During today, on the territory of Czechoslovakia, our troops continued fighting for the expansion of the bridgehead on the western bank of the Ondava, and occupied the following populated localities: Sochurov, Kolyanka, Kokolyani, Vishnev, Dvoryanki, Albin, Gryadki, Tsehovtse, Maliye Ozorovtse, Velikie Ozorovtse, Velikaya Rudko, Malaya Rudko, Pehotitse, Igresh, Rastovtse, Tsego, Chernohov, Pladnovtse, Velikaya Vara, Malaya Vara, Tereshka, and Borsha, and the railway stations of Soshurov, Polyanka, Parhovyani, Tsehovtse, and Borsha.

Troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front, developing their offensive, in two days captured the regional and district centers of Hungary, the towns of Szekszard, Kaposvar, Paks, Bonyhad, and Dombovar, large communications centers and important strongpoints of the enemy defence, and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including Belchke, Madicha, Dunasmeklet, Nemesker, Jerken, Natchdorok, Kuldach, Udvari, Kalastrana, Helle, Turch, and Tegerbet, and the railway stations of Belchke, Tolnamesh, Segresh, Keneshtemegelit, Natchdorok, Turch, Debrekets, Shantosh, Pellert, and Harkany.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several points, fighting of local importance took place.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, December 2 — Today's communique:

In the Susa Valley, Patriots are continuing their acts of sabotage along the railway line, and in the zone between Piacenza and Pavia a German attack was repelled by Patriots who, despite enemy superiority in men and arms, defended themselves strenuously.

Further particulars on the daring action carried out by Forli Patriots, just before the occupation of their city, can now be revealed.

On the night of October 30/31, at Forli, Patriots Romolo Lambi, Francesco Maltoni, Zore Zecchino, and Alceste Santucci placed three mines at a crossroad in the San Giorgio zone, at about 2300 hours. The mines were laid on an explosive charge previously stacked there by the Germans, who had intended to blow the crossroad after their withdrawal.

Eluding enemy sentries, the Patriots came away without mishap from their enterprise. At about 0100 hours, a heavy German tank passing over the crossroad was blown up. Five Germans were killed, and one wounded.

Four of the corpses were recovered by the Germans, but the body of one — an NCO — remained under the wreckage, where it was discovered, with the remains of [illegible] (UNN)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 2 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Eighth Army troops have made further progress between the Lamone and Montone rivers, and Indian troops have captured the strongly-defended village of Albereto, which has been the scene of bitter fighting for the last three days.

Fifth Army troops have repulsed a number of enemy attacks with considerable losses to the enemy.

North of the river Lamone, Monte Giornetto has been occupied.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday attacked communications in the Po Valley, on the Brenner Route, and other objectives in the battle area. Targets included road and rail bridges, rollingstock, motor transport, buildings, gun positions, and a dam.

Medium bombers also attacked communications in the Po Valley.

Coastal planes attacked small shipping in the North Adriatic and at Spezia, as well as rail and road transport in northwest Italy.

Other aircraft carried out a road sweep in Yugoslavia.

There were no heavy bomber operations.

Three of our aircraft are missing from these operations.

MAAF flew more than 700 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, December 2 — Today's communique:

Allied forces are encountering stubborn resistance all along the Linnich-Hürtgen sector.

In the northern part of the sector we cleared Welz, and are fighting in Linnich, Flossdorf, and Beeck.

A counter-attack at Lindern was repulsed, and house-to-house fighting continues at Inden.

Small gains were made in the face of stubborn resistance in an attack towards Gey and Brandenberg.

Tanks and fortified positions in the Linnich and Julich areas, and troops in Hambach Forest were attacked by fighter-bombers yesterday.

Around Düren, other fighter-bombers struck at fortified villages, rail-yard buildings, housing, armored vehicles, and a supply dump.

In the Saar Valley, we now dominate the west bank of the Saar north and south of Merzig, and we are in the area two miles west of Saarlautern. Towns taken in the advance include Fitten, Fremersdorf, and Ober Limberg. We entered Buren and Itzbach, and have elements in Felsberg.

Fighter-bombers supporting our ground forces went for strongpoints south of Merzig and fortified positions near Saarlautern and Saarbrücken.

Medium bombers attacked fortifications in the Saarlautern area, and rail bridges at Rastatt and Bunzenheim.

Fighter-bombers went for a rail bridge at Gemersheim.

Our ground forces continued to advance in the Alsace Plain. Schweighausen, west of Hagenau, was freed after stiff fighting, and gains were made to the northwest.

Kokolyani, Vishnev, Dvoryanki, Arkin, Gryadki, Tsehovtse, Maliye Ozorovtse, Velikie Ozorovtse, Velikaya Rudko, Malaya Rudko, Pehotitse, Igresh, Rastovise, Tsego, Chernohov, Pladnovtse, Velikaya Vara, Malaya Vara, Tereshka, and Borsha, and the railway stations of Soshurov, Polyanka, Parhovyani, Tsehovtse, and Borsha.

WEHRMACHT

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, December 2 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Aix la Chapelle sector, the focal points of the grim fighting again lay northeast of Geilenkirchen and in the Hürtgen Forest area. Our brave formations repulsed most of the enemy attacks, inflicting heavy losses in killed and prisoners on the enemy.

The enemy penetrated into Linnich.

At the Lorraine frontiers, strong enemy forces attempted, northeast of Warndt, to break through toward Saarlautern. They were halted in front of our positions after some small initial successes.

In the Sarreunion sector, battle-proved tank formations repulsed the enemy, who again attacked in this sector, to his initial positions.

In Alsace, on both sides of Ingwiller and between Markirch and Rheinau, fresh enemy attacks were warded off. Our troops took numerous prisoners during the grim defensive fighting for Schlettstadt.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The Dunkirk garrison smashed enemy forces which had temporarily penetrated the eastern approaches to the fortress, after an intense artillery preparation.

London continues to be harassed by our long-range weapons. The Antwerp area also was again subjected to an intense bombardment.

Italy:

In central Italy, at Mount Grande west of Imola, our parachutists captured new positions in daring operations.

East of Faenza, British attacks were frustrated by our fire.

Balkans:

In the Balkans, strong rearguards, having frustrated all harassing attempts of the enemy, reached the area north of Lake Skutari and the valley of the western Morawa.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, the enemy, proceding from the Pecs sector, exerted pressure in a northwesterly and northerly direction. Along the Kuposvar-Paks line, fighting with enemy spearheads is in progress.

Additional areas in the southwestern parts of the Matra Mountains were cleared of the Bolsheviks in counter-attacks.

Northeast of Miscolcz, the enemy maintained his strong pressure, but was prevented from making considerable gains by the stubborn defence of our divisions.

In eastern Slovakia, local Soviet attacks failed.

On the remaining parts of the Eastern Front, yesterday, there were only minor operations.

Air:

The German Air Force brought down 369 Soviet planes during the month of December.

Yesterday, the Anglo-Americans continued their daylight terror attacks on the civil population of the upper reaches of the Rhine and western Germany. Buildings were damaged, and casualties caused, by bombs and guns, particularly in small localities.

In the early evening hours, nuisance raiders penetrated deeply into Reich territory and dropped bombs indiscriminately.

Last month, the Anglo-American Air Force lost 907 planes, 466 of which were four-engined bombers, over the Western Front and Reich territory.

Naval:

In the Gulf of Finland, German submarines sank one mine laying vessel, one patrol vessel, one minesweeper, and one large merchant ship out of a Soviet mine sweeping formation. Two other ships of an enemy escort formation were hit by torpedoes. (Radio Berlin)

ENEMY PROPAGANDA TRENDS

GERMAN

Germany Threatens Reprisals against «Atrocities»: Perhaps the most sensational propaganda item of the day is the official statement of the German High Command threatening French prisoners of war, and also threatening to withdraw from the Geneva Convention.

It will be noted that, prior to German action in violation of international law, German propaganda customarily accuses the Allies of such action. The statement by the High

Linnich: The same correspondent admits that the Allies have «penetrated into the town of Linnich,» (which is even farther west than the Roer), but dismisses this penetration as «of no operative importance.» (Linnich is southwest of the strategic arsenal of München-Gladbach.)

Eastern Front: Colonel von Olberg reports to Transocean that the Soviets are now planning a «large-scale encirclement of those parts of western Hungary not yet occupied by the Soviets with Budapest as the final goal.» The current drive on Slovakia is analyzed as «also serving this purpose.»

He also views with particular alarm a Soviet drive northwest of Pecs.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Italian Front Unchanged: The late Fascist broadcast tonight reports that the situation on both sides of Faenza remains unchanged, following 8th Army attacks. Despite «heavy fighting,» the Allies were forced back to their original positions, leaving many dead on the battlefield.

Anthony Eden and the Italian Crisis: The Fascist commentators abandoning momentarily their conjectures on the Bonomi cabinet crisis, today concentrated the full force of indignation against Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the British attitude toward Italy in general.

Amongst a wealth of sentiments expressed, the following most nearly summarize the Fascist conception of the situation: «No consideration whatever is given to the anti-Fascist parties which have favored the invasion and which have placed Italy at the mercy of the enemy. The traitors, it can be truly said, have been betrayed. But the traitors should have expected these things to happen. They had opened the gates of Italy in the hope of getting bread, peace, freedom, and democracy. Today they know what England meant by these words: a conquered country destined to the most outraged enslavement that a dominating power can impose.»

The above analysis of the specific Italo-British problem is elsewhere used, in substance, to support the contention that a similar dilemma exists in France, Belgium, and in all other countries now enjoying the «dubious» benefits of «democracy.»

John Amery at the Microphone: The British Fascist John Amery's regular Friday night «talk,» broadcast over the Fascist radio, was partly an attack on «international Jewry,» partly a defence of National-Socialism. Denying that his own status is that of a traitor, Amery proclaims that the real traitors are «the Jewish-capitalist clique which compelled the British Empire to enter into this war when nothing was threatening it and when it needed nothing.» Against these «traitors» the Fascists, as Amery sees it, have been fighting for the last 10 years for peace and social justice...»

The Monarchy and other «exploiters of Italians» are strongly censured for having «taken refuge with the plutocrats.» Amery explains that «only two men, Hitler and Mussolini, have shown that there was a new idea, the idea of true socialism.» Amery defends at length and with great vehemence this idea of the «socialist» aspect of Fascism (and of Nazism), very much in the manner of other recent Fascist commentaries.

Amery speaks twice of the question of Malta. First he insinuates that «plutocracy and communism» fought to deprive Italy of Malta. Then he poses the idea that the Italo-British divergence over Malta was in fact a divergence between «plutocratic» England and Fascist Italy.

Fascist Army Still Strong: The Fascist radio today revived one of its chief propaganda contentions, or rather a reputtal of British propaganda. Ridiculing the BBC's

GERMAN

Germany Threatens Reprisals against «Atrocities»: Perhaps the most sensational propaganda item of the day is the official statement of the German High Command threatening French prisoners of war, and also threatening to withdraw from the Geneva Convention.

It will be noted that, prior to German action in violation of international law, German propaganda customarily accuses the Allies of such action. The statement by the High Command accuses the Allies of sinking German hospital ships but, above all, of threatening to kill five Germans in reprisal for every Frenchman killed. The latter threat, emanating from General LeClerc, had at once been overruled and repudiated by an official statement of the Supreme Headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force. The fact that the German statement fails to inform its people that LeClerc's threat was unofficial and is invalid, but presents the threat as an official Allied threat, indicates that German sources are merely using this non-existent Allied «atrocity» as a pretext for the counter-measures which Germany threatens to use against Allied prisoners.

Furthermore, the German Army statement says that the «persistent Allied attacks on hospital ships, military hospitals, Red Cross installations, etc., could only have been intentional in the circumstances.» Hence, Germany threatens to deem herself «no longer bound by the Geneva and Hague conventions» in so far as the Allies violate them.

Western Front: The military correspondent Sertorius begins his report today by noting, as a defensive victory, that in the «big battle area of the Würm and Roer, the military picture has remained the same,» despite the fact that the American 9th and 1st Armies have continued their attacks. These attacks are described as «extremely costly,» and it is noted with satisfaction that they are using up «big quantities of material.»

Anthony Eden and the Italian Crisis: The Fascist commentators abandoning momentarily their conjectures on the Bonomi cabinet crisis, today concentrated the full force of indignation against Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and the British attitude toward Italy in general.

Amongst a wealth of sentiments expressed, the following most nearly summarize the Fascist conception of the situation: «No consideration whatever is given to the anti-Fascist parties which have favored the invasion and which have placed Italy at the mercy of the enemy. Fascist Army Still Strong: The Fascist radio today revived one of its chief propaganda contentions, or rather a rebuttal of British propaganda. Ridiculing the BBC's recent statements anent the dissolution of the Republican Fascist army, the Fascist radio contends that what was mistaken for dissolution was merely a «policy revision.» It is said that the Fascist army enjoys great vitality at the moment, being composed for the greater part of volunteers «who rebelled against the shame of betrayal and preferred to fight rather than submit with abject resignation.» Now fighting at the front, these units are said to have contributed to Allied reverses.

HUNGARIAN

German Looting Excused: Radio Budapest broadcast yet another appeal to Hungarian women to keep quiet about German soldiers helping themselves to «a pig, a barrel of wine, or a few pieces of clothing... It is not as if the German soldiers needed protection; as it happens it is we, the Hungarians, who need their protection... Soldiers will always have a law of their own, different from the civilians... Any German or Hungarian soldier who would leave any food, wine, or clothing to the advancing Red Army, could rightly be called a fool...» In any case, «on investigation, most cases proved to be trivial and gross exaggerations, the source of which can easily be found in Soviet propaganda trying to drive a wedge between the German and Hungarian allies...»

TROOPS OF U. S. 3RD ARMY CROSS SAAR

LONDON, December 3 — Troops of the American 3rd Army were reported late tonight to have crossed the Saar River at Saarlautern after taking the bridge intact. There has been no official confirmation of this report, but earlier press reports said that mopping up operations were proceeding in the huge coal and iron city on the western bank of the river.

American forces spread out to gain control of a 16-mile stretch of the western Saar bank between Merzig and Saarlautern, while other forces entered the mid-way town of Rehlingen. German resistance along the entire 3rd Army front continued to be extremely heavy, and there was no sign of a breakthrough.

in Linnich, captured yesterday, and are patrolling the banks of the Roer between the two cities.

Heavy fighting took place in the Würm-Beeck-Lindern sector, northwest of Linnich, where there is a heavy concentration of German armor and infantry. Two German counter-attacks were broken up by American artillery.

The gains on the upper half of the Roer River line had their effect on the lower half, where American 1st Army troops cleared the Germans from Inden after a week of hard fighting, and crossed the only remaining bridge over the Inde River.

Seven miles southwest of Düren, the last major stronghold of the Roer line still completely in German hands, the Germans were cleared from Brandenburg, on the eastern edge of the Hürtgen forest. American troops then pushed on 1,000 yards to the east to reach points less than a half-mile from the Roer. German planes made one of their rare appearances over this front, causing little damage. Allied anti-aircraft crews shot down 15 to 20 of the attacking enemy force.

On the eastern flank of the American 3rd Army, forces of the American 7th Army drove into Hagenau, 17 miles south of the German Saar border, and an equal distance north of Strasbourg. At Strasbourg itself, American troops forced the Germans from their bridgehead over the Rhine.

French tanks and American infantry today entered Schlettstadt (Selestat) and are pushing the Germans from the rail town street-by-street. The Allied force entered Schlettstadt after driving through the Saales Pass from the west. Other Allied forces driving down from the north were reported to be in Ebersheim, three miles to the north.

French 1st Army units advancing northward on the Alsace Plain have reached unidentified points approximately 25 miles from a junction with 7th Army forces at Schlettstadt, a junction which would cut off the remaining Germans in the Vosges.

The Allies have driven entirely through the Saales, St. Marie, and Schirmeck passes through the Vosges, but the

The Germans counter-attacked twice in the 3rd Army sector south of Saargemünd late yesterday; the second armor-supported attack drove American forces out of Mackweiler, five miles east of Saarunion. Other 3rd and 7th Army forces less than 10 miles to the east, however, made gains of up to two miles, capturing Weislinger and Hinsburg in their advance.

Germans Scorch Earth

The German Army, for the first time, has used their scorched earth policy on German ground itself. When American troops entered Niederlimberg, four miles northwest of Saarlautern, they found it empty and razed by fire. This scorched earth policy has indicated that the German High Command is determined that the Saar Basin shall never supply the Allies.

The Germans are blowing all bridges across waterways leading to the Reich, and are strongly opposing the 3rd Army advance with large forces of armor and infantry, supported by the Luftwaffe. The Americans are close enough to the Siegfried Line on a 10-mile front to come under fire from its large caliber guns.

In the battle for the Cologne Plain, 9th Army forces drove the Germans from the western bank of the Roer River into the eastern half of Jülich. Other forces to the north are mopping up the last scattered German resistance [illegible] the Inde River.

LEYTE FIGHTING CONFINED TO GROUND ACTION

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, December 3 — Ground activity on Leyte Island has been limited to local attacks, General Douglas MacArthur's communique announced here tonight. Japanese aircraft harassed Allied positions on the northern end of the island and south of Ormoc Township.

Three Japanese freighters were bombed and sunk off Borneo, it was announced tonight.

A War Department communique stated tonight that, when the last squadron of Superfortresses entered the bombing area of Tokyo today, they observed several large fires burning and being whipped up by a very strong wind. One squadron reported that 75 per cent of its bomb-load fell within the Musashimo factory. (Reuter)

AMERICANS FIGHTING ON EAST BANK OF SAAR

LONDON, December 3 — American 3rd Army forces who crossed the Saar at Saarlautern today are now reported fighting in the eastern section of the industrial city, late dispatches reported tonight.

They made the crossing before dawn today by assault boats, and seized one end of the bridge while other forces moving through the city reached the western end. Demolition charges were dismantled before they could be detonated by the surprised Germans. (Reuter)

On the northern end of the 400-mile Western Front, British 2nd Army forces opened a local attack today against strong German positions at Venlo, on the Meuse River. British troops moved forward 600 yards and tonight were across a 25-foot-wide anti-tank ditch, and through the first mine belt guarding the town. The advance has brought British units to within 1,000 yards of the blown bridge over the Meuse. Opposition is reported to be not heavy.

INDIANS CUT SOUTHERN RAVENNA EXIT ROADS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 3 — Indian troops of the 8th Army have cut the southernmost of the three main roads connecting Ravenna with the Po Plain, and have pushed back enemy forces nearly three miles at the crucial hinge of the German delaying line along the Lamone and Montone Rivers, it was announced here today.

In a concerted tank and infantry attack which began Friday, the Indian forces dislodged the enemy from positions between the village of Albereto, five miles northeast of Faenza, and the Montone River, and followed the retreating enemy forces to within one mile of the highway town of Russi, midway between Faenza and Ravenna.

The enemy withdrawal — on the eastern two-thirds of the crucial hinge sector linking up the 16-mile seaward stretch of the German line along the Montone River and the 14-mile stretch along the Lamone River east of Faenza — was effected only after a week of bitter fighting, in which Albereto changed hands twice.

German forces utilized a series of tiny hamlets strung across the three-mile-wide gap between the rivers to wage a stubborn defense, aided by almost continuous bad weather.

The Ravenna-Faenza Highway, southernmost of three links connecting Romagna's second largest town with the rest of the Po Plain, was cut by Indian forces at a point five miles northeast of Faenza, and about half a mile from the village of Albereto.

German forces resisted fiercely in this sector, holding the Allied troops to relatively small, though important, gains, but to the east, the 8th Army forces were able to advance more rapidly, and the Germans fell back as far as the Scolo via Cupa, a long, narrow drainage canal running midway between the two rivers to empty into the Adriatic north of Ravenna.

With its connecting watercourses, this canal furnishes the enemy with at least temporary delaying positions south of Russi, hub of seven secondary roads through the lowlands southwest of Ravenna, and within a few thousand yards of the main Ravenna rail line to the west.

Enemy aircraft yesterday continued their sporadic raids against scattered points on the 5th Army front, mainly against traffic and towns along the Florence-Bologna Road, just south of the front areas. No damage or casualties were reported from the raids, which were described here as of "nuisance type."

Elsewhere on the Italian front, patrols were active, but no material changes in positions were reported. (PRO)

RED ARMY SWEEPS ON IN HUNGARY

MOSCOW, December 3 — The Russian drive across Hungary gained momentum today as three powerful Red armies overran the crumbling German defense lines to seize Miskolc, Satoraljaujhely, and Tamasi, all key Nazi strongpoints.

In addition, a further crossing of the River Danube northeast from Kaposvar, captured yesterday, to seize 80 other inhabited localities, including the town of Tamasi.

Correspondents said today that the German High Command is vainly attempting to switch its troops from one sector to another in a desperate bid to hold the gigantic Soviet drive. German suicide squads are bitterly contesting every yard of ground and fighting to the last, even when cut off and deprived of all hope of support.

The main body of the Soviet troops is dealing with the trapped garrisons, leaving powerful mobile columns, moving as self-contained units with sufficent fuel and ammunition, to advance with unchecked speed, accompanied by massive trains of supply lorries and armored transports.

Since the first break across the Danube, a steady flow of Soviet troops, tanks, and guns to the western bank has continued. The Germans have been releasing mines in the upper reaches of the Danube in the hope that they will blow up against Soviet pontoon bridges. This threat has already been countered.

A BBC Moscow correspondent said today that tremendous quantities of equipment have been pouring forward for weeks all along the Eastern Front, which suggests that big Russian operations will start when the winter sets in properly.

SUPERFORTRESSES ATTACK TOKYO AGAIN

WASHINGTON, December 3 — Tokyo's industrial targets were bombed today by Superfortresses of the U.S. 20th USAAF based in the Mariana Islands in a daylight attack — the fourth attack on Tokyo in the last 10 days, the War Department announced today.

A communique issued by General Henry Arnold, commander of the USAAF, said that this latest mission, carried out by a substantial force, was a continuation of the present campaign to destroy Japan's industrial productive capacity, and that today's objective was an industrial target previously attacked on an earlier mission by the same aircraft.

The target was the Musashima plant of the Nakajima aircraft company, previously bombed on November 24, the date of the first attack by Superfortresses on Tokyo. The target is 11 miles west of Tokyo Harbor. Good results with precision bombing were obtained, it was said, as clear weather aided the operations.

The announcement added that the formations encountered moderately strong enemy fighter opposition, resulting in four enemy planes being destroyed and eight others probably destroyed. One Superfortress was lost to enemy action, the communique said.

The Most Successful Attack

Associated Press said that early reports indicated the operation was the most successful of the four B-29 attacks, and that Tokyo was under attack for more than an hour and a half. The aircraft company shares with the Mitsubishi company the distinction as one of the leading producers of Japanese Army and Navy war planes.

This was the third daylight attack and the fifth attack on Japan's war industries in the enemy capital.

The first attack on Tokyo occured 18 April 1942, when Lieut. General James Doolittle led a flight of bombers from an aircraft carrier. The first B-29 attack on Tokyo took place November 24, the second on November 27, and the third, a night attack, on November 29. In the night attack, the Superfortresses roamed over the targets for nearly three hours.

The attack came hard on the heels of a Radio Tokyo disclosure that measures for "strengthening and perfecting the air defense system of Tokyo" were discussed Friday at enemy forces to within one mile of the highway town of Russi, midway between Faenza and Ravenna.

The enemy withdrawal — on the eastern two-thirds of the crucial hinge sector linking up the 16-mile seaward stretch of the German line along the Montone River and the 14-mile stretch along the Lamone River east of Faenza — was effected only after a week of bliter fighting, in which Alberetò changed hands twice.

German forces utilized a series of tiny hamlets strung across the three-mile-wide gap between the rivers to wage a stubborn defense, aided by almost continuous bad weather.

The Ravenna-Faenza Highway, southernmost of three links connecting Romagna's second largest town with the rest of the Po Plain, was cut by Indian forces at a point five miles northeast of Faenza, and about half a mile from the village of Albercto.

German forces resisted fiercely in this sector, holding the Allied troops to relatively small, though important, gains, but to the east, the 8th Army forces were able to advance more rapidly, and the Germans fell back as far as the Scolo via Cupa, a long, narrow drainage canal running midway between the two rivers to empty into the Adriatic north of Ravenna.

With its connecting watercourses, this canal furnishes the enemy with at least temporary delaying positions south of Russi, hub of seven secondary roads through the lowlands southwest of Ravenna, and within a few thousand yards of the main Ravenna rail line to the west.

Enemy aircraft yesterday continued their sporadic raids against scattered points on the 5th Army front, mainly against traffic and towns along the Florence-Bologna Road, just south of the front areas. No damage or casualties were reported from the raids, which were described here as of « nuisance type. »

Elsewhere on the Italian front, patrols were active, but no material changes in positions were reported. (PRO)

RED ARMY SWEEPS ON IN HUNGARY

MOSCOW, December 3 — The Russian drive across Hungary gained momentum today as three powerful Red armies overran the crumbling German defense lines to seize Miskolc, Satoraljaujhely, and Tamasi, all key Nazi strongpoints.

In addition, a further crossing of the River Danube was forced at Dunafoldvar, 42 miles south of Budapest.

At the northern end of the front, troops of General Ivan Petrov's 4th Ukrainian Front swept forward 25 miles, over swamp land and flooding rivers, to take Satoraljaujhely, a key rail junction connecting Hungary, Czechoslovakia, and southern Poland. Its capture was announced in an order of the day from Marshal Stalin, which described it as « an important communications center and large strongpoint of the enemy defense. »

Forty miles to the southwest, Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army stormed its way into the large communications center of Miskolc.

An order of the day announcing its capture described it as « the most important center of war production in Hungary, supplying both the German and Hungarian Armies. »

In the past 10 days, Marshal Malinovsky's forces have taken 7,875 German and Hungarian prisoners, bringing their total bag for the four weeks ending yesterday to 21,745.

Tonight's Soviet communique announced the capture of still another Hungarian strongpoint, Dunafoldvar, on the Danube 42 miles south of the Hungarian capital. Correspondents said that the Germans have been clinging particularly fiercely to this inland port for several weeks, in a vain attempt to stem a possible frontal assault from the south on Budapest itself.

American planes damaged or sank three Japanese ships and destroyed five planes in widespread attacks over the Philippines and Netherlands East Indies. The ships included a tanker and two small freighters, and were attacked off the Visayan Islands.

Japanese planes were driven off after attacking American positions at Carigara, at the northern end of the Ormoc Corridor, the communique said today.

Planes under General MacArthur's command bombed Japanese installations on Mindanao, the Molucca Islands, and New Guinea. Airdromes and bivouacs areas were attacked, and five enemy planes destroyed during the operations.

The Leyte campaign has been tougher than expected, but has in no way affected the over-all strategy in the Pacific, Brig. Gen. Charles A. Willoughby, intelligence chief under General MacArthur, said yesterday. He said that future Allied operations in the Philippines have not been delayed by the enemy's ability to pour in many thousands of troops.

American heavy bombers made a series of attacks last Wednesday and Thursday on Japanese positions in the northern Kuriles and the Volcano Islands, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced today.

The attack on the Volcano Islands was the fifth in four days. These islands contain bases from which the Japanese have recently launched air attacks against the Superfortress bases in the Marianas. (OWI)

EAST AFRICAN TROOPS CAPTURE KALEWA

KANDY, CEYLON, December 3 — East African troops in Burma, pushing down from the northwest frontier, have captured the Japanese stronghold of Kalewa on the Chindwin River, it was announced here today. Kalewa, one of the main ports for river traffic, has been described as one of the vital gateways to Burma.

The 11th East African Division shared with the 5th Indian Division in the recent capture of another forward enemy base — Kalemyo. Since that time, the East Africans have advanced along the narrow gorge toward today's prize.

Other East African forces, moving directly down the Chindwin River, have linked up with the forces which captured Kalewa, the BBC said today.

Chinese troops in the southeast sector at Bhamo improved their salient into Japanese defenses yesterday by slight gains to the north and east. Meanwhile, heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command attacked a target near Bangkok last night.

From Chungking, a United States Army communique, reporting the activities of the 14th USAAF today, indicated the Japanese were occupying the railway town of Kichang, 90 miles southeast of Kweiyang.

The communique also said that a fighter unit of the 14th USAAF destroyed 50 enemy locomotives in flights over Japanese rail lines in China. Previously, this same unit had destroyed seven others and damaged another thus far this month.

The Japanese penetration into Kweichow Province puts the enemy in a position from which he can drive either against Chungking itself or against Kunming, the great air base and supply center, and gateway to China over the Burma Road.

The London News Chronicle said yesterday that in view of the threat to Kunming, «the only hope of recovery lies in a speedy agreement on common action by Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek and the Communists, who are said to command a well-equipped army of 500,000 men.» (OWI - BBC)

U.S.A.A.F. DROPPED 50,000 TONS ON REICH

LONDON, December 3 — United States Strategic Air Forces in Europe dropped more than 50,000 tons of high explosives and incendiaries on synthetic oil plants, refineries, steel mills, railway centers, and other targets in Germany during November in their intensified assault upon German war industries, it was announced tonight.

Concentrating on V-2 targets in Holland, R.A.F. Fighter Command's activities during the month included 30 missions against these targets, with pinpoint power-dive attacks resulting in direct hits on enemy launching installations. Intensive ground strafing with cannon and machine gun fire was also carried out.

In addition, it was said, over 200 machines operated against transport in Holland — much of it directly concerned with the maintenance and supply of V-2 sites.

The Air Ministry announced today that aircraft of the Bomber Command last night attacked Hagen, 11 miles south of Dortmund, and also bombed Giessen, a railway center 35 miles north of Frankfort-on-Main.

The main assault was centered on Hagen, an important railway center in the Ruhr district. Clouds prevented the immediate observation of results, although the glow

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES HIT AUSTRIAN TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 3 — Liberators and Fortresses of the 15th USAAF carried out a «bad weather» attack on Austrian targets today, it was announced here.

In addition to the «bad weather» force, escorted Flying Fortresses bombarded targets in the Vienna area, also with the aid of radar target identification, it was reported.

Although bad weather hampered operations of the Tactical Air Force, medium bombers struck two rail bridges in the Mantua area, and fighters and fighter-bombers carried out offensive sweeps against enemy communications and transport.

Yesterday, medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force flew nearly 1,400 sorties, the highest number in recent months, in an «all-out» attack on enemy communication and battle-line targets in north Italy, it was announced here today.

As a result of the attacks, two rail bridges were destroyed, seven others were damaged or their approaches hit, rail lines were cut in at least 62 places, and nine locomotives, 185 rail cars, and approximately 50 motor vehicles were destroyed or damaged.

In Balkan Air Force sweeps over Yugoslavia, Italian-manned Baltimore night bombers attacked a temporary river bridge erected by the Germans at Bioce, on the Podgorica-Klopot Road, while P-38 Airacobra fighters of the Italian Air Force damaged two out of eight motor vehicles encountered in the Podgorica area.

Heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force, operating for the first time in several days, yesterday attacked synthetic oil refineries at Blechhammer, and at Oderthal, upper Silesia, as well as targets in the Vienna area. (PRO)

R.A.F. FLIES MILK TO PELOPONNESE CIVILIANS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 3 — Wellington bombers of the Royal Air Force recently carried six tons of canned milk from Greek airfields to starving women and children cut off in the wilds of the Peloponnese.

The planes were employed at the request of the Joint Relief Commission, composed of Swedish and Swiss delegates, who were unable to get the desperately needed milk to the mountain community because of impassable roads. (PRO)

LIBERATOR GROUP RECEIVES THIRD CITATION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 3 — The 376th Bombardment Group, the first American heavy-bomber outfit to carry out an attack on enemy targets on the Continent of Europe, and the first such group to be based on the Continent, was awarded its third unit citation Saturday, it was announced here today.

The group, part of a Liberator wing commanded by Brigadier General Hugo P. Rush, was honored for its successful attack on the Bratislava oil refineries in Czechoslovakia on June 16. The other two citations were for the low-level attack on the Ploesti oilfields on 1 August 1943, and for support of ground forces during the battle of the desert in North Africa. (PRO)

Night-fighters and intruder aircraft of the Bomber Command supported the bombers and attacked airfields. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed in combat.

Mitchells and Bostons yesterday went in to strike, about five miles northeast of Dunkirk, a fort used by troops of the Dunkirk garrison.

On the U.S. 9th Army front, Thunderbolts gave American infantry assistance by bombing gun positions, trenches, and fortified buildings at Metz, just across the Roer River. They also attacked fortified positions a few miles north of Linnich and Bergstein, about six miles south of Düren, on the edge of the Hürtgen Forest.

FIGHTERS ATTACK RUSSIAN COLUMN BY MISTAKE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 3 — A squadron of fighters engaged on a strafing mission on November 7 in Yugoslavia attacked by mistake a Russian column, a special statement of Mediterranean Allied Air Force headquarters declared today.

The incident was promptly reported when the development of gun camera film verified the error, and the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff and General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, former Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, both sent expressions of regret, the report said.

The official statement said that the error was entirely due to a mistake in target identification through faulty navigation. (PRO)

RUMANIAN MONARCHY REPORTED FADING

LONDON, December 3 — The latest development in the Rumanian government crisis, which came to a head yesterday with the appointment of a new premier, marks the beginning of the fade-out of the Rumanian royal family from the picture of the country's affairs, a Reuter correspondent said today.

The outgoing Premier, General Sanatescu, was predominantly a monarchist, and was reported to have engineered the palace revolution which led to Marshal Antonescu's downfall.

King Michael, in the eyes of many Rumanians, is as discredited a monarch as his father, ex-King Carol, because of his close association with the corrupt Antonescu Dictatorship, the correspondent continued.

Many charges of inefficiency have been flung at the Sanatescu Régime, which has been accused of making no attempt to root out the pro-Fascists from important civil service posts, and allowing the notorious Iron Guard to continue an underground existence.

The new Premier, General Radescu, has a clean, non-political record, and has distinguished himself in the recent fighting in Transylvania, where he led the Rumanian troops fighting under the Russian Supreme Command.

Although the list of the new cabinet has not yet been issued, there is no doubt that it will carry out a far more ruthless purge of the Fascists, and will also result in a closer enactment of the Russian armistice conditions, which, it is alleged, the ex-Premier tried to circumvent. (Reuter)

BRITISH HOME GUARD IS «STOOD DOWN»

LONDON, December 3 — The young old men of Britain's Home Guard were «Stood Down» today after 4½ years of voluntary service in defense of their country.

Resplendent in their battle dress with brown leather gaiters and yellow shoulder patches, the Home Guard officers and men from every unit in Great Britain — from the Orkneys, Highlands, Cornwall, Devon, Wales, and the Midlands — paraded through Piccadilly this afternoon in their farewell appearance.

As Colonel-in-Chief of the Home Guard, King George, in his uniform of a Field Marshal, stood with the Royal Family at Hyde Park Gate and received the farewell salute from the troops as they marched six abreast past the reviewing stand. It took 42 minutes for them to pass the saluting-base amid the cheers of one of London's largest war-time crowds.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, the man who issued the service call in May, 1940, also witnessed the parade together with the Assistant Secretary of the U. S. Embassy.

The gratitude of the country was expressed to the Home Guard members today in a special order issued by the King, in which he said:

«You have borne a heavy burden. By patient, ungrudging effort, you have built and maintained a force which aptly played an essential part in the defense of our threatened soil and liberty.

«Now at last, the splendid resolution and endurance of the Allied armies have thrust back the danger from our coasts. The Home Guard has reached the end of its long tour of duty under arms. History will say that your part in the greatest of all struggles for freedom was a vitally preparing to go overseas. The Home Guard was made up of men of all ages from farms, factories, shops and offices.

«For most of you,» the King said, «your service in the Home Guard has not been easy. Some of you have stood for many hours on the gun sites and in ditches after a long and hard day's work. As anti-aircraft and coastal gunners, sentries at innumerable points, the Home Guards have played a sure part in the defense of their country. It was well-known to the enemy that if he came to any part of our land, he would meet determined opposition».

Declaring his heartfelt thanks to all members of the Home Guard, the King said that they had found that men from all kinds of homes and many different occupations could work together in a worthy cause.

«As non-commissioned officers and men,» the King concluded, «you have served your country with the strictest devotion. I know that your country will not forget that service.» (BBC)

VICE-PREMIERSHIPS OFFERED TO THREE PARTIES

ROME, December 3 — Two vice-premierships in the proposed Italian government were offered today to the Christian Democratic, Socialist, and Communist Parties by former Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi, in an identical letter to the leaders of the three parties.

The executive committee of the Christian Democratic Party convened this afternoon to consider Bonomi's letter and, early tonight, announced that they had «favorably received it,» and that they would make opportune contacts with the leaders of the Socialist and Communist Parties.

In the meantime, the executive committee of the Socialist Party also met, but failed to arrive at a decision.

Later in the evening, Socialists Pietro Nenni, Giuseppe Saragat, and Oreste Lizzadri conferred with Palmiro Togliatti, Mauro Scoccimarro, and Giuseppe Di Vittorio, of the Communist Party. The meeting was called on the strength of the unity pact which binds the two parties to consult with each other when decisions affecting both parties must be made.

No combined statement was issued tonight, but it was announced that decisions on the Bonomi letter would be made at separate party executive meetings scheduled for tomorrow morning.

This morning, Bonomi held conferences with Alcide De Gasperi, Salvatore Aldisio, High Commissioner for Sicily, and former ministers Gronchi, Casati, and Soleri.

Text of Letter

In his letter to the three parties, Bonomi asked for their collaboration on the basis of the preceeding six-party coalition.

«The continuation of contrasts between the parties adhering to the Committee of National Liberation with respect to the solution of the crisis has induced me to communicate with you,» the ex-Premier wrote.

«As representatives of the largest popular parties, you have the major responsibility for the maintenance of that national unity and harmony which are so necessary at this time.

«I have reason to believe that under present conditions, I am the political figure less likely to encounter obstacles in the defense and advancement of Italy's position in international affairs.»

«I can also conscientiously say that I have never abandoned the political platform of the coalition over which I presided, and am convinced of the fact that it offered

KING GEORGE SALUTES HOME GUARD

LONDON, December 3 — King George VI today broadcast his congratulations to the British Home Guard Army which, after four years of duty in the defense of Britain, was placed on inactive service.

Reviewing the demobilization and performance of the Home Guard, the King said:

« In May, 1940, Britain was in danger. The most powerful army the world had ever seen had forced its way to within a few miles of our coast. From day to day we were threatened with invasion. A call went out for men to enroll themselves in a new citizen army to stand against the invader.

« Throughout Britain and Northern Ireland, that summons was answered, as free men will always answer when freedom is in danger ».

The new force became a well-equipped and capable force under the administration of the Territorial Army Association, and took over many duties from regular soldiers

« I can also conscientiously say that I have never abandoned the political platform of the coalition over which I presided, and am convinced of the fact that it offered the best possibilities for the launching of Italy toward a real democratic transformation by conciliating liberty with the indispensible authority of the State, and by maintaining the coöperation of the most important and more representative anti-Fascist trends, thus offering a more solid basis for the pacification of the country.

« This also is my point of view.

« I therefore again seek your collaboration for the solution of existing difficulties, so that the country may have a strong, authoritative, and impartial government on the basis of the preceding coalition.

« I shall be happy, if you will accept, that two of you will share, nearer to me, as vice presidents, the responsibility for the political direction of the government. As the situation does not allow for delay, I should appreciate a definite answer by 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. » (UNN)

ITALIANS SAID TO BE INDIFFERENT

ROME, December 3 — One of the aspects of the present political crisis in Italy is the indifference of the Italian people as a result of 20 years of Fascism, said Enzo Selvaggi, Secretary of the Italian Democratic Party, at a public meeting here today.

Selvaggi said the Italian Democratic Party [which is known for its monarchist tendencies] could accept neither the class-struggle concept for the solution of social problems, nor the «socialization schemes» which are being advanced by other political parties.

Democracy in Italy, the speaker said, must have two fundamental characteristics: the right and duty of everyone to live and act according to his conscience, and the inseparability of the idea of democracy from the idea of freedom.

The Democratic Party leader proposed that a maximum impulse be given to private initiative, while at the same time tempering it with public initiative in the field of social services and distribution.

Heckling and heated discussions between republicans and monarchists degenerated into fist fights in the streets adjacent to the hall after the meeting was over. Police easily brought the situation under control. (UNN)

ROME, December 3 — At a mass rally here today attended by over 4,000 workers, Franco Rodano outlined the political aims and ideology of the Left Christian Party, of which he is the general secretary. The party was formerly known as the Catholic Communist Party.

The rally was held to commemorate Romualdo Chiesa, a young Roman Catholic student assassinated by the Germans in the Ardeatine Caves massacre.

Rodano defined his party as the «most advanced wing» of the Christian labor forces in Italy, and as the «new Christian Party which history places at the service of the Catholic masses.» (UNN)

AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE ENDS

ROME, December 3 — Communal and provincial agricultural committees received the stamp of approval from the National Conference in Agriculture, Forestry, and Fisheries, which completed today its four days of discussions at the Italian Ministry of Agriculture.

Leland G. Allbaugh, the director of the Agriculture Sub-Commission of the Allied Commission, spoke similarly on behalf of the Allied officers participating.

The communal committees should be elected by popular vote among the farmers, and they, in turn, should elect from their own membership persons to serve on the provincial committees, some of the experts at the conference urged.

Farmers Should Voice Opinions

As a demonstration of functioning democracy, these communal committees should provide for hearing an expression of farmer opinions at specified intervals, these officials suggested.

Both provincial and communal committees should be continued as they are at present, the conference recommended, and they should be given a legal status.

To determine how these committees should be composed and function, a committee should be set up at once, so that it could report before the next agricultural conference, January 20, it was decided.

PARTISANS AID IN RECONSTRUCTING TOWN

WITH ALLIED ARMIES, ITALY, December 3 — Partisans have taken a leading part in aiding the reconstruction work at Loiano, in Bologna Province, it was revealed by the Allied Military Government officer here today.

Coöperating with the Mayor, the local town committee, and the AMG, the Partisans are running the mill and the bakery. The leader acts as labor chief for the town committee.

The Partisans are working on the reconstruction of the hospital, which the Germans used as a resistance point, and they are also clearing debris from the streets. This is no small task, for the Germans mined and blew up practically every home along the main highway running through the town.

The AMG officer said the Germans took all the wine from the district and all the livestock they could find. He added that one of the Partisans has been decorated with the Silver Star by order of President Roosevelt. (UNN)

CURFEW IMPOSED IN ATHENS

ATHENS, December 3 — At least 12 persons were killed or injured today when police opened fire on EAM and Communist Party demonstrators in Constitution Square, causing Maj. Gen. Ronald M. Scobie, commander of British Forces in Greece, to impose a curfew tonight on this city, as well as the port of Piraeus. The curfew begins at 1900 hours and ends at 0600 hours daily.

A BBC broadcast reported tonight that the Greek EAM party has called a general strike for tomorrow.

Refusing to recognize the Greek Government's ban on demonstrations, several hundred unarmed EAM party members this morning paraded in protest against the disarming of resistance forces. The shooting began when the crowd surged through the police cordon toward the Government palace. Among the killed and injured were two women.

Meanwhile, the Greek Radio said the cabinet had originally granted permission for the EAM meeting, in the belief it would constitute a regular political parade, but later had reversed its decision upon learning that the meeting would be only «one of a series of revolutionary activities decided upon by the EAM Central Committee.»

The broadcast also reiterated the Government's decision to demobilize the national resistance forces, beginning December 10. (OWI - Reuter - AP)

ATHENS, December 3 — Georges Papandreou, Greek Prime Minister, broadcast a statement tonight accusing the extreme left wing of leading Greece into a civil war. The Prime Minister made the address following demonstrations in Constitution Square earlier today.

Prime Minister Papandreou declared that the Greek Government had on many issues accepted the demands of the EAM and ELAS organizations, despite severe criticism, in order to achieve national unity.

The three main topics to be discussed at the January conference will be land reclamation (bonifica), prices, and livestock, all of which have developed problems as a result of German flooding or looting.

Among its general recommendations, the conference today asked the Ministry of Agriculture to provide definite means at once for removal of mines from farms, and for drainage of flooded areas.

Another recommendation asked the Italian Government to guarantee a greater degree of security on the farms «in order to eliminate theft and aggression.»

«To improve warehousing facilities and methods of conserving, and distributing farm products in order to prevent losses,» was the third recommendation.

Distribution of whatever means of transport and traction, both animal and mechanical, may become available after the war should be planned immediately, the fourth recommendation said.

To help bring a maximum amount of olive oil to the People's Oil Pools (Oliari del Popolo), the conference recommended that the ministry immediately increase the number of control officers and police, and that it issue an official circular laying down the functions and responsibilities of provincial and departmental officers in the current Oliari del Popolo campaign. Prime Minister Papandreou declared that the Greek Government had on many issues accepted the demands of the EAM and ELAS organizations, despite severe criticism, in order to achieve national unity.

Again, intransigent elements have prevailed. By armed demonstrations, general strikes and the reestablishment of the Central Committee of ELAS, they are leading the country to civil war. Thus they are guilty.»

M. Papandreou stated that the extreme left wing had accused the Government of preparing Fascism, of threatening the liberties of the people, and of turning toward reaction. He refuted the charges by stating that all Government economic and social decrees were proposed by ministers of the extreme left, and approved unanimously by all members of the cabinet.

The Prime Minister concluded:

«The Government knows that the great majority of the Greek people are at its side. It also expresses its deep gratitude toward the British Government for its undivided assistance in the establishment of order and liberty among the Greek people.» (Reuter)

ROOSEVELT ASKS FOR DEDICATION TO PEAC..

WASHINGTON, December 3 — President Roosevelt says ultimate victory of the Allies is inevitable, and he calls on the United States to dedicate «everything that we do» to accomplish lasting peace, in a letter to appear in the United States Army and Navy Journal this week.

Mr. Roosevelt's plea is part of a message to Colonel John Callan O'Laughlin, editor of the unofficial service publication, which will be used in the Journal's December 7

« United States at War » issue, also commemorating the entry of the nation into the war three years ago on that day.

The Commander-in-Chief coupled his « ultimate victory is inevitable » assertion with a grim warning of the hard fighting and hard working that must precede eventual success. He added that 1944 « has been a year of outstanding accomplishment for the armed forces of the United States » — a year in which they « have taken part in 27 different D-days — each one a triumphant success. » (OWI)

U. S. INTENDS TO MAINTAIN MILITARY FORCES

WASHINGTON, December 3 — The United States intends to maintain the military might needed to snuff out future aggression before it starts, General George C. Marshall, U.S. Chief of Staff, said in an article contained in the Army and Navy Journal released today.

America's record in this war is notice to the world of this intention, he said, adding that « wars are the great tragedies of the human race, yet it probably has been a good thing to have the military power of the United States fully demonstrated — so demonstrated that the world may know for the future that this Democracy can and will maintain military forces sufficient to overwhelm prospective tyrants in years to come. »

General Marshall paid high tribute to the Army's training program, and to its replacement system which, he said, has enabled battle units to operate continuously at peak strength. Probably nothing has been more demoralizing to the Germans than this flood of sustained power constantly hammering at their dwindling resources.

He also said that the third year of war for the United States, during which the final overseas deployment of air and ground forces was accomplished, has been marked by the speed and efficiency with which the Army Service Forces handled a mammoth supply job, and by the superlative fighting of untested troops. AVIATION CONFERENCE AGREES ON TWO POINTS

CHICAGO, December 3 — An agreement granting the right of aircraft of any signatory country to fly over the territory of other signatory states, and to make non-traffic landings for refueling and similar purposes in those states, was reached yesterday by the International Civil Aviation Conference here.

Hailed as the « first two freedoms of the air » by Adolf Berle, president of the conference, it was regarded as marking the first approach toward the generally recognized exchange of friendly permissions in the air, and will have historical significance in opening the sky to the peaceful traffic of world commerce.

The reciprocal grant of those rights is expected by delegates to be acceptable to a great majority of the states represented.

If the action of the sub-committee is approved by plenary sessions of the conference, the conference will conclude its work with these results:

A general convention on air navigation providing for a permanent international civil aviation organization with functions in the technical and consultative fields; formation of an interim organization to function until the permanent organization is established; the first two freedoms of the air; agreement on the mutual exchange of all five freedoms of the air — three of those would allow an aircraft to discharge its traffic from home in a foreign state, to pick up in a foreign state traffic going to the home state of the aircraft, and to handle traffic moving between two foreign states; a standard form of route agreements.

fight for freedom and who suffered damage, « including those who have been our enemies. »

However, all land belonging to war criminals and traitors will be confiscated, he said. A general commission has been established to investigate war crimes, Hoxha announced, and sub-commissions will be set up throughout the country. The commissions will act as fact-finding agencies.

Discussing foreign affairs, Hoxha told the correspondent that at the moment he does not foresee a Balkan federation, but he will make every effort to establish a strong brotherhood among the Balkan nations. He said that Albania's frontiers will remain as they are. There are Greek minorities in southern Albania, he said, but they will have all rights and privileges of other Albanian citizens. Some of the best fighters in Albania have been Albanian Greeks, he said, who had fought beside the Albanians against a common enemy and had formed « a great brotherhood. »

Albanian soldiers are fighting side-by-side with Yugoslav soldiers, and they, too, are bound by blood spilt in a common cause, Hoxha said. If it had not been for Yugoslav Partisans, Albanians would not have been able to arise, Hoxha declared. (PWB)

TITO HAILS ALBANIANS

WASHINGTON, December 3 — Marshal Tito, commander-in-chief of the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation, today hailed the coöperative spirit uniting Yugoslavs and Albanians, and predicted a long-lasting unity between the two countries.

In a message congratulating the Albanians on their flag day, which was addressed to the Albanian National Liberation Council, Tito added:

FRANCO-RUSSIAN CONFERENCES BEGIN

MOSCOW, December 3 — After attending mass with members of his staff, General Charles de Gaulle, President of the French Provisional Government, today began a four-day series of conferences on Franco-Russian problems.

Members of General de Gaulle's party described his visit to Stalingrad as the high point of his journey to Moscow. They said that he spent two hours in the Red October metal factory and the Stalingrad tractor works, where he saw hundreds of new tractors coming off the assembly line in the midst of battle ruins. The General expressed astonishment that the Stalingrad factories already were producing 60 per cent of their pre-war output. (OWI)

FRENCH OFFICIAL SEEKS SHIPPING SPACE

PARIS, December 3 — The French Commissioner for Relief and Rehabilitation, Jean Monnet, announced today he would leave soon for London and Washington to seek shipping space for 3½ million tons of goods, the Associated Press reported today.

These goods, Monnet said, are vital to France's economy during the winter and spring. The imports would consist mostly of food, wool, cotton, fertilizer, and raw materials for industry, and materials for putting the battered ports, railways, and factories back into full operation, the dispatch said. DEMOCRATIC GOVERNMENT IS ALBANIAN AIM

TIRANA, ALBANIA, December 3 — An all-out effort for reconstruction in Albania and establishment of a democratic government are the present twin aims of the Albanian régime, Enver Hoxha, Prime Minister and commander of the Albanian Army of National Liberation, said in an interview with a United Nations News correspondent.

Plans now call for the formation of a constitutional assembly as soon as the entire country is liberated and conditions stabilized, Hoxha said. All men and women of 18 years and over will choose the delegates to the assembly which will decide Albania's new form of government. He said that boys and girls under 18 who have taken part in the struggle for liberation will also be allowed to vote. The election will introduce women's suffrage in Albania.

Meanwhile, Albanians are being mobilized to participate in the national reconstruction program to repair the physical damage suffered in the country, Hoxha said. He said no military mobilization is being conducted, as the country is now liberated and the primary task is reconstruction. Reconstruction is to be based on making the fullest use of available raw materials. A chief task will be the reclamation of land.

BELGIAN GOVERNMENT GAINING CONFIDENCE

BRUSSELS, December 3 — The position of the Belgian Government of Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot has become stronger during the past week, the BBC said today in a broadcast from London.

At the same time, the parties engaged in forming an alternate government have held continued conferences, with good progress being reported toward an agreement. It has been reported that the alternate government would consist of four or five Socialists, three Christian Democrats, three Communists, and two members of the resistance movement.

At the moment, the Socialists and the Progressive wing still are in the Pierlot Ministry, and this ministry is expected to exist until they withdraw.

« We entered this ministry willingly, » the president of the Socialist Party said. « We have no right to bring about a crisis by withdrawing. »

Members of the defense ministry conferred yesterday to examine two bills drawn up by the Allied Commission for the final settlement of the political controversy.

With reference to the two bills, Maj. Gen. J. W. Erskine, head of the AC, declared:

« The bills have met with the approval of the delegates of the recognized resistance movements; they are now being examined by the Belgian defense ministers. The bills outline

INSIDE GERMANY

HIMMLER PURGING OFFICER CORPS

WASHINGTON, December 3 — Heinrich Himmler, virtual Führer of Germany, has ordered that all old professional German officers be relieved of their commands and be replaced by young, Nazi-Party-trained officers.

The new order, published in the latest official gazette of the Reich Labor Ministry, gives credence to Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt's charge that Gestapo Chief Himmler, by flooding the German High Command with Party members, has in fact become the head of the German Army.

Meanwhile, Adolf Hitler's lengthy absence from public appearances and activity is leading to sharp rivalry between Himmler and the Nazi Propaganda chief, Joseph Goebbels. Himmler is attempting to usurp Goebbels' post as Reich's Commissioner for Total War Mobilization by concentrating the organization of the Volkssturm and other military aspects of the present emergency under his control.

The rivalry between Goebbels and Himmler has been borne out in recent dispatches from German and neutral sources. One dispatch pointed out that Goebbels gave an exaggerated account of his activity in mobilizing replenishments for the German Army while Himmler, speaking at Munich, made no mention of Goebbels' efforts.

In a counter-move against Himmler's slight, Goebbels' propaganda machine gave great play to the fact that he was made an honorary colonel-in-chief of the Grossdeutschland Regiment. Addressing the regiment, Goebbels recalled the 20th of July, the day of the attempted assassination of Hitler, when he suppressed the anti-Hitler revolt by high non-Party Army officers.

Himmler, in another move to gain control of the German Army, has replaced Infantry General Othercamp, former chief of the Administrative Service, by an SS official, Obergruppenführer Franck. Franck has never served in the Army, but won the Gestapo head's favor by carrying out numerous purges ordered by Himmler.

The German press and radio, as well as soldiers' newspapers, are attempting to answer the question of "Where is Hitler?" with the statement that Hitler, unlike Churchill and Roosevelt, does not need to speak, for his people know what he wants. (OWI)

HIMMLER DRAFTS LABOR CORPS

WASHINGTON, December 3 — Heinrich Himmler today issued an order, under the name of the absent Adolf Hitler, drafting Germany's Labor Service Corps into military service. The German radio said that the laborers will be given military training, in addition to their present duties.

This new order means that all military training in Germany has been placed under the control of Robert Ley, chief of the Reich Labor Front. A German broadcast announced yesterday that, on orders from Himmler, all military Aircraft of the Tactical Air Force carried out a large-scale effort yesterday against enemy supply lines in northern Italy, as well as targets of many kinds over the whole battle front.

Objectives attacked by fighter-bombers and fighters included bridges and rail lines, rail cars, motor transport, tank concentration dumps, and enemy-occupied buildings.

Medium bombers hit bridges and causeways on the Brenner Route.

Oil and rail targets in Germany and Austria were attacked by heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force.

Coastal aircraft attacked small shipping in the Gulf of Venice and enemy transport in northern Italy, while planes of the Balkan Air Force were active against enemy road movements and other military targets.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, December 3 — Today's communique:

Allied forces which entered Linnich were mopping up in the town yesterday.

To the south we have cleared Roerdorf, and fighting continued at Flossdorf and in Inden, where action was fierce.

Fighter-bombers went for road, river, and railway targets over a wide area in the Rhineland. They destroyed or disabled large quantities of enemy rolling stock, and cut railway lines in many places.

Fortified towns immediately behind the enemy lines in the Düren-Linnich areas and troop concentrations near Düren were attacked, and a railway bridge 20 miles east of Euskirchen was destroyed.

Our ground forces enlarged their control of the Saar River bank above and below Merzig, and entered the town of Rehlingen.

Other forces were in the outskirts of Saarlautern on the west side of the River.

Farther south, moderate gains were made, and mopping up is in progress in Saarunion.

Medium, light, and fighter-bombers struck at enemy positions and other targets in the Saarbrücken region, and destroyed a railway bridge near Saargemünd, and set on fire an oil and ammunition dump at Pirmasens.

Southeast of Saarunion, our forces made gains of approximately two miles, and reached the vicinity of Mackweiler. Two enemy counter-attacks were repulsed.

The enemy was forced from the area on the west bank of the Rhine near Strasbourg. In his retreat, he blew up three bridges across the Rhine.

Fighter-bombers attacked a railway yard at Rastatt and Offenburg.

On the Alsace Plain, we have reached Selestat, where house-to-house fighting continues.

In the southern high Vosges Mountains, our forces pushed into the upper Ruhe River Valley and occupied several villages.

Units which crossed to the north bank of the Doller River near Mülhouse repulsed a strong counter-attack.

Farther south, moderate gains were made, and mopping up is in progress in Saarunion.

Medium, light, and fighter-bombers struck at enemy positions and other targets in the Saarbrücken region, and destroyed a railway bridge near Saargemünd, and set on fire an oil and ammunition dump at Pirmasens.

Southeast of Saarunion, our forces made gains of approximately two miles, and reached the vicinity of Mackweiler. Two enemy counter-attacks were repulsed.

The enemy was forced from the area on the west bank of the Rhine near Strasbourg. In his retreat, he blew up three bridges across the Rhine.

Fighter-bombers attacked a railway yard at Rastatt and Offenburg.

On the Alsace Plain, we have reached Selestat, where house-to-house fighting continues.

In the southern high Vosges Mountains, our forces pushed into the upper Ruhe River Valley and occupied several villages.

Units which crossed to the north bank of the Doller River near Mülhouse repulsed a strong counter-attack.

During the day's air operations which included an attack by rocket-firing fighters on an enemy strongpoint in the Venlo area in Holland four enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air and seven on the ground.

According to reports so far received, we lost one light bomber and 13 fighter-bombers.

Yesterday afternoon, a force of escorted heavy bombers attacked plants in the outskirts of Dortmund.

Last night, heavy bombers were over Germany in strength, with Hagen as the main objective. (Reuter)

Alshevadasz, Homrog, Jancho, Miomar, Shavopalpala, and Udgasz.

During the fighting from November 23 to December 2 on the territory of Hungary, troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front captured 7,875 German and Hungarian officers and men. Thus, from November 8 to December 2, on the territory of Hungary, troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front captured 21,745 German and Hungarian officers and men.

Northeast and south of Kaposvar, our troops, continuing their offensive, captured on the territory of Hungary the town and railway station of Dunafoldvar; the town and railway junction of Tamasi; the town and railway junction of Pincehely; and also occupied in fighting over 80 other populated localities, including Bikach, Alfa, Mikla, Rogili, Ochelo, Chuka, and Kaposhmer, and the railway stations of Talmano, Askala, and Benyo.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling took place.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, December 3 — Today's communique:

In the Udine area, in order to insure the flow of traffic, which has been seriously threatened by incessant Patriot activity, the enemy is building a branch railway line from Pontebba through Laipacco to Pradamano, but Patriots are sabotaging work on this project also.

West of the Tagliamento River, also in Udine Province, detachments of German SS and Fascist troops are attacking Patriot forces in four directions. Following bitter engagements, Patriots have succeeded in driving back the Germans at Solimbergo. Fighting is continuing in this area.

The enemy garrison at Porto Corsini, in Romagna, has been attacked by Patriot forces. (UNN)

WEHRMACHT

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, December 3 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The enemy, particularly the North Americans, are suffering increasing losses in men and material as a result of bitter fighting in the West. According to reports available so far, more than 5,200 prisoners were taken by our troops during November. The number of enemy killed and wounded amounts to many times this figure. We either destroyed or captured 1,514 tanks and armored reconnaissance cars, and 82 enemy low-level flying planes were shot down by army formations.

Northeast of Geilenkirchen, Panzer troops and Grenadiers are engaged in heavy defensive fighting against enemy forces who succeeded in penetrating into the main fighting area in narrow sectors.

On the battle front between Eschweiler and Düren, our vigorous attacks recaptured important heights, and our positions were moved forward.

Regiments of the American 8th Division which yesterday again launched up to 10 attacks in the contested area of the villages of Hürtgen and Vossenack, where the battle has been raging for weeks, were repulsed by counter-attacks or remained stationary in the shell-torn ground.

At Saarlautern, as well as between Saaralben and upper Vosges, our divisions frustrated all breakthrough attempts which the enemy continued throughout the day. In some sectors, our positions were pushed back to a minor extent after very heavy fighting.

East of Ingweiler and south of Hagenau, five attacks launched by American regiments collapsed unsuccessfully.

In the central and upper Alsace, our troops held their own against the enemy attacking from the Rhine Plain in

The enemy, despite bringing up strong forces, was able to gain ground only in some sectors.

On the whole remaining Eastern Front, there was minor fighting activity.

Air:

American bombers yesterday dropped bombs on Upper Silesia, southeastern Germany and the central Rhenish area.

Anglo-American fighters made low-level attacks on the civilian population in western and southwestern Germany.

British air formations penetrating into western Germany toward evening caused damages to buildings in some towns, particularly in Hagen.

Forty enemy planes, including 31 four-engined bombers, were shot down by our air defences. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

Western Front: Analysis of the First Six Months: Writing from Field Marshal Rundstedt's headquarters, Transocean's correspondent Günther Weber has given a résumé of the first six months of Allied offensive in the West. « The Allied invasion of Europe, » he states, « has destroyed and tied down a far greater number of forces than Eisenhower had anticipated in his orginal plans. He paid the price of the march from the Channel coast to the German border ... with 8,000 tanks ... and 40 to 50 thousand trained men who cannot be easily replaced ... He lost tanks and equipment, his best and most skilled infantry and air-borne divisions on the European battlefield ... In comparison with the 30 Allied divisions employed during the first month of the invasion, 80 divisions are engaged in battle, not including the 30 to 40 divisions of special formations. This was what an advance of 450 kilometres cost, and there are still 600 to go from Aachen to Berlin ... Rundstedt's armies have suffered heavy losses, and the battle in the West absorbed large quantities of German war potentials. It must not be forgotten that German morale has undergone a change in the last six months which is the opposite of the downward trend of Allied morale. The German armies today defend their towns and villages, either in the border areas or on Germany's very soil, whereas the Allies are fighting against time, with impatience, and against an opponent imbued with fanaticism ... American soldiers ... have realized that even Eisenhower's steamroller of material has its limits, and the German High Command is gradually balancing the enemy's material superiority. Whilst the Allies, and especially the Americans, are still harboring certain illusions, the Germans today think more realistically than ever. »

The Military Situation in Hungary: Writing about the new Soviet offensive in southern Hungary, Transocean's reporter Werner Hannemann admits the far-reaching implications of the Soviet's onward march on the whole German defence system in Hungary. He claims, however, that the offensive came as no surprise to the German High Command and, after 72 hours, the situation may be considered as stabilised. The next few days will decide the real strategic value of Soviet initial successes. Marshal Tolbukhin himself has declared to Moscow war correspondents that there can be no question about a « blitzkrieg, » as in the area of Lake Balaton the presence of strong German forces must be reckoned with. Marshal Tolbukhin has 18 panzer corps, as well as independent panzer formations at his disposal, with the 4th Guards Army and other infantry formations waiting in the rear.

Although the weight of operations has shifted to southern Hungary, » goes on Hannemann, « it does not mean that fighting has abated in north-eastern Hungary... The German and Hungarian forces have evacuated the towns of Gyoengyoes, Eger, and Miskolc for tactical reasons, but there are excellent natural defensive positions in the Matra and Buekk Mountains in the hands of the German High German Comment on De Gaulle's Visit. "De Gaulle has reported to Moscow in order to receive his orders" states DNB diplomatic correspondent, Dr. Siegfried Horn. He states that the arrival of Maurice Thorez in France indicates that Moscow has decided to direct French home policy through him whilst De Gaulle will be charged with the management of foreign affairs under Thorez's control. De Gaulle's refusal to agree to the British plan of a Western Pact already foreshadows Soviet interference with the affairs of Western Europe, which would virtually amount to Soviet control of the whole of Europe.

Little Comment on the Italian Situation. On Sunday, the German press and radio had very little to say about the political situation in Italy. Besides emphasizing the bitterness caused oy Eden's recent statement in the House of Commons, and the fact that for a week now "occupied" Italy has been without a government, there have been no comments.

THREE GREAT ALLIED WEDGES INTO WESTERN REICH

LONDON, December 1 — The Allied offensive gathered strength today along the entire Western Front from Holland to the Swiss border, as the pattern of assault developed into three great wedges in fortified German positions guarding the Rhineland and the Saar Basin. These penetrations are forcing the Germans to throw in irreplaceable reserves to block the roads to Berlin.

The first of these wedges is powered by the British 2nd Army and the American 9th and 1st Armies, which are driving slowly forward on a 20-mile front in the Linnich-Jülich-Düren sector, guarding the approaches to the Rhineland.

American forces which yesterday overran the charred strongpoints of Beeck and Lindern drove the Germans back across the Roer River and are now besieging Linnich, southwest of the strategic arsenal of München-Gladbach. Other American tank and infantry units have moved up to the Roer River in the Flossdorf, Roerdorf, and Koslar areas and control a seven-mile stretch on the west bank.

Allied artillery fire is being directed into both Merzig and Saarlautern, and troops continued to advance despite heavy fire from Siegfried Line forward positions. Heavy concentrations of German artillery, both mobile and casement, are located in this area, and they are described as having a greater fire power per yard than the defenses of Metz. Over 125 medium bombers dropped 250 tons of bombs on these positions, although Allied aircraft were grounded by bad weather in other sectors.

A frontal assault across the Saar (which is now in flood) in the face of the Siegfried defenses will be a difficult task, and further progress may be delayed until the waters subside and weather conditions permit concentrated bombing.

In their advance, American troops have overun a connected series of trenches and anti-tank ditches reinforced with concrete pillboxes and steel. These positions, however, lack guns, and have presented no serious obstacle.

Push toward Hagenau

The third wedge into German defenses developed northwest of Strasbourg, where both the 3rd and 7th Armies are pushing toward Hagenau. This French communications city is on the road to the German city of Karlsruhe across the Rhine, and is at the apex of the Alsatian triangle pointing into Germany.

Two villages on the edge of the Hagenau Forest have been cleared, and troops have advanced through the forest to within 1½ miles of the city. American troops and equipment are still pouring through the Vosges passes into the Alsatian Plain, both to the north and south of Strasbourg. The important Rhine city itself is under heavy artillery fire from German guns on the eastern bank of the Rhine as Allied forces near the river on both sides of the city.

The German bridgehead west of the Rhine is being steadily compressed as American and French troops of the 7th Army continue their advance south of the city. Gerstheim and Stotsheim, 15 miles south of Strasbourg, have been reached.

In the southern Vosges Mountains, where Moroccan and Algerian troops are in action, the French 1st Army pushed northward on a wide front and flung back a powerful German counter-attack west of Mülhouse.

There has been no progress reported on the Canadian 1st Army front at the tip of the Nijmegen salient. The Canadians began their offensive two days ago, and were reported to have advanced 1½ miles into the Reichswald Forest in Germany. (OWI - Reuter - AP)

HEAVY FIGHTING SOUTHEAST OF BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 1 — Extremely heavy fighting continued yesterday southeast of Bologna, as 5th Army and enemy forces battled for mountain positions at the apex of the deep Allied salient threatening the main German supply line along the Po Plain, it was announced here today.

Other American tank and infantry units have moved up to the Roer River in the Flossdorf, Roerdorf, and Koslar area, and control a seven-mile stretch on the west bank.

Enemy Recaptures Inde Bridges

The 1st Army increased its pressure on the Roer River fortress of Düren after capturing Lamersdorf. Heavy fighting is reported in progress just east of Lamersdorf and at Inden, where German troops are attempting to keep the Americans from crossing the Inde, a tributary of the Roer. Allied forces captured the bridges, but were forced back and the Germans succeeded in blowing them up.

To the southeast, in Hürtgen Forest, the Americans cut the Kleinhau-Brandenburg highway to Düren, and gained high ground within a mile of the Roer. Their attack is aimed toward Brandenburg and, in steady fighting, 400 yards were gained after a slight withdrawal owing to heavy German fire.

The second of the three salients into German positions was driven by 3rd Army forces, who are advancing northward on a curving 30-mile front toward the Saar River Basin. The most heavily populated area in the Rhine Valley, the Saar Basin is the heart of Germany's coal, steel, and synthetic oil resources.

Third Army troops have reached the Saar River at four points in the Merzig area, and have established a nine-mile front overlooking the river between Merzig and Saarlautern. They must still cross the river before Merzig, and the Germans blew up the bridge before falling back into the town and weather conditions permit concentrated counter-attack.

In their advance, American troops have overun a connected series of trenches and anti-tank ditches reinforced with concrete pillboxes and steel. These positions, however, lack guns, and have presented no serious obstacle.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 1 — Extremely heavy fighting continued yesterday southeast of Bologna, as 5th Army and enemy forces battled for mountain positions at the apex of the deep Allied salient threatening the main German supply line along the Po Plain, it was announced here today.

Few details were given of the battle, which has followed the German recapture of Monte Castellaro, some 9½ miles southeast of Bologna, except that the key peak was still in enemy hands, and that Allied forces were holding somewhere to the south. Official reports did not indicate whether the Allied forces had actually attempted to regain Monte Castellaro, or were still holding back a continuing enemy attack.

Meanwhile, heavy enemy mortar and artillery fire rained on 5th Army positions some four miles farther west, near Monte Belmonte, center peak in a mountain escarpment walling in the entrance to the Savena River Valley, main approach to Bologna.

