which major industries and transportation systems are maintained and restored in the period following the defeat of Germany the dispatch said, will have a direct bearing on the state of German industrial power in the long future. (OWI)

DANES FORCE GERMANS TO LIFT RESTRICTIONS

STOCKHOLM, October 15 — Danish resistance to the German authorities has forced the Germans to lift the state of « police emergency » declared last September 19 when they disbanded the Danish police force of 12,000 men and deported a large number to Germany.

The Nazi authorities at that time ordered local municipal officials to reestablish the police force and hand over all « political offenders. » The Danes ignored the order and instead encouraged the establishment of a « volunteer emergency corps » which succeeded in restoring order.

RED CROSS DISTRIBUTES GARMENTS IN FRANCE

PARIS, October 15 — The American Red Cross already has distributed a million garments in Southern France primarily to war-destitute civilians, Basil O'Connor, national ARC chairman, told a press conference here yesterday. Another three and a half million garments, he said, are on their way from warehouses in Britain and the U. S. to civilians in other sectors of western Europe.

O'Connor said that the Red Cross would begin distribution of clothing in Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg as soon as conditions permit. BRETTON WOODS CONFERENCE HAILED

NEW YORK, October 15 — The monetary agreements reached by the 44 United Nations at the Bretton Woods Conference on July 1 is the first step toward post-war economic stability. This was stated in a bulletin published Friday by the Institute of International Finance, New York University.

Dean John Madden, director of the institute, prepared the bulletin, which said that the international monetary fund and the international bank for reconstruction and development proposals agreed on comprised a cooperative endeavor to bring order from the financial and economic chaos that may prevail at the end of the war in many parts of the world.

When various national legislative bodies consider the acceptance, modification or rejection of proposals, the article contended, they should bear in mind the consequences of exchange controls, competitive currency depreciation, compensation agreements, import quotas and other trade impediments employed in the 1930's by almost all nations.

The institute as bulletin also expressed the belief that the proposed bank fund will have a chance of achieving its aims if the trade policies pursued by nations after the war are a liberal lead to increased exchange of goods services. (OWI)

ARCHBISHOP LAUDS DUMBARTON OAKS PLANS

LONDON, October 15. — The plans drafted at Dumbarton Oaks for safeguarding world peace were lauded today by the Archbishop of York, Doctor Garbett, as both practical and realistic.

In an imperfect world, the Archbishop pointed out, the threat of war can only be restrained by the rightful use of force.

The success of the scheme, he added, depends on the closest collaboration between the British Commonwealth, the United States and Russia. These three nations alone will have the material resources to preserve peace in the immediate post-war years, he said. (BBC)

DANES FORCE GERMANS TO LIFT RESTRICTIONS

STOCKHOLM, October 15 — Danish resistance to the German authorities has forced the Germans to lift the state of « police emergency, » declared last September 19 when they disbanded the Danish police force of 12,000 men and deported a large number to Germany.

The Nazi authorities at that time ordered local municipal officials to reestablish the police force and hand over all « political offenders. » The Danes ignored the order and instead encouraged the establishment of a volunteer emergency corps, which succeeded in restoring order.

The Nazi announcement lifting the emergency stated that citizens would be permitted to carry arms or weapons or possess ammunition only if authorized to do so by the German police authorities.

The German-controlled Danish Radio reiterated the Nazi request to establish local Danish officials to a « watch corps » composed of « completely reliable persons. »

LONDON, October 15 — The Germans took 4,000 Netherlanders from their homes in Utrecht after throwing a cordon of troops around the city, the Netherlands radio in London reported yesterday. They have been forced to work on German defense installations.

The Germans have also compelled the entire male population of Groningen province in northeastern Holland to work on new German defenses along the Ijssel River. The towns of Zutphen and Deventer were especially combed for manpower, and will probably be forced to repair the railway bridge over the Ijssel River at Zutphen, which was damaged yesterday by Allied planes.

Reports reaching Stockholm from German newspapers stated that the great bulk of men from Holland's eastern provinces have been forced to work on the German defense line running from the Rhine River along the IJssel to the Zuider Zee.

Reinforced German security police arrested 200 persons in Amsterdam on October 5th and 6th and as a result of the continuing manhunt all able-bodied men have disappeared from the streets and have deserted their offices and workshops. The Germans are taking advantage of this to remove entire industrial installations. They are having difficulty moving the machinery, however, due to the continued Dutch railway strike. (OWI)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 15 — The Supreme Command of the Armed Forces announces:

Western Front:

Fierce fighting for the Scheide estuary continues. English pressure on the Maas, south of Gennep, has increased.

In the course of heavy continual battles fought on both sides with the greatest ferocity, our troops smashed enemy attacks, northeast of Aix la Chapelle and effectively attacked American units advancing toward the eastern fringe of the town.

Last night, fast German bombers and nightbattle planes successfully attacked an enemy supply base near Aix la Chapelle.

East of Luneville and Epinal and particularly to the southeast of Remiremont, the enemy with concentrated forces continued his attacks. They were frustrated, yesterday, following small initial successes. Attempts made by the American 7th Army and their auxiliary troops at penetrating into Lorraine and gaining the Vosges passroads resulted in the enemy suffering heavy losses and achieving small local gains, without being able to approach considerably his objectives.

Continuous artillery fire and air attacks are reported.

Eastern Front:

On the Morava and on the southern fringe of Belgrade, our troops are engaged in heavy fighting with advanced Bolshevist forces.

On the Theiss crossings between Szeged and Csongrad our and enemy attacks resulted in fierce fighting.

In the Puszta plain, south of Debreczen, strong enemy attacks were unsuccessful, yesterday. At several points, determined counter-attacks made by panzergrenadiers and supported by battleplanes drove back the Bolshevists. In the area of the Csirokatal and Dukla pass, enemy pressure increased.

In the central front sector, the enemy continued his large-scale attacks. Apart from a small penetration made north of Seroes, our troops in cooperation with the Luftwaffe everywhere achieved a particular defensive success against the enemy superior in number and material. Numerous Bolshevist attacks against the bridgehead of Memel, southeast of Libau, were frustrated.

Sixty-eight enemy tanks were shot up. Enemy losses were heavy.

Soviet attempts at crossing the Dvina near Riga were smashed.

During the past few days off the coast of Kurland, a naval formation in order to relieve our heavily fighting troops near Memel repeatedly shelled Soviet frontal sectors with good effect. In the far Nortic our mountain troops disengaged themselves from the northern part of the Petsamo Fjord and fought free their rear communication line in heavy fighting against Bolshevist attempts of encirclement.

Eastern Front: Correspondent Karl Bluecher reports that stiffening stubborn German resistance marks the fighting on all sectors of the Eastern Front, during the past 24 hours. This grim resistance is dramatically manifesting itself especially in the fighting for the city and harbor of Memel.

Western front: Correspondent Walter Plato says that heavy local fighting marked the situation on the Western Front over the week-end. Grim struggle is still raging in the Aix-la-Chapelle region and on the Scheldt mouth. Nowhere were the attackers able to force a decision. In tenacious defence and determined counterthrusts the Germans kept the lines into the city open. General Hodges' troops again suffered unusually high losses in men and in all kind of war material. In the Flanders-Netherland region Canadian tank formations again tried to cut off the land route to Walcheren island and to wear down the German bridgehead on the lower Scheldt. The Canadians were repulsed suffering heavy losses.

Italian Front: During the past 24 hours, the British made heavy attacks against German positions in the foothills of the Etrurian Apennines, south of Bologna and on the Adriatic coast. With support of strong battleplanes they succeeded in making some breaks after many hours of grim fighting. Quick German counter-thrusts removed some breaches while others were balanced by withdrawing the German main defence line.

Greece:

The German position in the Balkans has been threatened in the rear as a result of the betrayal by Rumania and Bulgaria. For this reason it became necessary to evacuate southern Greece. These movements which have begun in the Aegean islands and on the Peloponnesus have been going on for weeks. On October 12th, the last rearguard units without fighting have evacuated Athens. Propaganda for Roosevelt's Reelection: It is said that millions of leaflets and postcards, all making propaganda for Roosevelt's third reelection fill to the utmost mailbags to American troops in Europe thus leaving no space for any letters from families of U. Copies of the American soldier newspaper «Star and Stripes» which has fallen into German hands contain columns of angry protests from soldiers and their families against this «misuse» of U. LARGEST SUPERFORTRESS ATTACK HITS FORMOSA

WASHINGTON, October 14 — The largest number of giant Superfortresses ever employed in attack today smashed at the Japanese base at Okayama, on the Island of Formosa, from bases in China.

A terse communique from General Henry Arnold, Commanding General of the USAAF and of the all-Superfortress global 20th Bomber Command, indicated that the operation was one of the most successful ever engaged in by this force. The communique follows:

- A large task force of B-29 Superfortresses of the 20th Bomber Command today attacked Okayama, on the Island of Formosa. Okayama is a vital Japanese repair base and supply depot, and is considered the most important air target south of Japan proper. The mission was carried out from bases in China.

B-17 Flying Fortress. General Arnold said also that the Superfortress is well able to take care of itself in combat, pointing out that only three B-29's have been lost through enemy action.

The communique's reference to bases in China as the starting point for the Formosa mission indicated, according to the Associated Press, that the B-29's flew about 2,000 miles round-trip. While the extreme range of the Superfortress has never been announced, its longest mission was against Japanese oil production centers at Palembang, Sumatra. That flight, from bases outside of China near the equator, was a probable round-trip of about 3,000 miles.

The Superfortress attack, while spectacular, was only one element of a larger plan which has been in execution for some time, Percy Finch, Reuter special correspondent at U. S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, outlined the plan in a dispatch today. He wrote:

- The Pacific Fleet's ability to launch carrier-borne, 1,600-plane attacks on inner Japanese strongholds like Formosa, which is 5,000 miles from Pearl Harbor and 1,500 miles from the nearest American base in the Marianas, demonstrates America's overwhelming naval and air superiority in the Pacific.

- Using the newest, largest carriers of the Essex class, history's biggest single fleet roves the Pacific striking at will, unchallenged by the Japanese Fleet. Admiral Raymond Spruance's 5th Fleet destroyed Japanese carrier strength in the Philippines sea battle in June, enabling Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet in September to smash Japan's air strength in the Philippines and compel the Japanese Fleet to seek safer anchorages.

LARGEST SUPERFORTRESS ATTACK HITS FORMOSA

WASHINGTON, October 14 — The largest number of giant Superfortresses ever employed in attack today smashed at the Japanese base at Okayama, on the Island of Formosa, from bases in China.

A terse communique from General Henry Arnold, Commanding General of the USAAF and of the all-Superfortress global 20th Bomber Command, indicated that the operation was one of the most successful ever engaged in by this force. The communique follows:

"A large task force of B-29 Superfortresses of the 20th Bomber Command today attacked Okayama, on the Island of Formosa. Okayama is a vital Japanese repair base and supply depot, and is considered the most important air target south of Japan proper. The mission was carried out from bases in China.

Good Weather

"The weather over the target was good, and visual bombing was accomplished. Eyewitness reports of returning crews indicate a successful attack. On this mission, a larger number of Superfortresses was engaged than on any previous attack.

"No report is yet available on enemy opposition, but none of our aircraft so far has been reported lost."

The Superfortress blow followed a heavy attack on Formosa installations by carrier-based planes of the U. S. Pacific Fleet on Wednesday. On Thursday, the carrier-borne aircraft delivered an equally heavy assault on Japanese installations in the Pescadores Islands, which lie between Formosa and the Chinese mainland. In those operations, 63 large ships were sunk or badly damaged, and 396 Japanese planes were destroyed.

Formosa, stolen from China by the Japanese in 1895, lies athwart the coastwise shipping route between Japan and the raw materials of her stolen empire in Southeast Asia.

General Arnold said at a press conference here Friday that production of Superfortresses is being so stepped up in The United States that Japan will soon be bombed by B-29's as heavily as Germany is being hit by the smaller

The Superfortress attack, while spectacular, was only one element of a larger plan which has been in execution for some time, Leroy Finch, Reuter special correspondent at U. S. Pacific Fleet Headquarters, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, outlined the plan in a dispatch today. He wrote:

WASHINGTON, October 14 — Four of the Superfortresses which attacked the Japanese base on Okayama, Formosa, this morning, have not been reported, a U. S. War Department communique said tonight.

A communique from Admiral Nimitz's Pacific Fleet headquarters today, summing up the air and naval assaults on Formosa, the Pescadores, and the Ryukyu Islands, Monday through Thursday, placed total Japanese losses at 227 ships and smaller craft, and 515 planes. KWEIPING FALLS TO JAPS; 14TH USAAF ACTIVE

CHUNGKING, October 14 — Kweiping, important town in southern Kwangsi Province, has fallen to Japanese forces, the Chinese High Command announced today.

Bitter fighting preceded the city's fall. The Japanese poured reinforcements into their positions until they outnumbered the defenders four-to-one. The defenders died to the last man.

Kweiping is 70 miles south and east of Liuchow, an important rail city south of Kweilin.

Fliers of the 14th USAAF bombed and strafed Kweiping today and attacked Japanese positions north and south of that city. Enemy concentrations on the West River in Kwangsi Province were attacked Thursday and yesterday. Three steamers and 19 barges were destroyed, and 44 other vessels were destroyed or damaged. The scarcity of even river shipping is emphasized by the Japanese use of sampans, 130 of which, in use as troop or supply craft, were hit by General Stilwell's pilots.

On the Salween River front in Northern Burma, the 14th USAAF attacked in support of Chinese ground operations in spite of poor flying conditions. All planes returned safely from these operations.

Southeast Asia Command Headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, reported that tanks of a British cavalry regiment, with artillery and air support, attacked Japanese positions north of Tiddim in the Chin Hills of northwestern Burma. Indian troops threw back a counter-attack. The Japanese north of Fort White were said to have withdrawn to new positions nearer the Tiddim-Kalemyo Road. (OWI-Reuter)

ALLIES OCCUPY ATHENS AND PIRAEUS

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 14 — Allied forces, consisting of British and Greek troops supported by ships of the Royal Navy and the Greek Navy, and British airborne troops carried in American planes, today occupied Athens, capital of Greece, and the Piraeus, it was announced in a special communique at 2200 hours tonight.

The communique stated:

« The occupation was carried out by British and Greek troops, who were transported, landed, and supported by ships of the Royal Navy, which included units of the Greek Navy. »

It added that planes of the United States Army Air Force landed British airborne troops in the operation, which liberated Athens, located on the Sea of Candia.

Simultaneously with the announcement of Athens' liberation, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean, announced the appointment of Lieut. Gen. Scobie as land task force commander in Greece.

The communique also stated that the evacuation of enemy garrisons by air from islands in the Aegean « has been gravely hampered by successful attacks carried out on the airfields in Greece by the American 5th USAAF under the command of Maj. Gen. Nathan Twining. » rimini-Bologna Highway, the Scolo Rigossa Canal, 2nd are poised for a direct assault on another, the Rubicone Cesenate Canal farther north, it was announced here this morning.

The two canals, radiating inland from Cattolica Mare, coastal town 10 miles north of Rimini, are a keystone of the enemy defenses in the coastal sector, and in addition to being natural tank obstacles, provide good covering positions for infantry.

Capture of a bridge over the Rigossa will facilitate movement of Allied tanks and armor, and with improving weather conditions resulting in better terrain, greater utilization of Allied motorized equipment is anticipated.

Enemy opposition is still strong, however, and mines and artillery fire were encountered north of the Rimini-Bologna Road.

South of the road, units holding the Montano-Montenove-Montecedrozzo Ridge advanced across the valley below on a broad front and overcame moderate resistance, to gain footholds on the slopes of the next ridge.