LATE BULLETIN

R.A.F. MOSQUITOS ATTACK KARLSRUHE

LONDON, December 1 — Several squadrons of RAF Mosquitos tonight attacked the railway center and advanced base of Karlsruhe, close to the fighting in the Strasbourg sector, it was officially reported. Large fires were left burning. (Reuter)

A small enemy counter-attack in this area, launched after a night-long barrage, was repulsed. Enemy shellfire was also concentrated on 5th Army positions west of Route 65, the main Florence-Bologna Road, in the same sector.

In the Monte Belvedere sector, southwest of Bologna, 5th Army forces made limited advances in high ground west of the Pistoia-Bologna Road along the Reno River Valley, to capture the village of Abetaia, 20 miles north of Pistoia. There were no further reports from the Monte Belvedere sector, were a strong enemy counter-attack Wednesday recaptured this and a neighboring peak. Troops which attempted to push westward from the Abetaia area, reported that enemy forces had fortified this approach to their newly-won positions with strong concrete emplacements, mounting mortars and machine guns.

On the right flank of the 5th Army, British and Indian troops carried out local advances south of Imola and Faenza, recapturing some positions where enemy forces had infiltrated and temporarily reëstablished themselves.

On the 8th Army front, Allied infantry and tank forces reported some gains in the fifth day of heavy fighting in the Albereto sector beween the Lamone and Montone Rivers, crucial point in the enemy's present delaying line. Patrols crossed the Lamone River, southwest of Faenza, to make contact with enemy forces at this end of the German river defenses.

Intermittent rain kept the low ground of the 8th Army front sodden and difficult for any large-scale movement. (PRO)

SOVIETS ADVANCE BEYOND DANUBE

MOSCOW, December 1 — The great sweep of Marshal Tolbukhin's army across the southern Danube continued to make headway and 60 inhabited localities were captured today north and northeast of Pecs. Correspondents told of rapid advances through the breached German lines, and tanks and motorized infantry were said to have pushed ahead 15 miles.

The London Daily Telegraph cabled a report that one of the objectives of the offensive is the severance of the vital Zagreb-Budapest railway, and told of growing confusion inside the ranks of the Hungarian and Nazi defenders. The dispatch added that the Germans on the west bank of the Danube were caught completely by surprise by the breakthrough, which carried the Red Army units through marshy territory abounding in lakes and bogs.

According to Reuter, the coordinated drives in the Slovak mountains and the valley of the Danube are the beginning of a giant pincers whose ultimate prize is Vienna. Three armies, two of them under Marshals Tolbukhin and Malinovsky, and the third under General Petrov, are engaged in the offensive.

Russian troops also smashed across a German river barrier in eastern Czechoslovakia today and pushed ahead four miles to capture the town and railroad junction of Trebisov, close to the Hungarian border. The town lies a few miles west of the River Ondava, along which German defense units were deployed.

Tonight's communique also announced the capture of 3,000 German and Hungarian troops in fighting inside Czechoslovakia during the past week, while an additional 5,150 of the enemy were taken in operations on the west bank of the Danube.

Meanwhile, Finnish units continued their advance toward the junction of the Finnish, Swedish, and Norwegian frontiers, tonight's Finnish communique said.

In Norway, all Norwegians of military age were instructed to attack enemy patrols and to disobey German evacuation orders in a broadcast from London by the probably destruction of another. No American planes were lost.

Targets in the Bonin Islands and the Palau targets were also hit by Army bombers and planes of the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing. (OWI)

BRITISH CAPTURE PINWE IN BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, December 1 — The road and rail junction of Pinwe, on the road to Mandalay, has been captured by British troops, the Southeast Asia Command communique announced today. The town was occupied without opposition.

In the Bhamo area, Chinese troops crossed the Bhamo-Momauk Road, midway between the Japanese airstrip and the town.

West African troops made more progress in Arakan, advancing south in the valley of the Pichaung River, the communique said.

In Washington today, the War Department announced that on a single afternoon recently, 16 planes of the Chinese-American Wing shot down five Japanese bombers and 11 fighters; destroyed four Japanese bombers on the ground; blew up a locomotive; shot up three railroad cars; and strafed a 50-foot gunboat.

A Chungking communique from General Wedemeyer's headquarters today said that adverse weather conditions continued over most areas of central and south China Wednesday and yesterday, hindering extensive aerial action. Nevertheless, the 14th USAAF managed to bomb Tachang, on the Kweichow-Kwangsi railroad, Hochih, areas near Chefang, Lashio, and Wanting, and scattered objectives along the Indo-China border and in Thailand. (OWI)

R.A.F. IN HEAVY ASSAULT ON DUISBURG

LONDON, December 1 — Halifaxes and Lancasters of the RAF Bomber Command last night made a heavy and concentrated assault on Duisburg, inland harbor and main center of communications at the western end of the Ruhr, the Air Ministry announced today. Objectives in Hamburg also were bombed.

Night-fighters and intruder aircraft supported the bombers and attacked airfields, destroying at least two enemy planes in combat. Four aircraft are missing from these operations.

Duisberg has been extensively damaged already by frequent Allied air attacks, but the Ruhr has the most intricate railway network in western Europe, and the enemy must make every effort to continue its use as an advanced base, the Air Ministry news service pointed out.

Well over 2,000 tons of bombs, including 132,000 incendiaires were dropped on this city, which is the nearest Ruhr town to the Western Front, and its extensive marshalling yards are linked up with the Duisburg-Ruhr inland port, the largest in Europe.

Sixteen bombers and 17 fighters previously reported missing from yesterday's American attack on synthetic oil plants and railyards in Germany are safe, it was officially announced. This leaves 40 bombers and 13 fighters missing. At least eight of these fighters are believed safe in friendly territory.

Carrier-borne aircraft of the British Navy, operating in extremely severe weather conditions, have made further successful strikes against German shipping off the coast of Norway and against installations on the mainland.

An Admiralty communique said that a troop transport and two supply ships, which were sighted off central Norway under the escort of an armed trawler, were attacked with bombs and cannon fire. All these ships were

Russian troops also smashed across a German river barrier in eastern Czechoslovakia today and pushed ahead four miles to capture the town and railroad junction of Trebisov, close to the Hungarian border. The town lies a few miles west of the River Ondava, along which German defense units were deployed.

Tonight's communique also announced the capture of 3,000 German and Hungarian troops in fighting inside Czechoslovakia during the past week, while an additional 5,150 of the enemy were taken in operations on the west bank of the Danube.

Meanwhile, Finnish units continued their advance toward the junction of the Finnish, Swedish, and Norwegian frontiers, tonight's Finnish communique said.

In Norway, all Norwegians of military age were instructed to attack enemy patrols and to disobey German evacuation orders in a broadcast from London by the Norwegian commander-in-chief, Crown Prince Olaf. Norwegian forces have arrived an their native soil in the liberated Arctic port of Kirkenes, Norwegian Minister of Justice Terjk said in Stockholm. He added that the port had been completely destroyed, with only 28 houses left standing. (OWI-Reuter)

JAP CHARGES ON LEYTE REPULSED

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, December 1 — American troops threw off a series of desperate Japanese «suicide» charges in savage fighting today in the Philippines, it was reported tonight at General MacArthur's headquarters.

Seventh Division troops, continuing their steady advance northward, below the strategic port of Ormoc, repulsed the enemy counter-charges and were last reported holding a river line 13 miles south of the port. Veterans of the Aleutians campaign are in action in the area.

Another division pushed southward down the Ormoc Corridor and converged on enemy positions in the vicinity of Tolibaw and Bonbongon.

Meanwhile, the Pacific Fleet communique told of widespread air action, including a two-day series of attacks on two air strips on Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands. Seventh Air Force Liberators attacked the enemy air position. On the second day of the attack, Japanese planes rose to intercept but were repulsed with the destruction of one and

LONDON, December 1 — Halifaxes and Lancasters of the RAF Bomber Command last night made a heavy and concentrated assault on Duisburg, inland harbor and main center of communications at the western end of the Ruhr, the Air Ministry announced today. Objectives in Hamburg also were bombed.

Night-fighters and intruder aircraft supported the bombers and attacked airfields, destroying at least two enemy planes in combat. Four aircraft are missing from these operations.

Duisberg has been extensively damaged already by frequent Allied air attacks, but the Ruhr has the most intricate railway network in western Europe, and the enemy must make every effort to continue its use as an advanced base, the Air Ministry news service pointed out.

Well over 2,000 tons of bombs, including 132,000 incendiares were dropped on this city, which is the nearest Ruhr town to the Western Front, and its extensive marshalling yards are linked up with the Duisburg-Ruhr inland port, the largest in Europe.

Sixteen bombers and 17 fighters previously reported missing from yesterday's American attack on synthetic oil plants and railyards in Germany are safe, it was officially announced. This leaves 40 bombers and 13 fighters missing. At least eight of these fighters are believed safe in friendly territory.

Carrier-borne aircraft of the British Navy, operating in extremely severe weather conditions, have made further successful strikes against German shipping off the coast of Norway and against installations on the mainland.

An Admiralty communique said that a troop transport and two supply ships, which were sighted off central Norway under the escort of an armed trawler, were attacked with bombs and cannon fire. All these ships were damaged and left in flames. No casualties or damage was sustained by the British.

Rocket and cannon-firing Typhoons and Spitfire bombers of the 2nd TAF yesterday continued to harass enemy communications in north Holland and cut rail lines in 11 places, it was officially announced today.

During the 24 hours ending at dawn today, enemy air activity directed against southern England caused casualties and damage. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

ANTWERP ENDS ONE PHASE OF CAMPAIGN

LONDON, December 1 — Prime Minister Churchill's announcement that large convoys are now able to enter Antwerp marked the end of a decisive phase of the Allied campaign in the West, and the beginning of another, correspondents reported today.

The arrival of the first Allied convoy, unhindered by the Luftwaffe and the German Navy, not only has brought Allied shells, guns, and equipment to within 60 miles of the fighting front, but cut the Allied supply line by 375 miles.

The clearing of the port was achieved by nearly 100 minesweepers which labored day and night for weeks. The harbor installations are intact, due to the swiftness of the Allied advance, and to the work of the Belgian Underground Army.

American supply units which had formerly worked in Africa and Normandy are now working with 18,000 civilian dock workers, a Press Association dispatch said. The Belgian workers had been unemployed since 1940, when the Germans occupied Antwerp. (OWI)

70 SMALL GERMAN DIVISIONS ON WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, December 1 — The Germans have 70 infantry divisions on the Western Front as against the estimated 65 German divisions lined up to meet the Allied landings on D-Day, press correspondents at SHAEF reported today.

These 70 infantry divisions, however, consist of 11,000 men each, as against the full-strength divisions of 17,000 men which tried to hold the Allied advance in Normandy.

During recent operations, the Germans have been losing the equivalent of six of these smaller divisions every week. The German High Command has substantial reserves of men and armor which have not yet been committed to battle, the press reports said.

It has been estimated that by the end of 1944, the approximate strength of the German armed forces will probably be just below six million men. The dispatches said that of these six million available to fight the Battle of Germany, not more than one and a quarter million are fit combat troops between the ages of 19 and 46. (BBC - Reuter)

STIMSON COMMENTS ON WAR IN WEST

WASHINGTON, December 1 — The Germans are throwing troops and tanks into a last-ditch defense of the Cologne plains and the Ruhr Valley because they know that not only is the Allied drive aimed at Germany's industrial area, but that the route is the easiest and shortest geographically to Berlin, Secretary of War, Henry Stimson, said yesterday.

In his weekly review of the war, Stimson told a press conference that troops of American 1st and 9th Armies and the British 2nd Army have forced the enemy to yield, albeit slowly, despite desperate resistance by German troops who have been ordered to hold their ground regardless of the cost.

Stimson reported that Allied forces have driven a series of wedges into stout defenses and have gradually broadened the area of the advance.

He emphasized that even more significant than the progress of Allied troops on the Western Front during the week is the fact that already several German divisions have been demolished, and many other divisions are being battered and weakened.

A general offensive had to be delayed by General Eisenhower until enough artillery ammunition could be accumulated, Stimson explained. He said that with the opening of the port of Antwerp — within easy distance of the fighting front — delivery of ammunition from the U. S. (OWI)

PARIS SUBURB ACCIDENTALLY BOMBED

PARIS, December 1 — An official statement issued by an American Air Force headquarters today said: "A Marauder flying over the southwestern suburbs of Paris at 1015 hours this morning released its bombs through mechanical failure. They fell at Issy Les Moulineaux. All except one of the bombs fell without exploding. One exploded with a low order of detonation." Issy Les Moulineaux is two miles southwest of Paris (Reuter)

S.H.A.E.F. AGAIN BROADCASTS TO FOREIGN WORKERS

SHAEF, December 1 — A SHAEF spokesman, in a broadcast of instructions to foreign workers in Germany, told them today that after the Allies occupy areas where the German Army has been ousted, arrangements will be started to return foreign workers to their homes.

The spokesman said that foreign workers are to seek refuge and stay out of the way of soldiers until the fighting and mopping-up in the towns and villages where they work are completed. Then, after the foreign workers send a representative to Allied Military Government officials when the community is occupied, preparations for returning foreign workers to their homes will be undertaken. MILAN AREA RAIL BRIDGES BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, December 1 — Although recurrent bad weather again limited operations of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force to less than 500 sorties yesterday, Mitchell bombers of the Tactical Air Force severely damaged important rail bridges in the Milan industrial area of north Italy, it was announced here today.

Only small forces were used in the successful attacks on the bridges, at Vrema, 23 miles southeast of Milan, and at Romana di Lombardia, 25 miles to the east. Fighter-bombers, active in the same area, destroyed or damaged 130 rail cars and 49 motor vehicles, as well as effecting 37 rail cuts in the important supply network of the German forces in north Italy.

YUGOSLAVS TAKE NOVI PAZAR

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, December 1 — The German stronghold of Novi Pazar, in the mountainous section of central Serbia, fell to Yugoslav troops yesterday, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

Novi Pazar has been the goal of a major Partisan drive which has been slowly advancing over difficult terrain made even more difficult by recent heavy snows and rains, which converted supply routes into lanes of mud. Bulgarian Army units also took part in the liberation of Novi Pazar, the Yugoslav communique said.

Other Yugoslav forces stormed and captured the town of Bjeljina, thus cutting off the communication line which served the Germans in their retreat north toward the Sava River.

Liberation of Kraljevo, in Serbia, which Marshal Tito announced yesterday, resulted in the capture of seven pieces of German artillery, hundreds of rifles and machine guns, 23 carloads of ammunition, and 15 railroad cars and locomotives. Red Army troops took part in the liberation of Kraljevo. The Soviet communique announced that, besides other booty taken at Kraljevo, one plane, four tanks, and 22 tractors were captured.

South of Brod, Marshal Tito's forces are driving the Germans back on the town of Sjenica. Capture of this town will cut the main railway to Sarajevo, the city to which all German escape roads now lead.

North of the Adriatic port of Split, Yugoslav units have seized the fortified village of Prevjes, severing the railway to northern Italy and Austria, and prohibiting its use to any Wehrmacht members agile enough to run the gauntlet through central Yugoslavia. (OWI)

AMERICANS KILL JAPS AT RATIO OF 13 TO 1

WASHINGTON, December 1 — American troops have killed an average of 13 Japanese for every American killed in Far Eastern fighting, according to a report issued today by the U.S. Office of War Information.

The report says the Japanese Army today numbers at least four million men, of whom two million are in China. United States troops so far have killed at least 277,000 Japanese, while 21,000 Americans have lost their lives. Since 1937, the report added, 350,000 Japanese are believed to have been killed. COMMUNIST, SOCIALIST, AND ACTION PARTIES REFUSE SUPPORT TO BONOMI

ROME, December 1 — Leaders of the Communist, Socialist, and Action Parties today refused to collaborate in a government formed by Ivanoe Bonomi, telling him they would support only a Premier designated by the Committee of National Liberation.

Prince Umberto, Lieutenant General of the Realm, yesterday charged Bonomi with the formation of a new government, but the five parties participating in the CNL discussion later selected Meuccio Ruini, leader of the Democratic Labor Party and outgoing Minister Without Portfolio, as their choice for Premier.

During the afternoon, Bonomi had talks with U.S. Ambassador Alexander Kirk, and then with British Ambassador Sir Noel Charles. The British Ambassador afterward saw Alcide De Gasperi, Christian Democrat and Minister Without Portfolio in the outgoing Bonomi Cabinet.

After a conference with Bonomi today, Palmiro Togliatti, Communist leader, said he had told the ex-Prime Minister that, in view of the fact that the Committee of National Liberation parties have pronounced themselves opposed to him, « Bonomi could render a great service to the national cause by refusing the charge offered to him. »

Under such circumstances, Togliatti added, the CNL could continue « to exercise its functions of political direction » toward « the democratic renewal of the country. »

Pietro Nenni, Socialist leader, also made a statement to newspapermen after visiting Bonomi. He said he had told Bonomi that the Socialists could accept only a government formed by Ruini, or one formed in consultation with the CNL.

He said he had suggested to Bonomi that he « retired from any form of politics » since, he added, Bonomi would be in opposition to the CNL, and hence « would lend himself fatally to the maneuvers of the reactionary forces. »

Emilio Lussu, Secretary of the Action Party, told reporters he had informed Bonomi of his party's intention to oppose any government formed without CNL approval. The friendly attitude of Italy toward England, he added, was unchanged by the recent British declaration concerning Count Carlo Sforza.

Representatives of the six parties comprising the Committee of National Liberation met again today at the Palazzo dei Marescialli for an informal discussion of the situation. (UNN)

EDEN EXPLAINS BRITISH ATTITUDE ON SFORZA

LONDON, December 1 — Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, made it clear in the House of Commons today that the British Government was not in favor of the appointment of Count Carlo Sforza as Italian Foreign Secretary, because he had worked against « the government of Signor Bonomi, who has himself given us loyal support, and has fulfilled all his obligations toward us. »

Mr. Eden, who was replying to points in the debate on the King's speech, said: « Italy is a country with whom we have been recently at war, which surrendered unconditionally, and whose record in the present struggle under Mussolini's guidance was most shameful, not only toward us and France, but toward Greece and Albania. All these countries were the subjects of a carefully calculated aggression — and it turned out a miscalculated aggression.

« It is quite true that we are in no sense a vindictive people, and we have accepted Italy as a co-belligerent. But that country is not an ally. She remains the base of operations for our troops, and we are perfectly entitled to express our views about the appointment of any particular statesman in that country. We are absolutely entitled to do it.

Not a Veto

« We have not expressed a veto, but there is no reason why the British Government should not say, 'In our view, the appointment of Mr. X to the particular post of Foreign Secretary is not going to facilitate smooth working in our machine.' There is no crime in that. That applies particularly to the post of Foreign Secretary.

« We did not feel, for a number of reasons, that Count Sforza would be a particularly happy choice as Foreign Secretary.

« He did tell us that he would pursue a certain course on his return to Italy. I am not dealing with the royalty question. He has been, in our judgment, and according to our information, leading an [illegible] the government of Signor

At this point, Ivor Thomas, Labor member of Parliament for Keighley, intervened to point out that Count Sforza had been fighting Mussolini. Mr. Eden replied that throughout that period, Sforza was in the United States, where « he must have found the battle against Mussolini very hot. »

Mr. Thomas then said that for some time Count Sforza had lived in France.

Mr. Eden continued: « The battle must have been equally hard against Mussolini from there.

« All we have done is, not to impose a veto, but to express an opinion, which so long as we are the Government, we are entitled to do, especially in the particular conditions existing between ourselves and Italy. »

SFORZA ASKS ITALY-YUGOSLAVIA LIAISON

ROME, December 1 — There must be a closer understanding between Italy and Yugoslavia as an object lesson to all of Europe, Count Carlo Sforza told the people of Yugoslavia in a broadcast today over Radio Rome. Sforza recalled that he had expressed the same thoughts in pre-Fascist days.

Sforza said: « Our two peoples must understand each other. If it is not for reasons of love, then it must be for reasons of sane self-interest. » He added that when the war against Yugoslavia had been declared by Italy, « five million Italians and sons of Italians had considered it a crime. » He pointed out that this was brought home to him even more forcefully when many officers and men involved in that war expressed their horror and disgust.

The necessity of a system of interdependence of both nations, was mentioned by Sforza which, he said, « must guarantee for always a peace without which one cannot hope to make social justice in the world. »

In conclusion, Sforza said: « If the Italians and the Yugoslavs will build a true peace between them, they will acquire incomparable prestige because they will have given to Europe the only lesson of peace and brotherly love for which a wounded humanity has been waiting. The people who will be great tomorrow will be only those who have looked ahead. » (UNN)

WAX THEFT ENDS CANDLE SUPPLY

ROME, December 1 — As a result of 325 tons of imported paraffin wax being stolen, no allotment of candles for public sale can be made from factories after the middle of this month, the Allied Commission announced today.

Investigation disclosed that the wax disappeared from a supply depot at Naples, bringing the manufacture of Italian candles to a virtual halt, AC's Industry Sub-Commission said.

Shortages also have occured in transporting wax from Bari to Naples, officials added. Manufacture will be resumed whenever imported wax becomes available. (UNN)

EDEN EXPLAINS BRITISH ATTITUDE ON SFORZA

LONDON, December 1 — Anthony Eden, British Foreign Secretary, made it clear in the House of Commons today that the British Government was not in favor of the appointment of Count Carlo Sforza as Italian Foreign Secretary, because he had worked against « the government of Signor Bonomi, who has himself given us loyal support, and has fulfilled all his obligations toward us. »

Mr. Eden, who was replying to points in the debate on the King's speech, said: « Italy is a country with whom we have been recently at war, which surrendered unconditionally, and whose record in the present struggle under Mussolini's guidance was most shameful, not only toward us and France, but toward Greece and Albania. All these countries were the subjects of a carefully calculated aggression — and it turned out a miscalculated aggression.

« It is quite true that we are in no sense a vindictive people, and we have accepted Italy as a co-belligerent. But that country is not an ally. She remains the base of operations for our troops, and we are perfectly entitled to express our views about the appointment of any particular statesman in that country. We are absolutely entitled to do it.

Not a Veto

« We have not expressed a veto, but there is no reason why the British Government should not say, 'In our view, the appointment of Mr. X to the particular post of Foreign Secretary is not going to facilitate smooth working in our machine.' There is no crime in that. That applies particularly to the post of Foreign Secretary.

« We did not feel, for a number of reasons, that Count Sforza would be a particularly happy choice as Foreign Secretary.

« He did tell us that he would pursue a certain course on his return to Italy. I am not dealing with the royalty question. He has been, in our judgment, and according to our information, working against the government of Signor Bonomi, who has himself given us loyal support and has fulfilled all his obligations toward us.

« We would prefer not to have a man as Foreign Secretary who, only lately, has been working against a Prime Minister who has been perfectly loyal. We are simply judging on our experience of Sforza. I do not bring personal prejudices into this. We are entitled to observe what has happened in the country. We observed that, on his return, he rapidly began to work against the government, and when a new government was formed, he began to work against that government.

« We decided, in these circumstances, that we did not think that we should be very happy to have as Foreign Secretary somebody who had done that. We expressed our view that, in all circumstances, we should be happier without that particular appointment. I do not see why we should not be allowed to say that.

« I am not basing my action on what any particular party in Italy may, or may not, do. That is not the position which the British Foreign Secretary has taken. I have simply said that this particular individual's record, as an individual, is not one that gives us confidence in him as a Foreign Secretary. That happens to be the Government's view, and I have expressed it, and it remains my view.

« There is not the slightest parallel between this case and Belgium. Belgium has been our ally throughout the war, and is still our ally. Italy has not been our ally throughout the war. » other. If it is not for reasons of love, then it must be for reasons of sane self-interest. » He added that when the war against Yugoslavia had been declared by Italy, « five million Italians and sons of Italians had considered it a crime. » He pointed out that this was brought home to him even more forcefully when many officers and men involved in that war expressed their horror and disgust.

The necessity of a system of interdependence of both nations, was mentioned by Sforza which, he said, « must guarantee for always a peace without which one cannot hope to make social justice in the world. »

In conclusion, Sforza said: « If the Italians and the Yugoslavs will build a true peace between them, they will acquire incomparable prestige because they will have given to Europe the only lesson of peace and brotherly love for which a wounded humanity has been waiting. The people who will be great tomorrow will be only those who have looked ahead. » (UNN)

MORE ITALIAN TROOPS PARADE IN ROME

ROME, December 1 — Another contingent of Italian combat troops, including engineers, marched through the Via del Impero, in the center of the city, at 1100 hours today. In the line of march were motorized artillery and veteran Patriots from Sicily and Corsica.

The parade was reviewed by Major General Langley Browning, chief of the Allied Military Mission to the Italian Army, and Italian Government officials, including former Premier Bonomi, Count Sforza, and General Messe, Chief of the Italian General Staff. (UNN)

FACTORY DEREQUISITIONING STEPS DEFINED

ROME, December 1 — Requests by Italians for the derequisitioning (returning to private use) of industrial premises should be made henceforth through the Italian government, and not to any Allied agency, the Allied Commission said today.

This does not mean more requests can be approved, or that present restrictions can be lowered, but rather that applications will receive more thorough consideration, AC's Industry Sub-Commission pointed out.

As the sub-Commission defined it, this is the sole procedure:

1. The Italian owner or operator of a requisitioned factory or shop makes application to the Italian Ministry of Industry, Commerce, and Labor, at 15, Via Flavia, Rome.

2. That ministry examines the request and forwards it, with recommendations, to AC's Industry Sub-Commission.

3. The Sub-Commission considers the request on the basis of possible aid for essential civilian needs, and availability of power and raw materials.

4. After this study, the request goes to the Industrial Coördination Committee of the Allied Local Resources

Board of Allied Force Headquarters, which makes the final decision.

5. The Italian Ministry of Industry, Commerce, and Labor replies to the applicant. (UNN)

EIRE VOTES RELIEF TO ITALY

DUBLIN, December 1 — The Eire Government has decided to provide 400,000 dollars to the Irish Red Cross Society for war relief in Italy. The British news agency, Press Association, said last night that the full amount would be provided by the end of March. (OWI)

EDEN ADDRESSES HOUSE ON GERMAN PROBLEM

LONDON, December 1 — Foreign Secretary Eden told Commons today that the essential factor they had to remember in deciding future plans for Germany was that in the German character, the unquestioned authority of the State was what counted for the mass. The average German was the instrument of the State to an extent incomprehensible to the British; the Germans belonged to the State.

Mr. Eden said he believed that the authority which Britain held in the world exis'ed precisely because she represented the complete antithesis to the German State conception. The Germans were ready to obey any German leader. They believed that it was the destiny of their «race» to be the dominating power in Europe. That, to them, was far more important than either the freedom of the individual or the dignity of any particular man or women.

Unless one saw that, he continued, he did not understand the foundation on which the Nazi doctrine was so easily superimposed. It was acceptable to the average German because it expressed, in an aggressive form, the belief which the average German had had for 200 years or more. The Nazi doctrine was acceptable because it fitted in with his belief that the Germans are the dominating race.

Every report, Mr. Eden said, showed that it was in the younger generation, particularly in those between 16 and 25, that this problem was the most serious.

«Unless this feeling is eradicated,» the Foreign Secretary went on, «we shall be at the mercy of any other Hitler who happens to come along. Any precaution we take against the revival of Nazism must be taken in unison with our Allies.»

Some views which had been expressed about the Pierlot Government in Belgium were unjust, Mr. Eden said. It was a legally elected government, representative of the Belgian people, and it still had the support of all the Belgian parties except the Communists.

In regard to Greece, Mr. Eden said that Britain had asked the present coalition government to continue united in the reconstruction of their country. In view of the supplies that were being sent, and the sacrifices Britain had made, he thought that Britain was entitled to make this appeal, concluding: «We have no intention of interfering with the rights of the Greek people to choose freely both the régime and the system of government they prefer.» (BBC-Reuter)

INTERNATIONAL AIR CONFERENCE DISAGREES

CHICAGO, December 1 — The International Air Conference yesterday decided tentatively to establish the American «Five Freedoms» proposal as a separate document, so that nations could accept it or reject it individually. This, said a Reuter dispatch, constituted a setback for the United States' hope of attaching it as a protocol to the major agreement.

This decision was taken by a joint sub-committee whose delegates were the same as those of the full committee.

Later, the British Dominions stated that they would support Britain's refusal to sign a second document, which called for completely unfettered competition in air traffic after the war.

Several European and Middle Eastern nations are said to be considering similar action. (Reuter)

SCOBIE WARNS AGAINST VIOLENCE

ATHENS, December 1 — Major General Scobie, General Officer Commanding in Greece, said in a broadcast to the Greek people today that he stood firmly behind the present constitutional government until the Greek State could be established with a legal armed force behind it, and free elections could be held.

Declaring he was against «terrorism, violence, and bullying from whatever quarter it may come,» General Scobie said that he was convinced that in many parts of the country there was no freedom of speech and no freedom of the press, and that terrorism and violence still existed. (Reuter)

GREEN REELECTED HEAD OF A.F.L.

NEW ORLEANS, December 1 — Reëlected president of the American Federation of Labor for his 21st term, William Green pledged yesterday in his acceptance speech at the organization's convention that he would do his best to bring about a merger with the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the United Mine Workers.

The convention adopted a resolution calling on free trade unions of the world to «unite to maintain a lasting peace with freedom,» and another opposing any kind of forced labor and favoring reestablishment of German trade unions. A committee report on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals for an international security organization was approved. (OWI)

LONDON, December 1 — General Charles de Gaulle has arrived in Russia and is on his way from Stalingrad to Moscow by train. Radio Moscow, announcing this early today, said the party arrived at the airport of Baku on Tuesday, but bad weather forced them to continue the journey to the Soviet capital by train.

Stopping yesterday in Stalingrad where he presented a memorial plaque in the name of the French people, he said in the course of a speech:

«Stalingrad is not only a symbol of victory — it is also an excellent lesson in what can be achieved by the Allies united against the hated Germans.»

General de Gaulle's visit is being made at the invitation of Marshal Stalin. The main subjects of their talks are believed to be Germany's fate after her defeat, collective security, a new Franco-Soviet agreement, and the general question of regional pacts in Europe. (Reuter)

British and Indian troops of the 5th Army have occupied several heights previously held by the enemy. Elsewhere, the front has been generally quiet.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Bad weather yesterday hampered air operations, and heavy bombers of the Strategic Force were grounded.

Tactical medium bombers made successful attacks on bridges east of Milan, while fighter-bombers and fighters concentrated against enemy communications in the northern Po Valley, cutting rail lines, and destroying rail yards and motor transport.

Covering a wide area, Coastal aircraft attacked targets in the Italian Riviera, Yugoslavia, and Albania.

Four of our aircraft are missing from these operations.

MAAF flew less than 500 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, December 1 — Today's communique:

Allied forces continuing to clear the Maas pocket have occupied an enemy strongpoint at two castles near Wanssum and Broekhuizen. The village of Broekhuizen was cleared of the enemy.

Railway transport and communications in northern and eastern Holland were again under attack by fighter-bombers.

At Suchteln, factory buildings were hit by fighter-bombers.

In the area of Linnich, our forces reached the Roer River north of Koslar.

We are fighting in Beeck, Lindern, and Flossdorf.

Fighters and fighter-bombers closely supporting our ground forces in this sector attacked enemy troops and mortar positions, and bombed and strafed strongpoints at Baal, Rürich, Glimbach, Gevenich, and Boslar.

Farther south, we cleared Lammersdorf after hard fighting, and entered a section of Inden, west of the Inde River.

High ground east of Grosshau was occupied.

Medium, light and fighter-bombers destroyed a number of enemy tanks at Pier and Inden, and attacked the fortified villages of Stockheim, Vettweiss, and Erp; bombed and strafed strongpoints at Brandenberg, Bergstein, and Berg; and bombed armored vehicles and a repair depot at Gemund.

Other medium and light bombers went for railway yards at Zweibrucken.

Escorted light bombers attacked benzol plants at Duisburg during the afternoon, and two other benzol plants at Oberhausen and Bottrop were targets for escorted heavy bombers which made concentrated attacks through cloud.

Limited advances were made by our ground forces east and west of the lower Vosges Mountains north of the Saverne Gap, and near the Rhine River in the vicinity of Hagenau.

Strasbourg was shelled heavily by enemy guns across the Rhine River.

On the northern Alsace Plain, our units reached Gerstheim and Stotzheim, meeting little opposition.

Our advance in the southern high Vosges Mountains continues on a wide front, and our forces are within a mile of Urbeis and Saint Amarin.

We inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in repulsing counter-attacks at Burbach, just south of Thann.

East of Mülhouse, deep penetrations have been made into the Hart Forest.

On the Channel Coast, strongpoints at Dunkirk were hit by our medium and fighter-bombers. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, December 1 — Tonight's communique:

During today, on the territory of Czechoslovakia, our troops forced the Ondava River, and on the western bank captured in fighting the town and junctional railway station of Strebishev, and also occupied the populated localities of Jankovtse, Jahovtse, Kolsheglube, Tushevtse, Gorovtse, Volchevtse, Harvishtse, Baranch, Garan, and Ulne-Jahstribe, and the railway station of Uhov.

During the battles from November 23 to 30, our troops captured on the territory of Czechoslovakia 3,000 German and Hungarian soldiers and officers.

In Hungary, north and northeast of Pecs, our troops, continuing their offensive, occupied in fighting over 60 populated localities, including Mayosz, Rachkoze, Laboch, Chikosbodosz, Magyarherkelen, and Aboliged, and the railway station of Hetver and Medosz.

During the battles of forcing the Danube, north of the Drava River, and breaking through the enemy defence on the western bank of the Danube, in November, our troops captured 5,150 German and Hungarian officers and men.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, December 1. — Today's communique:

WEHRMACHT

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, December 1 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Aix la Chapelle sector, particularly northeast of Geilenkirchen and in the Hürtgen sector, the enemy continued his strong attacks. He advanced only a little beyond his initial positions, owing to the determined resistance of our troops, and again lost 23 tanks.

Our formations, in the battle which has been raging since November 17, offered an unshakable resistance to the incessant major attacks of the U.S. 9th and 1st armies, and frustrated all attempts at breaking through in powerful counter-attacks. The U.S. shock troops paid for the local gains which, at the point of the deepest penetration, east of Würselen, amounted to 15 kilometers, with losses many times superior to ours, and the destruction of 500 armoured vehicles.

At the Lorraine frontiers, east of Sierk and Bouzonville, grim fighting developed in the forefield of the West Wall. At Sarreunion, grim attacks failed in front of our positions.

In Alsace, our troops are engaged in grim defensive fighting against enemy formations which are trying to broaden their penetration on both sides of Strasbourg.

East of Markirch, the enemy succeeded in punching a deep gap into our lines.

Grim enemy attacks on the southern pillar of our mountain positions at the French-Alsatian frontiers were either warded off or halted.

In Alsace-Lorraine, yesterday, our troops destroyed 32 enemy tanks, many of which fell victim to the «Tank Fist.»

Artillery fire flared up in the forefield of our fortresses on the Channel Coast, during these last few days.

London, Antwerp, and Liége continued to be subjected to our long-range bombardment.

Italy:

In central Italy, yesterday, the British 8th Army again attacked our positions in the Romagna, east of Faenza, with strong forces. The attack was stopped in front of our main lines.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, we occupied new positions between the Drau and the mountains, northeast of Pecs. Strong Soviet tank attacks were frustrated in front of our new lines. The enemy, having made a penetration in a northerly and northwesterly direction, is advancing towards the Pecs-Szeszard line. Counter-measures are in progress.

In the southwestern part of the Matra Mountains, our grenadiers repulsed the enemy, inflicting heavy losses on him in grim forest fighting. A Bolshevik formation, which had been narrowed down in a small sector, was wiped out.

Northeast of Erlau, the enemy was repulsed in front of new positions.

In the Miscolcz sector, fresh Soviet attacks were frustrated. Northeast of the town, the enemy formations were stopped after small initial gains.

At the Bodrock, in the frontier area of eastern Slovakia, numerous Bolshevik attacks remained unsuccessful.

Nothing of moment is reported from the remaining parts of the Eastern Front.

Air:

Yesterday, central Germany, the Rhenish-Westphalian area, and the territory in the West in the vicinity of the [illegible] Anglo-American terror attacks.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, December 1, —, Today's communique:

Patriot activity has been lively throughout the Veneto zone. On November 10, Patriots cut the Vicenza-Montagna railway line at four points, causing the destruction of a railway coach. They also damaged a bridge on the line to Logare.

In the same zone, Patriots destroyed a German lorry, killing many of the enemy, and assaulted a Fascist militia patrol, killing two militiamen and capturing arms.

On November 17, they attacked a military vehicle, killing five Fascists and wounding a German.

It has been confirmed that on October 30 the Udine-Gorizia railway line was damaged over a length of three miles, near Udine, blocking traffic for many hours; and also that the Udine-Treviso line was blown up near Reana, derailing 16 goods trucks and a railway carriage, and holding up traffic for 28 hours.

On October 27, two railway carriages were derailed and traffic blocked for seven hours on the Udine-Reana line.

In the Grappa zone, the enemy began a series of local mopping-up operations. Many houses were burned, and seven Patriots killed and four wounded. The Germans lost six dead and several wounded.

On November 22, near Serpiano, in Emilia, a patrol of Modena Patriots ambushed two cars belonging to the enemy General Staff. (UNN)

GERMAN

Important Analysis of Military Strategy in the West: The military commentator Sertorius sees a certain amount of strategic triumph for the Germans in the West, despite the admitted Allied advances. The supposed strategic success derives from the fact that the «grimness of the German defence» has prevented the Allies from concentrating at one focal point and smashing it.

Instead, the Allies have been forced to «change their tactical focal points,» shifting from point to point in their search for soft spots, with the result that their « fundamental strategic concept » (that of concentrating everything at one point and thereby breaking through), has become « confused, if not entirely lost. » Hence, Sertorius offers his German audience the following morale-bolstering conclusion:

« The pounding of the German Front, now here and now there, does not make the impression of very systematic planning, but, rather, of being at a loss about what to do, as though the enemy were glad to make any headway at all, regardless of whether or not it is of any strategic use. Thursday's fighting should be viewed from this angle. »

Rhine-Vosges Bridgehead: The Transocean correspondent reports that in middle Alsace, the American 7th Army and the French 1st Army have resumed their « concentric attack on the German Rhine-Vosges bridgehead. » It is admitted that an American « major penetration ... might narrow the bridgehead. » None the less, this will « by no means bring about the encirclement of German troops still situated between the Rhine and Vosges, for which the enemy is striving. »

Goebbels Article: Tonight, the German Radio has broadcast the weekly article by the German Minister of Propaganda. It is called « Errors of the War. » Goebbels argues that, although Germany has made some errors, the Allies have made far more errors in the matter of sizing up realistically the problems of the war. Allegedly, the Allied estimate « has been correct neither as to the course of future military events, nor as to the duration of the war. The difference between us is that we acknowledge error frankly; they, however, do not admit their vast number of mistakes. »

Goebbels enumerates various errors or deliberate falsifications of which he deems Allied news sources to be guilty, especially in the matter of supposedly concealing the success of German secret weapons. In contrast, he lauds the Wehrmacht communique as the « most serious and credible » source available on the daily military situation.

Eastern Front: This front today occupies far less prominence than the Western Front in German news reports. The correspondent Von Oiberg reports that the only big Soviet drive today is the continuation of Soviet « efforts to conquer Hungary and Slovakia. »

Axis Troops Frustrate Allied Attacks: After stating that the « new, large-scale British offensive in the Adriatic sector » was frustrated by German counter-action yesterday, the Fascist radio tonight mentioned numerous alleged Axis triumphs in today's fighting. South of Bologna, the « Italo-German formations recaptured Monteverde. »

It is reported that the situation south of Faenza remained relatively calm.

Furthermore, it is asserted that the Allied counter-offensive against the San Marco formation was broken up by Italian batteries. Here, presumably, Axis troops penetrated into the « 'De Gaullist' defensive system. »

Fascist Homage to Kesselring: On the occasion of the 59th birthday of Marshal Kesselring, Fascist commentators stressed the soldierly qualities of the German commander and paid homage to his « brotherly » contribution to the cause of Fascist Italy. Several vignettes of the African and Italian campaigns are cited; one supposed Kesselring incident (following which the Nazi warrior summed up the Nazi-Fascist war aims in the slogan « Resist and be determined to survive »), is used to illustrate the portentious rôle Kesselring has played in saving Italy, along with Germany, from destruction.

It is said that Kesselring is a cautious strategist, a « born soldier » who « answers the power of the enemy's [illegible] ». His tactics are praised by the commentators, who contend that the Fascist Army exploits the delay in military activity to regain its pristine strength. Finally, it is said that Kesselring's martial genius has been one of the dominant factors which have prevented the Allies from achieving a quick conclusion of the Italian Campaign.

The « humane » side of Kesselring's nature is eulogized, this being illustrated by his « preservation of art treasures, » his assistance to civilian populations near the front, and his solicitude for refugees from the « barbarous enemy. »

Formation of Mobile « Black Brigade » Units: The Fascist radio announces the imminent formation of special operational « Black Brigade » units. In emphasizing the punitive and extremist nature of these battalions, the headquarters announces that they are designed to « move with rapidity and aggressive spirit in the struggle against the bandits and outlaws; » the new units will have a dual rôle in that they may also be called upon to form a fighting unit at the front.

It is announced that Fascist Party Secretary Pavolini addressed one of the first of the new units in the province of Sondrio, « where mopping-up operations are in progress. »

Bonomi Government Crisis: The Fascist radio, taking full cognizance of the governmental deliberations in Rome, has vacillated several times between conjecture, prognostication, and actual assertion. A late broadcast reported that the National Committee had appointed Meuccio Ruini to be Bonomi's successor, and that this solution had been seconded by all parties except the Liberal Party. But this « scoop » was later rescinded, and the commentator's ironic emphasis fell once more on the continued insolubility of the situation. Concurrent with the premature announcement of Ruini's appointment, a long and scornful biography of the man was presented. The gist of the attack was that Ruini was always and will forever more be a « monotonous bore, » a plodder (not a schemer) whose present recognition is deemed symptomatic of the nebulousness of the National Committee of Liberation.

The British veto of Count Sforza's appointment is said to be characteristic of Britain's eternal interference with small states, reminiscent of her attitude toward Indian princelings. This observation forms part of a quotation from the German press. The Italian commentator points out that Sforza's rejection is all the more lacking in noblesse oblige, in that Sforza has been the greatest exponent of Italian colonial dissolution, a policy for which the British should presumably be grateful.

Perhaps the most insistent Fascist comment on the background for the government crisis is contained in their attacks on the weakness of Bonomi, with the implication that this weakness has been expressly desired by the Allies; Bonomi has been « kicked by Socialists, repudiated by Communists, despised by the Action Party, insulted by the Liberals. »

Lengthy editorials attempt to show that the corollary of the dissension within the government is the vast landscape of alleged economic collapse and disorder throughout « invaded » Italy. Amongst other Allied commentators, Sumner Welles is quoted as saying that the present chaos in Italy will open the doors to Bolshevism. Anti-Fascism in general is shown to be a miserable substitution for Fascism.

realistically the problems of the war. Allegedly, the Allied estimate « has been correct neither as to the course of future military events, nor as to the duration of the war. The difference between us is that we acknowledge error frankly; they, however, do not admit their vast number of mistakes. »

Goebbels enumerates various errors or deliberate falsifications of which he deems Allied news sources to be guilty, especially in the matter of supposedly concealing the success of German secret weapons. In contrast, he lauds the Wehrmacht communique as the « most serious and credible » source available on the daily military situation.

Eastern Front: This front today occupies far less prominence than the Western Front in German news reports. The correspondent Von Olberg reports that the only big Soviet drive today is the continuation of Soviet « efforts to conquer Hungary and Slovakia. »

Axis Troops Frustrate Allied Attacks: After stating that the « new, large-scale British offensive in the Adriatic sector » was frustrated by German counter-action yesterday, the Fascist radio tonight mentioned numerous alleged Axis triumphs in today's fighting. South of Bologna, the « Italo-German formations recaptured Monteverde. »

It is reported that the situation south of Faenza remained relatively calm.

Furthermore, it is asserted that the Allied counter-offensive against the San Marco formation was broken up by Italian batteries. Here, presumably, Axis troops penetrated into the « 'De Gaullist' defensive system. »

Fascist Homage to Kesselring: On the occasion of the 59th birthday of Marshal Kesselring, Fascist commentators stressed the soldierly qualities of the German commander and paid homage to his « brotherly » contribution to the cause of Fascist Italy. Several vignettes of the African and Italian campaigns are cited; one supposed Kesselring incident (following which the Nazi warrior summed up the Nazi-Fascist war aims in the slogan « Resist and be determined to survive »), is used to illustrate the portentious rôle Kesselring has played in saving Italy, along with Germany, from destruction.

It is said that Kesselring is a cautious strategist, a « born soldier » who « answers the power of the enemy's attack by economizing in men and armaments. » His tactics are to « resist, wearing out the enemy; » these qualities tification, and actual assertion. A late broadcast reported that the National Committee had appointed Meuccio Ruini to be Bonomi's successor, and that this solution had been seconded by all parties except the Liberal Party. U. S. 9TH ARMY LAUNCHES NEW DRIVE: U. S. 3RD CONTINUES ADVANCE INTO SAAR

LONDON, November 30 — The American 9th Army today launched a powerful attack toward the shaky German Roer River line northwest of Linnich, and late reports tonight said American forces had advanced to capture the strategic town of Lindern. The Germans were forced to yield to flame-throwers, tanks, artillery, and bombs.

Infantry forces drove into the Tiger tank nests in Beeck and battled street-by-street through the burning town to Lindern, on the rail line from Geilenkirchen to München Gladbach. Survivors of Hitler's "Elite" SS garrison of Lindern were captured, while most of the Beeck defenders were killed.

Artillery concentrations in the center of the line at Inden, lost it, and then regained the western end. In both towns, the Germans fought from barricaded houses and cellars, clinging tenaciously to each bit of ground.

American 3rd Army forces continued their drive into the Saar Basin in spite of heavy German counter-attacks and artillery barrages, press reports said tonight. The German Army is fighting with grim determination tonight to save its arsenal in the rich coal and steel Saar region.

The 95th Division repulsed a counter-attack led by 15 German tanks and captured a ridge dominating the west bank of the Saar River two miles due west of Saarlautern. To the northwest, 90th Division troops pushed a mile eastward and reached the Saar banks on a three-mile front, about two miles southwest of Merzig.

The Americans have hurled back 10 counter-attacks in less than 24 hours in the Oberlimberg area two miles northwest of Saarlautern and the battle is increasing in its intensity. Press reports said that the Germans are laying a blanket of shells from Siegfried Line forts on the countryside through which the Americans are advancing, and they are committing more of their reserves to the Line.

7th Reaches Matzenheim

To the southeast, the 7th Army was reported to be overcoming German resistance all along its line. Half the Alsatian plain has been wrested from the Germans by the French and Americans. Allied forces have driven 25 miles south of Strasbourg to capture Erstein, on the road and rail line from Strasbourg to Colmar. They have reached the vicinity of Matzenheim, four miles to the south.

Other 7th Army forces are rapidly developing their advance along the Rhine Valley to the north, and were reported today to be within three miles of Haguenau.

Swiss reports said that Allied motorized infantry forces are within a few miles of the Swiss frontier. The reports, as yet unconfirmed, said that a strong German position at Neudorf, near Huningen, was liquidated by the French. The French were said to have pounded the Huningen bridgehead, a German bulwark on the Rhine's west bank, by artillery fire from two directions and forced the Germans to withdraw.

General Eisenhower made a 24-hour inspection tour of the new Canadian 1st Army front in the Reichswald Forest at the northern end of the 400-mile Western Front. He also inspected the British and Polish Divisions of the 2nd Army somewhere in Holland.

Press dispatches reported that complete tactical surprise had been achieved when the Canadians struck across the Dutch frontier from the Nijmegen salient into the Reichswald Forest. They were last reported to have fought their way about a mile inside the German frontier.

Artillery concentrations in the center of the line diverted enemy attention from the attack on their northern hinge. The infantry went into the assault without a preliminary artillery barrage, smoke-screens giving the troops protection. The ground ahead of Allied troops was formidable with part of the Siegfried Line defenses covering German positions.

Broad Front on Roer

Other forces to the south of Linnich reached the Roer River at Flossdorf and Roerdorf, less than five miles north of Jülich, which protects the Aachen-Cologne military highway. American forces are along the Roer on a 15-to-20-mile front, late dispatches reported.

The Germans opened the dam flood-gates along the Roer, and blew up a major bridge across the river at Jülich in a vain attempt to stop the Allied advance to Cologne and Düsseldorf in the industrial Rhine Valley.

Farther south, American 1st Army units pushed beyond captured Langerwehe on the road to Düren, and are now 17 miles inside Germany. They are reported to be fighting in the village of Merode, in the Hürtgen Forest, less than four miles from Düren, anchor of the Roer defense line in this sector.

The Germans are putting up very stiff resistance in the battle for Inden and Lammersdorf, on a Roer River tributary. First Army troops won the bridge over the Inde bank of the Saar River two m. ks due west of Saarlautern. To the northwest, 90th Division troops pushed a mile eastward and reached the Saar banks on a three-mile front, about two miles southwest of Merzig.

FIGHTING INTENSIFIES ON 5TH ARMY FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 30 — Fighting on the 5th Army front reached its greatest intensity in more than a month yesterday, as German forces in strength counter-attacked two key Allied salients southwest and southeast of Bologna, it was announced today.

The heaviest enemy attacks, which at their peak employed two infantry battalions and strong concentrations of tanks, self-propelled guns, mortars, and rocket-launchers, were directed against Monte Belvedere and Monte Corona,

LATE BULLETIN

FIRST ALLIED CONVOY ENTERS ANTWERP

ANTWERP, November 30 — The first convoy of Allied merchant ships taking shells, guns, food, transport, and equipment to the Allied Armies for the battle of Germany has entered the great port of Antwerp, stated a Reuter message tonight. It also brought dock equipment to handle the enormous flood of war supplies that will now run through non-stop to the front, only 60 miles away.

two peaks 30 miles south of Modena, and west of the Pistoia-Bologna Highway along the Reno River Valley.

Although the first two enemy attacks were repulsed, by doubling the strength of their assault force the Germans were able to retake both these important positions, which had formed the apex of a deep salient driven by American forces on November 25 into the enemy lines northwest of the town of Porretta.

At this time, enemy forces had staged a strong counter-attack in an unsuccessful attempt to regain the key position.

Enemy forces also regained ground in their strong counter-attack on 5th Army positions north of Monte Grande, southeast of Bologna, where American forces in a series of hard-fought engagements more than a month ago drove a sharp wedge through enemy mountain defenses to approach to within four miles of the main Po Valley Highway.

Artillery, mortars, and self-propelled guns were used by the enemy in his attacks, which marked the culmination of a series of sharp patrol clashes and heavy mortar and artillery barrages in the Monte Grande area. Monte Castellaro, several miles northwest of Monte Grande and 9½ miles southeast of Bologna, was recaptured in these enemy assaults. American troops captured this height on October 24.

A number of sharp clashes occurred just west of Monte Castellaro, and enemy mortar fire and sporadic air attacks harassed troops and transport along the Bologna-Florence Road in this upper sector.

Troops of an Indian division and a British armoured unit with the 5th Army yesterday occupied the town of Casola Valsenio, 9½ miles south of Imola and in the Senio River Valley.

High ground northwest of Monte Fortino was also captured in a series of advances just west of the river town.

On the 8th Army front, heavy fighting continued for the fourth successive day around Alberetо, midway between the Lamone and the Montone Rivers, which the Germans are now employing as their principal delaying position.

Aside from enemy shelling of the Fossa Ghala Canal crossing south of Ravenna, there was no other action along the front, sodden now with recent rains. (PRO)

RUSSIANS TAKE EGER: CONTINUE DANUBE PUSH

MOSCOW, November 30 — Troops of Marshal Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Front, striking a powerful blow at the Nazi defenses of southern Czechoslovakia, today captured the fortified city of Eger, 67 miles northeast of Budapest.

Marshal Stalin announced the Red Army seizure of the key road and rail center in an order of the day which also told of the capture of Szikszo, another key German defense point and important communications hub in the same general area.

Eger is on a branch rail line connecting with the Budapest-Miskole line, and is also the hub for five highways leading north to Czechoslovakia, and to southern points.

The Germans had fortified the town to protect their positions guarding the southern approaches to Czechoslovakia.

Other units of the Red Army continued their drive across the Danube and tonight were reported building up a mass of armor and supplies on the large bridgehead which has withstood all German counter-attacks on the west bank of the river. Heavy fighting was reported all along the 90-mile arc of the bridgehead, and the Germans were reported to be throwing in reserves to stem the drive.

Front-line reports said that Marshal Tolbukhin's forces have the choice of three objectives: to swing northeast towards Budapest; to push to the Austrian frontier; or to

Headquarters estimated that 5,000 more enemy troops were lost in the convoy, bringing the total Japanese casualties in reinforcement attempts to more than 26,000, according to Associated Press. (OWI)

WEDEMEYER PREDICTS TIDE WILL TURN IN CHINA

CHUNGKING, November 30 — There is a reasonable expectation that remedial measures now being taken will turn the tide in China against the Japanese, Maj. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, U.S. Commander-in-Chief in the China Theater, said today at a press conference. He told correspondents that the tonnage of supplies flown from India to China was increasing, and that everything possible was being done to accelerate the movement of vital supplies.

General Wedemeyer acknowledged the continued gravity of the military situation, asserting that enemy forces in the Kwangsi-Kweichow region have strong offensive capabilities in any direction that they might choose. He said that the enemy was getting a corridor into Indo-China, and establishing good interior lines of communication.

The American commander reported that he is having daily conferences with Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, and that the Chinese key men are most cooperative.

In a communique, General Wedemeyer announced that adverse weather conditions Tuesday and yesterday had checked operations of the 14th USAAF in north, central, and south China areas.

RAF Liberators swooped on a large concentration of Japanese rolling stock in the Mandalay railway yards in daylight Tuesday, blowing up buildings and setting fires visible for 50 miles, Reuter reported today.

Meanwhile, the Chinese High Command again confined its communique to the position near the Kwangsi railway town of Hochih, 95 miles northwest of fallen Liuchow. It made no mention of the Japanese penetration of the Kweichow Province.

The High Command indicated, however, an 11-mile Chinese withdrawal in the Hochih area.

East African forces have captured several enemy strongpoints in the Myitha Gorge, five miles east of Kalewa, Chindwin river port in northern Burma, today's Southeast Asia Command communique said. Simultaneously, other East African units driving on the town from the north reached a point four miles from it, and are battling the enemy. Allied tanks and fighter-bombers supported the infantry in both attacks.

Troops of the British 14th Army fighting in the Chindwin Valley, some 80 miles to the north, have entered Paungbyin, on the east bank of the river without meeting enemy opposition. The also cleared a village 12 miles to the east.

In Arakan, further Japanese withdrawals were reported from Palewa.

Heavy bombers of Eastern Command returned yesterday to attack the Bangkok area. Heavy bombers of the same force had previously damaged railway yards at Mandalay on Tuesday, the communique added. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

WASHINGTON, November 30 — The third Superfortress strike in a week against industrial targets in Tokyo was carried out without loss said a U.S. War Department communique today. The text of the communique:

"Industrial targets in Tokyo were bombed Wednesday by B-29 aircraft of Brig. Gen. H. S. Hansell's 21st Bomber Command in the first night mission flown by the Saipan-based Superfortresses. Bombing was accomplished by precision instruments, and results were not observed because of cloud cover.

Tonight's communique reported a continuance of the offensive, and the capture of 50 more localities, including one 30 miles directly south of Pecs, the furthermost point of the advance.

Russian units also continued their push inside Czechoslovakia, and occupied over 30 localities, the communique said.

In Yugoslavia, the town and railway junction of Kraljeva was liberated by Red Army troops fighting with units of Marshal Tito's army.

The communique reported the destruction and disabling of 29 German tanks during fighting yesterday.

ANOTHER LEYTE-BOUND JAP CONVOY SMASHED

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 30 — American airmen have smashed another Ormoc-bound convoy of Japanese ships, presumably loaded with reinforcements for the enemy garrison on Leyte, General MacArthur's communique announced tonight.

The convoy included a 9,000-ton transport, and three small freighters, all of which were sunk. A 5,000-ton freighter and an escorting destroyer, also in the convoy, were set afire.

CLARK SAYS FIGHTING WILL NOT BE EASED

WITH ALLIED ARMIES IN ITALY, November 30 — Lt. Gen. Mark Clark, commander of the 5th Army who will soon assume his new post of commander-in-chief of the Allied Armies in Italy, said yesterday that the Germans still are sending reinforcements into northern Italy, and give every indication that they will fight as tenaciously on the current front lines as they have at every defense position during the Allied drive up the Italian Peninsula.

General Clark said also, in an interview with an American press service correspondent, that, as in the past, Allied troops of the 5th and 8th Armies will be prepared for the tasks set for them in the future operations on the Italian front. He added, furthermore, that he planned to continue to direct operations as a field general.

General Clark told his interviewer that his new command will be a tactical one. He did not say when he would take over the new command, but he asserted that the change would be made in a manner that would not interfere with operations.

As commander of the 5th Army, General Clark fought for 15 months under General Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, who on Sunday was named a Field Marshal and appointed Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations. General Clark said yesterday that in his new command he was happy that Field Marshal Alexander would remain as his immediate superior officer.

General Clark spoke warmly also of Lt. Gen. Richard L. McCreery, commander of the 8th Army. He noted that General McCreery formerly was commander of the British 10th Corps, a unit of the 5th Army under General Clark, and that the Allied team of commanders which walked together through all the Italian compaigns is continuing to remain together.

General Clark said that he was complimented that he, as an American, was given command in a theater where the fighting forces are predominantly British. (UNN)

12,000 PLANES BLAST REICH IN PAST 48 HOURS

LONDON, November 30 — More than 1,200 Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF today attacked synthetic oil plants at Böhlen, Zeitz, Merseburg, and Lutzkendorf, while the RAF bombed three oil plants in the Ruhr, it was officially announced tonight

Well over 12,000 Allied aircraft, including fighters, have assaulted Germany during the past 48 hours, according to a Reuter tabulation.

More than 1,000 fighters from bases in France and Britain escorted the American heavies. The four places hit are in a group in the Leipzig area about 100 miles southwest of Berlin. U.S. Strategic Air Force Headquarters said other targets included Saarbrücken, the industrial capital of the Saar mining area, nine miles in front of the American 3rd Army.

Fifty-six bombers and 30 fighters are missing from today's operations, it was officially announced late tonight.

The weight of explosives dropped by the bombers was reported in press dispatches to have been the greatest the 8th Air Force has released in a single day in at least two months. For the first time in a week, the bombers had an unobstructed view of the oil targets. It was the sixth major aerial operation against the Reich in less than 36 hours.

Block-busters of 4,000 pounds were dropped by RAF bombers near Oberhausen, Bottrop, and Duisberg.

Allied bombers also wrecked two of the main escape bridges across the Rhine for the German Army, south of Strasbourg, now being cut up in the eastern Vosges.

More attacks on rocket-bomb sites in Holland were carried out during the day by bomb-carrying Spitfires of the RAF Fighter Command, the Air Ministry said tonight. Australian pilots dived several thousand feet through intense flak to drop their bombs and strafe the area with their cannons.

While the non-stop strategic blows against the German war machine were being carried out by Allied aircraft based in Britain, Allied tactical aircraft yesterday used five hours of good flying weather to strike in support of ground forces in Holland and Germany. The 9th USAAF flew nearly 300 sorties, reports from SHAEF said today. Two aircraft are missing from these operations.

Thirteen attacks on German shipping off the Frisian Islands, as well as a torpedo assault on a convoy of five ships, were made last night and early today by Beaufighters, Wellingtons, and Royal Navy Barracudas, the Air Ministry revealed tonight. Darkness made accurate observation of results difficult. (OWI - Reuter)

EISENHOWER AGAIN CALLS TO FOREIGN WORKERS

SHAEF, November 30 — At the order of General Eisenhower, Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Forces, the voice of SHAEF broadcast a message today to foreign workers in Germany whose countries are at war with the Reich and those who work in the Ruhr, the Rhenish-Westphalia industrial area, and the Rhineland, instructing them what to do «when the Allied armies expel the German Army from the area where you work.»

Emphasizing that if the instructions be carried out faithfully «you will accelerate both the defeat of Germany and your return home,» the broadcast urged listeners to go into hiding and to avoid any German attempt to drag them deeper into Germany with the retreating armies. The broadcast added.

These instructions, said the broadcast, did not apply to Allied prisoners of war. Further instructions, by radio and leaflet, would be given by the Supreme Commander, the broadcast added. (BBC)

T.A.F. TAKES HEAVY TRANSPORT TOLL IN PO VALLEY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 30 — Fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday destroyed or damaged 16 locomotives, 293 rail cars, and 110 motor vehicles in the heaviest toll of enemy transport in the Po Valley in recent weeks, it was announced here today.

These planes also destroyed three rail bridges, and hit three others in the Po Plain, and as well effecting 29 rail cuts in the Verona-Brescia-Mantua Area, and along the Brenner Pass route.

Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 15th AAF, now employed in night attacks against vital targets in the Reich as a result of the development of cloud-piercing radar bombardment instruments, last night attacked enemy installations in the Linz, Munich, and Innsbruck areas. The attack was carried out despite heavy cloud cover, with results unobserved. A few enemy night-fighters and flak were encountered. (PRO)

11,000 GERMANS ON RHODES, DODECANESE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 30 — More than 11,000 Germans, with some Italian forces, are on the Island of Rhodes and the northern Dodecanese off the coast of Asia Minor, it was announced here today by the Royal Air Force.

Nightly patrols of Beaufighters of the Balkan Air Forces have created a «complete stranglehold» on the islands, with all sea communications cut off for months, the report stated.

So close is the Allied air vigilance over the islands, which include Cos and Leros, that Germans «cannot move men, guns, or even a solitary truck, without speedy discovery,» the statement said. (PRO)

R.A.F. ANSWERS GREEK ISLAND'S S.O.S.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 30 — A Wellington bomber of the Balkan Air Force, Based in Greece, recently answered the S.O.S. of the Greek island of Cephalonia, off the northwest coast of the Peloponnese, by flying in anti-diptheria serum and other medical supplies urgently needed by the isolated island's small hospital, it was announced here today.

Islanders lined the narrow strip of land where the supplies were dropped between two long inlets of the sea, and rushed the containers to the hospital building. (PRO) officially announced tonight.

Well over 12,000 Allied aircraft, including fighters, have assaulted Germany during the past 48 hours, according to a Reuter tabulation.

More than 1,000 fighters from bases in France and Britain escorted the American heavies. The four places hit are in a group in the Leipzig area about 100 miles southwest of Berlin. U.S. Strategic Air Force Headquarters said other targets included Saarbrucken, the industrial capital of the Saar mining area, nine miles in front of the American 3rd Army.

Fifty-six bombers and 30 fighters are missing from today's operations, it was officially announced late tonight.

The weight of explosives dropped by the bombers was reported in press dispatches to have been the greatest the 8th Air Force has released in a single day in at least two months. For the first time in a week, the bombers had an unobstructed view of the oil targets. It was the sixth major aerial operation against the Reich in less than 36 hours.

Block-busters of 4,000 pounds were dropped by RAF bombers near Oberhausen, Bottrop, and Duisberg.

Allied bombers also wrecked two of the main escape bridges across the Rhine for the German Army, south of Strasbourg, now being cut up in the eastern Vosges.

More attacks on rocket-bomb sites in Holland were carried out during the day by bomb-carrying Spitfires of the RAF Fighter Command, the Air Ministry said tonight. Australian pilots dived several thousand feet through intense flak to drop their bombs and strafe the area with their cannons.

While the non-stop strategic blows against the German war machine were being carried out by Allied aircraft based in Britain, Allied tactical aircraft yesterday used five hours of good flying weather to strike in support of ground forces in Holland and Germany. The 9th USAAF flew nearly 800 sorties, reports from SHAEF said today. Two aircraft are missing from these operations.

Thirteen attacks on German shipping off the Frisian Islands, as well as a torpedo assault on a convoy of five ships, were made last night and early today by Beaufighters, Wellingtons, and Royal Navy Barracudas, the Air Ministry revealed tonight. Darkness made accurate observation of results difficult. (OWI - Reuter)

U. S. 7TH ARMY DIVISIONS NAMED

SHAEF, November 30 — It was announced here today that regiments comprising three infantry divisions on the American 7th Army sector are the 71st, 114th, and 324th in the 44th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Robert L. Spragins.

The 397th, 398th, and 399th regiments are in the 100th Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Withers J. Burpress.

The 40th, 410th, and 411th regiments are fighting with the 103rd Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles C. Haffner.

It was also announced that the U. S. 13th Field Artillery Regiment, which had served with the British 1st and 8th Armies, are now with the French 1st Army in the Vosges Mountain sector. (OWI)

ENGINEERS CLEARING ALBERT CANAL

LONDON, November 30 — While British Army and Navy engineers work to clear Antwerp Harbor and the 25 miles of dock space for Allied shipping, American Army engineers are clearing more than 200 demolished road bridges from the Albert Canal, press dispatches reported tonight.

The Albert Canal runs for more than 90 miles to connect Liege with Antwerp. Belgian and Dutch engineers are working with the Americans on the canal clearance and on the erection of new bridges. (OWI)

YUGOSLAVS LIBERATE KRALJEVO

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, November 30 — The liberation of the city of Kraljevo in Serbia was announced in today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, which described the booty captured as "enormous." The city is an important railway junction situated at the confluence of the Ibar and Morava rivers. The advance is proceeding toward Cacak.

Reinforced by Soviet units, the Yugoslavs made a deep penetration into the Baranja district of Vojvodina in Serbia, after a hard battle in which the Yugoslav 31st Division particularly distinguished itself.

On the Uzice-Pozega line of communication, the enemy has lost the iniative, and is unable to put up any resistance, the communique said. Pressure on the Germans is growing rapidly.

Fighting continues in Montenegro, where 3,000 Germans have been killed in the past week. All enemy regrouping north of the town of Podgorica, whose objective is to break through to Sundjak, has been rendered impossible.

Elsewhere in Yugoslavia, hard fighting is going on in Bosnia, Dalmatia, Croatia, and Slovenia, with heavy losses being inflicted on the enemy both in men and materials. (FYR)

YUGOSLAVIA FACES HOME-FRONT STRUGGLE

BELGRADE, November 30 — Marshal Tito, receiving the Yugoslavian decoration of National Hero, said today that the honor was not a personal one, but in reality it constituted a recognition to «those young men and girls who were wounded and killed in order that a free, democratic Yugoslavia may live.»

The Marshal continued: «We still face a hard struggle, not so much a struggle on the battlefield, as one for the rebuilding of our martyred and ravaged country. We shall soon win. We shall soon defeat the enemy of our country in a struggle for the liberation of our people from the German invaders.» (PWE)

NAZI JAILERS STAND TRIAL

LONDON, November 30 — Attempts were made to lynch six Germans who were officials of the notorious prison camp in Poland when they were being brought to trial at Lublin yesterday, the News Chronicle said today.

8 U. S. 3RD FLEET ACTIONS IN 3 WEEKS

WASHINGTON, November 30 — The United States 3rd Fleet, under the command of Admiral William Halsey, engaged in eight combat actions against the Japanese in a period of slightly more than three weeks, Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal said at a press conference yesterday.

These activities showed the immense strength and range of the American Navy, he added.

The 3rd Fleet, consisting of more than 100 fighting ships in addition to supply ships, included the fast carrier task force commanded by Vice Admiral Marc Mitscher.

Forrestal disclosed that the fleet sortied from its advanced base on August 28 to begin its strikes that ranged from the Bonin Islands in the north Pacific to Morotai Island in the Moluccas in the south — a span of 1,650 miles.

Two days after the fleet left its base, the first combat action began. Japanese bases in the Bonin and Volcano Islands were attacked. This operation lasted two days. On September 5, four days later, the islands of Palau, Yap, and Ulithi were attacked until September 7. During the next two days, the 3rd Fleet switched its activities against Japanese military targets, in the Mindanao area of the Philippines.

On September 9, elements of the fleet began support of the American landings on Peleliu and Angaur in the Palau Islands. This supporting operation continued for six days.

Meanwhile, between September 11 and 13, other elements attacked the central Philippines. The next day, a group supported the landing on Morotai, in the Moluccas.

Four days later, on September 20, planes of the fleet attacked Luzon in the Philippines, and this action continued on September 21. The central Philippines were again attacked two days later. (OWI) tives of five parties announced that they would like to see the Premiership go to Meuccio Ruini, Minister Without Portfolio and leader of the Democratic Labor Party.

Tonight's formal announcement by the Undersecretariat of Press and Information said:

The day's developments began shortly after noon, when Bonomi said he had been selected to form a government. Less than two hours later, however, Bonomi said he had declined to do it.

«At the time, it was true,» he explained. «Since then, the situation has changed. New factors have developed as a result of the deliberations of the Committee of National Liberation.»

Soon afterward, the Committee of National Liberation announced it had chosen Ruini to form a new government, (formal designation — of course — could come only from the Lieutenant General of the Realm). The invitation to Ruini was concurred in by the delegates of five of the major parties, with representatives of the Liberal Party reserving decision.

This crowded day began when Ruini in the early morning was received in audience by Prince Umberto as chairman of the CNL, a post he assumed following the withdrawal of Count Carlo Sforza.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Bonomi was visited at his offices in the Viminal Palace by Marquis Lucifero, Minister of the Royal Household.

Not long thereafter, Bonomi departed for the Quirinal Palace, presumably for conference with Prince Umberto.

The executive committee of the six parties was in session throughout the morning, and at noon there was another meeting of the CNL at the Marescialli Palace. Later, Ruini, in company with former Finance Minister Soleri, a Liberal, visited Marquis Lucifero. (UNN)

2. Fusion and coördination of all forces working for the liberation of the nation.

3. Greater aid to the Patriots in the north, under the guidance of local Committees of National Liberation which must be invested with all necessary power.