Bitter enemy resistance continued all along the entire 5th Army front, but American troops pushed back German positions to clear the town of Gesso and capture a dominating height about 18 miles southeast of Bologna. Advances north and northwest of the town continued.

Further to the west, Poggioli was seized, while heavy fighting took place on both sides of the Florence-Bologna Highway, where the Allies took high ground east of the road.

The advance beyond Livergnano, 14 miles to the south of Bologna, was slowed as the Germans put up a fierce defense of a hill just north of the city.

American units also pressed forward in the central sector of the front, far to the southwest of Bologna, while Brazilian troops, in action along the western sectors, took Coreglia, four miles north of the Serchio River. (PRO)

GERMANS IN CORFU SURRENDER

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 14 — German troops on the Island of Corfu have surrendered and the island is now in Allied hands, it was announced here this morning.

British forces which landed on the island found no Germans in the town of Corfu, but a group of 60 trapped on the northeast corner of the island surrendered in a body. No other enemy units are now reported, with the exception of a number of deserters who are being rounded up.

Liberation of Corfu followed the dropping of leaflets by the RAF urging capitulation and giving instructions for surrender.

Shortly afterward, white flags and white crosses were observed in the town and all over the island, and air observers could see crowds waving in the towns and villages.

Meanwhile, Balkan Air Force headquarters announced that the center of the Albanian port town of Sarande, captured earlier in the week by British troops, had been destroyed by an enormous explosion Wednesday evening. The area had previously been roped off, and no casualties were suffered.

The explosion, occurring more than two days after the surrender of the German garrison commander, followed the uncovering of a great many mines and booby traps planted elsewhere in the town. Failure of the commander to disclose the delayed action charge was described as « a gross breach of the Geneva Convention. »

Delvino, Albanian town inland from Sarande, has been occupied by the Partisans following the defeat and evacuation of the Germans there. Partisans entered the town on Tuesday after heavy fighting and bombardment by fighter-bombers of the BAF.

15TH A.A.F. HITS SILESIA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 14 — For the second consecutive day, Liberators and Flying Fortresses of the 15th AAF bombed oil targets in Silesia this morning, while other formations headed for central Europe and struck communication targets in Czecho-Slovakia, Hungary, and Yugoslavia, it was announced here tonight.

Both instrument and visual bombing were used in hitting the synthetic oil refineries at Blechhammer, also bombed yesterday, and nearby Odertal.

Heavy cloud cover was encountered on the route of the bombers, which hammered key communications targets.

Rail yards at Bratislava, on the Danube in Slovakia, were hit, while other formations dropped explosives on Ersekujvar and Komarom, both in Hungary on the main line to Vienna.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

In northern Yugoslavia, a rail bridge at Maribor, on a line to Italy, was bombed.

Fighter-bombers of the 12th Air Force were out in strength again this morning in their continued assault on German defense positions and supply lines in a concentrated area just south of Bologna. Hundreds of sorties were flown in the third day's operations of the heavy air attack in support of 5th Army troops, and excellent results were reported.

For the second night in a row, RAF medium and heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force struck at the rail yards at Szekesfehervar, 40 miles southwest of Budapest. Hits on the rail line and buildings were reported, and fires visible 70 miles away resulted from the bombardment. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. HITS NORTH ITALY, AUSTRIA, HUNGARY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 14 — While medium bombers and fighters of the Tactical Air Force continued their assault on German positions around Bologna, Liberators and Flying Fortresses yesterday went after targets in northern Italy, southeastern Germany, Austria, and Hungary for the second consecutive day.

Striking in great force, the heavy bombers penetrated a heavy smoke screen to continue Allied blows against German oil resources with a concentrated raid on the Blechhammer oil refinery, 75 miles southwest of Breslau.

Other units of the bombing force swung toward Vienna, rail yards and repair shops were the targets. Rail yards were also bombed at Borbida, 45 miles west of Budapest, and at Szekesfehervar, 55 miles southwest of Budapest. The former is a concentration point for transport and supplies moving toward the Russo-German front in Hungary, and the aerial blows were in direct support of Red Army troops moving across the Hungarian plain.

In a continuation of this attack, RAF bombers went out last night to hit the Szekesfehervar yards again after the daylight assault by Liberators.

Fighters escorting the 15th AAF bombers strafed a number of ground targets and, in addition to destroying a number of aircraft on the ground, were credited with hitting 15 locomotives, two oil cars, two motor vehicles, and an ammunition dump. They also damaged 20 locomotives, 161 rail cars, and 37 vehicles.

Road, rail, and river traffic were also strafed by Mustangs operating between Budapest, Gyor, and Vienna, with the destruction of 48 locomotives, 82 oil tank cars, and other rolling stock.

No Fighter Opposition

Moderate to heavy anti-aircraft fire was encountered in these operations but, while more than 30 enemy fighters were sighted in the Vienna area, they failed to give battle, and the bombers continued on their mission unmolested by air interference.

From all of these operations, 36 heavy bombers and 12 others are missing, some of which are thought to have come down in friendly territory.

In the Bologna area, adverse weather failed to stop the air assault on German positions surrounding the city, and Mitchells and Marauders went after enemy communications, bridges north and south of the city, and fuel dumps.

Thunderbolts were also out in force, striking at gun positions, buildings, and transport near the edges of the battle area.

Other bombers went after German transport as far away as the Vienna area, sinking five barges moving down the canals with supplies for enemy troops facing the 8th Army.

Fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force struck at troops

Piloted by airmen who joined forces with the British Middle East Armies in 1941, after the fall of Greece, the planes flew low over the northern part of the newly-liberated Peloponnesus and continued ahead on their missions in support of the advancing Allied troops.

For three years, the pilots, all former members of the RHAF, have been flying with the RAF in the Mediterranean area.

Some of the squadron had previously seen action over Crete, but today was the first time any of them had been over their homes since 1941.

MORE BRAZILIAN TROOPS LAND IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 14 — Thousands of Brazilian troops, reinforcements for the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, have landed at an Italian port and will soon take their places in the line as part of Lt Gen Mark Clark's 5th Army, it was announced here today.

Included in the contingent, the largest group thus far to be sent by Brazil against the Nazi armies, are infantry, artillery, engineer, and air force units, military police, medical detachments, and quartermaster and other troops.

The troops have been transported to a camp area, and will be given a short period of intensive training before being sent into the line, where their companions are now pushing ahead through the breached Goth Line fortifications.

Commanded by two Brazilian brigadier generals, the newly-arrived troops were greeted on their arrival by Maj. Gen. Joao Baptista Mascarenhas, commanding general of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force.

The large convoy, escorted by Brazilian and U.S. cruisers, destroyers, other craft, and planes, made the crossing without interference by enemy submarines.

The original contingent of Brazilian troops landed in Italy last July and have since seen heavy action with the 5th Army. They have been commended by General Clark for their excellent progress against the enemy.

Fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force struck at troops and guns in the sector of Cesena, key communications point on the main highway to northern Italy and now only a few miles from advance Allied troops.

The persistent campaign against bridge communications across the Savio River, across which supplies must be carried to Kesselring's troops in this area, has met excellent success, with the destruction of all bridges except one small railroad bridge north of Cesena. The destruction of land communications has forced the Germans to turn to canals and inland waterways in moving supplies to their base at Ravenna.

For the past several days, it is revealed, fighter-bombers have been hammering these targets and yesterday alone destroyed five barges, a 60-foot schooner, and a Siebel ferry, and in addition damaged other rail and river transport.

AMERICANS INCH SLOWLY INTO AACHEN

SHAEF, October 14 — The American advance into the center of Aachen continued slowly today with bitter house-to-house fighting. The Germans have succeeded in strengthening their Aachen garrison by slipping small groups at night through the half-mile wide corridor northeast of the city. Press dispatches report that approximately 1,000 German prisoners have so far been taken.

For 24 hours the Germans have been unable to make any counter-attack to relieve their garrison, and all their efforts to bring up tanks have been repelled. A combined artillery and aerial bombardment in the past two days destroyed 84 tanks and 30 fighter planes, as well as a large armored force massing north of the city.

More than 200 guns, including eight-inch rifles, were turned on German concentrations in the vicinity of Wurselen today. The Germans sustained heavy losses, but press reports stated that the threat of a heavy counter-attack has not yet passed.

Weather conditions today prevented tactical operations against Aachen objectives. An artillery reconnaissance plane report said that not a single building in the city was intact.

The Germans north of Antwerp are fighting hard to keep the Canadian 1st Army from establishing a firm hold on the bottleneck causeway to Beveland and Walcheren Islands. German SS and paratroop spearheads are trying to widen the 600-yard gap to permit the passage of 15,000 trapped troops on the islands.

The Canadian bridgehead over the Leopold Canal has been extended, while Allied troops pushed southward two miles through soggy ground from Biervliet against stiff opposition in an attempt to effect a junction. Canadian tanks have crossed the Leopold Canal over bridges thrown up yesterday by engineers, despite 88-millimeter and mortar shellfire. The tanks are now blasting their way through strong German fortified positions in support of ground forces. Fighter-bombers renewed their attacks on gun emplacements and strongpoints in the Breskens area, on the seaward side of the pocket.

On the eastern flank of the British salient in Holland, 2nd Army troops continued to advance slowly through densely wooded terrain against touch resistance from German infantry and armor. They are now operating three miles from the River Meuse (Maas), in the vicinity of Venraij.

French and American forces have seized four villages and have fought their way to within 12 miles of Schlucht Pass, 28 miles north of Belfort. Pressure is being maintained near Le Thillot, which is now hemmed in on three sides by Allied units.

Far to the west, 60,000 German troops are still holding out in the Atlantic coast ports of St. Nazaire, La Rochelle, and Royan, and are getting ready for renewed battle, a French Forces of the Interior communique stated.

R.A.F. SATURATES DUISBURG WITH 1,500 TONS

LONDON, October 14 — With weather in the Dover Strait the best for several days, a fleet of over 1,000 RAF heavy bombers today attacked Duisberg, while about that many USAAF heavies attacked Cologne. More than 3,300 British and American planes took part in these two major assaults, and in other attacks on military targets in the Saarbrücken and Kaiserslautern areas.

RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes saturated Duisberg with 4,500 tons of high explosives and incendiaries in a concentrated attack lasting only 25 minutes. This operation broke all previous records for the weight of bombs dropped in a single attack on a German city in daylight. Fourteen British bombers are missing.

First reports indicated that great damage was done to Duisberg's rail, port, and industrial installations.

Railway junctions, docks, and factories were all bombed, and very large fires were left burning. As crews turned for home, they saw the whole area obscured with smoke, one column rising to a height of 5,000 feet from burning steel-works.

Although the Germans offered no serious air opposition, one ME-109 attempting to interfere was destroyed. Ground defenses, however, at times put up a heavy barrage.

The 1,000 bombers of the 8th USAAF which attacked Cologne's marshaling yards and other targets were escorted by Thunderbolts and Mustangs numbering more than 1,100. They followed close on the heels of RAF Mosquitoes which attacked Cologne last night, together with other objectives in western Germany.

Medium and fighter-bombers yesterday not only blasted Aachen, but ranged on into western Germany. They destroyed 246 rail cars and damaged 126. They destroyed 42 motor trucks and damaged 30. They wrecked 54 locomotives and damaged two, knocked out eight gun positions, and smashed 19 factories. A bridge was destroyed, and railway lines were cut at 86 places.

Strong German Opposition

Thunderbolts and Lightnings encountered some of the strongest German air opposition in weeks, running into formations of Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs, sometimes 100 strong. In air battles they destroyed 18 German planes and damaged 13. Thirteen American planes were lost, Associated Press reported.

In Holland Mitchells and Bostons late yesterday bombed loaded freight cars at Amersfoort and Utrecht, where the Air Ministry said the Germans were suspected of trying to evacuate troops by rail.

Rocket-firing RAF Typhoons smashed their second German field headquarters in Holland in three days. Yesterday's attack was timed for 1100 hours, when the German commander was believed to hold his daily conference.

AIRBORNE ASSAULT SAVED 25,000 CASUALTIES

LONDON, October 14 — The Allied airborne assault in the Nijmegen and Arnhem areas last month saved the British 2nd Army an estimated 25,000 casualties, and enabled the British to drive 60 miles through the Netherlands, Maj. Gen. Frederick M. Browning, Deputy Commander of the Allied 1st Airborne Army, said here today.

"Our present positions are largely the result of that attack and a study of the map will show that the paratroopers did not die in vain," he said. "I feel certain that the Germans are studying the map with acute apprehension."

General Browning returned General Dwight Eisenhower's tribute to the British 1st Airborne Division by praising the American 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions, which held off terrific attacks, wiped out two enemy wedges across the British salient, and opened an avenue now pointing to the heart of Germany.

The world's greatest airborne operation, General Browning said, has brought the British and American armies closer together than ever. (OWI)

GERMAN TORTURE CHAMBER DISCOVERED

LONDON, October 14 — British troops advancing across Belgium discovered a German torture chamber in an old fort near Breendonck, between Brussels and Antwerp, a Reuter dispatch reported.

British troops were shown rooms where the Gestapo tortured their prisoners. In a lethal chamber, bodies were beaten and shot, and thrown naked on the floor and gassed, whether they were dead or not.

The torture chamber is now empty but for a wooden table and a small stove with a hooked branding iron beside it. From two hooks in the ceiling hung ropes by which victims were hoisted up and down. Across the floor was a streamlet leading to a drain, down which the blood of the tortured men flowed. Electric light wires had been extended from wall plugs to electrocute the prisoners.

For punishment, the report said, prisoners had their wrists shackled to a wall by a one-foot chain in cells measuring six feet by four feet. Their food was placed in a bowl on a low trap door, and by straining forward to the fullest extent of their chains, prisoners were just able to reach the bowl. The German guards frequently left the bowl in that position for only a few minutes, and prisoners unable to reach the food quickly went without. (Reuter)

At the same time, tonight's Soviet communique told of further advances in the Belgrade area and the capture of a town two miles south of the encircled Yugoslav capital.

The Soviet communique also announced gains south of Riga, including the capture of Valmi, a rail station; and gains in Northern Transylvania.

The conference ended abruptly and violently, the Air Ministry said, when the Typhoons put 500-pound bombs on the headquarters buildings and razed them to the ground.

Eight barges were sunk and 21 others damaged in the Scheldt Estuary yesterday by RAF fighter-bombers based on the Continent. The barges were being used to evacuate German troops.

Reconnaissance of Walcheren Island revealed the sea wall breached in many places after the recent attacks, and water penetrating some way inland on a wide front.

A large-scale flying bomb attack was launched from German planes over the North Sea during the night, against southern England and the London area. An American news service said some casualties and damage were caused, but shore defenses knocked down most of the flying bombs and the assault was termed «a failure.»

Casualties from flying-bomb attacks on Britain during September were announced today as 170 killed, including 27 children, and 360 injured. (OWI-Reuter)

RED ARMY, YUGOSLAVS FIGHT GERMANS IN STREETS OF BELGRADE

MOSCOW, October 14 — Red Army and Free Yugoslav troops are «fighting the enemy in the streets of Belgrade,» Marshal Tito announced tonight.

At the same time, tonight's Soviet communique told of further advances in the Belgrade area and the capture of a town two miles south of the encircled Yugoslav capital.

The Soviet communique also announced gains south of Riga, including the capture of Valuzi, a rail station, and gains in Northern Transylvania.

Trapped Germans were the target in heavy Red Air Force bombing attacks on the Baltic port of Memel, in Lithuania, and the East Prussian town of Tilsit.

Nine German transports were in the port when the bombers came over, and the pilots saw a large concentration of troops and military equipment. Forty fires were started, and explosions «of great force» were seen, the communique said.

At Tilsit, the bombers obtained a direct hit on a train in the railroad station and started large fires near bridges across the Niemen River.

The Northern Transylvania fighting was in cooperation with Rumanian troops. Eight railway stations were captured, as well as a number of inhabited localities.

While the fighting raged in Belgrade, Marshal Tito's Partisans advanced on Skoplje, a rail-center in the south of Yugoslavia. Kacanik, 20 miles northwest, and Vranja, 44 miles northeast of Skoplje, were taken.

What the developments of the past few days in the Balkans mean to the Germans is indicated by an Allied military correspondent, who wrote today:

«The German forces in the Balkans are hounded on every side and don't know which way to turn to escape the Allies. Even if they escape the Patriots in Greece, they will run into their equally unhappily-placed compatriots in Yugoslavia, where Marshal Tito's forces, who have linked up with the Red Army, either hold or have cut the roads into Austria.»

The correspondent added that the German supply situation by this time must be chaotic, with depleted petrol supplies limiting the Germans to horse-drawn vehicles.

In addition, a Reuter dispatch pointed out, a German grouping of about six divisions in north Serbia is cut off from direct communication with Hungary and Germany by the severing of the Orient Express railway line at Subotica. In the Nis area, to the south, another large group, estimated at 160,000 men, is virtually trapped. A third major pocket is eastward of Debrecen in Transylvania, where Allied troops draw a noose tighter around approximately 150,000 Germans.

A Finnish communique today reported continued pursuit of the Germans and the capture of Upper Tornio.

AZZOLINI SENTENCED TO 30 YEARS

ROME, October 14 — Vincenzo Azzolini, 53, former director of the Bank of Italy in Rome, was today sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment by a special court sitting in Palazzo Corsini. He was found guilty, under extenuating circumstances, of giving aid to an enemy nation by allowing 117 tons of Italian gold to pass into Nazi hands.

The prosecution had demanded the death penalty.

Azzolini, who heard the verdict without visible emotion, was also ordered by the special High Court of Justice to pay the costs of proceedings and accessory damages in a civil action held concurrently with the criminal trial.

The sentence was pronounced by President Judge Lorenzo Maroni, who, with the special eight-man court, deliberated the verdict for two hours. The courtroom in the Palazzo Corsini, where the six-day trial was held, was packed to capacity.

The prisoner was remanded to the Regina Coeli Jail, adjacent to the Palazzo Corsini near the Tiber River, where he will await transfer to an Italian military prison.

Today's session opened at 0925 hours with the conclusion of a defense summation begun yesterday afternoon by Ettore Botti, associate defense counsel. Botti hammered at arguments previously adduced, by which he attempted to show that Azzolini could not possibly have prevented the Italian gold reserve from falling into the hands of the Nazi invaders. «At that time,» the defense argued, «Rome was an open city, completely unprotected, without any armed force on which Azzolini might call to protect the gold.»

The Nazi occupation made it difficult to decide where or how to hide the gold, Botti said. «How many of you,» he asked, «when trying to hide arms and ammunition from the oppressors, were able to decide in what place, in what manner, and under what circumstances it was best to hide the weapons, or whether it might not be the better part of valor to turn your arms over to the Nazis?»

Botti closed with a stirring appeal for acquittal which brought tears to the eyes of many in the audience.

At the close of the address, the prisoner, speaking to the court, declared:

«I rest on the defense placed before you by my attorneys and place my faith in the sense of justice of the High Court.»

The former bank director's career dates back to 1905, when he was appointed to a minor position in the Italian Treasury. He was appointed director-general of the Bank of Italy in 1931. He has a wife, and three children ranging in age from 15 to 27. (UNN)

ARCHBISHOP RECOUNTS GERMAN ATROCITIES

ROME, October 14 — During his brief stay in Rome, where he was received in audience by Pope Pius XII, Monsignor Giorgis, Archbishop of Fiesole, in an interview granted to a UNN correspondent, describing the brutal acts carried out by the Germans in the Arno district, related how 100 Italians were killed «reprisal for the killing of two German soldiers in the town of Meleto.

The Germans divided their victims into four groups and later massacred them in the square of the town. Don Giovanni Fondelli, the parish priest, who tried to prevent this terrible act, was himself a victim of the Germans, he said.

«When all were massacred,» the prelate added, «German soldiers threw large quantities of gasoline over the heaps of bodies and then set fire to them and to the houses of the vicinity. All families, without exception, had at least one of their members among the burning ashes.

At Castelnuovo dei Sabbioni, the Archbishop of Fiesole stated, he saw 70 bodies lying in the square and recalled that the Germans had issued strict orders against the burial of the bodies.

«When the Germans heard of my coming,» he said, «they burned the corpses and when I arrived in the square the horrible mound was burning frightfully.»

After recounting other brutal acts committed by the Germans, Monsignor Giorgis told the reporter that when he returned to Fiesole, the Germans were carrying out their last depredations before withdrawing. Three parish priests were killed, among them one 80 years of age.

POLISH COMMITTEE CONFERS IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, October 14 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Premier Josef Stalin last night conferred with the President of the Polish Committee of National Liberation, Boleslaw Berut, it was learned today.

Joseph Morawsky and General Michael Rola-Zymierski, director of national defense, met with Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in a conference lasting one hour and a half.

In a broadcast today, Liberation Committee President Berut stated that he was optimistic over the results of the discussions, and that he believed the talks would not take more than two or three days.

«Poland needs unification of all her forces,» Berut said. «The greater part of Poland is still under German domina-

«Citizens of other American nations would agree,» that the present Argentine Government «has frequently evaded compliance with the spirit of its obligations, and that some of its members not only permitted, but even fostered Nazi activities on Argentine territory, which have resulted in grave danger to the safety of other American nations.

«It is also generally felt, I think, that the present Argentine dictatorship has imposed itself upon the Argentine people counter to the will of the great majority of them, and that measures undertaken by this regime are not only repugnant to the freedom-loving peoples of the American continent, but have also assumed many of the most evil aspects of Fascism.

«It was a general impression,» that some officials of the dictatorship «have undoubtedly been inspired by Nazi sympathies and that these, and others, have endeavored to intervene directly in the domestic affairs of Argentina's neighbors for the purpose of procuring the overthrow of existing governments and for prompting hostility against The United States and other governments friendly to this country.

«There is, equally, the far-reaching conviction to be found among all classes of citizens in the American republics that the severance of all official relations with the present Argentine Government, and the subsequent unilateral adoption by The United States of measures which are tantamount to sanctions, have produced results contrary to what the objectives of our own Government, and of many of their Governments really were.»

Welles listed two other root causes of what he described as «deteriorating inter-American relations.» These were, he said, failure on the part of The United States to give assurance of practical post-war economic cooperation to present neighboring economies, and failure to obtain the expression of the opinions or desires of other American nations regarding the nature of the international organization which «we all hope will be functioning upon the conclusion of the war.»

«The feeling persists,» Welles said, «that at a moment of great danger, The United States consulted freely with its American neighbors for purposes of defense, but that it has not seen fit to consult freely with them for the purpose of assuring a united American front when plans for the peace were to be formulated.»

The American Foundation was established on Columbus Day, 1942 — the anniversary of the discovery of the New World — and holds yearly dinners to help finance its Inter-American Bolivar Scholarships. Similar meetings to the one addressed by Sumner Welles were held in several other United States cities. (OWI)

MOSCOW, October 14 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Premier Josef Stalin last night conferred with the President of the Polish Committee of National Liberation, Boleslaw Berut, it was learned today.

Joseph Moravsky and General Michael Rola-Zymierski, director of national defense, met with Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in a conference lasting one hour and a half.

In a broadcast today, Liberation Committee President Berut stated that he was optimistic over the results of the discussions, and that he believed the talks would not take more than two or three days.

«Poland needs unification of all her forces,» Berut said. «The greater part of Poland is still under German domination and, in order to fight successfully, we must achieve unity.»

Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin also conferred last night with the Premier of the Polish Government-in-London, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, and other members of the delegation. They were to have met again today.

WELLES ASKS COMMON ACTION AGAINST ARGENTINA

NEW YORK, October 14 — Common action by all American governments against the regime in Argentina was called for here yesterday by Sumner Welles, former United States Under Secretary of State, in a speech at the third annual dinner of The Americas Foundation.

Welles asked for «the holding without delay of a meeting between all of the American governments . . . so that whatever charges may exist against the Argentine regime may be fully ventilated, in order that the American states may, by common accord thereafter, undertake a common course.»

«Persistence on the part of our government in coercive measures or in unilateral action will only widen the present breach, and may well result in the accentuation of growing antagonism bound to be fatal to the continuation of any healthy inter-American relationship.

found among all classes of citizens in the American republics that the severance of all official relations with the present Argentine Government, and the subsequent unilateral adoption by The United States of measures which are tantamount to sanctions, have produced results contrary to what the objectives of our own Government, and of many of their Governments really were.»

Welles listed two other root causes of what he described as «deteriorating inter-American relations.» These were, he said, failure on the part of The United States to give assurance of practical post-war economic cooperation to present neighboring economies, and failure to obtain the expression of the opinions or desires of other American nations regarding the nature of the international organization which «we all hope will be functioning upon the conclusion of the war.»

«The feeling persists,» Welles said, «that at a moment of great danger, The United States consulted freely with its American neighbors for purposes of defense, but that it has not seen fit to consult freely with them for the purpose of assuring a united American front when plans for the peace were to be formulated.»

The American Foundation was established on Columbus Day, 1942 — the anniversary of the discovery of the New World — and holds yearly dinners to help finance its inter-American Bolivar Scholarships. Similar meetings to the one addressed by Summer Welles were held in several other United States cities.

RUSSIA WANTS DEMOCRACY IN EUROPE

PARIS, October 14 — Russia wants a just peace and the reestablishment of democracy in Europe, the former French Minister for Air, Pierre Cot, said in a lecture on his recent Russian tour.

«When the war is finished, the Soviet Union will surprise the world by her moderation and wisdom,» Cot said. «She wants order in Europe which will prevent all future German aggression.

«We in France must reestablish democracy at home, for this war is a war against Fascism, and the German occupation and the Vichy Régime have left behind many Fascist marks.»

STIMSON SAYS PALESTINE SITUATION CHANGED

WASHINGTON, October 14 — Political considerations now outweigh military strategy in giving the Jews free entry into Palestine, it was stated in a letter from Secretary of War Henry Stimson to Senator Robert Taft of Ohio, and made public here yesterday.

Stimson had objected on military grounds last spring to the legislation calling on The United States to use its influence to open the doors of Palestine for the free entry of the Jews. He wrote, however, «that military factors have now lost strength and political considerations should now govern.»

His letter was in reply to one he had recently received from Senator Taft, who asked whether his reasons for opposing the measure still existed. Senator Taft, together with Senator Robert Wagner of New York, had originally sponsored this resolution.

GERMAN

Western Front:

On the isthmus leading toward the South Beveland Peninsula, five grim enemy attacks were repelled.

At Aix la Chapelle, the Americans achieved only small successes in positional warfare, despite grim tank attacks, owing to the gallant resistance of our grenadiers. They devastated the old imperial city, bombarding areas far beyond our positions with heavy caliber shells and bombs. On the northern fringe of the city, west of Stolberg and in the Hürtgen forest, several enemy attacks were smashed.

Southeast of Remiremont, the Americans resumed their attacks with strong forces on a broad front. There is still fighting at some points of infiltration. Last night, fast bombers and night fighter-bombers attacked enemy supply centers with good success. As to our coastal strongpoints, fierce artillery fire and unsuccessful enemy attacks are reported from Dunkirk and Lorient, respectively.

London was again harassed by « V-1 ».

Italy:

South of Bologna, the American 5th Army continues to launch fierce attacks. South of Vergato, the enemy made some progress and captured a height after fluctuating fighting. East of the Bologna-Florence Road, our grenadiers halted the attacking U. S. formations in grim fighting.

On the Adriatic Front, British attacks were frustrated, and small local infiltrations sealed off.

Armed ferry boats of the Navy and escort vessels of a German convoy sank three British motor assault boats and damaged four others, one of which may be regarded as lost in the waters of the Dalmatian islands and in the northern part of the Adriatic Sea.

Eastern Front:

Southwest of Sofia, at the former western frontiers of Bulgaria, our troops repulsed the attack of a Bulgarian division.

On the banks of the Morawa, between Nis and the Danube and south of Belgrade, attack and defence succeeded each other in fierce fighting. In the Belgrade sector, 30 tanks were destroyed. On the upper reaches of the Tisza, counter-attacks of German and Hungarian formations resulted in additional successes. South of Debreczen, the battle goes on with fierce fighting.

Between Kolosvar and the southern foothills of the Forest Carpathians, our troops withdrew from the northern part of the Szekl corner to new positions, without being disturbed by the enemy.

On the Dukla and Cziroka Valley passes in the eastern [illegible] repulsed enemy attempts at advancing through the

On the banks of the Duena, several Bolshevik attacks broke down. Formations operating on the eastern banks of the Duena were withdrawn to the western banks to shorten the front.

All installations of military importance in the eastern part of the town of Riga were destroyed.

Light German naval forces frustrated additional Soviet landing attempts off the Sworde Peninsula, and sank one landing craft and one motor assault boat. The destruction of another is probable.

Yesterday, the Soviets lost 45 planes in dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force.

In the Bight of Petsamo, fierce fighting is in progress against the enemy who landed. Naval artillery sank a large Bolshevik landing craft. Farther south, our mountain troops frustrated all Soviet attempts at crossing the Naamajoki.

In Norwegian waters, patrol vessels of the Navy sank two Soviet motor assault boats which had attacked unsuccessfully.

Air:

USAAF terror flyers attacked Vienna and upper Silesian territory. In western and southwestern Germany, the civil population suffered losses by indiscriminate bombing and strafing.

396 JAP PLANES DESTROYED
63 JAP SHIPS SUNK OR DAMAGED

PEARL HARBOR, October 13 — A powerful force of swiftly striking carrier-based planes of the United States Pacific Fleet has carried out smashing raids on the Japanese island of Formosa, and on the Pescadores in Formosa Strait.

The attacks were begun on Wednesday with heavy raids on six target areas in Formosa, and continued on Thursday with equally smashing raids on the small Pescadores group.

The United States Naval communique tonight put total Japanese losses at 63 ships sunk or badly damaged, and 396 Japanese planes destroyed.

Total losses of American aircraft in the two-day assault were put at 45. In the first announcement of the Formosa attack, Admiral Chester Nimitz's headquarters said that no damage was done to Fleet surface craft.

From first photographs of the results in Formosa, Nimitz

"Accordingly, they have established an iron wall of defense."

At the same time, the German news agency, DNB, quoted Tokyo as saying that heavy air battles had been raging over Formosa for more than 30 hours.

Subsequently, DNB quoted Japanese sources as saying that the war in east Asia "has now entered its most serious phase." The Japanese were said fully to be aware that this first strike against their "iron wall" at Formosa was only a prelude to coming major events.

Formosa was often described by the Nipponese as their "plane carrier" in the waters of the China Seas. It has been part of the Japanese Empire since 1895, when it was seized from the Chinese.

Neutralization of Formosa is one of the conditions Tokyo strategists have laid down as prerequisite for a successful attack on Japan itself. The other two tactical prerequisites, according to the Tokyo tacticians, are occupation of the Philippines, and neutralization of Rabaul, on New Britain. Rabaul has been "neutralized" for some months.

These attacks on the Pescadores and Formosa followed by only two days the shattering raid on the Ryukyu Islands, which lie between Formosa and the Japanese mainland. In that attack, American aircraft destroyed 89 Japanese planes, and sank or damaged 58 Japanese ships. (OWI)

MOULMEIN RAIDED AGAIN

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HQ, October 13 — RAF bombers of Lord Louis Mountbatten's command returned today to the Moulmein area of lower Burma, and struck rail facilities in the Moulmein yards and shipping in the nearby Gulf of Martaban.