4. An impartial, objective, and responsible epuration policy which will swiftly and energetically punish those responsible for the Fascist Régime and the profiteers under it.

5. A Consultative Assembly, formed on a regional basis and close to the government, which will insure immediate and intimate contact among the central government and all other branches of the national life, and which will agree to a free and open discussion of proposed laws.

6. A financial policy which takes cognizance of the grave situation involving the monetary balance and the circulation of money. The financial policy should be directed toward defense of the lire, which is the basis of the national economy, through rigorous restraints on government spending and resolute taxation of wealth.

7. An organic plan of reconstruction should be put into action, a plan under which both state and private enterprise may work together in harmony. (UNN)

ITALIAN FARMERS PRAISED

ROME, November 30 — Praise for the stout efforts of the Italian farmer was voiced at a national agricultural conference which opened at the Italian Ministry of Agriculture here today.

Commodore Ellery Stone, USNR, Chief Commissioner of the Allied Commission, was among speakers at the meeting, the first held by Italian officials in agriculture, fisheries, and forestry since the liberation of Italy began more than a year ago.

"The farmers of Italy deserve our admiration for carrying on their great work of helping to feed the nation, under what might be termed the most unfavorable conditions," Commodore Stone told the Italian officials and the Allied agricultural officers summoned by the Allied Commission from all regions to participate in the discussions.

60,000 POUNDS OF U. S. GIFTS FOR ITALY

ROME, November 30 — Allied postal authorities in Italy expect to handle about a thousand mail bags (60,000 pounds) of gifts from Americans to friends and relatives in Italy before Christmas, the Allied Commission today announced.

After inspection in America by civilian censors, the packages will be given parcel-post space in military ships to the Italian ports of Palermo, Naples, and, possibly, Leghorn, for delivery by Allied transport to Italian post offices in Palermo, Naples, Rome, and Vatican City, AC's Communications Sub-Commission said.

Because of a shortage of transport, the United States postal authorities have advised senders that recipients must live within the limits of the four places mentioned.

This service will continue into the new year, and will be extended as soon as the necessary transport is available, the Sub-Commission added.

Regulations limit each American sender to one gift package a month, not more than four pounds in weight or 25 dollars in value, containing food, clothing, medicines, or toileteries. (UNN)

Commodore Stone recalled the suffering of Italian farmers «from the dangerous policies of the Fascist Regime and the ravages of the war brought about by that régime,» and added: «Despite the great loss in farm homes and livestock, despite floods unleashed by the enemy, and the lack of machinery, seed, and fertilizers, agriculture in Italy today is making rapid recovery.»

«Our admiration goes as fully to the forester and the fisherman who braved the elements under terrific odds to bring a little warmth and a better diet to their countrymen.»

Commodore Stone credited the officials present for a good part of the agricultural recovery, and assured them that, in planning to make the most enterprising use of whatever small supplies might become available, «you have the full backing of the Allied Commission.»

Mr. Gullo said that all present were determined to consecrate their entire activity to the greater production of Italy's needs, and to collaborate «as one man, with the armed forces, so that the brute force of an uncivilized enemy might be annihilated from a civilized and democratic world.»

Mr. Allbaugh underlined the need of developing cooperative and democratic systems as aids to maximum supply of foodstuffs, «not only in augmenting production, but also in seeking to attain a better distribution to all the Italian people.»

«We hope that the rôle of the Allies as consultants in resolving the more burning problems of agriculture will bring good results,» Mr. Allbaugh added.

NO AGREEMENT REACHED AT AIR CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, November 30 — British and American delegations to the International Civil Aviation Conference failed to come to an agreement tonight on proposals for limitations on international air traffic.

Alternate proposals submitted to the conference restated the countries' respective positions on controls over the traffic of international air lines through territory of sovereign countries.

The proposals represented little change from the original positions of the two countries. Under the British plan, international air routes would be divided and allocations of traffic to each country made under a standard formula.

The American plan discards the use of a formula, and, instead, advocates adoption of general principles which would be applied on a flexible basis by an international organization empowered to control air traffic throughout the world.

Discussion of the two plans is scheduled for tomorrow by the conference, but observers say that the final agreement may omit all reference to the problem of traffic allocation.

According to Associated Press, the conference is expected to be: (1) an agreement covering standard rules for the outcome of air navigation; (2) an international air organization with advisory and ministerial function; (3) a protocol under which nations desiring it may participate in the mutual exchange of the «five air freedoms;» (4) a standard form for negotiations for countries inside of and outside of the «five freedoms» group. U. S. PRESS SALUTES U. K. WAR EFFORT

WASHINGTON, November 30 — Under such captions as «Blood, Sweat, and Tears,» «Democracy at War,» «Hats Off to the British,» American newspapers today expressed the admiration of the people of the United States over the figures contained in the British Government's White Paper on the British war effort, the London Times correspondent said today.

Radio commentators were also eloquent in their praise of the accomplishments, stout-heartedness, and endurance of the British people, characterizing their war effort in itself, and in proportion to their human and material resources, as the greatest ever made by any people.

The New York Times pointed out that the British fought Hitler alone for nearly two years «before the Japanese bombed us into the war.» The paper continued:

«The British people have stood up magnificently against every weapon Hitler could throw against them. On that little island, our British cousins have fought the good fight, held the line, and contributed their full share to victory.»

The New York Herald Tribune devoted its leading article to «the really remarkable conspectus of a democratic people, fully mobilized for war and fighting on. This is a larger part of the whole story than has ever been told, or than any other government has told, in regard to the efforts of its own people.»

The Herald Tribune said that many interesting evidences of the impact of total war on British life could be drawn from the figures, «but all of them,» it said, «add up to an inspiring picture of a great people mobilized for every sacrifice, pulling its full weight, and more, in the common struggle, in which it has never flinched nor failed.»

Most Americans Astonished

The London Daily Telegraph correspondent said that it was clear that much of the information came as a surprise to most Americans. They were vaguely aware that the British had done a great deal, but many of them either did not know, or had half forgotten, what enormous sacrifices their British ally had made, the paper said.

Thomas Stokes, a national columnist, said:

«The White Paper showed for the first time, in ghastly statistics, the tragic and staggering effects of the war on England, the terrible sacrifices of her people, the loss of life, the devastation of her financial and physical resources, including the shattering of her lifeline — her commercial fleet.»

GREEKS DISAGREE OVER NEW ARMY

ATHENS, November 30 — A new Greek cabinet crisis arose following the refusal of the left wing National Liberation Front, which includes the EAM and the ELAS guerrillas, to sign an agreement providing for the demobilization of the Free Corps which they had earlier accepted, a Reuter correspondent said today.

According to this agreement, the mountain brigade and the Greek regiment, which were formed in Egypt and fought at El Alamein and Rimini, were to be maintained as a part of the new National Army, and as a compromise, a special brigade was to be set up composed of right wing EDES forces and another consisting of ELAS and Andartes guerrilla groups.

A report that the three EAM ministers in the government had resigned was not confirmed in Athens. A communique issued by the central committee of EAM after a night meeting, which was attended by these ministers, said:

«More united than ever, we are for national union and for the solution of all problems, including the military question, in the democratic spirit.» (Reuter)

LEND-LEASE TO AID BRITAIN AGAINST JAPAN

LONDON, November 30 — Lend-Lease aid after the defeat of Germany has been planned with America to keep up British fighting power for the defeat of Japan, Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today.

Declaring that Lend-Lease from America would be reduced to little more than half that of 1944, Mr. Churchill said that cash will be paid for any supplies Britain obtains from the U. S. with which to rebuild the export trade, «which we deliberately gave up in the extremity of our emergency, but without which we could not live in the future.»

Mr. Churchill expressed a hope that after the defeat of Germany, it should be possible to increase supplies for civilians and improve the diet, emphasizing that American Lend-Lease aid would still be required for this, and to build temporary houses for bombed-out workers. (BBC)

P. O. W.'S IN U. S. WELL TREATED

WASHINGTON, November 30 — Enemy prisoners held in the United States are well treated, «but are not pampered,» a report of the House of Representatives' Military Affairs Committee said today.

An investigation into complaints that there was laxity in the handling of enemy prisoners proved that the criticism was unjustified. There have been «surprisingly few» escapes from American prison camps, the report said, and these were almost entirely by Germans actuated by fear of their fellow prisoners. (CBS)

U. S. TO BUILD 3,050 AIRPORTS

WASHINGTON, November 30 — The construction of 3,050 new airports and the improvement of 1,623 airfields was recommended in a plan submitted to Congress Tuesday by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones. The program is estimated to cost more than 1,250 million dollars.

WINANT PRAISES CHURCHILL

LONDON, November 30 — U. S. Ambassador to Britain John Winant paid high tribute to the British Prime Minister on his 70th birthday.

He said: « Mr. Churchill is a man with many powers and great achievements, but perhaps the greatest of these is his genius as a democratic leader. He is a master of democracy.

U. S. TO BUILD 3,050 AIRPORTS

WASHINGTON, November 30 — The construction of 3,050 new airports and the improvement of 1,525 airfields was recommended in a plan submitted to Congress Tuesday by Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones. The program is estimated to cost more than 1,250 million dollars.

It also stressed the necessity for the construction of an additional 31 airfields large enough to accommodate long-range international and domestic operations. At present, the United States has 355 airfields equipped for long-range operations.

The War Department announced that domestic airlines will soon receive « a substantial number » of planes declared in excess to the war needs. This would increase the present inadequate war-time fleets and replace worn-out planes, Reuter said. (OWI-Reuter)

A. F. L. CALLS FOR POST-WAR ORGANIZATION

NEW ORLEANS, November 30 — A resolution indorsing a post-war international agency which would adjust peacefully problems leading to war and which would act against aggressors was adopted today at the American Federation of Labor convention here.

The convention delegates went on record as declaring that the United States has a responsibility to help the planning and operation of agencies to keep peace between nations and « to determine policies in promotion of world economic welfare. »

The convention also unanimously approved a resolution reaffirming support of the no-strike pledge for the duration of the war. It expressed the organization's « determination to fulfill our pledges to the government and to the people of the United States and the members of our armed forces, so that we will give every possible assistance in prosecuting the war to a victorius conclusion.»

A cablegram from General Eisenhower, expressing «complete confidence of the fighting forces in American workers,» was read to the delegates. General Eisenhower said that he had been informed of the steps taken by the A.F. of L. to increase production of ammunition, tanks, cotton-duck, and other equipment needed by the military, for which, he said, «I am indeed grateful.»

A post-war international peace organization must be created if «security, a good life, and justice are to be possible for all,» the convention resolved, adding that among the most important functions of such a group is to accord small nations «more effective protection and participation in progress.»

The resolution proposed that in this body of international law there should be included a world court of justice, because «any world organization responsible for keeping the peace must have the means to prevent aggression.»

The A.F. of L. delegates recommended also that regional organizations should be established within the international agency to deal specifically with regional problems, and to promote regional welfare covering such areas as the Pacific, Asia, Pan-America, Africa, and Europe.

The convention approved the following statement:

«The American Federation of Labor realizes we are living in a world community of nations, and that, unless we organize this community of nations for peace, we can not escape the recurrence of wars.

«We believe that such a world organization is necessary to achieve our sovereign will for peace and, instead of limiting our authority and power, such an organization will make possible a fuller realization of the spirit and constructive purposes of our people.

«There must be equal care to maintain peace on the home front, as in world affairs, and peace can result only from social justice for individuals, as well as nations. Security, a good life, and justice must be possible for all.»

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 30 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

With the improved weather over the battlefront in Italy, many local engagements have taken place.

In the 8th Army sector, the enemy launched a number of small counter-attacks, all of which were repulsed, and the general position remains unchanged.

In the mountainous sector southwest of Faenza, ground previously held by the enemy has been evacuated, and our fighting patrols in this sector have been very active.

On the main 5th Army front, the enemy launched a series of counter-attacks in varying strength and gained some ground in the vicinity of Monte Castellaro, southeast of Bologna, and our troops were forced to abandon Monte Belvedere, northwest of Porretta Terme.

Elsewhere, counter-attacks were repulsed, and activity has been confined to local artillery and patrols.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Kostar has been cleared, and other advances have been made in this sector.

Fighter-bombers supporting our ground forces attacked enemy targets in the Linnich area, and destroyed an ammunition dump at Stetternich.

Farther north, air attacks ranged from the Channel Coast to the Ruhr Valley.

Around Dunkirk, medium, light, and fighter-bombers attacked fortifications and enemy positions.

Fighter-bombers and rocket-firing fighters went for transportation targets in northern and eastern Holland and across the frontier.

They attacked road vehicles, locomotives, railway trucks, and barges, and cut railway lines in many places.

Medium and light bombers struck at railway bridges at Zwolle and Deventer.

During the afternoon, light bombers attacked targets in the Duisburg area, and escorted heavy bombers went for targets in Dortmund.

In the Düren-Hürtgen sector, our ground forces repulsed counter-attacks at Inden and Lammersdorf north of Frenz, and fighting continues for both towns.

Resistance ended in Jungersdorf, and, after bitter fighting, Langerwehe was cleared.

Gains were made in attacks in the Merode area west of Düren.

Farther south, our forces continued the push out of Hürtgen Forest.

Kleinhau and Hürtgen were captured.

In this sector, enemy troop concentrations immediately northwest of Düren and at Elsdorf and Pier, were attacked by medium bombers.

Fighter-bombers dive-bombed and strafed targets in the villages of Lucherburg, Merode, Winden, and Gelch.

In the Saar Valley, we consolidated previous gains and pushed eastwards. We have troops near Kerlingen west of Saarlautern, and other units reached the vicinity of Sarreunion, where we hold high ground.

Medium and light bombers struck at ordnance and motor transport deports at Limburg east of Coblenz, targets at Wittlich, northeast of Trier, and supply depots at Landau and Rastatt.

Gains were made against spotty resistance at many points west of Hagenau, in the Vosges Mountains, and on the Alsace Plain west of the Rhine.

Elements which crossed the Vosges captured Andlau and Saint Maurice on the edge of the Plain, against strong resistance.

In the drive southward from Strasbourg, Erstein was captured, and our units reached Matzenheim.

Gains were also made in the southern Vosges heights.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday attacked road and rail communications in northern Italy.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Venice, and transport on the northwest Italian border, while planes of the Balkan Air Force concentrated their attacks on road movements along the Yugoslavia-Albania border, as well as bombing a bridge in northern Albania.

Heavy and medium bombers did not operate, due to adverse weather conditions.

Last night, heavy bombers attacked objectives at Linz, in Austria, and at Munich and Innsbruck, in Germany.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed. None of our planes is missing.

MAAF flew more than 600 sorties. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 30 — Today's communique:

On the road between Vittorio Veneto and Belluno, a group of Patriots laid an ambush for two enemy motor columns. Supplies and munitions were captured.

On November 17, at Torreano in Udine Province, Patriots attacked a Fascist unit, and killed six and took 44 prisoners.

On November 14, in Piedmont, the tunnel between Presco and Visone, on the Acqui-Ovada line, was blown by Patriots, and on the following day, a railway bridge at Bistagno, in Alessandria Province was destroyed.

On November 26, Modena Patriots attacked an enemy headquarters at Vaglio, killing two Germans, destroying three vehicles, a petrol dump, and some documents, and carrying of arms and munitions.

Latest information about Nazi-Fascist atrocities against the defenceless population of Romagna and Emilia disclosed that on July 23, at San Piero in Bagno, Forli Province, 57 persons, including two boys, were massacred.

At Selva Piana, also near Forli, a number of murders were committed by a local detachment of Fascist militia.

At Castenaso, in Bologna Province, 40 persons were savagely machine-gunned by Germans, and their corpses hung.

At November 23, enemy mopping-up operations took place in the zone east of the Taro River in Parma Province. (UNN)

WEHRMACHT

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 30 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Nijmegen sector and at our Meuse positions in southern Holland, our batteries struck at movements of British troops and repeatedly dispersed the enemy.

East of Aix la Chapelle, the Americans stubbornly continued their attacks, despite heavy losses.

Northwest and west of Jülich, they lost many hundred of prisoners by our counter-attacks.

At Hürtgen, grim local and forest fighting is in progress. In the whole sector, 28 enemy tanks were destroyed by our defence during the last two days.

In the Metz area, a certain number of forts continue to offer a gallant resistance.

At the frontiers of Lorraine, the U.S. 3rd Army continues to exert strong pressure on our positions with strong forces. On both sides of the St Avold Forest and south of Saarunion, enemy attacks failed.

North of Buschweiler, our formations held their main positions against the advancing enemy, and recaptured some localities in counter-thrusts.

According to incomplete reports, our divisions fighting in Alsace destroyed or captured, the day before yesterday, a total of 48 tanks and nine armoured reconnaissance cars. Yesterday, the enemy, owing to these losses, limited himself to local attacks at points which thus far had been centres of gravity of the fighting.

At the slopes south of Mülhouse, the enemy approached to our new positions with strong forces.

North of the Hüningen Canal, the enemy was ousted from a bridgehead in an attack, and suffered heavy losses.

London, Antwerp, and Liège were subjected to an intensified long-range bombardment by day and night.

Italy:

In central Italy, our troops cleared up two minor enemy penetrations at Mount Belvedere and southwest of Vergato. They also made prisoners.

West of Imola, battle-proved parachutists captured new high ground positions. At the French-Italian frontiers, at Mont Cenis, the enemy suffered high losses in local fighting.

Aegean:

In the Aegean Sea, the garrison of Piscopi Island, frustrated another British landing attempt, after short and grim fighting.

In the frontier area of eastern Slovakia, the attacking Soviets were halted after having made some small local gains.

On the remaining parts of the Eastern Front, the day was generally calm.

In Kurland, formations of the Army and Germanic volunteers of the Waffen SS under the command of Colonel-General Schürmer achieved another complete defensive victory in the second defensive battle of Kurland. The onslaught of 70 Soviet divisions and numerous tank formations was smashed by their steadfastness. The enemy forces, supported by strong artillery and bomber formations, assailed our front from November 19 up to November 25. The Bolsheviks lost 34 planes, as well as 158 tanks, and suffered high losses in men and material.

Air:

U.S. and British terror bombers, protected by an overcast sky, attacked western and northwestern Germany.

Damage was particularly caused in residential quarters of the towns Hanover, Hamm, and Dortmund.

Last night, nuisance raiders attacked Hanover and southern Reich territory. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

Exchange of Telegrams with Hitler: DNB today quotes an exchange of telegrams between Ley, the leader of the Nazi Labor Front, and the long-silent Führer. Ley's telegram is part of the current Nazi and Fascist trend of playing up Axis «socialism,» in contrast with the alleged plutocratic domination over the Allies. Ley says:

«Millions of German men and women working in armament and war production have increased their efficiency from month to month with firm belief in the future. Damages caused by bombardment have time and again been removed with untiring judgment. These unparallel achievements have been made by German workers with an absolutely firm belief in a truly socialist future.»

Hitler's reply states his «great satisfaction,» and plays up this same «social» line of propaganda. He says that the «social rise of Germany» caused «envy among our enemies,» and hence was interrupted by war. But this social rise is to continue again «after the victorious conclusion of our fateful struggle.» The Führer promises German workers a post-war «social reconstruction of the Reich» and a «materialization of true social ideals.»

Western Front: The Transocean correspondent Weber continues the propaganda trend of counter-balancing the admitted Allied advance on the southern sector of this front with an alleged bogging down of the Allies in the northern sector. «The battle of Aachen continues,» he reports, «and the picture has remained unchanged on the 15th day. Fighting fluctuated...»

On what German sources now call the «Saar front,» an increase of pressure by General Patton's army is reported. In Metz, it is said, «some forts in the outer ring of the defences still hold out. Summonses to capitulate were rejected by the Germans.»

Eastern Front: Colonel von Olberg reports that the situation on this front «took its expected turn,» meaning that «the battle at the confluence of the Drave and Danube Rivers has started.»

The German withdrawal from Pecs, after a supposed failure of the Soviets to take it by force, is described as a deliberate withdrawal done for high strategic reasons; it was «cautiously prepared» in advance and «frustrated encirclement.»

In the Miscolcz sector, another Bolshevik attempt at breaking through was frustrated by the grim resistance of the German troops, despite an intense artillery preparation.

The German withdrawal from Pecs, after a supposed failure of the Soviets to take it by force, is described as a deliberate withdrawal done for high strategic reasons; it was «cautiously prepared» in advance and «frustrated encirclement.»

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Relative Calm on Italian Front: The Fascist radio today reported a state of relative calm on the Italian front. «In the Tyrrhenian and Apennine sectors, artillery duels and patrol activity are reported.» The apparant see-saw of operations on the Apennine front involved, according to a Fascist correspondent, a fluctuating struggle for mountain positions; the adversaries were said to be «American colored infantry» and Italian Alpine troops. Considerable eulogies were expended on the «extreme determination» of the combined Alpine, San Marco, and Monte Rosa troops, all of whom were said to represent the «gallantry of the warrior of the reborn Italian Army.»

WAR FRONTS

1ST ARMY TAKES COLOGNE GATEWAY; 3RD ARMY ON EDGE OF SAAR BASIN

LONDON, November 29 — In the north, the center, and the south, seven Allied armies tonight pressed forward against strong German resistance along the entire 400-mile length of the Western Front after a day of heavy fighting which saw significant gains registered on every sector.

A key road center and gateway to the Cologne Plain, Langerwehe, fell to American 1st Army troops after one of the bloodiest campaigns of the Allied drive into the Ruhr. Five miles northwest of Düren, the key road junction controls the approaches to Cologne, about 23 miles away.

Capture of the German town followed a day of important Allied gains in the sector. To the southeast of Düren, Hürtgen fell after a three-day battle, and late dispatches Patton's troops, on a 26-mile front inside Germany, and advancing units are already within shelling range of three key outer fortresses of the Siegfried Line in this sector — Saarbrücken, Saarlautern, and Merzig.

Saarbrücken, capital city of the Saar, is only nine miles from the advancing troops, while other units were officially placed within four miles of Saarlautern. Front-line reports told of the entry of American troops into Saarunion, 22 miles south of Saarbrücken, while other reports said that a hill overlooking the Saar River two miles south of the fortress city of Merzig had been taken by storm.

Meanwhile, the latest 3rd Army prisoner count showed that 23,599 Nazis have been captured since the start of the drive on November 8.

Action in Alsace and Lorraine, on the right flank of the 3rd Army, saw the German positions «crumbling» on both the southern and northern anchors of their Vosges line, but they continued to hold in the center.

French Spring Trap

In one of the most significant developments of the campaign, French troops sprung a gigantic trap on German forces between Belfort and Mülhouse, with the joining of the 1st and 2nd French Corps at a point bisecting the strategic Rhine-Rhone Canal. The German position was made even more hopeless by the advance of 7th Army troops through the Vosges passes and on to the Alsace Plain, cutting off escape of the trapped Nazis to Strasbourg.

Large numbers of prisoners and substantial supplies of enemy equipment are already falling into French hands, as they tighten the noose around the Germans. Yesterday alone, 1,500 were marched into Allied prisoner-of-war cages.

Seventh Army troops continued their push north of Strasbourg, and have cut the key Saverne-Haguenau road and rail line. Ingweiler, 28 miles north of Strasbourg, has been reached, and other units are 10 miles west of Hagenau, which the Germans said they had evacuated yesterday in the face of the Allied threat.

With their entire Vosges line — regarded as the last German barrier in front of the Siegfried Line — breaking up, the Germans are withdrawing what units they can across the Rhine. So far, their rear-guard resistance is making possible an orderly retreat, but disintegration of both the northern and southern Vosges sectors threatens the remainder of the German position.

A New York Times dispatch tells of the desperate German defense of their bridgehead on the west bank of the Rhine at Strasbourg, holding it as an escape route across the bridge at this point. The dispatch adds that the Allies

Kleinmau, in the same general area, has also been captured.

To the north, Koslar, German strongpoint near Jülich and on the approaches to the Roer River, fell to the American troops, and occupation of Jungersdorf, less than four miles west of Düren, was completed.

7 Allied Armies in Action

While troops of the American 1st and 9th armies, supported by British 2nd Army troops to the north, pressed forward in the battle of the Ruhr, the Canadian 1st Army went into action in the Nijmegen salient, in the area of the Reichswald Forest, and tonight was one mile inside the German border. The Canadian offensive means that seven Allied armies are now in action along the 400-mile front.

Canadian troops also joined British units in cleaning out German pockets in the Venlo sector, on the west bank of the Meuse River. Five German pockets remain to be liquidated in the area, the largest one at Venlo.

Third Army units stand on the edge of the Saar Basin tonight, and front-line dispatches told of the capture of the first coal mines in the area which are vital to Reich industry. Gains of up to 10 miles were registered by General

FRENCH TAKE 30 TOWNS

LONDON, November 29 — French troops captured over 30 towns today between Mülhouse and Belfort as they tightened their grip on German elements trapped in the Vosges-Rhine corridor, front-line dispatches reported tonight.

Troops of the U.S. 7th Army, pursuing remnants of the German 19th Army on the southern Vosges sector, are now 12 miles south of Strasbourg, other reports said. (Reuter)

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 29 — American planes destroyed 13 Japanese ships carrying troops to Leyte in a two-day battle which ended yesterday, General MacArthur's communique reported tonight.

An estimated 4,000 Japanese were killed or drowned, raising to more than 21,000 the number of enemy troops wiped out at sea in recent attempts to reinforce this island. (OWI)

The U.S. 7th and French 1st armies have liberated 1,140 towns and villages and taken 22,530 prisoners since the start of their drive, a press report said. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

SOVIETS CROSS DANUBE ON 94-MILE FRONT

MOSCOW, November 29 — The Red Army developed its winter offensive a stage farther today when strong Soviet units forced a crossing of the River Danube in a westward drive above the River Drava, and broke through west of the Danube on a front 94 miles wide and 25 miles deep.

News of this latest thrust was given in an order of the day from Marshal Stalin, which said that the Hungarian communication centers of Pecs, Mohacs, and Bataszek have been captured, together with more than 330 other inhabited places.

Pecs is a communication and coal mining center in southern Hungary, 23 miles west of the Danube. Russian forces had previously been reported to be advancing from three sides toward this town. Mohacs, 23 miles west of Pecs and linked with it by a rail line, was admitted by the Germans to be in Russian hands two days ago. Batszek is 12 miles north of Mohacs, on a railway to Budapest.

This new 25-mile advance was made by troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front, aided by forces of Marshal Tito's Army of Liberation, involving fighting on both Yugoslav and Hungarian territory.

Although tonight's Soviet communique reported only patrol activity on the remainder of the Eastern Front, press dispatches from Moscow said today that the Russians in eastern Czechoslovakia were striking out for the Dukla Pass, one of the Carpathian gateways to southern Poland. They were within 10 miles of it last night, and correspondents suggested that General Petrov's forces might soon link up with Marshal Koniev's troops across the mountain barrier. 8TH ARMY THRUST RESISTED

ADVANCE AFQH, ITALY, November 29 — German forces have massed tanks, heavy mortars, and artillery across the three-mile gap between the Lamone and the Montone Rivers southwest of Ravenna, to check the 8th Army's thrust toward the highways linking this coastal city with the rest of the Po Plain, it was announced here today.

For the third successive day, heavy fighting centered around the village of Albereto, five miles northeast of Faenza and within 1,000 yards of the Faenza-Ravenna Road, southernmost of the three main roads into Ravenna still in enemy hands. Both British and enemy forces were supported by tanks and artillery and mortar fire, and despite the fierce battle, the positions of both sides remained substantially unchanged, official reports said.

The three-mile strip of lowland at the edge of the intricate pattern of main and secondary roads west of Ravenna is practically the only sector of the 8th Army front where the enemy do not have river positions to strengthen their defenses. Northeast of this stretch, the battle line now follows the Montone River for 16 miles to the Adriatic Sea, and to the southwest, enemy delaying positions are based on a 13-mile stretch of the Lamone River past Faenza to the junction point with the 5th Army north of Modigliano.

Continuing heavy rains have swollen these rivers and connecting watercourses, so that, in many cases, forward Allied troops have been supplied only by the use of assault [illegible] bridges dangerously awash. The La-

TOKYO RAIDED TWICE IN SAME NIGHT

NEW YORK, November 29 — Tokyo was raided during the night of Wednesday/Thursday by Super-Fortresses, announced Radio Tokyo, picked up here.

The first raid lasted two hours from just before midnight until 0200 hours on Thursday, local time.

The second raid was from 0415 to 0500 hours on Thursday, when a "small formation" attacked the Japanese capital. (Reuter)

CHINESE HALT JAPS PUSHING ON KWEIYANG

CHUNGKING, November 29 — Chinese troops have scored a local success against Japanese troops pushing on Kweiyang, the Burma Road capital of Kweichow Province, the Chinese High Command announced today.

The announcement said that the Japanese were checked at Tashantang, 138 miles southwest of Kweiyang, and seven miles north of Hochih.

Advanced Japanese elements have made deep penetrations toward Kweiyang, the junction point of a highway network lining Chungking, Kunming, and other sections in southwestern China, an Associated Press dispatch from Kunming said.

Meanwhile, a communique from Major General Albert Wedemeyer's headquarters reported that the 14th USAAF strafed enemy cavalry along the Pachai-Tukiang Road yesterday. This route roughly parallels the main highway from Japanese-held Liuchow to Kweiyang. Pachai lies 65 miles southeast of Kweiyang.

There was no indication of the strength of the enemy cavalry penetration except that it evidently had cut through or outflanked some Chinese forces which had been expected to defend Kweiyang. Sizeable enemy forces astride the main road toward Kweiyang in the vicinity of Nantan and Hochih were also shot up by the fighters. (OWI)

KING GEORGE REVIEWS WAR BEFORE COMMONS

LONDON, November 29 — Confidence in victory, a renewal of the pledge that Great Britain will do her utmost in the war against Japan, and an assurance that the country is planning for the peace, marked the Speech from the Throne of King George in opening the new session of Parliament today. The King said:

"The United Nations have looked back on a year of resounding achievement. They now look forward with greater confidence than ever before to those final victories which will give to the peoples of the world that just peace which is our chief desire.

"In western Europe, my forces from the United Kingdom and Canada and their comrades from the United States, with the valuable aid of the armed forces of my European Allies and peoples who have risen to meet them, have routed the enemy in a series of decisive battles, and are now pressing him on the borders of his own country.

"In Italy, forces of the United Nations have advanced to the northern plains, and in Greece and Yugoslavia the Germans are being driven from countries which they have oppressed for three bitter years.

"In the east, the massive achievements of my Russian Ally have deprived the Germans of vast stretches of territory which they hoped would feed their armies and provide an impassable barrier to prevent the soil of Germany from becoming a battleground.

"Both in the east and in the west, Germany is invaded. The plight in which her armies now find themselves is the measure of success which, by God's grace, has crowned our arms.

Continuing heavy rains have swollen these rivers and connecting watercourses, so that, in many cases, forward Allied troops have been supplied only by the use of assault boats, with fords and bridges dangerously awash. The Lamone River, main German defense of Faenza, and one of the principal highways northwest across the Po Plain, has become a swift-flowing stream 50 feet wide, reports said.

German forces have resisted fiercely all attempts at reconnaissance by Allied patrols across this stream, and at one point succeeded in re-crossing the stream themselves to set up an outpost on the east bank to harry Allied forces. Allied patrols did cross the Lamone near Brisighella, some six miles southwest of Faenza, where main enemy forces are located in advantageous high ground west of the banks.

Elsewhere along the 8th front, there was little to report.

On the 5th Army front, enemy forces counter-attacked American positions about a mile north of Livergnano, and 9½ miles south of Bologna along the main road to Florence. Livergnano was captured by 5th Army forces more than a month ago at the culmination of a bitter drive to dislodge the enemy from their mountain escarpment positions defending the approaches to Bologna.

Patrol clashes occurred elsewhere along the front, as both Allied and enemy forces probed opposing positions. (PRO)

Reinforcements Against Japan

"In the war against Japan, the enemy has been thrown back from India, and my American Ally continues to reduce the shrinking area still under Japanese control in the Pacific. We intend to reinforce as rapidly and as powerfully as possible the United Kingdom forces who are now sharing with their comrades from all parts of the British Commonwealth and the Empire, and from the United States, China, The Netherlands, and France, the burden of the struggle against Japan.

"My navies everywhere have maintained their mastery over the enemy and have achieved great successes, in which my air forces have fully shared, in driving his surface and submarine forces from the seas. My air forces, in concert with the air forces of the United States, have delivered increasingly heavy blows against Germany, and have maintained their support of military and naval operations in all theaters.

"The success of the armed forces would not have been achieved, but for the devoted labors of those throughout the Commonwealth and the Empire who have striven ceaselessly to arm and equip them.

"It is over five years now since my peoples first took up the struggle to free the world from aggression, and the contribution of the civil population is beyond all praise.

The United Nations await with sheer confidence the unrolling of future events.

« Joined in unbreakable alliance, and fortified by constant collaboration between the governments concerned, and by frequent personal meetings between their leaders, they look forward to the day on which the aggressor is finally defeated, and the whole world can turn to the re-building of prosperity and the maintenance of unassailable peace.

« You will be asked to make further provision for the conduct of the war, and for other necessary services. Victory remains our supreme end, and to this end you will be invited to pass such further legislation as may be required for the effective prosecution of the war. Once, however, war in Europe is over, the transition from war to peace will begin, and my ministers are actively preparing plans to ensure that, without in any way prejudicing the active prosecution of the war against Japan, an increasing part of our resources is made available for civilian production. »

Other legislation, said his Majesty, would cover electoral reform, the extension of export credit facilities, provisions for the regulation of wages and conditions of employment, and further provision for a system toward the development of the Colonial Empire, both by prolonging the period covered by the Colonial Development and Welfare Act, 1940, and by substantially increasing the provision of funds authorized.

In a reference to the Middle East, the King said:

« In the Mediterranean, maintaining an advance which began at El Alamein, forces of the United Nations have, by hard and determined fighting, driven the enemy from Rome and have reached the northern plains of Italy... It gives me particular pleasure to have been able to visit units of all my forces both in western Europe and the Mediterranean. » (Reuter)

CHURCHILL WARNS AGAINST OVER-OPTIMISM

LONDON, November 29 — Prime Minister Churchill today warned against « indulgence in the feeling that the war will soon be over. »

In the Commons debate on the King's speech, he said:

« I must warn the House and country against any indulgence in the feeling that the war will soon be over. It may be, but we should not indulge that feeling. Nevertheless, we should now be able to turn our thoughts to the new phase in world history which will open with the close of this war.

« The truth is, that no one knows when the German War will be finished, and still less how long the interval will be between the defeat of the Germans and the defeat of the Japanese.

« I took occasion some months ago to damp down premature hopes by speaking of the German War as running into January or February. I could see disappointment in several quarters as I looked round the House, and I followed this up quickly by indicating late spring or early summer as periods which we must take into account as possibilities.

« My present inclination is not at all to mitigate these forecasts or guesses — for they can be little more than guesses. Indeed, if I were to make any change in the duration of the unfolding of events it would be to leave out the word 'early' before the word summer. »

Mr Churchill went on to say that the large battle going on in the west had yielded important gains: the enemy had everywhere been thrust back; the capture of Metz and Strasbourg were glorious and massive achievements in these regions, has made the task of American troops and that of the British on their left flank, extremely difficult. What is called the fourth element in war — mud — has played a formidable part. We have not yet succeeded in driving the enemy back to the Rhine, let alone have we established a strong bridgehead on it. The battle is continuing with the greatest vigor. Immense losses have been inflicted on the enemy. The wearing-down process here at cost to the United States forces has been far greater in its effect upon the enemy. Of course any large and effective break on German fronts in these regions of Cologne and northwards would have the highest strategic consequences. I may mention that, in the interval between the liberation of France and the greater part of Belgium, Field Marshal Montgomery's group of armies with substantial United States assistance drove the enemy back to the lines of the Maas or Meuse, and established a secure flank barrier in Holland, protecting the whole line of the main armies operating eastwards. »

Mr. Churchill said that the great port of Antwerp, « an incomparable sea base, » was now receiving large convoys of ocean-going ships to nourish the northern group of British armies, and many groups of American armies also employed in this operation.

Mr. Churchill described the storming of the Dutch islands as episodes of « marvelous gallantry » and « grand feats of arms, » and he said that these operations cost the British and Canadian forces about 40,000 casualties. That, he explained, was in the interval between the two great battles. The new battlefront now ran from between the British army, broadly speaking, opposite Venlo, down to the Vosges, where the French were, and this new battlefront was held by the Americans who were bearing the brunt with what he called « their customary distinction and courage. »

He then went on to refer to the legislation forecast in the King's speech — 12 different bills — and said that the amount that could be got through would depend on events. But assuming that there were a general election in the coming year, Mr. Churchill said he was quite certain of one thing:

« All the leading men in both the principal parties, and in the Liberal Party as well, are pledged and committed to this great mass of social legislation. I cannot conceive that whatever may be the complexion of the new House, they will personally fail to make good their promises and commitments to the people. »

The Prime Minister said that he hald no intention of giving a review of the war situation. « Later on, perhaps, when we meet after Christmas, it may be right to do that, and it may be much easier to put hard facts and cheering facts before the House, » he added. He said that the House knew that he never hesitated to put hard facts before them. « I know the British people, and I know this House; and there is one thing they will not stand; and that is not being told how bad things are, » he said.

Churchill continued: « I am not giving a review of the war situation today; but I mention these commanding facts in order to dissipate lightly-founded sensations that we can divert our eyes from war and turn to tasks of transition and reconstruction, or political controversies and other diversions of peace which are dear to our hearts, and rightly dear to democracies in action, because without controversy democracies cannot achieve their healthening processes.

« I do not think we can look on in all these matters without a sense of detachment from the war issue which is right over us. It weighs intensely and preponderantly upon us, and upon every form of our national life. All else must be subordinated to this supreme task. It is on the [illegible] our eyes must be fixed, and to break his resistance

LONDON, November 29 — Prime Minister Churchill today warned against «indulgence in the feeling that the war will soon be over.»

In the Commons debate on the King's speech, he said:

Mr. Churchill went on to say that the large battle going on in the west had yielded important gains: the enemy had everywhere been thrust back; the capture of Metz and Strasbourg were glorious and massive achievements.

French Army's Brilliant Fighting

Continuing, Mr. Churchill said: «The brilliant fighting and maneuvering of the French Army near the Swiss frontier and their forcing of the Belfort Gap, and the advance on a broad front to the Rhine, are not only a military episode of high importance, but they show what many of us have never doubted — that the French Army will rise again and be a great factor in the life of France and Europe, and that the French soldier, properly equipped and well led, is unsurpassed among the nations.»

After speaking of heavy snow which postponed the attack on Belfort Gap for three days, Mr. Churchill said that he had the opportunity of visiting this Army before the Belfort attack. He was impressed by the alert bearing of the young Frenchmen, which gave him the greatest confidence that Britain's nearest neighbor and long friend in war «will arise in clarity and force from the ruins, miseries, and disgraces of the past.»

Mr. Churchill went on: «I have spoken of the fighting in Belfort Gap and Strasbourg, and further to the north, of a great battle which the Americans have gained opposite Metz. Opposite Cologne and northwards, fighting has been severe, and it is here that gains in ground will be most important and, consequently, are more disputed.

«Weather, which it is always customary and excusable and even legitimate to abuse at this season of the year Mr. Churchill described the storming of the Dutch islands as episodes of «marvelous gallantry» and «grand feats of arms,» and he said that these operations cost the British and Canadian forces about 40,000 casualties. That, he explained, was in the interval between the two great battles. The new battlefront now ran from between the British army, broadly speaking, opposite Venlo, down to the Vosges, where the French were, and this new battlefront was held by the Americans who were bearing the brunt with what he called «their customary distinction and courage.»

He then went on to refer to the legislation forecast in the King's speech — 12 different bills — and said that the amount that could be got through would depend on events. But assuming that there were a general election in the coming year, Mr. Churchill said he was quite certain of one thing:

«All the leading men in both the principal parties, and in the Liberal Party as well, are pledged and committed to this great mass of social legislation. I cannot conceive that whatever may be the complexion of the new House, they will personally fail to make good their promises and commitments to the people.»

The Prime Minister said that he hald no intention of giving a review of the war situation. «Later on, perhaps, when we meet after Christmas, it may be right to do that, and it may be much easier to put hard facts and cheering facts before the House,» he added. He said that the House knew that he never hesitated to put hard facts before them. «I know the British people, and I know this House, and there is one thing they will not stand: and that is not being told how bad things are,» he said.

Churchill continued: «I am not giving a review of the war situation today; but I mention these commanding facts in order to dissipate lightly-founded sensations that we can divert our eyes from war and turn to tasks of transition and reconstruction, or political controversies and other diversions of peace which are dear to our hearts, and rightly dear to democracies in action, because without controversy democracies cannot achieve their healthening processes.

«I do not think we can look on in all these matters without a sense of detachment from the war issue which is right over us. It weighs intensely and preponderantly upon us, and upon every form of our national life. All else must be subordinated to this supreme task. It is on the foe that our eyes must be fixed, and to break his resistance down demands, and will receve, the most intense exertions of Great Britain, the United States, and all the United Nations and converted satellites, and all forces that can be brought to bear. This is just the moment not to slacken.»

Pointing out that, after the German War we must not forget there is the war with Japan, Mr. Churchill said, amid cheers. «We have to carry this war through to its closing stages with all the energy of unity, not only at home among ourselves, but among the great united powers of the grand alliance, who, I am happy to say, were never more closely united than they are at this moment.»

ALEXANDER SAYS FIGHTING IN ITALY VITAL

ADVANCE AFHQ, November 29 — Field Marshal Sir Harold R.L.G. Alexander said Monday that the importance of the fighting in Italy must not be underestimated, because it is a vital factor in the total strategy of the war in Europe.

Field Marshal Alexander's declaration was in an interview appearing today in the Mediterranean edition of The Stars and Stripes, U.S. Army newspaper. It was, in effect, his first official statement as Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, to which he was appointed Sunday.

His assertions were directed primarily at Allied troops on the Italian front, to explain to them the importance of dislodging the Germans from northern Italy, and its ultimate effect in ridding all of Italy of Fascism. He cited the strategic value to the Germans of attempting to block the Allies' path to the Reich by fighting on other people's soil, rather than on German terrain.

«There is no short-cut to Germany until we beat the German Army,» Field Marshal Alexander said.

A veteran of the greatest battles in the North African and Mediterranean campaigns, the Field Marshal spoke as «man-to-man» to his troops in the theater, through the medium of the interview.

Recognized universally — by Allies and by the enemy — as a master strategist and one of Britain's great soldiers in history, Field Marshal Alexander made it clear that Italy is of direct importance in the concerted military campaign from all directions to bring Germany to complete defeat.

He drew the parallel of work of a football team to that of teamwork of armies, to illustrate the cohesion of attack on opposition forces. He depicted the Allied football team as a unit consisting of American, British, Russian, Polish, French, and Brazilian and other Allied troops pressing on the Western Front, the Eastern Front, and the Italian Front, to upset the opposition's defensives to reach the goal.

German attempts to offset the Allied team's drive on the goal — the Reich — has forced the Germans to draw some of their finest divisions to the Italian Front, Field Marshal Alexander continued, adding:

«To the Germans, the Italian front is important enough to keep a strong and powerful fighting force deployed against the approaches to the Po Valley, where there are more than 20 enemy divisions being held under orders of Field Marshal von Kesselring, thus depriving the German Army of use of those divisions elsewhere, where they are needed to bolster German defenses.

«Offensives just do not happen,» the Field Marshal explained. «An attack does not start because Stalin in the East, or General Eisenhower in the Western Front, or I in Italy want to attack. This is a huge team ... some men hold and then pass the ball to others who score.»

Reasons for Nazi Stand

Field Marshal Alexander told The Stars and Stripes reporter that there are six reasons for the Germans' decision to hold Italy. They are:

1. The Germans intend to hold the Allies as far from the Reich frontier as possible.

2. The Germans prefer to fight on other people's soil rather than their own.

3. Taking food from northern Italy to supply German troops is better than taking food from the Reich — a typical German practice.

4. Genoa, Milan, Turin, and other industrial centers of the Po Valley provide the Wehrmacht with ammunition, transport, and many types of war materials.

5. For a defensive winter, the Po Valley offers the Germans the best of possibilities, because the northern end of the Apennines and the water courses in the valley set up a difficult barrier for Allied artillery and armor, and make Allied assault more difficult than German defense. Bad weather decreases the Allied asset of air superiority, but if the Allied land troops can close down on the Po Valley, Allied fighter planes could hammer at ground targets inside Germany.

6. The Germans will receive a hard moral and political blow if they are forced to give up all of Italy now, because the Germans are making use of their pawns — the current Italian Fascist government behind the German lines in the

as possible» to the Italians in order that the «rich reward» of continued collaboration with the Mussolini «Government» might continue, the document declared. German soldiers must modify their harsh attitudes, not «out of humane considerations,» but so that the flow of goods, which has included 321,000 tons of iron and steel, 3,800 tons of zinc, 9,000 tons of aluminum, 80,000 bottles of mercury, 38,500 tons of sulphur, 140,000 tons of rice, 160,000 tons of fruit, and 200,000 tons of wine, shall continue, the ambassador declared.

In addition to the industrial and food products, the Germans exported 1,500,000 pairs of leather military shoes, 400,000 work shoes, and textiles amounting to nearly one-quarter of Germany's total manufacture in 1943, the inventory added. Trucks, extremely scarce in both liberated and occupied Italy, were exported to Germany at a rate of over 1,000 per month at the beginning of this year, it declared. In addition, the government of Mussolini agreed to turn over to Germany all gold stores in Italy, all of Italy's stock of radium, as well as all Italian materials and semi-manufactured merchandise not urgently required for Italian industry.

The enemy document, as issued to the troops of the German 42nd Jaeger Division, stated that «today, more than ever, the proper attitude of the German soldier toward the Italian civilian is of decisive importance.» It added that, whether «we are fond of the Italians or not, whether our soldiers dislike the Italians or not, all this alters nothing in the basic fact that a positive attitude of understanding in acceptance of the Italian people as they happen to be, will gain more results and get more out of the people than desultory brutality.» (PRO)

2,000 U. S. PLANES HIT MISBURG; R.A.F. ATTACK NEUSS AND ESSEN

LONDON, November 29 — More than 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF today blasted an oil refinery at Misburg, the railway marshalling yards at Hamm, and other targets in northwest Germany, it was officially announced tonight.

The heavies were escorted by more than 1,000 Mustangs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings of the 8th and 9th USAAF.

Meanwhile, for the third successive night, Lancasters and Halifaxes of the RAF Bomber Command attacked Essen and Neuss this morning. An earlier announcement revealed that one of the strongest forces of RAF Mosquitos ever dispatched to Germany to blast a single target had attacked Nürnberg. Three aircraft are missing from these operations.

This afternoon, RAF Mosquitos attacked objectives in Duisburg, while a German headquarters in Rotterdam was being wiped out in an attack by British Typhoons, BBC reported tonight.

An American Army hospital in Belgium was recently hit by a flying-bomb, causing substantial damage and some loss of life, Reuter reported.

During six hours of good flying weather Tuesday, aircraft of the Allied 2nd Tactical Air Force were put in the air at the rate of one a minute to support ground forces on the Netherlands-German battle line, it was officially announced today.

The planes hit at Ruhr Valley railway systems bringing supplies to the Germans. The outstanding operation was made by six Typhoon dive-bombers of the Royal Canadian Air Force wing of the ASTAF, which answered a call from the army to eliminate a château at Geisteren held by 40 Germans who had refused to surrender, the announcement said. The target was protected on three sides by the natural moat of the flooded Maas River. The Typhoons attacked and brought the château down around the Germans when Allied troops were less than 300 feet from the target.

Field Marshal Alexander said that the Germans have a large enough concentration of troops in Italy to maintain the Italian Front as a Third Front to the Reich. Thus, the Germans have selected northern Italy as a battleground, and are utilizing Italian soil rather than the Reich as a possible means of blocking the road to Berlin.

NAZI EXPLOITATION OF ITALY BARED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 29 — Besides supplying the entire German Army in Italy with food, the German exploitation of northern Italy has provided the Reich textiles, leather shoes, rice, wine, fruits, and trucks, it was revealed here today with the publication of a captured enemy document prepared by the German Ambassador to the Republican Fascist Government.

The German Ambassador, Von Rahn, drew up the inventory of vital products gained for the Reich by the German exploitation of north Italy in a letter to General Lemelson, commander of the German 14th Army, aimed at impressing on German soldiers that «untoward acts against Italian civilians — out of disdain, hatred, or disappointment,» might jeopardize the German harvest.

Despite their «understandable violent aversion» toward the Italian people, German troops should be «as friendly the Italian civilian is of decisive importance.» It added that, whether «we are fond of the Italians or not, whether our soldiers dislike the Italians or not, all this alters nothing in the basic fact that a positive attitude of understanding in acceptance of the Italian people as they happen to be, will gain more results and get more out of the people than desultory brutality.»

R.N.N. ATTACKS GERMAN CONVOY

LONDON, November 29 — Light coastal forces of the Royal Norwegian Navy severely damaged a large German supply ship and sank two escorts and possibly another, without loss, in an encounter with a German convoy north of Bergen on Monday night, a Norwegian naval communique said tonight. (Reuter)

730,729 GERMANS CAPTURED IN WEST

LONDON, November 29 — Allied armies have captured at least 730,729 prisoners on the Western Front since D-day, the equivalent of 73 German divisions as now constituted, the Associated Press said today.

The American press service added: «The four American armies have caged at least 451,628, the veteran 1st Army leading the field with 206,866. Actually, the total captives are probably thousands greater, because the latest official figures as of today are from two to three weeks old for the U. S. 9th Army, the British 2nd, and Canadian 1st armies.»

Other official figures announced to date include 126,922 taken by the U. S. 3rd Army; 55,670 by the U. S. 9th Army;

62,170 by the 7th U. S. Army; 69,175 by the French 1st Army; 94,794 by the British 2nd Army; 95,132 by the Canadian 1st Army; and 20,000 by French forces with the British and Canadian armies. (OWI)

HARRIMAN VISITS WESTERN FRONT

WITH ALLIED ARMIES, FRANCE, November 29 — W. Averell Harriman, United States Ambassador to Russia, yesterday inspected U. S. 3rd Army installations, accompanied by Lt. Gen. George Patton, commander of the U. S. 3rd Army now fighting inside Germany. (OWI)

NAZIS BARRICADE SWISS FRONTIER

BASLE, November 29 — German military authorities are barricading the frontier roads from Baden into Switzerland, the Basler Nationalzeitung said yesterday. This is presumably an attempt to forestall the flight of German civilians in face of the Allied advance, the newspaper added. (OWI)

YUGOSLAVS ON ALBANIAN BORDER

LONDON, November 29 — Marshal Tito's troops are tonight on the Albanian border at Bojana, about 15 miles from Scutari, where large forces of Germans are encircled, said tonight's communique from the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation.

In eastern Bosnia, the Yugoslavs captured Jania, just west of the river Drina, but the Germans, threatened with the cutting of their communications on the lower Drina, are trying to hold the escape route from Zvornik, on the Drina, to Sarajevo, and have broken through about midway between these towns. MEDIUMS HIT VESSEL IN LA SPEZIA HARBOR

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, November 29 — Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, operating despite stormy weather, yesterday scored several hits on a 480-foot enemy vessel being prepared as a block at the entrance into La Spezia harbor in northwestern Italy, it was announced here today.

Other medium bombers attacked three Po Valley bridges, including an 815-foot structure at Casale Monferrato, southwest of Milan, while fighter-bombers cut rail lines in at least 40 places along the Po Valley and the Brenner Pass route.

Bad weather curtailed MAAF operations to some 470 sorties. (PRO)

ROME, November 29 — The Italian Liberal Party tonight retired from the inter-party conference being held at the Palazzo dei Marescialli in what party leaders described as an attempt to find a solution to the crisis resulting from the fall of Prime Minister Bonomi and his cabinet last Sunday.

Manlio Brosio, one of the representatives of the Liberal Party at the conference, said that his party had withdrawn representation «in order to determine whether further participation in the discussions was worthwhile.»

Tonight's session was adjourned shortly after the withdrawal of the Liberals. The conference will reconvene tomorrow.

Earlier, the Action Party had announced that, while it would continue to participate in the Committee of National Liberation, and in the conferences, it would not take part in a new government.

An order of the day of the Socialist Party tonight said that the party had no faith in Bonomi, and could not assume responsibilities «except in a cabinet which takes up an aggressive stand against Italian reactionary forces.» The order said that Bonomi «deliberately has impeded realization of the program for which his government was formed.»

This denial of faith, the order said, was due to the situation created by the ministerial crisis, to the vote against Sforza, and the attitude of the CNL liberals — «all of which reveal a conservative tendency bent on barring the way to the new Italian democracy, and favoring the preservation of institutions condemned by the popular conscience.»

Socialists Reaffirm Demands

Recalling a previous declaration of the party, the order continued:

«We affirm that the Socialist Party cannot assume government responsibilities except in a Cabinet which takes an aggressive stand against Italian reactionary forces — the accomplices of Fascism — or which enjoys in the eyes of the Allies full independence in determining the essential lines of its policy.»

After declaring its readiness to collaborate in activity to accelerate popular participation in the war, in solidarity with the United Nations, in democratization of the country by cleansing it from Fascism and reaction, and in reconstruction work by total mobilization of the country's labor and resources, the order concluded:

«It is to such a government that the Socialist Party entrusts the prime task of conducting the Nation through the war of liberation toward a new Constituent Assembly eliminating all obstacles on the road toward the country's reborn democracy.» (UNN)

MINESWEEPERS CLEAR WAY FOR BOMBARDMENT

LONDON, November 29 — Royal Navy minesweepers in action from the first landings in Sicily have swept the Italian coastal waters of mines and enabled the bombardment ships to shell German shore positions, it was officially announced here today.

One officer in charge of minesweeping at a northern Adriatic port said that when the enemy found that it was due to sweepers that his coastal positions were being shelled, he brought up a large railway gun. As he retreated northward, the gun was pulled back, and for a long time the minesweepers worked under long-range gunfire.

For more than 800 miles, the minesweepers have cleared the coast ahead of advancing Allied armies. They have operated under difficult conditions, for the Adriatic is noted for its unreliable weather and a full gale can blow up over a calm sea within 20 minutes. (OWI)

U. S. DID NOT OPPOSE SFORZA APPOINTMENT

WASHINGTON, November 29 — The United States Government did not join the British Government in the reported veto of the appointment of Carlo Sforza as Italian Foreign Minister, Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius told his press conference today.

He added that the State Department had just heard the report, and was now analyzing it.

A dispatch to his newspaper by the correspondent of a New York morning daily said such an appointment of Sforza had been vetoed by the British. The British Reuter agency, however, and the British Broadcasting Corporation, last night said merely that a deputation of Italian ministers had been told by the British Ambassador at Rome, Sir Noel Charles, that Sforza's appointment as Foreign Minister would not be «welcomed by Britain.»

Reuter today carried a further comment, saying its diplomatic correspondent had been told in «authoritative British quarters» that exception would not be taken by Britain were Sforza to hold Italian government posts other than those of Prime Minister or Foreign Minister. (OWI-Reuter)

NORTH ITALY C.N.L. CALLS FOR DEMOCRACY

ROME, November 29 — Italy must not return to «the errors of the past,» the Committee of National Liberation of Northern Italy declared in a message today to the local CNL, which discussed the current Government crisis.

The message stated:

«The Government of Italy cannot have the approval of northern Italy if it splits itself from the foundations laid by the Committee of National Liberation. A government organization on any different basis would create serious difficulties to the military and political activities of the resistance movement in northern Italy.

«It must be kept in mind that the people of northern Italy are fully convinced of the need for deep changes, in the democratic sense, in the political life of Italy. They intend that Italy shall not in any way return to the errors of the past. Toward this goal, we consider a very widespread and sincere epuration is indispensable.

SOVIET T. U. DELEGATES RETURN TO MOSCOW

MOSCOW, November 29 — The Soviet delegation of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, which recently visited liberated Italy, returned here Monday, Radio Moscow reported yesterday.

Invited by the Italian General Confederation of Labor, the delegation, headed by Tarasiov, chairman of the central committee of the Machine Tool Industry Trade Union, visited the principal industrial and agricultural centers from October 27 to November 14.

The Soviet delegation's itinerary carried them through 67 meetings and 22 gatherings of active Italian trade union members, said Radio Moscow, and an estimated 250,000 people warmly greeted them and expressed friendship and sympathy for Russia's accomplishments in the war.

FARM, FISHERIES, FORESTRY CHIEFS TO MEET

ROME, November 29 — Meeting for the first time since liberation, Italian government officials in fisheries, agriculture, and forestry will assemble here tomorrow to discuss production plans for 1945.

The sessions will continue four days at the Ministry of Agriculture. The Allied Commission has called all its agricultural officers to Rome to assist in the discussions.

At the opening program at 1000 hours tomorrow Fausto Gullo, Minister of Agriculture in the Bonomi Government, will give the opening address.

Commodore Ellery Stone, Chief Commissioner of the Allied Commission, and Leland Allbaugh, director of AC's Agriculture Sub-Commission, also will speak at the opening.

Dr. Gustavo De Sanctis, the Agricultural Ministry's director general of production, will preside at the initial program.

The culture, accompanied by instructions for producing the vaccine, has been forwarded to the Veterinary Division of the Italian Ministry of the Interior.

The Italian government's plans for large-scale production of the vaccine will permit immunization of cattle throughout liberated Italy, the Allied Commission anticipated today. The first dairy cattle to be vaccinated will be large herds on the outskirts of Rome. (UNN)

LEGHORN FOOD COMMITTEE FORMED

LEGHORN, November 29 — A self-help committee of leading citizens of this city has been formed under the sponsorship of the Allied Military Government to plan and supervise distribution of food and clothing to the population, it was announced today by AMG officials.

Shipments of food and clothing, mostly from the United States, have arrived here to take care of people most of whom lost everything they owned, even furniture and personal clothing, when the Germans carried out systematic looting. Local observers estimate the Germans sent as many as 100 trainloads of such loot to Germany before the city was liberated by the 5th Army. (UNN)

23 NATIONALITIES FED IN FLORENCE

FLORENCE, November 29 — The Allies have made special arrangements to feed more than 1,500 citizens of 23 of the United Nations, who were liberated here when the Allies freed the city in August, it was disclosed here today by officials of the Allied Commission's Displaced Persons Sub-Commission, which is handling the arrangements.

The plan is operating much as local Italian citizen groups are operating their food distribution program, which is based on the principle of self-help. As in distribution for Italian citizens, the parceling out of food to Allied nationals is carried on by a committee appointed from among the Allied citizens themselves. They organize and carry out the distribution. (UNN)

NEW POLISH PREMIER NAMED

LONDON, November 29 — The Polish government here tonight announced that a new Premier has been named by President Raczkiewicz, and is now attempting to form a cabinet to replace the one which resigned in a dispute over the Russo-Polish border question.

The new Premier is Tomasz Arciszevski, said by BBC to be a Socialist. He was named following the unsuccessful attempts of Jan Kwapinski to set up a new government.

An official statement said that Arciszevski was appointed after representatives of the various political parties had been consulted. (OWI - BBC)

U. S. SUBMITS FINAL PLAN TO AIR CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, November 29 — The United States presented what it called its «final» plan to the International Air Conference today. This plan contains no restrictions as to «rates» or the «fifth freedom.» Traffic will be open for signatures of those countries favoring the U.S. view.

Spokesmen for the American delegation indicated that there was a strong possibility that Britain might not sign the plan, and that it would then have to rely upon a bilateral agreement. (Reuter)

ROME, November 29 — More detachments of newly-equipped units of the Italian Army will be in Rome in the next few days, an official announcement said today.

One such column is expected to march through Via dell'Impero, Piazza Venezia and Corso Umberto between 1100 and 1200 hours on Friday. (UNN)

SOVIET T. U. DELEGATES RETURN TO MOSCOW

MOSCOW, November 29 — The Soviet delegation of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, which recently visited liberated Italy, returned here Monday, Radio Moscow reported yesterday.

Invited by the Italian General Confederation of Labor, the delegation, headed by Tarasiov, chairman of the central committee of the Mechine Tool Industry Trade Union, visited the principal industrial and agricultural centers from October 27 to November 14.

The Soviet delegation's itinerary carried them through 67 meetings and 22 gatherings of active Italian trade union members, said Radio Moscow, and an estimated 250,000 people warmly greeted them and expressed friendship and sympathy for Russia's accomplishments in the war. (Radio Moscow)

ROME, November 29 — Meeting for the first time since liberation, Italian government officials in fisheries, agriculture, and forestry will assemble here tomorrow to discuss production plans for 1945.

The sessions will continue four days at the Ministry of Agriculture. The Allied Commission has called all its agricultural officers to Rome to assist in the discussions.

Commodore Ellery Stone, Chief Commissioner of the Allied Commission, and Leland Allbaugh, director of AC's Agriculture Sub-Commission, also will speak at the opening.

Dr. Gustavo De Sanctis, the Agricultural Ministry's director general of production, will preside at the initial program.

The basis of the discussions will be the report recently published after six months of research by experts of the Italian Government and the Allied Commission. This report estimates production for 1945, and surveys possible needs in transportation, machinery, seed, fertilizers, insecticides, and other supplies. (UNN)

ROME, November 29 — The most recently developed bacteriological culture for producing a cattle vaccine against brucellosis has just arrived in Italy from America, the Allied Commission announced today.

FLORENCE, November 29 — The Allies have made special arrangements to feed more than 1,500 citizens of 23 of the United Nations, who were liberated here when the Allies freed the city in August, it was disclosed here today by officials of the Allied Commission's Displaced Persons Sub-Commission, which is handling the arrangements.

The plan is operating much as local Italian citizen groups are operating their food distribution program, which is based on the principle of self-help. As in distribution for Italian citizens, the parceling out of food to Allied nationals is carried on by a committee appointed from among the Allied citizens themselves. They organize and carry out the distribution. (UNN)

TRAM STRIKE ENDS IN BELGIUM

BRUSSELS, November 29 — Transportation virtually was normal again here today following the end of the transport workers' strike yesterday soon after Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot announced that public meetings and demonstrations are banned until further notice as a measure to prevent «breach of public order.»

Announcing the end of the tram-car walkout, the Belgian Minister for Communications said last night that no concessions were made to the strikers. This followed a statement by Pierlot that his Government would not be intimidated by any show of force.

Elements which opposed the government's order concerning the resistance movement were excoriated last night by Pierlot and Foreign Minister Paul Henri Spaak. Pierlot denounced «people who are creating disorder at a time when our country should show itself united,» and Spaak asserted, «Belgium never will be a democracy if a minority is to dictate law to the majority of the population.»

«Many people are talking of democracy, but some of them do not seem to realize that there are certain prerequisites for democracy, chief of which is respect for other people's opinion,» Spaak said.

Pierlot, in his statement, made it clear that the Government would be firm here-after in dealing with rioters. (OWI)

HULL CONGRATULATES STETTINIUS

WASHINGTON, November 29 — U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who recently resigned his office because of ill health, yesterday set felicitations to Acting Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., upon the latter's nomination by President Roosevelt for Mr. Hull's office.

The ailing Secretary wrote that the nomination was a highly merited tribute to Mr. Stettinius by the President in recognition of an outstanding record of public service, splendid qualifications, and a demonstrated capacity for leadership. Mr. Hull also wrote that his own assistance to Mr. Stettinius would be ever-ready when his health is restored.

«On relinquishing your office, I want to assure you of my admiration for your long service in such exacting times. I hope that you may soon be restored to health and able once more to bring to our counsels the great weight of your experience and wisdom in international affairs.» (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 29 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Eighth Army troops pushing northward between the Lamone and Montone Rivers are meeting heavy resistance in the Albereto area.

British and Indian troops of the 5th Army have made further progress in the high ground north and west of Modigliano.

American troops of the 5th Army have driven off two strong raids on their positions.

Elsewhere, patrols of both sides have been active.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Air operations yesterday were greatly restricted by bad weather.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked [illegible] also struck at the Ruhr Valley railway system.

At Zwolle, railway yards were bombed and strafed, and, near Borken, station buildings were set on fire.

In the Geilenkirchen area, increased mortar fire was encountered by our ground forces, and mortar positions at Birgden were destroyed by rocket-firing fighters.

South of Jülich, we have taken high ground and attacked the village of Barmen.

Fighting continues in Koslar, and the enemy was cleared from Merzenhausen and Kirchberg.

Farther south, our units were fighting in five German towns — Inden, Langerwehe, Jüngersdorf, Hürtgen, and Lammersdorf.

In this sector, medium, light, and fighter-bombers destroyed a number of tanks near Barmen, and attacked fortified villages including Rurich, Merken, and Birgel. A railway yard at Erklenz, and Elsdorf were among other targets.

Our forces extended their action in the Saar Valley and occupied a number of towns. We reached Willingen and Berus, southwest of Saarlautern.

Gains have been made in the Saint Avold area, where we reached beyond Oberhomburg, and armored elements reached Vahlebersing and Diefenbach. Our infantry advanced to Hinsingen, and, farther south, armored forces almost completely cleared Gulenbrünner Wald and cleared Wolfskirchen. Other elements are at Burbach and Berg.

In the northern Alsace Plain, our advances reached to within three miles west of Hagenau.

Farther north, the Moder River was crossed, and Ingweiler and the outskirts of Zutzendorf were reached.

Other elements completed their drive through the Vosges Mountains south of Molsheim.

In the Belfort Gap area, a large enemy salient between Belfort and Mülhouse was cut by forces which joined south of the Doller River after an eight-mile drive. Main enemy escape routes were severed.

Fighter-bombers attacked strongpoints and gun positions at Dunkirk. In the late evening, the industrial town of Nürnberg was bombed by light bombers. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 29 — Today's communique:

In Piedmont, especially in Cuneo Province, Patriots are continuing sabotage activity in spite of adverse weather and strong enemy reaction.

On the night of November 4, a bridge over the Tanaro River was blown up at Piozzo.

The following railway lines were either interrupted or rendered unusable for the Germans: Cuneo-San Dalmazzo; Breil-Ventimiglia; Mondovi-Cuneo; Turin-Trofarello-Brà-Mondovi.

Further details on the arduous struggle carried out by Patriots at Alba against overwhelming German forces, referred to in an earlier communique have revealed that enemy losses there were heavy. The Germans have been trying to intimidate the population by seizing hostages. Many of these were taken at Brà and Ceva.

In their attempt to prevent or reduce sabotage activity along lines of communication, the enemy is now placing hostages on board trains and motor transports. As an additional measure, roads, railways, and supply dumps are guarded by civic guards held personally responsible for their security.

In spite of this, on November 23 a group of Patriots succeeded in entering the Porta Nuova railway station, and destroyed three locomotives and extensions of track. (UNN)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 29 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the battle of matériel east of Aix la Chapelle, fierce fighting continues to rage for some sectors and localities on the reaches of the Ruhr as well as for the eastern outlets of the Hürtgen Forest.

Northeast of Sierck, on the banks of the Moselle, the enemy, who had advanced in this sector, was repulsed in successful counter-attacks and an extended system of positions and pillboxes was cleared.

In Lorraine, east of Busendorf and Bolchen, the Americans continued their attacks on a broad front. They were halted by counter-attacks, and suffered considerable tank losses after having achieved some minor penetrations into our main positions. An enemy formation was cut off and taken prisoner during those operations.

North of Saarburg, yesterday, the enemy, after the failure of his attempts at breaking through, attacked with strong forces east of the lower Vosges. Grim offensive fighting developed, particularly north of Buchweiler.

In Alsace, our troops defend themselves along a wide arc which runs from the area south of Strasbourg over the Vosges summits, then turns eastward and covers the Rhine Plain north of Mülhouse, against attacks from a southerly direction. Particularly south of Strasbourg, in the Barr sector at the mountain passes and the southern slopes of the Wasgen Forest, the enemy attacked this front without making considerable gains. One of our Army Corps fighting in this sector yesterday destroyed 34 tanks in grim defensive fighting.

Yesterday, the Liége and Antwerp sectors were again subjected to a bombardment with our long-range weapons.

Italy:

No noteworthy change is reported from central Italy and the Balkans.

Eastern Front:

The Bolsheviks proceeding from the Mohac sector westward reached Pecs.

Attacks on our front, which runs along the Drau southeast of Pecs, failed.

In central Hungary, between Budapest and Miscolcz, the fighting abated. Thus, the enemy attempt at capturing Budapest from a southeasterly direction and breaking through toward the frontier area of western Hungary and Slovakia, failed.

The German troops, together with the allied Hungarian forces under the command of Colonel General Friessner, withstood the almost incessant onslaught of 61 Bolshevik and Rumanian divisions and seven tank corps since October 29. The enemy losses in manpower and material are high. Six hundred and sixty-four tanks, more than 100 guns, and numerous other weapons and material were either destroyed or captured.

Anti-aircraft batteries and the flying forces of an air wing under the command of Colonel General Dessloch destroyed another 155 tanks, and brought down 152 planes during this fighting. In addition, they destroyed more than 800 vehicles, and numerous locomotives and trains.

In the frontier areas of eastern Slovakia and East Prussia, minor enemy attacks failed.

Air:

On November 27, a Soviet bomber formation attacking the port of Libau lost 13 planes within some minutes by pain,» and a captured American sergeant as crying: «Can't you put an end to that? It's frightful.»

The outstanding item of this Jülich report, from the viewpoint of morale-boosting propaganda intended for German home consumption, is the allegation that an American prisoner had refused to help the Germans to rescue the American wounded and had said: «The war is over, so far as I am concerned. I won't go through this criminal madness a second time.»

Western Front: For apparently the first time since the opening of the Allied drive on the Aachen sector, the daily DNB report on the western front begins, not with this sector, but with the southern sector, whose importance had hitherto been minimized by German propaganda (for example, by Dittmar and Sertorius yesterday.)

While the extreme northern wing of the Alsace-Lorraine sector «remained passive,» an important American 3rd Army attack is observed on a broad front from the area southwest of Saarlautern. This attack is said to be directed against German barrage positions in front of the Saar and has involved «extremely bitter fighting, which lasted all day long.» It is claimed that the German defenders «successfully held their own, and prevented the Americans from making a further advance.»

Another of the areas of «tough fighting» is the two flanks of the Strasbourg area, where it is admitted that two American infantry divisions «gained minor ground.»

Lull Before Storm on East Front: This front is again pictured as calm: not as a calm calculated to assuage the anxiety of German listeners, but rather as an ominous pre-storm lull boding no good to the defenders. For example, the leading despatch from the East today, sent by Colonel von Olberg, states:

«Calm continues to prevail along the whole Eastern Front, from Kurland down to the Hungarian steppes southeast of Budapest. But it is an inactivity which is full of tension.» Strong Soviet forces are observed assembling behind the lines, and a «plan for strong Soviet outflanking manoeuvres in the Danube sector north of the mouth of the Drave» is anticipated, with a tone of vague apprehension.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Heavy Fighting Near Faenza: The Fascist radio tonight mentions «large-scale» Allied attacks on both sides of Faenza. It is asserted that these attacks were defeated, and that the British troops were forced back to their original positions. Allied losses were said to have been particularly heavy as a result of violent fighting between the Lamone and Montone rivers. The sector south of Bologna remained calm.

«Socialist» Fascism Wary of One-Party System: Quotations from an editorial by Pietro Parini appearing in the Fascist paper La Stampa, were utilized tonight in a commentary which, amongst other things, seemed designed to emphasize the current, and «socialist,» phase of Fascism. For weeks now, this supposed metamorphosis into a worker's state has been the dominant Fascist propaganda trend.

Parini's article tonight gives a slightly new twist to the argument. He leads off with the bald statement that the one-party system will henceforward be super anathema in the Fascist Republican state. This assertion, however, is not qualified, beyond the statement that such a system «allows the creation of treason and plots for the furtherance of interests other than those of the country, which, ... leads unavoidably to catastrophe.»

What Parini seems most intent on revealing is the alleged similarity between a homogeneity of the «new» Fascist viewpoint, and that of the various «movements» in liberated Italy, particularly, as he says, amongst «the clandestine movements.» Parini believes that the crux of the matter lies in «preventing a recurrence of the troubles

Air:

On November 27, a Soviet bomber formation attacking the port of Libau lost 12 planes within some minutes by the German defence, and was forced to jettison its bombs.

A British motor assault boat was sunk during an attack on a small German convoy off the coast of western Norway.

Enemy air activity over the Reich territory was limited to isolated attacks on areas near the front and minor nuisance raids during the night.

Early this morning, the British made terror raids on Essen, Düsseldorf, and Neuss. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

American Prisoners: One of the chief propaganda items of the day is a front-line despatch from Jülich by a Transocean war correspondent who has observed American prisoners of war captured during the current American offensive.

The correspondent pictures the Germans as braving dangers to care for the wounded of both sides. The American wounded are portrayed as « screaming frightfully with two American infantry divisions « gained minor ground. »

Lull Before Storm on East Front: This front is again pictured as calm; not as a calm calculated to assuage the anxiety of German listeners, but rather as an ominous pre-storm lull boding no good to the defenders. For example, the leading despatch from the East today, sent by Colonel von Olberg, states:

What Parini seems most intent on revealing is the alleged similarity between a homogeneity of the « new » Fascist viewpoint, and that of the various « movements » in liberated Italy, particularly, as he says, amongst « the clandestine movements. » Parini believes that the crux of the matter lies in « preventing a recurrence of the troubles which arose after 1919. » The answer to this threat is the Fascist Republican one, by which the government assumes a broader base and the people participate more therein. It is here that Parini establishes his main point, the supposed parallel of interests of the working classes in both the Fascist and the « invaded » regions of Italy.

Bonomi Crisis: The « crisis » in the Bonomi Government is again given only factual treatment, but several commentaries, indirectly related, strive to depict the real cause of the dissension as that of selfish, futilely partisan bickering on the part of the six parties of the Liberation Committee. At the same time, it is repeatedly stressed that these parties are frightened by the « nightmare » of Fascism, and that the mass of the people in « invaded » Italy (who silently suffer while the parties argue) are more than ever convinced of the undying virtues of Fascism.

As for Count Sforza's rejection, the Fascist radio's only pertinent observation was: « One has reason to believe that London's decision is a manoeuvre intended to facilitate the return of Bonomi to the government. »

U.S. 3RD ARMY NEARS SAARBRUECKEN: U.S. 9TH REACHES ROER RIVER

LONDON, November 28 — American 3rd Army infantrymen today advanced to within 10 miles of Saabrücken, the great capital city of the German Saar Basin, while American 9th Army forces battling for the approaches to the Cologne Plain reached the Roer River in three places, it was reported late tonight.

Troops of the 95th Division drove four miles to the east on a six-mile front to enter the German border city of Willingen, southwest of Saarlautern. In the center of the 3rd Army front swinging northward to the Saar basin, mechanized cavalry units which last night took St. Avold, made an advance of two miles and cut the St. Avold-Saar-

American 7th Army troops broadened the 30-mile-long corridor to Strasbourg into a wide salient by over-running a considerable area in the northern Vosges. They are now through the Saales Pass and all ground to the north is almost cleared. Mützig and Molshem, on the railway from Strasbourg through the mountains, were captured. The German retreat is being closely pursued by American troops, and pressure is being maintained all along this sector.

To the north of the American corridor through the Vosges, the Germans have renewed their armored thrusts in the Sarrebourg area, at the junction of the 3rd and 7th Armies.

East of Belfort, the salient in the French lines was straightened while other forces, in the Mülhouse sector, crossed the Rhine-Rhone Canal at several points. French troops took over 1,000 prisoners from a German force which attempted to cut the French 1st Army's supply line through the Belfort Gap.

The Germans are fighting desperately to keep open their escape routes over the Rhine, but Allied planes today destroyed two road and rail bridges in the Strasbourg sector. A spokesman of the 1st Tactical Air Force said today that 28 Rhine bridges were available to the Germans between Strasbourg and Switzerland, and that at least 10 were pontoon bridges which could be replaced within 24 hours.

GERMANS ADMIT THREE MAJOR RETREATS

LONDON, November 28 — The German Overseas News Agency tonight announced three major military withdrawals on the American 3rd Army and 7th Army fronts and on the French 1st Army sector. These reports have not been confirmed by Allied sources.

The first German report said that the main body of German troops on the northern flank of the American 7th Army were withdrawing toward the German border. The German military spokesman said that the expected large-scale offensive on the American 3rd Army sector had forced the German Army to withdraw its forces from the area between Saarunion and the Rhine southeast of Hagenau.

Two hours later, the German news agency reported the second important German retreat from the Rhine banks south of Strasbourg. The enemy commentator said that the «planned withdrawal» was carried out in the face of strong attacks from French 1st Army troops in the Vosges Mountain area.

At 2300 hours tonight the Germans reported the third large-scale retreat on the 3rd Army front near the Luxembourg border, where they said the German salient was endangered.

U.S. 3RD ARMY NEARS SAARBRUECKEN; U.S. 9TH REACHES ROER RIVER

LONDON, November 28 — American 3rd Army infantrymen today advanced to within 10 miles of Saabrücken, the great capital city of the German Saar Basin, while American 9th Army forces battling for the approaches to the Cologne Plain reached the Roer River in three places, it was reported late tonight.

Troops of the 95th Division drove four miles to the east on a six-mile front to enter the German border city of Willingen, southwest of Ssarlautern. In the center of the 3rd Army front swinging northward to the Saar basin, mechanized cavalry units which last night took St. Avold, made an advance of two miles and cut the St. Avold-Saarlautern road, press dispatches said.

On the northern flank of the 400-mile Western Front, 9th Army troops reached the Roer River and drove within a mile of the German city of Jülich, at Kirschburg, into intricate German defenses along the flooded stream. A German counter-attack south of Flossdorf, just north of Barmen, was beaten off and fighting is still in progress in Koslar.

American 1st Army troops cleared two-thirds of the small German town of Langerwehe, the last important enemy communications post west of the Roer River.

To the north, other U.S. 1st Army units reached the Roer River at Inden. Two German divisions in this sector have been caught twice by Allied artillery fire, and have been seriously weakened. Press dispatches reported that about eight German tank divisions were bracing the Roer River defenses to the Cologne Plain.

On the outskirts of the Hürtgen Forest, 15 miles southeast of Aachen, other units of the 1st Army fought in the streets of Grosshau and for the last third of the forest town of Hürtgen.

Clear skies allowed Allied fighter-bombers to attack tanks and artillery positions all along the critical 18-mile front before Cologne, between Linnich and Düren. Front-line dispatches reported that the Germans have been forced to commit new reserves in this sector in the past 24 hours.

East of Belfort, the salient in the French lines was straightened while other forces, in the Mülhouse sector, crossed the Rhine-Rhone Canal at several points. French troops took over 1,000 prisoners from a German force which attempted to cut the French 1st Army's supply line through the Belfort Gap.

The Germans are fighting desperately to keep open their escape routes over the Rhine, but Allied planes today destroyed two road and rail bridges in the Strasbourg sector. A spokesman of the 1st Tactical Air Force said today that 28 Rhine bridges were available to the Germans between Strasbourg and Switzerlund, and that at least 10 were pontoon bridges which could be replaced within 24 hours.

8TH ARMY PATROLS CROSS LAMONE RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 28 — Eighth Army patrols yesterday crossed the Lamone River, new German delaying position across the Po Plain, to make first contact with German forces holding high ground southwest of Faenza, it was announced here today.

With 24 hours of rain, the 8th Army front was muddy and sodden, and movement of any mechanized equipment was difficult. Along the greater part of the battle line, following the Montone and the Lamone rivers, no change in positions were effected yesterday.

Fierce fighting, however, continued in the Albereto area, where British forces have been thrusting northeast between the two rivers to threaten the highway system radiating west from Ravenna.

Indian troops of the 5th Army, moving northward in conjunction with the 8th Army's advances southwest of Faenza, yesterday captured a series of heights along an eight-mile-wide sector south of Imola.

RED ARMY ADVANCES IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

MOSCOW, November 28 — Tonight's Soviet communique announced further gains in eastern Czechoslovakia, and press dispatches reported that Red Army forces are driving toward the major communications centers of eastern Slovakia and northeastern Hungary.

Russian troops of the 4th Ukrainian Front, exploiting the capture yesterday of Humenne and Michalovce, are striking toward two more important road and rail centers on the main railway leading southeast to Miskolcz and Budapest. Forces who captured Michalovce are advancing toward Kosice, while those who stormed Humenne are driving due west toward Presov. The roads are clogged with mud, and mountain streams have been flooded by rainstorms.

This Russian drive threatens to outflank German and Hungarian forces in northeastern Hungary which are already boxed in by Marshal Malinovsky's forces, who hold main roads and railways from this area into Budapest. Marshal Malinovsky's troops are reported to be heading northward from the rail center of Hatvan, which was captured Sunday.

To the south, in Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's forces have freed the whole of the Ibar River Valley with the liberation of Baska, a key rail and road junction in western Serbia. They now control the vital communications system that runs north of Skoplje to Kraljevo.

Red Army forces on all fronts yesterday destroyed or disabled 32 tanks, the Soviet communique reported. (OWI-Reuter)

JAP PLANES RAID U.S. WARSHIPS: 15 SHOT DOWN

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 28 — Japanese planes heavily raided American warships, including a battleship, in Leyte Gulf yesterday, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

Accurate anti-aircraft fire from an American warship knocked down 13 enemy planes, and two others were shot down by U.S. planes.

Some damage was inflicted on the American craft, the communique said.

Headquarters also announced that American naval units bombarded Ormoc last night, as ground action around the Ormoc corridor remained static due to the terrific storms. (OWI)

FIVE JAP SHIPS SUNK AT CHINA: ALLIES ADVANCE IN BURMA

CHUNGKING, November 28 — Two more Japanese freighters and three naval vessels have been added to the score of sinkings achieved by the 14th USAAF during operations last Friday and Saturday, a communique disclosed today.

The two freighters went down near Fort Bayard, on Liuchow Peninsula, while the three naval vessels were caught in the Yangtze River at Anking.

The communique said the 14th also again bombed the Kowloon docks at Hongkong, and smashed the railroads and supply lines in French Indo-China and in the Hochih area.

Major General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American various civilian agencies were ordered to leave Kweichow Province and the unoccupied portions of Hunan Province, an American press service said. The dispatch said that the order was given because Japanese troops, driving westward from Liuchow, have reached points less than 140 miles from Kweiyang, capital of Kweichow Province. It added that most Americans also succeeded in escaping from parts of eastern China now cut off by the linking of Japanese forces which invaded Kwangsi Province from Hunan and Kwantung. (OWI)

REICH STILL BURNING

LONDON, November 28 — The strongest German opposition encountered since D-day has failed to stem the Allied air assault against advance Nazi supply bases, and tonight fires are still burning in three key Nazi centers blasted yesterday afternoon and last night.

An official announcement today said that the 8th USAAF attack yesterday on the railway marshalling yards at Offenburg, Germany, had attained excellent results. Incendiaries and high explosives landed squarely in the center of the packed yards, reconnaissance photos showed, and numerous fires and explosions resulted.

The town is 10 miles southeast of Strasbourg, on the main rail line paralleling the Rhine River. It is a vital link with communications to southern Germany.

Last night's extremely heavy RAF attacks on two of Germany's advance Western Front supply bases — Freiburg and Neuss — blasted vital communications and transport centers feeding the Nazi divisions protecting the Ruhr. At the same time, RAF Mosquitoes were dropping 4,000-pound bombs on Berlin.

Reports were still coming in of the heavy defeat suffered by the Luftwaffe, on Sunday and yesterday, when, for the first time in months, it put an extremely strong force of fighters to combat 8th USAAF bomber and fighter fleets hitting at German targets. In two days, late compilations showed, the Nazis had lost 240 fighter planes — about one-third of the number they sent up. American losses in the same period were 37 bombers and 19 fighters. On the basis of over 2,000 planes sent into Germany in the 48-hour period, U. S. losses were estimated at three per cent of the planes which made up the offensive.

Canals Raid Successful

An Air Ministry announcement last night said that the November 21 RAF raid on two of Germany's most important waterways, the Dortmund-Ems and Mittelland canals, had been completely successful. Both canals, essential to Nazi front-line supply, have been breached and drained for a distance of 15 miles for the former and 16 miles for the latter waterway.

Tactical missions of fighters supporting the British 2nd Army on the Venlo sector reached a three-week record yesterday when 1,100 sorties were flown against communications targets and troops. In the 24 hours ending this morning, it is estimated, 6,500 Allied planes were in the air supporting the six-army drive toward the Rhine.

An announcement from Maj. Gen. Ralph Royce, Commander of the Allied 1st Tactical Air Force, operating in support of troops in southern France, said that Allied heavy bombers have flown their last mission against enemy targets in France. For the first time in 4½ years, he declared, the use of heavy bombers against French targets is prohibited. His statement, coinciding with the liberation of practically all remaining French territory in German hands, also said that the port of Marseilles and the vital trunk railway running north through the Rhone Valley are operating efficiently in meeting the supply problem of the Allied armies

Major General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing destroyed enemy transportation facilities, storage dumps, and airfields in missions over Changsha, Kweiyi, and Lingling.

A force of U. S. Thunderbolts on Sunday wiped out a supply dump a few miles north of Lashio, where the old Burma Road begins. Lashio is about 100 miles southeast of Bhamo. Supplies had been hauled hundreds of miles by road and railway, always under attack from the air.

The day before, Thunderbolts blasted another supply dump less than two miles from Lashio. In the Chindwin area, RAF fighter-bombers destroyed six of the 12 bridges near Kalewa, damaged four, and cratered the approaches to the other two.

Allied troops advancing southward in Arakan in western Burma drove Japanese out of positions behind their garrison defending Paletwa, the Southeast Asia Command headquarters communique announced today.

On the Chindwin front to the east, another force, with support of tanks, drove to within five miles of Kalewa, which is being circled from the west and north. Capture of the village will give Allied forces "the key to central Burma," one correspondent said.

Minor skirmishes were reported around Bhamo, on the Irrawaddy River in north Burma.

AUSTRIAN OIL PLANT BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 28 — Photographic reconnaissance has shown that the three latest attacks on the Blechhammer South synthetic oil refinery, one of which was carried out at night by the use of the new instrument bombing technique, has seriously damaged most of the vital installations of the large Austrian plant, it was announced here this afternoon.

Severe damage was wrought on workshops, injector house, generator, and maintenance buildings, and circulating and cooling installations of the intricate refinery assembly, it was said. The generator house, enclosing power dynamos, was said to have two great holes, one with an area of 6,000 square feet showing in its roof.

The new instrument bombing aid, which shows bombardiers their target through the densest clouds and smoke screens, is now extensively employed in the bad-weather bombing of vital targets in the Reich.

R.A.F. DROPS FOOD FOR LIBERATED TIRANA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 28 — Halifax heavy bombers of the Balkan Air Force were used today to drop food to the people of the newly liberated Albanian capital of Tirana on the 32nd anniversary of the nation's original liberation, it was announced here this afternoon.

Six RAF planes were employed to carry these supplies.

Because of the crowds in the city's streets, the airborne stores were dropped at the Tirana airfield, where Partisan forces had laid out a huge white marker of parachute canopies.

The planes flew low over the celebrating crowds in the capital to drop leaflets which declared: «On the occasion of the 32nd anniversary of Albanian independence, the RAF and USAAF bring to the Albanian people in liberated Tirana the greetings of the British and American peoples.» (PRO)

ITALIAN OFFICERS AND MEN DECORATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 28 — Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, new Commander of Allied Armies in Italy, today presented the Legion of Merit, degree of Commander, to Lieut. Gen. Roberto Bencivenga, and bronze stars to eight other officers and seven non-commissioned officers and men of the Italian armed forces for meritorious services in support of the 5th Army, it wa announced here this afternoon.

The citation of Lieut. Gen. Bencivenga commended his leadership of the military and civilian resistance movement in Rome before its capture by the 5th Army, and his services to the Allied forces after the German withdrawal from the capital.

Brig. Gen. Hume, Assistant Chief of Staff, 5th Army, gave the Italian officers and men a dinner in Florence after the ceremonies. (PRO)

GERMANS DEMORALIZED BY NEGLECT OF WOUNDED

WITH ALLIED ARMIES, ITALY, November 28 — The official German Army policy of giving medical aid to severely wounded men only after others better able to get back in the lines have been patched up is having demoralizing effects in front-line units, a recently captured Nazi prisoner revealed.

The prisoner told how a patrol penetrated to an uncharted minefield where 40 men were wounded, including one whose leg was blown off below the knee. With considerable difficulty, the wounded man was carried back to the casualty dressing station, where the litter-bearers offered to donate their blood for a transfusion.

Instead, the medical officer in charge refused to treat the legless soldier first, but turned to the lightly-wounded, who could be patched up for prompt return to the front. The legless soldier had died from loss of blood by the time the doctor was ready for him.

When the litter-bearers returned to their comrades, they told of the incident, which influenced the entire platoon to surrender.

This official policy of patching up Nazi wounded and forcing them back into the lines as soon as possible was laid down by a high-ranking German medical officer, Oberstabsarzt Hawickhorst, in a recent article in The Political Journal, an official German Army publication. He wrote:

«An old certificate of illness is no charter of privileges. Even a lame man can handle a rifle. Naturally, some men will collapse; we must be prepared for that. Some treatments which take much time, and were all very well in times of peace, must give way to more economical and quicker methods. YUGOSLAVS LIBERATE PORT OF BAR

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, November 28 — The port city of Bar, in Montenegro, has been taken by forces of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

The port is only a few miles from and connected by rail with the area around Cetinje, where British troops have recently been reported in action.

In the Ibar River section, other Yugoslav units have taken the town of Raschka, important strongpoint of the German group which is holding out in the Ibar River Valley. From Raschka, the Yugoslavs are approaching Novi Pazar.

A German column attempting to escape from the area around Prijepolje was caught by the Yugoslavs, and 350 were killed and captured.

Fierce fighting is reported north of Podgorica as the Germans attempt to flee to Sendjak.

Lines of communication along which three German divisions are struggling to reach Mostar and thence go to Sarajevo were attacked by the Partisans.

In Belgrade, 105 persons, tried and found guilty as war criminals, were sentenced to death by the military court of the National Army of Liberation. The court released 750 persons with instructions that they were «now given an opportunity to correct their errors.» (OWI)

GERMANS PANIC IN TRIESTE

BELGRADE, November 28 — German soldiers in Trieste are becoming more alarmed each day because of the nearness of Slovenian Partisans and the large formations of Allied planes which fly over on their way to Germany, Tan Jug, the new Yugoslav telegraph service, reported today.

Three fighters which fly every morning over Trieste and strafe shipping in port, trains, and factories, have caused real panic, the service added. In their desperation, German soldiers are taking to drink. Soldiers posted as sentries near petrol stores sell the petrol on the black market to earn money.

To all those exempt from forced labor, Germans give green cards with seals. A great trade in these cards has developed. Even 30,000 lire are paid for them. As for labor duty, call-ups are never sent, but men are simply arrested on the street and sent to work in Austria and Germany, the telegraph service said. (OWI)

AACHEN COAL NOW GOING TO ALLIES

AACHEN, GERMANY, November 28 — The first Allied effort to exploit conquered German resources is being undertaken by small groups of American experts charged with restoring production of coal mines in this district, an American press correspondent said yesterday.

His dispatch said, in part:

» The Aachen district mines, which were only slightly damaged when captured by the Americans, comprise Germany's fourth-largest coal-producing area. Qualitatively, however, the mines are more important, for the coal is considered the second-best in Germany.

» The Aachen area normally produces 7,700,00 tons annually, which would have a value of 385 million dollars, although this price actually is less than the cost of production under German conditions. (OWI)

ALLIES REVEAL 1939-43 SHIPPING LOSSES

WASHINGTON, November 28 — Allied and neutral merchant shipping losses from September, 1939, to the end of 1943 totalled 5,758 vessels, it was disclosed here today in a joint British-American announcement.

The sunken ships aggregated 22,161,000 gross tons.

According to the Associated Press, the United States built about 30 million deadweight tons of merchant ships during the period covered by the announcement, roughly offsetting the losses without taking into consideration ship construction in other Allied and neutral countries.

Revealing for the first time the price paid by the United Nations to keep the transport lines open to battlefronts all over the world, a separate announcement from London showed how the shipping losses were divided. Britain lost 2,921 ships, totalling 11,643,000 gross tons. The other Allies lost a total of 1,937 ships, with a gross tonnage of 8,491,000.

Nine hundred neutral ships — presumably in the service of the United Nations — were sunk, totalling 2,027,000 gross tons.

The War Shipping Administration here announced that U. S. losses totalled 753 vessels, aggregating 3,311,000 gross tons.

Shipping losses in 1942 were serious, and far exceeded new construction, the joint report said. But in 1943, the reverse situation was the case. Total Allied losses that year were 3,646,000 gross tons, but U. S. shipyards alone produced 13,000,000 gross tons of new shipping. (OWI)

SFORZA LEAVES SIX-PARTIES CHAIR

ROME, November 28 — Count Carlo Sforza late this evening announced that he no longer was serving as chairman of the six-party conference which, for the past three days, has been seeking a solution of the ministerial crisis which brought about the fall of Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi and his cabinet.

Count Sforza told a reporter at the Palazzo dei Marescialli, where the conference has been meeting, that he had written a letter to the committee announcing his withdrawal.

He said he did not wish his own personality to become involved in the solution of the crisis.

The text of Count Sforza's letter follows:

« Dear Friends:

« When you asked me to preside at your deliberations, I was filled with a realization of the abnegation and sense of duty of which you are capable when confronted by problems and incidents which might have disturbed our deliberations — a sense of duty of which any nation might be proud.

« I thank you for your insistence that I continue to preside. But it is necessary to act without delay. I sent the messages you expected me to send.

« But it would be very bad were even a few people to suppose that my presence has prolonged the discussions, because I have spoken and I have acted only to hasten choice of a leadership which would give the nation the best possible government under the present circumstances.

« I leave, therefore, with my best wishes, and with cordial thanks. »

Count Sforza's withdrawal was followed by an order of the day of the opposition Monarchial Party — one of several orders of the day issued during the past 24 hours by Italian parties of varying political faiths.

The opposition Monarchist declaration took the position that failure of the National Committee of Liberation to produce a satisfactory government gave both the liberty and the responsability for action to the Lieutenant General of the Realm, Prince Umberto, as chief of the State. It now became the duty of the Prince, the declaration said, to attempt formation of a different type of government.

Other orders of the day included that of the Tuscan Committee of National Liberation, calling for a national program which would insure full participation of the Italian government in the war of liberation, democratization and reconstruction of the country, maintenance of public order, and « to offer to the world a demonstration that Italian democratic parties are well able to subordinate their own interests to the interests of the nation. » (UNN-Reuter-BBC)

PLATFORM FOR CABINET AGREEMENT OFFERED

ROME, November 28 — A six-point platform of fundamentals was offered this afternoon to the six parties of the Italian National Committee of Liberation by Pietro Nenni, Socialist, as a possible basis of agreement to end the ministerial crisis precipitated three days ago by the fall of Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi's coalition government.

The program drawn up by Nenni was to be discussed by the conferees when they resumed their sessions late today. It proposes that the six parties of the National Committee of Liberation agree in affirming the necessity of:

« 1. An internal policy which will guarantee the free expression of the democratic will of the country.

« 2. A foreign policy which will face and resolve the problem of the international status of Italy, and which will tend to reduce Allied control outside limits directly connected with the war, eliminating interventions and political vetoes limiting the autonomy of the new Italian democracy.

« 3. A war policy facilitating intensification of the war effort of the nation, and centering upon democratic reorganization of the army.

« 4. Rapid and radical application of epuration policies, and severe application of sanctions against former Fascist leaders, together with a policy looking toward impounding of war and Fascist-Régime profits by granting the High Commissioner the necessary powers.

« 5. A plan for financial reconstruction which will mobilize all the energies of the nation, giving work to the working classes.

« 6. Reorganization of all bodies charged with food distribution and transportation, so as to assure an indispensible minimum to all the population. »

Nenni's tentative platform also asked the six parties to subscribe to the following:

(a) Recognition of the Committee of National Liberation of Northern Italy as the executive organ of the government in that part of Italy now under the oppression of the Nazi-Fascists; (b) recognition of the Committees of National Liberation in the liberated provinces as consultative and control bodies; (c) administrative elections to be held as soon as possible; and (d) formation of a National Assembly chosen « on the basis of the popular will. » (UNN)

The War Shipping Administration here announced that U.S. losses totalled 753 vessels, aggregating 3,311,000 gross tons.

Shipping losses in 1942 were serious, and far exceeded new construction, the joint report said. But in 1943, the reverse situation was the case. Total Allied losses that year were 3,646,000 gross tons, but U.S. shipyards alone produced 13,000,000 gross tons of new shipping. (OWI)

Sforza Non Grata to British

Earlier, reports by Reuter and the British Broadcasting Corporation said that British Ambassador Sir Noel Charles had confirmed to the deputation of Italian ministers that Count Sforza's appointment as Foreign Minister in a new Italian government would not be welcomed by Great Britain.

Socialists and Actionists who had undertaken to collaborate in a new Bonomi government with Sforza holding the foreign affairs portfolio now have their liberty of action renewed, Reuter said.

The BBC in an English broadcast to Europe, quoted a « diplomatic correspondent » as commenting:

« It is felt in England that an Italian Foreign Minister upon whom we can rely is essential to the development of healthy Anglo-Italian relations... »

The conference of delegates, at least momentarily without leadership, adjourned later tonight.

They were to resume their deliberations, however, tomorrow morning — when the cabinet crisis will have entered its fourth day.

ROME, November 28 — The future democratization of the country — of which the new government will be the expression — was the main theme of an order of the day issued by the Italian General Confederation of Labor here today.

The IGCL stressed its main task as « giving stimulus to popular liberty in order to defend Labor's and the Country's interests. »

« POLITICAL UNITY VITAL, » SAYS FLORENCE C.N.L.

FLORENCE, November 28 — « Political harmony is the only guarantee of increased Italian participation in the war, » an order of the day issued by the Tuscan Committee of National Liberation said here today.

After wishing the coalition parties swift success in solving the government crisis, the order concluded:

« Party accord is the sole guarantee of the country's democratization and reconstitution, of maintaining public order, and giving impetus to reconstruction work — thus proving to the world that the Italian democratic parties are quite able to subordinate private interests to the national welfare. » (UNN)

GREATER WAR EFFORT ADVOCATED

SIENA, November 28 — Greater Italian participation in the effort to free the national territory was advocated in an order of the day issued yesterday at a meeting of the local Committee of National Liberation, it was announced here today.

Other recommendations were, improvement of the food problem, sterner suppression of black market activities, and the thorough democratization of the country.

The order expressed the wish that « the new government be the expression of all the anti-Fascist parties composing the CNL, around which the healthy forces of the nation must rally to give the government authority to solve the country's most urgent problems. » (UNN)

PROVINCIAL ANTI-FASCIST MEASURES URGED

ROME, November 28 — The absolute necessity of immediately forming provincial commissions to apply anti-Fascist measures was urged today by Mario Berlinguer, Deputy Commissioner for Sanctions Against Fascism, in a circular addressed to Court of Appeal authorities.

The commissions should consist of a magistrate and two jury members, the circular announced, and added: « Public opinion awaits with just impatience — reflected in the Press — for the practical application of measures which until now have existed only as legal formulae. » (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

WHITE PAPER TELLS OF U. K. AT WAR

LONDON, November 28 — The full story of the United Kingdom's five years' war effort was told for the first time today in a White Paper presented by the Prime Minister.

The report explained how a maximum mobilization of manpower had been organized. It disclosed the size of the armed forces and the casualties they have sustained, gave the figures of war production, and showed how this tremendous war effort had been financed, how the burden of taxation had grown, how export trade had been drastically cut, and Britain's foreign investments sold.

Summarizing the report, the BBC said today:

Nearly 6,500,000 men and women have been recruited for the armed forces and full-time civil defense services. More than 500,000 men have been killed, wounded, or taken prisoner on active service, but, in spite of these heavy casualties and the release of another 500,000 men for medical and other reasons, there are still 4,500,000 men in the armed forces, a much higher figure than was reached in 1918 — the peak period of the last war.

The aircraft industry alone now employs nearly 2,000,000 workers and, altogether, munition industries and such basic industries as coal mining, transport, and the public services, have nearly 11,000,000 workers on their books.

tanks, over 900,000 trucks and gun carriers, 4,000,000 machine guns, 3,000,000 rifles, and enough telegraph cable to go around the equator 120 times.

Aircraft factories have built more than 100,000 planes, including 28,000 bombers and 38,000 fighters. At the shipyards, in addition to building warships, Britain launched 6,750,000 tons of merchant ships. Even so, Britain has not been able to keep pace with the sinking of ships. Nearly 3,000 British merchant ships have been sunk, and 30,000 men have lost their lives.

In addition to working so hard for the war effort, the people of Britain have carried heavy taxation burdens. So far, the war has cost the country 25,000 million pounds, and about half of this has been met by taxation. Civilians have made other sacrifices. Their homes have been bombed. Nearly 60,000 civilians have been killed in air raids, and another 80,000 injured. 4,500,000 houses, more than one-third of all the houses in the kingdom, have been either damaged or destroyed.

For every three Britons killed on the battlefronts, from Singapore to the Siegfried Line, one died on the home front, a Reuter summary said, adding:

Food space on ships had to be cut to make room for munitions, so Britain increased her home-grown food production from under 13,000,000 to 19,000,000 acres.

British Minister of Information Brendan Bracken, discussing the White Paper, said today that the total war effort of the population of Great Britain was greater than that of any other belligerent country.

« We had not, » he said, « attempted to mulct the British Empire. Canada is the only Empire country from which we received Reverse Lend-Lease. Everything we got from the Colonies we paid for. Consequently, we owe them tremendous sums. »

Mr. Bracken said that when the war started, Britain had large gold reserves in the United States. This had all to be paid over for war goods, an expenditure which helped American industry to come into the war on almost a war time footing. Britain was glad to have rendered this service as a small return for American generosity, he said. (BBC-Reuter)

NO AMMUNITION SHORTAGE SAYS CHURCHILL

LONDON, November 28 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill assured the House of Commons today that there is no need to fear that the British armies will be short of ammunition, provided workers maintained the present planned output.

He said that, nine months ago, shell filling and shell making plants were again opened up on a large scale, and since then important extensions had been made. The country had also « very considerable reserves. »

Mr. Churchill said his statements covered all theaters of war, including Southeast Asia, « where transport, rather than quantities of ammunition, is the governing factor. » (PWB)

The aircraft industry alone now employs nearly 2,000,000 workers and, altogether, munition industries and such basic industries as coal mining, transport, and the public services, have nearly 11,000,000 workers on their books.

The nation has been able to maintain a full strength both in the armed forces and in its essential industries by severely cutting down civilian production and exports, and by recruiting unexpectedly large numbers of women in industry. In fact, nearly every woman and girl in the country between the ages of 14 and 60, except those who have families to look after, is doing a full-time job or is in the war services; and nearly 1,000,000 housewives have part-time jobs in industry.

Export trades have been cut down to a fraction of their pre-war position, so that only four per cent of the workers engaged in the manufacturing industries were working for exports this year. The civilian production trades have also been curtailed. They have lost nearly 4,000,000 men and women to the war industries or to the services. As a result of this big change-over in industry, the output of munitions and war equipment has been greatly increased, and the total output in the first six months of the present year was six times greater than at the outbreak of the war.

These are the most striking achievements: 722 warships, large and small, have been built, and more than 5,000 smaller vessels have been launched. The war factories have turned out 35,000 field guns and anti-aircraft pieces, 25,000

BELGIAN WORKERS STRIKE

BRUSSELS, November 28 — The Belgian Trade Union Federation has called a general strike of all its members for today, and has asked them to march to the square in front of the Brussels Stock Exchange in a protest against recent Belgian Government action concerning the resistance movement, an American press service reported.

The government has ordered resistance groups to disarm. In demonstrations over the week-end, 45 persons were wounded.

Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot said yesterday over Radio Brussels that the Government's duty is « to defend the law, and the Government will take all necessary measures to impose respect for the law. »

Prince Regent Charles of Belgium conferred with Prime Minister Pierlot yesterday, press dispatches said.

The Chamber of Deputies has approved special powers for Prime Minister Pierlot's administration by 116 votes to 12, Reuter reported tonight.

The special powers bill, which first came before the Deputies on November 21, dealt with administration of justice and of property, social security measures, the right to dismiss members from provincial and communal councils, the Government program of public works measures taken to restore devastated areas, and special powers for the Ministry of Food.

According to Radio Brussels, Premier Pierlot announced today that all meetings and demonstrations were prohibited until further notice.

It revealed also that 27,000 of 49,000 arms had been handed over.

Meanwhile, transport workers in Brussels have gone on strike against the Pierlot Government, leaving the Capital virtually without transport. Tram drivers and conductoresses marched through the city streets shouting anti-Pierlot slogans.

Correspondents said that the strike in Brussels is perfectly orderly, and that a skeleton service is operated.

The position taken by Belgium's powerful trade unions in the crisis of their country was defined to a Reuter correspondent in London today by Prosper de Bruyne, leader of the Belgian railwaymen in four years of the underground struggle. De Bruyne, who had come to London for an executive meeting of the International Transport Workers' Federation, is hurriedly returning home after hearing of the strike now going on in Brussels.

He said that Belgium's working class wishes to see a democratic government fully representative of the aspirations of the people. This can only be achieved to an extent to which living elements in all parties succeed in ridding themselves of certain old leaders, he added. (OWI-Reuter)

ROOSEVELT HAILS HULL

WASHINGTON, November 28 — An exchange of letters between President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in connection with the latter's resignation, was made public today. Hailing Mr. Hull as the «Father of the United Nations,» the President wrote:

«When the organization of the United Nations is set up, I shall continue to pray that you, as the Father of the United Nations, may preside over its first session. That has nothing to do with whether you are Secretary of State or not at the time, but it should go to you as the one person in all the world who has done the most to make this great plan for peace an effective fact.»

In his letter to the President tendering his resignation, Mr. Hull expressed gratitude that their joint efforts were instrumental in bringing to a partial or full completion many difficult tasks growing out of the foreign relations of The United States before and during the war. He also was pleased, he said, that many forward movements of surpassing importance to friendly relations among nations had been instituted.

Mr. Hull told the President that it was a supreme tragedy to him personally that he was unable to continue making his full contribution to such great undertakings as the creation of the post-war peace organization, the solution of many problems in the promotion of international cooperation, and the final development of a world order.

Among those who acclaimed the Stettinius appointment was Vice President Henry Wallace, who said:

«Those who know him know that in the priceless quality of purity of purpose the country has an outstanding Secretary of State.»

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman, Senator Tom Connally, commented:

THOREZ RETURNS TO PARIS

PARIS, November 28 — Maurice Thorez, secretary of the French Communist Party, has arrived here with Arthur Ramco, deputy of the Nord and delegate to the French Consultative Assembly, according to Radio Paris.

Thorez has been in Moscow since 1943, Reuter said. In 1939 he was sentenced in absentia to six years' imprisonment for desertion from the French Army. He now comes under the terms of the amnesty granted by the French Government on October 29, and will be able to assume the seat in the Consultative Assembly to which he was nominated last month. LARGE POST-WAR U.S. MERCHANT FLEET URGED

ST. LOUIS, November 28 — The United States must maintain a substantial post-war merchant fleet to stand by as a national defense reserve «in sanctuary — for use only in case of national emergency,» Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, Chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, told the Mississippi Valley Association here today.

Admiral Land said that the post-war merchant fleet will aggregate a deadweight capacity of about 50 million tons, which is four times the pre-war tonnage. The added personnel number 170,000, thus giving the U.S. «all elements necessary to restore its eminence as a maritime nation. The Maritime Commission is committed to that accomplishment.

«Many persons, including myself, believe that we can find use for 15 to 20 million deadweight tons in our post-war fleet. Great Lakes shipping would have a peace-time requirement of about 3,500,000 deadweight tons; our great rivers would need about 2½ million tons; while 3,800,000 tons could be used in coastal and intercoastal transportation, leaving about 7,500,000 tons, more-or-less, to be used in foreign shipping, certainly not an alarming proportion. FRANCE WANTS AGREEMENT ON REICH

PARIS, November 28 — Acceleration of a concrete Allied agreement on treatment of Germany at the peace table is expected to result from General de Gaulle's visit to Moscow, Reuter said today.

The dispatch said also that any definite position of France in the field of foreign affairs must await an exchange of views with the Soviet leaders.

French officials feel that settlement of all post-war probems is subordinate to agreement on handling of the German problem, the report said. It quoted General de Gaulle as saying recently in the Consultative Assembly: « The fate of Germany is today the central point of the world. LONDON, November 28 — The British Government's decision against the representation in peace conferences of any nation which has not made a positive contribution to the United Nations war effort, was reiterated today in the House of Commons by Undersecretary for the Dominions Emrys Evans.

Mr. Evans made the statement in reply to a question asking for assurance that Eamon de Valera, Prime Minister of Eire, would have no representative at any peace conference or discussions regarding the terms of armistice. He said: « It has already been made clear that, so far as the Government of the United Kingdom are concerned, they see no reason why any government which has not made a positive contribution, as a government, to the United Nations war effort, should be represented at a peace conference. The same would, of course, apply to any armistice discussions, » concluded the Undersecretary.

GERMANS EVACUATE BADEN

BASLE, November 28 — Baden, the German province across the Rhine from the Alsace battleground, has been proclaimed a war zone by the Nazis and evacuation of civilians has been ordered, a Reuter report said tonight.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 780021

Quoting sources from inside Germany, the dispatch said that the first to leave the area were Nazi officials, who requisitioned all transportation for themselves and their families. Other residents of the area are forced to evacuate on foot, or with any other means at their disposal.

All military hospitals have already been moved, the report said, and the wounded transported east.

When the Volkssturm 2nd Division of Baden Province was called up in one district last weekend, only about 20 out of 450 men reported, the dispatch declared. The others were unable to be present because of a lack of warm clothing and footwear. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 28 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In spite of heavy rain, the 8th Army have extended their positions on the River Lamone, north and south of Faenza.

British and Indian troops of the 5th Army have occupied a number of mountain features north of Modigliana, and all enemy resistance east of the Lamone, south of Faenza, is virtually at an end.

On the remainder of the front, patrols of both sides have been active.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Adverse weather yesterday grounded medium and heavy bombers and caused cancellation of most operations by other units.

Coastal fighters flew intruder missions in the area of the French-Italian border, where they attacked motor transport.

Balkan Air Force fighters strafed road traffic in Albania and Yugoslavia.

MAAF flew fewer than 100 sorties.

All of our aircraft returned safely. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 28 — Today's communique:

Allied forces made slow progress yesterday in the Jülich-Hürtgen sector.

House-to-house fighting continues in Koslar, and, further south, we advanced to the vicinity of Altdorf.

Northeast of Weisweiler, we captured Frenz.

Our units reached the outskirts of Langerwehe, and we have driven the enemy back from high ground near the village.

House-to-house fighting is in progress in Hürtgen.

Fighter-bombers supporting our troops in this sector attacked enemy artillery, flak positions, and troops near Düren, and troop concentrations in the Jülich area, and damaged a railway bridge crossing the Roer River south of Jülich.

Other fighter-bombers went for transportation targets near Cologne, and disabled locomotives, railway cars, and horse-drawn vehicles. Heavy bombers escorted by fighters attacked a railway yard in the Kalk area of Cologne.

We made gains up to several miles in the area east of Metz.

Last night, heavy bombers were over Germany in great strength with the Freiburg and Neuss railway centers and advanced supply bases for the enemy's western front as main objectives.

Berlin was attacked by a force of light bombers. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, November 28 — Tonight's communique:

During today, on the territory of Czechoslovakia, our troops occupied in fighting over 60 populated localities, including Prochin, Prodkol, Petrovtse, Osharovtse, Zhalubin, Grashke, Panuvtse, Glozhin, Malchitse, Somotor, Sredunabodruge, Maly Keresht, and Veliky Keresht, and the railway stations of Grashke, Panuvtse, and Somotor.

On the territory of Hungary, north of Nyiregyhaza, our troops forced the Tisza River and occupied in fighting the populated localities of Zemblenogar, Orhe, Tamos, Ladze, Kish-Rozvald, Nase-Rozvald, Ritche, Tsigan, Batson, Luka, Karas, Vish, Zalpo, and Kenetze.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During November 27, our troops disabled or destroyed 32 German tanks. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 28 — Today's communique:

Particulars are now available of a brilliant Patriot action in Lucca Province.

On November 5, a large Patriot body had just entered the township of Castelnuovo di Garfagnana, when a German supply column arrived on the scene, on its way to the front. The Patriots immediately opened heavy fire from different vantage points, causing great confusion and the death of about 300 Germans.

On November 10, in the same commune, a small Patriot group blew up two vehicles on the Foce delle Radici Road. Five Germans were killed, and two wounded.

On November 7, in the Apennines, two Patriots captured eight Germans engaged in pulling a vehicle from a bog.

German atrocities continue in Bologna Province, and at Monte Renzio four civilian families, including two babies a few months old, were slaughtered. (UNN)

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 28 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Meuse bridgehead at Venlo, our troops, yesterday as during the previous days, repulsed grim enemy attacks, and struck at British tank concentrations with concentrated artillery fire.

Northeast of Aix la Chapelle, the U. S. divisions resumed their major attacks after an intense artillery preparation. They were again repulsed by the determined resistance of our troops in front of our main lines.

The garrisons of the forts around Metz continued to maintain themselves against enemy attacks, or broke out from their battered positions to neighbouring forts.

We made gains up to several miles in the area east of Metz.

Our units reached Teterchen, approximately 20 miles northeast of Metz, and we entered Saint Avold and a number of small towns in this area.

North of Saarburg, we have taken Hunkirch and Wolfskirchen, and have reached Rustel and Bungweiler. Considerable enemy armor has been encountered in some parts of this sector.

Fighter-bombers attacked troop concentrations in the vicinity of Strasbourg, and they also struck at tanks and road vehicles.

West of Strasbourg, our units cleared Mützig, and continued their drive eastward through Molsheim on the Alsace Plain.

A rail bridge over the Rhine at Breisach, a pontoon bridge in the same area, and a rail center at Freiburg were bombed by fighter-bombers. Two of our aircraft are missing from yesterday's operations.

In the Vosges Mountains, additional gains were made against scattered resistance.

Our advance northeast of Belfort continued, and several villages were freed. The enemy salient south of the Rhone-Rhine Canal was virtually wiped out.

The town of Dannemarie and several nearby villages were taken after stiff fighting, in which many enemy tanks were destroyed and 1,000 prisoners were taken.

During November 27, our troops [illegible] destroyed 32 German tanks. (Radio Moscow)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 28 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Northeast of Aix la Chapelle, the U. S. divisions resumed their major attacks after an intense artillery preparation. They were again repulsed by the determined resistance of our troops in front of our main lines.

The garrisons of the forts around Metz continued to maintain themselves against enemy attacks, or broke out from their battered positions to neighbouring forts.

From the area northeast of Bolchen, up to the Finstingen sector, the Americans launched unsuccessful local attacks and reconnaissance thrusts on our front, which had, in part, been rectified and strengthened by positions prepared in advance.

North of Saarburg, German tank troops frustrated fierce enemy attempts at breaking through. They destroyed 43 U. S. tanks, and thus, essential parts of the enemy forces attacking in this sector by their stubborn defense.

The situation in Alsace is dominated by concentric enemy attacks proceeding from the Strasbourg penetration southward, and by fierce fighting for the Vosges passes and the Mülhouse sector. The enemy attacks were halted by a grim resistance and a shrewd defence. Thirty-three enemy tanks were destroyed.

London, Antwerp, and Liège continued to be subjected to a heavy bombardment.

Italy:

Only local fighting is reported from central Italy.

At Gollicano, Italian troops ousted the enemy from a penetration.

In the Lamone sector, southwest of Faenza, enemy thrusts failed.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, the Bolsheviks continue to exert strong pressure from the Mohac sector in a westerly and northerly direction. A large number of enemy tanks were destroyed in grim defensive fighting.

On the Eastern Front, the day went by without major fighting.

In the southwestern part of the Matra Mountains, our troops pushed back enemy formations which had penetrated the forests in this sector.

A local attack of our grenadiers in the frontier area of East Prussia inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

In Kurland, the Bolsheviks launched only minor, unsuccessful attacks, after the collapse of their major attack.

Naval warfare flared up considerably off the coast of Norway. On November 27, German convoys repulsed several attacks by bombers and torpedo planes off western Norway, and brought down six planes.

Air:

Yesterday, Anglo-American bombers and fighters attacked the territory on both sides of the Ruhr. Serious damage was caused, particularly in the residential districts of Offenburg and Cologne.

In the night, British planes launched a terror attack on Fribourg, in Breisgau, which caused high losses among the population and extensive damage to buildings.

Another night attack was launched on Düsseldorf-Neuss.

In addition, nuisance raiders flew over the Reich territory.

Nineteen enemy planes were brought down.

GERMAN

Reaction To Stettinius: German sources, which yesterday commented prominently on the resignation of the American Secretary of State Cordell Hull, today are commenting on his successor, Stettinius. The DNB diplomatic correspondent characterizes Stettinius as «decidedly representative of American capitalism.» It is added that «the future will show whether Stettinius is the tool which Roosevelt needs in order to hold together the extremely difficult Allied front.»

Hull's resignation is attributed not merely to reasons of health, but to the alleged «failures of his policy.»

Dittmar on Western Front: Tonight, the weekly military analysis by General Dittmar concentrates on the situation in the West. One of the outstanding features of his broadcast is his calling the recent Allied advance, in the southern sector of the Western Front, a «rather important success.» His explanation for this «success» is as follows:

«American offensive formations in the Alsace-Lorraine area came upon certain points of the German front which were not yet solid enough to be completely equal to the considerable enemy superiority in tanks... The Germans are not yet strong enough to offer appropriate resistance everywhere to enemy forces.»

On the other hand, Dittmar insists that the «fact that the enemy reached a rather important success» must not be considered «symptomatic.» On the contrary, he expresses confidence that, meanwhile, the Germans are making valuable use of the time gained in order to build up further resistance, including an intensified armament programme.

Arguing that the Aix-la-Chapelle sector is more vital to Germany than Lorraine, Dittmar says that in the former sector the Germans threw into battle all the forces at their disposal, and thus supposedly succeeded in foiling Allied strategy. «There is no doubt that the battle of annihilation planned by General Eisenhower has been changed more and more into a battle of attrition» against Allied

Eastern Front: Colonel von Olberg declared that there has been «no clarification of the situation in front of the German bridgeheads in Kurland during the past 24 hours. The great reluctance of the Russians to attack is remarkable» in view of their «numerical superiority.» Hence, the commentator suspects that the explanation may lie in the fact that the Russian Command has «made up its mind to use elsewhere» the eight Russian armies concerned. He is not sure where this ominous «elsewhere» will be, but expects some sort of offensive between Memel and Beskides.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Increased Activity Near Bologna: The Fascist radio late tonight announced that «the American 5th Army has considerably increased its activity south of Bologna.» It is stated, however, that in the Tyrrhenian sector, «where the Americans had made an infiltration,» Italian mountain troops defeated Allied troops in counter-attacks. Also, in the Esenza area the British forces have allegedly been forced into inactivity, «owing to recent heavy losses.»

«Coastal batteries of the German Navy in the island of Piscopi (Tilo) have frustrated a British attempt to land on the island. Enemy ships were forced to withdraw seaward.»

Cabinet Crisis in Rome: Tonight, the Fascist commentators gave but brief mention to the cabinet crisis, in «liberated» Italy. After remarking the widespread concern of the various newspapers in Rome, one commentator observed that «they all agree in admitting that Communists have been responsible for the crisis.» Italia Nuova, Avanti! and Azione Cattolica were «quoted.»

Italian Bourgeoisie Threatened: The Fascist commentator, Menenio, made a lengthy analysis of the supposed crisis involving the middle classes in «liberated» Italy. His remarks constituted a reply to the recent radio address made in Rome by Di Vittorio, Secretary of the General Federation of Labor, in which the latter, warning against the dangers of inflation, observed that it is always the workers who lose. Menenio suggests that, in reality, the «filthy bourgeoisie» is more likely to suffer; «they may yet see their wealth, so easily hoarded during these last 20 years, completely crushed.»

Labor Secretary Di Vittorio's demand for «exceptional measures for the decimation of private wealth» are compared to similar outcries from «subversive parties» after the last war, at a time when «the frightened Italian bourgeoisie saw that its own safety and the safety of its wealth lay only in the order which Fascism, through validly substituting the State, was about to install.» But after a «convenient» identification with Fascism and the Fatherland, the embattled middle classes subsequently «betrayed» Fascism. Now, it is stated, they have no more illusions, knowing they cannot be saved either by Fascism of by anti-Fascism.

Allies Bomb Funeral Procession: «In a village in the province of Mantua, Anglo-Saxon fighter bombers strafed a funeral procession from low level. The hearse was set on fire, and the body was subsequently extracted from the burned-out bier.»

Germans and Italians Protected Florentine Art Treasures: An alleged BBC Spanish broadcast, in which it was admitted that the art treasures of Florence have been found and restored, is used as a pretext for a defence of the Fascist and German authorities who supposedly took great pains to protect the masterpieces from the ravages of war.

Socialist Measures in Fascist Italy: On August 16 of this year, Mussolini issued instructions to the effect that the new administrative mayors of the chief provinces of the Fascist Socialist Republic were to be chosen from [illegible] trades and amongst technicians. Today, the Fascist

MAGINOT LINE BREACHED BY U. S. 3RD ARMY

LONDON, November 27 — American 3rd Army troops today breached the Maginot Line on a wide front south of the Saar basin and three miles west of St. Avold, press dispatches reported tonight. American troops who breached the line at several points captured 10 French forts and held them against heavy German counter-attacks. They are now within gun range of the main Siegfried Line forts on the central sector of the front.

The advance was made after a heavy barrage of mortar fire, and troops advanced over difficult terrain, studded with American troops in the Hürtgen Forest to the southwest of Düren have almost fought their way through the forest. German forces are being compressed against the River Roer in this sector, and were considered by Allied staff officers to have been deprived of room to maneuver. American forces have reached the town of Hürtgen, and are meeting heavy German cannon and anti-tank fire. Two more lines of a continuous trench system, reproducing all the tactical characteristics of the trench war of 1914-1918, must be overcome before troops can reach Düren.

Clear weather today permitted overwhelming Allied air power to support infantry advances. Fighter-bombers flew over 2,000 sorties today, blasting enemy troop concentrations and supply dumps, just behind their lines.

American 9th Army forces west of Jülich held furious German counter-attacks, and were aided by Allied fighter-bomber sweeps. Allied forces are fighting in the outer defenses of the city, and have pushed toward the flooded Roer, wading in water above their knees. Boggy ground limited the use of tanks, and swollen streams have delayed the advance.

141 Nazi Tanks Destroyed

House-to-house fighting was reported in Koslar, 3,000 yards west of Jülich, and infantry battles were reported at Barman, to the north of Jülich. The 9th Army so far has destroyed a total of 141 German tanks, many straight from the factory.

On the 2nd Army front, British forces straightened a bulge in their lines north of Geilenkirchen by an advance of 3,000 yards. The Germans in this area are not counter-attacking strongly, but any Allied advance is stubbornly opposed. The British are firmly established between the Rivers Würm and Roer.

In the Netherlands, 2nd Army troops are all along the Meuse except for a small German pocket west of Venlo. German defenses here include anti-tank ditches 20 feet wide, extensive minefields, trenches, and pillboxes. The British have not yet opened their attack on these defenses, although the Germans in Venlo are under artillery fire.

At the southern end of the 400-mile Western Front, U.S. 7th Army columns opened a new path to Strasbourg by speeding through the Saales Pass, in the northern Vosges, to reach the Alsace Plain west of the fortress city. Large masses of tanks are moving up to reinforce and expand the Strasbourg corridor. Strong German attempts to cut the supply line have been repulsed.

French armored units are driving southward in an effort to close the German escape routes across the Rhine, and to cut off an estimated enemy force of 50,000 men still remaining in the Vosges. The Germans have lost great stores of equipment and heavy guns.

Near the Swiss border, French forces are wiping out the Germans who, hiding in the large Alsatian forests, are American troops who breached the line at several points captured 10 French forts and held them against heavy German counter-attacks. They are now within gun range of the main Siegfried Line forts on the central sector of the front.

The advance was made after a heavy barrage of mortar fire, and troops advanced over difficult terrain, studded with tank traps, ditches, and intricate road blocks. The forest to the northwest of St. Avold was entirely cleared of enemy troops before the attack began.

A fresh crossing of the German border into the Saar Basin was made by the 3rd Army troops of the 90th Division, who advanced three miles to capture the German border towns of Kerprich-Hemmersdorf and Furweiler, six to seven miles northwest of Saarlautern. The American front inside Germany in the Saar was extended to 19 miles from Nenning on the west, to Oberesch to the east.

The eastern flank of the 3rd Army wheeled northward across the uplands of Lorraine north of Sarrebourg. They advanced through woods and hills, and waterways abnormally swollen so that in some parts the swirling torrents raced through village streets. Armored units, specially adapted to these conditions, have reached Eyweiler and Drulingen, 16 to 17 miles southeast of Saargemünd.

The battle for the approaches to the industrial Rhine Plain west of Cologne continued in its intensity today. First Army troops advanced two miles north of Weisweiler, and entered the town of Frenz, cutting the important military highway to Cologne.

Other units pushed along the road to Düren, and reached the outskirts of Langerwehe, where heavy fighting was reported tonight. Americans in this sector are less than five miles from Düren, believed to have been evacuated by the Germans. Numerous newly-made trenches and obstacles face the advancing troops.

BRITISH EXTEND HOLD ON LAMONE RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 27 — British forces, in conjunction with Polish troops of the 8th Army, yesterday extended their hold on the east banks of the Lamone River, new German delaying position across the Po Plain, to 11 miles, and, in a sudden thrust northeast, on the village of Russi, eight miles west of Ravenna and on the southernmost of the three main roads leading from this second largest Romagna city, it was announced here today.

Both infantry and tank forces of the 8th Army now face the Germans in their hastily-constructed defenses along the Lamone northeast and southwest of Faenza, and all enemy resistance east of the swollen and muddy stream along the 11-mile stretch has ceased, reports said.

Farther northeast, roughly midway between Faenza and Ravenna, 8th Army troops have crossed the Montone River, and are pushing between this river and the Lamone toward the southernmost of the three highways connecting Ravenna with the Po Valley highway network.

British troops forced a new crossing of the lower Montone River at a point some six miles northeast of Faenza to join British forces which had already established a bridgehead, to form a combined force which pressed northeast between the Lamone and Montone Rivers against enemy infantry supported by self-propelled guns.

This thrust — into an area where the enemy line is strung between the two river barriers — directly threatens from the flank the main enemy defenses of Ravenna along the Montone Estuary. The villages of Scaldino and Albereto, four and 5½ miles northeast of Faenza, were occupied by the advancing British troops.

Southwest of Faenza, a British infantry and tank column pushing forward from their bridgehead across the Marzeno, eastern tributary of the Lamone, were the first Allied units to breach this new enemy water barrier.

Subsequent action mopped up the last German units east of the Lamone all along the six-mile front from Faenza southwest to Brisighella. Other troops cooperated in this maneuver by advancing northward between the Marweno and the Lamone Rivers to capture Monte Bicocca, a dominating ridge stretching across country southeast of Brisighella.

On the 5th Army front, an enemy counter-attack, preceded by a heavy artillery barrage, was directed against Allied positions northeast of Monterumici, midway between the Prato-Bologna and the Florence-Bologna Highways, and 11½ miles south of Bologna. The attack was broken up, and prisoners were taken.

Several other enemy raids and attempts at infiltration by enemy patrol forces were beaten off along the 5th Army's front.

Fifth Army forces were consolidating their positions along their entire front, official reports said. (PRO)

SUPERFORTS BOMB TOKYO AGAIN, STRIKE BANGKOK

WASHINGTON, November 27 — For the second time within 72 hours, Saipan-based Superfortresses today bombed Tokyo in broad daylight, as another substantial force of

«Most of the munitions from the Japanese homeland, and large quantities of rice and other foodstuffs destined for Japan are funneled through the yards.»

The Associated Press also reported that comparatively few flyers from today's attack on Tokyo had taken part in last Friday's operation over the Japanese capital. The dispatch added that this latest assault was a striking demonstration of the impressive resources in planes and men available to the Allies for the bombing of Japan.

General Henry Arnold, commander of the USAAF, said here today that the Superfortresses were embarked on an all-out offensive designed to soften Japan for invasion.

Lieut. Gen. Harmon, Deputy Commander of the 20th USAAF, declared that additional Superfortresses already have arrived at Saipan since the initial attack on Friday. At a press conference, General Harmon said that the program for the bombardment of Japan was laid out on a strategic pattern similar to European operations against Germany.

He said that the size of the attacks would not equal in number of planes those sent against the Reich until additional bases have been seized. The General added: «Before we get through, however, we will have reached the scale of European operation, because our objectives are concentrated in a smaller area, and therefore will not require as many planes to neutralize.»

The Japanese aircraft works at Okayama on Formosa were so badly damaged in the October 14 assault by the 20th Bomber Command that «we do not have to go back there again, at least for some time,» General Arnold said in a radio broadcast yesterday.

He added that «in a strategic air force like ours, we bomb industries out of existence. We may have to hit the same factory many times before we destroy it, like an artillery man pumping shells into the fortification of Metz. The artilleryman's job is done when he has reached the fortifications; our job is done when the factory stops operating.»

NIMITZ ANNOUNCES SINKING OF 16 JAP SHIPS

PEARL HARBOR, November 27 — Sixteen Japanese ships, including a heavy cruiser and a destroyer, were sunk by carrier-based planes of the U.S. 3rd Fleet in attacks in the Philippine area last Friday, Amdiral Chester Nimitz, commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet, announced today.

Admiral Nimitz also reported that 72 Japanese planes were destroyed in the attacks.

There was no indication whether these actions were separate from the sinkings announced by General Douglas MacArthur during the past three days.

In a pattern of destruction to enemy shipping and installations, Navy planes on Friday hit enemy-held bases in the northern Palaus group, sinking three barges and starting many fires. The Bonin Islands, a little more than 600 miles from the Japanese mainland, were pounded by American heavy bombers and Navy search planes. Radio installations on the islands and shipping in the harbors were the targets for the attack.

Admiral Nimitz also reported «neutralization» raids on Japanese-held atolls in the Marshalls, the Marianas, and the Carolines. (OWI)

RAIN FORCES STANDSTILL ON LEYTE

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 27 — Terrific rain has brought ground fighting to a virtual standstill in the Ormoc corridor, General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced tonight.

SUPERFORTS BOMB TOKYO AGAIN, STRIKE BANGKOK

WASHINGTON, November 27 — For the second time within 72 hours, Saipan-based Superfortresses today bombed Tokyo in broad daylight, as another substantial force of Superforts from Indian bases dropped tons of explosives on Bangkok, capital of the Japanese puppet state of Thailand, in the first simultaneous east-west blow by B-29's, the War Department announced.

The industrial waterfront area of Tokyo was the principal objective in today's attack, a 20th USAAF communique released by the War Department tonight revealed. The announcement said that all aircraft returned safely from both attacks. Six Japanese fighters were destroyed, three probably destroyed, and two damaged.

The Tokyo bombing was done by instrument through a heavy cloud cover which prevented the observation of results. Anti-aircraft fire and fighter opposition were described officially as «virtually nil.»

Direct hits were scored on the «heart of the railroad target» at Bangkok, 2,865 miles southwest of the Japanese capital, the War Department said. That mission was described by an Associated Press correspondent as a «success.»

«The substantial force took advantage of perfect weather to lay heavy loads of demolition bombs squarely on rail shops at the north end of the yards, warehouses at the south end of the yards, and on intricate trackage between. Officially, the results of the bombings were called excellent,» he said.

«Intelligence officers estimated 15 locomotives were in the repair shops which were squarely hit. The Bansue yards and shops are the hub of Japanese rail transport in Southeast Asia. It is the greatest trans-shipping center in the whole area.

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 27 — Terrific rain has brought ground fighting to a virtual standstill in the Ormoc corridor, General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced tonight.

American Leyte-based planes dropped 235 tons of bombs on Japanese airdomes on Cebu, Negros, Davao, and Mindanao last Friday, the communique added. Thirty Japanese planes rose to intercept, and eight were shot down.

In a earlier communique, General MacArthur announced that 12 more Japanese ships have been sunk or damaged. A press tabulation said that Japanese attempts to reinforce their sorely-pressed Leyte forces have now cost them at least 19 transports and freighters, plus 14 escorting warships. It was estimated that 17,000 enemy troops were lost in four of these major reinforcement attempts. (OWI)

CHINESE ANNOUNCE FALL OF HOCHIH; AMERICANS EVACUATE NANNING

CHUNGKING, November 27 — The fall of Hochih, 95 miles west of Liuchow in Kwangsi Province, was announced by the Chinese High Command tonight.

Hochih is only 20 miles from the Kweichow border, and 120 miles southeast of Kweiyang, Burma town in Kweichow, where the invaders would be in a position to strike at the Chinese capital.

Loss of Hochih was announced shortly after it had been disclosed that the last forward American air base in south China, a fighter field at Nanning, had been abandoned by the 14th USAAF. The communique said the Japanese bypassed a railroad town 43 miles west of Liuchow, to reach Hochih, and attacked Chinese positions five miles west of Hochih.

An earlier communique by the American headquarters indicated the fate of Hoclith by announcing that fighters of the 14th USAAF bombed the city and strafed Japanese troops on the north side, thus driving them into the open.

An official announcement from Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer in Chungking said that two light enemy cruisers were damaged when a 14th USAAF Liberator bomber attacked an enemy convoy in the South China Sea. One of the cruisers received two direct hits. Another Liberator bomber was reported to have sunk a Japanese sub-chaser during a separate action.

East African forces on the Chindwin front in Burma have attacked Kalewa, and driven the Japanese out of their defenses seven miles from the town. The SEAC also said that the same forces had encountered only slight enemy opposition in their drive from the west. They also are maintaining their advance from the north.

In northern Burma, Chinese troops who encircled Bhamo yesterday have now consolidated their positions. In the Mogaung-Mandalay railway corridor north of Pinwe, British troops have consolidated their previous gains and enlarged their patrol activities on the roads east and west of the railway. Heavy Allied bomber attacks were carried out yesterday on the Rangoon-Mandalay railway. (OWI)

RED ARMY OFFENSIVE GAINS MOMENTUM

MOSCOW, November 27 — The new offensive into western Czechoslovakia, by General Petrov's troops of the 4th Ukrainian Front, toward the two key road and rail centers of Presov and Kassa (Kosice), gained momentum today.

Tonight's Soviet communique, while reporting only patrol and reconnaissance on other sectors of the Eastern Front, said that Russian troops had fought their way into more than 50 inhabited localities, including several stations on the important trans-Czechoslovakia railroad linking Przemyl, Poland, and Miskolcs, Hungary.

According to a Reuter correspondent, this latest Soviet thrust is «now assuming the appearance of a full-scale offensive on a front of at least 30 miles.» There are indications that the capture yesterday of Michalovce and Humenne has resulted in a considerable breach in the German line. Their badly-mauled forces are being forced back steadily through waterlogged valleys and pine-covered hills.

The retreat of the Nazi forces already is bringing a flanking threat to the German-Hungarian grouping in northeastern Hungary, as well as menacing the Germans to the southwest of the important Duklа Pass from Poland into Czechoslovakia.

Press dispatchs said tonight that if the Red Army can form a solid front from the Dukla Pass and Presov, and thence to Kassa, they will have deprived the Germans of one of their most valuable routes for switching men and materials across the Carpathians.

There are indications of growing German alarm at the present turn of events, and they have rushed up more Luftwaffe reinforcements, mainly FW-190's which are being dealt with in short order by the powerful air force supporting General Petrov's advance.

Although there was no mention in tonight's Soviet communique of the fighting at the approaches to Budapest, Moscow correspondents said that fierce fighting was taking place for the River Danube stretches north of the Hungarian capital. (Reuter)

ALLIED BOMBERS STRIKE TACTICAL OBJECTIVES

LONDON, November 27 — The weight of the Allied air offensive in western Europe was switched today from German oil installations to the tactical bombing of enemy communication center supplying the upper Rhineland armies. The Lancasters dropped many 12,000-pound «blast» bombs, of a different type from the 12,000-pound «earthquake» bombs which sank the Tirpitz. Returning pilots said that large fires were left burning over a wide area.

Other Bomber Command aircraft struck objectives in western Germany while night intruders attacked airfields well behind the enemy lines. One Bomber Command aircraft failed to return.

It was officially announced late tonight that, over the weekend, nearly 4,300 Allied planes blasted Nazi supply lines, destroying or severely damaging at least 56 locomotives, 248 oil cars, and 40 motor vehicles. These harassing attacks were carried out over a wide area from Rotterdam to Deventer, Düsseldorf, Münster, and Osnabrück.

In addition, rocket and bomb-carrying Typhoons of the 2nd TAF on Sunday destroyed a German headquarters in Amsterdam. The rocket-carriers went in first and set the structure on fire. A complete squadron-load of 1,000-pound bombs followed, and, to round off the task, two squadrons dropped 500-pound incendiaries into the wrecked buildings.

Damage and casualties were reported as a result of enemy air activity against southern England during the period from dawn Sunday to 0700 hours today.

Many women and children were killed or injured recently when a flying-bomb demolished a large store in southern England during a rush hour, when the store's «Toyland» was crowded with mothers and youngsters doing Christmas shopping. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

GERMAN MUNITIONS PLANT CAPTURED

LONDON, November 27 — United States 3d Army troops have captured a German ammunition plant and with it more than one million shells and other explosives, press dispatches reported today.

The plant was operated by the Germans just north of Buzonville in Lorraine, three miles from the Saar border. The plant was sprawled over 10 acres, skillfully camouflaged, and was believed to have employed at least 1,000 German-enslaved foreign workers, the dispatches said. (OWI)

TWO GERMAN GENERALS CAPTURED

LONDON, November 27 — The capture of two more German generals responsible for the defense of the fortress of Strasbourg was officially announced today. They are Maj. Gen. Franz Vaterrot, military commander of the city, and Maj. Gen. Utterspergen, engineer-commander responsible for the fortifications. General Vaterrot's chief of staff, Lieut. Col. Kaiser, also has been taken prisoner. (Reuter)

NINE ENEMY AIRCRAFT DOWNED OVER HUNGARY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 27 — Lightning fighters of the 15th USAAF yesterday destroyed nine enemy aircraft, including six JU-87 dive-bombers as they prepared to land at the Seregelyes airfield, 35 miles southwest of Budapest, it was announced today.

Despite intense flak and small-arms fire, the P-38 fighters swept low over the field, strafing gun positions, rail cars, and locomotives in the neighborhood of the airfield.

Bad weather again curtailed heavy bomber operations, and limited the Tactical Air Force to small-scale attacks on communication lines in the Po Valley and the battle area. (PRO)

ALLIED BOMBERS STRIKE TACTICAL OBJECTIVES

LONDON, November 27 — The weight of the Allied air offensive in western Europe was switched today from German oil installations to the tactical bombing of enemy communications immediately behind the front lines.

About 500 Liberators and Flying Fortresses of the 8th USAAF this morning attacked the marshalling yards at Offenburg, 10 miles southeast of recently-liberated Strasbourg, and about the same distance from the advancing American 7th and French 1st Armies. Bingen, important rail, river, and road junction 15 miles west of Mainz, also was hit. The heavy bombers were escorted by more than 250 Mustangs.

This afternoon, RAF Lancasters, escorted by fighters, struck at the railway marshalling yard in the Kalk district of the intricate rail network around Cologne.