FOOCHOW FALLS; JAPS CLOSE ON KWEILIN

CHUNGKING, October 13 — A spokesman for the Chinese High Command said tonight that Foochow, capital of the Chinese maritime province of Fukien, has fallen to Japanese landing forces which entered the Min Kiang River on September 27. He said the Japanese were in effective control of the Foochow port area on Sunday.

The High Command said Japanese columns advancing on Kweilin, in Kwangsi province, from the east and from the north, have closed their gap to about 60 miles. The Japanese were reported, also, to have broken into the communications center of Kweiping, 70 miles southeast of Liuchow. Chungking said there was bitter fighting in the streets. (OWI)

They sank 16 Japanese ships and damaged 19 others. In addition, they bombed warehouses, hangars, docks, industrial establishments, and other buildings.

The American communique mentioned six different target areas over Formosa. One of these was Tanshui, on the northwestern tip of Formosa — somewhat less than 700 miles from the Japanese mainland island of Kyushu.

Details were scanty tonight on the Pescadores attack. The islands lie between Formosa and the coast of China in the 65-mile-wide Formosa Strait.

« Iron Defense Wall »

Three hours after the devastating raid, Japanese Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, Governor General of Formosa, was summoned to the Imperial Palace by Emperor Hirohito. After the conference, Hasegawa had this to say of the Formosa attacks:

« So they have come at last. The enemy is very audacious. But we, too, have made every preparation to meet him.

« For a long time, Formosa's 6,700,000 people have not only been prepared for air raids, but have also given serious thought to the possibility of enemy landings.

Formosa was often described by the Nipponese as their « plane carrier » in the waters of the China Seas. It has been part of the Japanese Empire since 1895, when it was seized from the Chinese.

Neutralization of Formosa is one of the conditions Tokyo strategists have laid down as prerequisite for a successful attack on Japan itself. The other two tactical prerequisites, according to the Tokyo tacticians, are occupation of the Philippines, and neutralization of Rabaul, on New Britain. Rabaul has been « neutralized » for some months.

These attacks on the Pescadores and Formosa followed by only two days the shattering raid on the Ryukyu Islands, which lie between Formosa and the Japanese mainland. In that attack, American aircraft destroyed 89 Japanese planes, and sank or damaged 58 Japanese ships. (OWI)

MOULMEIN RAIDED AGAIN

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HQ, October 13 — RAF bombers of Lord Louis Mountbatten's command returned today to the Moulmein area of lower Burma, and struck rail facilities in the Moulmein yards and shipping in the nearby Gulf of Martaban.

CHUNGKING, October 13 — A spokesman for the Chinese High Command said tonight that Foochow, capital of the Chinese maritime province of Fukien, has fallen to Japanese landing forces which entered the Min Kiang River on September 27. He said the Japanese were in effective control of the Foochow port area on Sunday.

The High Command said Japanese columns advancing on Kweilin, in Kwangsi province, from the east and from the north, have closed their gap to about 60 miles. The Japanese were reported, also, to have broken into the communications center of Kweiping, 70 miles southeast of Luichow. Chungking said there was bitter fighting in the streets. (OWI)

AMERICAN TROOPS ENTER AACHEN

SHAEF, October 13 — American 1st Army troops and armored elements penetrated into Aachen proper after capturing all of the suburban factory districts on the northeastern outskirts of the city, it was reported tonight.

The entry was made by crossing the railway line into the city. No German artillery fire has been encountered but considerable small arms fire was being met.

American troops are clearing the Germans soldiers out of Aachen, street by street, and house by house, taking many prisoners. American casualties have been light.

Allied aircraft dive-bombed German positions in the center of the city in advance of Allied troops. American artillery yesterday poured 5,000 shells into Aachen, and this number was reported to have been exceeded today.

The Germans wheeled up reinforcements from the Arnhem area, including one of their finest tank divisions, and made a heavy counter-attack at Bardenberg as a last minute attempt to relieve the Aachen garrison. American Thunderbolt dive-bombers have been attacking them since early this morning, and artillery laid down a box barrage against the massing force. A late report tonight stated that 64 German tanks were destroyed and a large armored force almost wiped out.

Farther to the north, increased German artillery fire is being met southeast of Gellenkirchen, and Allied troops near Schaufenberg and Sierstorf, east of Alsdorf, have been bombed.

Leopold Canal Bridgehead Expanded

Hard fighting is taking place between crack German troops and Canadian forces in the pocket south of the Scheldt Estuary. Some progress has been made by the Canadians, who have again been reinforced, and the bridgehead over the Leopold Canal has been expanded.

RAF fighter-bombers, supporting ground operations in this sector, attacked barges which have suddenly filled the waterways between Walcheren Island and the Dutch mainland to the south. It is believed that they are being assembled to evacuate the Germans in the Scheldt pocket.

Reconnaissance photographs show that the sea wall on Walcheren Island has been breached in seven places, the largest gap being 100 feet across, and that the water has flooded the island on a wide front.

Heavy German artillery fire is being directed against Canadian positions east of the Beveland Isthmus. German armored forces have been pulled away from the Dutch communications center of Tilburg to reinforce their troops in the Scheldt island bottleneck which controls the entry into Antwerp harbor.

British 2nd Army forces on the eastern flank of the Dutch salient are now less than four miles from the road and rail center of Venlo, following the recapture of Overloon yesterday. Allied fighters yesterday blasted German troops and strongpoints in this sector, which is 10 miles from the German frontier.

At the northern tip of the salient, the Arnhem bridge over the lower Rhine was destroyed by Allied aircraft as a protective measure against six German divisions massed on the northern bank. British artillery kept up a thunderous non-stop barrage against these German forces all day today.

American 3rd Army troops are fighting hand-to-hand battles with German troops in the streets of Maizieres les Metz, while the underground battle at Fort Driant remained unchanged today. (OWI-Reuter-AP-INS)

AIR FORCES BLAST AACHEN, SUPPORT LAND FORCES

LONDON, October 13 — Long-range British Mosquitoes flew more than 650 of them over the Scheldt Estuary area.

Flying bombs were launched over the North Sea last night. A barrage opened up along the east coast, and watchers believe that at least two of the bombs were destroyed. One which got through crashed in open country.

Some of the results of the recent Allied bombing offensive have been made known today. The Kiel Canal has been completely blocked by Allied bombs or mines. One wall of the canal is reported to have been shattered for 100 yards at one of the narrowest stretches. Except for light craft, all sea traffic between Hamburg and Denmark through the canal has ceased.

Two German towns which served as advanced bases for the defence of the German frontier are now so completely devastated as to be useless, the British Air Ministry announced tonight, in reporting reconnaissance made yesterday. They are Kleve and Emmerich, near Nijmegen, which were attacked in daylight on October 8 by Lancasters and Halifaxes. Both towns were full of stores and equipment and ornament of all kinds.

General Henry Arnold, commander of the USAAF, yesterday revealed that Allied bombers wrecked the Luftwaffe beyond recovery in one week of devastating attacks on German aircraft plants last February. German plane production was thereby cut from 1,650 aircraft of all types monthly down to 800 per month. In contrast to these figures, U. S. aircraft production for February was 8,760.

The USAAF and RAF sent 8,148 bombers, escorted by 4,454 fighters, to drop over 19,000 tons of bombs on air production objectives. In aerial combats during the week the Allies destroyed 642 enemy fighters. They themselves lost 400 bombers and 39 fighters, General Arnold said.

Nearly perfect flying weather favored the seven-day attack. The following German aircraft plants were destroyed: two in Leipzig, two in Regensburg, and one in Gotha. Those damaged included plants at Aschersleben, Bernburg, Brunswick, Augsburg, Steyr, Fürth, Oschersleben and Halberstadt. (OWI-Reuter)

BORDEAUX FIRMLY IN FRENCH HANDS

BORDEAUX, October 13 — In the first press dispatch from here since the city was liberated by French forces, an American correspondent said yesterday that the city, the second largest seaport of France, was again firmly in French hands after its inhabitants had endured four years of martyrdom and purges under the Germans. The dispatch said, in part:

"Port installations are virtually intact. French armed forces are in complete control of the city, although some thousands of Germans are still isolated on both sides of the Gironde River Estuary on which Bordeaux is located.

"The city itself has returned to normal, with buses and street cars running, stores and shops open, and the municipal services functioning.

"Throughout the German occupation, Bordeaux was one of the most important Nazi bases, particularly for the German Navy.

"The repression of the population was carried out by three separate Nazi authorities — the dread Gestapo, the German Army tribunals, and the German Navy's own courts martial." (OWI)

AIR FORCES BLAST AACHEN, SUPPORT LAND FORCES

LONDON, October 13 — Long-range British Mosquitoes yesterday flew to airfields in Czecho-Slovakia and Yugoslavia and destroyed 14 aircraft and damaged others on the ground.

One Canadian wing of the Mosquitoes destroyed eight of the enemy aircraft on two airfields 60 miles south of Prague. Another, in a round trip of more than 2,000 miles to Yugoslavia, destroyed six aircraft on fields near Zagreb.

Other RAF bombers attacked targets at Hamburg and elsewhere in western Germany last night, losing one bomber.

Cooperating with American artillery in the assault on Aachen, Lightnings and Thunderbolts today sent 500-pound bombs crashing into strongpoints and artillery positions in and around the town. Fragmentation bombs fell into a wooded area, where German troops were dug in and were shelling the advancing Americans.

Yesterday, American dive-bombers and artillery combined to wipe out a large German armoured force east of Aachen, near Wurselen. They destroyed 84 German tanks.

Last night, the Germans sent up 150 fighter planes against the American siege lines at Aachen. It was one of the largest forces the enemy has committed to a single action in recent weeks. 12 of the enemy planes were shot down and six were damaged.

The 2nd TAF flew more than 1,300 sorties yesterday in support of British forces in Belgium and Holland. One group was thereby cut from two aircraft to [illegible] down to 900 per month. In contrast to these figures, U. S. aircraft production for February was 8,769.

The USAAF and RAF sent 8,148 bombers, escorted by 4,454 fighters, to drop over 19,000 tons of bombs on air production objectives. In aerial combats during the week the Allies destroyed 642 enemy fighters. They themselves lost 490 bombers and 39 fighters, General Arnold said.

R.A.F. WING HAS TWO LOSSES SINCE D-DAY

LONDON, October 13 — Only two pilots have been lost by one RAF wing which has been dive-bombing and ground strafing in France since D-day, a British United Press correspondent said today.

FACTORY PRODUCING FOR NAZIS THREATENED

PARIS, October 13 — The huge factories of the Peugot Motor Company in the valley of the Doubs, south of Belfort, near the Swiss frontier, are threatened by advancing Allied forces, a London Daily Telegraph correspondent said yesterday.

Before the war, the factories turned out more than 50,000 vehicles a year, and employed more than 18,000 men. The correspondent said that a special detachment of workers from the German Mercedes-Benz plant has been sent to the factories to remove the most valuable machinery to Germany. The remainder is being systematically demolished. (OWI)

GERMAN CIVILIANS BUILD FORTIFICATIONS

WASHINGTON, October 13 — German employers and employees, as well as entire populations of towns along the western front, have been ordered to construct fortifications against the steady Allied advance, it was learned here today.

Nazi district leaders in Saarbrücken ordered the population to participate in trench digging and commanded all enterprises not essential to «life and the war» to close for 10 days to release workers to dig trenches. Only food stores and other public services may remain open for a limited time.

The labor office in Mannheim on orders from Gauleiter Robert Wagner announced that schools in Baden would extend their vacations until further notice, in order that pupils of 12 and 13 might continue to work in war industries and agriculture. (OWI)

GERMAN OFFICERS MUST RENEW PLEDGE

LONDON, October 13 — German officers are again being asked to pledge their loyalty to the Nazi Regime above all military considerations, a Daily Telegraph correspondent said today in a dispatch from the Beveland Isthmus in Holland.

The correspondent said an order of the day has been issued by Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt to all German troops in the Beveland Isthmus area, calling on them to hold out to the last man. At the same time, a written pledge was circulated among the officers in the area. Signatories undertake to fight to the last, and under no circumstances to desert. Unless they reaffirmed their pledge of loyalty, the officers were asked to resign their commissions, the dispatch said. (OWI)

RIGA FALLS TO RED ARMY
SOVIETS ADVANCE IN TRANSYLVANIA, YUGOSLAVIA

MOSCOW, October 13 — The capture of Riga, largest port on the eastern Baltic and last of three Baltic capitals to be liberated, was announced tonight by Marshal Stalin.

His order of the day, addressed to General Maslenikov and Yeremenko, revealed that the Red Army troops who had been steadily constricting the iron band about the city finally took it by storm. The order described Riga as an «important naval base and mighty defense center.»

Another Red Army iron band — around a pocket of German troops in Northern Transylvania — was constricted by the capture of Bistrita and more than 50 other inhabited localities. Bistrita is 48 miles northeast of the Transylvanian center of Cluj, captured Wednesday.

Still another iron ring was tightening around Belgrade. Tonight's Soviet communique told of the capture of a number of inhabited localities in the area in action shared by troops of the Yugoslav People's Army of Liberation. Another railway line was cut, reducing still further German mobility of defense within the pocket.

A special communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters said that units of two corps of the People's Army had penetrated to the «walls» of Belgrade. The Yugoslav communique also announced that Ripat, about 12 miles south of Belgrade, and Beli Potok, the same distance southeast of the city, had been liberated. Knjazevac, 25 miles northeast of Nis, and Leskovac, 22 miles southeast on the Nis-Skoplje railroad, were cleared of Germans, as was Livno, 80 miles east of the Dalmatian port of Split and connected with Split by a railroad.

Elsewhere on the far-flung Eastern front, the Soviet communique said, there was local action. Moscow reports that a great Russian assault against the East Prussian border had begun were without official confirmation. The reports said the attack was going forward on a 200-mile front, while PIBC reported that the Red Army had already crossed the border.

The threat to Cesena, whose capture would give the Allies a firm hold on the Emilia Highway leading into the heart of northern Italy, was increased with the liberation by British troops of the towns of Bagnigano, Massa, and Badia, and the larger town of Montiano.

Montenovo, in the same general area, was taken Wednesday night and the Allied line now forms a rough semi-circle from which advances can be made north toward the highway or northwest toward Cesena.

Farther to the west, advances were reported northwest of Montecodruzzo, seven miles south of Cesena, while the capture of Mt. di Ruffato and Rocchio in the central mountain sector gave Allied troops dominating positions overlooking the Borello Valley.

Only on the coastal sectors did the 8th Army fail to make gains. In this area, the enemy was able to put up strong defenses along a series of canalized rivers situated in this sector.

Improving weather conditions and better terrain resulted in heavy fighting along the 5th Army front astride the Florence-Bologna Road, today's communique stated. While no material advances were reported, infantry units were pushing steadily ahead in the face of increased enemy resistance.

Fanatical enemy opposition was reported on the approaches to Bologna and, with the clearing weather, the full strength of Allied air power was thrown into the battle as heavy, medium, and fighter-bombers bombarded enemy positions between the front lines and the city itself.

A number of important terrain features were taken by Allied troops in one sector, and 300 prisoners were captured.

Lavergnano, 12 miles from the outskirts of the industrial center on a main route to the city, was partly flanked by the 5th Army units, while Molinette, three miles southeast of Lavergnano, was by-passed. A one-mile advance north of Monteramici, farther to the west, also was registered.