Simultaneous with the American heavy bombers' attack, over 500 Thunderbolts and Mustangs, also of the 8th USAAF, carried out offensive sweeps against ground targets in northwest Germany. The Luftwaffe came up in some strength to meet the challenge, and American fighters encountered between 300 and 400 fighters. A heavy battle ensued and preliminary reports stated that 94 Nazi fighters were destroyed in combat and three others on the ground.

A Reuter correspondent said that large-scale ground strafing sweeps have been carried out by the USAAF since last April, but this is the first time that the Germans have sent up a big force of fighters to intercept.

Before dawn today, RAF Lancasters made a concentrated 15-minute attack on Munich, great industrial and

«DAILY MAIL» LAUDS ALEXANDER'S PROMOTION

LONDON, November 27 — Promotion of Sir Harold Alexander to the rank of Field Marshal and his appointment to the Supreme Command of the Mediterranean Theater is «a tribute to his fighting qualities and his brilliant leadership in Italy,» the Daily Mail said today in commenting on the action.

«Field Marshal Alexander is one of the greatest commanders this country has produced in our generation,» the paper said. «His whole record in this war proclaims it. He is the first in history to fight a campaign up the whole length of the Italian Peninsula, an he has done it with conspicuous success.

«It has been a long, slow, painful fight, and it is not over yet. He has been faced with opponents of no mean quality.»

In Belfast, the Acting Prime Minister of Northern Ireland, Major Maynard Sinclair, said that the entire country, from which Field Marshal Alexander comes, took pride in the promotion. In a telegram to the Field Marshal, he said: «We in Northern Ireland share in the pride of all your fellow Ulstermen in your brilliant achievements which have shown you to be one of the greatest soldiers of our time.» (Reuter-BBC)

MOUNTBATTEN CHIEF OF STAFF RETIRES

KANDY, CEYLON, November 27 — Lieutenant General Sir Henry Pownall, Chief of Staff to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, has relinquished his post because of illness, it was announced here today.

He will be succeeded by Lieut. Gen. Frederick A. M. Browning, deputy commander of the 1st Allied Airborne Army, and leader of the British 1st Airbone Division's heroic stand at Arnhem in September.

Major Gen. Horace H. Fuller has been named deputy Chief of Staff to succeed Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of all United States forces in China. (Reuter)

FINNS DRIVE GERMANS TOWARD NORWAY

HELSINKI, November 27 — Finnish troops, in a drive toward the junction of the Finnish, Swedish, and Norwegian frontiers, have occupied part of the town of Enontekio, today's communique reported. Enontekio is about 25 miles east of the Swedish border.

The advance was reported to be continuing toward Kilps Jarvi, 15 miles south of the junction of the three frontiers. (OWI)

YUGOSLAVS TIGHTEN RING AROUND NAZIS

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, November 27 — The Germans cut off in the Danilovgrad region of Montenegro have given up their original plan of attempting to break out of the tightening Yugoslav ring toward the west, today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters said. In fierce fighting, the Yugoslavs have made further penetrations of the enemy positions and the Germans are now massing strong forces for an attempt to break through from the town of Podgorica toward Sendjak.

In Serbia, bitter fighting is in progress with an isolated German group in the Ibar River sector.

In the Drina River Valley, which stretches from the town of Vvornik to the Sava River on the Visegrad-Sarajevo line, heavy fighting continues, under unfavorable weather conditions, with the Germans attempting to control dominating heights on their escape route.

The enemy is assembling forces of his 39th Division around the town of Gospic, and the 264th Division at Gracac, with the objective of smashing Yugoslav resistance in the Logorica district. Violent battles are in progress.

LECLERC'S ESCAPE FROM GERMANS DESCRIBED

PARIS, November 27 — The dramatic escape of Brig. Gen. Jacques Leclerc, commander of the French 2nd Armored Division and hero of Strasbourg, from a hospital under the noses of the Germans in 1940 and his incredible flight with still-bleeding wounds across France on a bicycle, was revealed by French authorities yesterday, according to an American press service.

Leclerc, then a captain under his real name Philippe de Haute Cloque, hid from the Germans in the houses of friends and relatives after his escape from the hospital. At a brother-in-law's château, he found the Nazis already in occupation, so he pretended to be an ailing friend of the family. Donning a dinner jacket, he dined with the Nazis, and even drank a toast to collaboration. Then he stole a Nazi bicycle, escaped again and made his way to Spain, the news service disclosed.

Following another arrest and another escape, he made his way to England and offered his services to Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

Leclerc, ordered by De Gaulle to liberate French Africa, arrived at the Cameroons with an army of 24 men and two native canoes, it was revealed by authorities.

However, this was enough to oust the Vichy garrison, and from there Leclerc went to Port Lamy, in Chad, where he organized a handful of men and several old automobiles — an army which later raided the desolate Fezzan region, taking one Italian garrison after another.

This march across thousands of miles of desert which few white men ever traversed ended triumphantly with a reunion in Tunis with the British 8th Army. (OWI)

UNITED NATIONS

STETTINIUS TO SUCCEED HULL

WASHINGTON, November 27 — President Roosevelt today nominated Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State to succeed Cordell Hull, whose resignation was accepted today by the President. The nomination was sent immediately to the Senate for confirmation.

Hull, who has been ill with a throat ailment for several weeks at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, tendered his resignation on his doctor's advice, in order to facilitate his recovery.

Stettinius has been serving as Acting Secretary of State since October 2. He was appointed Under Secretary in September, 1943, succeeding Sumner Welles. He is 44 years old.

The President told an informal news conference that it was with great and deep regret that he announced the resignation of the 72-year-old Secretary of State. He said that Hull would remain in close touch with him, acting as an advisor on foreign policy.

President Roosevelt visited Hull yesterday at the hospital, and Hull told him he felt that the welfare of the country and of the war might suffer if he continued in office at the present time under the conditions of his health.

Hull was appointed Secretary of State in 1933, holding office through Mr. Roosevelt's first three terms as President. He had been wholly occupied during the past months with the building of a United Nations' organization for peace.

GERMAN BALKAN ESCAPE ROUTES THREATENED

LONDON, November 27 — In a detailed analysis and elucidation of the «most confused pictured of warring humanity» in the Balkans, Lieut. General H. G. Martin, Daily Telegraph military correspondent, wrote today that the three key positions at the moment are Mostar, Sarajevo, and Brod.

«On the side of the pursuers,» the article said, «we have Tolbukhin's Russians and Bulgarians, Tito's Army of Liberation, and Albanian Patriots — leavened with a sprinkling of the British Land Forces Adriatic — with the Balkan Air Force active overhead; while on the side of the pursued, we have two streams of fugitive German divisions, one from the Aegean coast and the other from the Adriatic, both struggling to reach home by three paths kept precariously open.»

From Scutari, two or three German divisions are struggling to reach Mostar, and thence to Sarajevo, on which, meanwhile, are converging five or six German divisions from Greece, the said. From Sarajevo, the whole party must try to find its way to Brod, on the far bank of the Sava, and so to Zagreb on the route to Austria.

Referring to the «fanatical resolution» with which the Germans are fighting on their retreat, General Martin said:

«There is no magic about this transformation. With their strategic railways immediately behind them, they can replace casualties and guns quickly, whereas the Allies have to overcome smashed communications. On the longer view, however, Germany is doomed to destruction. Victory is merely delayed.

«It is obviously of major importance to the Allied cause that none of the three outlying German armies — in Finland, in the Balkans, and in the Kurland region of Latvia — should ever reach home. The Allies strongest card is the growing German manpower shortage.» (Reuter)

Leclerc, ordered by De Gaulle to liberate French Africa, arrived at the Cameroons with an army of 24 men and two native canoes, it was revealed by authorities.

However, this was enough to oust the Vichy garrison, and from there Leclerc went to Fort Lamy, in Chad, where he organized a handful of men and several old automobiles — an army which later raided the desolate Fezzan region, taking one Italian garrison after another.

This march across thousands of miles of desert which few white men ever traversed ended triumphantly with a reunion in Tunis with the British 8th Army. (OWI)

STETTINIUS TO SUCCEED HULL

WASHINGTON, November 27 — President Roosevelt today nominated Under Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., as Secretary of State to succeed Cordell Hull, whose resignation was accepted today by the President. The nomination was sent immediately to the Senate for confirmation.

Hull, who has been ill with a throat ailment for several weeks at the Bethesda Naval Hospital, tendered his resignation on his doctor's advice, in order to facilitate his recovery.

Stettinius has been serving as Acting Secretary of State since October 2. He was appointed Under Secretary in September, 1943, succeeding Sumner Welles. He is 44 years old.

The President told an informal news conference that it was with great and deep regret that he announced the resignation of the 73-year-old Secretary of State. He said that Hull would remain in close touch with him, acting as an advisor on foreign policy.

President Roosevelt visited Hull yesterday at the hospital, and Hull told him he felt that the welfare of the country and of the war might suffer if he continued in office at the present time under the conditions of his health.

Hull was appointed Secretary of State in 1933, holding office through Mr. Roosevelt's first three terms as President. He had been wholly occupied during the past months with the building of a United Nations' organization for peace.

The chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Senator Tom Connally, declared that Secretary Hull performed a magnificent task on behalf of peace and the setting up of an international organization. «The United States and the world suffered a misfortune in his resignation,» the Senator said. HURLEY NOMINATED U. S. AMBASSADOR TO CHINA

WASHINGTON, November 27 — Maj. Gen. Patrick H. Hurley today was nominated as American Ambassador to China by President Roosevelt to succeed Clarence E. Gauss, recently resigned.

General Hurley is at present in China with Donald M. Nelson, the President's personal representative, on a mission to the Chinese Government to increase war output there.

Secretary of War under President Herbert Hoover in 1932, Hurley has served the present Adiministration in various diplomatic capacities since the outbreak of war. At one time, he was American Minister to New Zealand. (OWI-Reuter)

EX-POLISH P. M. CONFERS WITH EDEN

LONDON, November 27 — While the Polish Government crisis still remained unsettled, Reuter tonight reported that Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, recently-resigned Polish Premier, today visited Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden at the Foreign Office.

The Daily Herald said that Jan Kwapinski, Socialist Deputy Prime Minister, is experiencing serious difficulty in forming a new cabinet. According to the paper, the Peasant Party has flatly refused to join any new government which will not continue Mikolajczyk's policy of seeking an agreement with Russia.

The article declared that the Christian Democrats are apparently willing to join a Kwapinski government, but there are still differences within the ranks of the Nationalists. The Social Democratic Party leaders are also still deliberating the question. (MOI)

DE GAULLE CONFERS WITH FAROUK

CAIRO, November 27 — General Charles de Gaulle conferred with King Farouk for more than an hour here today during a stop-over on his way to Moscow.

U. S. TROOPS FAVOR PEACE-TIME TRAINING

NEW YORK, November 27 — Advocating universal military training as a way of achieving U.S. national security, Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy said today, in a broadcast, that the American soldier's sentiment strongly favored peace-time universal military training, and that the military leaders also were unanimous in the belief in this system.

In informal but scientific sampling of opinion in 1943 and during 1944, McCloy said, two-thirds of U.S. fighting men in various theaters of operations voted in favor of military training for all young men in peace-time. Only 25 per cent would have the country rely upon the regular army supported by a volunteer system, he stated. (OWI)

CHINESE PRODUCTION TO BE DOUBLED, NELSON SAYS

CHUNGKING, November 27 — China's war output can be doubled within six months under present plans, Donald M. Nelson, former U. S. War Production Board head, said today after a preliminary survey available facilities.

The survey revealed that Chinese steel plants are working only one shift six days a week. Substantial production increases in this vital war material will result from putting the plants on a more intensive working schedule, Nelson pointed out.

Transportation problems and lack of demand, along with inflation, were also said to be hampering China's steel industry.

Indicating the crude nature of some of the materials the Chinese had to work with, one expert said he saw a plant where most of the distilling equipment was made from gasoline drums and milk cans. (OWI)

20 KILLED IN R.A.F. DEPOT EXPLOSION

LONDON, November 27 — Twenty persons were believed killed and many more injured by an explosion at a Royal Air Force maintenance depot several miles from Burton-on-Trent. More than 40 others were trapped in a nearby factory when the blast rocked the town. They are all believed to be safe.

The explosion damaged property many miles away, and was heard as far away as Coventry. Eye-witness accounts said that the whole countryside looked as though it had been through an earthquake or a heavy bombing attack. They said that there were craters everywhere.

SWINTON CALLS FOR «FAIR PLAY IN THE AIR»

CHICAGO, November 27 — Lord Swinton, Minister of Civil Aviation and British delegate to the International Air Conference here, asked a press conference yesterday for «fair play in the air, which would protect the interests of smaller countries.»

The main point of contention between Britain and the United States, he said, has been the question of an «unlimited fifth freedom» — freedom to pick up and set down passengers along the international route. Now Britain has agreed with the idea of a modified fifth freedom, he asserted.

Lord Swinton disclosed that Britain had reconsidered her original position of insisting on a very strong international force because she was convinced that the present organization would be equally effective. To have fair competition, Britain would insist on the inclusion in the proposed Air Agreement, of a clause giving to war devastated countries «a breathing spell» to establish new, or to reëstablish their old, airlines, he said. SFORZA JOINS LEADERS IN TALKS

ROME, November 27 — Representatives of the six parties comprising the Italian Committee of National Liberation have concluded their second day of deliberations at the Marescialli Palace concerning the selection of a new Prime Minister and cabinet to succeed Ivanoe Bonomi and the Italian coalition government which resigned yesterday. The discussions will be resumed at 1000 hours tomorrow.

A communique issued tonight stated that «several questions of a preliminary nature regarding the constitution and the program to be followed by the new government were examined and discussed.»

The meeting today also dealt at length on the relations of the Italian and Allied governments, the communique said.

Count Carlo Sforza, Minister Without Portfolio in the recent cabinet, presided at the meeting, which began at 1000 hours. He was invited last night by the party leaders to conduct united efforts to solve the crisis.

Meanwhile, a statement issued today by the Press Bureau of the Communist Party of Italy, charged that the Bonomi Government had collapsed because Bonomi, in effect, had asked the Communist Party to withdraw from the coalition government. The statement asserted that a major issue of dispute in the cabinet was pressure from the right wing to eliminate the office of High Commissioner for Sanctions Against Fascism.

The statement added that Bonomi «presented conditions which, being unacceptable by the Communist Party because they would change the political line of the present government, meant in fact an invitation to the Communist Party to withdraw from the present government coalition.»

The Communist Party denied assertions from some sources yesterday that the Communist and Socialist Parties had asked the Bonomi Government to adopt leftist policies, which the Christian Democratic Party and the Liberal Party refused to support.

Participation by Count Sforza in the meeting of party leaders this morning was a sign that, despite the circumstances which caused the rift in the coalition and ultimately led to the fall of the cabinet, all parties were desirous of strengthening the coalition to attain utmost efficiency in a democratic Italian government.

Today's conference of party leaders was a continuation of the nine-hour session they held last night to find a means to end the crisis. Reports from the meeting last night indicated that, while no selection of a new head of the government had been decided on, the party representatives emphasized that their primary objective was to strengthen their purpose to work together, regardless of political beliefs.

Before the party leaders continued their discussions this morning at the Marescialli Palace, Alcide de Gasperi, leader of the Christian-Democrat Party and a Minister Without Portfolio in the Bonomi Cabinet, conferred for 20 minutes with the Lieutenant General of the Realm at the Quirinal Palace. From there, De Gasperi went directly to the party-leaders meeting.

It was learned this morning that among those who were called in by the Lieutenant General of the Realm yesterday for consultation was Victor Emanuel Orlando, President of the Chamber of Deputies. The interview at the Quirinal Palace lasted an hour, after which the leaders of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies were called in to participate in the discussions. (UNN)

ITALIAN P.O.W.'S IN U. S. TO BE REPATRIATED

ROME, November 27 — Initial steps have been instigated for the repatriation of two groups of Italian prisoners of war now held in the United States, the Allied Commission announced here today.

The first group of 125 men includes those who are either sick or have been wounded. The second group will be comprised of men over 50 years of age, and who have been held prisoner at least two years. The total number in this group was not disclosed.

Previously, Italian prisoners had been returned to Italy individually.

These two groups, expected to arrive here in a few weeks, will bring the total number of Italian prisoners as internees, and until now have not been recognized in Germany as prisoners of war.

About 110,000 more Italian prisoners are either held in French territory, or their whereabouts is unknown.

This brings the total of Italians detained to 1,180,000, the Commissariat officials estimated. (UNN)

REGIONAL AUTONOMY FOR SICILY URGED

ACIREALE, SICILY, November 27 — The Christian Democratic Party was lauded as «the first to place the problem of Sicily's future in the field of regional autonomy,» when Salvatore Aldisio, High Commissioner for Sicily, spoke Saturday at the opening of the Party's second Regional Congress.

In an Order of the Day, the Congress resolved that «land property be considered in its social function, and that the needs of the people should not be deprived of any part of the national territory, either by selfishness or neglect.» (UNN)

These two groups, expected to arrive here in a few weeks, will bring the total number of Italian prisoners returned to their homes by the Allies to more than 12,000. Most of these have come here from North Africa, Britain, the Middle East, and India.

Establishment of a special department, called the Autonomous Office for War Veterans and Repatriation of Prisoners of War, set up by the Italian Ministry of War to supervise prisoners' reception at ports and their relocation, was announced today.

The broadcasts on which some of the names of returning prisoners are read have been changed, and will be heard in future at 2015 hours every Monday and Friday night, Radio Rome announced.

Still in the United States are about 50,000 other Italian prisoners of war who, by their voluntary cooperation, are helping with the harvest and doing other valuable work.

Elsewhere, the U. S. authorities have an additional 60,000 Italian prisoners of war, the Italian government's High Commissariat for Prisoners of War estimated the other day.

Italian prisoners held by the British total 350,000, and by the Russians, probably 70,000.

Italians in Germany total about 540,000, including an estimated 100,000 civilians. Most of the 100,000 were pressed into forced labor drafts. The 540,000 have been treated

LONDON, November 27 — Another of the loquacious German sub-leaders who, in the absence of the silent Hitler, have recently had much to talk about, found himself laughed at and booed from the platform when he addressed a newly-recruited Volksgrenadier Division in Vienna last week.

Der Führer's echo most recently heard from was Baldur von Schirach, leader of the Hitler Youth and Gauleiter of Vienna, who made a "morale" speech to a Vienna's Volksgrenadier Division. He was forced to leave the platform when he made the mistake of saying, "My friends, how I wish that I could go with you." MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 27 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

East of Faenza, 8th Army troops are advancing in a northeasterly direction toward Russi.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

South of Faenza, British troops, from their bridgehead over the River Marzeno, in conjunction with their Polish allies, have cleared all enemy resistance east of the River Lamone, northeast of Brisighella.

Advances have also been made north of Modigliana, and Monte Bicocca and Monte Pruneto have been captured.

American and British troops of the 5th Army have repulsed several strong raids on their positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Bad weather yesterday again impeded all air operations.

A force of fighters from the Strategic Air Force carried out a successful sweep over an airfield southwest of Budapest, in Hungary, and strafed rail and road transport in the area.

Rail communications in the central Po Valley, as well as guns, fortified buildings, and other military objectives in the battle areas of northern Italy, were attacked by fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force.

In these operations, nine enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 11 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew over 500 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 27 — Today's communique:

Allied forces continuing to clear the Maas pocket have reached the river between Blitterswijk and Brufekhuizen.

North of the Venlo defenses, only scattered pockets of the enemy remain west of the Maas.

Fighters and fighter-bombers supporting our ground forces in Holland hit gun positions, strongpoints, and fortified buildings. Medium and fighter-bombers struck at communications, transports, airfields, and military barracks in northern and eastern Holland, and over the German frontier.

In the Geilenkirchen area, enemy troop concentrations and armored units were attacked by fighter-bombers.

In the area west of Jülich, we contained counter-attacks by infantry and tanks.

Farther south, Weisweiler has been cleared after stubborn house-to-house fighting, and we advanced to the east.

Fighting continues for high ground south of Langerwehe, and our forces continued to make slow progress in the forest south of Hürtgen.

South of Jülich, fighter-bombers broke up a counter-attack by enemy armor. Other fighter-bombers bombed Düren and Langerwehe, and troops and gun positions in the area.

Communications and transport behind the enemy lines in Germany were attacked by fighter-bombers which hit rolling stock in the Cologne, Coblenz, and Giessen areas.

Railway yards at Rheydt were targets for escorted medium bombers.

Fortified towns along the Saar River were bombed by fighter-bombers.

Southwest of Merzig, in the Saar Valley, our forces reached Oberesch.

General gains were made in the area east of Metz, despite enemy counter-attacks.

Fort Sommy and Fort Saint Blaize were captured, and Fort Marival was abandoned by the enemy.

Allied units made gains of 1½ miles to take Ricrange, 17 miles northeast of Metz and other elements are in Zimmingen, northwest of Saint Avold.

Gutenbrünner Wald, north of Finstingen, has been cleared and we advanced up to three miles to reach Hundkirch.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During November 27, our troops disabled or destroyed 21 German tanks. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 27 — Today's communique:

On the night of November 17, a group of Patriots attacked 50 Fascists at Canalutto di Torreano, in Udine Province. In the violent clash which ensued, six of the enemy were killed and 15 wounded.

On October 13, Patriots blew up 200 yards of track on the San Vito al Tagliamento-Portogruaro line.

A railway bridge was completely destroyed at Latisana.

A German engineer supervising defense work in the area between Rivignano and Varmo was killed by Patriots on October 12.

At Udine, some 20 men between the ages of 16 and 60, who had been drafted into forced labor groups, escaped during an air raid. (UNN)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 27 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the battle for Aix la Chapelle, the situation generally remained unchanged, though strong offensive operations continued. The Americans were ousted from several localities.

In the Hürtgen Forest the enemy pressure increased. Grim fighting is in progress for its eastern outlets. The enemy gained a little forest ground after having suffered many casualties, and lost a considerable number of tanks.

The garrisons of several forts in the neighborhood of Metz continued to offer resistance.

At the northeastern frontiers of Lorraine, the U. S. 3rd Army launched fresh attacks with strong forces on a broad front. They were halted east of Sierck in front of our positions.

At Bolchen and west of St. Avold, the enemy made but little gains. Our troops destroyed 14 tanks in the course of the fighting.

In the Strasbourg area, there was no major fighting.

Grim fighting is in full swing for the Markirch Pass and the mountain summits southeast of Gerardmer.

In upper Alsace, the enemy again attempted to open the Gateway of Burgundy by concentric attacks proceeding from the area northeast of Belfort and southwest of Mülhouse.

At Masmünster, his attacks collapsed with heavy losses.

At the Swiss frontier, the enemy succeeded in achieving another penetration with strong tank forces along the Delle-Basel Road.

London, Antwerp, and Liége continue to be subjected to our long-range bombardment.

Allied units made gains of 1½ miles to take Ricrange, 17 miles northeast of Metz and other elements are in Zimmingen, northwest of Saint Avold.

Gutenbrünner Wald, north of Finstingen, has been cleared and we advanced up to three miles to reach Hunkirch.

North of Sarrebourg, we repulsed counter-attacks and regained lost ground.

Our forces advancing from the Saint Dié region pushed through Saales Pass in the Vosges Mountains, and reached the Alsace Plain west of Strasbourg. Our grip on Strasbourg was tightened with the capture of a dozen forts near the city. Prisoners include two generals.

In the southern Vosges, further progress was made toward clearing the enemy from mountain passes and narrowing the salient in the Belfort Gap.

Ammunition and fuel dumps at Homburg, Geissen, and Bergsadern were attacked without loss by medium and light bombers.

Escorted heavy bombers, without loss, attacked objectives in western Germany. (Reuter)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 27 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the battle for Aix la Chapelle, the situation generally remained unchanged, though strong offensive operations continued. The Americans were ousted from several localities.

In the Hürtgen Forest the enemy pressure increased. Grim fighting is in progress for its eastern outlets. The enemy gained a little forest ground after having suffered many casualties, and lost a considerable number of tanks.

The garrisons of several forts in the neighborhood of Metz continued to offer resistance.

At the northeastern frontiers of Lorraine, the U. S. 3rd Army launched fresh attacks with strong forces on a broad front. They were halted east of Sierck in front of our positions.

At Bolchen and west of St. Avold, the enemy made but little gains. Our troops destroyed 14 tanks in the course of the fighting.

In the Strasbourg area, there was no major fighting.

Grim fighting is in full swing for the Markirch Pass and the mountain summits southeast of Gerardmer.

In upper Alsace, the enemy again attempted to open the Gateway of Burgundy by concentric attacks proceeding from the area northeast of Belfort and southwest of Mülhouse.

At Masmünster, his attacks collapsed with heavy losses.

At the Swiss frontier, the enemy succeeded in achieving another penetration with strong tank forces along the Delle-Basel Road.

London, Antwerp, and Liége continue to be subjected to our long-range bombardment.

Italy:

In central Italy, in the Faenza sector, the defensive success of our troops yesterday urged an offensive action upon the British 8th Army. In the afternoon, the enemy lauched fresh attacks on both sides of the town. His attacks remained unsuccessful.

At Mount Belvedere, southwest of Vergato, the fighting continues.

Eastern Front:

Mixed enemy formations have been launching fierce attacks on the road center Knin, northeast of Sibenik in Dalmatia, for some time. They were frustrated.

West of Apatin and Batina, our divisions are engaged in grim fighting against Bolshevik forces.

Between Budapest and Tokay, the power of the Soviet attacks abated .The Bolsheviks lost 22 tanks in local attacks, which were all smashed by the effective defense of one of our army corps.

Bombers struck successfully by night at enemy supply columns in the Budapest sector, and at troop concentrations and reserves at Mohac. A bridge spanning the Danube was destroyed.

In Kurland, yesterday, the enemy did not continue his major attack, owing to the heavy losses suffered in men and material.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers which had penetrated northwestern and central Germany, under a strong fighter screen, dropped bombs, particularly on residential districts of several towns and numerous rural municipalities.

Particularly serious damage was caused in Hamm and the town of Hanover, which had several times formed the target of the last enemy raids. Eighty-eight enemy bombers were brought down, 61 of which were four-engined bombers. Enemy bombers attacked Munich during the night.

Naval:

Submarines sank six ships, totalling 33,500 tons, and three destroyers out of an enemy convoy, in grim fighting.

GERMAN

Wilhelmstrasse Comment on Hull: The German Foreign Office today has announced, in what D.N.B. calls an «official statement,» its reaction to the reports of the resignation of Secretary of State Hull:

«... Roosevelt wanted to use Hull for personal purposes in two presidential elections because of Hull's strong position, particularly in the Southern states. Now that Roosevelt has been reelected, he need no longer take this consideration into account. Berlin leaves open the question as to whether, apart from reasons of health, any questions concerning the world security problem were also responsible for Hull's resignation.»

Western Front: The correspondent Martin Hallensleben today describes the «large-scale battle» in the Aachen sector as «stationary» in comparison with the «bitter battle for Alsace-Lorraine» farther south.

There appears a hint of wilful mystery about the German strategic intentions: «Events so far have not yet disclosed definite items as to the ultimate intentions of the German Command. The German Command, as has become absolutely clear, is rather striving for adapting its defence to the intentions of the enemy; that is, to shift the gravity-centre of defence to the point where the French 1st Army and American 3rd Army hope to launch a decisive blow.» (It will be noted that increasingly frequent in German despatches now is the simple, non-propaganda term «French Army» rather than the once almost exclusively used term «Gaullist Army.»)

Eastern Front: German cources appear to be expressing a troubled uncertainty as to the forthcoming Russian strategy. The Transocean correspondent, Colonel von Olberg, notes that «calm reigns along the Eastern Front,» but calls it a «suspicious calm.» Where the post-calm storm is to strike, is evidently not clearly envisaged. Von Olberg states:

«It cannot be foreseen yet whether the Soviet Command will bring up further reinforcements,» or whether «it will give up its strategic plan of insisting on removing the Germans from Latvia before starting its large-scale offensive. Indications of a coming offensive have been accumulating...»

Lull on 8th Army Front: The Fascist radio tonight reports a state of temporary calm in the Adriatic sector of the 8th Army front. Supposedly, the British forces were «forced to suspend their offensive activity, owing to recent heavy losses in men and material.» Limited activity was reported south of Bologna. The 2300 broadcast spoke of lively enemy activity on both sides of Faenza.

Papacy in the White House: Thanksgiving Day, and the celebration thereof by Allied troops in Europe, has inspired a curious and somewhat tardy philippic. President Roosevelt's «Messianic» Thanksgiving proclamation is treated by Fascist commentators as a cynical, adventitious expression of martial megalomania. «The world has a new Pope;» Pope Roosevelt is introduced as an autocratic figure far outshadowing Pope Pius XII in his dominion over «Catholics, Protestants of every hue, members of the Orthodox Church, and Jews, amounting to more than a billion souls.» The fact that the Allied observance of Thanksgiving took place in the American Episcopal Church in Rome is interpreted as symbolic of of the decline of Vatican prestige.

Badoglio, Radames of Our Time: In a somewhat tenuous analogy, involving Verdi's magnum opus and the historic problem of turn-coats, a Fascist commentator presents the «dilemma» of Badoglio, the modern Radames. The apocryphal situation of the liquidation of Badoglio is presented as the inevitable «next step.» following the current agitation against General Messe, which bloodthirstiness, in turn, is viewed as the natural follow-up to the arrest of General Roatta.

Postulating that the communists will shortly be as exigent in the Badoglio case as they now are about General Messe, the commeniator adds that the Negus has already requested that Badoglio be judged.

General Alexander in Disgrace?: «As a result of differences on the conduct of the war in Italy, General Alexander has been dismissed and replaced by General Clark. The dismissal has been camouflaged with a promotion to the rank of Marshal, and the appointment of Alexander to be Supreme Commander in the Mediterranean.»

WILSON SUCCEEDS DILL IN WASHINGTON: ALEXANDER APPOINTED FIELD MARSHAL

LONDON, November 26 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill has appointed General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson to be head of the British Joint Staff Mission in Washington and his personal representative on military matters with President Roosevelt, in succession to the late Field Marshal Sir John Dill.

After this appointment, the following appointments, which were the result of agreement between the Prime Minister and President Roosevelt, have been announced:

General Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander to be Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean Theater.

Lieutenant General Mark Clark, U. S. Army, to be Commander-in-Chief of the Allied 15th Army Group in Italy.

[illegible] will be regulated in accordance

Panzer Grenadier formations of the German 26th Panzer Division were so badly battered in the battle of the Cosina River bridgeheads that they were unable to offer any effective resistance, and only strong infantry reinforcements, rushed across the Lamone River to meet the advancing British forces, enabled them to be extricated.

British forces occupied three villages to the east of Faenza in their advance, as well as one to the south, and were engaged in clearing enemy stragglers from the suburb of Borgo Durbecco, just across the Lamone River from Faenza.

With the capture of Biagio and San Barnaba, three miles east of Faenza, and San Giovanni, two miles to the east of the Po Valley town, British forces dislodged the enemy from the entire area north of the Po Highway and east of the Lamone River as far as the hamlet of Reda, four miles northeast of Faenza.

British patrol forces had already reached Reda, while other units mopped up enemy rear-guard forces left behind in the German retreat.

To the south, British forces occupied the village of Santa Lucia delle Spianate, on the east bank of the Marweno River 2½ miles from Faenza, while Polish troops pressed north and west to occupy Monte Lodolone and the village of Pirtramora, 5½ and six miles from the Po Valley town.

Enemy Line Crosses 3 Rivers

The enemy line across the southeastern end of the Po Plain now sprawls across three rivers as a result of the latest German retreats.

In the center and most crucial sector, German forces are deployed behind the barrier of the Lamone River, northeast and east of Faenza.

From a point a mile south of Faenza, and just above the junction point of the Marzeno and Lamone Rivers, the enemy positions now more-or-less conform with the line of the Marzeno along a nine-mile stretch to Modiglinno, held by Indian troops of the 5th Army.

Northeast of Faenza, enemy forces are stretched across-country between the Lamone and the Montone, which is held in strength by enemy forces for a 16 mile stretch to the Adriatic Sea just south of Ravenna.

American troops of the 5th Army made limited advances yesterday on a seven-mile-long, wedge-shaped salient west of the Reno River, 25 miles southwest of Bologna, and cutting deeply into enemy mountain defenses north of Pistoia.

Six small communities were occupied in the advance, one of the first significant changes in the 5th Army front in recent weeks.

The principal position occupied by the American forces was Monte Belvedere, five miles northwest of Porretta, a town on the Pistoia-Bologna Highway, 18 miles north of Pistoia.

BRITISH REACH LAMONE RIVER NORTH OF FAENZA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 26 — British infantry forces of the 8th Army, exploiting their smashing defeat of two crack German divisions, yesterday reached the Lamone River along a five-mile stretch east and northeast of Faenza, and crossed the Marzeno River, principal tributary of the Lamone, to establish a strong bridgehead just one mile south of the important Po Valley town, it was announced here today.

Hemmed in on both the east and the south, German forces are frantically digging defenses along the Lamone's west banks, and are fortifying houses in the town. Both the road bridges across the Lamone at Faenza have been demolished by the Germans.

German forces south of Faenza have been demoralized by the swift British thrusts, which have established a mile-wide bridgehead over the Marzeno, and are now pressing rapidly forward to the Lamone River, curving southwest of Faenza against only « disorganized resistance. »

With the capture of Biagio and San Barnaba, three miles east of Faenza, and San Giovanni, two miles to the east of the Po Valley town, British forces dislodged the enemy from the entire area north of the Po Highway and east of the Lamone River as far as the hamlet of Reda, four miles northeast of Faenza.

LATE BULLETINS

ITALIAN PARTIES TO CONTINUE TALKS

ROME, November 26 —Discussions into the selection of a new Italian Prime Minister, following the resignation of the Bonomi Cabinet today, were postponed until 1000 hours tomorrow at the Marescialli Palace, following an all afternoon and evening conference which adjourned at 2315 hours tonight.

Count Carlo Sforza has been invited to preside at tomorrow's meeting of the six parties of the Committee of National Liberation.

The Lieutenant General of the Realm, however, is expected to continue his discussions with representatives of the six parties with a view to assisting in the task of selecting a Prime Minister. (UNN)

Enemy forces launched a counter-attack in an effort to regain this mountain peak at the apex of the 5th Army penetration, and also massed artillery concentrations northwest of the village of Bombiana, four miles north of Porretta, to contain the American assault.

Guanella, Gaggio, Montano, Casaccia, Fioppa, Grecchia, and Pozza, all within the new salient, were the villages occupied. (PRO)

ALLIES GAIN IN BATTLE FOR THE RUHR

LONDON, November 26 — Nazi elite formations and panzer divisions, fighting the crucial Battle of the Ruhr, were unable today to check the slow, steady push of Allied troops toward the upper Rhine. In bloody fighting, they were being pushed back in vital territory more heavily defended than any encountered thus far by the Allies.

Troops of the American 1st Army, edging their way down the main Cologne Highway, reached another milestone in their push eastward when they entered the fortified German village of Weisweiler. Six and a half miles from the road junction of Düren, Weisweiler is four miles east of Eschweiler, German stronghold taken a few days ago. Late press reports said that the town, for which fighting has been going on for two days, is almost entirely in Allied hands.

In the same sector, directly to the south, troops of the American 1st Army pressed ahead in the battle to break out of the Hürtgen Forest to the plain east of Cologne. This morning's communique reported fighting on the eastern fringe of the forest, near the village of Hürtgen.

Tonight, a staff officer told correspondents: «We are not out of the forest yet. The Germans are fighting stubbornly, with no indications yet of any collapse». Front-line dispatches were unanimous in emphasizing the fury of the battle, and the intensity of the German defense was interpreted as an all-out commitment on the part of the Nazi High Command to fight out the Battle of the Ruhr west of the Rhine.

To the north, the British 2nd Army tonight held an almost unbroken stretch of the west bank of the Meuse River, from the general area of Venlo to Roermond. Only in the immediate vicinity of Venlo — a key communications center — are the Germans still entrenched on the west bank. Fighting is raging on the western edges of the town, and Allied troops were officially reported in the vicinity of the villages of Swölgen and Grubbenvorst, north of Venlo.

The Associated Press said that the German retreat across the river had been blocked by Allied destruction of the bridges leading to the center of Venlo, on the east bank of the river.

In the Geilenkirchen area, to the south, American 9th Army troops encountered heavy panzer opposition in their eastward push.

Here, fighting was centered in the areas of Beek and Würm.

Americans Reported Inside Merzig

The U. S. 3rd Army drove ahead from its bridgehead on the east bank of the Saar River, and tonight was holding a 16-mile front inside Germany. In a two-mile advance, these troops were reported to be within striking distance of the German road and communications center of Merzig with the capture of a village four miles to the south. The Columbia Broadcasting System reported the Americans already inside Merzig, while other press dispatches said that the swift thrust had carried the 3rd Army units seven miles east of the Saar River.

129 NAZI PLANES DESTROYED BY 8TH U.S.A.A.F.

LONDON, November 26 — United States fighter pilots destroyed 110 German fighters in air combats over Germany today, when 1,800 8th USAAF bombers and fighters attacked a large oil refinery at Misburg, near Hanover; a railway viaduct at Bielefeld; the marshalling yards at Hamm; and other targets in northwest Germany, it was officially announced tonight. Bomber crews claimed the destruction of 12 enemy intercepting aircraft, and escort pilots strafing ground targets reported the destruction of seven parked planes.

Air crews said that the Nazis sent up swarms of fighters. As many as 100 at one time were sighted in the air south of Hanover. The press service said that the 700 Thunderbolt and Mustang fighters escorting the 1,100 bombers met the German aircraft as they strove to penetrate the protective cordons to get at the bombers. One fighter group reported destroying 25 German fighters in a group of 100.

Thirty-seven bombers and 13 fighters failed to return to their bases.

The oil refinery at Misburg, which was attacked through cloud, was last bombed on November 4. At one time the plant was capable of producing 220,000 tons of synthetic oil a year for the German war machine. This production, however, has been more than halved by recent raids.

The rail lines running through Hamm and Bielefeld supply the German armies on the Netherlands front.

Today's big assault followed two concentrated attacks by RAF Mosquitoes last night on the important communication center in southern Germany of Nürnberg.

Nürnberg Brightly Illuminated

The lights of Nürnberg were burning brightly when the RAF planes arrived over the town last night, an Air Ministry communique said today. As the markers dropped, the lights were put out, but they came on once more during the attack and then went out again. The first bomb was dropped at midnight, and three hours later more Mosquito squadrons returned to the attack.

Other objectives were attacked in western Germany, and night intruders strafed airfields behind the German lines. One aircraft is missing from the night's operations.

During the night, enemy air activity was directed against southern England, and casualties were reported, the Ministry of Home Security announced today.

Twelve bombers and five fighters are missing from Saturday's operations, in which more than 1,000 American heavy bombers, escorted by an equal number of fighters, attacked two synthetic oil plants near Merseburg, and oil storage and rail facilities at Bingen, a communique said today.

Allied armies on the western front had a good measure of air support Saturday. RAF rocket-firing planes attacked German troops concentrations north of Geilenkirchen, and 8th USAAF aircraft flew over 1,000 sorties, attacking targets stretching from Düren, in the north, to the French 1st Army front, in the south. The American aircraft met no German fighters, and anti-aircraft fire was light. One American fighter and nine bombers are missing from these close-support operations.

This morning Bomber Command Lancasters, escorted by Mustangs and Spitfires of Fighter Command, attacked objectives in western Germany. None of the aircraft was missing.

Enemy shipping off the Dutch and northwest German coasts was attacked early this morning by Beaufighters and Wellingtons of RAF Coastal Command. The Beaufighters, equipped with rockets, torpedoes, and cannon, left one small [illegible] on fire and sinking. All the aircraft returned safely.

The Columbia Broadcasting System reported the Americans already inside Merzig, while other press dispatches said that the swift thrust had carried the 3rd Army units seven miles east of the Saar River.

The 3rd Army was also reported to have thrown back heavy Nazi counter-attacks in the Nancy area.

Action continued favorable at the southern end of the front, where the Allied pincers squeezed tighter on an estimated 50,000 trapped German troops. American units are already more than 11 miles above captured Strasbourg, and are approaching flat terrain where armor can be brought into full play.

The American 7th and French 1st armies also advanced east of Metz.

A delayed report told of a visit by General Eisenhower to recently liberated Sarrebourg last Friday, while fighting raged five miles from the town. He was accompanied by Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley.

All of Strasbourg is now cleared, with the exception of a small German force at the approaches to the main Rhine bridge, SHAEF reported. Five thousand prisoners have been taken in the city thus far.

A British United Press dispatch told of heavy German counter-attacks yesterday to cut the Allied supply line and break through to the liberated city, but after a full day's fighting they were being held by Allied guns. Meanwhile, Allied units pushed through the Vosges Mountains, surrounding isolated enemy groups and breaking them up into small pockets for ultimate defeat and capture.

RED ARMY THRUSTS INTO CZECHOSLOVAKIA

MOSCOW, November 26 — The 4th Ukrainian Army has captured Michalovce and Humenne in eastern Czechoslovakia, Marshal Stalin announced tonight in an Order of the Day. The communique also reported that more than 60 other towns and settlements were seized in Czechoslovakia.

The capture of the vital Hungarian rail junction of Hatvan, key to the enemy defences northeast of Budapest, was also announced tonight.

The Red Army swept aside crumbling enemy resistance and, in a four-mile advance across flooded, roadless country and mountain streams, broke into Michalovce in a relentless push that carried them to within 30 miles of the important city of Kassa.

According to Reuter, the tributaries of the Tisza, upon one of which Michalovce stands, have broadened into lake-like stretches two or three miles wide. In rubber boats, small but powerfully-armed groups of Red Army troops were ferried over to outflank and cut off the Germans.

Both Humenne and Michalovce, a five-way junction, stand astride the vital trans-Czechoslavakia railroad linking Przemyl, in Poland, and Miskolcz, in Hungary. Only one important junction on the railroad, the clearance of which would give the Red Army an important through supply route, remained in enemy hands. This was the Hungarian border town of Satoraljaujhely, and one press dispatch late tonight said that Soviet spearheads were already pressing toward the junction.

With the capture of Hatvan, in Hungary, the Red Army has further tightened its grip on the enemy escape lines from Budapest, preparatory to the opening of the final battle for the Hungarian capital.

A Reuter correspondent in Moscow said today that it was as yet too early to speak of a general Hungarian collapse, but the rot had begun to set in which may give an unexpected turn to the battle for Budapest.

In the capital, disgust with puppet Premier Szalasi and his assistants is growing. According to the Soviet paper Red Star, Hungarians, fleeing from Budapest to Soviet-occupied territory, said that there had been street fighting in the city.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling, and, in several places, engagements of local importance, took place.

The military commentator of the German news agency said yesterday that the German High Command expects, at any moment, the « great new Russian winter offensive. »

17,000 JAPS KILLED TRYING TO REACH LEYTE

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 26 — The Japanese lost 16 transports and 14 escorting warships in recent attempts to reinforce their troops on Leyte, a recapitulation of enemy losses showed in General Douglas MacArthur's communique today.

Equally great a loss to the enemy were the 17,000 troops who went down in the transports that were sunk, the inventory of destruction of the Japanese ships revealed.

General MacArthur's accounting includes the destruction of three out of four Japanese vessels intercepted by American planes off the Island of Cebu. In a mast-height bombing and strafing attack, three of the transports were sunk and the fourth left blazing from stem to stern. Two thousand enemy troops were lost, together with valuable war materials.

American troops on Leyte cleared the Japanese from heights east of Limon as American artillery destroyed many Japanese batteries. General MacArthur reported his 24th Infantry Division to be clearing the enemy out of Capoocan and Pinamopoan, both on the northern coastal strip along Carigara Bay, while the U.S. 7th Division broke up an enemy night attack at Palanas, 11 miles south of Ormoc, main Japanese escape port.

American air action over Leyte itself included a heavy bomber attack against enemy supply installations at Ormoc, while American dive-bombers struck at Valencia and the airfield there. Six enemy planes were shot down in this area.

Neutralizing raids continued throughout the Southwest Pacific when American bombers carried out attacks against Japanese supply lines and coastal shipping, airfields, and enemy installations, and Japanese supply dumps and transportation in an arc running from the Solomon Islands, to New Guinea, to the Philippines.

A United States communique today announced that Netherlands submarines operating under U.S. control in the Netherlands East Indian waters have sunk 4,300 tons

RADAR DEVICE PIERCES CLOUDS OF REICH

AT A 15TH USAAF BOMBER BASE, SOUTH ITALY, November 21 (Delayed) — A sensational radar device, developed by British and American scientists and airmen, has enabled Allied heavy bombers to attack vital targets of the Reich regardless of smoke screens or bad weather by actually piercing clouds to give bombers a new kind of visibility, it can now be revealed.

The device, known to airmen as the « Mickey, » has already been used extensively, but its existence has been veiled in the closest secrecy. Although communiques have referred only to targets « bombed by instrument, » it was this device, it can be revealed, which aided the 15th USAAF to bring to a successful conclusion its tremendous bombing program against Ploesti, the chief source of German oil.

Operating like the fluoroscope, this new radar device reproduces a constantly-changing map, much like a contour or photographic map, of the path the plane is pursuing. Electrical impulses from the transmitting part of the device, which, according to one expert, contains more parts than all the rest of the complex mechanism of a modern bomber put together, speed far ahead of the plane, and are reflected from vertical surfaces, and absorbed by flat, to give this contour effect when picked up and reproduced on a glass dial.

With this picture of the area which the plane is approaching before him, the radar operator can identify, by the aid of special contour maps, the landmarks along his course and the target to be bombed, even to the extent of singling out a specific part of a city.

Ships at sea can be distinguished, and industrial installations such as large factories, oil refineries, or marshalling yards can be singled out from the surrounding area by the outlines they present. Since the radar device depends upon energy waves far shorter than those of light, they are unaffected by the densest thunderclouds, or protective smoke screens.

Utility Against Japan

The strategic importance of this Allied weapon, described by one of its pioneer users as « one of the most important weapons of this war, » is not confined to its application in round-the-season bombing of Germany, although this alone would make its announcement sensational. In addition to depriving Germany of what has proved to be its staunchest ally, cloudy weather which has hidden the vital military installations of the Wehrmacht for an average of 20 days out of every 30 each winter month, the new radar device promises to be a decisive factor in bombing Japan, where sea-ringed islands are almost constantly wreathed in mists. Also the new instrument is of enormous value in navigation, enabling the navigator to keep constant check on his position, and fly straight toward the target regardless of weather. Since water either absorbs or scatters the beams sent ahead, islands stand out with extraordinary prominence, so that they can be identified from afar and a straight course laid by them.

Perhaps the most spectacular results obtained by the use of the instrument were on the eve of the Allied landings on the shores of southern France. The enemy had sown the beaches with minefields and obstacles, which had to be cleared before the Allied troops could pour ashore. The bombers had to be at their targets by first-light, just before the troopships and lighters came in to discharge the assault forces, so that the planes were faced with the difficult task of navigation across the Mediterranean from Italy to the Riviera, by night. By the use of the radar device, their paths were clearly defined, with island landmarks and coastline contours plainly visible despite darkness and night mists. By fixing their bomb runs on the details furnished by this

The announcement also stated that of the 854 Jap ships sunk by U.S. submarines to date, 80 were combat ships and 774 non-combat craft. Included in the combat ships were 39 destroyers, 11 cruisers, three tenders, and 27 other types of warships.

CHINESE PENETRATE CHEFANG VALLEY

CHUNGKING, November 26 — Chinese troops driving on Chefang, major objective along the Burma Road on the Yunnan front, have cleared the last enemy pockets of resistance from the mountain passes dividing Mangshih and the Chefang Valley and have penetrated the valley itself, last night's Chinese communique reported. Chinese troops had already occupied Mengka, 10 miles east of Chefang, on Friday.

Remnants of the Japanese garrison are fleeing southward. One Chinese column has pushed to within five miles of Chefang, and, farther west, another column crossed the Nam Hkwan River in several places, the communique added.

Fliers of the 14th USAAF flew over 100 sorties against Japanese troops and installations in the Chefang area.

By the use of the radar device, their paths were clearly defined, with island landmarks and coastline contours plainly visible despite darkness and night mists. By fixing their bomb runs on the details furnished by this instrument, the bombardiers were able to lay their bomb pattern along the landing areas, reducing mines and obstructions. Although Allied ships swarmed in the waters off these beaches and the bombers roared over their heads, not one was touched by the tremendous cascade of bombs, for they, too, showed clearly in the device, to the last single landing craft.

The radar device has been developed to such a degree of reliability that nearly all heavy-bomber missions flown by the 15th USAAF now employ it either as a navigational aid or pathfinder, or actually to take aim at bomb targets.

Inventors of the technique which makes the 15th USAAF an all-weather air force point out that it is substantially different from the RAF night-bombing plan. Instead of relying on identification of the target by pathfinder aircraft and visual observation of marker flares, the Liberators and Fortresses use instruments both to locate and bombard their targets, without the need of any visual aid whatsoever.

Used in this way, the «Mickey» enabled a formation of heavy bombers to carry out an attack on one of the Ploesti oilfields on April 15, when, otherwise, the planes would have been forced to return because of inability to pick up their landmarks.

By August, practically every group of Liberators and Flying Fortresses in the 15th USAAF was provided with the equipment.

How far-reaching the effects of this new weapon will be no one can forecast. But that it will carry the attack, and the enormous strain it involves, to Germany at any hour of the day or night, throughout this winter, is assured. Nor will its future be confined to this war, for when peace has restored world air routes, this device will provide a previously undreamed-of safety factor for regular passenger flights over long distances and through uncertain weather. GENERAL ALEXANDER COMMENDS 5TH ARMY

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN ITALY, November 26 — General Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief of Allied Armies in Italy, yesterday honored the combat records of two veteran armored units of the 5th Army in their drive northward from Rome, a UNN correspondent reported today.

General Alexander was guest of honor at a meeting of 400 tankmen of the U.S. 1st Armored Division and the South African 6th Armored Division, who met together at a British rest camp near Florence.

Summing up the festivities, an American 5th Army veteran said:

«We have been fighting together, and tonight we are partying together. How else can you make better friends?» (UNN)

T.A.F. HINDERS NAZI ROCKET PROGRAM

BRUSSELS, November 26 — It was officially stated tonight that pilots of the 2nd Tactical Air Force are striking great blows and saving numerous lives in the grim battle of the stratosphere rockets which goes on day and night over the northern European plains.

The RAF's railway-cutting program has considerably diminished the weight and intensity of the rocket attacks. This program was not designed for this purpose, but it is believed that the Germans are unable to bring up enough of the huge missiles over the battered railways to stage the assault envisaged a few months ago by the German High Command. YUGOSLAVS SEIZE IBAR GORGE IN SERBIA

LONDON, November 26 — The Yugoslav National Army of Liberation inflicted a heavy blow on the Germans falling back on the railway center of Sarajevo, Serbia, with the capture of the Ibar Gorge to the south of the city, today's Yugoslav communique announced. At Least 350 Nazis were either killed or taken prisoner. Seven tanks, 11 guns, and 50 trucks were destroyed.

The ring around several thousand German troops cut off in the Danilovgrad region of Montenegro, and threatened with annihilation, was drawn tighter. In a desperate attempt to escape up the Valley of the Skadar, the trapped troops suffered heavy losses. British gunners took part in the action, while RAF planes attacked the enemy with bombs and rockets.

In Dalmatia, Patriot forces seized the town of Ostrovgrad, main enemy strongpoint of the Knic sector, where 250 Germans were killed.

In Croatia and Slovenia, the retreating enemy suffered heavy casualties. (PWB)

BONOMI GOVERNMENT RESIGNS

ROME, November 26 — Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi and his entire Cabinet resigned today.

The announcement of Bonomi and the coalition government was made at 1230 hours in the form of a communique from the Government issued by the Undersecretariat of Press and Information.

The communique followed a series of meetings held this morning by Bonomi and members of his Cabinet.

It is expected that discussions preliminary to forming a new government will be held this afternoon.

The text of the communique follows:

«As a result of deliberation of the parties forming the coalition government and striving for a program better adapted to the ends toward which each party is working, the President of the Council, Ivanoe Bonomi, had consulted with the heads of various parties to learn their views.

«From those conversations, the President was convinced that it was desirable the Cabinet offer its resignation.

«Therefore, the President of the Council, who already had announced his proposed action to the Ministers Without Portfolio, representing the various parties of the coalition government, today presented the resignation of the Cabinet to the Lieutenant General of the Realm.»

A conference of the representatives of the six parties comprising the National Liberation Committee was held late this afternoon at Catholic Hall in the Piazza Indipendenza (Independence Square), to discuss the crisis resulting from the collapse of the Bonomi Government.

Six cabinet ministers who resigned with Bonomi attended the meeting which began at 1630 hours. Bonomi did not attend the meeting.

Those at the conference were: Democrat-Labor Party — Meuccio Ruini, Minister Without Portfolio, and Mario Cevolotto, secretary of the party.

Christian-Democrat Party — Alcide de Gasperi, Minister Without Portfolio, and Professor Guido Gonella, party representative.

Liberal Party — Marcello Soleri, Minister of the Treasury, and Manlio Brosio, Secretary of the Party.

Communist Party — Palmiro Togliatti, Minister Without Portfolio, and Mauro Scoccimarro, Vice Secretary of the Party.

Socialist Party — Pietro Nenni, Secretary of the Party, and Giuseppe Saragat, Minister Without Portfolio.

Action Party — Emilio Lussu, Secretary of the Party, and Alberto Cianca, Minister Without Portfolio.

A recess was called in the evening talks at 1930 hours to enable Ministers Without Portfolio Alcide de Gasperi and Meuccio Ruini and Pietro Nenni, secretary of the Socialist Party, to present a communique to Bonomi.

After reading the communique, Bonomi approved it as the basis for a working agreement upon which a new cabinet might be formed. The communique said:

«In reference to the resignation offered by the Bonomi Cabinet, representatives of the six parties forming the National Committee of Liberation reaffirmed that the

TOKYO IS NO « TINDERBOX CITY »

WASHINGTON, November 26 — Tokyo is probably as well prepared as any city in the world to withstand bombing and its after-effects. The United States Office of War Information reported this tonight, on the basis of data provided by official sources.

The report said: « The general impression that Tokyo is a "tinder-box" city which could be destroyed by incendiaries is one of the most popular fallacies. It is safe to assume that Tokyo is prepared physically, and, perhaps, psychologically for bombing.

« Fire has always been regarded by the Japanese as a city menace, and what the civilian defence activities are in London today, have long been standard civic responsibilities in Tokyo and other Japanese cities.

SCOCCIMARRO CALLS FOR REEDUCATION OF YOUTH

ROME, November 26 — The youth of Italy must unite to destroy the remains of Fascism and to demand a greater voice in the conduct of the affairs of the country, Mauro Scoccimarro, Assistant Commissioner for Epuration, and Vice Secretary of the Communist Party of Italy, told an audience of 5,000 young men and women today at a Communist Youth rally here.

Prominently displayed in the meeting-place were the slogans: « Death to the German Invaders and their Fascist Accomplices, » and « Long Live the United Nations. » Hanging from the balconies were the national colors of Italy, minus the Savoy emblem, and red flags with Hammer and Sickle.

On the stage were Palmiro Togliatti, Secretary of the Italian Communist Party; Mario Palermo, Under Secretary for War; Velio Spano editor of the Communist daily l'Unità, and members of the Central Committee of the Communist Party.

Speaking on what he called «The Youth Problem in Italy,» the existence of which, he said, some influential Italians, such as Benedetto Croce, denied, Scoccimarro asserted that the reeducation of youth stands out as one of the most important tasks facing a rejuvenated Italy bent on moral and material reconstruction.

Taking exception to Croce and others for what he termed a «negative» attitude on this question, Scoccimarro warned against the pitfalls facing a split youth-movement, and urged all political tendencies in that movement to unite along the lines followed by the Patriots in northern Italy. He proposed isolation only of those elements still clinging to Fascist or anti-democratic ideology.

Dismissing as superficial the objection to a greater participation of younger-generation Italians in the political life of the country on the grounds of political immaturity and past connections with Fascism, Scoccimarro pleaded for greater recognition of the rôle the Patriots are playing in the war against the Germans.

«The new history of a reborn Italy,» he said, «is being written in the blood of Italy's best sons.»

Scoccimarro urged that the age limit for voting be lowered to 18 years, to allow youth to have their say in the future political development of the country.

He chastised attempts of reactionary elements to prevent attainment of unity among the Italian people and its youth. He then outlined the multiform activities through which, he said, the new generations could circumvent these attempts, and create for themselves a new, progressive, and democratic Italy.

Efforts to becloud the constitutional issue by agitating in favor of a plebiscite as the alternative to an elected constituent assembly were described by Scoccimarro as doomed to failure, because the issue is now clear in the minds of the people.

Scoccimarro labelled pre-Fascist democracy as a conservative, liberty-denying society, which, he said, was carrying in its breast the germs of Fascism. The new democracy which is coming to life was extolled as characterized by the popular will to destroy Fascism, and to create a free and independent Italy.

In this new Italy, short of leaders uncompromised by a Fascist past, he said, the youth of the country, especially the youth steeled in armed struggle against the invaders and their Fascist accomplices, must and will play an increasingly important part in restoring the nation to a dignified place in the community of nations. «GOVERNMENT BY SPECIALISTS» DECRIED

ROME, November 26 — «The constitution of a government of specialists may be responsible for a renewal of the grave errors by which Fascism led the nation to ruin,» said Palmiro Togliatti, Communist Party chief, writing in this morning's Corriere di Roma.

Although recognizing the necessity for specialists in the country's reconstruction projects, Togliatti insisted: «In Government posts, they are not best capable of solving the hosts of political problems which present themselves at the moment.»

«The Government's function,» he added, «should be to guide the State and whole country to a solution of such problems — detaching itself from dead legal formulae and worn-out bureaucratic custom, and having as its only guide the immediate interests of the nation.»

of the finest records among groups coöperating with the Allies in Italy.

Formed originally as a small security detail when the Allied Military Government unit of the 5th Army was organized, these mobile Italian police have moved in the wake of the Allied advance northward, restoring order, gaining the confidence of the newly liberated people, smoothing the way for urgent military traffic, guarding important military installations, and evacuating civilians from war zones to safe rear areas. Today, they number several thousands.

The Mobile 5th Army Carabinieri works side-by-side with American military policemen. They eat at the same messes, partake of the same rations, and even receive an additional ration of pasta and olive oil. They wear American Army combat helmets decorated with the same insignia as the American military policemen.

The mobile police were recruited in southern Italy from members of the regular Carabinieri who wished to participate in the liberation. They were trained by 5th Army military policemen who now maintain a school exclusively for the Italian Mobile Police in a rear-area city. The school and the work of the police are headed by Lieut. Col. Walter Doherty, who in civilian life was Assistant Chief Constable of the City of Glasgow, Scotland.

An official of AMG said recently that a major contribution by these Carabinieri toward the liberation of their country was the manner in which they have restored the confidence of war-frightened civilians in carrying on their daily jobs.

The work of the 5th Army Carabinieri has included the rounding up of enemy agents, with whose capture they have been credited several times. Often, they have been directly in the midst of battle. Four mobile 5th Army Carabinieri were killed by enemy shellfire on the Allied beachhead at Anzio. One was recently cited for bravery, after he was fatally injured trying to extinguish a fire in an ammunition dump. Two were recently killed by mines on the 5th Army's coastal sector.

The Carabinieri work directly under AMG, 5th Army, but they have their own officers and their own administrative facilities.

They were originally organized in Sardinia after the Nazis had disbanded the Carabinieri, which had been a part of the Italian army. With the exception of the larger cities, where there are metropolitan police, the Carabinieri are the only Italian police operating behind the Allied armies. (UNN)

UNIVERSITY OF SIENA BEGINS 704TH YEAR

SIENA, November 26 — The University of Siena, which has stood as a symbol of liberty and the will of the people for more than 700 years, opened its 704th academic year here today in an impressive and colorful ceremony.

The reopening of the historic university, made possible through the coöperation of education officers of the Allied Military Government and the Allied Commision, was also the scene of the installation of the university's new rector, Professor Mario Bracci, chosen by a vote of the Faculty.

Founded in 1241 by popular demand of the people of Siena, the university has weathered war after war through the centuries, and today is greater than ever. Before the liberation of Siena by Allied troops in July, there were only about 300 students in attendance. Today, with no political restrictions in effect, the university has nearly 700 students, many of whom attended the ceremonies today with their medieval-colored class hats, decorated with a variety of trinkets.

The city of Siena turned out in force into the Piazza del Campo to watch the procession into the Palazzo Pubblico, where the re-opening ceremony was held.

«GOVERNMENT BY SPECIALISTS» DECRIED

ROME, November 28 — «The constitution of a government of specialists may be responsible for a renewal of the grave errors by which Fascism led the nation to ruin,» said Palmiro Togliatti, Communist Party chief, writing in this morning's Corriere di Roma.

Although recognizing the necessity for specialists in the country's reconstruction projects, Togliatti insisted: «In Government posts, they are not best capable of solving the hosts of political problems which present themselves at the moment.»

«The Government's function,» he added, «should be to guide the State and whole country to a solution of such problems — detaching itself from dead legal formulae and worn-out bureaucratic custom, and having as its only guide the immediate interests of the nation.»

Togliatti said that only a government in closest contact with the people — a truly democratic government in direct contact with the political parties, as an expression of the popular will — was capable of fulfilling such a task.

If, in the past, Italy had not had able governments, this was due to the fact that «it had not been understood that Italy needed governmental activity of a new nature, as profoundly different from that of Fascism as from that of pre-Fascist governments.»

He added: «It is necessary to lead the country to the creation of new methods of government, and this must be done by calling upon the people themselves to find the solution to actual problems.

«To attain this, there must be municipal elections; there must be decentralization, not centralization.»

Stressing the theme that a government official «must be neither a bureaucrat, nor a jurist, nor a parliamentarian of the old school, but must have a pliant mind, an inventive spirit, driving force, and enthusiasm,» Togliatti concluded: «We must thoroughly realize that Italy must become a democratic country, and democracy comes into being by the application of democratic methods.» (UNN)

MOBILE CARABINIERI PART OF 5TH ARMY

WITH AAI, November 28 — The Mobile Carabinieri of the 5th Army, a group of well trained Italian policemen who have assisted in policing war areas in Italy, have completed nearly a year of meritorious duty, establishing one tribution by these Carabinieri toward the liberation of their country was the manner in which they have restored the confidence of war-frightened civilians in carrying on their daily jobs.

The work of the 5th Army Carabinieri has included the rounding up of enemy agents, with whose capture they have been credited several times. Often, they have been directly in the midst of battle. Four mobile 5th Army Carabinieri were killed by enemy shellfire on the Allied beachhead at Anzio. One was recently cited for bravery after he was fatally injured trying to extinguish a fire in an ammunition dump. Two were recently killed by mines on the 5th Army's coastal sector.

The Carabinieri work directly under AMG, 5th Army, but they have their own officers and their own administrative facilities.

They were originally organized in Sardinia after the Nazis had disbanded the Carabinieri, which had been a part of the Italian army. With the exception of the larger cities, where there are metropolitan police, the Carabinieri are the only Italian police operating behind the Allied armies. (UNN)

UNIVERSITY OF SIENA BEGINS 704TH YEAR

SIENA, November 28 — The University of Siena, which has stood as a symbol of liberty and the will of the people for more than 700 years, opened its 704th academic year here today in an impressive and colorful ceremony.

The reopening of the historic university, made possible through the coöperation of education officers of the Allied Military Government and the Allied Commision, was also the scene of the installation of the university's new rector, Professor Mario Bracci, chosen by a vote of the Faculty.

Founded in 1241 by popular demand of the people of Siena, the university has weathered war after war through the centuries, and today is greater than ever. Before the liberation of Siena by Allied troops in July, there were only about 300 students in attendance. Today, with no political restrictions in effect, the university has nearly 700 students, many of whom attended the ceremonies today with their medieval-colored class hats, decorated with a variety of trinkets.

The city of Siena turned out in force into the Piazza del Campo to watch the procession into the Palazzo Pubblico, where the re-opening ceremony was held.

Colonel Robert G. Kirkwood of the U.S. Army, Regional Commissioner of the Tuscany Region, told the distinguished audience, which included Sienese leaders in all walks of life, that, despite the hardships of war, AMG made possible the university's opening «free from restrictions imposed by a dictatorial political ideology,» Colonel Kirkwood added.

«The Allies, through AMG, in the most critical stages of a great war, are doing all they can, behind battle lines, to restore Italy and to restore the Italian people to a normal way of life — particularly to reëstablish the agencies of government and public institutions which operate to that end.

«Among the activities of AMG, an important one is the reestablishment and reorganization of the educational system of Italy. This is necessary not only to teach fundamentals, but also to teach democratic ideals and to neutralize those tenets of Fascism.

Colonel Kirkwood stated that AMG, with the close cooperation of the Italian Government, directed the epuration of the more Fascist-minded educators and teachers and in the purging of textbooks substituted democratic principles and ideals. He added that AMG has put in order many school buildings, and facilitated the supply of textbooks and school supplies. In conclusion, he installed Dr. Bracci as the new rector, and promised him the assistance of all Allied authorities.

Professor Bracci, who was dean of the university's law school, was succeeded in that position by Professor Cicvanni Cicogna, who had been Acting Rector until Professor Bracci's installation today.

During his inaugural address, Dr. Bracci called on the students and on all the people of Siena and surrounding areas «to labor for the war, and to aid in gaining that victory which we consider common to all of us.» He said that Italy will have to be rebuilt and reconstituted by Italians, explaining:

«We ourselves are responsible for our earthly fate.»

He reviewed at length the causes of Italy's entry into the war, pointing out:

«As it has ever happened in Italy when a despotic government or a sovereignty felt themselves in danger, the Germans have been called, and they have descended into our country.

«This is the treachery committed for the first time against the whole Italian people, since for the first time Italy had got to be a united people who had gained honor and dignity in proportion to their sacrifices.»

Professor Bracci called attention to the acts of looting, murder, and other brutality of German troops and Gestapo against the Italian civilian population, stating:

«Only the impulsive rashness of the most brutal and primitive passions, wildly unchained, can account for the absurd conduct of troops who, being reduced to keep on fighting with hopeless fierceness in the midst of awful defeats, entertain with their mischiefs the fire of hatred which precedes and follows them into retreat.

«Acts of never-heard-of infamy have been performed, and the remembrance of the divisions organized to commit crimes will ever-lastingly remain with terrifying echoes in tradition and popular song.»

Discussing the deeper meaning of freedom in the world, Professor Bracci, said:

«It is a matter of fact that, in Italy and in every country, a great fight has been carried on for years for the freedom and larger solidarity of mankind, and which, starting before the military conflict, will still go on after the end of it. This is the real civil war. The other events, though remarkable, are but military episodes.

«Our sympathy and then our love went to that flag which is yours, as well as ours, one which you steadfastly upheld even in the darkest, hopeless hours of the fiercest fight, as it has been firmly kept in our consciences by many of us.»

The anxious hours spent by the Sienese before Allied troops liberated this ancient city were also described by Professor Bracci, who told how the people prayed for the speedy arrival of the Allied troops. He said: «No one in your own countries offered prayers with more fervent faith than our own.» (UNN)

CORDELL HULL SUBMITS RESIGNATION

WASHINGTON, November 26 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull was reported here tonight to have submitted his resignation to President Roosevelt, giving as his reasons ill health, a Reuter dispatch disclosed.

State Department officials remained non-committal tonight when asked for a confirmation or a denial of this report, stating that it was a matter between the President and Secretary Hull.

Observers here were inclined to view Hull's reported actions as inevitable in view of the 73-year-old diplomat's decline in health during the last several months, and his doctors' advice that he resign his cabinet post. (Reuter)

ATTLEE ASKS CONTINUED SELF-DISCIPLINE

LONDON, November 26 — The same self-discipline which has brought the British people within sight of victory after five years of war will be necessary if the difficulties of the post-war period are to be overcome, Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee said today.

He said that the great mass of regulations with which the British people had to put up during the war could not have been enforced if the people had not willingly accepted them, «inspired by a resolve to attain victory.»

In the post-war period, Attlee continued, there will be a reduction in the number of restrictions on the liberty of the individual, but a number will be retained to protect the individual. As an example, he pointed out that there was a world food shortage, and that it would be madness to throw away the food regulations which insure a standard of nutrition to the British people.

«Nevertheless,» he said, «adjustment is going to be difficult, and the return to peace economy will require the same self-discipline which has carried us through the war.»

The standard of life for all people, he added, should rise after the war, provided there is wisdom at home and wisdom in the world. (OWI)

SWEDES SUSPECT «HANSA» WAS TORPEDOED

STOCKHOLM, November 26 — A Swedish naval inquiry into the mysterious sinking of the liner Hansa, in which 100 lives were lost, has uncovered evidence that the ship was torpedoed, BBC reported tonight.

The ship sank on Friday while en route from the Swedish mainland to Visby, on the Baltic island of Gottland. Among those lost were the Vice Chief of the Swedish General Staff, Colonel Rolf Lindkvist, and about 40 Swedish troops.

The ship was sailing in waters outside of the zone proclaimed by the Germans to be unsafe for neutral vessels.

Meanwhile, there were signs from both Sweden and Germany that relations between the two countries are strained. A member of the Swedish Parliament has proposed that Sweden refuse to continue as the protecting power for Germany in countries with which the Nazis are at war, BBC reported, adding that the official had demanded severance of Swedish-German diplomatic relations.

AIR CONFERENCE DRAWS TO CLOSE

CHICAGO, November 26 — The question of free and unrestricted access of international commercial aircraft to the airfields of all nations was still undecided tonight, as the International Civil Aviation Conference prepared for its closing session tomorrow.

Delegates of the 54 countries to the conference are expected to make a final attempt to settle the issue of controls and limitations over the right of the air lines of one country to pick up and discharge passengers within other countries along their routes. If the conference in unable to establish an international agreement covering the problem, observers pointed out, bi-lateral pacts between individual countries will be the only way of handling it.