Enemy troops, making desperate attempts to retain the high ground still in their control, are continuing to make costly counter-attacks, which have failed to push back the Allies. One such counter-attack Wednesday against Mt. Battiglia, southeast of Bologna, resulted in heavy enemy losses and the capture of 86 prisoners. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. BOMBERS HIT SILESIA AND VIENNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 13 — Strong forces of Liberators and Flying Fortresses attached to the 15th AAF today struck at railroad yards, a large motor plant, and a key rail junction in widespread attacks on targets in Silesia, Vienna, and western Hungary, it was announced here tonight.

The bomber forces, attacking again following their record-breaking assault on German positions around Bologna yesterday, found some targets obscured by clouds, so they bombed by means of instruments with unobserved results. Liberators hitting rail yards found the targets clear, however, and obtained good results. Anti-aircraft fire of varying intensity was encountered. No enemy aircraft were seen.

The targets included the Floridsdorf rail yards and nearby Austrian motor works in the western part of Vienna, the Budaors rail yards, 35 miles west of Budapest on the Budapest-Vienna line; and the Szekesfehervar rail yards,

1,200 TONS ON GERMANS IN BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 1 — More than 1,200 tons of bombs were dropped on German barracks, bivouacs, ammunition factories and supply depots in the 15th AAF's record-breaking assault on enemy positions surrounding Bologna yesterday, it was announced here this afternoon.

The attack, in which more planes were used than in any other single operation of the 15th AAF, was coordinated with attacks by medium bombers, fighter-bombers, and fighters against other German installations along the 5th and 8th Army fronts.

Meanwhile, Mustangs in their second successive day's forays into the Budapest-Vienna area shot down 18 enemy aircraft and destroyed several more on the ground as they went for vital enemy communications in this sector threatened by the advancing Russian Army.

The attack on the Bologna positions encountered no air opposition, although some anti-aircraft fire was met, and three heavy bombers and one escorting plane are missing.

Flying Fortresses with a Lightning fighter escort struck at the German troops' bivouac area four miles south of Bologna, while the other targets were hit by bombs dropped from Liberators.

As the heavy bombers were concentrating their assault on the Bologna area, the medium-bomber offensive on targets in the same area just north of the 5th Army lines attained excellent results in blows at fuel and ammunition dumps, troop concentrations, bivouac areas, command posts, guns, and supply lines. At the same time, Thunderbolts destroyed or damaged about 50 German-occupied buildings, knocked out gun positions, hit rail and motor transport, and destroyed grounded aircraft. Fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force and Mustangs also participated in the tremendous air blow.

Last night, RAF heavy and medium bombers attacked the Bronzolo railyards on the Brenner route with good results. All planes returned to their bases.

Airfields were the chief targets of the strategic fighters which ranged over Hungary in large numbers during the day. Encountering what was described as considerable air opposition for the first time in weeks, Mustangs struck at the Budapest-Vienna area for the second day in a row, and scored several air victories in combat over the targets.

Locomotives, trucks, and barges were also strafed and bombed.

Airdromes at Sereceeles, Kaposvar, Csakvar and Gyor in Hungary were all bombed, and large numbers of planes destroyed on the ground.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force carried out a number of successful missions during the day. Rocket and cannon-firing Beaufighters attacked barracks and motor transport in the Tirana area, while other planes hit enemy shipping in the channels of the northern Adriatic. Spitfires were over Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece in far-flung attacks on motor and rail communications. (PRO)

R. N. CARRIER PLANES BOMB ENEMY IN GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 13 — Naval aircraft from a force of British escort carriers Wednesday carried out heavy assaults against German landingcraft and other naval units along the eastern and northeastern Greek coasts and in other areas, it was announced here today.

Targets in the Gulf of Salonika and the Gulf of Volo were hit, while a large concentration of small enemy craft at Khalkis, midway in the Euboea Channel, south of the Gulf of Volo, was heavily and successfully bombed twice during the day.

Five enemy landing craft loaded with troops, three «E» boats, a large trawler, a ferry, and a flak escort vessel in other areas were attacked, and the «E» boats and trawler destroyed.

Other planes form the carrier force cut the railway between Athens and Salonika, and also destroyed an ammunition train and two locomotives.

Two Royal Navy destroyers, the Laget and the Lookout, operating in support of the 8th Army, yesterday bombarded enemy positions and batteries in the neighborhood of Cesenatico, on the Adriatic coast, north of Rimini. Twelve hundred rounds were fired. (PRO)

ALLIES, GREEK GOVERNMENT ISSUE PROCLAMATIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 13 — Three and a half years after Greece capitulated to Axis military domination, Allied troops are on the move against the invaders and an Allied force is al out to land on the Greek mainland, people, and was dropped in leaflet form on Greek towns and cities.

The Greek Government called for full coöperation of guerrilla and clandestine Patriotic organizations to hasten Allied victory on Greek soil. Police forces and members of the military are instructed to obey Government instructions and to give every assistance to the liberating troops.

«The great hour of freedom has come,» the proclamation stated. Allied troops have landed on Greek soil to dispose of enemy forces and reestablish the national sovereignty of the Greek people, it adds. Fulfillment of all orders of the Allied Command is called for, and particular emphasis is laid on coöperation by Greek Forces of the Interior equipped with arms.

Civil servants are told to remain at their posts and await the orders of their Government; premature and unorganized movements of evacuated portions of the population are forbidden; and the people are requested to avoid political disputes and other differences.

The proclamation pledges that all civil servants «who during the period of occupation conducted themselves in a manner contrary to the national conscience will be removed.»

«The just punishment of these, as well as of every person who collaborated with the enemy, will be swiftly imposed by the Greek State,» the Government statement declared.

Punitive action against Nazi collaborators by isolated individuals or organizations which would be contrary to legal and constitutional procedures for dealing out justice «would constitute an arbitrary usurpation of the functions of the State,» the statement says.

Foodstuffs and relief will be provided by the Allies, it is disclosed, and immediate necessities will be available to aid the Greek people, deprived for many years of essential food and clothing.

Restoration of Nation's Liberties

Full restoration of the nation's liberties is promised by the proclamation which points out that only the Greek people have the sovereign right to decide on their constitution, their social order, and a government of their own choice. They will be called on to make this decision as soon as it is possible, the Government statement declares.

«Together with our Allies, we have already won the war,» the proclamation said. «Let us attain final victory in unity, so as to be able to win the peace as well.»

General Scobie, Commander of the British Forces in Greece, pledged his army to non-interference in the internal affairs of Greece, and said «our only wish is to see her [Greece] as soon as possible happy, prosperous, and united.»

He listed seven ways in which the Greek people and Patriot groups can coöperate with the liberating troops.

Full and prompt compliance with all Greek Government and Allied Command orders is requested, and the people are cautioned against obeying or passing on false orders emanating from the enemy or enemy agents.

The populace is instructed to retain order, and to keep the roads clear, public officials are told to stay at their posts, and the people are asked to remain in their homes.

Conservations of supplies is urged pending organization of a relief program and, finally, coöperation of all Greeks in preserving order and in hastening the work of relief is solicited. (PRO)

ALLIES, GREEK GOVERNMENT ISSUE PROCLAMATIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 13 — Three and a half years after Greece capitulated to Axis military domination, Allied troops are on the move against the invaders and an Allied force is about to land on the Greek mainland, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of the Allied Forces in the Mediterranean, said in a proclamation to the Greek people tonight.

Recalling the «heroic resistance and glorious victories» of the Greek armies fighting against superior forces in 1941, General Wilson said that «three and a half years of untold suffering and privation of a brave nation» is about to be ended with the ousting of the aggressors. Issuing his proclamation in conjunction with military announcements by the Greek Government and by Lt. General Ronald M. Scobie, Commander of the British Forces in Greece, General Wilson called for the cooperation and assistance of the Greek people.

«Final victory is now assured,» he said. «When we were forced to leave Greece in April 1941, you called to us to "come back again," and we are now responding to that call.

«The tasks ahead, in order to assure the distribution of relief, are heavy and pressing,» he continued. «To achieve this object, I call on you all to work together, both amongst yourselves and with us, and to devote to that end the qualities of determination and self-sacrifice you have shown during these last bitter years.»

General Wilson's proclamation, along with the other two, is being broadcast at regular intervals to the Greek people who collaborated with the enemy, will be swiftly imposed by the Greek State,» the Government statement declared.

Punitive action against Nazi collaborators by isolated individuals or organizations which would be contrary to legal and constitutional procedures for dealing out justice «would constitute an arbitrary usurpation of the functions of the State,» the statement says.

Foodstuffs and relief will be provided by the Allies, it is disclosed, and immediate necessities will be available to aid the Greek people, deprived for many years of essential food and clothing.

Restoration of Nation's Liberties

Full restoration of the nation's liberties is promised by the proclamation which points out that only the Greek people have the sovereign right to decide on their constitution, their social order, and a government of their own choice. LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN MINISTERS SPEAK ON ANNIVERSARY

ROME, October 13 — Palmiro Togliatti and Alcide De Gasperi, Italian Ministers Without Portfolio, spoke here yesterday on the first anniversary of Italy's declaration of war against Germany.

Each Minister stressed the importance of the declaration and the determination shown by Italy to assume an active part in the struggle against the common enemy.

«Practically all Italians have shown their keenness to fight wholeheartedly against the Nazis in an effort to liberate their country,» Togliatti asserted.

«The war contribution made by the Italian people has been very great, both in the liberated and occupied regions. Given the opportunity to fight side-by-side with the Allies, the Italians will prove they are willing and ready to fight both for their own liberty, and for the liberty of the world.»

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 787021

Minister De Gasperi declared.

«I would rather not speak today of past events, but instead, look to the future, hoping that our struggle will soon be crowned with success.

«We urged, after the coup d'etat against Mussolini, that a decisive stand be taken against Germany. But the Government in office at that time was of the opinion that this would have been too risky, and, instead, it tried to gain time.

«It is not time for criticism or accusation. War is still being waged. When victory comes, that will be the moment to place the responsibilities for the past faults.

«The Italians are fighting together with the sons of the great Allies. They are fighting in the line, as well as in Partisan warfare.

«On the first anniversary of her co-belligerence, Italy's greatest wish is to see an ever-increasing number of her soldiers, well-armed and well-equipped, in the field — allowing her thus to contribute her share in the liberation of her own territory.

«Should the Allies give her the opportunity to do it, helping her both morally and economically, Italy would like to see her soldiers offer this cooperation to the Allies in every land, and on every ocean, in order to bring about the destruction and the punishment of every form of imperialism.» (UNN)

PRESS COMMENTS ON ITALY'S WAR DECLARATION

ROME, October 13 — The first anniversary of Italy's declaration of war against Germany was today the subject of wide comment in the Rome press.

The Corriere di Roma emphasized the strong and earnest desire of the Italian people to fight alongside the Allies in expelling the Germans from Italy.

«Italians have one desire,» said Il Popolo, «and that is to increase the number of fighting troops, to arm them for victory, and to contribute with their own efforts in liberating Italy.» The newspaper pointed out that Italy is fighting to redeem herself, and wanted an alliance because she insisted on doing everything that would contribute to the common cause.

Referring to the bonds between America and Italy, the Risorgimento Liberale remarked that the declaration of war coincided with the Columbus Day celebration, and in this connection said:

«The Italians of America, both illustrious representatives of our culture and modest workers, are contributing with all their energy to strengthening this tie on which we may rely for the future.»

Pointing out that the Italian people refused to fight for Fascism, Unità stressed the contribution made by the people by their political strikes while a ruling class which had lost all its national dignity was doing its utmost to enrich itself. Speaking of the future of the nation, Unità stressed that the Fascist mentality must disappear, and national life be epurated.

«Let us break with the past and march in step with the Patriots,» the newspaper said. (UNN)

U. S. LABOR LEADERS REPORT ON ITALY VISIT

NEW YORK, October 13 — Two American labor leaders recently returned from a month's visit to Italy reported last night in speeches to the Italian-American Labor Council that there is a new spirit of unity in that country, and that the Italian people are burning to wipe out the disgrace of the Mussolini dictatorship.

Luigi Antonini, Vice President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (American Federation of [illegible] and President of the Council, said:

He added that it would take «time, work, and courage» to rebuild Italy, and the Italians will need all the help they can get from free nations.

Baldanzi's visit to Italy was as CIO delegate to the Italian labor movement, and Antonini served in a similar capacity for the AFL. (OWI)

DEFENSE ASKS DISMISSAL OF AZZOLINI CHARGES

ROME, October 13 — Defense attorneys in the trial of Vincenzo Azzolini, former director of the Bank of Italy in Rome, today asked a special court sitting in the Palazzo Corsini to absolve the accused of all guilt in connection with the transfer of 117 tons of Italian gold reserve from the vaults of the Rome branch of the Bank of Italy to Berlin.

Public Prosecutor Cristoforo De Villa yesterday asked for the death penalty on the charge that Azzolini's alleged participation in the gold transfer had given aid to an enemy nation. Today's session was recessed at 1350 hours, in the midst of a summation by Ettore Botti, second defense attorney.

Annibale Angelucci, the first defense attorney, confining himself to questions of fact, opened the session with the assertion that the accused, standing alone against Nazi demands for the gold, was finally forced to yield to Nazi pressure. The Bank of Italy was the victim of Nazi depredations, not of the defection of its director, he declared.

«Therefore,» continued Angelucci, «the defendant may be made to pay the supreme penalty, or at least death through long imprisonment, if the court is guided by the circumstantial evidence adduced by the prosecution.»

At this point, a lively controversy ensued between Angelucci and the prosecutor, the latter declaring, «I have asked only for the death penalty.»

Basis of Defense

Angelucci based his defense on the assertion that Azzolini was not alone responsible for the protection of the gold. It was also the responsibility of the liberated Italian Government to make provisions for safeguarding it, the defense attorney charged. He added that no other official of the Government made any attempt to keep the hoard from falling into the hands of the Nazis.

Citing as precedent a similar case in France in 1870, Angelucci averred that in that instance the banker was not held responsible, but instead the blame was placed on Marshal Bazaine, a high government official. He pointed to a similar historical precedent in Italy, in which an admiral on trial was simply reduced in rank.

Other arguments advanced by the defense were that it was physically impossible effectively to hide the gold from the Germans, that Azzolini honestly believed that the safest place for the gold was in Rome, where it would be accessible to the Allies, whose arrival was expected hourly, and that Azzolini could not by any means have prevented Vittorio Mussolini from obtaining more than 10,000,000 lire, in which the prosecution charged that Azzolini cooperated.

Angelucci closed with the assertion that the only possible charge that might be leveled at the accused was that he was weak — «but then, in that period, many persons

U. S. LABOR LEADERS REPORT ON ITALY VISIT

NEW YORK, October 13 — Two American labor leaders recently returned from a month's visit to Italy reported last night in speeches to the Italian-American Labor Council that there is a new spirit of unity in that country, and that the Italian people are burning to wipe out the disgrace of the Mussolini dictatorship.

Luigi Antonini, Vice President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union (American Federation of Labor affiliate), and President of the Council said:

«I have faith in the future of our country and in the future of the people of the Italy that is now passing through its last dark hours before the dawn of a happier and brighter day.

«I found everywhere that the Italian people are deeply anxious to atone for the sins and crimes committed by the Mussolini dictatorship against their good name and against them. They have a burning desire to avenge these wrongs, wipe out the disgrace, and vindicate their noble tradition by doing their all to speed the destruction of Nazi-ism and Fascism.

«It is because we have the fullest confidence that our President is determined to do all in his power to lay a firm foundation for them, and lend life to them in liberated Italy, that the Italian-American Labor Council has decided to give him this year's annual Four Freedoms award...»