Tomorrow's session will also consider proposals for establishing an international rate scale for global air transport.

Concrete accomplishments of the conference included the laying of «the foundations for a wider standardization of practice and cooperative action in technical matters than has ever been achieved in the history of aviation,» Assistant Secretary of State Adolf Berle, said. In addition, it was pointed out, work has almost been completed on a proposed convention modernizing treaty law in the field of air navigation. (OWI - CBS)

In Berlin, added BBC, a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman said that the training and arming on Swedish soil of volunteers to fight in Norway would be considered a «military and warlike measure» against Germany.

Sentiment of the Swedish people about these developments was reflected in the unqualified approval in the press of the Government's decision to expel three pro-Nazi Finns from the country.

Reports from Swedish Lapland said that 500 Norwegians fleeing from the retreating Germans have found safety in Sweden. Preparations are being made to receive 10,000 more, the dispatch said. (BBC)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 26 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Swiftly following up the enemy's withdrawal, British troops of the 8th Army have reached the River Lamone on a wide front north of Faenza.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

South of Faenza, British infantry, supported by tanks, have forced a bridgehead over the River Marzeno, and are continuing the advance toward the River Lamone, against disorganized resistance.

On their left, Polish troops of the 8th Army have cleared all enemy resistance east of the River Marzeno, and their patrols have crossed this river at several places.

West of the Pistoia-Bologna Road, American troops of the 5th Army in a successful operation have captured the important feature of Monte Belvedere, and repulsed a strong counter-attack against their newly won positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Adverse weather yesterday again caused cancellation of most air activity.

A small number of fighter-bombers were active behind the Italian front, where they bombed and strafed enemy supply columns and rail lines.

Balkan Air Force fighters and fighter-bombers attacked targets in Albania and Yugoslavia.

Two of our heavy bombers failed to return from the operations on the night of November 24-25, and two of our aircraft are missing from yesterday's operations.

MAAF flew about 300 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 26 — Today's communique:

Allied forces have closed up to the western defenses of Venlo

Farther north, the advance continued, and we are approaching the villages of Swolgen and Grubbenvorst.

Rocket-firing fighters operating in support of our ground forces in Holland yesterday attacked defended positions to the east of Nijmegen.

Fighter-bombers bombed barracks south of Hilversum, and cut rail tracks in the Amersfoort, Zwolle, Utrecht, and Arnhem areas.

Strongpoints and gun and mortar positions in the Dunkirk area were also attacked by rocket-firing fighters.

In the Geilenkirchen sector, there is no change in the ground situation. Troop concentrations north of Geilenkirchen were attacked by other formations of rocket-firing fighters.

Our forces west of Jülich are fighting in the immediate vicinity of Koslar, and have captured Bourheim.

Farther south, Puzohn has been taken, and the advance to the southeast continues.

House-to-house fighting is in progress in the outskirts of Weisweiler, and at one point we have reached the Weisweiler-Langerwehe Road.

On a hill south of Langerwehe, we are fighting to regain a small amount of ground lost in an enemy counter-attack.

Our forces north of Hürtgen are within a few thousand yards of Grosshau, and Hürtgen itself is under fire from our artillery.

Strongpoints and transportation targets in the area north of Düren were attacked by fighter-bombers attacking a number of pillboxes and gun positions in this area.

Medium bombers, which were covered by fighters and fighter-bombers, went for railyards at Rheydt.

Railyards at München-Gladbach, Harff, and Grevenbroich were also attacked by fighter-bombers.

Northeast of Thionville, our forces have crossed the German border and have reached Tettingen, three miles southeast of Remich.

Biringen, southwest of Merzig, has been taken, and we

Our units advancing from the Saint Dié region toward Strasbourg pushed almost through the Saales Pass in the northern Vosges.

In the southern Vosges and the Belfort Gap, the enemy has been cleared from additional areas north and east of Belfort. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, November 26 — Tonight's communique:

Troops of the 4th Ukrainian Front, today captured, on the territory of Czechoslovakia, the towns of Michalovce and Humenne, important communication centers and strongpoints of the enemy, and also occupied in fighting over 60 other populated localities, including Gorbokchatine, Papin, Dubne, Snina, Uduvtse, Komenitse, Mishkine, Vinna, Gudze, Lasomets, Budkovtse, Bershes, and Leletz, and the railway stations of Gorbokchatine, Snina, Serotski-Cluga, and Budkovtse.

In Hungary, our troops, as a result of stiff fighting, captured the town and railway junction of Hatvan.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, engagements of local importance took place.

During November 25, our troops disabled or destroyed 22 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 12 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 26 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The exceptionally brave conduct of the Patriots nicknamed «Folgore,» «Livorno,» and «Firenze,» belonging to the Osoppo Division, has already been mentioned, and it is now possible to give further details.

The Patriot «Folgore,» of the division's Monte Canin Battalion, was lying in ambush in an attic with eight other companions, when suddenly the approach of the Germans was signalled. Instantly seizing a hand grenade, he unfortunately removed the safety pin, and looked in vain for a target at which to hurl it. Then, with great heroism, keeping his companions at a distance, he threw himself into a corner with the grenade against his stomach. The explosion blew him to pieces, but his companions were saved.

The two Patriots «Livorno» and «Firenze» of the division's «Italia» Battalion were sent to guard a road, during a German attack, with instructions to give the alarm immediately on arrival of enemy reinforcements. Later, an enemy column of 30 men arrived, but the two Patriots instead of reporting this to their battalion, attacked the enemy column alone.

«Livorno» shouted orders in such a way that the Germans, hearing them, gained the impression that he had a large body of men with him. After a short struggle, the enemy fled, leaving 10 dead, a heavy machine-gun, and other arms.

This action saved the Patriot group from an intended flank attack.

«Livorno» has also distinguished himself in many previous actions, particularly that of last September, when alone he managed to force the German garrison of Pinzano to retreat.

Lieutenant Daldin, also of the Osoppo Division, entered the town of Tolmezzo with 10 men last May in the face of 300 Nazi-Fascist soldiers. Despite the opposition, he succeeded in advancing across the city and penetrating the garrison, killing several of the enemy before he was shot dead. (UNNR)

Biringen, southwest of Merzig, has been taken, and we are advancing north of Bousenville.

A number of enemy positions in villages near the meeting point of the French, Luxembourg, and German border were targets for fighter-bombers. Behind enemy lines in the same area, railcars and motor transport were destroyed, and tracks cut in many places, while railyards at Gemünden, northwest of Karlstadt, were also attacked.

Medium and light bombers went for the arsenal at Landau, and ammunition dumps at Kaiserlautern.

In the area east of Metz we have reached Narbefontaine, seven miles northwest of Saint Avold.

Albesdorf Forest, northwest of Finstinger has been cleared of the enemy, and patrols are in Bois Givrycourt to the east.

Units which crossed the Saar River in Finstinger area have liberated Barendorf.

Substantial gains were made against light resistance in the north Alsace Plain and Vosges Mountains.

Strasbourg has been cleared of the enemy, except for defenders of Rhine bridges. The prisoner count in the city has reached 5,000.

In eastern Alsace, fighter-bombers attacked tanks, motor vehicles, locomotives, and railcars, and cut rail lines. Eleven enemy aircraft were shot down during these operations.

According to reports so far received, six of our aircraft are missing from yesterday's operations.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The American 9th and 1st Armies, yesterday, attacked our defensive front, east of Aachen, with major forces. Counter-thrusts and counter-attacks repelled the enemy, who had broken in on a small scale at various sectors, wherever he had not already been arrested by our defensive fire. The Americans lost a considerable number of tanks and prisoners.

Our bases of the outer defense ring in the Metz area continue to hold their own.

In Lorraine, the enemy continued his pressure against our whole front by carrying out a number of assault and tank attacks.

To the northwest and east of the Bisch Forest, the enemy succeeded in obtaining some minor dents. Our tank formations to the north of Saarburg are engaged in bitter fighting with strong enemy units.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

In the environs of Strassburg, the garrisons of some of the fortifications are defending themselves so stubbornly that the enemy was able only slightly to increase his breakthrough area to the north and south.

On the Vosges Ridge, fighting is particularly bitter at Markisch.

Northeast of Belfort, our troops arrested enemy forces after minor disengaging movements.

In Upper Alsace and on the Swiss border, fighting has again flared up with freshly brought up enemy units. Formations of German fighters successfully dispersed enemy supply columns.

The garrison of La Rochelle pierced strong enemy positions 20 kilometers to the east of the town, took several hundred prisoners, and threw the enemy, who suffered considerable losses during the fighting, out of a number of villages. Our troops returned, after completion of their mission, with considerable booty in weapons and supplies.

Fourteen Anglo-American aircraft were shot down during violent air battles over the Western Front.

German long-range weapons continued to shell Greater London, Liége, and Antwerp.

Italy:

In the Adriatic coastal sector, the defensive battle has now extended up to the Faenza area.

Our bravely-fighting divisions again frustrated all enemy attempts to break through our new positions to the south of the Lamone sector.

Eastern Front:

Since Bulgaria dropped out, the movements of our armies out of Greece and the eastern and southern Balkans continued. During engagements which are constantly becoming harder, and are being carried out under the worst possible weather and road conditions, our troops, in repeated counterattacks, smashed all attempts by strong Bulgarian and Bolshevist formations to attack our flanks. Strong rear-guard actions shook off the superior enemy forces pressing on behind us. Numerous bands in the rear area of the front, who tried to block the roads, were destroyed. Our fronts in the central and northern Balkans are continually strengthened.

In the area west of Apatin and Batina, fresh Soviet attacks were stopped in front of our lines.

In central Hungary, the Bolshevists carried out numerous attacks between Budapest and Ungvar. These failed in the fire of our grenadiers, who were effectively supported by artillery and mortar batteries.

In Kurland, large-scale enemy attacks were split up by our stubborn defense into locally limited engagements. Here, again, our divisions achieved a new defensive success.

Air:

Anglo-American bombers and low-level planes carried out daylight attacks on the western territories and on towns in the front-line area, where they bombed and gunned civilians.

During attacks by American terror formations on central Germany, chiefly the city area of Merseburg was hit.

Last night, nuisance planes sporadically dropped bombs, particularly on southern and central Germany.

Our anti-aircraft artillery shot down eight aircraft.

GERMAN

to have been thrown in on a narrow front: about one division per sector, each a thousand meters wide.

Nevertheless, the Americans were unable to reach their objective. The small town of Weissweiler stayed in German hands after a ferocious battle lasting 10 hours with heavy losses for both sides.

The vanguard of the U.S. 3rd Army has reached the German defences in the Saar region, and Weber expects General Patton to begin a major assault against the main German defences between Saarbrücken and Merzig.

German quarters deny, however, that the Saar has already been crossed by the Americans.

Eastern Front: Reporting on the fighting for Budapest, Karl Blücher believes that recent Soviet offensive moves against the Hatvan-Eger-Miskolc sector indicate the intention of approaching the Hungarian capital from the west, as well as the north, east, and south.

This thrust into western Hungary has not, so far, gained any noticeable success, in spite of heavy Russian losses in both men and material.

The attempted Danube crossing via the island of Csepel, south of Budapest, has likewise failed.

Soviet troops which reached the western bank of the Danube had to swim back to the island, owing to the terrific artillery barrage.

Reporter Karl Klaus Krebs speaks about Soviet agents entering the beleaguered town of Miskolcz, approaching Hungarian workers and trying to persuade them to collaborate with the Russians.

« The behavior of Russian soldiers towards the Hungarian population will render the work of these agents very difficult ... » remarks Krebs.

Growing Defensive Strength of Germany: Commenting on the present battle raging in the border areas of Germany, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung writes that German defensive successes at Arnheim and at Aachen in September threw the Allies off their balance. Whereas, until now, the Allies were guided by the principle of throwing in great masses at the most favorable moment, since November 16 they have been attacking in spite of unfavorable weather conditions.

Eisenhower's decision, which reflects that of Roosevelt and Churchill, clearly demonstrates a certain fear of the success of Germany's total mobilisation.

The offensive character of this revival of German strength compels the Allies to seek a final decision this winter at all costs. It is up to Germany, the article concludes, to frustrate this offensive attempt, probably the last.

Great Allied Offensive in Italy Expected: According to a report concerning an article in the Sunday edition of the Corriere della Sera, an Allied thrust from the Apennines towards Bologna may be expected at any moment now. The American 5th Army has moved into position after weeks of preparation. The battle of Forlì is also spreading.

The Turin newspaper Stampa reports of the British repeatedly throwing in reinforcements, and laying a non-stop artillery barrage in this sector.

The Republican press is united in the opinion that Kesselring will stop the Allied offensive, on the whole.

Sicily To Be Represented at Peace Conference: DNB quotes a Milan report of 200 leaders of the Sicilian separatist movement having met at Taormina. They arrived at the resolution that the independent republic of Sicily should be represented at the coming peace conference.

The Sinking of the « Hansa »: DNB quotes official naval quarters when countering « the false and misleading reports spread by the Allies to the effect that the sinking of the Swedish ship Hansa was due to German U-Boat action. »

There have been neither German surface vessels, U-Boats,

Eastern Front:

Since Bulgaria dropped out, the movements of our armies out of Greece and the eastern and southern Balkans continued. During engagements which are constantly becoming harder, and are being carried out under the worst possible weather and road conditions, our troops, in repeated counter-attacks, smashed all attempts by strong Bulgarian and Bolshevist formations to attack our flanks. Strong rear-guard actions shook off the superior enemy forces pressing on behind us. Numerous bands in the rear area of the front, who tried to block the roads, were destroyed. Our fronts in the central and northern Balkans are continually strengthened.

In the area west of Apatin and Batina, fresh Soviet attacks were stopped in front of our lines.

In central Hungary, the Bolshevists carried out numerous attacks between Budapest and Ungvar. These failed in the fire of our grenadiers, who were effectively supported by artillery and mortar batteries.

In Kurland, large-scale enemy attacks were split up by our stubborn defense into locally limited engagements. Here, again, our divisions achieved a new defensive success.

Air:

Anglo-American bombers and low-level planes carried out daylight attacks on the western territories and on towns in the front-line area, where they bombed and gunned civilians.

During attacks by American terror formations on central Germany, chiefly the city area of Merseburg was hit.

Last night, nuisance planes sporadically dropped bombs, particularly on southern and central Germany.

Our anti-aircraft artillery shot down eight aircraft.

GERMAN

Western Front. Writing about the northern flank of this front, Sertorius considers the Canadian 1st Army's offensive moves near the Maas Estuary may prove to be the initial phase of a large-scale offensive.

In view of the disadvantages of a frontal attack against a strong river barrier, Sertorius believes that General Crerar's attack is a diversionary move intended to lure large German reserves into the Rotterdam-Utrecht area, whilst the bulk of Field Marshal Montgomery's Army Group launches a general offensive in the Nijmegen area. The German High Command, however, with its rich experience and clear-sightedness, has anticipated any such move, and taken the necessary counter-measures.

Writing about the battles in the Aachen sector, Transocean's reporter Weber states that never before have the Americans concentrated such forces. Five divisions are said Danube had to swim back to the island, owing to the terrific artillery barrage.

Reporter Karl Klaus Krebs speaks about Soviet agents entering the beleaguered town of Miskolcz, approaching Hungarian workers and trying to persuade them to collaborate with the Russians.

« The behavior of Russian soldiers towards the Hungarian population will render the work of these agents very difficult .... » remarks Krebs.

Growing Defensive Strength of Germany: Commenting on the present battle raging in the border areas of Germany, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung writes that German defensive successes at Arnheim and at Aachen in September threw the Allies off their balance. Whereas, until now, the Allies were guided by the principle of throwing in great masses at the most favorable moment, since November 16 they have been attacking in spite of unfavorable weather conditions.

Eisenhower's decision, which reflects that of Roosevelt and Churchill, clearly demonstrates a certain fear of the success of Germany's total mobilisation.

The offensive character of this revival of German strength compels the Allies to seek a final decision this winter at all costs. It is up to Germany, the article concludes, to frustrate this offensive attempt, probably the last.

Great Allied Offensive in Italy Expected: According to a report concerning an article in the Sunday edition of the Corriere della Sera, an Allied thrust from the Apennines towards Bologna may be expected at any moment now. The American 5th Army has moved into position after weeks of preparation. The battle of Forli is also spreading.

The Turin newspaper Stampa reports of the British repeatedly throwing in reinforcements, and laying a non-stop artillery barrage in this sector.

The Republican press is united in the opinion that Kesselring will stop the Allied offensive, on the whole.

Sicily To Be Represented at Peace Conference: DNB quotes a Milan report of 200 leaders of the Sicilian separatist movement having met at Taormina. They arrived at the resolution that the independent republic of Sicily should be represented at the coming peace conference.

The Sinking of the « Hansa »: DNB quotes official naval quarters when countering « the false and misleading reports spread by the Allies to the effect that the sinking of the Swedish ship Hansa was due to German U-Boat action. »

There have been neither German surface vessels, U-Boats, nor planes in or over the waters concerned.

The Soviet News Service, however, announces the sinking of more than 15 German vessels off the Oesel peninsula and the port of Memel in the southern Baltic, which would indicate the presence of Soviet warships in the disputed waters.

HUNGARIAN

The Hungarian Minister of National Defence has issued a strong warning against those elements of the public (meaning especially the inhabitants of greater Budapest) who ignore the so-called « big alarms » by staying in their homes or in the street,, and thus exposing themselves to danger. Energetic measures are also to be taken against the numerous black-out offenders.

Corleto, enemy troops to the south yesterday were driven back from their positions along the Samoggia River by a Polish thrust which reached the confluence of the Samoggia and the Marzeno Rivers, three miles due south of Faenza.

The nature of the terrain at this southern edge of the Po Valley is abundantly providing the retreating enemy with water barriers on which to fasten his successive delaying positions. In the less than 30 miles between Faenza and Bologna, there are six major rivers, with scores of tributary watercourses, cutting across the 8th Army's path on their way from the valley's mountain rim to the center of the plain.

No change was reported on the 8th Army sector south of Ravenna, where German forces are believed to be massing in some strength on the north banks of the Fiumi Uniti, combined estuary of the Montone and Ronco Rivers.

On the 5th Army front, enemy attacks at scattered points along the Apennines, in efforts to take prisoners and gain information, were once more without success. Enemy forces are apparently regrouping along this front, and are attempting to cover this operation with harassing mortar and machine-gun fire. (PRO)

BATTLE RAGING FOR COLOGNE PLAIN

LONDON, November 25 — German troops continued to fight hard today to hold the Allied drive onto the Cologne Plain and to the heart of German industry. Hampered by heavy rains, Allied infantry, air, and armor were forced to mark time, and villages were under such heavy shellfire that neither German nor Allied troops were able to enter them.

Resistance from the 12 veteran German divisions now in the line stiffened considerably today, and opposition was greater than at any time since the drive was launched on November 16.

BRITISH INFANTRY REACH FAENZA OUTSKIRTS

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, November 25 — British infantry and armoured forces of the 8th Army, after «soundly defeating» two crack German divisions in the battle for the Cosina River bridgeheads, have dislodged the enemy all along an eight-mile front and have reached the eastern outskirts of Faenza, it was announced today.

In a swiftly-executed two-pronged attack, the British forces cut behind the strong enemy delaying positions along the Montone River, to the northeast of the Cosina bridgehead, and at the same time lunged straight ahead toward Faenza, forcing the German defending forces to withdraw in haste from the river line they have clung to for the past 10 days.

More than 300 prisoners were taken from the 26th Panzer Division, one of the two German units engaged, and several enemy tanks were destroyed, according to early reports. Despite the surprise impact of the British maneuver, enemy troops fought hard as the German Air Force Infantry Division and the 26th Panzer Division tried to hold the growing rift in their delaying positions.

Eighth Army forces are now in Borgo Durbecco, a suburb of Faenza east of the Lamone River, as a result of a three-mile gain by the main British thrust westward. No indication was given in official reports whether the Germans had been able to prepare positions along the Lamone's west banks for a last-ditch stand in Faenza itself.

In addition to being forced to withdraw from the Montone River line north of the main Po Highway by the second British thrust which captured the tiny village of Ospedaletto, the Germans are also withdrawing from the Cosina River line to the south of the plain.

No change was reported on the 8th Army sector south of Ravenna, where German forces are believed to be massing in some strength on the north banks of the Fiumi Uniti, combined estuary of the Montone and Ronco Rivers.

On the 5th Army front, enemy attacks at scattered points along the Apennines, in efforts to take prisoners and gain information, were once more without success. U.S. BOMBERS HIT JAPS IN BONIN ISLANDS

PEARL HARBOR, November 25 — Japanese bases in the Bonin Islands were heavily hit by American bombers before and after yesterday's Superfortress attack on Tokyo, a communique from headquarters of Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief in the Pacific, reported tonight. The northern Palau Islands, Marianas, and Carolines were also attacked from Monday through Thursday.

An announcement from the War Department in Washington today said that General Henry H. Arnold, Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Army Air Forces, will present the latest available information on the Tokyo attack when he speaks on a radio broadcast Sunday at 2130 hours (Rome time). (OWI) hard fact now is, that the reconquest of northern Burma is already under way.

« Preliminary moves for retaking Southeast Asia are going so well that the Japanese may soon have to make one of the most vital decisions of the war. They will have to decide whether to pour reinforcements into northern Burma, or whether to cut their losses and withdraw to the south.

« Our offensive has virtually liquidated at least four first-class infantry divisions, which represent more than 60,000 men. At least 30,000 more Japanese are casualties from disease and hunger, and may have fought for the last time in the jungles of Burma.

« On the northern Burma front, the Japanese today are on the defensive. It is the first time in the war of Southeast Asia that this has been the case. Japanese commanders are faced with the prospect of losing the whole of northern Burma, and the next few months, maybe weeks, will decide.

« This offensive represents an advance of more than 200 miles through the wildest mountain and jungle country in the world — and they are fighting miles. All roads now lead to Mandalay. It remains to be seen whether the Japanese will rush in heavy reinforcements to meet the Allied move. »

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES HIT REICH BY NIGHT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 25 — Heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force last night attacked, by means of instrument bombardment techniques, cloud-covered targets in the Linz and Munich areas, it was announced here today.

Only « small forces » of the heavy bombers were employed in the attack.

The heavy bombers reported several enemy night interceptions over the Linz area, but no contact was attempted. Flak over the German targets ranged from moderate to intense.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out intensive attacks on enemy troop positions along the Lamone River in the Faenza area, scattering thousands of fragmentation bombs.

Bad weather yesterday cancelled all daylight operations of the Strategic Air Force, and limited total sorties of the MAAF to « over 450. »

ABNORMAL RAINFALL HAS BOGGED ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 25 — Abnormal rainfall, which in one instance resulted in what would normally be 79 days' rainfall pouring down in a cloudburst of 10 hours' duration, has bogged the Italian front this fall, it was officially reported here today.

Although under normal conditions the Apennines area has an average rainfall more than twice that of London's figure, the rainfall in this part of Italy has been doubled this year.

The record rainfall occurred on the night of October 31, and resulted in flooding the Arno River all along its course, so that temporary bridges were awash, and the Ponte Vecchio, sole span which the Germans left undemolished in their flight from Florence, was within a few inches of immersion.

NAZI LINES IN WESTERN SERBIA CRACK

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, November 25 — Troops of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation have broken German defenses around Stolovi, in western Serbia, after two days of bitter fighting, and cut the enemy lines of communications between Kraljevo and the west, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

Yugoslav troops killed 750 Germans, took 200 prisoners, and captured much war material of all descriptions, including three tanks and five flame throwers.

In Montenegro, fierce fighting continues round Danilovgrad, where key positions have changed hands several times.

Attacks against enemy lines of communication continued. The Yugoslavs captured two strongholds on the Zagreb-Sisak line midway between the two towns, and liquidated an enemy detachment on one of the main lines from Zagreb.

In east Bosnia, Marshal Tito's men wiped out a strongpoint east of Sarajevo, and are fighting on the Rogatica-Sienica line to the southeast.

U.S. ARMED FORCES TOTAL 11,759,000

WASHINGTON, November 25 — The U.S. armed forces totalled 11,759,000 as of October 1, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, U.S. Selective Service Director, told the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

The total figure does not include dead, missing, or captured. About 8,100,000 are in the Army, and more than 3,700,000 in the Navy. Hershey said that since the United States entered the war, 1,441,204 men have been returned to civilian life.

Selective Service boards will remain in existence to assist returning veterans to find civilian employment after they are demobilized, Hershey added.

LONDON, November 25 — After British RAF Mosquito bombers blasted Berlin last night, more than 1,000 American heavy bombers, escorted by more than 1,000 fighter planes continued the Allied air blows against Germany today by attacking the Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg in the Leipzig area. The marshalling yards at Bingen, west of Mainz on the upper Rhine and oil plants at Lutzendorf were also hit in today's attack.

The attack on Leuna by the 8th USAAF follows the large-scale day attack Tuesday, when over 1,250 Liberators and Flying Fortresses, escorted by more than 1,100 fighters, bombed oil refineries in Germany, and RAF Lancasters, escorted by 250 fighters, attacked synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr. There was another attack on the Ruhr oil plants Thursday.

Mitchells and Bostons of the Allied 2nd TAF this morning attacked the railway yards at Rheydt, only 12 miles ahead of the Allied ground forces in the Geilenkirchen area. Rheydt is the biggest rail junction which lies ahead of the Allied advance in this sector.

Hallfaxes of the RAF Coastal Command last night attacked German shipping in the Skagerrak. This is the 15th night attack in eight weeks made by the heavy bombers, which seek out enemy convoys in Norwegian waters.

Damage and casualties were reported today from enemy action over southern England during the past 24 hours.

LIBERATED ITALY

JOURNALISTS ATTACK PRESS UNDERSECRETARIAT

ROME, November 25 — A statement issued here yesterday by the National Press Federation strongly criticized the activities of the office of the Undersecretary for Press and Information, and demanded that government control of the press be reduced to the absolute minimum consistent with war conditions and the military occupation of Italy.

The statement followed articles in the Roman press of the last few days bitterly critical of recent decrees extending the control of the National Publications Board over radio and film production.

The office of the Undersecretary for Press and Information, the statement recalled, was created by the government for the sole purpose of gradually doing away with the functions of the Ministry of Popular Culture, described as wire and captured the town of Bourheim, which was under attack for two days. They are now facing the defenses guarding the important communication town of Jülich on the eastern side of the flooded Roer River. During the few hours of good weather, Allied aircraft supported ground operations.

Press reports said that all the waterways in this sector have over-flowed, forming great, shallow lakes. In some places, the Roer River is up to 300 yards wide. Allied artillery, sited on high ground, is marooned, but roads are still passable.

American 1st Army infantry using bayonets today broke out of the Hürtgen Forest southeast of Aachen, and late press dispatches reported they have reached the Cologne Plain a few miles from Düren. The Germans were said to be yielding ground with the Americans close on their heels.

The Americans attacked the Germans so swiftly that enemy artillery did not get firing orders until they were engaged in hand-to-hand combat and driven out into open ground. The Germans were so confused that their shells were killing their own men.

Just east of Weisweiler, other 1st Army forces, swinging around the Allied flank, have reached and cut the important Eschweiler-Düren Road. House-to-house fighting is raging in the town of Weisweiler, and the American attack threatens a new stretch of the Adolf Hitler military highway to the north. German storm troops are opposing this advance.

On the northern flank of the Allied drive to the Ruhr, British 2nd forces were reported late tonight to have recaptured the bitterly contested towns of Würm and Beeck. The British are meeting heavy opposition in the section of the Siegfried zone beyond Gellenkirchen, and no further movement was reported.

In northern Holland, they continued their methodical advance across peat bogs in extreme weather, and have reached the Meuse at Grubbenvorst, north of Venlo. The German rear-guards around Venlo itself are still defending the town against a three-pronged British attack. South of Roermond on the Meuse, British troops are flooded out, and are living on housetops.

Germans in Flight

On the Vosges front, the Germans are in confused flight across the flooded Rhine, using boats, rafts, and anything that floats. The German troops defending the base of the bridge linking Strasbourg with Germany were thrown off their balance today when they found that French artillery and machine-guns spanning the Rhine are still intact.

SHAEF today denied reports that Allied patrols had crossed the Rhine.

Radio Paris reported that French armored units ranging south along the Rhine from Strasbourg were within eight miles of French 1st Army units driving northward from Colmar. In the Mülhouse region between Colmar and Belfort, press dispatches said that the Germans were resisting with isolated battles raging in a number of towns. The Germans clung to strongpoints, and the French advance surged around and past them.

Two infantry divisions of the American 7th Army today broadened the Saverne Gap through the Vosges Mountains, and advance units have driven to the outskirts of Mommenheim, 12 miles to the east. Great quantities of material and thousands of men have been pouring through the Saverne Gap for the last two days.

In the central Vosges sector, American and French forces met varied German resistance. Between the Saales and the St. Marie passes west of St. Dié, American forces have liberated the towns of Bourg Bruche, Lubine, and Lusse. To the south, on the high ground between the St. Marie and the Bonhomme passes, French troops are closing up to the American positions, taking the junctions of Laveline and La Croix.

The American 3rd Army offensive along an 11-mile front in the region around the Uzhorod communications junction, 15 miles north of the Hungary-Czechoslovakia frontier.

Advanced elements of this attack have swung west and entered Slovakia, and are now driving for the important junction at Kosice. Mud and rain are proving obstacles almost as great as the German defense. Large areas are covered by water, and streams rushing down from the Carpathians have become swollen rivers.

Where bridges have not been blown up by the Germans, they have been swept away by floods. Crack units which used to move 30 miles a day do well to make three miles under present conditions.

Fifty-six German tanks were knocked out of action yesterday, and 27 enemy aircraft were shot down.

AMERICAN SUBS SINK 27 JAP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, November 25 — American submarines operating in Pacific and Far East waters have sunk 27 Japanese vessels, including a destroyer and a converted gunboat, the Navy Department announced today.

The communique said that the additional sinkings brought total Japanese losses inflicted by submarines to 854 sunk, 37 probably sunk, and 119 damaged. The sinkings reported today included a large transport, a large tanker, a large cargo transport, two medium tankers, two medium cargo transports, 11 medium cargo vessels, a small tanker, six small cargo ships, the destroyer, and the gunboat.

The Chungking daily newspaper Tekung Pao said yesterday that the American naval bombardment of Matsuwa Island in the Kuriles indicates that the Japanese fighting American forces in the Philippines with troops from Manchuria have left their back door «wide open.»

It added: «The Japanese main defense is concentrated in three segments: Thailand, Malaya, Indo-China, and Singapore, comprising the right flank; the Fukien coast, Formosa, and the Philippines in the center; and the Marianas to Japan proper making up the left flank.

JAPS FORCED TO WITHDRAW FROM KALEWA

KANDY, CEYLON, November 25 — Japanese troops have been forced to withdraw from Kalewa, vital Chindwin River port, 48 miles southeast of Tiddim in northwest Burma, a New Delhi broadcast quoted by Reuter said tonight.

The radio reported that an Allied Command force of the 84th West African Division, sent ahead of the main advance, established themselves on the river below Kalewa and blockaded all traffic to and from the Japanese garrison. During a five-day period not a single craft was allowed to pass.

By the time the main advance pushed to the town from the north, the Japanese were forced to withdraw.

An earlier Southeast Asia Command communique had reported that Allied forces had reached within 12½ miles of Kalewa.

Fighting in Bhamo

In northern Burma, troops of the Chinese 38th Division took four more strongpoints at Bhamo, the SEAC communique added. Of these, two were south of the airstrip and a third was north of the strip, where the wedge in the

The British are meeting heavy opposition in the section of the Siegfried zone beyond Geilenkirchen, and no further movement was reported.

In northern Holland, they continued their methodical advance across peat bogs in extreme weather, and have reached the Meuse at Grubbenvorst, north of Venlo. The German rear-guards around Venlo itself are still defending the town against a three-pronged British attack. South of Roermond on the Meuse, British troops are flooded out, and are living on housetops.

Germans in Flight

On the Vosges front, the Germans are in confused flight across the flooded Rhine, using boats, rafts, and anything that floats. The German troops defending the base of the bridge linking Strasbourg with Germany were thrown off their balance today when they found that French artillery and machine-guns spanning the Rhine are still intact.

SHAEF today denied reports that Allied patrols had crossed the Rhine.

Radio Paris reported that French armored units ranging south along the Rhine from Strasbourg were within eight miles of French 1st Army units driving northward from Colmar. In the Mülhouse region between Colmar and Belfort, press dispatches said that the Germans were resisting with isolated battles raging in a number of towns. The Germans clung to strongpoints, and the French advance surged around and past them.

Two infantry divisions of the American 7th Army today broadened the Saverne Gap through the Vosges Mountains, and advance units have driven to the outskirts of Mommenheim, 12 miles to the east. Great quantities of material and thousands of men have been pouring through the Saverne Gap for the last two days.

In the central Vosges sector, American and French forces met varied German resistance. Between the Saales and the St. Marie passes west of St. Dié, American forces have liberated the towns of Bourg Bruche, Lubine, and Lusse. To the south, on the high ground between the St. Marie and the Bonhomme passes, French troops are closing up to the American positions, taking the junctions of Laveline and La Croix.

The American 3rd Army offensive along an 11-mile front inside Germany near the Luxembourg border gained one mile today, and the town of Tettingen was captured. At the eastern end of the line, other American forces made a new entry into Germany at Biringen, five miles southwest of Merzig.

American forces which yesterday crossed the Saar River in the Finstingen area maintained their bridgehead over the river despite a German counter-attack. They are meeting a constant enemy artillery barrage.

SOVIETS ADVANCE IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA, HUNGARY

MOSCOW, November 25 — The liberation of several more places in Czechoslavakia, northwest and west of Csap, was announced in tonight's Soviet communique. Red Army troops also have gained ground in Hungary.

The Germans have admitted the withdrawal from the rail town of Hatvan, about 30 miles northeast of Budapest. This puts Marshal Malinovsky's armor on the main highway to the Hungarian capital.

The southern arm of Marshal Malinovsky's forces gripping the eastern end of Czechoslovakia has sliced deeper into [illegible] stunk, 37 probably sunk, and [illegible] reported today included a large transport, a large tanker, a large cargo transport, two medium tankers, two medium cargo transports, 11 medium cargo vessels, a small tanker, six small cargo ships, the destroyer, and the gunboat.

The Chungking daily newspaper Takung Pao said yesterday that the American naval bombardment of Matsuwa Island in the Kuriles indicates that the Japanese fighting American forces in the Philippines with troops from Manchuria have left their back door «wide open.»

It added: «The Japanese main defense is concentrated in three segments: Thailand, Malaya, Indo-China, and Singapore, comprising the right flank; the Fukien coast, Formosa, and the Philippines in the center; and the Marianas to Japan proper making up the left flank.

KANDY, CEYLON, November 25 — Japanese troops have been forced to withdraw from Kalewa, vital Chindwin River port, 48 miles southeast of Tiddim in northwest Burma, a New Delhi broadcast quoted by Reuter said tonight.

The radio reported that an Allied Command force of the 84th West African Division, sent ahead of the main advance, established themselves on the river below Kalewa and blockaded all traffic to and from the Japanese garrison. During a five-day period not a single craft was allowed to pass.

By the time the main advance pushed to the town from the north, the Japanese were forced to withdraw.

An earlier Southeast Asia Command communique had reported that Allied forces had reached within 12½ miles of Kalewa.

Fighting in Bhamo

In northern Burma, troops of the Chinese 38th Division took four more strongpoints at Bhamo, the SEAC communique added. Of these, two were south of the airstrip and a third was north of the strip, where the wedge in the enemy's defense was enlarged.

Bhamo, the river port which marks the limit of steamer navigation on the Irrawaddy, is the starting point of an important caravan route into southwest China.

At Pinwe, on the Myitkyina-Mogaung-Mandalay railway, troops of the British 36th Division have advanced 200 yards and made their first objective in their new attack on the enemy's positions.

A communique from the 14th USAAF Headquarters in Chungking today said that American heavy bombers last night hit Japanese positions along the waterfront at Hankow, central China, and also bombed enemy installations at Samah Bay, on the northern tip of Hainan Island off China's southern coast.

It added that other U.S. planes struck Japanese airfields at Hengyang and Paoching, in central China, where they wrecked enemy planes and buildings, and hit supply depots. Hengyang is 215 miles northeast of Japanese-held Kweilin. Paoching is 60 miles northwest of Hengyang.

A London Daily Mail correspondent in a dispatch from Calcutta said today that the invasion of Burma already has begun. «It began months ago, but it seemed to pass unnoticed in the general flood of war news. Some people expected an amphibious operation; that may come: but the hard fact now is, that the reconquest of northern Burma is already under way.

« Preliminary moves for retaking Southeast Asia are going so well that the Japanese may soon have to make one of the most vital decisions of the war. They will have to decide whether to pour reinforcements into northern Burma, or whether to cut their losses and withdraw to the south.

« Our offensive has virtually liquidated at least four first-class infantry divisions, which represent more than 60,000 men. At least 30,000 more Japanese are casualties from disease and hunger, and may have fought for the last time in the jungles of Burma.

« On the northern Burma front, the Japanese today are on the defensive. It is the first time in the war of Southeast Asia that this has been the case. Japanese commanders are faced with the prospect of losing the whole of northern Burma, and the next few months, maybe weeks, will decide.

« This offensive represents an advance of more than 200 miles through the wildest mountain and jungle country in the world — and they are fighting miles. All roads now lead to Mandalay. It remains to be seen whether the Japanese will rush in heavy reinforcements to meet the Allied move. »

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 25 — Heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force last night attacked, by means of instrument bombardment techniques, cloud-covered targets in the Linz and Munich areas, it was announced here today.

Only « small forces » of the heavy bombers were employed in the attack.

The heavy bombers reported several enemy night interceptions over the Linz area, but no contact was attempted. Flak over the German targets ranged from moderate to intense.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out intensive attacks on enemy troop positions along the Lamone River in the Faenza area, scattering thousands of fragmentation bombs.

Bad weather yesterday cancelled all daylight operations of the Strategic Air Force, and limited total sorties of the MAAF to « over 450. »

ABNORMAL RAINFALL HAS BOGGED ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 25 — Abnormal rainfall, which in one instance resulted in what would normally be 79 days' rainfall pouring down in a cloudburst of 10 hours' duration, has bogged the Italian front this fall, it was officially reported here today.

Although under normal conditions the Apennines area has an average rainfall more than twice that of London's figure, the rainfall in this part of Italy has been doubled this year.

The record rainfall occurred on the night of October 31, and resulted in flooding the Arno River all along its course, so that temporary bridges were awash, and the Ponte Vecchio, sole span which the Germans left undemolished in their flight from Florence, was within a few inches of immersion.

SIEGFRIED LINE GUNS SHELL STRASBOURG

STRASBOURG, November 25 — A correspondent of the New York Times, in a dispatch yesterday, said that the guns of the Siegfried Line began firing sporadically across the Rhine into the center of Strasbourg, while General Le Clerc's armored forces completed the town's liberation by mopping up pockets of Germans in the southern and eastern outskirts. He said that yesterday's round-up brought the number of Germans captured in the city to 3,000.

NAZI LINES IN WESTERN SERBIA CRACK

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, November 25 — Troops of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation have broken German defenses around Stolovi, in western Serbia, after two days of bitter fighting, and cut the enemy lines of communications between Kraljevo and the west, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

Yugoslav troops killed 750 Germans, took 200 prisoners, and captured much war material of all descriptions, including three tanks and five flame throwers.

In Montenegro, fierce fighting continues round Danilovgrad, where key positions have changed hands several times.

Attacks against enemy lines of communication continued. The Yugoslavs captured two strongholds on the Zagreb-Sisak line, midway between the two towns, and liquidated an enemy detachment on one of the main lines from Zagreb.

In east Bosnia, Marshal Tito's men wiped out a strongpoint east of Sarajevo, and are fighting on the Rogatica-Sienica line to the southeast.

U.S. ARMED FORCES TOTAL 11,759,000

WASHINGTON, November 25 — The U.S. armed forces totalled 11,759,000 as of October 1, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, U.S. Selective Service Director, told the Senate Military Affairs Committee yesterday.

The total figure does not include dead, missing, or captured. About 8,100,000 are in the Army, and more than 3,700,000 in the Navy. Hershey said that since the United States entered the war, 1,441,204 men have been returned to civilian life.

Selective Service boards will remain in existence to assist returning veterans to find civilian employment after they are demobilized, Hershey added.

LONDON, November 25 — After British RAF Mosquito bombers blasted Berlin last night, more than 1,000 American heavy bombers, escorted by more than 1,000 fighter planes continued the Allied air blows against Germany today by attacking the Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg in the Leipzig area. The marshalling yards at Bingen, west of Mainz on the upper Rhine and oil plants at Lutzendorf were also hit in today's attack.

The attack on Leuna by the 8th USAAF follows the large-scale day attack Tuesday, when over 1,250 Liberators and Flying Fortresses, escorted by more than 1,100 fighters, bombed oil refineries in Germany, and RAF Lancasters, escorted by 250 fighters, attacked synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr. There was another attack on the Ruhr oil plants Thursday.

Mitchells and Bostons of the Allied 2nd TAF this morning attacked the railway yards at Rheydt, only 12 miles ahead of the Allied ground forces in the Geilenkirchen area. Rheydt is the biggest rail junction which lies ahead of the Allied advance in this sector.

Halifaxes of the RAF Coastal Command last night attacked German shipping in the Skagerrak. This is the 15th night attack in eight weeks made by the heavy bombers, which seek out enemy convoys in Norwegian waters.

Damage and casualties were reported today from enemy action over southern England during the past 24 hours.

An American bomber last night struck the tower of a church in Norwich. It lost a wing and went on to crash on open ground. The crew were killed.

JOURNALISTS ATTACK PRESS UNDERSECRETARIAT

ROME, November 25 — A statement issued here yesterday by the National Press Federation strongly criticized the activities of the office of the Undersecretary for Press and Information, and demanded that government control of the press be reduced to the absolute minimum consistent with war conditions and the military occupation of Italy.

The statement followed articles in the Roman press of the last few days bitterly critical of recent decrees extending the control of the National Publications Board over radio and film production.

The office of the Undersecretary for Press and Information, the statement recalled, was created by the government for the sole purpose of gradually doing away with the functions of the Ministry of Popular Culture, described as the most powerful organ of intellectual subjection and corruption under Fascism.

The Federation accordingly demanded the abolition of «everything in the organization of the Undersecretariat which maintains, or even appears to maintain, the structure, activities, or spirit of the defunct Ministry.»

The National Publications Board, the statement added, should be composed mainly of journalists, should meet more regularly, and be more efficient in the carrying out of its tasks.

In conclusion, the Federation asked its president, Luigi Salvatorelli, to transmit its demands to the Council of Ministers. (UNN)

MINISTERS WITHOUT PORTFOLIO MEET

ROME, November 25 — The six Ministers Without Portfolio met again this morning, under the presidency of Prime Minister Bonomi, to discuss the solution of the present ministerial problem.

The ministers were Palmiro Togliatti, Communist Party; Alcide de Gasperi, Christian Democrat Party; Giuseppe Saragat, Socialist Party; Meuccio Ruini, Democratic Labor Party; Alberto Cianca, Action Party; and Count Carlo Sforza, Independent.

The Liberals were not represented, as the former Liberal Minister without Portfolio, Niccolò Carandini, is now Ambassador in London, and has not yet been replaced.

CARANDINI SPEAKS OF ITALY'S STRUGGLE

LONDON, November 25 — Describing Italy's efforts to rehabilitate herself, Count Nicolo Carandini, Italy's Ambassador to Great Britain, told The Observer, in an interview here, that «it is a struggle from which Italy is emerging transfigured, redeemed, and democratized.»

«Many acts of valor and of sacrifices remain unknown and, therefore, are ignored. But Italians are not doing them for acknowledgement or praise, but for the Allies, for Europe, and, above all, for themselves — for their conscience, and for the urgent need of completing that psychological redemption which will be at the basis of Italy's conscience of tomorrow,» Carandini said:

«We have come here to do a job, not to take a holiday; to do without luxury, without pretense, and having always before our minds the picture of our country. We have come to collaborate with the Allies, loyally and honestly and without secrets, as is due between gentlemen; and especially with seriousness.»

PISA UNIVERSITY BEGINS 601ST YEAR

PISA, November 25 — The Italians themselves, with the aid of the Allies, must rebuild Italy, Professor Luigi Russo, Protector of the University of Pisa, told an audience of distinguished Allied officials and Italian educators today at ceremonies marking the opening of the university's 601st academic year.

The university, although badly battered and looted by the Germans, was reopened with the assistance of the Allied Commission and Allied Military Government.

The ceremonies were enlivened by the traditional student parade in green, blue, red and yellow medieval costumes of centuries ago. They waved brightly colored flags of the local communes, while other students dressed in plumed hats and student costumes sounded the drums.

Professor Russo, who was installed as Pro-Rector of the university by Brig. Gen. Edward Erskine Hume, senior Civil Affairs Officer of the 5th Army, told the audience that it was General Hume who had encouraged university officials to reopen classes, despite the battered condition of the building.

In his long address, Professor Russo stressed the international character of the University of Pisa during its 600 years of existence, adding that frequently as many as 20 languages would be spoken by students during one term. He recalled that recently Maj. Gen. Mascarenhas, commanding officer of the Brazilian troops on the 5th Army front, had found the records of his grandfather, who had been a student in 1822.

«Italy has suffered in this war, but her suffering was not in sinning,» Professor Russo said. «Italy must rebuild and the Italians themselves will have to restore Italy with the tools supplied by the Allies. Give us the working tools — the laboratory equipment, the books, and the scientific instruments — and we will restore our university just as Italy will restore itself.»

Professor Russo insisted that Italy's part in the war before the Armistice was the war of a party, not the war of the Italian people.

In appreciation of the encouragement and the material support he gave to the university, General Hume was awarded the badge of the Cherubine, an ancient order of the university to which all members of the faculty belong.

Among the guests were the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Gabriele Vettori, Archbishop of Pisa, and Lieut. Col. T. W. J. Walters, of London, AMG Regional Commissioner in Pisa. (UNN)

LIBERATED COMMUNES FED BY A.M.G.

STAZZENA, November 25 — Flour for its bakeries and other rations of food for its civilians are being sent into this commune today by Allied Military Government officials while the Germans drop in an occasional high explosive artillery shell.

Also receiving food from the AMG and artillery fire from the Germans are Stazzena's neighboring communes of Pietrasanta, Seravezza and Forte dei Marmi, a United Nations News correspondent said today.

Retreating Germans left the area devoid of food, but today, Allied authorities are providing sufficient rations for all the population. Bakehouses have been placed in operation, and the first issue of bread was made in Pietrasanta this week. In parts of the communes where there are not sufficient bakehouses, flour has been distributed so the people can make their own bread, the correspondent said.

Close to the front lines, where smoke from an oven might attract shellfire, bread is issued direct. Areas under shellfire from the Germans are being given Allied rations of beans and peas, in addition to the regular rations.

As the Germans ravage the towns they still occupy in Italy, refugees are filtering into Allied lines. Once in Allied territory they are given rations and taken to Fiumello and other refugee stations, where they receive rations reserved especially for them, the correspondent said.

Twenty-one olive-pressing mills have been put in operation at Pietrasanta, and the current crop is being used to supplement food supplied by the AMG. When cases of typhoid were reported recently, serum was rushed to the region.

Cooperation of the local inhabitants, who have repaired bridges destroyed by the Germans and made every effort to help themselves back to their normal way of living, has been praised by AMG officials.

A spokesman for the Union said that each Italian family will be asked to play host to at least one poor child during Christmas week. Motion pictures and other performances suitable for children are also being planned. (UNN)

POPE TO PRAY FOR PEACE

VATICAN CITY, November 25 — Pope Pius XII will take part in a solemn public penance ceremony in St. Peter's on December 10, it was announced today. During the ceremony, the Pope will pray for the early return of peace in the world.

It also was announced that Pope Pius will celebrate Christmas Mass at midnight this year and not on Christmas Eve, as was the case last year. (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

ITALY LOOKS TO UNITED NATIONS FOR HELP

NEW YORK, November 25 — The Italian people are convinced that if the United Nations will help them, «they will be able to help themselves and to reconstruct Italy as a truly peace-loving and democratic nation,» Luigi Antonini, Vice President of the International Ladies Garment Workers' Union and recent emissary of the American Federation of Labor to labor in Italy, said yesterday in an address at the American Federation of Labor convention in New Orleans.

Antonini told the convention that «Italy wants and needs the strict application» of the Four Freedoms and the Atlantic Charter for her own salvation.

In other convention business yesterday, A. F. of L. President William Green appointed a special committee, composed of presidents of five key unions, to consider stepping-up production of heavy shells and other urgently-needed war material.

In Chicago, the Congress of Industrial Organizations held the closing session of its annual convention yesterday, after reëlecting President Philip Murray and all other incumbents.

Before closing, the CIO convention gave full endorsement to plans for the post-war international security organization proposed at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, and also called for «the full and stern punishment of war criminals.»

In another resolution, the CIO said: «There cannot, and must not be any negotiated, soft peace.»

The CIO passed a resolution calling for the formation of a new world trade federation, and approved CIO participation in an International Union Congress, which will meet in London next February to set up such an organization.

The resolution said that the international body was to «include all unions of free countries on a basis of equality, excluding none and relegating none to secondary place.» The resolution added:

«The reëmergence of organized labor in the liberated countries of Europe ... has underlined the importance of our coöperation with them. The rebuilding of trade unions in countries yet to be liberated, and finally in the enemy nations themselves, is the surest guarantee of a rebirth of democracy and world security.»

Discussing his projected trip to London to attend the International Labor Conference, Sidney Hillman, Chairman of the Political Action Committee of the CIO, said yesterday that he would not make the trip unless there was a good chance of achieving some progress toward the organization of a world labor union. LIBERATED COMMUNES FED BY A.M.G.

STAZZENA, November 25 — Flour for its bakeries and other rations of food for its civilians are being sent into this commune today by Allied Military Government officials while the Germans drop in an occasional high explosive artillery shell.

Also receiving food from the AMG and artillery fire from the Germans are Stazzena's neighboring communes of Pietrasanta, Seravezza and Forte dei Marmi, a United Nations News correspondent said today.

Retreating Germans left the area devoid of food, but today, Allied authorities are providing sufficient rations for all the population. Bakehouses have been placed in operation, and the first issue of bread was made in Pietrasanta this week. In parts of the communes where there are not sufficient bakehouses, flour has been distributed so the people can make their own bread, the correspondent said.

Close to the front lines, where smoke from an oven might attract shellfire, bread is issued direct. Areas under shellfire from the Germans are being given Allied rations of beans and peas, in addition to the regular rations.

As the Germans ravage the towns they still occupy in Italy, refugees are filtering into Allied lines. Once in Allied territory they are given rations and taken to Fiumello and other refugee stations, where they receive rations reserved especially for them, the correspondent said.

Twenty-one olive-pressing mills have been put in operation at Pietrasanta, and the current crop is being used to supplement food supplied by the AMG. When cases of typhoid were reported recently, serum was rushed to the region.

Coöperation of the local inhabitants, who have repaired bridges destroyed by the Germans and made every effort to help themselves back to their normal way of living, has been praised by AMG officials, the correspondent said.

Recently, when mules were needed to carry supplies to forward sections, a group of local inhabitants offered their assistance, and returned with five mules, taken from behind the German front line.

Still fresh in the inhabitant's memory is 12 August 1944, when the Germans machine-gunned 514 civilians at Stazzena, and set fire to their gasoline-soaked bodies. (UNN)

ENNA SETS UP RECONSTRUCTION COMMITTEE

ENNA, SICILY, November 25 — A Provincial Reconstruction Committee has been formed here with representatives of public bodies and private concerns, it was announced today.

Organized at the suggestion of the prefect, the Committee will first undertake to solve the more urgent problems of food distribution and unemployment. (UNN)

ITALIAN WOMEN PLAN GIFTS FOR NEEDY CHILDREN

ROME, November 25 — The Union of Italian Women today urged the members of its affiliated clubs throughout liberated Italy to organize the collection of food, clothing, and toys for distribution to needy children in the form of gift packages on Christmas Day.

SMUTS SAYS SOUTH AFRICA TO FIGHT JAPS

JOHANNESBURG, November 25 — South Africa will join the Allies in fighting the Japanese when the European war ends, Prime Minister Jan Christiaan Smuts announced here today.

Besides military participation in the war against the Japanese, South Africa will contribute much material from its industries, particularly in the sphere of ship repairs, Field Marshal Smuts declared. (OWI)

FRANCO-SOVIET ENTENTE URGED

PARIS, November 25 — A plea for closer ties between France and the Soviet Union and a statement on the part such a friendship would play in establishing peace were made yesterday by Georges Bidault, French Minister for Foreign Affairs, on the eve of his departure for Moscow.

The statement said, in part:

«It is indispensable for France and Europe that the traditional entente between the great power of the East and the great Continental power of the West should once again become a reality at which no one in any part of the world can take offense.

«The sacrifices made by the USSR for peace and for the freedom of the world have been so great that, today, all classes of the community appreciate the common sense, traditional, and sentimental reasons which favor such a friendship.

« These reasons are so numerous and so strong, that no government can ignore them, least of all the Provisional Government of the Republic, on the eve of a jurney which is expected to produce essential results for our country, Europe, and the world.

« The peace of the world and human progress depend on an understanding which must include agreement between the two great European Continental powers, and Great Britain and the United States. » (PWB)

YUGOSLAV PREMIER LEAVES MOSCOW

MOSCOW, November 25 — Prime Minister Ivan Subasic of Yugoslavia left Moscow last night. He was accompanied by Vice President of the National Committee of Liberation of Yugoslavia, Kardel.

Tass said they were seen off by an imposing array of Russian Government officials, headed by Deputy People's Commissar of Foreign Affairs Maisky. A guard of honor was drawn up, with both Yugoslav and Soviet flags hoisted.

The prime consideration in the Yugoslav-Soviet talks has been the necessity for forming a united Yugoslav government, a joint communique issued last night by the two governments said.

The text of the joint communique said, in part:

« The talks elicited the necessity of the formation of a united Yugoslav government on the basis of agreements concluded between the President of the Yugoslav National Committee of Liberation, Marshal Tito, and the head of the Royal Government, Dr. Ivan Subasic.

« The Soviet Government welcomes Marshal Tito's and Premier Subasic's efforts to unite all truly democratic national forces in the struggle against the common enemy, and to create a democratic, federative Yugoslavia as a positive and constructive factor toward the achievement of victory and the organization of peace in Europe. » (OWI)

POLISH P. M. TO REMAIN PENDING NEW CABINET

LONDON, November 25 — The Polish Government-in-London announced this morning in a communique that President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz had accepted the resignation of Polish Prime Minister Stanislaw Mikolajczyk and his Cabinet, but had asked them to remain at their posts until the appointment of a new cabinet.

Ian Kwapinski, Socialist Deputy Prime Minister, is forming a new cabinet, it was announced.

No reason was given for the resignation of the Prime Minister, announced last night, but failure to muster cabinet support for his plan to solve the Soviet-Polish situation was suggested among Polish quarters here.

A Reuter dispatch asserted that Mikolajczyk had only the support of his own party — the Peasant Party — with three parties opposing him. They were the Socialists, National Democrats, and Christian Democrats.

Mikolajczyk twice had flown to Moscow to discuss the Polish question, his second visit taking place while Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden were in Moscow. He had further meetings with Marshal Stalin and with the Chairman of the Polish National Council — the Soviet-sponsored body which operates from Lublin, in liberated Poland. (OWI - Reuter)

INTER-AMERICAN DEFENSE WHITE BOOK

NEW YORK, November 25 — The Inter-American Hemisphere Defense Committee yesterday issued a White Book containing a statement on Argentina and a report of the Committee's activities during the year.

The book, which was sent to the American governments, outlined the action taken by the American republics « against the dangers proceeding from the divergent policy adopted by a sister republic, and the possibility that elements addicted to Axis powers would seize power in any American republic. »

« Unfortunately, » the White Book said, « the American republics were not accompanied in this action by one of the members of their community. The position adopted by the Argentine Government immediately after the third consultative conference of American foreign ministers already indicated divergent tendencies which finally have brought about the definite separation of that Government from other members of the community of American nations. »

The White Book said that the end of the war would require the intensification of the cooperative American contribution to the defeat of the Axis.

« The end of the war, » the White Book warned, « will not put an end to the dangers against which this Continent has fought.

« The germs for the resurgence of totalitarian ideas exist in the American republics, and feed upon the same kind of uncontrolled and suicidal nationalism which submerged the world in the present conflict. » (OWI)

BRUSSELS POLICE CLASH WITH DEMONSTRATORS

BRUSSELS, November 25 — City police today clashed with demonstrators outside of Government buildings on the Rue de la Roi.

NO NORMAL FRENCH-U. S. TRADE FOR SIX MONTHS

WASHINGTON, November 25 — Normal commerce between the United States and France may not be resumed for six to eight months, officials of the Foreign Economic Administration said in a statement yesterday.

The statement followed a recent announcement by FEA officials that French officials were discussing 2,000 million dollar's worth of American goods for use in re-building war-torn France.

The statement added:

«Our troops at the front are our first major supply problem. If the physical possibility exists of loading anything besides army supplies in France, such supplies must be primary essentials for the French population.» (OWI)

B.B.C. APPEALS TO WORKERS INSIDE GERMANY

LONDON, November 25 — Foreign workers in the areas already occupied by the Allied forces have led the way for those throughout Germany who are resisting Nazi control, BBC said last night in the regular series of broadcasts addressed to workers inside Germany.

In one factory in Aachen, BBC reported, six weeks before the Allies liberated the town, 675 out of 700 foreign workers answered General Eisenhower's call. They left the factory and went to a nearby community, where they awaited in safety the arrival of the Allied forces.

These workers have saved their own lives, and helped the common cause, the broadcast continued. As the Allies approach the Rhine, the time has come for all foreign workers in that area to follow the lead of the Aachen workers.

Only in this way can the oppressed show their defiance of the oppressor and regain their freedom, the broadcast said.

The BBC added that, for the German people as well, freedom lies west of the Rhine, not east with the retreating German armies. All who wish to save themselves and thus begin to rebuild Germany are urged not to allow themselves to be dragged eastward. (PWB)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, November 25 — Todays communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

British troops of the 8th Army, after three days of intensive fighting, have driven the enemy from his defensive positions on the Rivers Montone and Cosina, and are driving on towards the River Lamone. Armored patrols, accompanied by infantry, have reached the eastern outskirts of Faenza.

On their left, Polish troops of the 8th Army have also made considerable gains. They have cleared all enemy resistance east of the River Samoggia, and have occupied Monte Chiesuola.

Other troops of the 8th Army have occupied the important feature of M. Castellaccio, which, like M. Chiesuola, commands the ground south of the River Marzeno, which Polish troops are now approaching on a wide front.

In the 5th Army sector, all efforts by the enemy to probe our defences were defeated.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Unfavourable weather yesterday caused the curtailment of most air operations, but Tactical Air Force medium, light, and fighter-bombers, flying in support of the ground troops in Italy, hit roads, bridges, and strongpoints in the Faenza defense area.

Small shipping in the Adriatic, and road targets in Yugoslavia were attacked by small forces of Balkan and Coastal Air Force planes.

Last night, a small force of heavy bombers bombed have advanced to Hilsprich, and repulsed an enemy counter-attack in the area.

East of Finstingen, our forces have crossed the Saar River, and are in the vicinity of Postdorf.

Our forces have cleared the enemy from the major portion of Strasbourg, and have taken some 2,000 prisoners. Many additional prisoners are being rounded up in the vicinity of the city.

A counter-attack northwest of the Saverne Gap which caused us to make some slight withdrawals was beaten off, and most of the lost ground regained.

Steady progress was made toward clearing the enemy from the Vosges Mountains in the Saales Pass area, and on the slopes of the Ballon d'Alsace north of Belfort.

Adverse weather yesterday restricted air operations. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, November 25 — Tonight's communique:

During November 25, on the territory of Czechoslovakia, northwest and west of Csap, our troops occupied in fighting the populated localities of Nemetska Poruba, Joksa, Kushin, Klokachek, Gazhen, Jastrebe, Infachovtse, Bochany, Maly Tarkan, and Velikiy Tarkan.

In Hungary, our troops captured the populated localities of Orekchanovosz, Kakasz, Tarnesentmarye, Kerekharat, and Demand.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During November 24, our troops disabled or destroyed 56 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 27 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 25 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Intense Patriot activity is continuing in Turin Province. On October 26, elements of a Patriot brigade attacked a road block at Collegno, in the vicinity of a German headquarters. The enemy suffered losses as yet unascertained.

On October 27, detachments of the same brigade attacked a Fascist patrol, killing two of the enemy.

On October 28, elements of another brigade assaulted a detachment of German soldiers stationed at the Rivoli station. The enemy was armed with a Tiger tank and four small-calibre cannon. First reports say one German soldier was killed and many wounded.

On November 2, still another Patriot brigade attacked Germans busy on defense projects near Truc di Miola, also in Turin Province. Two of the enemy were killed, and others wounded; arms and ammunition were captured.

On November 3, two Germans were ambushed and killed near the Casalette powder factory.

Finally, on November 4, Patriot detachments conducted a harassing action against a German military train near Bussoleno; one enemy soldier was killed, and three others were wounded.

It can now be disclosed that on October 9, the Germans launched an attack against the Patriots north of Brescia. They used tracer bullets of various colors, probably an attempt to hide their real objectives from the Patriots. On entering the Canonica Valley the Germans burned down all but two of the houses at Breno. (UNN)

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 25 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The defensive battle for Aix la Chapelle is approaching its climax. Between Geilenkirchen and Eschweiler, yesterday, the Americans, in order to make up for their heavy losses, brought up fresh forces from the rear and tried to improve their initial positions for resuming their attacks. Our divisions dispersed tank concentrations by their concentrated fire, and drove back the enemy in counter-attacks.

In the Hürtgen Forest, most of the U.S. attacks were arrested in fierce forest fighting.

In the Metz area, German formations continued to resist in the old forts.

North and northeast of the Bischt Forest, in eastern Lorraine, numerous enemy attacks failed.

North of Saarburg, counter-attacks of our tanks struck from a northerly direction at the flank of the enemy movements.

In Strasbourg and its outskirts, German formations defend themselves in the old forts and strongpoints.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Brisk fighting is in progress for the summits of the central Vosges.

Our troops in upper Alsace cleared most of the Hart Forest of the enemy, and advance on a broad front to the west and southward.

North of Belfort, the enemy continues to exert strong pressure on the frontiers of Alsace.

Northeast of Delle, relief attacks on our bolt positions and attempts of the encircled enemy at breaking through failed.

At the Gateway of Burgundy, according to preliminary reports, 96 enemy tanks have been destroyed since November 6.

London, Antwerp, and, particularly, Greater Liége were subjected to bombardment with our long-range weapons by day and by night.

Italy:

In the Etruscan Apennines, southwest of Vergato, U.S. formations attacked our positions unsuccessfully.

Between Faenza and Forli, yesterday, our troops again frustrated attempts at breaking through made by British divisions with huge quantities of material, in fierce fighting which lasted throughout the whole day.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, the Bolsheviks again attempted to break through with strong forces proceeding from the bridgeheads from Apatin and Batina. They were halted after a little advance by our concentrated defensive fire.

In central Hungary, there was fierce fighting just south of Budapest.

In the Hatvan sector and on both sides of Miscolcz, strong enemy attacks were unsuccessful, except for some minor gains.

Northwest of Ungvar and at the Dukla Pass road, local Bolshevik attacks collapsed in front of our positions.

In the second big defensive battle in Kurland, our valiant troops achieved a complete defensive success against the onslaught of eight Soviet armies. The Bolshevik attempt at breaking through, which had been made with numerous tanks, after the artillery had fired 200,000 rounds, was frustrated, in part by counter-attacks. Minor penetrations were cleared up.

The fighting on the Sworbe Peninsula has ended. The valiant garrison, which had been pushed into the southern part of the peninsula, during the day was evacuated to the mainland by formations of the Navy and landing pioneers.

The garrison had to ward off superior Soviet attacks during the operation.

Spotlight on Poland: The item most exploited for propaganda purposes today was the resignation of the Premier of the Polish Government-in-London. German sources are using this event as a springboard for playing up real or imagined dissensions within the Allied camp, between the Soviets and the western democracies.

Transocean quotes the following Wilhelmstrasse statement: «Mikolajczyk had drawn the only possible conclusion, namely that he was to be sacrificed to the Lublin Committee, and consequently resigned. The Wilhelmstrasse spokesman went on to say that the British guaranty to Poland [illegible] The master of the town «heavily devastated by enemy air-terror.» Concerning the war, Goebbels said:

Western Front: Sertorius deems the «general situation» to be «unchanged.» He finds that the «main features» of the battle raging in the fighting area along the Würm and Ruhr are the «growing activity of the German defence and the steady increase of German artillery to an extent unexpected by the Allies.»

The propaganda treatment of the march of the 3rd Army is to present it as an action «compelled,» rather than chosen, hence representing no real gain. «In the frontier area of Lorraine and the Saar, the weakened American 3rd Army is compelled to accomplish another strategic movement toward the German western fortifications.»

Eastern Front: Von Olberg reports the situation of the great battle in Hungary as «completely unchanged.» South of the Matra Mountains, «fierce fighting» continues, but without any «changes of more than local importance.»

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

German Withdrawal Near Forli: The Fascist radio reports that the 8th Army offensive continues northwest of Forli. After today's «fierce fighting» the Germans were forced to make a slight withdrawal from this area. It is claimed that by «stubborn resistance» the Germans have deprived the Allies of any decisive success, at the same time engaging them in a battle of attrition. It was again stated that extensive Allied losses have necessitated the bringing up of reinforcements.

War-Weariness Increases in Britain: The thematic content of most of today's Fascist commentaries devolved upon the allegedly critical state of affairs and of public sentiments in Britain. The «unexpected» prolongation of the war has supposedly brought British fighting spirit to the breaking point. The terroristic efficacy of the V-1 and V-2 weapons is pointed out at length, but concurrent with its demoralizing effect the following reasons for unrest are given:

Politicians are weary of enforced inactivity; soldiers are tired of the trenches, and the home front frets because of sedentary monotony; the Government, unable to predict the end of the war, resorts to the duplicity of artificial palliatives (British radio propaganda supposedly keeps its audience through the broadcasting of semi-sensational news); again, the Government has allegedly had to discontinue all discussions of and plans for post-war peace, substituting rigorous appeals for further sacrifices. The whole landscape of war-weary Britain, conclude the various Fascist commentators, is dominated by the element of haste, with its accompaniment of waste.

Allied Pillage in Rome: «A group of individuals has been arrested in St. Peter's Square, in the act of looting Vatican treasures. The looting took place amidst guitar music and songs.»

New Monarchist Party in «Invaded» Italy: It is ironically announced that a new party has been formed in liberated Italy, composed of «pure» Monarchists, who should not be confused with other Monarchists.» With double irony, it is observed that, since there are «at least 12 pretenders to the throne — Savoy, Bourbon,» etc., then each of the 12, under democracy, must perforce have his say and his party; hence a babel and a deadlock.

which lasted throughout the whole day.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, the Bolsheviks again attempted to break through with strong forces proceeding from the bridgeheads from Apatin and Batina. They were halted after a little advance by our concentrated defensive fire.

In central Hungary, there was fierce fighting just south of Budapest.

In the Hatvan sector and on both sides of Miscolcz, strong enemy attacks were unsuccessful, except for some minor gains.

Northwest of Ungvar and at the Dukla Pass road, local Bolshevik attacks collapsed in front of our positions.

In the second big defensive battle in Kurland, our valiant troops achieved a complete defensive success against the onslaught of eight Soviet armies. The Bolshevik attempt at breaking through, which had been made with numerous tanks, after the artillery had fired 200,000 rounds, was frustrated, in part by counter-attacks. Minor penetrations were cleared up.

The fighting on the Sworbe Peninsula has ended. The valiant garrison, which had been pushed into the southern part of the peninsula, during the day was evacuated to the mainland by formations of the Navy and landing pioneers.

The garrison had to ward off superior Soviet attacks during the operation.

Spotlight on Poland: The item most exploited for propaganda purposes today was the resignation of the Premier of the Polish Government-in-London. German sources are using this event as a springboard for playing up real or imagined dissensions within the Allied camp, between the Soviets and the western democracies.

Transocean quotes the following Wilhelmstrasse statement: « Mikolajczyk had drawn the only possible conclusion, namely that he was to be sacrificed to the Lublin Committee, and consequently resigned. The Wilhelmstrasse spokesman went on to say that the British guaranty to Poland had now been formally abandoned. The master of the situation was the Lublin Committee, which aimed at Bolshevizing Poland. »

Goebbels Speech: The German Minister of Propaganda has followed up his morale-boosting article of the day before with a speech in similar vein. The speech was delivered during a visit to German factory workers in a great battle in Hungary as « completely unchanged. » South of the Maira Mountains, « fierce fighting » continues, but without any « changes of more than local importance. »

TOKYO HIT IN BIGGEST AIR ATTACK ON JAPAN

WASHINGTON, November 24 — Huge fires are still burning in the heart of Tokyo hours after the daylight attack by a «sizeable task force» of Superfortresses based on Saipan Island in the Marianas, the War Department announced tonight.

The mammoth American bombers dropped tons of bombs upon the Musashino airplane plant, in the northwest section of the city, and on other selected targets such as hydroelectric plants and dams, shipyards, and repair docks and the inner industrial area. Musashino is a principal Japanese military aircraft factory.

In the Tokyo attack a week ago, at a briefing for the mission, that President Roosevelt himself was eagerly awaiting word of their history-making flight from the base 1,250 miles from their target.

General Hansell, according to the dispatch, said «It gives me great pleasure to bring the word you have been waiting for — this is the works. We will hit our target.

«This mission is important to the Japanese people. They have been told that their military forces everywhere are successful. They were told so recently. Bombs on targets in the great cities of Japan will correct that impression as nothing else could do.