The other labor leader, George Baldanzi, Executive Vice President of the Textile Workers' Union of America (Congress of Industrial Organizations affiliate), declared:

«The common struggle of the Italian people has created a strong bond between various elements in the social structure. Those on the top level, who were the backbone of Fascism, naturally are not included in this new unity. They continue to lounge around the best hotels, hoping for a return of the old system, but they are not true Italians.»

Angelucci closed with the assertion that the only possible charge that might be leveled at the accused was that he was weak — «but then, in that period, many persons were guilty of weakness.»

COMPENSATORY GRANTS INTRODUCED

ROME, October 13 — Under an agreement reached here this morning between the Italian General Confederation of Labor and representatives of private firms, employees will pay heads of families a basic grant designed as partial compensation for the high cost of living. In Rome, Naples, and Florence, the grant will be 35 lire, and in the rest of Italy, 30 lire daily.

Civil servants were recently granted similar compensation.

The agreement also provided for supplementary grants to heads of families for all dependents, including wives, and relatives without means of self-support.

This second measure contrasts with the Fascist system of providing financial assistance to families solely in proportion to the number of children.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The agreement, which is retroactive to August 16, becomes effective immediately by virtue of the powers delegated to the ICCI, by the Ministries of Industry, Commerce, and Labor, and is expected to be made law at the next meeting of the Council of Ministers. (UNN)

MILAN POLICE CHIEFS ARRESTED

BERNE, October 13 — The former military commander of the Lombard region, General Diamanti, has been arrested by Neo-Fascists in Milan, according to a dispatch to the Swiss newspaper Popolo e Liberta from the Swiss-Italian frontier. He is reported to have been jailed at the San Vittore Prison and accused of corruption.

A preliminary examination of Mondia's case showed that in a few months he had accumulated some 25 to 30 million lire. The dispatch said that his case will shortly come before a military court.

Mondia is alleged to have employed an ingenious system for collecting wealth: his agents were ordered to make contact with persons suspected of trying clandestinely to export foreign exchange, gold, and precious stones.

ROOSEVELT ORDERS MORE FARM MACHINERY

WASHINGTON, October 13 — President Roosevelt has directed War Production Board Chairman J. A. Krug to step up production of farm machinery so that The United States can continue its unprecedentedly high food production into the post-war period.

The President wrote in a letter to Krug, made public at his news conference today:

« Wartime experience has demonstrated that a fully-employed America will consume food in quantities substantially in excess of the pre-war period.

« Our plans call for maintaining full employment at home and hence the production of food for consumption at home must remain at high levels to satisfy the needs and demands of a fully-employed America. »

In addition to domestic needs, the President said, The United States will have vast food exports after the war, sending them overseas both through the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, for liberated countries, and through the commercial channels of foreign trade.

He said that the farm machinery problem already is well in hand, and that very substantial increases in the production of agricultural equipment are being made. Because of the war emergency, however, the President continued, farm machinery had become scarce and obsolete, and some of it had worn out, which is why the WPB should give all possible assistance to the production of new machinery.

The President said he is being kept fully abreast of the Churchill-Stalin conference in Russia, and that he had no idea whether he will meet with the Soviet Premier this year. (OWI)

Other fighters and fighter-bombers provided support for our troops near Arnhem and Nijmegen, and attacked transportation targets in the Amersfoort and Apeldoorn areas, and elsewhere in Holland.

On the east side of the Dutch salient, Allied troops have retaken Overloon. Medium and light bombers hit road junctions at Venraij, south of Overloon.

Aachen was dive-bombed and strafed yesterday by hundreds of fighter-bombers. Other fighter-bombers attacked tanks east of Aachen. Enemy fighters came up to give battle over the city; 12 were shot down and others damaged for a loss of four of our aircraft.

Northeast of Aachen, a heavy enemy counter-attack with infantry and tanks has been launched in the Barden-burg area. Earlier counter-attacks from the east in the vicinity of Verlautenheide and Haaren were repulsed by our artillery. Fighting is still in progress at Haaren and Würselen, where the enemy pocket has been cleared up.

been taken. Heavy counter-attacks were repulsed in this area, as well as in the vicinity of Le Thillot, where our positions were improved.

Elsewhere in the Vosges foothills, activity was limited mostly to artillery exchanges and patrolling. Strong forces of heavy bombers with fighter escort attacked an aircraft component factory at Bremen and other targets in northwest Germany. Other escorted bombers struck at a synthetic oil plant at Wanne-Eickel. Medium and light bombers attacked targets in Memmingen. (Reuter)

Fierce fighting took place in Carnia between Patriot groups and strong German contingents, who are trying to hold open the route to Austria.

BOMBARDMENT OF AACHEN CONTINUES U. S. TROOPS ENTER OUTSKIRTS

SHAEF, October 12 — American 1st Army troops probed through the factory area on the outskirts of Aachen today while heavy artillery and fighter-bombers continued to bombard key German positions. Penetrating troops met little opposition and have gained high ground dominating the city. They are methodically clearing up the factory area, building by building, and are getting into position for an assault on the center of the city.

American fighters and bombers today continued to bomb and strafe the city, sweeping over in waves at 15-minute intervals. Huge fires are blazing in the northeastern outskirts of the town, and during the night nine major fires were seen in the city itself. The bulk of the bombing and shelling has been concentrated on the city's outer rim, as it is believed the center is completely deserted.

The Canadian 1st Army thrust into Beveland and Walcheren Islands has not yet completely cut off the peninsula, as was announced yesterday. Reconnaissance patrols moved westward to test German defenses and to protect the flank of the Canadian forces moving northward to Bergen op Zoom. The Germans are pinned down 400 to 500 yards north of the rail line, and Allied gunners are shelling their positions incessantly.

The two Canadian bridgeheads south of the Schelde Estuary continue to be reinforced. German paratroopers have wedged themselves into the two-mile gap which separates the beachhead troops in the northeast, and Canadian troops who penetrated German positions over the Leopold Canal to the south. Vicious fighting is in progress.

The trapped German garrison at Dunkirk launched a sudden attack last night against the 35-mile Allied perimeter. Hard fighting took place before they were driven back this morning.

At the northwestern tip of the British 2nd Army salient in Holland, German troops withdrew from their precarious position south of the Lower Rhine. British troops now hold a solid line along the southern banks of the river from Arnhem west to Opheusden.

On the east flank of the corridor, British troops made an advance of one mile west of the Meuse (Maas) River against German mortar and artillery fire, to pass beyond the captured town of Overloon.

PLANTS BOMBED AT BREMEN AND WANNE-EICKEL

LONDON, October 12 — In a multi-pronged daylight assault on Germany today, Allied heavy bombers attacked an aircraft components factory at Bremen, synthetic oil plants at Wanne-Eickel in the Ruhr, and gun emplacements near Breskens in Holland, it was officially announced.

The Breskens operations were carried out by RAF Lancaster bombers to support the Allied drive to open the port of Antwerp to military use. Rocket-firing Typhoons attacking shipping off Breskens, hit one vessel of 1,000 tons with a salvo of rockets.

Strong Forces of American Liberators and Flying Fortresses bombed marshaling yards at Bremen and Osnabruck and airdromes and other targets in northwestern Germany. Anti-aircraft fire was moderate, and no aerial opposition was met. Three heavy bombers and six fighters are reported missing.

Escorting fighters shot down 18 German aircraft in combat over the Bremen and Hanover areas. Others went down and strafed locomotives and radio location installations.

Hundreds of American bomber crews were standing by today for possible participation in the annihilation of Aachen, press reports stated. Heavy bombers will not be called in unless the weather is perfect for visual bombing.

Yesterday, Thunderbolts and Lightnings dropped more than 100 tons of bombs on Aachen in five hours.

The two German columns sent from the west to relieve the besieged city yesterday fell back under withering artillery fire and strafing from dive-bombers. The Germans made a futile counter-attack against American troops encircling the town, hitting to the northeast in the vicinity of Würselen. It was the second counter-attack in this sector in two days which had been beaten back.

Ultimatum Not a Precedent

General Eisenhower stated at his press conference today that the surrender ultimatum issued to the German commander at Aachen should not be considered a precedent: the decision was taken by the American field commander, who was left to his own devices as how best to kill German soldiers.

German troops escaping from Aachen by way of the railway line have been shot by German officers, who took up positions in a rail station. Civilians who managed to escape stated that conditions inside of the city are very bad. There has been no water for the last three days, and troops and civilians have been using rain water. Food supplies are running short.

MACARTHUR STRIKES HEAVILY AT BALIKPAPAN

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 13 (Friday) — The Japanese-held oil refineries at Balikpapan, on the east coast of the Netherlands Indies island of Borneo, were struck heavily on Tuesday by fighter-escorted heavy bombers.

General MacArthur's communique said the heavy aircraft struck in five groups, and indicated that their bomb patterns were thickly clustered over wide areas of the target.

This was the first time in a long series of attacks on Balikpapan that General MacArthur's communique mentioned fighter escorts.

Balikpapan lies about 800 miles southwest of Morotai, in the Moluccas — Allied airbase closest to Borneo. (OWI)

Late yesterday, RAF Lancasters, in their third [illegible]ning mission off the Dutch mainland, breached the sea wall on the eastern side of Walcheren Island, making the escape of flood-trapped German troops almost impossible. British, Polish, and Czechoslovak Mustang and Spitfire squadrons were reported to have accompanied the heavy bombers on this mission. They ranged farther east and struck at an important German rail junction at Aurich, 15 miles northeast of Emden. No German interceptors were met.

Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF attacked transportation targets in Germany yesterday. Rail lines west of Cologne, near Bonn, and at Coblenz were hit. In the Saarburg area, two canal locks were destroyed.

Other tactical aircraft struck at German troops lodged in three pockets south of the Schelde Estuary, who are holding up the Canadian 1st Army advance. The villages of Oostburg, Schoondijke, and Sluis were practically obliterated by 500-pound bombs.

Southern England suffered one of its steadiest poundings in months from flying bombs when the Germans made three attacks within a few hours. Fighter-bombers and antiaircraft batteries scored a number of hits, but some missiles exploded inland. (AP)

ENEMY TRAWLERS SUNK OFF DUTCH COAST

LONDON, October 12 — Light coastal forces of the British Navy attacked four heavily-armed enemy trawlers off the Hook of Holland early yesterday morning.

The British ships launched torpedoes, and one of the trawlers was seen to blow up, an Admiralty communique said today. Gunfire hits were reported on a second vessel.

None of the British ships suffered damage. (OWI)

NO RESISTING GERMAN CITY TO BE SPARED

WASHINGTON, October 12 — U. S. Secretary of War Henry Stimson declared at a press conference today that other German cities may expect to suffer the same fate as Aachen, if the German High Command incorporates them into the battle line.

«No German city,» he said, «may expect to have immunity from destruction. There is no middle course. Either surrender or destruction must be chosen by the Nazis.»

Referring to the stepped-up air offensive within recent days, Secretary Stimson said:

«Allied air power has given to enemy industry a taste of what is to come on a larger scale, now that the Germans are driven back to their own frontier, and the German Air Force is losing the advantage of coastal bases and warning systems.»

The Secretary reiterated that the fight on the German western front would be a bitter one. He said the German line is «cohesive,» and that German military discipline is good. He said the German mobilization effort has produced sufficient recruits to form a sizable army — even though their training and quality, he said, are not all the German commanders would desire. (OWI)

GERMAN PEOPLE FIGHTS WITH PISTOL AT ITS BACK

PARIS, October 12 — General Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, summed up the war situation at a press conference today and said that the German people was fighting with a pistol at its back. Otherwise, he said, there would not be enough Germans left fighting to make it a national war. The Supreme Commander said:

«We have a hard job ahead, but victory is certain.

«With the Germans there will be no fraternization. We go in as conquerors. We shall treat them justly, in conformity with civilized standards as exemplified by our governments. We shall have nothing else to do with them, except in necessary official relationship.»

Telling of the press conference, a Reuter Correspondent J. H. Lessing said:

«This was the first time I had attended a meeting with Eisenhower since the day we landed in Sicily, and I found him as much changed as the situation. Then, he was cautious and obviously concerned about the outcome of those all-important operations which were to spell the doom of the Germans in the Mediterranean zone. When I met Eisenhower today, he had many successes behind him and, although he was just as concerned about operations still ahead as in those days, he gave me the impression of being over so much more confident about their outcome...»

NAZIS PLANNING FOR FINAL DESTRUCTION

BASLE, October 12 — The Germans are strengthening their forward positions with their best troops, not for a battle to delay the Allied advance, but for a last all-out fling of destruction, Reuter military commentator Jon Kimche wrote in a dispatch here yesterday.

«The renewal of an Allied offensive on the western front is imminent,» he said. «Fighting will be difficult as long as the Germans are not compelled to move out of their static position. Once that happens, the tables will turn emphatically.

«It is important to consider what the German High Command is attempting to achieve. There is no question of victory, nor is it any longer a question of delaying action.

«As one report after another reaches here of conditions in the Reich, it becomes clear that Germany has neither the moral nor the physical capacity to maintain prolonged resistance. The last mobilization must have reduced war production almost as much as months of Allied bombing. A last, all-out fling of destruction is being planned by the German High Command.

«There are many signs that they recognize the impossibility of a winter war. The talk of German 'maquis', and of new weapons on top of Norwegian mountains, is nothing more than diversion. Germany is not in a position industrially to launch something new with any hope of success.

«If the German home front breaks, once again, neither 'maquis' plans nor those of revenge and destruction against Britain will materialize. A critical phase of the war has now been reached, not only militarily, but also in that the future of Europe may depend on the frustration of final Nazi plans of destruction.

«The Allied High Command can certainly have no illusions about the state of Germany, nor of the intention of its leaders. General Marshall's presence in Europe, and the unfolding of the Soviet offensives in the east, suggest that the final decision is nearer than the purely military appearance of the war would suggest.» (Reuter)

ENEMY TRAWLERS SUNK OFF DUTCH COAST

LONDON, October 12 — Light coastal forces of the British Navy attacked four heavily-armed enemy trawlers off the Hook of Holland early yesterday morning.

The British ships launched torpedoes, and one of the trawlers was seen to blow up, an Admiralty communique said today. Gunfire hits were reported on a second vessel. None of the British ships suffered damage. (OWI)

NO RESISTING GERMAN CITY TO BE SPARED

WASHINGTON, October 12 — U. S. Secretary of War Henry Stimson declared at a press conference today that other German cities may expect to suffer the same fate as Aachen, if the German High Command incorporates them into the battle line.

«No German city,» he said, «may expect to have immunity from destruction. There is no middle course. Either surrender or destruction must be chosen by the Nazis.»

Referring to the stepped-up air offensive within recent days, Secretary Stimson said:

«Allied air power has given to enemy industry a taste of what is to come on a larger scale, now that the Germans are driven back to their own frontier, and the German Air Force is losing the advantage of coastal bases and warning systems.»

The Secretary reiterated that the fight on the German western front would be a bitter one. He said the German line is «cohesive,» and that German military discipline is good. He said the German mobilization effort has produced sufficient recruits to form a sizable army — even though their training and quality, he said, are not all the German commanders would desire. GERMAN PEOPLE FIGHTS WITH PISTOL AT ITS BACK

PARIS, October 12 — General Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, summed up the war situation at a press conference today and said that the German people was fighting with a pistol at its back. Otherwise, he said, there would not be enough Germans left fighting to make it a national war. The Supreme Commander said:

«We have a hard job ahead, but victory is certain.

«With the Germans there will be no fraternization. We go in as conquerors. We shall treat them justly, in conformity with civilized standards as exemplified by our governments. We shall have nothing else to do with them, except in necessary official relationship.»

Eisenhower added:

«The Allied Expeditionary Force will continue to fight aggressively until the war is won. I have complete confidence in the peoples of The United States, Britain, France, and all the United Nations to see this war through to final victory, and as long as they will see it through. I know well that the soldiers, sailors, and airmen possess the indomitable will to win.»

The general said that resumption of full-scale onslaughts against the Germans must await the providing of communications and supplies, which he observed, is a tremendous job. He added, however, that not a single Allied commander was giving the Germans a moment's rest.

Insofar as conditions of weather and terrain permit, he continued, the war goes on steadily and aggressively.

Eisenhower praised the British 1st Airborne Division for providing one of the most gallant examples of courage in this war in its stand near Arnhem. He said its stand, by drawing the fury of the Germans, enabled the Allied forces to hold important bridges. He praised also the U. S. 82nd and 101st Divisions, which supported the British airborne troops.

He termed the present German resistance as born of desperation, rather than common sense.

«It is important to consider what the German High Command is attempting to achieve. There is no question of victory, nor is it any longer a question of delaying action.

«As one report after another reaches here of conditions in the Reich, it becomes clear that Germany has neither the moral nor the physical capacity to maintain prolonged resistance. The last mobilization must have reduced war production almost as much as months of Allied bombing. A last, all-out fling of destruction is being planned by the German High Command.

«Internal disintegration of the Reich, in spite of the control by the Waffen SS and the Gestapo, is proceeding far more rapidly than at the front. No one knows this better than Nazi leaders.

«There are many signs that they recognize the impossibility of a winter war. The talk of German 'maquis' and of new weapons on top of Norwegian mountains, is nothing more than diversion. Germany is not in a position industrially to launch something new with any hope of success.

«If the German home front breaks, once again, neither 'maquis' plans nor those of revenge and destruction against Britain will materialize. A critical phase of the war has now been reached, not only militarily, but also in that the future of Europe may depend on the frustration of final Nazi plans of destruction.

«The Allied High Command can certainly have no illusions about the state of Germany, nor of the intention of its leaders. General Marshall's presence in Europe, and the unfolding of the Soviet offensives in the east, suggest that the final decision is nearer than the purely military appearance of the war would suggest.» (Reuter)

8TH ARMY EXPANDS BRIDGEHEAD TO 10 MILES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 12 — Troops of the 8th Army, expanding their bridgehead across the swollen Fiumicino River to 10 miles in width and pushing westward into the Po Plain in advances of up to two miles, yesterday captured the German stronghold of Longiano, key outpost defense guarding Cesena and the Rimini-Bologna highway, it was announced here this morning.

German forces, dislodged from strong positions they have held for more than a week, have begun to fall back to positions pivoted around the village of Gambettola, only 4½ miles from Cesena, first important city along the Emilia Highway skirting the southern fringe of the Po Valley and leading northwest into the heart of industrial North Italy.

On the 5th Army Front, American troops pushing toward Bologna are engaged in heavy fighting for the key town of Livergnano, which is astride Route 65 at a point 11 miles south of Bologna. Stiffening German resistance was encountered along the entire front, and in contrast to the former tactics of withdrawing after tough delaying actions, the enemy is now making a stubborn stand, counter-attacking when he can, and fighting until killed or captured.

Several counter-attacks against British positions on Mt. Battaglia were thrown back. The position is 11 miles southwest of Imola, between Sunterno and Sesto.

For the first time in recent days, the communique disclosed the position of British troops of the 5th Army when an advance to Barga, 16 miles north of Lucca in the Serchio River Valley, was announced.

The British advance across the Fiumicino River in the Savignano area also resulted in the capture of Gatteo, a mile and a half northwest of Savignano, and San Giovanni in Compito, just west of Savignano. Advance elements are already one mile beyond the strong point of Longiano, and the advance is continuing.

Cesana, key communications point on the Rimini-Bologna Road, came under the threat of Allied guns with the capture of Monteleone, seven miles south of the city, and Montecrampo, two miles farther to the south.

Mercato Saraceno, 13 miles southwest of Cesana, and on the road which leads north to make a junction with the Rimini-Bologna Road, was also taken after being cleared by patrols.

Positions along the Adriatic coastal sector remained unchanged. (PRO)

RECORD M.A.A.F. ASSAULT HITS BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 12 — The heaviest force of bombers ever sent out by the 15th AAF over one target bombarded German communications and other targets on the outskirts of Bologna this morning in a devastating raid, it was announced here tonight.

This force, consisting exclusively of Liberators and Flying Fortresses, attacked in close support of the 5th Army, now approaching the outskirts of Bologna, and dropped explosives on barracks, bivouac areas, stores, and ammunition depots, and other targets situated in a rough circle about the northern Italian industrial center.

Early reports from bomber crews and accompanying fighters indicated a complete absence of air opposition, but anti-aircraft fire accounted for a few of the four-engined bombers, the announcement of the record raid said.

Among the specific targets hit by the assault were four stores depots, two barracks, a group of workshops, an ammunition depot, and an ammunition factory.

Just south of Bologna, Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers concentrated on targets in the immediate battle area, and seven waves of B-25 Mitchells penetrated cloud cover this morning to attack storage and bivouac areas and troop concentrations, starting explosions and fires. Excellent results were reported from P-47 Thunderbolt attacks on occupied buildings and gun positions in the same area.

Today's attack, exceeding in numbers of planes used the previous record raid by the 15th AAF on Budapest last spring, was in direct support of Allied troops last reported approximately 11 miles from Bologna.

Fragmentation and demolition bombs were dropped. (PRO)

15th AAF heavy bombers, in a daylight attack, struck at ordnance and motor works as well as rail lines in the Vienna area. Clouds obscured most of the targets, and bombing was done with instruments.

ALBANIAN PARTISANS CAPTURE GJASHDLE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 12 — Using a captured 25-pounder German gun, Albanian Partisans have completely cleared the town of Gjashdle, two miles east of the port town of Sarande, taken earlier in the week by British troops, it was announced here this morning.

Over 600 Nazi prisoners have been taken by the British in the fighting in this area, and the Partisans were said to be holding at least 100 more. In addition, large numbers of the enemy were killed. Allied casualties are slight.

A varied assortment of German equipment has already been classified, including 24-pounder guns, Italian 77-mm. howitzers, German 20-mm. flak guns, staff cars, small arms, diesel oil, and other miscellaneous equipment. (PRO)

R. N. DESTROYERS SUPPORT ALBANIAN ACTION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 12 — Two destroyers of the Royal Navy, supporting Allied troops moving along the Albanian coast north of Corfu, successfully bombarded enemy batteries last Monday, it was announced today. Other naval units have captured several enemy boats, operating in the same area in recent days, and have made their crews prisoner.

Aircraft of the Royal Navy bombarded a thousand-ton merchant ship in the Greek Gulf of Petali last Sunday, the announcement said, and also hit a ferry. Two locomotives and 20 trucks were destroyed in the same operation.

THREE ITALIAN SOLDIERS GIVEN U. S. AWARD

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 12 — Because they risked their lives to save two American airmen from a burning Liberator bomber, three soldiers of the Italian Army yesterday were presented with the Soldier's Medal, U. S. military award for bravery, it was announced here today.

The award was made by Brig. Gen. Fay Upthegrove, a wing commander of the U. S. 15th USAAF, and was accompanied by a citation from Lieut. Gen. Ira Eaker, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces.

The three soldiers are: Sgt. Maj. Nicola Surdo, 8 de Santani, Bari; Sgt. Maj. Santo Tedone, Ruvo di Puglia; and Private Giovanni Pannetta, Pisticci, Potenza.

At great peril to themselves, the soldiers rescued the airmen from their burning Liberator bomber on July 25 after the ship had crashed in a field near where they were working.

Exploding demolition bombs and burning gasoline failed to stop the three soldiers as they made their way toward the plane and rescued two injured men, who had been thrown a few feet from the wreckage.

They carried the two airmen to an American field hospital, and then rushed back to the burning plane to attempt further rescues. However, as they returned to the bomber an explosion demolished the ship, making it impossible for them to save the others in the crew. (PRO)

In the Bologna area, Marauder bombers went for bridges and an ammunition dump, while other medium and light bombers supported Allied troops pressing on the key city with attacks on communications and gun positions in the battle area.

P-51 Mustangs, ranging across Czecho-Slovakia and Hungary, strafed an airfield north of Budapest and another field north of Brao. Three enemy fighters encountered over the latter target were brought down.

The Mustangs also went for rail and oil targets and were credited with destruction of 58 locomotives, five oil storage tanks, 15 oil tank cars, and four flat cars loaded with armoured vehicles.

Other Mustangs of the Desert Air Force, ranging over northern Italy, destroyed 15 enemy locomotives, damaged several others, and also hit two merchant vessels of about 2,000 tons each in Parenzo harbor on the west coast of the Istrian Peninsula.

RED ARMY TAKES VITAL TRANSYLVANIAN CITY

MOSCOW, October 12 — Russian forces, widening their offensive sweep into the Hungarian plains country, today took the Transylvanian city of Oradea-Mare, on the right flank of their drive toward Budapest.

Fall of the city was announced in an order of the day by Marshal Stalin, in which the city was described as a "mighty" strong-point in the German defenses of central Europe, and as an important communications center.

The order was addressed to Marshal Malinovsky and his troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front.

In the Baltic region to the north, Russian troops smashed to within 2 1/2 miles of the Latvian capital of Riga tonight, after days of intense artillery and aerial bombardment of the city's outer defenses.

Other Russian forces, in the offensive against East Prussia, overran 60 small towns and villages around the Lithuanian port of Memel. A Reuter dispatch said that the Germans were counter-attacking bitterly in the Memel area, trying to hold off the Russian push against one of the few remaining ports out of which the Nazis can still hope to evacuate trapped troops.

Of the battle for Hungary, Reuter said tonight that Russian operations were swinging into the final phase, with the Germans and Hungarians trying to withdraw across the Tisa River for the last-ditch defense of Budapest.

Russian battle-line dispatches indicated that the Red Army was more interested in widening and consolidating the Hungarian salient at the moment, than in putting all efforts into an assault on the Hungarian capital.

Dispatches said Russian troops were fighting in the streets of Debrecen, the third largest city of Hungary, lying 116 miles east of Budapest. This assault north and east of the point where Russian troops first entered Hungary is toward the Red Army column thrusting down into Slovakia from the northern Carpathians.

The drive over the Carpathians, according to a Czecho-Slovak communique, has broken through into Czech territory, and a small Czech town has already been liberated. The communique said the Russian penetration was supported by the Czecho-Slovak 1st Army Corps.

Marshal Tito's communique said tonight that Russian and Yugoslav troops operating in Serbia have cut the remaining German occupation forces into two groups, and that action to compress the pockets was being carried out.

To the north of encircled Belgrade, Russian troops have taken the Yugoslav railway-junction city of Subotica, a few miles southwest of the Hungarian city of Szeged, which fell yesterday. (Reuter)

11TH ISLE IN PALAU GROUP SEIZED

ALLIED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HQ, October 12 — Troops of the United States 81st Infantry Division have landed unopposed on Pasikesekl Islet, seven miles northwest of recently-occupied Carakayo Islet in the Palau Group, it was officially announced here today.

This is the 11th islet invaded during the Palau campaign.

Marines on Peleliu, in the Palau Group, have exploded an ammunition dump in one of the few cave positions still left to the Japanese, the communique said.

A recent communique stated in error that Japanese dead on Peleliu amounted to 11,083. The figure should have read 10,083. Additional figures up to October 10 bring the total of enemy dead on Peleliu to 10,305. On Angaur, the number of enemy dead up to October 10 was 1,165. On Peleliu, 284 Japanese have been taken prisoner. On Angaur, 11 have been taken. In addition, 194 civilians have been interned on Angaur.

Balikpapan, the major Borneo oil-refining center and source of 15 per cent of Japan's aviation spirit, was blasted for four hours Sunday by Liberator bombers.

On Monday Allied bombers dropped 74 tons of bombs on the Ceram Island port of Piela and struck airdromes and oil-storage depots on Amboina Island, where large fires started.

Six more Japanese barges, attempting to find sanctuary off Morotai in the Moluccas, have been sunk by Allied fighter planes, said General MacArthur's communique today.

Mitchell bombers manned by Netherlands and Australian pilots destroyed a small enemy freighter and a schooner off Koepang, Timor.

On Monday supply dumps, personnel areas and a radio station on Pagan Island in the Marianas were bombed and strafed. One Allied plane was shot down by anti-aircraft fire, but the pilot was saved. (OWI-Reuter)

R.A.F. ATTACKS MOULMEIN HARBOR, RAIL YARDS

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HQ, October 12 — The vital Japanese supply base of Moulmein, in southern Burma, was hit yesterday by RAF Mosquitos and Beaufighters, which shot up and bombed the rail yards and harbor shipping.

Rolling stock in the rail yards was heavily damaged, along with three adjacent factories, while in the harbor and in the Gulf of Martaban, Beaufighters sank one vessel.

LIBERATED ITALY

BONOMI ASKS STATUS OF ALLY FOR ITALY

ROME, October 12 — Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi in a Columbus Day broadcast today to Italian-Americans, pleaded that Italy should now be considered as a full ally.

Bonomi added: «At present, we are not Allies, but simply co-belligerents. We are joined to you in the struggle, we are your equals in the sacrifices; yet we must remain in a position of inferiority.»

Bonomi recalled how, through the blending of many nationalities, a new people arose in America who had not inherited the ancient feuds which made Europe a battle-ground. Thus, he said, they escaped the domination of adventurers such as those who, for the last 20 years, had subjected to their brutal doctrine the Italian people, cutting them off from the people of the United States.

«But today,» the Prime Minister continued, «the Italy which speaks through me is the democratic Italy which you have always loved. It is the Italy of the Risorgimento — the Italy which accomplished the miracle of a unifying and liberal revolution; the Italy which in 1918 was your ally in the war against German militarism... Today, this Italy, old and new, returns to your side and greets you on this auspicious day with the same joy with which our liberated population welcomes the American troops...»

Emphasizing that no country can emerge from a shameful period in its history without a painful process of redemption, Bonomi declared that this process is already taking place, and is one of the hardest and most severe.

«Italy today,» he said, «has suffered enough to feel herself purified and renewed. She is now well worthy of resuming her place among the free democracies, and justified in asking the American people to accept her as a sister nation who has suffered much and expiated much.»

Speaking of the common ideals which unite Americans and Italians, Bonomi said:

«We too desire that man should rise again to full consciousness of his rights and obligations, that he be freed from misery and ignorance, and that he be worthy to take his place among a free community of equals, in which only merit determines extent of power and function.»

Bonomi concluded:

«The future which is about to unfold before us is the future of which we dreamed a quarter of a century ago, at the end of another war. We failed then in our purpose. Today, we shall not fail again... The world must have a stable peace, and liberty must not again be menaced.

«Italy, which fought the other war with this bright hope, returns today to the ranks with the same faith... I bid you accept this returning Italy, who on this day... asks for herself only that justice to which she is entitled.» (UNN)

BONOMI TELEGRAM TO ROOSEVELT

ROME, October 12 — In a Columbus Day telegram to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Bonomi said today that the Italian people know they can count on American friendship and support in their present trials.

«The name of Columbus,» said the message, «is the concrete symbol of the centuries-old ties which link Italy to the United States — ties today cemented and consolidated by blood shed in common against the common enemy, and splendidly confirmed by the generous and spontaneous sympathy shown us in our present sorrows and hardships by the great North American republic.

BIDDLE LAUDS ITALY

NEW YORK, October 12 — The Italian-American Labor Council tonight presented to President Roosevelt the Four Freedoms award. The award was given to the President's representative, U. S. Attorney General Francis Biddle, at a Columbus Day dinner which was one of many observances throughout the country.