«It is important to the people of the United States. The President is standing by waiting for a message from this headquarters.

«It is important to us, because precise target destruction will cut the power of the Japanese machine. I have every confidence that you will do this job. I plan to send this message: 'By daylight bombing, we hit our target in the Tokyo area.' General Arnold will take the message to the President.

«I am confident you are going to let me send that message. Good luck and good bombing.»

«Battle for Japan Has Been Joined»

That message was delivered by General Henry Arnold, Commander-in-Chief of U. S. Army Air Forces, to the President last night.

In the triumphant statement, General Arnold and Lieutenant General Millard F. Harmon, commander of the USAAF in the Pacific, promised that the Superfortress assault on Tokyo is only a beginning, and that soon no part of the Japanese Empire will be immune from air attacks.

General Arnold said, in part:

«This operation is in no sense a hit-and-run raid. It is a calculated extension of our air power. Combined operations of the Navy and the Army in the Pacific have won these island bases from which our B-29's now may strike at will into the enemy homeland. No part of the Japanese Empire is now out of our range, no war factory too remote to feel our bombs. The battle for Japan has been joined.

«The systematic demolition of Japan's war production, begun six months ago from China bases, henceforth will be carried out with decisive vigor, softening up the Japanese heart for the ultimate invasion by combined United Nations' land, sea, and air forces. This will not be accomplished in a short time. The battle is just beginning. But today we opened against Tokyo an attack which will be carried on relentlessly from the air until the day of the land and sea invasion.»

Emphasizing that the Tokyo raid was «made possible by the Americans who fought and died for the Marianas,» General Arnold added:

TOKYO HIT IN BIGGEST AIR ATTACK ON JAPAN

WASHINGTON, November 24 — Huge fires are still burning in the heart of Tokyo hours after the daylight attack by a « sizeable task force » of Superfortresses based on Saipan Island in the Marianas, the War Department announced tonight.

The mammoth American bombers dropped tons of bombs upon the Musashine airplane plant, in the northwest section of the city, and on other selected targets such as hydroelectric plants and dams, shipyards, and repair docks and the inner industrial area. Musashine is a principal Japanese military aircraft factory.

All but two participating aircraft returned from this biggest attack of the war on Japan, the communique said. Anti-aircraft fire was « moderate, » and early reports indicated only « slight » fighter opposition. For the first time in recent attacks on Japan, the weather permitted bomber crews a clear view of their targets, and « good results » were reported.

The attack by the newly-formed 21st Bomber Command under Brigadier General Heywood S. Hansell, Jr., was the first on the Japanese capital since 18 April 1942, when 16 medium bombers under the command of Lieutenant General James Doolittle (then a lieutenant colonel) took off from the aircraft carrier Hornet to bomb Tokyo.

The mission was led by Brigadier General Emmet O'Donnell, Jr., leader of the first flight over Tokyo, who said: « We took them by surprise again. At first they were not up to meet us with their fighters, and their ack-ack fire was meager and inaccurate. It was one of the easiest missions that I have ever been on. »

General O'Donnel rode in the first plane over Tokyo, which had Major Robert Morgan, pilot of the famous Flying Fortress Memphis Belle of the 8th USAAF in Europe, at its controls.

A delayed Associated Press dispatch from Saipan said that General Hansell told the men who were to take part in the great cities of Japan will correct that impression as nothing else could do.

« It is important to the people of the United States. The President is standing by waiting for a message from this headquarters.

GENERAL BLASKOWITZ REMOVED FROM COMMAND

LONDON, November 24 — Col. General Johannes Blaskowitz was reported today to have been removed from the German command in eastern France, where the southern end of the German line is crumbling before the Allied offensive, an Associated Press dispatch said late tonight.

The removal of General Blaskowitz would leave the Western Front defended by two German army groups, in place of the three previously deployed — one under Field Marshal Walther Model, in the north, and the other under Gen. Hermann Balck, in the south. (OWI)

NAZI PRISONERS REFUSE TO ESCAPE

WITH U.S. 3RD ARMY, November 24 — German planes, flying low over prisoner of war cages on the 3rd Army front, today dropped parachutes carrying grenades, dynamite, and leaflets inciting captives to break out.

Some of the parachutes fell inside the stockade, but the prisoners made no effort to use the munitions and went out of their way to tell the guards where they had fallen. (Reuter)

«As our American factories feed the voracious appetite of our B-29's with replacements and bombs, we will pound Japan's war machine out of existence. With the 20th Bomber Command in China and the 21st on Saipan, we may now strike at Japan from two directions, and sustain the attack until the destruction of her war industries has been completed.

«No matter where the Japanese may try to hide their factories, we will seek them out and destroy them. We are going to do just that. Japan has sowed the wind. Now let it reap the whirlwind.»

General Harmon's statement accompanied a U.S. War Department announcement that he has been named Deputy Commander of the 20th Air Force and will direct operations in the Pacific of both the China-based 20th Bomber Command and the Marianas-based 21st Bomber Command. Harmon said:

«With the initial operation of an air task force of the 21st Bomber Command from bases in the Marianas, we have brought Japan within range of our Superfortresses from the east, as well as from the west. No part of the homeland of Japan is now safe from land-based air attacks. We can hit where and when we choose.

«The great achievement represented in this attack is not lessened by the realization that it is but a partial contribution to the end of the war with Japan. Bombing, even with air forces en masse, is not a 'hit and victory' operation. As part of the land, sea, and air offensive against Japan, we must and will sustain and intensify our attacks for many months to come before victory will be in sight.

New Phase Begins

«This marks the true beginning of a new phase of the air war against Japan, in which its various aspects will steadily unfold. The coordinated, synchronized action of all elements of land, sea, and air forces in the Pacific has proved to be a mighty striking force. It will not lessen in power in the months ahead.

«The time is not far now, when Japan will be subjected to the combined efforts of air units based from Alaska, through the Philippines, and over into China — a ring of air effort focussed on the Imperial Empire.»

A realistic account of the Superfortress attack on Tokyo military targets was provided by an American press correspondent who was aboard one of the planes and reported «few fighters were able to reach our high altitude.»

He said: «At 1209 our target was very plain. The clustered aircraft factory buildings came into the bombardier's sight.

«At 1212, the bombardier called 'Bombs away.'»

As his plane left the Japanese Capital behind, the correspondent revealed, «six violent fires were blazing up among the rectangular buildings of the great Nakajima aircraft factory.»

Meanwhile, General Arnold radioed congratulations to General Hansell: «You have successfully engaged the enemy in the heart of his Empire. This marks the beginning of what I know will be a most distinguished career for the 21st Bomber Command. We are proud of you. Good luck and God bless you.» (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

ALLIED PATROLS REPORTED ACROSS RHINE

LONDON, November 24 — American and French advance patrols were reported to have crossed the flooded Rhine River late today east of Strasbourg, but press reports said that they are not necessarily a spearhead of a major drive into Germany.

Allied forces eliminated all resistance in the Alsatian industrial city with the exception of a small, powerfully-defended German position at the base of the undamaged main bridge across the Rhine. French and American troops

It was announced tonight that Maj. Gen. Wade H. Haislip commanded the 15th Corps of the U. S. 7th Army which led the breakthrough at the Saverne Pass to the Alsatian Plain.

American 3rd Army forces which yesterday linked up with 7th Army forces at Sarrebourg drove northward along a main highway and captured Finstingen, road and rail center south of Saargemünd. The American forces crossed the Saar River in this area and have made an advance of two miles against considerable German armored resistance.

Other 3rd Army forces driving northeastward from Dieuze reached Johanns Rohrbach, less than 15 miles south of the Saar basin capital of Saarbrücken.

In the area of Metz, American forces captured another fort, leaving four bastions still holding out. The Germans left an estimated 3,100 troops to defend the fortresses, which are being pounded by artillery fire.

The American front in southwest Germany was enlarged to a width of almost 15 miles today; late press dispatches reported the penetration of Merzig, a Siegfried Line town on the Saar River, by American patrols. Other 3rd Army forces, to the northwest, captured the small town of Oberleuken after overcoming numerous tank obstacles.

Big Enemy Counter-Offensive

The German High Command has committed seven crack divisions to the battle for the rain-soaked Cologne Plain far to the north. A powerful German counter-attack, which moved behind flame-throwers and a drumfire artillery barrage, drove the British 2nd Army from the villages of Beeck and Hoven, three miles northeast of Geilenkirchen.

The Germans are reported to have thrown three tank, one tank grenadier, and three veteran infantry divisions into the attack. All possible German reinforcements are being sent into the line to hold the Allied drive into the industrial Ruhr.

After withdrawing from Hoven, British and American forces stood their ground against the flame-throwing tanks and charging riflemen, and are now facing the biggest counter-offensive since the fighting in Normandy.

Along the combined front of the British 2nd Army and the U. S. 9th and 1st armies, heavy battles were waged. The Germans have laid an almost continual carpet of mines as they fall back. Every wood is sown with explosives of every description, from wooden «shoe» mines to heavy shells buried a few inches below the sodden surface.

Slight gains were made in the center of the front as Allied forces reached the Roer River in two places southwest of Jülich. Of the toll of 110 German tanks knocked out in the past seven days, 23 were the new Tiger Royals, which have six-inch-thick armor.

American 1st Army troops continued to close in on Weisweiler, a road junction on the Adolf Hitler military highway, and made limited gains toward Düren. The Germans were observed evacuating Weisweiler, to the northeast, behind a strong rear-guard screen. American heavy artillery pounded the withdrawing German columns.

In southeastern Holland, British forces have advanced to within 2,500 yards of Venlo after capturing Blerick. They are now through the first belt of fortifications. To the south, the German pocket west of Roermond was wiped out, and British forces closed up to the Meuse River. Activity flared up in the center of the Meuse River front as British troops advanced two miles across muddy, mine-sown fields to capture Oostrum, less than three miles from the Meuse.

ALLIED PATROLS REPORTED ACROSS RHINE

LONDON, November 24 — American and French advance patrols were reported to have crossed the flooded Rhine River late today east of Strasbourg, but press reports said that they are not necessarily a spearhead of a major drive into Germany.

Allied forces eliminated all resistance in the Alsatian industrial city with the exception of a small, powerfully-defended German position at the base of the undamaged main bridge across the Rhine. French and American troops were within 300 yards of the heavily-mined bridge. Heavy fighting raged last night around the famous Strasbourg Cathedral before the Germans were pushed back.

All roads leading into the Strasbourg area from the liberated Saverne Pass were choked with Allied trucks, almost bumper-to-bumper, carrying tons of material, and with large numbers of troop reinforcements heading toward the Rhine.

Behind the Allied spearhead at the Rhine, American 7th Army troops spread out over the Alsatian Plain building up a firm position between the city and the Vosges Mountains. Over 50,000 soldiers of the German 19th Army are caught in the Vosges pocket between Strasbourg to the north and Mülhouse to the south.

French forces are driving north from Mülhouse along the Rhine Valley, despite snow and floods, steadily liberating more territory. Their advances are supported by heavy artillery fire being laid down on the east bank.

The Germans pinned between the two Allied armies have little chance of crossing the flooded, swirling Rhine, as nearly all bridges have been smashed by Allied bombers. The road and rail bridge at Strasbourg is the only permanent span but there remain a floating bridge and several pontoon bridges which can be used only at night.

BRITISH CROSS COSINA IN FAENZA SECTOR

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 24 — British infantry forces, following a concerted night attack on a 2½-mile-wide front, have crossed the Cosina River in at least five places to establish a series of bridgeheads within three miles of Faenza.

The 8th Army infantry attack — carried out in the face of savage enemy resistance in which heavy artillery, mortar, and machine-gun fire was employed to strengthen the German river bank defenses — succeeded in gaining intact one of the bridges across the stream, over which tank forces were rushed to meet the enemy counter-attacks.

Although bitter fighting continued along the west bank of the stream, the five small bridgeheads won in the early fighting Wednesday night were reported here today to be «firmly established» and British troops have occupied the village of Fugna, two miles south of the main Po Valley Highway and on the west bank of the Cosina River.

The British crossing of the Cosina River was made along the curving stretch of the stream south and southwest of the Emilia Highway, where a network of secondary roads connect the fertile farmlands with the important Po Valley town of Faenza. Numerous small watercourses cut through this approach to the city, and the Lamone River and its tributaries flow northward just at the city's eastern edge. Each of these water barriers might afford enemy forces new delaying positions in their bitter defense of Faenza.

Polish troops yesterday advanced a half-mile north of the village of San Biagio, to seize the crest of Monte Ricci, overlooking the Marzeno River, one of the tributaries of the Lamone, and only little over three miles south of Faenza's outskirts, thus narrowing still further the curving front pressing in on the German stronghold.

In the sector northeast of the Po Valley Highway, 8th Army positions remained virtually unchanged, although two enemy outposts on the east bank of the Montone River were engaged and destroyed, and agressive patrols cleared the last enemy stragglers from the lowlands south of the Fiumi Uniti, south of Ravenna.

Sporadic enemy raids against 5th Army positions yesterday were repulsed. (PRO)

RUSSIANS CLEAR OESEL ISLAND, ALL ESTONIA

MOSCOW, November 24 — Oesel Island, commanding the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, was today completely cleared of Germans by the combined efforts of units of the Red Army and the Red Banner Baltic Fleet.

An order of the day by Marshal Stalin announced that the whole territory of Estonia was now freed from the enemy.

The island of Oesel (Saaremaa), which had been converted by the Germans into a strong-point covering the approaches to the Gulf of Riga, can now provide Russian bombers with bases within range of Germany's main escape routes along the Baltic Front.

While Soviet armed cutters closed inshore and shelled enemy positions on the island in support of Soviet artillery, Stormoviks attacked German warships. One enemy destroyer, one patrol vessel, and two patrol cutters were sunk. Three direct hits were scored on one heavy cruiser, and two patrol vessels and a landing barge were damaged.

In Hungary, the two new Russian thrusts in the battle for the approaches to Czechoslovakia — from Tokay in Hungary, and from the Csap area in the Carpatho-Ukraine — have gained ground and are cutting behind the last positions of the German and Hungarian forces on the Upper Tisza.

Tonight's Soviet communique announced the capture of Csapel Ubrek, Cherna, and Setnigovshe, with other localities northwest and west of Csap, while in Hungary they took Mojosz, Meszesombor, Ledyet-Benniye, and Bak.

Nazis Surprised

The two thrusts, 50 miles apart, began after almost the whole of Hungary west of the Danube had passed into the Red Army's hands. A dispatch from Czechoslovakia said that the Germans and Hungarians expected a long lull on this front after the difficult crossing over the Carpathians and the recent liberation of Chust, Mucachevo, and Uzhorod, and were preparing for a protracted defense. The artillery barrage and blows from Stormoviks and bombers against their defenses north and northwest of Csap therefore took them by surprise, and one locality after another fell to the Soviet forces. Csap itself changed hands several times, but it is now held by Soviet troops.

Moscow dispatches say that General Petrov's new drive has all the ear-marks of a full-scale offensive, and the Russians have already broken through a strong belt of German defenses.

On other sectors of the front, the Soviet communique tonight reported only patrolling and fighting of local importance. No confirmation is given of the report of the German news agency's military correspondent that at least 32 Russian infantry divisions, complete with armor and all tactical and tank reserves, have been thrown into a new offensive on the northern wing of the Eastern Front. The German report said the offensive began yesterday morning with a terrific artillery barrage.

CHINESE TROOPS DRIVE INTO BHAMO

KANDY, CEYLON, November 24 — Chinese troops have driven into the Japanese stronghold of Bhamo, key to central Burma, from the south and the northeast, Southeast Asia Command headquarters announced today.

The announcement said that strong Japanese positions were breached at two points in the southern part of the town, while a single Chinese column deepened the wedge in the northern suburbs. Bhamo was surrounded by Allied forces nearly two weeks ago.

In the railway corridor west of Bhamo, troops of the British 36th Division opened an attack on Pinwe yesterday crossing the Gyobin Chaung and taking their first objectives.

On the Chindwin Front, ground and air operations were continued against enemy positions west of Kalewa. Allied planes destroyed five bridges in the area. Allied infantry attacked Japanese positions west of Paletwa in the Arakan area.

Heavy bombers attacked the harbor at Khao Hu Gant on the southernmost tip of Burma on Wednesday, damaging shipping and hitting two floating planes.

Meanwhile, bombers and fighters of the 14th USAAF struck deep this week into Japanese-occupied territory on the China fronts, and harried enemy supply lines, Major General Albert Wedemeyer's headquarters in Chungking announced today. (OWI)

TOKYO PHOTOGRAPHED BEFORE MAJOR ATTACK

SAIPAN, MARIANAS ISLANDS, November 24 — Yesterday's major Superfortress attack on Tokyo was preceded by reconnaissance missions over the capital city by a Superfortress carrying camera crews which photographed anti-aircraft defenses and future targets, an American correspondent said in a dispatch from here today. (OWI)

HANOVER ATTACKED AGAIN

LONDON, November 24 — RAF Mosquito bombers dropped 4,000-pound bombs last night in their second raid in three nights on Hanover, key rail junction on the supply routes from Berlin and Hamburg to the Western Front. They also struck at other objectives behind the German lines.

At the same time, night intruder aircraft of the Royal Air Force bombed airfields behind the enemy lines.

In a BBC war commentary tonight, Squadron Leader John Strachey said that the RAF's special 5½-ton bomb, which among other achievements has sunk the Tirpitz, is so perfectly streamlined that it falls faster than sound, like the rocket bomb. This speed, very much greater than that of an ordinary bomb, greatly increases accuracy.

American heavy bombers, in an attack made three months ago and disclosed tonight, almost demolished a rocket-bomb plant near Weimar. About 45 buildings were totally destroyed, and many others were badly damaged. Reconnaissance photos show that Gestapo offices nearby were also wrecked. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

GERMAN SUPPLY SHIP SUNK OFF NORWAY

LONDON, November 24 — A large supply vessel and a medium supply ship were hit by torpedoes during a recent British submarine attack on a German convoy off the Norwegian coast, an Admiralty communique said today.

One of the ships blew up and sank. The other was set on fire and is believed to have sunk soon afterward. The submarine suffered neither casualties nor damage. (Reuter) enemy.

The island of Oesel (Saaremaa), which had been converted by the Germans into a strong-point covering the approaches to the Gulf of Riga, can now provide Russian bombers with bases within range of Germany's main escape routes along the Baltic Front.

While Soviet armed cutters closed inshore and shelled enemy positions on the island in support of Soviet artillery, Stormoviks attacked German warships. One enemy destroyer, one patrol vessel, and two patrol cutters were sunk. Three direct hits were scored on one heavy cruiser, and two patrol vessels and a landing barge were damaged.

In Hungary, the two new Russian thrusts in the battle for the approaches to Czechoslovakia — from Tokay in Hungary, and from the Csap area in the Carpatho-Ukraine — have gained ground and are cutting behind the last positions of the German and Hungarian forces on the Upper Tisza.

Tonight's Soviet communique announced the capture of Csapel Ubrek, Cherna, and Setnigovshe, with other localities northwest and west of Csap, while in Hungary they took Majosz, Meszesombor, Ledyet-Benniye, and Bak.

1,500 JAPS DROWN AS U.S.N. SINKS FOUR SHIPS

PEARL HARBOR, November 24 — A convoy of four Japanese ships attempting to reinforce enemy forces on Leyte Island was wiped out today by American forces, General MacArthur announced in a communique.

An estimated 4,500 Japanese troops were drowned in the attack, according to the Associated Press.

Two transports were destroyed, a third set afire and an escort vessel sunk.

The escort vessel was identified as a destroyer. It was sunk with all hands on board.

A small force of American planes carried out the attack. They sank one 11,000-ton transport and another 2,000-ton transport. The beached ship, a 6,000-ton vessel, was left in flames.

A total of 6,000 Japanese troops are estimated to have been in the convoy. (OWI - Reuter)

M.A.A.F. CUTS TWO BRIDGES IN YUGOSLAVIA

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, November 24 — Yesterday's concentrated heavy and fighter-bomber attacks on the sole remaining enemy rail escape route past Partisan and Russian forces in Yugoslavia resulted in the destruction of two bridges along the more than 100-mile-long narrow guage rail line between Sarajevo and Brod, it was announced here today.

Examination of bomb-strike photographs indicated that, in addition to the rail bridge over the Bosnia River at Doboj, 30 miles south of Brod, a second bridge across the river at Zenica, 35 miles northwest of Sarajevo, was also destroyed.

R.A.F. heavy and medium bombers, flying in daylight yesterday, pounded German troop concentrations in the towns of Uzice and Rogatica near the Albanian-Yugoslav frontier, while Balkan Air Force Spitfires and Hurricanes struck at surrounded German forces at Dantiegrad, 50 miles east of Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia. Rockets, cannon-fire, and bombs were used in the Balkan Air Force attacks on the cornered enemy forces.

Coastal Air Force planes hit and left burning two 2,000 to 3,000-ton enemy tankers in attacks along the north Adriatic. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS CROSS AUSTRIAN FRONTIER

LONDON, November 24 — Yugoslav units have crossed the frontier into Austria and liquidated the enemy garrison at St. Andrea, in Carinthia, capturing the soft coal mine in the town, Marshal Tito's communique said today. At the same time, it announced the liberation of Kotor (Cattaro), the vital Adriatic harbor and naval base on the southwest coast of Montenegro. Kotor was taken after a prolonged drive from Cetinje, capital of the province, liberated two weeks ago.

The whole peninsula of Lusica, the coastal region of Tivat, and the Kotor Gulf were also occupied by Tito's troops.

These latest successes follow the announcement that British units are fighting side-by-side with the Patriots in Montenegro and Herzegovina, and the freeing of Macedonia from the Germans.

In the Kotor region, the Germans are attempting to retreat toward Scutari. More than 1,500 were killed in 10 battles listed in the communique.

One strong German group in the Scutari-Podgorica area is making continuous and fierce attacks in the direction of Noksic, to escape encirclement and to avoid being annihilated, but its attacks were repulsed and the German troops were forced back across the Sucica, and positions at Zagreda were reoccupied.

In eastern Bosnia, the German stronghold of Rastosnica, near Bijeljina, was captured.

The German retreat toward Sarajevo is being continually attacked, particularly on Romanija Mountain. On the Sarajevo-Brod line, all traffic has been stopped for many days by Yugoslav attacks. Traffic on the Mostar-Sarajevo line was successfully machine-gunned. The bridge at Osijek, on the Drava, was hit, and 10 cars and one engine were destroyed.

Large quantities of German ammunition and equipment were captured on various sectors of the front, and in the day's fighting 1,240 Germans were killed and 520 taken prisoner. (OWI - Reuter)

Remittances to the areas added by this recent amendment will be channeled through the Bank of Italy. Persons desiring to effect remittances to any area in the liberated parts of Italy should consult their local banks. The announcement pointed out that the restrictions against the withdrawals from blocked accounts are still in effect.

The U.S. Treasury Department has been advised that the Bank of Italy is establishing correspondent relationship with certain banks in Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Detroit, Milwaukee, Newark, New Haven, New Orleans, New York, Pittsburgh, Providence, St. Louis, and Washington. The correspondent banks will forward payment instructions to the Bank of Italy, which will make payments in lire to the beneficiaries.

U.S. Treasury officials again emphasized that the regulations do not authorize the sending of checks, drafts, securities, or currency to Italy. (OWI)

BARI OLIVE OIL PRODUCERS PENALIZED

BARI, November 24 — Fifteen olive oil presses in Bari Province, and five others in the Province of Lecce, have been closed for the duration of the Oleari del Popolo Campaign for alleged illegal production of olive oil, it was announced here today. The oil from these crushers was presumably destined for the black market.

With the olive harvest and oil producing season in full swing, the announcement said, authorities are rigidly enforcing Oleari del Popolo regulations. These call for the consignment to accredited crushing mills, at a government-set price, of the olive crop over and above the amount necessary to meet the domestic needs of the producer.

The oil produced from these surplus crops goes first into the «oil pools» and then to the consumer. (UNN)

INVESTIGATION OF PRISON RIOT LAUNCHED

ROME, November 24 — An investigation was opened here tonight into the riot of prisoners in the Regina Coeli Prison, after an official announcement said that the uprising had been put down.

Repairing of the damage caused by the prisoners will begin immediately after a survey has been made, prison officials announced.

The rioting prisoners, estimated at between 500 and 600, finally gave in during the early hours this morning, after guards and Carabinieri had forced them into a compact area on the second floor under constant searchlight beams. Prison officials stated that the searchlights prevented any attempt on the part of the prisoners to escape, and were instrumental in forcing them to surrender. (UNN)

ITALIANS SALVAGE FOR ALLIES

WITH ALLIED ARMIES IN ITALY, November 24 — The skilled hands of more than 1,000 Italian men and women already have saved The United States Army more than 30 million dollars by expertly salvaging, repairing, rebuilding and cleaning millions of military items urgently needed by the 5th Army, a UNN correspondent reported today. What this feat has saved in shipping space for the Allies is incalculable.

Far behind the battle lines, in a factory which formerly made radio parts, these Italian men and women today are busily making their vital contribution to the defeat of the common enemy. In addition to their skill, most of the women have rented their sewing machinery, which the 5th Army quartermaster repair salvage company needed to carry out the huge task of keeping every kind of equipment, except ordinance and rolling stock, in use.

Operated with the efficiency of American war production, which is now overwhelming the enemy in every part of the world, the salvage factory has undertaken many unusual jobs, and no task given them has been too great.

Some of the items now being reconditioned by the Italian experts are being distributed to Italian Army military units operating as part of the 5th Army. These units include mule pack teams and service and port battalions, as well as military area policing companies. (UNN)

VATICAN ON RUSSO-POLISH RELATIONS

VATICAN CITY, November 24 — Differences in the Russian and Polish viewpoints and aspirations are not insuperable barriers to the finding of a satisfactory solution to the problem, wrote last night's Osservatore Romano, commenting on the future of Russo-Polish diplomatic relations.

«Both parties,» concluded the paper, «have authoritatively repeated that any solution out of line with a spirit of reciprocal cordiality would fail to achieve the goal at which both Russia and Poland are aiming: the attainment of a policy of friendship, and mutual collaboration toward one another's peaceful relations and those of Europe (UNN)

ROOSEVELT OUTLINES REVERSE LEND-LEASE

WASHINGTON, November 24 — President Roosevelt's 17th report to Congress on Lend-Lease operations was today devoted entirely to Reverse Lend-Lease aid received by the U.S. from the British Commonwealth, and paid tribute to the «miracles of production and steadfastness of the British people.» Roosevelt said some of their supplies had made «a life-and-death difference in the fighting this year.»

These goods and services were provided during years of «smashing bomb attacks, which destroyed or damaged millions of homes, killed 56,195, and injured many times that number; five years of monotonous work at long hours, with scanty rations of food and clothing, and even less of most other consumer goods; five years in which countless families were torn apart as children were evacuated to safer areas, mothers called to war factories, and fathers to the armed forces,» with 22,500,000 removals of men, women, and children out of a total population of only 45 million.

President Roosevelt said that lend-lease operations should terminate at the war's end, but the United Nations partnership — which Lend-Lease and Reverse Lend-Lease had done so much to strengthen — must grow stronger.

During the six months ended 30 June 1944, United Kingdom supplies to U.S. forces were valued at over 373 million dollars, bringing the total for the period since 1 June 1942, to 2,347 million dollars.

Aggregate contributions by the British Commonwealth for the first six months of the current year were 1,223 million dollars, and the total from 1 June 1942, was 3,348 million dollars.

Saving in Shipping

The report and accompanying letter said that Reverse

an inner breakwater; steel floats to be moored for an outer breakwater; and long steel piers, to reach from beach to ship and float on the tide.

Between November 1943 and June 1944, the U.K. completed two such harbors, and subsequently provided most of the barges, tugs, lighters, cranes, and harbor equipment used to unload supplies in France.

The President also revealed that one of the factors behind the thrust across France by General Patton's and General Hodges' tanks was the doubled production by Britain for months before D-day of the petrol containers known as «Jerricans.» These are similar to those used by the 8th Army in North Africa, when it drove Rommel from El Alamein to Tunisia.

Without these Jerricans, it would have been impossible for the Allied armies to cut their way across France at a lightning pace that exceeded that of the German blitz of 1940, the letter said. Cargo planes and even combat planes carried millions of Jerricans to forward airfields. They were tough enough to be dropped off trucks in motion without bursting open.

British Bailey Bridge

The wholesale destruction of bridges in France made the British Bailey Bridge invaluable. Constructed of standardized, interchangeable steel panels, the Bailey Bridge could replace a bombed-out bridge in a few hours. The design was given to the United States and it was agreed that Britain should provide all the bridges needed in the European Theater, and that it would be manufactured in the United States for other theaters.

Furthermore, the report continued, the first pipeline between Cherbourg and Paris was made of materials supplied by the U.K.

Direct deliveries to the United States of strategic raw materials from the Commonwealth included 78,000 tons of crude rubber. Petrol from British oil resources in the Middle East and refined in the British refinery at Abadan, in the Persian Gulf, is helping to fuel the B-29 Superfortresses attacking Japan.

In the Pacific Theater, Australia and New Zealand have jointly produced 36½ million dollars' worth of craft for the amphibious campaigns in the Philippines and elsewhere. From them, America received 1,850 million dollars' worth of food, of which 400 millions consisted of meat. Clothing, blankets, tents, and mattresses come from both these countries. Overhauling facilities for ships and planes, together with tires and tubes for mobile equipment, were furnished by these two countries. (OWI-Reuter)

WHITE PAPER ON BRITISH AID TO U.S., U.S.S.R.

LONDON, November 24 — Britain and the British Commonwealth governments have given to all their Allies Lend-Lease goods and services — «Mutual Aid» as it is officially called in London — worth 1,000 million pounds sterling up to June 30. This figure is given today in a Government White Paper which included many of the facts and figures of President Roosevelt's report on the same subject to Congress.

The exact cumulative figure was 1,079,000,648 pounds sterling, of which the U. S. received 604,730,000 pounds sterling, and the Soviet Union 269,457,000 pounds sterling. Other recipients were France, China, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Turkey, and Portugal. Outside the formal scope of the «Mutual Aid» system, material aid was given to Patriot forces throughout Europe, and mutual aid agreements have now been concluded with the governments of Belgium, Norway, and Iceland.

Among the outstanding details of the British «Mutual Aid» to the U. S. and the Soviet Union, the report discloses

The report and accompanying letter said that Reverse Lend-Lease has provided one-third of all the supplies and equipment required by U.S. troops in the British Isles from their first arrival in 1942 until D-day — by which time vast numbers of U.S. troops had been landed — and that but for this aid, the landings in France « would surely have been delayed for many months. »

« It would have required 1,000 ships to send across the Atlantic what we received for our men from the United Kingdom, » the President said.

The percentages of U.S. Army requirements in the European Theater of Operations provided by the United Kingdom ranged as high as 63 per cent of quartermaster supplies and 58 per cent of engineer supplies, the report added.

Additional major items in Reverse Lend-Lease contributing to the Allied victory included the loan of the Queen Mary and the Queen Elizabeth, the world's greatest liners, for the transportation of U.S. troops across the Atlantic, and vast construction projects which involved almost one-third of Britain's building force.

When, at the Quebec Conference in 1943, it was decided that the creation of artificial harbors was vital to a cross-Channel landing, the United Kingdom undertook the entire construction program for U.K. and U.S. forces, with the aid of American Seabees, for their building and assembly.

The three main elements in these synthetic harbors were heavy reinforced concrete caissons which were sunk to form

WHITE PAPER ON BRITISH AID TO U.S., U.S.S.R.

LONDON, November 24 — Britain and the British Commonwealth governments have given to all their Allies Lend-Lease goods and services — « Mutual Aid » as it is officially called in London — worth 1,000 million pounds sterling up to June 30. This figure is given today in a Government White Paper which included many of the facts and figures of President Roosevelt's report on the same subject to Congress.

The exact cumulative figure was 1,079,000,648 pounds sterling, of which the U. S. received 604,730,000 pounds sterling, and the Soviet Union 269,457,000 pounds sterling. Other recipients were France, China, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Turkey, and Portugal. Outside the formal scope of the « Mutual Aid » system, material aid was given to Patriot forces throughout Europe, and mutual aid agreements have now been concluded with the governments of Belgium, Norway, and Iceland.

Among the outstanding details of the British « Mutual Aid » to the U. S. and the Soviet Union, the report discloses that the big British liners Queen Mary and Queen Elizabeth between them carried 320,500 uniformed Americans to the United Kingdom in the year ended July 31.

The total number carried in British ships to the United Kingdom during the same period was 865,000. By the spring of 1944, a vast army had been accommodated in villages and towns of the United Kingdom.

Among other things, the Americans were provided 133 airfields. To meet their needs for a building program alone, it is estimated that 100,000 men were employed. Two complete floating docks and 200 cranes were among the items handed over for invasion preparations. In addition, 2,104 aircraft, 500 of them gliders, and an additional 570 aircraft engines were supplied, as were guns and ammunition worth 7,299,000 pounds, petroleum products worth 57,382,000 pounds, and over 13,500,000 pounds' worth of foodstuffs and raw materials, mainly from the British Colonies.

The report says that in the present highly-organized War economy, this mutual aid was achieved only by imposing further burdens and sacrifices, which cannot be adequately measured, on the British population.

Cumulative aid to China up to June 30 amounted to 9,050,000 pounds sterling. The main responsibility in the China sphere rests by agreement with the United States Government. (OWI-Reuter)

ANGLO-SOVIET TREATY PRAISED; FRANCO LASHED

PARIS, November 24 — That every Frenchman should acquaint himself with the Anglo-Soviet Treaty of Alliance was urged by General de Gaulle's former radio «voice» from London, Maurice Schumann, when he spoke at Wednesday's foreign affairs debate in the French Consultative Assembly.

Commenting on this statement, a Reuter dispatch said yesterday that Schumann implied that the Treaty, by its concrete guarantees and commitments for the next 20 years, constituted a definite program for the whole of Europe, and that France should support this program by entering on a similar agreement with Russia.

Referring to Spain, Schumann spoke of «the act of violence by which the Franco Régime took advantage of our misfortunes to violate the Statute of Tangier.»

Although it was not a declaration of policy, the French foreign affairs debate revealed the essential points on which all French opinion was united, the dispatch noted. These points, which constituted valuable indications for the visit of General de Gaulle and Georges Bidault to Moscow, were as follows:

France, as essential conditions for lasting peace, asked for a democratic Italy, without imperialist and expansionist claims against France, and a non-Fascist Spain which had broken all ties with Germany.

In the Far East, where France has vast territories economically bound with her own development, she would wage war to the limit of her physical resources, and expect an equal voice in the final settlement.

In world affairs, France subscribed to the necessity of settling German and Japanese problems, and planning world security in concerto with all the United Nations. She rejected any solution based on exclusive blocs.

In Europe, France saw her own rôle as a link between Britain and Russia, and hoped that real European union could be forged around three main centres — London, Paris, and Moscow. (Reuter)

U.S. TO INCREASE AMMUNITION OUTPUT

WASHINGTON, November 24 — Responding to General Eisenhower's request, the War Production Board today took action to increase the output of arms and ammunition.

This increased production will require more than 77,000 workers «just as fast as possible,» the Board's chairman, J. A. Krug, told a press conference. (Reuter)

YUGOSLAV COLLABORATORS TO BE PENALIZED

BELGRADE, November 24 — Factories of those Yugoslav industrialists convicted of criminal collaboration with the Germans will be confiscated, but other manufactures will continue along the lines of private enterprise, Andrija Hebrang, Acting Minister of Commerce and Industry in the Yugoslav Government, told a press conference yesterday.

He addressed the first group of American, British, and Canadian correspondents to visit Belgrade since its liberation a month ago.

Asked about collective farming in Yugoslavia, Hebrang said that the peasants will live as before the war, but the lands belonging to those killed during the war would be divided among the peasants. (OWI)

BRITISH OFFER COMPROMISE IN AIR TALKS

CHICAGO, November 24 — The British delegation to the International Aviation Conference here has offered a compromise proposal to break a conference deadlock over the right of airlines on international routes to pick up passengers at intermediate points within the route, it was announced here today.

The proposal provides for an initial allocation of traffic for each country flying planes over any specified route. Intermediate pick-ups, under the proposal, would be limited by the extent of the traffic allocation. (Reuter)

HITLER MYSTERY DEEPENS

WASHINGTON, November 24 — The mystery surrounding the whereabouts of Adolf Hitler deepened today, as conditions within Germany became such as to demand the immediate intervention of the Führer — assuming that he is alive and in a condition to intervene.

Reports from Allied and neutral capitals combined to depict a Germany torn by internal dissension, a Germany of cold and hunger and frayed nerves, in which rebellion is sprouting like a weed.

Germans in widely separated areas now are beginning to defy the Gestapo — even to threaten its members. Pictures and pamphlets demand peace, and in some districts the gauleiters hastily are discarding their uniforms to pose as civilian nobodies.

A dispatch in the Swiss newspaper Tribune de Geneve tells of a quarrel between Himmler and Göring which had its roots in the purging of certain German industrialists soon after the attempt upon Hitler's life. Göring objected to the killing of these men, according to the dispatch, on the ground of their value to the Nazi war effort. (OWI-Reuter)

FORRESTAL URGES POST-WAR TRAINING

WASHINGTON, November 24 — Nation-wide post-war military training in the United States was advocated in a broadcast last night by Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal.

He said the U. S. Navy believed that every young man should be given military training «as a national life insurance» and as a «contribution to our country's security,» and added: «We think of this training not merely as a sensible precaution — we think it is imperative.»

Pointing out that war and war machines had become so complex that even a year's training was not enough, Forrestal said that the weapons of the future may require more and more training.

«If there is another war,» he continued, «we won't have time to do that training after the shooting starts. The only answer is individual, as well as national preparedness.

«There is no reason to fear that this training would turn us into a nation of militarists. Not even the war has done that. On the contrary, the preparedness of the United States is our inescapable contribution to world peace.»

In line with Forrestal's statement, Secretary of War Henry Stimson said yesterday that he had «received and approved a report from the committee of the General Staff that we maintain in peace-time a National Guard capable of immediate expansion to war strength.» (OWI - Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 24 — Today's communique:

Allied forces made further progress in the Venlo sector, where our units are within three miles of the town.

North of the Helmond-Venlo railway, we advanced about one mile over very difficult country, and have taken Meterik and Horst.

South of the railway our forces gained about 1,000 yards over a 5,000-yard front.

Northeast of Geilenkirchen, there has been bitter fighting in the area of Hoven and Beeck, where the enemy is resisting fiercely.

Small enemy counter-attacks have been repulsed by our units in the Gerlonswetier area northwest of Julich, where very slow progress has been made towards Koslar and Bourheim in the Julich area.

North of Weisweiler, our forces are fighting in Lohn and Putzlohn.

Other elements are west, south, and southeast of Weisweiler, and gains have been made toward the town.

To the southeast, bitter fighting continues in Hürtgen Forest, where our forces are slowly gaining against very stubborn resistance.

In the area east of Metz, our armored elements reached Johanns-Rohrbach, and our infantry is in the vicinity of Leyweiler.

An enemy counter-attack has been repulsed near Fremersdorf. Other armored units farther south have reached Finstingen.

After a break-through in the Suverne Gap, our troops reached Strasbourg, and freed many towns in the northern Alsace Plain. More than 3,000 prisoners including two generals and much enemy material, have been taken in the rapid advance.

Unfavorable weather slowed the progress in the southern Vosges and Belfort Gap area, but limited gains were made.

The weather severely curtailed air operations yesterday, but heavy bombers with fighter escort attacked the Nordstern synthetic oil plant near Geilenkirchen in the Ruhr.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 24 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On the night of November 17/18, the Germans attacked Patriot groups in Bologna, but the Patriots counter-attacked with considerable success. In the northern part of the city, which was temporarily under Patriot control, they inflicted heavy losses in men and material on the enemy. Two hundred Germans were killed or wounded, and two armored cars, six motor vehicles, and some machine-guns and light artillery were destroyed.

On the night of November 12, seven highway bridges were blown up: one on the Piandelagotti Road; one at Riccovolto, and one a Cargedolo. The other four were in localities near Frassinoro.

Lively Patriot activity took place in the Vicenza, Padova, and Treviso areas. To the many acts of sabotage recently reported are to be added the activities of demolition squads on the Padova-Vicenza and Grisignano di Zocco-Ostiglia railway lines. Traffic on these lines was interrupted in several places. A tunnel was dynamited at Loreggio, on the Treviso-Padova line, on the night of October 30.

In Piedmont, between October 26 and November 3, a Patriot group operating west of Turin launched repeated attacks against German motor transport and trains, and caught the enemy in ambushes. Eleven Germans were killed, one wounded, and four taken prisoner. Of the Fascists, six were killed and one wounded. The enemy suffered other losses, especially during the clash which occurred on November 3, when he brought an armored train into action.

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 24 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Southeast of Helmond, in the Meuse bridgehead which was narrowed down, our grenadiers repulsed numerous British attacks during the last few days.

The fierce battle in the Aix la Chapelle sector yesterday was dominated by successful German counter-attacks on the whole right wing of our defensive front. Grenadiers, People's grenadiers, and tank troops recaptured a certain number of localities, and cleared them of the enemy. U. S. attacks, which were launched several times in the centre and on the left wing of the fighting sector, collapsed in our fire. Only at Eschweiler, and southeast of it, the enemy achieved small penetrations into our positions.

In the Metz sector, the garrisons of several fortifications continue to maintain themselves in the face of grim enemy attacks.

In eastern Lorraine, the situation remained generally unchanged. There was some lively local fighting.

On both sides of the lower Vosges, our troops halted the advancing enemy, and repulsed him in counter-attacks.

An enemy tank group, proceeding from Zabern, succeeded in breaking through our bolt positions, and penetrating the town of Strasbourg.

At the Gateway of Burgundy, enemy attacks were smashed, and the bolt positions of our troops at the Swiss frontier reinforced by powerful thrusts.

Enemy forces cut off in the Mulhouse sector tried unsuccessfully to break out in a westerly and northwesterly direction.

MOSCOW, November 24 — Tonight's communique:

Troops of the Leningrad Front, with the support of the vessels of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet, as a result of stiff fighting, today concluded clearance of the enemy from the Island of Saaremaa (Oesel), converted by the Germans into a strongpoint which covered the approaches to the Gulf of Riga; thus, the territory of Soviet Estonia is competely liberated from the German invaders.

Aviation of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet carried out blows upon enemy vessels at the southern extremity of the Saaremaa Island, as a result of which, one enemy destroyer, one patrol vessel, and two patrol cutters were sunk. With direct hits of three bombs, one heavy cruiser was damaged, also two patrol vessels and one landing barge.

In Czechoslovakia, northwest and west of Csap, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Ubrek, Setnigovshe, Rubishe, Platnoremeti, Seginer, Volcheprizov, and Solomonovo, and the railway station of Cherna.

In Hungary, our troops, surmounting resistance and counter-attacks of the enemy, captured the populated localities of Meszesombor, Ledyet-Bonniye, Majosz, Ustauzelak, Himardi, Palosz-Vereszmar, Jengesz-Olmosz, and Bak.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During November 23, our troops disabled or destroyed 32 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 70 enemy planes were shot down.

Southeast of Mülhouse, German counter-attacks make good progress.

Greater London and the industrial districts of Liége were subjected to an intense long-range bombardment by day and by night.

Italy:

In the eastern foothills of the Etruscan Apennines, the British 8th Army assailed a single German division with the concentrated mass of its forces and the use of extremely much material, in an attempt at forcing a decisive breakthrough toward the Romagna Plain. The 26th Tank Division, under the command of Colonel Crasemann, together with some other subordinated formations, in exemplary steadfastness, maintained the front intact. Fierce defensive fighting is still in progress.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, in the Skutari and Podgorica sectors, our troops frustrated numerous enemy attacks.

In southern Hungary, west of Apatin and Batina, our troops repelled the Bolsheviks, who attacked incessantly with strong forces along our new defensive front.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Between Budapest and the Matra Mountains, yesterday, all Soviet attempts at breaking through, supported by numerous tanks, were frustrated by the stubborn defense and the counter-attacks of our troops, which were effectively supported by the Air Force. Another 35 enemy tanks were destroyed.

South of Miscolcz, several Bolshevik attacks collapsed in our defensive fire.

In the eastern part of the valley, the enemy achieved some minor penetrations.

Northwest of Ungvar, the Soviets attacked with strong forces. They were halted in our deeply echeloned positions.

In the northern sector, east of Libau up to the Autz sector, the defensive battle flared up again. Extremely large quantities of material are being used. All Bolshevik attacks were repulsed by the steadfastness of our battle-proved divisions, except for some unimportant penetrations.

In Kurland, yesterday, 50 enemy tanks were destroyed.

On the Sworbe Peninsula, the valiant garrison, faced with a many times superior enemy, retired fighting to the southern tip of the Peninsula. Our naval forces kept firing at the enemy positions throughout the whole day, despite incessant attacks by Soviet bombers and torpedo planes.

German Peace Terms: The German Foreign Office yesterday indicated that its stand on peace terms, at least its official and public stand, still insists on retaining what are candidly called « the conquered territories. »

The statement on peace terms occurs via the Wilhelmstrasse spokesman Dr. Schmidt, in the course of a press conference. The spokesman first denied that the German Ambassador's recent conference with the Pope had any connection with peace negotiations. Particularly emphatic exception was taken to the implication of Germany negotiating: « the word 'negotiations' had not come up; » and the whole papal conference was dismissed as a « routine visit. » In connection with this denial, occurred the following statement:

« A possible peace was one which would ensure the existence of the German nation and the possession of the conquered territories. »

Goebbels Article: The German Radio has broadcast the weekly article by the Minister of Propaganda. This time, Goebbels again devotes himself to reviving German faith in final victory. He does so by building up the contrast of spiritual versus material forces, the Germans supposedly being superior in the former, and the Allies in the later. He then argues that the former, being aided by the « spirit of history » and by the fact this is a « war of ideologies, » will triumph over the material handicaps.

« German Miracle » Promised: Specifically admitting the Allied « superiority in men and materials, » the Goebbels article holds forth hope of a « miracle » to the German people, and resorts, in this connection, to much of the verbal apparatus of sheer mysticism (such as « deep faith » and « mysterious force » and « higher power »). Those who believe in « the working of a higher power in history » must supposedly assume a German victory in the long run, and even those who do not so believe are reminded by the Minister of Propaganda of the following factor:

« The German nation feels about this war as it would about a judgment pronounced by God. In its deep faith is latent that mysterious force which we have always demonstrated in situations of military crisis, and which the world and Strasbourg. It is a fight between fast Gaullist and American units and mobile German barrier forces. This action developed into a battle whose culmination has not yet been reached... The fighting in the area between Belfort and the Swiss frontier was even more dramatic. Gaullist units, which had been cut off on the area of Basel-Mülhouse, vainly attempted to break through ... in a westerley direction. »

Unrelenting Allied Pressure Near Forli: All Fascist radio programmes today emphasized the continued persistence, even « increased violence » of the 8th Army offensive in the Adriatic sector. Particular notice is made of the superiority and diversity of Allied materiel employed: « strong formations of fighter-bombers, many armored groups, some of them newly formed, » etc. Despite these odds, however, « the Allies succeeded in advancing only a few hundred metres towards the northwest... The main enemy pressure was between Forli and Faenza, on the northern slopes of the Apennines. »

John Amery at the Microphone: Tonight, at 2100 hours, the Fascist radio facilities were put at the disposal of the British Fascist, John Amery. Amery, who has been engaged to castigate his fatherland every Friday evening at the same hour, was introduced against a biographical background of his father, Leopold Amery, Secretary for India in the Churchill Cabinet. By presenting the father as a typical example of British imperialism, plutocracy, capitalism, Jewry, etc. the Fascist announcer emphasises the « dramatic » contrast represented by the stand of the younger Amery. Amongst other points, it is asserted that the senior Amery was strongly drawn toward the Fascist side on the Abyssinian question, and that he relented only because of the reaction against him in England. The son, John, on the contrary, had stronger convictions; « he is openly against the political system in his country, and was on our side in the Spanish War; he remained with us when old Churchill obeyed London's Jews in promoting and preparing the war. He left his country and renounced all the comforts of his own class. Working in heavy industry, a sympathiser with the National Socialist view of the war; he fights — as he says — not against his country, but against misgovernment and disorder in his country. »

After this preamble, John Amery began his serialized diatribes for the winter. He addressed his Axis audience as « friends who are shedding blood for Europe and for the survival of true socialism. » After lamenting the fact that sundry « criminals ... did not hesitate to drag the British flag into disorder and shame, » Amery labels his countrymen as guilty of « slaughtering women, old people, and children. » He reminds his Italian audience that the English people they knew in giddy spendthrift pre-war days, far from being representative of the real England, were actually the in absentiâ exploiters of the majority of the down-trodden working classes. Amery then sketches his own proletarian Pilgrim's Progress, as it were, by way of explaining first his revulsion against England, and then his embrace of « socialist » Fascism. It is only by fate, Amery says, that he avoided being « one of the 152,674 Britishers suffering in Churchill's prisons, despite our constitution. »

Amery asserts that 1½ million British people agree with him, against « Churchill and his clique, » to the effect that « England will find her place and her true rôle as a great nation only in a National Socialist Europe. »

In conclusion, Amery recapitulates the holocaust which « London and Washington Jewry, the barbarians from Moscow, the plutocrats, » etc. have supposedly brought and will continue to bring upon the « people. »

Western Front: A late Transocean report states:

« While action in the Aachen area can be described as 'immobile,' a mobile warfare is being waged between Zabern

British Fascist, John Amery. Amery, who has been engaged to castigate his fatherland every Friday evening at the same hour, was introduced against a biographical background of his father, Leopold Amery, Secretary for India in the Churchill Cabinet. By presenting the father as a typical example of British imperialism, plutocracy, capitalism, Jewry, etc. the Fascist announcer emphasises the « dramatic » contrast represented by the stand of the younger Amery. Amongst other points, it is asserted that the senior Amery was strongly drawn toward the Fascist side on the Abyssinian question, and that he relented only because of the reaction against him in England. The son, John, on the contrary, had stronger convictions; « he is openly against the political system in his country, and was on our side in the Spanish War; he remained with us when old Churchill obeyed London's Jews in promoting and preparing the war. He left his country and renounced all the comforts of his own class. Working in heavy industry, a sympathiser with the National Socialist view of the war; he fights — as he says — not against his country, but against misgovernment and disorder in his country. »

After this preamble, John Amery began his serialized diatribes for the winter. He addressed his Axis audience as « friends who are shedding blood for Europe and for the survival of true socialism. » After lamenting the fact that sundry « criminals ... did not hesitate to drag the British flag into disorder and shame, » Amery labels his countrymen as guilty of « slaughtering women, old people, and children. » He reminds his Italian audience that the English people they knew in giddy spendthrift pre-war days, far from being representative of the real England, were actually the in absentia exploiters of the majority of the downtrodden working classes. Amery then sketches his own proletarian Pilgrim's Progress, as it were, by way of explaining first his revulsion against England, and then his embrace of « socialist » Fascism. It is only by fate, Amery says, that he avoided being « one of the 152,674 Britishers suffering in Churchill's prisons, despite our constitution. »

Amery asserts that 1½ million British people agree with him, against « Churchill and his clique, » to the effect that « England will find her place and her true rôle as a great nation only in a National Socialist Europe. »

In conclusion, Amery recapitulates the holocaust which « London and Washington Jewry, the barbarians from Moscow, the plutocrats, » etc. have supposedly brought and will continue to bring upon the « people. »

« Every rifle shot against the mercenaries of Roosevelt, Churchill, and Stalin, every moment of work that you Italians devote to Fascism, will bring nearer the hour of liberation of British workers. International Jewry, like Carthage, must be destroyed. »

FRENCH TAKE MUELHOUSE, REACH COLMAR; FALL OF BELFORT IMMINENT

LONDON, November 22 — At the southern end of the 400-mile western front, French 1st Army troops today captured the large Maginot Line fortress city of Mülhouse, on the Rhine-Rhone Canal, and sped 20 miles northward along the Rhine Valley to reach the vicinity of Colmar. The German garrison at Colmar is resisting strongly.

French troops captured 1,000 prisoners in the battle for Mülhouse, among them members of the German 19th Army general staff. French armored columns smashed through the formidable anti-tank defenses at Mülhouse at an amazing speed, press dispatches said.

The Germans are counter-attacking in strength southeast of Belfort and south of Dannemarie (Dammekirch) in an attempt to cut French supply lines. In the citadel of Belfort artillery preparation, three miles west of Merzig, on the Saar River. A few miles to the northwest, an American tank-led infantry column reached Tunsdorf. The Americans now hold a continuous 12-mile front inside Germany to a depth of five miles at its deepest penetration.

Supreme Headquarters today announced that the two remaining pockets of resistance in Metz were wiped out, completing the liberation of the historic French fortress city.

All along the U.S. 3rd Army front in northwestern France, German forces are still falling back. They are attempting to delay the eastward surge of Lieut. Gen. George Patton's drive by setting up « killing areas. » In a predetermined center of resistance, selected for the advantages of ground and concealment, the Germans wait in concealed depressions, with 88-millimeter, mortar, and machine guns, for American armored columns. Allied observation planes, however, have located these enemy positions and have directed artillery fire into them.

Allies Threaten Jülich

The British 2nd Army and the American 9th Army, on the northern sector of the Allied front, have pressed forward to within sight of the Roer River, last natural barrier before the Rhine. Heavy resistance is being met at Würm and Beeck but, farther south, American forces have captured Ederen and Mertzenhausen, directly threatening the German city of Jülich.

The British and Americans have driven diagonally into the Siegfried Line, instead of assaulting it frontally, and, consequently, German anti-tank barriers were largely ineffective. From an inter-locking system of pillboxes, however, the Germans are bringing machine gun and anti-tank fire upon the advancing Allied forces in an attempt to hold the penetration into the Siegfried defenses.

To the east of Aachen, American 1st Army troops completed the investment of Eschweiler, controlling the Adolf Hitler military highway to Cologne, and late reports said that mopping-up operations were proceeding. To the east, 1st Army units are making slow progress against heavy opposition in the northern sector of the Hürtgen Forest.

In southeastern Holland, three British columns driving on the communications center of Venlo are within three miles of the town. They have reached the vicinity of Sevenum, Baarlo, and Maasbre, contracting the German pocket west of the Meuse. (OWI - Reuter - AP - BBC)

8TH ARMY TAKES TWO FAENZA-FORLI' AREA TOWNS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 22 — Two towns in the Faenza-Forli sector, where the 8th Army is cutting into German defenses from two sides, have been captured by Allied troops in fierce fighting in which 8th Army units were supported by tanks, artillery, and air action against enemy infantry and armor.

Polish troops, which have been strengthening their positions south of Route 9 and northwest of Route 67 at the same time they have been repulsing heavy German counter-attacks, again have taken Monte Fortino, 5½ miles southeast of Faenza, it was announced today.

The Germans are counter-attacking in strength southeast of Belfort and south of Dannemarie (Dammekirch) in an attempt to cut French supply lines. In the citadel of Belfort itself, heavy street fighting is going on, but the fall of the town is believed imminent. Strong German forces are still holding out in the woods covering the hills to the southeast. The French have sent strong reinforcements into the Belfort area.

On the northern flank of the French 1st Army, American infantry and French armored units, which yesterday drove the Germans out of the important communications city of Sarrebourg (Saarburg), continued their spectacular advance today.

The Allied forces reached the outskirts of Pfalzburg in an eight-mile advance, and now threaten the Saverne (Zabern) Gap through the Vosges. The pass leads to Strassburg, industrial city on the Rhine.

Allied troops have already passed the defenses in front of the gap, and official reports stated that German resistance is crumbling. The Germans are abandoning much equipment as they withdraw.

The French and American pincer movement north from the Swiss border and south from Sarrebourg threatens the entire German 19th Army of about 70,000 troops remaining in the Vosges Mountains area.

American 3rd Army troops in southwest Germany held a 2½-hour German counter-attack, preceded by a heavy ground and concealment, the Germans went in concealed depressions, with 88-millimeter, mortar, and machine guns, for American armored columns. Allied observation planes, however, have located these enemy positions and have directed artillery fire into them.

8TH ARMY TAKES TWO FAENZA-FORLI' AREA TOWNS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 22 — Two towns in the Faenza-Forli sector, where the 8th Army is cutting into German defenses from two sides, have been captured by Allied troops in fierce fighting in which 8th Army units were supported by tanks, artillery, and air action against enemy infantry and armor.

Polish troops, which have been strengthening their positions south of Route 9 and northwest of Route 67 at the same time they have been repulsing heavy German counter-attacks, again have taken Monte Fortino, 5½ miles southeast of Faenza, it was announced today.

Monte Fortino was captured last Thursday by Polish troops, but two days later, after several counter-thrusts, the Germans recaptured the town. In taking Monte Fortino for the second time in six days, the Poles pushed through strong German resistance and continued their drive to

U. S. 9TH ARMY GAINS TWO MILES

LONDON, November 22 — American 9th Army forces made an advance of two miles today and captured the towns of Koslar and Bourheim, just short of the Roer River, press dispatches reported late tonight. They are now only two miles from the communications center of Jülich.

The German news agency announced tonight that the Americans had opened a heavy artillery barrage from 1,000 guns on the main German defenses in the Aachen area. The German report said that bombers and fighter-bombers made a concentrated attack. (Reuter) advance a mile northeast of the town and seize a[illegible]d on the hills of Mt. Piano. Enemy resistance continues to be intensive, it was said.

While the Poles regained and further strengthened their grip on the Monte Fortino sector, British troops of the 8th Army west of Forli gained one mile to capture Castiglione, a village about a mile and one-half above Monte Fortino. The British troops also did not stop in their advance after capturing the fortified village. They pushed one mile beyond to come in close contact with the enemy 500 yards south of the River Cosina.

The British action was strongly supported by the Desert Air Force and artillery, as the intensiveness of the 8th Army campaign gained momentum to tighten the cordon around German defenses and to thwart the enemy's delaying tactics.

There were virtually no changes along the 5th Army front as strong raids by enemy forces on positions held by Allied troops were repelled by American, British, and Indian units.

German forces, increasing their aggressiveness in patrol action, pressed unsuccessfully at Indian positions north of Modigliana, in the vicinity of Montecalaro, and on key terrain posts held by the 5th Army in the Mt. Belmonte and Mt. Grande areas.

Despite the enemy pressure, 5th Army forces held firmly and even made slight gains in several encounters. (PRO)

GERMANS PREPARE TO STAND IN BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 22 — Russian forces continued to drive German and Hungarian troops back toward the mountains of Slovakia and Austria today, capturing a number of towns and villages, including Jegetsolok, Jengyeshorotsi, and Heredzye.

A Rumanian communique announced fierce fighting west of Tokay, in northeastern Hungary on the Tisza River, and the capture of several important heights held by the Germans.

The Germans are taking drastic steps to defend Budapest and to delay its fall, and with it the threat to Vienna. They have followed up the destruction of the Margita Bridge over the Danube by blowing up the main buildings in the capital, and have established sandbagged machine-gun posts in the streets. This news, reported by a Russian woman slave-worker who escaped through the German lines, was quoted by Izvestia today.

Special Hungarian SS units known as « Szalasy's Cut-Throats » have been thrown into action with regular German SS troops before Budapest.

Meanwhile, the Russians are tightening their grip on the city, advancing over roads deep in mud and swept by icy winter winds.

Troops of the Leningrad Front are making good progress in clearing the Germans out of the Island of Oesel (Saaremaa), controlling the entrance to the Riga Gulf. The remnants of the German divisions defending the southern peninsula of the island with exceptional stubbornness are now gathered as into a sack, a dispatch from Moscow said today. Here they are facing annihilation on the lines of the German debacle in the Kherson Peninsula, when thousands of Germans were caught with their backs to the Black Sea and were mown down on the beaches or killed as they tried to escape by water.

Moscow observers consider the island battle in the Gulf of Riga to be the first blow of a new onslaught aimed at the German northern flank.

Meanwhile, Russian Stormoviks are roving over East Prussian roads and rail tracks, smashing German troop and transport columns moving across the country as part of the regrouping movement by German forces in this territory.

On the northern front, Finnish troops advancing north-

Mindanao, and destroyed or heavily damaged a 1,000-ton freighter off Mindoro in the Visayans. The strike at Brunei was the third within four days.

In other widespread attacks in the Pacific, American planes wiped out a number of enemy planes and cratered runways on enemy airfields.

A Pacific Fleet headquarters announcement from Pearl Harbor last night disclosed that the Japanese on Palau and the Mariana Islands have lost 63,338 men in killed and wounded. More than 3,000 Japanese were taken prisoner by U.S. Army and Marine infantry units operating in these islands through November 13.

The announcement also said that the number of Japanese planes destroyed in Sunday's carrier-plane attack at the Manila area has been raised to 26. Earlier reports had listed 16 Japanese planes destroyed.

Additional American air attacks were reported in the announcement. On Saturday, a strafing attack was carried out on Japanese installations on Haha Jima, and against shipping at Chichi Jima. Both are in the Bonin Group.

Japanese bases in the Palaus also were hit by carrier-planes, and large fires were started. « Neutralizing » attacks were carried out Sunday and Monday on enemy-held bases in the Marshall Islands.

Commenting on the success of American carrier-plane forces which were now « powerful enough to go any place at will, » Vice Admiral John McCain, newly appointed commander of the 3rd Fleet's carrier forces, said that there is hardly any question that the Japanese intend to fight for the Philippines as they did for Guadalcanal.

However, the Admiral expressed doubt that the Japanese can get enough ammunition for fighting purposes, asserting that the « enemy is already having a tough time getting supplies as far as Luzon. » (OWI)

ATTACKS CONTINUE ON JAPS IN MOMAUK AREA

KANDY, CEYLON, November 22 — The ring around the Japanese pocket in the Momauk area of north Burma has been drawn tighter by encircling Allied forces and a number of the enemy have been killed, Southeast Asia Command Headquarters announced today.

On the Chindwin front, an enemy attack four miles northeast of Kalemyo was repulsed, the announcement said.

No new developments were reported around Bhamo in northern Burma, where the Japanese garrison Tuesday counter-attacked the Chinese forces which broke into the southeast corner of the town.

Chinese, fighting on home soil, made some progress against the Japanese columns pushing north from Kweichow, but no major action was reported by the Chinese High Command from this area.

Allied aircraft of the Eastern Air Command inflicted heavy damage on railyards at Sagaing, a few miles southwest of Mandalay in central Burma, on Sunday, it was officially announced. An unnamed « industrial target » in southern Burma, was also hit, the announcement said.

In a broadcast heard today, the Japanese news agency, Domei, admitted that Japanese forces had executed a « strategic withdrawal » in the face of Chinese attacks in the Mangshih sector on the Burma-Yunnan border.

The Chinese High Command yesterday announced that Chinese troops had occupied Mangshih on Sunday, after a frontal assault down the Burma Road.

Meanwhile, Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer's headquarters at Chungking announced that the operation staffs of the Y and Z Forces have been consolidated into the China Training and Combat Command of the China Theater.

In Washington, the War Department announced today that 20 Japanese fighters were shot down, 19 probably destroyed, and 22 damaged in the three-pronged strike by U.S. Superfortresses against the Japanese homeland yesterday.

JAP MERCHANT SHIPS HIT IN PHILIPPINES

PEARL HARBOR, November 22 — Carrier-based planes of the U.S. 3rd Fleet, which attacked merchant shipping in the Manila Bay area in the Philippines on Saturday, sank two additional Japanese merchant vessels, set 12 others on fire, and hit three more, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced today. These result; are in addition to the previously announced damage.

A Japanese heavy cruiser which appeared to be beached in shallow waters near Santa Cruz in the Sibuyan Sea was strafed, the communique said.

Among the merchant vessels hit were six cargo ships and one oil tanker.

Heavy reconnaissance planes bombed enemy shipping in the Brunei Bay naval base on Borneo, scoring direct hits on a light cruiser and another warship, stated a supplementary communique from General MacArthur's headquarters today.

Air patrols bombed and probably destroyed a 3,000-ton freighter and sank two coastal vessels near Zamboanga on

The communique also disclosed that, for the first time, Japanese airmen succeeded in bagging a Superfort. Allied losses were two, possibly three, Superfortresses.

A 14th USAAF communique issued in Chungking today said that American planes Sunday and Monday nights attacked the Kowloon docks at the Japanese-held port of Hongkong, on the southeastern Chinese coast. (OWI-Reuter)

4,000 PLANES STRIKE REICH OIL CENTERS

LONDON, November 22 — The devastation of synthetic oil centers in western Germany was continued yesterday when 4,000 British and American planes tackled six different oil plants in 24 hours. At the same time, Allied strategic bombing of railway targets, and tactical bombing in support of west front land operations were maintained, and mines were laid in enemy waters.

In the latest phase of this concentrated air offensive, 1,500 planes of Bomber Command rounded off the daylight American assaults on Merseburg, Hamburg, Harburg, and Homburg plants, by making two heavy attacks on synthetic oil installations at Skerkrade and Castroprauxel.

Splitting into three formations, the RAF planes let loose 5,000 tons of explosives and fire bombs on these two plants and on railway installations at Aschaffenburg, 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt. Before the last raiders dropped their bombs, great fires in the German oil plants were sending columns of smoke spiralling 8,000 feet skywards.

The RAF operations, including also blows at Hanover, Stuttgart, and Worms, a daylight attack on Hamburg oil-plant, coastal sweeps, intruder bombing, and mine-laying, cost Bomber Command 15 planes.

Germany's anxiety to protect her remaining synthetic oil supplies from Allied attacks was evinced yesterday when the Luftwaffe sent 250 planes to defend the Leuna plant against part of the 1,250 American bombers. Of these 250 German planes, the American fighters, numbering 1,100, shot down 73, and the bombers one, representing a loss to the Luftwaffe of nearly 30 per cent. Another six German fighters were destroyed on the ground. The American daylight force lost 35 bombers and 13 fighters.

The Luftwaffe is coming up again on the western front, according to recent dispatches, partly to protect German front-line troops guarding the Ruhr, and partly to strafe Allied forward forces.

Yesterday's Tactical Air Operations included a spectacular assault by RAF rocket-firing Typhoons on a German Army headquarters 50 miles ahead of the British line. The first wave caught the German defenses napping, and the second-wave pilots reported that only a cloud of debris and dust showed where the headquarters had been. The whole mission took only 40 minutes from take-off to landing.

Rocket and cannon-firing Beaufighters of RAF Coastal Command last night attacked enemy shipping off the Frisian Islands along Germany's northern coast.

Two enemy mine-sweepers were hit and raked with cannon fire, and were left blazing furiously. Another RAF formation reported two coasters left burning.

Enemy air activity was again directed against England during the 24 hours ended at 0700 hours today, causing damage and casualties. (OWI - Reuter)

BELFORT OFFENSIVE SURPRISED GERMANS

BELFORT, November 22 — The French offensive against Belfort took the Germans completely by surprise, General Jean Delattre de Tassigny, Commander of the French 1st Army, told correspondents yesterday, stated a dispatch from Theburn Wiant of Associated Press.

General de Tassigny read from the diary of a German general, killed in the battle, an extract which said:

« French divisions are spread over an enormous front. There is no sign of action. It is impossible for them to take the offensive. There is no likelihood of our being attacked. »

The French offensive was launched in such a snowstorm, said General de Tassigny, that the Germans « could not possibly have imagined that we would have the audacity to spring on them. »

He praised the French Forces of the Interior, and said that they had accomplished wonders with their maneuvering skill and « magnificent courage. »

Describing Belfort as one of the strongest fortresses on France's eastern border, the Associated Press dispatch said that it is ringed by more than 20 formidable satellite forts, ancient fortifications with subterranean chambers, strengthened by elaborate systems of modern anti-tank defenses and wide minefields.

Fort Vaudois, which was equipped to hold off attackers for weeks or even months, fell to the French after artillery and mortar fire had dazed its occupants. (OWI - AP)

FRENCH GENERAL DROWNED

WASHINGTON, November 22 — General Brosset, com-

The Flying Forts and Liberators were accompanied by both Lightning and Mustang fighters, and encountered some enemy interceptors, as well as intense flak.

Other targets bombed by Liberators included the Salzburg rail yards, 75 miles southeast of Munich, and on a by-pass route connecting this important German center with the Brenner Pass line, and rail yards at Villach, near the Austro-Italian frontier.

In Italy, the Ferrara rail bridge and a motor transport depot at Osoppo, 15 miles north of Udine in northeastern Italy, were attacked by Liberators and by Lightning fighter-bombers.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out close-support missions in the Faenza and Bologna areas, silencing seven enemy gun positions and enemy-occupied houses, as well as destroying a number of locomotives, rail cars, and motor vehicles.

Fighter-bombers on armed reconnaissance bombed bridges and rolling stock in the Zagreb and Brod districts in Yugoslavia. (PRO)

WILSON, MCNARNEY THANKSGIVING MESSAGES

AFHQ, ITALY, November 23 — Celebration of Thanksgiving Day this year is particularly appropriate « with the sun of ultimate victory now discernible through the dark clouds of war, » said General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater, in a message to his troops today. General Wilson added:

« As Allies representing on the fighting front the freedom-loving nations of the world, and as men of good will of many races and creeds, we unite in giving thanks to Supreme Providence. And in so doing, may we be found worthy of the gifts to come — the priceless gifts of victory and enduring peace. »

In a similar message, Lt. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Commander, said:

« By proclamation of our President, today is Thanksgiving Day. On this day in a manner hallowed by tradition we give thanks to Almighty God for the blessings bestowed upon our nation. In our history, these blessings have been legion: freedom, opportunity, education, the right to speak, to write, and to worship as one wills. »

Recalling that December 7 will mark three years of war for The United States — three years of adversity and hardship, death and suffering, three years of sacrifice shared by our comrades-in-arms, the fighting men of the Allied Forces — General McNarney said that the pattern of ultimate victory is now becoming more and more clearly apparent.