Attorney General Biddle declared that every possible effort, subject only to military necessities, is being made to permit the Italian people to help themselves. He said:

«No civilization can go unscathed from 20 years of Fascist misrule. But that people which produced Dante, da Vinci, Michaelangelo, Galileo, and Columbus, cannot long be delayed by the depredations of sawdust Caesar. One day, sooner than most Italians dare hope, Italy will be restored to her proud place among nations.»

The discovery of America by Columbus 452 years ago, Biddle said, is now as symbolic as it then was prophetic.

«A direct product of Italian imagination,» he continued, «was to link the ancient thought and culture of the old world with the boundless vision of the new. Today, that link is the symbol of an uninterrupted friendship of two peoples, measuring nearly half a thousand years — a friendship which endured until Italy was taken into captivity by lackey Fascists who appreciated nothing of her ancient heritage, and cared even less for her great future.

President Roosevelt maintained long ago, Biddle said, that the Hitler-Mussolini alliance was a «monstrous crime» against the Italian people.

«Accordingly,» he said, «just two years ago I promulgated the order by which Italian nationals were henceforth to be regarded in their true status: non-enemy aliens.

«It is therefore with no ordinary pride that I present this Four Freedoms award to the President. It presents not only a hope for the future, but a justified belief of the past. It marks an act of faith, and an act of faith repaid — without which there can be no road to peace.» (OWI)

SFORZA MESSAGE TO U. S.

ROME, October 12 — In a Columbus Day broadcast to America today, Count Carlo Sforza, Minister without Portfolio, asked the United States to show Italy generosity and confidence as the best way of serving American interests.

As an instance of how successful such a policy had been, he recalled the action of Attorney General Francis Biddle in removing the stigma of «enemy alien» from the numerous Italians in the United States, who subsequently performed much useful work in American factories, arsenals, and ports.

«You will realize,» he continued, «that, in order to give employment to 44 million Italians, united today for final victory, tomorrow for the final peace of the world, the first necessity is to make our people feel that you have entire confidence in democratic Italy.»

Emphasizing that the present Italian leaders never lost faith in democracy, Sforza said:

«From the beginning, they identified the cause of Italy with the cause of world liberty, and hence with the cause of the great democracies.» (UNN)

EDEN «STATEMENT» ON COLONIES

ROME, October 12 — Minutes of a recent session of the British House of Commons, at which disposition of

«Azzolini,» declared the prosecutor, «has repeatedly denied having connived and cooperated with politicians of the defunct régime, but all his actions demonstrate the contrary... He preferred to acquiesce and applaud, preoccupied solely with maintaining a position of eminence attained by obsequious subservience, rather than real merit.»

Nazi depredations elsewhere, the prosecutor asserted, should have warned Azzolini of the Nazi intention when they first asked for the Italian gold. Further proof that Azzolini was aware of the Nazis' intentions toward the gold, De Villa pointed out, was contained in the testimony of prosecution witness Nicola Introna, functionary of the Bank of Italy, who declared that Azzolini had spoken with him about a hide-away for the gold.

Refuting the claim that Azzolini had resisted every attempt of the Nazis to obtain the gold hoard, the prosecutor declared that Azzolini did not even put up a minimum of resistance at the time it was removed from the subterranean vaults of the bank.

Buttressing his charge that Azzolini was cooperating fully with the Fascists, De Villa referred to two letters, introduced by him yesterday, which showed that the accused had aided in the transfer of more than 10 million lire of state funds to the account of Vittorio Mussolini, son of the ex-dictator.

«Further to give the lie to the accused,» the prosecutor declared, «there are the minutes of meetings of the Board of Directors of the Bank of Italy over a period of 20 years, in which there is nothing but praise for the Fascist Régime, and especially for its chief.»

In concluding his summation, De Villa declared that Azzolini's action, in turning over the gold to the Nazis, gave aid and comfort to an enemy nation, a crime punishable by death under section 55 of the Italian Military Penal Code.

Sinibaldo Tino's summation in the interests of the Bank of Italy's concurrent civil trial was a fiery denunciation of the prisoner, in which he charged that nowhere in the testimony was evidence given that Azzolini had made any attempt to protect the gold reserve from the Nazis. Throughout his speech, he emphasized the testimony which indicated that Azzolini was collaborating fully with the Nazis when the gold was removed from the Bank of Italy vaults.

Two defense attorneys will sum up at tomorrow's session, scheduled to begin at 0900 hours.

The court then will retire to deliberate on the verdict, which is expected either late tomorrow night or Saturday. (UNN)

DEATH PENALTY ASKED FOR AZZOLINI

ROME, October 12 — Public Prosecutor Cristoforo De Villa this afternoon asked the death penalty for Vincenzo Azzolini, former director of the Bank of Italy in Rome, if adjudged guilty of having caused 117 tons of Italian gold to be shipped to Berlin. The demand for the death verdict climaxed the fourth day of the trial held before a special court in Palazzo Corsini.

The accused listened intently to the prosecutor's 70-minute summation.

The prosecutor attacked yesterday's defense testimony, which presented Azzolini as a man, highly esteemed in international banking circles, who had been unjustly accused of having connived with the Nazis and Fascists.

POLISH PREMIER ARRIVES IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, October 12 — Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who had received an invitation to attend the conference between Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, arrived here today. (Reuter)

MOSCOW CONFERENCE SEEN AS «GOING WELL»

MOSCOW, October 12 — Allied circles here were said today to be «generally optimistic» about the outcome of military, political, and economic discussions going on around the central platform of the conference between Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Premier Josef Stalin.

An American correspondent, recalling that Churchill said he had come to speak his mind when he arrived here on Sunday, said tonight that it was clear that Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin are not only speaking their minds, but that the conference is a close «meeting of minds.» He added:

«Allied circles are generally optimistic. The Russians are good actors, but seldom are able to conceal their feelings when things are going badly. Their attitude now indicates that things are going well.»

The dispatch said the talks between Churchill and Stalin are concerned with post-war problems, although British and Russian officers are still deeply involved in tactics and strategy for the final blow to defeat Hitler.

Many other problems, said the correspondent, must certainly be receiving attention at the conference, such as the supposedly imminent capitulation of Hungary, and the fates of Bulgaria and Rumania — wherein the Allies have large vested interests still unsettled.

And now, said the dispatch, the arrival of Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, of the Polish Government in London, has brought the subject of the future Poland into the forefront. Mikolajczyk, under Churchill-Stalin guidance, was scheduled to start negotiations with the Soviet-sponsored Polish Committee of National Liberation.

Diplomatic observers said that Marshal Stalin's remarks at Tuesday night's state banquet set «a masterly lead» for the discussions when he called for a strong post-war security organization as the only check against aggressor nations. His emphasis on this point was interpreted as a confirmation of past Soviet assertions that Russia's only aim is for peace and an opportunity to build up her vast country, with resulting happiness, comfort, and security for her many millions of people.

Stalin's statement was described in diplomatic circles as «the greatest kind of contribution to future Allied cooperation.»

Last night, British Ambassador Sir Archibald Clark Kerr honored Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin at a dinner. An unplanned feature of the occasion was the firing of Moscow's victory guns saluting the Red Army capture of Cluj, Transylvania capital. Exclaiming that this was the first such salute he had witnessed, Mr. Churchill led the way to the broad windows of the dining room to watch the spectacle.

From London, a dispatch by the Daily Mail diplomatic correspondent asserted that Marshal Tito is going to Moscow for a conference with the two leaders. (OWI-Reuter)

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR PEACE ORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, October 12 — President Roosevelt, in a Columbus Day radio address before the chiefs of the diplomatic missions of other American Republics, said today that it is America's «objective to establish the solid foundations of the peace organization without further delay, and without waiting for the end of hostilities.»

He also praised the Italians for their part in the liberation of Italy.

Of the peace organization, the President said, «Substantial progress has already been made, and it must be continued as rapidly as possible.» He said that there must be time for thorough discussion of the peace organization by «all the peace-loving nations — large and small.»

Mr. Roosevelt paid tribute to the Italians fighting for the liberation of their country in the Allied armies and in the underground forces behind the German lines. He added:

«One of the many reasons why the forces of liberation have been welcomed so cordially by the Italian people after 20 years of Fascism is that there is hardly a town or village in Italy that does not contain families who have blood ties with the New World.

«It is a significant fact in this hemisphere that today in Italy, the homeland of Columbus, forces from many distant parts of the civilized world are fighting for freedom against the German threat of medieval tyranny. Serving with the Allied armies in Italy are men from the United States, Great Britain, Canada, Ireland, New Zealand, South Africa, and India, as well as strong, well-trained, well-equipped forces from Brazil.»

Speaking of inter-American solidarity when the Japanese attacked, President Roosevelt said:

«We have maintained that solidarity of governments of all American republics — except one. We have not labored long and faithfully to build in this new world a system of international security and cooperation merely to let it be dissipated in any period of post-war indifference.»

DUMBARTON OAKS PLAN DIFFERS FROM LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, October 12 — Experts here today outlined the major differences between the post-war security organization proposed in the Dumbarton Oaks conferences, and the League of Nations. They are as follows:

Powers in the field of security.

1. The organization would be empowered to deal not only with acts of aggression or war, as was the League, but would be empowered also to act where threats to or breaches of the peace are involved.

2. Unlike the League, where both the Assembly and immediately available national air force contingents for combined international enforcement action.

Economic and social cooperation.

1. The organization would be empowered to consider not only an enumerated list of problems in the field of economic and social cooperation, as was the League, but also to facilitate by its recommendations the solution of these and other humanitarian problems generally, and to promote respect for human rights and fundamental freedom.

2. Unlike the League, where both the Assembly and the Council had similar functions with respect to economic and social questions, the proposed organization would assign responsibility for recommendations in this field to the General Assembly, and, under its authority, to an Economic and Social Council.

3. In contrast to the League, which provided for placing only existing international bureaus under its direction, it is provided in the present proposal that each specialized economic, social, and other organizationship with the proposed organization on mutually agreeable terms, and that the General Assembly should make recommendations for the coordination of the policies of these agencies.

Voting and structure.

1. The unanimity rule that prevailed in the League would not be applied in the new organization, except in restricted categories of cases yet completely to be defined, where unanimity of the permanent members of the Security Council would be necessary. The General Assembly would deal with important questions by a two-thirds majority vote, and the Economic and Social Council would make its recommendations by majority vote.

2. The proposed organization would not have only one Council to act on all matters, as did the League, but would have, instead, more specialized councils, including a Security Council and an Economic and Social Council, each with responsibilities in clearly-defined fields and with different composition and powers to correspond with their specialized tasks.

3. The International Court of Justice would be one of the principal organs of the proposed organization, instead of being a related body as was the case with the Permanent Court of International Justice.

4. The Military Staff Committee, composed of the chiefs of staff of the permanent members of the Security Council, would be a new feature in international organization.

5. The development of semi-permanent seats, which occurred in connexion with the League Council, would be precluded in the proposed Security Council by the provision of reelection.

Membership.

1. New members of the proposed organization would be admitted by action of the General Assembly upon recommendation of the Security Council, not simply by action of the Assembly, as in the League.

2. The proposed organization would ensure that states not members of the organization act in accordance with the principles of the organization so far as might be necessary for the maintenance of international peace and security, whereas the League Covenant contained no such provision with respect to non-member states.

3. Provision would be made for the suspension from the exercises of any right or privilege of membership, of the organization against which preventive or enforcement action might be taken a provision not contained in the League Covenant.

Independence of treaty.

The charter of the proposed organization would be an independent instrument, unlike the League Covenant, which was part of the Treaty of Versailles. (OWI)

3. The proposed organization, in contrast to the League, would be empowered to decide whether regional agencies or arrangements, and their actions in the field of pacific settlement and enforcement, were consistent with the purposes and principles of the organization. No enforcement action would be permitted under regional arrangements, or by regional agencies, without the authorization of the Security Council.

4. The projected agreements and arrangements for provision of armed forces, facilities, and assistance would strengthen much beyond the powers of the League Council the powers of the Security Council in enforcement action by placing two basic obligations on states not explicitly recognized under the League, namely, the obligation to make available forces, facilities, and assistance necessary to the Security Council in maintaining peace, and to hold

HALF U. S. RESOURCES DEVOTED TO WAR

NEW ORLEANS, October 12 — Half the total resources of the United States are now being devoted to waging war, Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau told a war bond rally here today.

« Since Pearl Harbor, » said Secretary Morgenthau, « war expenditures have amounted to about 208,000 million dollars.

« During this period non-war expenditures have been kept down to 16,000 million dollars, making a total government outlay for the course of the war to date, of 224,000 million dollars. »

Secretary Morgenthau said that approximately 39 per cent of the total bill had been met by revenue.

During the fiscal year just ended, expenditures were slightly more than 95,000 million dollars, and net receipts climbed to a little more than 44,000 million dollars, or 46 per cent.

« This means, » he said, « that there has been an upward trend in our coverage of war costs through taxation. It is a trend which may be surprising to some, and which certainly should be encouraging to all. » (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 12 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots of the Domodossola sector now have at their disposal several airplanes, with which they bombed Fascist positions at Luino and at Laveno on Lake Maggiore. Two transports of Fascist troops were sunk following Patriot air raids.

The Osoppo Garibaldi Brigade, which is operating in Udine Province, carried out several attacks against the Trieste-Venice highway, and on the Sacile-Caserta line, during the period September 15-28. In these actions, the Germans suffered the loss of 52 dead, 32 wounded,and 18 prisoners. Nineteen acts of sabotage carried out by the same brigade resulted in eight locomotives being rendered unserviceable, 12 trains burned, and two freight cars destroyed. On September 28, the enemy began a violent offensive against the Osoppo Brigade in the sector between the villages of Nimis, Attimis, and Faedis, with the strong support of artillery, armored cars, and tanks.

A two-fold attack was launched by the Nazi-Fascists against Patriot positions in Val Torre and Val Natisone. In the fighting that followed, the enemy suffered heavy losses.

After offering stout resistance, the Patriots retired to more advantageous positions. The Nazi-Fascists took advantage of this to set fire to homes and to deport the inhabitants. The villages of Faedis, Attimis, Forame, Subit, and Nimis were devastated and burned by the German troops.

All civilians over 14 years of of age have been deported to Germany.

Latest particulars on the battle fought by Patriots in defense of Monte Grappa on September 8 confirm the heavy losses inflicted on the enemy. The commander of the Italia Libera Patriot Battalion, Lieut. Ludovico Todesco, was killed after a heroic fight. One hundred and twenty-four Patriots who were taken prisoner, after having fought to the last cartridge, were barbarously hanged and 22 were shot in different towns at the foot of the Alps — in particular at Bassano del Grappa. Mussolini sent his congratulations to the Vicenza Blackshirt Brigade, which distinguished itself for hanging Patriots.

Enemy attempts at mopping-up operations in Val Trompia and in the vicinity of Brescia were unsuccessful.

Patriots operating in the sector farther south interrupted the highway between Bobbio and Santo Stefano d'Aveto. On September 19, between Cortemaggiore and Fiorenzuola d'Adda, in Piacenza Province, Patriots captured two tanks full of gasoline.

On the same day, a clash took place near Cadeo, where the Germans suffered losses in men and materiel. (UNN)

Western Front: Walter Plato reports: «The battle for the possession of Aachen is again developing into the dramatic focal point of the fighting on the western front. Suffering the heaviest losses in men and material, General Hodges is waging an embittered struggle in an effort to encircle the city. It even seems as if the Americans are willing to neglect the other front sectors, in order to force a success in Aachen.»

Eastern Front: Colonel von Oiberg writes: «The battle of Hungary has now entered the decisive stage, after lightning operations by both parties which have taken place in the past three days. South of Debreczen, a battle by German tanks continues; they attacked the Russians from the north, in the flank, and thus encircled several corps.»