« It is with such blessings in sight that today Americans on all fronts join with the homeland in Thanksgiving, » General McNarney concluded. (PRO)

He praised the French Forces of the Interior, and said that they had accomplished wonders with their maneuvering skill and « magnificent courage. »

Describing Belfort as one of the strongest fortresses on France's eastern border, the Associated Press dispatch said that it is ringed by more than 20 formidable satellite forts, ancient fortifications with subterranean chambers, strengthened by elaborate systems of modern anti-tank defenses and wide minefields.

Fort Vaudois, which was equipped to hold off attackers for weeks or even months, fell to the French after artillery and mortar fire had dazed its occupants. (OWI - AP)

WASHINGTON, November 22 — General Brosset, commanding general of the French 1st Colonial Division, was drowned Monday when his jeep overturned in a flooded stream, the French Press Agency said today.

The general's body was swept away by the stream, the dispatch added, and has not yet been found. (OWI)

TASSIGNY AWARDED LIBERATION CROSS

PARIS, November 22 — The Cross of Liberation, France's highest decoration, has been awarded to General Jean Delattre de Tassigny, commander of the French 1st Army now fighting in Alsace, Radio Paris reported tonight.

General Brosset, who was drowned while commanding the French 1st Motorized Division at the Belfort Gap, was also awarded the Cross of Liberation. (OWI)

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES ATTACK MUNICH TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 22 — Escorted heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today bombed enemy installations in the Munich area, again employing the instrument technique which has permitted the continual hammering of vital enemy targets despite dense winter cloud-cover over the Reich, it was announced here this afternoon.

Thanksgiving Day this year « with the sun of ultimate victory now discernible through the dark clouds of war, » said General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater, in a message to his troops today. General Wilson added:

« As Allies representing on the fighting front the freedom-loving nations of the world, and as men of good will of many races and creeds, we unite in giving thanks to Supreme Providence. And in so doing, may we be found worthy of the gifts to come — the priceless gifts of victory and enduring peace. »

In a similar message, Lt. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, Deputy Commander, said:

« By proclamation of our President, today is Thanksgiving Day. On this day in a manner hallowed by tradition we give thanks to Almighty God for the blessings bestowed upon our nation. In our history, these blessings have been legion: freedom, opportunity, education, the right to speak, to write, and to worship as one wills. »

Recalling that December 7 will mark three years of war for The United States — three years of adversity and hardship, death and suffering, three years of sacrifice shared by our comrades-in-arms, the fighting men of the Allied Forces — General McNarney said that the pattern of ultimate victory is now becoming more and more clearly apparent.

« It is with such blessings in sight that today Americans on all fronts join with the homeland in Thanksgiving, » General McNarney concluded. (PRO)

LIBERATED ITALY

THANKSGIVING SERVICES IN ROME TODAY

ROME, November 22 — This city, which quietly fought religious persecution under Fascism, and which became the scene of restoration of free worship of all religions when it was liberated by the Allies on June, will become a fitting backdrop tomorrow for Thanksgiving Day services for American soldiers and civilians of all faiths.

The traditional American holiday will be observed not only by Americans, but also by Allied troops and liberated Italians in the Italian theater of operations.

Leaders of the Italian Government in Rome and officials of local governments throughout liberated Italy will join Americans in services tomorrow, in respect for the American holiday and to give thanks for their liberation.

A joint religious service and mass meeting, at which Protestants and Jews will combine their rituals, will be held at 1100 hours Rome time in St. Paul's American Episcopal Church at Via Nazionale and Via Napoli. American troops of Roman Catholic faith will attend a special mass at 0900 hours Rome time at Santa Susanna's Church, Via Venti Settembre.

At St. Paul's, Count Carlo Sforza, Minister Without Portofolio in the Italian Cabinet, will greet the meeting in the name of the Italian people. Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi will attend the meeting as a guest, as will other members of the Italian Government and Allied officials.

Alexander C. Kirk, American Ambassador to Italy, will read President Roosevelt's Thanksgiving Day proclamation at the services at St. Paul's, and greetings on behalf of the British forces will be extended by Chaplain D. H. P. Priest, British Senior Chaplain in Rome.

On orders of Brig. Gen. Thoburn K. Brown, commander of the Rome Allied Area, American officers and enlisted men stationed in this area are to be relieved of regular duties to attend the services.

Guests to be present at the St. Paul's services are Myron C. Taylor, President Roosevelt's personal representative to the Vatican; John F. Huddleston, American Consul General in Rome; General Brown; Brigadier Alban Low, Deputy to the Commanding General, RAAC; Commodore Ellery W. Stone, Chief Commissioner of the Allied Commission; and Col. Charles Poletti, Regional Commissioner of the Allied Military Government. (PRO)

NAPLES TRIAL BEGINS DECEMBER 14

ROME, November 22 — The trial of Generals Riccardo Pentimalli and Ettore del Tetto, former commanders, respectively, of the 18th Army Corps of Naples and the Territorial Command of the same Army Corps, will open in Rome on December 14, before the High Court of Justice, it was announced today.

The two generals are accused of collaboration with the Germans by not taking necessary measures for the defense of Naples after the Armistice, and by hindering popular action against the enemy with threats of reprisals.

The trial, which was to open on October 23, was postponed beforehand to allow, it was said, for the examination in Naples of witnesses who had only then been located. (UNN) occured in a villa north of this city where the documents and books had been sent for safekeeping during the war. Stained from wine, dirt, sewage and rain, and torn by the boots of German soldiers who used the valuable collection as a rug in the villa's cellar, what remains of the collection now looks like a load of junk.

Included in the destroyed archives were original collections of the first printed Chinese literature, and many original Oriental manuscripts. One item in the archives destroyed by the Germans was a set of original manuscripts by German scientists of a century ago. These items are irretrievably lost, since there are no other copies in existence anywhere in the world, not even in Germany. (UNN)

NAZI THIEF MAY DIE OF RADIUM POISONING

PISA, November 22 — Somewhere in northern Italy is a Nazi SS soldier, who, if he hasn't already been killed by Allied artillery, bombs, or small-arms fire, will soon be dead of radium poisoning from the unprotected vial of pure radium which he looted from the University of Pisa's Institute of Physics and Chemistry.

Allied medical authorities said today that burns caused by the unprotected radium will cause a slow but certain death accompanied by excruciating pain.

University officials said that the SS troops, who were billeted in the institute's buildings, had orders to destroy what they could not carry away just before Allied troops liberated Pisa. The university officials testified that the SS men carried out their orders punctiliously, stealing books and instruments and the radium, and destroying some of the heavy laboratory installations. BRITISH M.E.W. ABOLISHED IN CABINET CHANGES

LONDON November 22 — Prime Minister Churchill today ordered the abolition of the Ministry of Economic Warfare, on the ground that the victorious progress of the war no longer justifies the Ministry's existence. The Ministry will terminate on December 31, and Lord Selborne, who heads it, will retire, according to an American press service.

During the difficult years of the war, the Ministry was an important part of the British war effort. It tightened the economic blockade around enemy countries, did all it could to deny them essential goods, made up blacklists of neutral firms which insisted on trading with the enemy and recommended specific targets for the Allied air forces to bomb.

The remaining functions of the Ministry will be transferred to other ministries during the next few weeks.

The dissolution of the Ministry was announced by Churchill as part of a cabinet shuffle which involves the following new appointments:

Sir Edward Grigg, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Information, succeeds Lord Moyne, recently assassinated by terrorists in Cairo, as Resident Minister for the Middle East.

Captain Harold Balfour replaces Viscount Swinton as Resident Minister for West Africa. Viscount Swinton assumes the newly-created post of Minister for Civil Aviation.

Duncan Sandys, Churchill's son-in-law, becomes Minister of Works.

NELSON GIVEN CABINET RANK

WASHINGTON, November 22 — President Roosevelt has appointed Donald M. Nelson, former U.S. War Production Board Chairman, as his personal representative with Cabinet rank, it was announced here today.

Mr. Roosevelt addressed a letter to Mr. Nelson under the date of November 2, stating that, as his personal representative, he would attend Cabinet meetings and was empowered to call on government agencies for any assistance he would require. The letter said, in part:

«Your knowledge, experience, and ability can be of great value to me in my work. At the present time, I should like you to advise and assist me in dealing with some of the most important problems now facing the American people. One of these missions, of prime importance, will require your early presence again in the Pacific Theater of war. I feel confident that your work in your new post will be of lasting benefit to The United States and to all friendly nations.»

Nelson is now in China, aiding reorganization of the Chinese war industry. (OWI)

WALLACE, MARSHALL ADDRESS C.I.O.

CHICAGO, November 22 — A permanent, enforceable peace and full employment are the two main United States objectives after victory, Vice President Henry Wallace told the Congress of Industrial Organizations convention yesterday.

The battle of peace has just begun, he said, and will require a total mobilization of patriotism, intelligence, and industry.

The economic bill of rights, as presented by the President to Congress last January, represents the most up-to-date statement of the welfare of all the people in practical terms, Wallace said. Endorsing the bill, he interpreted its provisions as follows:

«The right to a useful and remunerative job in the industries, or shops, or farms, or mines of the nation.

«The right to earn enough to provide adequate food and clothing and recreation.

«The right of every farmer to raise and sell his products at a return which will give him and his family a decent living.

«The right of every business man, large and small, to trade in an atmosphere of freedom from unfair competition and domination by monopolies at home or abroad.

«The right to adequate medical care, and the opportunity to achieve and enjoy good health.

«The right to adequate protection from the economic fears of old age, sickness, accident, and unemployment.

Wallace told the convention that it was labor's duty now to help the President make the economic bill of rights a legislative reality.

«The way ahead is in a strong, humanity-minded democratic faith which is committed to the proposition that human rights and happiness are the first business of government,» Wallace concluded.

The Allied speed in liberating Europe means that a «Herculean effort» will be demanded of American workers to keep the armies supplied with weapons, said General George Marshall, U.S. Chief of Staff, in a message to delegates to the convention.

General Marshall said that the initiative has been wrested from the enemy in every theater of war.

He added: «Today, we must maintain a raging battle

C.I.O. REAFFIRMS « NO-STRIKE » PLEDGE

CHICAGO, November 22 — American labor's 'no-strike' pledge for the duration of the war was unanimously reaffirmed by the Congress of Industrial Organizations Convention today, and a resolution pledging « unswerving support » to the « destruction of Hitler Germany and Japanese imperialism » was adopted.

The resolution also strongly condemned anti-Semitism, saying: « The horrible years of the Hitler terror have taught decent men and women the world over that anti-Semitism is one of the foulest instruments ever devised to enslave and crush nations. »

Speaking on behalf of the « no-strike » pledge, originally given when the U.S. entered the war, Philip Murray, President of the CIO, which represents some six million American workers, said: « No responsible labor leader in the U.S. can hope to serve the best interests of the membership if he attempts to set aside the 'no-strike' pledge during the course of the war. Our record has been good. It must be maintained.»

The resolution said:

«The CIO hereby affirms its solemn pledge that, until we have accomplished the complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces, there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge.»

Regarding Germany and Japan, the resolution said:

«Regardless of what it may take, we shall maintain and where possible increase our effort to produce the military supplies for our armed forces...

«We shall continue, as in the past, to give complete and unswerving support to accomplish the utter destruction of Hitler Germany and Japanese imperialism, the abolition of every vestige of Fascism, and to establish a lasting peace with security for our peoples and for the peoples of the free world.» (OWI)

ROOSEVELT ASKS «UNCEASING PRODUCTION»

NEW ORLEANS, November 22 — Unceasing production on the home front is necessary «to shorten the war,» said President Roosevelt yesterday, in a message to the American Federation of Labor's annual convention here.

The President's greeting was read to the delegates by William Green, AFL President, at the morning session. Mr. Roosevelt said American workers «have done a production job the like of which the world has never seen before» in supplying the war fronts with «the finest weapons in record quantities — weapons with which they are beating the enemy and with which they will keep on beating him everywhere they meet.» (OWI)

LONDON, November 22 — A Foreign Office White Paper issued today on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals advocates a world security organization based on the sovereign equality of peace-loving states.

Preservation of peace should be based on the criterion of «equal rights of all states to maintenance of their political independence,» the White Paper urged. It was issued preliminary to the debate on the Dumbarton proposals at the forthcoming session of Parliament. (OWI)

SWINTON PRAISES AIR PROPOSALS

CHICAGO, November 22 — Viscount Swinton, British delegate to the International Air Conference, addressing a plenary session of the conference here today, described the document drawn up by Britain, Canada and the United States as a «victory for the great principle of non-discrimination.»

Lord Swinton told delegates of 54 nations that the proposed plan was a bill of rights for the smaller nations. «The proposal should be as fair to the smallest country as to the great ones — this is the spirit of the conference,» he said.

He defended the tripartite decision to give the proposed international air administration consultative, rather than executive powers, as being ultimately more effective, and ended with an appeal to the conference to vote for the establishment of an interim authority to decide questions left untouched by the plan.

«Let us set up this interim administration to consolidate our own achievements — it will be an international conference always at work,» he said. (Reuter)

«Since its return to Belgium, the Government has been urged to pronounce judgment on the owners of national industry during the war. The Government refuses to do so. As a Government, it cannot give an expression of opinion on the conduct during the occupation of any category of people.

OCCUPIED AREAS

REPUBLICAN FASCIST ARMY DISBANDED

WASHINGTON, November 22 — Disbandment for «reorganization» of the Italian puppet-Fascist army — first announced last night by the Nazi Transocean news agency and afterward reported by the Fascist puppet radio — is viewed here as a German move to exchange disaffected and unreliable troops for slave labor which, once disarmed and either inside the Reich or in industries working for the Reich, will be impotent but useful.

Qualified observers here doubt that a mere halving of the Fascist corps of officers to weed out the «unreliable» will produce anything more effective than the Fascist force of yesterday. That force, official intelligences disclose, long has been melting away. Desertions from its ranks totalled more than 36,000 by mid-October, with incomplete statistics revealing the following proportions in grade:

Non-commissioned officers - 11,185

Soldiers - 19,401.

The Nazis undoubtebly tried the experiment of super-indoctrination with the Nazi-Fascist creed and method in an effort to salvage some sort of an Italian fighting force, military observers said. That they failed is evidenced by the fact that, according to Transocean, the order for reorganization applies also to the four «crack» Italian divisions which were trained in Germany — the San Marco, the Monte Rosa, the Littorio, and the Italia divisions.

As far as the Fascist forces' becoming more efficient in unwilling warfare against their Patriot countrymen and the Allies, the order for reorganization — attributed by the Nazis to the Fascist Marshal Graziani — is apt to hasten the increasing deterioration of relations between puppet-Fascist soldiers and their German «comrades.»

The Germans have accused the puppet-Fascist troops — probably with reason — of shirking their duties; while the latter feel — also with reason — that they have been abused by the Germans and have been received only with contempt and mistreatment.

Following Transocean's abrupt announcement that Graziani planned to see that about 50 per cent of his officers and non-coms in army, navy, and air force either were «transferred to the reserve, placed on the retired list, or discharged,» as well as to reduce the army's General Staff and transform it into a mere «general staff» division of the Fascist Army Ministry, Nazi commentator Alexander Boltho von Hohenbach came on the German radio for Europe to explain. Von Hohenbach said the move «insured a selection, both from the military and political point of view, of the best officers...»

«The reform was necessary,» he said, «because after the collapse of the former army in autumn of last year, the

on the home front is necessary «to shorten the war,» said President Roosevelt yesterday, in a message to the American Federation of Labor's annual convention here.

Mr. Roosevelt said American workers «have done a production job the like of which the world has never seen before» in supplying the war fronts with «the finest weapons in record quantities — weapons with which they are beating the enemy and with which they will keep on beating him everywhere they meet.» (OWI)

U.K. WHITE PAPER ON DUMBARTON OAKS

LONDON, November 22 — A Foreign Office White Paper issued today on the Dumbarton Oaks proposals advocates a world security organization based on the sovereign equality of peace-loving states.

Preservation of peace should be based on the criterion of «equal rights of all states to maintenance of their political independence,» the White Paper urged. It was issued preliminary to the debate on the Dumbarton proposals at the forthcoming session of Parliament. (OWI)

SWINTON PRAISES AIR PROPOSALS

CHICAGO, November 22 — Viscount Swinton, British delegate to the International Air Conference, addressing a plenary session of the conference here today, described the document drawn up by Britain, Canada and the United States as a «victory for the great principle of non-discrimination.»

Lord Swinton told delegates of 54 nations that the proposed plan was a bill of rights for the smaller nations. «The proposal should be as fair to the smallest country as to the great ones — this is the spirit of the conference,» he said.

He defended the tripartite decision to give the proposed international air administration consultative, rather than executive powers, as being ultimately more effective, and ended with an appeal to the conference to vote for the establishment of an interim authority to decide questions left untouched by the plan.

«Let us set up this interim administration to consolidate our own achievements — it will be an international conference always at work,» he said. (Reuter)

GERMANY'S FATE VITAL TO FRANCE

PARIS, November 22 — General Charles de Gaulle said today that the settlement of Germany was a matter of life and death to France, the BBC reported tonight.

Speaking before the Consultative Assembly at the conclusion of a debate on French foreign policy, General de Gaulle declared that the Rhine was a security frontier, indispensible for France, Belgium, Holland, and Great Britain. He said:

«Practically all the Allied governments have recognized the French Provisional Government. As for Germany, our guns in Alsace are actively forcing the Germans to recognize us.»

General de Gaulle said that, once the fate of Germany is settled, France hoped to see true European unity born through the action of the three great centers — Moscow, London, and Paris. He stated that when a settlement was obtained, France hoped for a sincere reconciliation with Italy. (BBC)

BELGIAN GOVERNMENT REFUSES EPURATION

LONDON, November 22 — The Belgian Government's attitude to the roundup of collaborationists was defined in an official statement on the issue by M. Pierlot, the Belgian Prime Minister, today. It said:

the Reich, will be impotent but useful.

Qualified observers here doubt that a mere halving of the Fascist corps of officers to weed out the «unreliable» will produce anything more effective than the Fascist force of yesterday. That force, official intelligences disclose, long has been melting away. Desertions from its ranks totalled more than 36,000 by mid-October, with incomplete statistics revealing the following proportions in grade:

Senior officers - 1,260

Soldiers - 19,401.

The Nazis undoubtebly tried the experiment of super-indoctrination with the Nazi-Fascist creed and method in an effort to salvage some sort of an Italian fighting force, military observers said. That they failed is evidenced by the fact that, according to Transocean, the order for reorganization applies also to the four «crack» Italian divisions which were trained in Germany — the San Marco, the Monte Rosa, the Littorio, and the Italia divisions.

As far as the Fascist forces' becoming more efficient in unwilling warfare against their Patriot countrymen and the Allies, the order for reorganization — attributed by the Nazis to the Fascist Marshal Graziani — is apt to hasten the increasing deterioration of relations between puppet-Fascist soldiers and their German «comrades.»

The Germans have accused the puppet-Fascist troops — probably with reason — of shirking their duties; while the latter feel — also with reason — that they have been abused by the Germans and have been received only with contempt and mistreatment.

Following Transocean's abrupt announcement that Graziani planned to see that about 50 per cent of his officers and non-coms in army, navy, and air force either were «transferred to the reserve, placed on the retired list, or discharged,» as well as to reduce the army's General Staff and transform it into a mere «general staff» division of the Fascist Army Ministry, Nazi commentator Alexander Boltho von Hohenbach came on the German radio for Europe to explain. Von Hohenbach said the move «insured a selection, both from the military and political point of view, of the best officers...»

«The reform was necessary,» he said, «because after the collapse of the former army in autumn of last year, the new army was only hastily put together. Elements were included which were lacking either in political reliability toward Fascism or in technical skill, or in physical fitness. With some units there were more officers than men.»

Von Hohenbach said that «it was shown in the course of time» that the principle of voluntary service of officers is best suited to produce the most reliable officers for the Fascist 'Republic.' «When the army was formed in the autumn of 1943,» he said, «not only men, but also officers' were called to the colors by conscription. Henceforth, only voluntarily serving officers will remain in the army. Every officer will have to make a statement whether he wishes to remain in the army or not.»

Transocean's commentator remarked, in explanation of the decision to disband the Fascist General Staff, that it had been «too cumbersome, and organized for strategic tasks on a grand scale.» (PWB)

NAZIS BURN VILLAGE IN CRETE

ATHENS, November 22 — The Germans have burned the village of Gerakarion, on Crete, according to reports reaching here today. They also killed 53 of the inhabitants, including women and children. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 22 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

West of Forli, British troops of the 8th Army have captured the fortified village of Castiglione, and have advanced beyond the village to the River Cosina.

Farther west, Polish troops of the 8th Army have recaptured Monte Fortino against strong resistance, and advanced over a mile beyond to seize the important feature of M. Piano. Heavy fighting continues.

American, British, and Indian troops of the 5th Army have beaten off further strong raids on their positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Heavy bombers of the 15th AAF yesterday bombed troop concentrations and road transport in Yugoslavia. Long-range fighters bombed and strafed enemy communications in Yugoslavia.

Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers attacked close-support objectives in the Italian battle area, and communications targets in the Po Valley.

MAAF flew more than 1,600 sorties.

From these operations 14 of our aircraft are missing.

Navy:

Allied light coastal forces continue their successful patrols in the Gulf of Genoa.

On the night of November 19/20, two small convoys were discovered off Sestri-Levante and attacked with torpedoes. Two coasters were hit. Our craft retired, leaving the enemy firing at each other. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 22 — Today's communique:

Allied forces, after freeing Helenaveen, have pushed four miles east of the town.

To the southeast, our advance continued in the neighborhood of Maasbree, and we are within four miles of Venlo.

Fighter-bombers supported our troops in southeast Holland, and struck at communications and transport targets in northern and eastern Holland and western Germany. Rail lines were cut at a number of places, including Utrecht and Zwolle in Holland, and at Geldern and Coespeld in Germany. At Geldern, two enemy aircraft were shot down.

Heavy fighting continues in the Geilenkirchen sector.

Our advance toward Würm and Beeck is being bitterly opposed.

The following towns are in our hands: Gereonsweiler, Ederen, Merzenhausen, Englelsdorf, Aldenhoven, and Laurenzberg.

Escorted medium bombers attacked road junctions immediately ahead of our ground forces in this area, and fighter-bombers hit enemy transport.

Our troops have penetrated some distance into Eschweiler.

Strong enemy resistance is being encountered by our forces northeast of Stolberg, and in the northern portion of the Hürtgen Forest.

Heistern, two miles northeast of Gressenich, has been captured, and other elements advanced beyond the town.

East of Eschweiler, medium and fighter-bombers an area of more than 100 square miles were freed by our advance.

Fighters and fighter-bombers gave close support to our units in the Blamont-Gerardmer area. Our advance elements made additional progress in the upper Alsace Plain in the Mulhouse area.

A synthetic oil plant at Homburg in the Ruhr was attacked in the afternoon by escorted heavy bombers.

Last night, heavy bombers were out in very great strength with Aschaffenburg, railway key point 25 miles southeast of Frankfurt, and two synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr as main objectives. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, November 22 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in Hungary, our troops occupied in fighting the populated localities of Jegetsolok, Jengyesh-Orotsi, Jengyesh-Tarien, Tushteki, Natrede, and Heredzye.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling activities and, on several sectors, engagements of local importance took place.

During November 21, our troops disabled or destroyed 43 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, seven enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 22 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On the night of November 9, Patriots of a Giustizia e Libertà unit sabotaged an 8,000-ton motor vessel and blew up two large barges, loaded with an immense quantity of munitions, which were anchored near the mole of the port of Spezia. The tremendous explosion caused serious damage to the port installations, especially the cranes. Many Germans were killed.

Regarding the large-scale Patriot activity in the Veneto zones, it is stated that, in October, another railway bridge over the Brenta was blown, and three railway lines repeatedly blocked in the Padua zone.

Regarding the offensive launched by the Germans in October, in the Friuli zone, late reports assert its success, owing to the employment of large forces, in opening the way toward Austria via Pontebba, Vittorio Veneto, and Longarone.

The Patriots, in turn, continue to molest and fiercely to attack the flanks of the enemy columns, succeeding in evading, by courageous and clever maneuvers, all enemy attempts at mopping up. (UNN)

Other medium bombers hit the fortified town of Düren.

Over Düsseldorf, a formation of 60 enemy fighters was encountered by 16 of our fighters. Ten enemy aircraft were shot down for the loss of one of our aircraft.

Northeast of Thionville, troops across the border are encountering enemy road-blocks, mines, anti-tank obstacles, and artillery fire.

West of Merzig, an enemy counter-attack was repulsed.

In Metz, enemy resistance continues on the Ile du Sauley. The German garrison at Fort Queleu, in the southeastern part of the city, has surrendered.

Southeast of Metz, our forces made gains north of Falkenberg.

Hellimer, 10 miles southeast of Falkenberg, has been freed and, farther south, Torchville and Ensweiler are in our hands.

Against crumbling resistance, our armor and infantry drove eight miles east of Saarebourg on a wide front.

Defenses in front of the Saverne Gap through the Vosges have been passed. Much equipment was abandoned by the rapidly-withdrawing enemy, and many villages in planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 22 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Southeast of Helmond, the garrison of our Meuse bridgehead maintained itself yesterday, despite numerous British attacks.

At Aix la Chapelle, the battle of material abated a little after the fierce fighting of the last few days.

At Geilenkirchen, attacking U.S. battalions were so heavily hit by our defensive fire that their bulk was immobilized.

In the Eschweiler sector, the enemy was held in grim local fighting. According to incomplete reports, the enemy, in his vain attempt at breaking through our front, lost another 40 tanks.

In Lorraine, the defensive fighting continues, with the focal points lying east of the Eich Forest, in the town of Metz, and east of Saarburg.

In the western Vosges, the enemy limited himself to some local penetrations.

In Belfort, for which fierce fighting has been in progress since yesterday morning, the garrison destroyed 21 enemy tanks.

West of Basle, the rearward communications of the enemy, who advances toward the Rhine, were cut by powerful counter-attacks of our reserves.

In the area reaching from the sector south of the Rhine-Marne Canal up to the Swiss frontier, a total of 51 enemy tanks were destroyed.

Antwerp and, recently also Greater Liége are being subjected to a heavy long-range bombardment.

The bombardment of London continues.

Italy:

On the Adriatic coast, the first day of the attack of the British 8th Army resulted in high losses, despite the use of big quantities of material, and brought but small gains in a limited local sector.

In the Italian-French frontier area, in the Cuneo sector, enemy bands were dispersed, and numerous weapons, as well as most of the enemy's vehicles, were captured.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, all Soviet attempts at broadening the bridgeheads at Apatin and Batina were frustrated.

Between Budapest and the Matra Mountains, our troops frustrated a Bolshevik attempt at breaking through with strong tank and infantry forces.

Soviet attacks on the town of Miscolcz were frustrated. Northeast of Tokay, Hungarian formations narrowed the enemy down in his bridgehead.

In the Ungvar sector, strong Bolshevik attacks collapsed after small initial gains.

In the front bulge south[illegible] of Libau, yesterday, the onslaught of four Soviet armies was smashed by the heroic resistance and the counter-thrusts of our divisions.

In the southern part of the Sworbe Peninsula, our garrison is again engaged in grim fighting against a superior enemy. Our naval forces relieved our army troops by their concentrated fire.

East of the peninsula, mine sweepers and patrol boats sank a Soviet minesweeper, set a motor assaultboat on fire, and damaged a gunboat so heavily that it was driven ashore.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers launched day and night attacks on northwestern, western, southwestern, and central Germany. In some towns, damage was caused to residential areas and losses were inflicted on the population.

Air defense forces brought down 83 enemy planes, 61 of which were four-engined bombers, despite adverse weather conditions.

GERMANS CONTINUE GENERAL RETREAT; FRENCH AT MUELHOUSE

LONDON, November 21 — The Germans were in general retreat along the whole 400-mile Western Front from Eschweiler to the foot of the Vosges Mountains, press dispatches reported tonight. In only few instances, however, was their withdrawal unorganized.

Allied press reports from the observation post of Basle, Switzerland, said that Allied shells poured into the German province of Baden across the Rhine, and formed a protective cover for French troops throwing a bridge across it at Kembs. The French frontier town of Kembs is 10 miles southeast of Mulhouse, and is at a point where the Siegfried Line fortifications were never completed.

of St. Avold and 18 miles from the German industrial city of Saarbrücken. An American spearhead to the south drove into Insweiler, a small town 17 miles from the Saar Basin city of Saargemünd.

American infantry forces advancing eastward to the rear of armored spearheads cleared the two important road-junctions of Dieuze and Falquemont (Falkenberg), piercing the Maginot Line defenses in these areas.

Armored units driving into Germany northeast of Thionville forged ahead slowly under intense enemy shellfire from Siegfried Line forts, and are within a mile of the Saar River.

Germans Evacuate Eschweiler

On the American 1st Army sector east of Aachen, aerial observation reports said that the Germans were withdrawing from the large German town of Eschweiler, leaving only small rear-guard troops to man machine-gun positions. (The German overseas news agency tonight reported that they had evacuated the city.)

American forces fought through the western and southern outskirts of Eschweiler, and brought all roads out of the city under heavy artillery fire. The Germans, trying to stop the advance in order to give their forces a chance to escape, have thrown in several counter-attacks. They are also laying down a heavy barrage of artillery and mortar shellfire.

To the southeast of Eschweiler, American forces have captured the towns of Hastenrath and Wenan, and have driven within three miles of Düren, on the Roer River. Stolberg was completely cleared of the enemy today.

Local advances were made on the British 2nd and American 9th Army front, and British troops have advanced to within three miles of the Roer. Alderhoven, Gereonsweiler and Neidermerz were captured. Allied troops are fighting on the Cologne Plain east of Gellenkirchen, and are meeting strong German resistance.

British 2nd Army troops hold the stretch of the Meuse River between Buggenum and Kessel, in southeastern Holland. Steady progress is being made, although rain and thickly-sown minefields have slowed the British advance.

British troops reached Baarlo, on the Meuse River three miles south of the German communications center of Venlo. To the northeast, heavy opposition is being met from German paratroops. (OWI - Reuter - BBC - AP)

The French frontier town of Kembs is 10 miles southeast of Mülhouse, and is at a point where the Siegfried Line fortifications were never completed.

French armor sweeping through Alsace has also reached the Rhine at Hüningen and Rosenau, a UNN dispatch said yesterday.

The Swiss radio reported today that rail traffic from Freiburg in Germany to the Swiss border had been completely interrupted by the heavy French shelling of railway stations.

In swift exploitation of yesterday's French breakthrough, armored units swung northward up the Rhine Valley last night and were reported to be on the outskirts of Mülhouse. Unconfirmed dispatches said some French troops had entered this industrial city of almost 100,000 population.

On the American 7th Army sector, to the north, infantry forces reached Heming and Lorquin (Lorchingen), only five miles from Sarrebourg (Saarburg), which controls several rail lines and a number of first-class highways in northeastern France. American troops are meeting only erratic rear-guard actions.

(German reports tonight said that street fighting was going on in Sarrebourg.)

The German fortress city of Metz was cleared of the enemy today, except for two small isolated pockets in the northern part of the city. American 3rd Army troops striking eastward today reached Lillingen, a point four miles south River.

Germans Evacuate Eschweiler

On the American 1st Army sector east of Aachen, aerial observation reports said that the Germans were withdrawing from the large German town of Eschweiler, leaving only small rear-guard troops to man machine-gun positions. 7TH ARMY FORCES CAPTURE SARREBOURG

SHAEF, November 21 — American 7th Army forces, in a five-mile advance today, captured the important German-held communications center of Sarrebourg (Saarburg) in northeastern France, it was announced here tonight. (Reuter)

ALLIES CONTROL ALL PASSES THROUGH VOSGES

LONDON, November 21 — American 7th Army forces tonight captured the German-held entrances to the last two passes through the Vosges Mountains, press reports said late tonight.

American forces burst into the entrance to the Schirmeck Pass, southeast of Badenviller, while, farther south, other American troops captured Anould, within two miles of the mouth of the Bonhomme Pass. (Reuter)

AMERICANS REPULSE JAP COUNTER-ATTACK

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 21 — A fierce Japanese counter-attack against the American road block south of Limon has been bloodily repulsed, today's communique from General MacArthur's headquarters reported.

Americans are maintaining unrelenting pressure on Limon (which lies in the northern part of Ormoc Valley) although the terrain is slowing down their campaign materially, the communique added. (Reuter)

LOCAL GAINS ON RAVENNA AND FORLI' FRONTS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — British troops of the 8th Army have dislodged German forces from several positions about a mile north of the Ravenna airport in local patrol actions centered south of Fiumi Uniti, it was announced here today.

British troops also have captured several inhabited localities west of Forli, while, on the 5th Army front, a small counter-attack by German forces on Route 65 leading to Bologna was repulsed.

Most of the fighting in the Ravenna sector was concentrated around the airport, about four miles from the city. A heavy artillery attack drove enemy forces from sugar factory buildings just north of the airport. The Germans had strongly defended the factories, which they used as an observation post.

Heavy ground fog and mist in some areas limited activity on the 5th Army front to patrols and scattered artillery fire. The most intensive action was along the Florence to Bologna Highway, in the vicinity of Podere la Fabrio, where the enemy was unsuccessful in early-morning counter-thrusts yesterday. (PRO)

RUSSIANS BREAK THROUGH ON OSEL ISLAND; HUNGARIAN RAIL CENTER OF VERPELET FALLS

MOSCOW, November 21 — A Russian break-through is announced tonight on Osel (Saaremaa) Island, the largest of the group dominating the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

Tonight's Soviet communique said that the break-through was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage. Soviet troops then overcame the strongly fortified enemy defenses at the narrowest point of the southern tip of the island, and captured in stiff fighting a score of inhabited localities.

At nightfall today, on the southern end of the island, only a small beachhead five miles in depth remained in enemy hands, and this strip is being continually shelled by Russian guns.

On Sunday the aircraft of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet struck at enemy shipping at the southern end of the island and sank two enemy destroyers and two patrol cutters, and damaged three mineswcepers, a cutter, and a landing barge.

Fighting for Osel began several weeks ago, and according to the Germans flared up in the past few days. The clearing of the island, which is roughly 65 miles long and 25 miles wide, would open the Gulf of Riga for Allied shipping.

Russian forces fanning out into the mountains north of the Miscolcz-Budapest railway line today took Verpelet, a railway center half-way between Gyöngös and Eger, lying on an important north-south line from Slovakia to Hungary. A number of other places were also captured in this sector.

Fighting is reported in the outskirts of Eger and Miscolcz. Here, German and Hungarian units are making eleventh-hour counter-attacks to save these twin communication centers and keep the Red Army from establishing firm bases within striking distance of the Slovak border, less than 25 miles away. The main Miscolcz-Eger Road was cut yesterday with the capture of Diosgyoer, an industrial town five miles east of Miskolcz. Only the roads leading north remain open for a German retreat.

Tank clashes are reported between Soviet tank-destroyer units and German panzers in the valley between the Matra and Bukk Mountains.

These latest Soviet gains confront the Germans not only with the threat of envelopment of Pest, but with the possibility of the cutting of their main line of communications south of the Slovak mountains — the Kosice-Luzonec railway.

Apart from strategic gains, Soviet troops captured 4,200 German and Hungarian troops in the week ended yesterday, two direct hits on warehouses, and near misses of a cargo ship.

For the first time on a B-29 mission, strong fighter-plane opposition was encountered.

Our aircraft report that they destroyed 20 attacking Japanese planes, with 16 probables and 19 others damaged, the communique said. It added that "inasmuch as all of our aircraft have not yet had time to return from the mission, it is too early to determine whether we sustained any losses."

The Southeast Asia communique today said that Chinese troops fighting inside the north Burma Japanese base of explosives today, dropped by 1,200 USAAF and 400 RAF southern sector of the town after heavy fighting.

An official announcement added that Allied operations around Kalemyo, west of the Chindwin River, progressed satisfactorily, and east of the river an attack on an Allied position was repulsed without loss. (OWI - Reuter)

REICH OIL REFINERIES ATTACKED AGAIN

LONDON, November 21 — Oil plants in central Germany and the Ruhr were attacked with more than 4,000 tons of explosives today, dropped by 1200 USAAF and 400 RAF heavies. Coblenz and Hanover, vital German communications centers with the western front, were heavily bombed last night by the RAF.

While forces of Fortresses bombed the Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, Liberators attacked the Deutsche and Rhenania oil refineries, at Hamburg and Harburg, respectively. These are among the largest in Germany.

Still another synthetic oil plant — at Homberg in the Ruhr — was bombed by RAF Lancasters this afternoon.

An 8th USAAF communique announcing today's American operations reports that nine fighters of the 18 previously reported missing from Monday's operation have returned safely to base, leaving nine still unaccounted for.

British and American air attacks have already knocked one west German synthetic oil plant out of production, headquarters of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces in Europe announced today. At the Bottrop plant, west of Gelsenkirchen, almost every major building in a large factory area was destroyed or seriously damaged in four attacks in the last four weeks, according to reconnaissance photographs.

Before the aerial assault upon German oil production began, the Bottrop plant was estimated to produce about 8,000 metric tons of synthetic oil a month.

Reconnaissance pictures also show damage to other synthetic oil plants, including the Nordstern plant at Gelsenkirchen, where eight buildings were damaged.

Hanover got two attacks last night, by RAF Mosquitos, many of them carrying 4,000-pound bombs. The first attack was shortly before 2200 hours, and five hours later the second force of Mosquitos went over in a sharp three minute assault. Coblenz had a concentrated attack by Lancasters.

Lancaster night attacks on Ruhr Valley targets followed yesterday afternoon's raids on the same area. Five bombers are missing from these RAF operations.

Damage and casualties were caused by enemy activity over southern England during the last 24 hours, it was announced today. (OWI - Reuter)

ROCKET-BOMB SITE DIVE-BOMBED

MOSCOW, November 21 — A Russian break-through is announced tonight on Osel (Saaremaa) Island, the largest of the group dominating the entrance to the Gulf of Riga.

Tonight's Soviet communique said that the break-through was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage. Soviet troops then overcame the strongly fortified enemy defenses at the narrowest point of the southern tip of the island, and captured in stiff fighting a score of inhabited localities.

At nightfall today, on the southern end of the island, only a small beachhead five miles in depth remained in enemy hands, and this strip is being continually shelled by Russian guns.

On Sunday the aircraft of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet struck at enemy shipping at the southern end of the island and sank two enemy destroyers and two patrol cutters, and damaged three minesweepers, a cutter, and a landing barge.

Fighting for Osel began several weeks ago, and according to the Germans flared up in the past few days. The clearing of the island, which is roughly 65 miles long and 25 miles wide, would open the Gulf of Riga for Allied shipping.

Russian forces fanning out into the mountains north of the Miscolcz-Budapest railway line today took Verpelet, a railway center half-way between Gyöngös and Eger, lying on an important north-south line from Slovakia to Hungary. A number of other places were also captured in this sector.

Fighting is reported in the outskirts of Eger and Miscolcz. Here, German and Hungarian units are making eleventh-hour counter-attacks to save these twin communication centers and keep the Red Army from establishing firm bases within striking distance of the Slovak border, less than 25 miles away. The main Miscolcz-Eger Road was cut yesterday with the capture of Diosgyoer, an industrial town five miles east of Miskolcz. Only the roads leading north remain open for a German retreat.

Tank clashes are reported between Soviet tank-destroyer units and German panzers in the valley between the Matra and Bukk Mountains.

These latest Soviet gains confront the Germans not only with the threat of envelopment of Pest, but with the possibility of the cutting of their main line of communications south of the Slovak mountains — the Kosice-Luzonec railway.

Apart from strategic gains, Soviet troops captured 4,200 German and Hungarian troops in the week ended yesterday, increasing the total of prisoners taken on Hungarian territory from November 8 to 20 to 11,920. (Reuter)

SUPER-FORTS BOMB THREE JAP TARGETS

CHUNGKING, November 21 — Three enemy targets — Nanking and Shanghai in Japanese-occupied China, and the huge Omura aircraft factory on the southernmost Japanese home island of Kyushu — were attacked today by a large force of China-based Superfortresses, 20th USAAF headquarters announced.

The attack was the third daylight mission by the giant American bombers on the Omura plants within the past month. The strategic reduction of Omura, which has 75 buildings, began on October 25 and was resumed on November 11.

Today's bombing at Omura was accomplished by precision instruments through heavy clouds and undercast, and results were unobserved. As on the November 11 mission, the weather caused a diversion of part of the effort, and some aircraft bombed docks at Nanking, while others attacked military storage and transhipment facilities at Shanghai.

Observed bombing results at Shanghai were fair to good. At Nanking, observed results were good, with at least tions centers with the western front, were heavily bombed last night by the RAF.

While forces of Fortresses bombed the Leuna synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, Liberators attacked the Deutsche and Rhenania oil refineries, at Hamburg and Harburg, respectively. These are among the largest in Germany.

Still another synthetic oil plant — at Homberg in the Ruhr — was bombed by RAF Lancasters this afternoon.

An 8th USAAF communique announcing today's American operations reports that nine fighters of the 18 previously reported missing from Monday's operation have returned safely to base, leaving nine still unaccounted for.

British and American air attacks have already knocked one west German synthetic oil plant out of production, headquarters of the U. S. Strategic Air Forces in Europe announced today. At the Bottrop plant, west of Gelsenkirchen, almost every major building in a large factory area was destroyed or seriously damaged in four attacks in the last four weeks, according to reconnaissance photographs.

Before the aerial assault upon German oil production began, the Bottrop plant was estimated to produce about 8,000 metric tons of synthetic oil a month.

Reconnaissance pictures also show damage to other synthetic oil plants, including the Nordstern plant at Gelsenkirchen, where eight buildings were damaged.

They also ground-strafed the area, and hit a rocket standing near the launching site. (Reuter)

EISENHOWER PROMISES INCREASED PRESSURE

SHAEF, November 21 — General Dwight Eisenhower said today at his press conference that his plans were to hit and hammer the Germans with increasing pressure all along the western front until the day they finally surrender.

General Eisenhower said that while he saw no sign of a German crack-up, the Germans were human beings like other people, and if they were confronted by failure after failure of their armed forces, they would inevitably crack.

The Supreme Allied Commander said:

«No single instance has pleased me so much in a long while as the capture of Belfort by the gallant French Army and its reaching the Rhine.»

General Eisenhower said that he knew the French Army's mettle, since it had fought under his command in Tunisia when it had only such equipment as it had been able to hide from the Germans. He said that he felt sure there were plenty of Frenchmen who wanted to fight, and that the De Gaulle Government would do all possible to let them.

Speaking of the operations on the northern end of the front which preceded the present offensive, General Eisenhower said:

«Walcheren Island was one of the most gallant actions of this war. The British Navy really deserves great kudos. The Canadian and British armies did a splendid and aggressive piece of work in clearing up the areas at that end of the line.» (OWI)

EISENHOWER ORDERS «NO FRATERNIZING»

NEW YORK, November 21 — General Dwight Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, has issued new and stricter rules forbidding fraternization between the American soldiers and the German householder and shopkeeper, a dispatch to the Herald Tribune said yesterday.

So strict are General Eisenhower's new orders that if an American soldier in Germany speaks a single word to a civilian, it can cost the American up to 25 dollars in fines. Talking is held to be «unnecessary conduct,» and U. S. forces are forbidden to speak to anyone when spoken to, except when military necessity demands it and can be proved.

American soldiers may not call at German homes or be seen in German houses except on specific business and with a written order, the dispatch said. They are forbidden also to accept meals or refreshments of any sort from the German populace, the dispatch said. (OWI)

3,100 PRISONERS TAKEN IN METZ

LONDON, November 21 — American forces at Metz have so far rounded up 3,100 members of the regular German Army and the Volkssturm.

Correspondents' reports said that the Volkssturm defense inside Metz turned out to be a farce, despite the presence of several hundred German officers and men who, with the assistance of the Gestapo, were supposed to goad the home guard into bitter, house-to-house fighting.

A Reuter report said: «It is now clear that the German home guard is doing its job unwillingly. It is inadequately trained and poorly equipped, and its morale is definitely low. The story of the Volkssturm in Metz is probably a good indication as to what the Allies can expect as they advance into Germany.

«The Volkssturm members are armed with whatever odd weapons the Wehrmacht can spare. In the Metz area, many carried obsolete French carbines. Others had German rifles but insufficient ammunition. A number of them received only 10 hours training in a fortnight.»

The Reuter report said that the first duty of the Volkssturm was to dig fortifications. Members of the Hitler Youth, still wearing their Hitler Youth uniforms, and railway workers and government clerks, ranging in age from 16 to 60, were conscripted. Their job was to screen more valuable troops and to permit their strategic retreat. (OWI - Reuter)

GIRAUD CONGRATULATES WALKER

PARIS, November 21 — General Henri Giraud, former governor of Metz, sent a message of thanks to Maj. Gen. Walton Walker, commanding the U. S. 20th Corps, which liberated the fortress city, Radio Paris reported tonight.

Press reports said that General Giraud will shortly be able to wear his decorations again — ribbons which he said he would not replace on his tunic until Metz was freed.

General Eisenhower will also be able to wear the Grand Cross of the Legion of Honor given him by General Giraud in Algiers in May, 1943. Receiving the decoration, General Eisenhower said:

Hitler's purge of the Wehrmacht rubbed salt in the wounds of the commandant.»

«On his collar was the SS insignia with silver oak leaves, and his light green uniform was spic and span, like the German soldiers captured in Metz,» the report continued. «He had not fired a shot in the defense of Metz, although he had ordered his underlings to stand and die.

«Dunckern made it clear that, as an officer, he came within the war prisoner category of the Wehrmacht. He resented being interrogated by officers below his rank, and showed particular dislike for an American non-commissioned officer of German descent who acted as an interpreter.

«Before lunch, he demanded water for washing, although Metz was without water. It seemed, from his attitude, that he expected to retain the big royal suite in the Hotel Royale for his living quarters.»

A German major general has been killed by the French 1st Army, which drove through the Belfort Gap yesterday. The general, an Exchange Telegraph message said today, commanded the 338th Infantry Division. (PWB-INS)

CRERAR PROMOTED TO GENERAL

OTTAWA, CANADA, November 21 — The promotion of Lt. General Henry Crerar, commander-in-chief of the Canadian, 1st Army, to the rank of general was announced here last night by Defense Minister A.G.L. McNaughton.

The promotion made General Crerar the second full general in the Canadian Army, the other being McNaughton himself.

The defense minister said that the 56-year-old general was promoted in recognition of his outstanding services to the Allied cause. His skillful leadership of the Canadian 1st Army in the campaign through northern France, Belgium, and Holland contributed greatly to the successes achieved by the United Nations' armies, McNaughton added.

It was also announced that Major General Charles Foulkes, recently identified as commander of the 2nd Division in General Crerar's army, had been promoted to lieutenant general. (OWI)

T.A.F. POUNDS 8TH ARMY FRONT AREA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — The 8th army's drive to push across the Montone and Senio Rivers in the Forli-Faenza-Ravenna sector was helped today by heavy air action, in which fighter-bombers of the TAF Pounded enemy gun and troops positions in the area south of Faenza and Ravenna.

At the same time, the 15th USAAF continued to harass German forces along the 150-mile main German escape route from Novi Pazar to Sarajevo in Yugoslavia.

While 8th army patrol activity became more intensive along the Montone and south of Route 9, Spitfires, Kitty Hawks, and Mustangs supported the land action by concentrating on enemy gun and troop positions and minor road bridges throughout the area.

Also participating in the air assault were rocket-firing Thunderbolts. The results were generally good, it was reported.

Fighter-bombers of the TAF also continued widespread attacks on enemy targets throughout the Po Valley, and on gun positions along the 5th Army front from Bologna to the coast near Spezia.

The operations of the TAF on the Italian battlefront were widespread. Thunderbolts attacked dump installations at scattered points such as Ferrara, Mantua, Milan, and Parma with incendiary bombs. Several dumps were left burning, and many warehouse buildings were smashed with high explosives.

Despite unfavorable weather, the 15th USAAF assaulted troop concentrations and motor transport, and strafed

METZ GARRISON COMMANDER CAPTURED

NEW YORK, November 21 — American 3rd Army forces have captured the commander of the German garrison at Metz, Colonel Constantin Meyer, and the chief of the Gestapo for the regions of Lorraine and the Saar, SS Maj. Gen. Anton Dunckern, an International News Service dispatch reported tonight.

Speaking of the Gestapo chief, Dunckern, the dispatch said that he was in every way a true disciple of Himmler.

«He glared at his captors, or stared stolidly at his highly polished boots,» the report said. «He spoke little, but what he said was definitely insolent. He was a striking example of the Nazi breed at bay.»

Brought into the American headquarters after his capture, Dunckern scarcely acknowledged the presence of Colonel Meyer, the Metz garrison commandant.

«A single glance showed that there was bad blood between them,» the dispatch said. «Their trouble appeared to be the old peace-time rivalry between the Wehrmacht and the SS ('Elite' Troops.) The attitudes of the two men showed clearly that Himmler's rising to power through

Despite unfavorable weather, the 15th USAAF assaulted troop concentrations and motor transport, and strafed columns of German troops retreating from the Yugoslav Partisan, Bulgarian, Russian, Albanian, and British ground forces, which are coördinating their actions to cut off the enemy forces in central Yugoslavia.

Most of the German troops are spread along the Novi Pazar-Visegrad-Sarajevo highway in their frantic attempt to reach a rail-head to the north. This long highway and its fleeing columns were the targets today of Liberators, which pounded equipment; Mustangs, which strafed the columns; and Lightning Glide-bombers, which attacked stalled convoys. The attacks were coördinated and, after the Mustang fighters immobilized the transports to form targets for the bombers, the Liberators and Lightnings assaulted the concentrations. (PRO)

S.A.A.F. SQUADRON DOES TRIPLE JOB

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — For the first time in the history of a Desert Air Force fighter-bomber wing operating from a front-line airfield on the 8th Army front in Italy, a South African Air Force squadron of Mustangs carried out a three-fold task in one operation yesterday, in the intensive air campaign to cut off the main German escape route in Yugoslavia.

The South African squadron's triple assignment, carried out successfully, consisted of:

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

1. Escorting an RAF Kitty Hawk dive-bomber squadron over the Adriatic to attack railway bridges between Brod and Zagreb in Yugoslavia.

2. Themselves participating in the bombing.

3. Escorting a homeward-bound USAAF flight over the Adriatic. The USAAF group had been bombing enemy targets farther north of the RAF targets.

There were 12 Mustangs in the mission. Each Mustang carried a 500-pound bomb under one wing, and a long-range tank under the other.

The South African squadron joined the RAF Kitty Hawks over the Adriatic a few minutes after the RAF mission had taken off.

When the target area was reached, six Mustangs and six Kitty Hawks bombed a railway bridge near Jasenovac, between Brod and Zagreb, while the remainder of the squadron attacked another bridge near Sisak in the same area.

After the bombings, the Kitty Hawks turned for home and the Mustangs picked up the returning USAAF Mitchells to provide top-cover for them over the Adriatic.

The mission was accomplished without opposition, and the South African squadron returned to its base after a flight of three hours and 20 minutes. (PRO)

FLYING FORTRESS GROUP FLIES 300TH MISSION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — An attack yesterday on targets in the Brno, Czechoslovakia, area marked the 300th combat mission undertaken by the 99th Flying Fortress Group of the 15th USAAF.

In less than 20 months of actual combat flying, the 99th Group has bombarded objectives in France, Sicily, Sardinia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Africa, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Hungary, Poland, Bulgaria, and Rumania. It participated in the first shuttle-mission from Italian bases to Russia, and in the Allied landing operations in southern France. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. STAFF OFFICERS RECEIVE AWARDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — Maj. Gen. John F. Curry and four other staff officers of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces received awards from Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commander-in-chief of MAAF, at a review here yesterday.

The Distinguished Service Medal was presented to General Curry for his work as commanding general of the Western Technical Training Command from April, 1942, to July, 1944. He was cited for developing and perfecting mobile schools which enabled the change of entire air force combat groups from one type of plane to another.

Col. Joseph W. Baylor and Col. William H. Eaton were awarded the Legion of Merit; Maj. Joseph W. Timberlake received the Soldier's Medal, and the Air Medal was given to Maj. E. H. Garry.

Major Timberlake received the award for rescuing Brigadier Norman W. Smith from drowning off a beach above Naples on September 3. Timberlake swam 75 yards through heavy surf and a strong undertow to bring Brigadier Smith back to safety. (PRO)

TITO SAYS GERMANS CUT OFF

LONDON, November 21 — German troops attempting to flee through the mountains of southwest Yugoslavia have been cut off, Marshal Tito reported tonight in a special communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio.

The communique reported that Yugoslav National Liberation troops, in collaboration with Bulgarian units, liberated Mitrovica, about 70 miles northwest of Skoplje, and [illegible]. The two cities they are finding their retreat stopped by blown-out bridges, bombed railways, and wrecked trains.

Marshal Tito's communique today reported raiding parties of Partisans had attacked railroads in areas ranging from Zagreb in the north to the Vardar Valley in the south.

An estimated 350,000 Germans are now trapped in Yugoslavia and Albania. Surrounding them are troops of the Yugoslav, Soviet, British, Bulgarian and Albanian armies.

Prizren, in western Serbia, 40 miles northwest of Skoplje, has also been liberated by Yugoslav and Albanian troops, which have now pushed across the Albanian border, Marshal Tito's communique said. (OWI)

VEST-POCKET FLEET FOILS GERMANS

LONDON, November 21 — A British « vest-pocket » fleet of motor torpedo and gun boats and a few landing craft smashed the German attempts to evacuate Yugoslavia by sea when the advancing Russian armies cut the Germans' land retreat to the north, it was announced here today.

This fleet, commanded by Lieutenant Commander Giles and working with Marshal Tito's troops from secret bases along the Dalmatian coast, harassed German escape ships amid hundreds of islands. Under the noses of the Germans, Yugoslav villagers helped to build the hidden bases and worked on the unloading of stores and fuel.

For some time the escape ships played hide and seek with British light forces, but as they tried to reach safety to the north they never knew when or where they would be rounded up and destroyed. Their movements were carefully watched by Partisan observers, who passed the information to the Royal Navy. The Germans, worried about their heavy losses, sent three destroyers to keep the Allies at bay, but they were sunk within a few hours of their arrival by two British destroyers. (OWI)

BULGARIAN PREMIER ASKS FOR BALKAN AMITY

SOFIA, November 21 — There must be bonds of real friendship and close coöperation between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, said Bulgarian Premier Kimon Georgiev yesterday, stressing the importance of Balkan unity.

Georgiev said that his country and « the new Yugoslavia of Tito » are fully conscious of the historic moments they are now experiencing, and that he hoped those moments are not allowed to pass without producing a fruitful and lasting coöperation.

The Bulgarian Premier also said that Bulgaria will fulfill her armistice terms, and make every effort to deserve the confidence of the Allies. (PWB)

STETTINIUS ON GREW'S PACIFIC TRIP

Grew, former Ambassador to Japan.

Grew, now Director of the Office of Far Eastern Affairs of the State Department returned on November 18 from Pearl Harbor where he spent a week as the guest of Admiral Nimitz.

Mr. Stettinius said:

« During his stay, a free exchange of views was carried on between Mr. Grew and the officers of Admiral Nimitz' staff, both naval and military, and it is believed that the result of the visit will be a closer coördination of the work of the State Department and of Admiral Nimitz' headquarters in the conduct of the Pacific war.

ALBANIAN UNITS OCCUPY DRAC

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, YUGOSLAVIA, November 21 — Albanian troops which liberated Tirana, capital of Albania, have pushed westward to occupy the Albanian port of Drac (Durazzo), Marshal Tito's communique announced today.

On the road from Tirana to nearby Elbasen, 1,000 fleeing Germans were killed and 2,150 captured, the announcement said.

Tirana, a city of 35,000, is the 15th European capital to be freed from Axis domination.

The Albanian capital was liberated after 20 days of bitter fighting, Marshal Tito's communique said.

The Free Yugoslav Radio reported striking heroism by the population of the city, as well as by the Albanian troops, in erecting barricades and trenches which succeeded in preventing the Germans from destroying vital services in the city. Tirana's radio station, as well as the city's electrical plant and many other industrial installations, were saved, the broadcast said.

LIBERATED ITALY

BRITISH-ITALIAN UNITY RECALLED

ROME, November 21 — As long as Italy was governed by democratic institutions, she and Great Britain were united in the cause of European peace and against all attempts to set up Continental hegemonies, said Count Nicolò Carandini, Italian Ambassador to London, in an interview published today in the Communist newspaper l'Unità.

The interview was given on the eve of his departure for England, where he arrived last night.

Count Carandini said that Fascism was unable to destroy the friendship of the Italians for the British people. He added that, in spite of the difficulty of his mission, he would work for the reëstablishment of cordial relations between the two countries. (UNN)

HERMANN GOERING S.S. MASSACRE 107 ITALIANS

STIA, ITALY, November 21 — SS. troops of the Hermann Göring Division massacred 107 persons ranging in age from one year to 80 years in the nearby village of Vallucciole on April 12, a document uncovered today in the offices of the ex-Prefect of the Commune of Stia, Province of Arezzo, disclosed.

The document, a permit to hold the funerals of the 107 victims, listed the cause of death as due to « operations of war. » On that date, the war front was at Cassino, more than 300 miles south of the village of Vallucciole.

Further evidence of the 107 murders was found on the body of a German soldier killed later by Italian Patriots. Two photographs of the bodies of the victims were found in the soldier's pockets. The villagers said that the massacre was carried out ostensibly because a German soldier had been killed by Patriots in a town several miles from

At the same time, the Gemans also demolished the other great tower of the Abbey, the Colombaione, which served as a gateway to the Abbey and on which, immediately above the gateway, was the great Gothic relief of Christ Adored by the Cistercians — one of the principal works of Gothic sculpture in Tuscany.

After leaving the Abbey, the Germans shelled it for days, adding to the ruins caused by the mines.

A report by Allied Military Government art experts stated that the beamed ceiling of the Abbey, covered with rich 14th-century painted decorations, was intact. Also intact was the 14th century choir loft with a Della Robbia frieze and small Ghirlandalo School frescoes.

German destruction also damaged the Chapel of San Quintino, which suffered the collapse of one wall and damage to part of the cupola frescoes by Giovanni da San Giovanni.

The remaining frescoes by the same artist on other walls were pitted by German shells. (UNN)

CHURCHILL, DE GAULLE EXCHANGE MESSAGES

PARIS, November 21 — Prime Minister Churchill has sent a message to General Charles de Gaulle, thanking him for the hospitality shown him during his recent visit to France, Radio Paris said today. The message said:

« On my return, I wish to tell your Excellency and fellow members of the French Government how deeply I appreciate the splendid hospitality and innumerable marks of kindness and attention shown to me and my friends during the memorable days I have just spent in France.

« I shall always remember as one of the most glorious and moving moments of my life the magnificent welcome given to their British guests during the first visit to their liberated capital. I was also very happy to see for myself the keenness and high qualities of French troops, who are completing the liberation of their native land under the wise command of General [Jean] Delattre de Tassigny. The welcome given us is an excellent augury for continued friendship between our two nations, essential for the security and future peace of Europe. »

General de Gaulle replied:

« In the name of the Government, I thank you for your message. France, her capital, and her army were happy to welcome in your person not only the Prime Minister of a great country dear to them, but the glorious fighter who maintained the coalition in the war during the darkest days, and thus secured victory. May I say how happy I was personally to see you again. » (OWI)

The villagers said that the massacre was carried out ostensibly because a German soldier had been killed by Patriots in a town several miles from Valluciole.

The « operation of war » carried out by the SS troops began on the morning of April 12, when they ordered all the villagers to leave their homes and assemble in the village square. There, they separated the able-bodied men from the aged, the babies and children, and the women.

The SS troops then ordered the men to carry boxes of ammunition to the mountains and marched them off. No sooner were the men and their guards out of sight, the survivors reported, than the Nazis began the indiscriminate machine-gunning of the remaining helpless villagers.

Later, when the men carrying the ammunition reached their destination, the SS turned machine guns on them.

When civilians in the vicinity heard of the murders and made an effort to reach the bodies for burial, the SS refused permission for two days. (UNN)

GERMANS DEMOLISH ABBEY BELL TOWER

BADIA A SETTIMO, November 21 — The Germans demolished the magnificent 13th-century Campanile of the Abbey here, which was one of the finest bell towers in Tuscany and a landmark of the Arno Plain.

Of no military value, the tower was blown up by German engineers as the Allies neared Florence late in July.

ROOSEVELT CALLS FOR CONTINUED UNITY

CHICAGO, November 21 — President Roosevelt yesterday called upon the American people to continue to be united « in our support of those who are proving once more that united free men in a vigorous democracy can always prevail against a dictator-ridden people. »

The President's message was read by Philip Murray, President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, at the opening session of the CIO's seventh Constitutional Convention yesterday.

Fraternal greetings to the convention were contained in a message from Vassily Kutnetsov, President of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions in Moscow. The message added:

« We are profoundly convinced that common efforts and coördinated actions of the United Nations, the establishment and direct contact between trade union movements of the U.S. and the U.S.S.R., and the organization of a ... world trade union federation will promote the early defeat of our common hated enemy — Hitlerite Germany — and the establishment of a stable and lasting peace for the whole of mankind's welfare. » (OWI)

SECRETARY PERKINS ADDRESSES A.F.L.

NEW ORLEANS, November 21 — Trade unionism in The United States « is an established institution resting on the will of the people, » Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told the American Federation of Labor's national convention here yesterday.

She asked organized labor to take the lead in developing and maintaining industrial coöperation, mutual responsibility, and goodwill to improve working conditions and to modernize industrial life. She said the right to strike was « a precious weapon, » but advised that its use be replaced by orderly realism based on justice and a knowledge of industrial and economic facts.

The Government should aid, when necessary, in conciliation, mediation, and arbitration, she added. Miss Perkins also said various war-time labor agencies will eventually be consolidated into the Labor Department when wage negotiations by collective bargaining free of war-time controls are resumed. 25 MILLION BRITONS MOBILIZED

LONDON, November 21 — In a speech here today, the Minister of Labor, Ernest Bevin, said that at one stage before D-day, not less than 25 million people out of Britain's total population of 46 million were mobilized for war purposes.

He had originally calculated that the Government would be able to get five million women transferred from domestic life and peace-time industry to war work, but they had actually got seven and a half million. Moreover, it was estimated that it would take three women to do the work of two men. With modern methods and the help of the men in the workshops, the women had done equal work to that of men.

Mr. Bevin said that the war against Japan must be carried on with the utmost energy and vigor. « In no circumstances, » he said, « can we allow it to be prolonged for a moment longer than necessary. » (BBC)

FRANCE DEMANDS TRANSPORT FROM REICH

PARIS, November 21 — Restoration of the equipment of French railways and waterways by Germany to the pre-war level is one of France's armistice demands, it was revealed yesterday.

Rene Mayer, new Transport and Public Works Minister, said other demands advanced by the French delegation to the recent Inland Transport Conference in London were:

1. Return of all French transportation equipment found on German territory or German waters.

2. Delivery to France of new transport equipment as soon as Germany is able to manufacture it, in exchange for worn out French and German material.

3. Allied control of German Rhine barges and tugs as an indispensable measure for the security of Europe.

Mayer said these demands exclude the question of the German debt for the use of the French transport system during the German occupation — which was only partly settled at London, and will be treated separately. (PWB)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 21 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

South of Ravenna, troops of the 8th Army in two successful local actions have captured a number of prisoners and occupied positions previously held by the enemy.

West of Forli, British troops have made local gains and captured several inhabited localities.

In the 5th Army sector, a number of enemy raids have been beaten off with losses to the enemy.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of 15th AAF heavy bombers yesterday attacked an oil refinery at Blechhammer in Upper Silesia, and other industrial targets in Germany and Czechoslovakia. Other heavy and fighter-bombers of the Strategic Force attacked railroad targets in central Yugoslavia.

RAF heavy and medium bombers attacked a bridge, roads, and enemy transport in Yugoslavia.

Operations by medium bombers of the Tactical Force were hampered by bad weather, but fighters and fighter-bombers had good results from attacks against road and rail transport in Yugoslavia and northern Italy, as well as close-support targets in the battle areas of north Italy.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force again concentrated against road and rail targets in Albania and Yugoslavia.

From these operations, 27 of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,800 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 21 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied forces have made good progress west of Venlo over heavily mined ground against light opposition.

North of Meijel we reached the vicinity of Helenaveen and the Canal de Helena.

Northeast of the Berigne-Helden Road, our troops advanced about 2,000 yards. Gains were also made east of Helden.

Our forces entered the Belfort Gap and reached the upper Rhine.

Altkirch and several other towns have been freed.

Air:

Weather restricted air operations yesterday, but fighter-bombers attacked transportation targets behind the enemy lines, principally in the region from Merzig to Saint Dié, destroying locomotives, railway cars, and road transport vehicles. In the same region, close support was given to our ground forces. Medium bombers escorted by fighters attacked railbridges near Hausen, north of Colmar. From these operations, three fighter-bombers are missing. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, November 21 — Tonight's communique:

On the island of Saaremaa (Osel), our troops, after powerful blows of artillery, broke through the strongly-fortified enemy defense at the narrowest point of the southern tip of the island and, developing their offensive, captured in stiff fighting the populated localities of Rakuste, Kaimri, Nisuma, Indu, Gaunitse, Luepulu, Vintri, Ingelandi, Seynama, Kargi, Kolsi, Jamaja, Okasaarre, Natsa, Moiza, Torkent, Sodelate, and Jarva-Gali.

Thus, at the end of today, on the southern end of the island, only a small beachhead of seven kilometers in depth, which is continually being shelled by our artillery fire, remained in enemy hands.

Aviation of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet, on November 19, inflicted a blow upon enemy vessels at the southern end of the island of Saaremaa (Osel). As a result of the attack, two enemy destroyers and two patrol cutters were sunk, and damages were inflicted on three minesweepers, one patrol cutter, and one fast landing barge.

In Hungary, our troops captured the populated localities of Heldekre, Verpelet, Maika, Ishnana, and Apashar, and the railway station of Verdele.

In battles from November 14 to 20, on the territory of Hungary, our troops captured 4,220 German and Hungarian officers and men. Thus, from November 8 to 20, in battles on the territory of Hungary, our troops captured 11,920 German and Hungarian officers and men.

On other sectors of the front, there are no changes.

During November 20, our troops disabled or destroyed 28 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, eight enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 21 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

During the past few weeks, Ligurian Patriots have registered notable successes in actions against the enemy. On October 14 they repelled an attack by Fascist Alpine troops on Carrega, inflicting considerable losses on them.

A German attack near Mongiardino was repulsed with serious losses to the enemy. Caught between close range machine-gun fire, the Germans took to flight, leaving many dead and wounded on the field.

Elements of a Patriot brigade have gained a brilliant victory in a three-day battle with detachments of the Fascist Monte Rosa Division, which was forced to withdaw in disorder.

In the Modena sector of the Apennines, the enemy has been compelled to make an appreciable display of force in order to counteract the increasingly intense activity of the Patriots.

Dürboslar has been captured, and our troops advanced beyond Schleiden.

Substantial gains were made east of Aachen, and we are fighting in the western and southern outskirts of Eschweiler.

Wenan has been taken, and fighting is in progress north of the town.

Our forces entered Metz from three sides. Enemy resistance is centered in two pockets in the northern part of the city.

Southeast of Metz, we are in Lellingen, east of Ealkenberg.

Dieuze has been freed, and our patrols are at Insweiler, 10 miles northeast. In an advance of more than six miles, our troops pushed forward against broken resistance close to Sarrebourg.

Both sides suffered considerable losses. Two days later the Germans, switching from warfare to reprisals, began to hunt down Patriots in house-to-house searches, killing four of them who were confined to bed because of wounds. The survivors succeeded in getting through the enemy lines.

Among the recent activities of a group of Venetian Patriots who have reached the Tolmezzo area are the destruction of a stretch of railway and many railway cars at Ospedaletto, and the blowing up of three cars of munitions at Valvasone. (UNN)

In the Meuse bridgehead southeast of Holland, our troops again repulsed attacks of British formations supported by tanks.

Between Geilenkirchen and the area southeast of Stolberg, the Americans continued their mass attacks in face of the heroic resistance of all forces of our army. Yesterday, they did not advance far beyond their initial positions. The enemy was again halted in some sectors where he had at first made gains. Sixty-five enemy tanks were destroyed.

At the northeastern Lorraine frontiers, German tank formations recaptured a certain number of localities. The garrison of Metz is engaged in fierce fighting against the enemy who succeeded in penetrating into the western part of the town.

East of Mörchingen, the enemy's mauled formations yesterday were not able to continue their attacks.

Between the Rhine-Marne Canal and the Gateway of Burgundy, grim fighting is in progress around the enemy penetrations.

Fierce fighting is also in full swing at the western approaches to Belfort.

In upper Alsace, our troops are engaged in grim fighting against advancing enemy formations.

London and Antwerp continued to be subjected to long-range bombardments.

Italy:

In Italy, on both sides of Forli, the British 8th Army attacked early this morning as was expected.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, north of Pristina, strong attacks of Bulgarian troops were repulsed.

East of Budapest and south of the Matra Mountains, the stubborn Bolshevik major attacks made only small gains in the face of the resistance of our divisions.

South of Miskolc, enemy attacks failed.

In the Tokaj sector and at Ungvar, fierce fighting is in progress for an enemy bridgehead on the banks of the Tisa.

On both sides of the Dukla Pass road, attacking Soviet formations collapsed in our fire.

South of Libau, the Bolshevik attempts at breaking through were again frustrated on the second day of the defensive battle, either in grim fighting, or in the preparatory stage.

The defenders of the Sworbe Peninsula, supported by the concentric fire of our naval forces, offer a gallant resistance to the enemy attacks with reinforced forces.

Minesweepers engaged Soviet naval forces which advanced towards Mentu [Montur] and sank a Soviet motor assault boat.

Air:

Yesterday, Anglo-American terror bombers again attacked localities in western Germany.

Other attacks were launched on Upper Silesia.

During the night, British nuisance raiders indiscriminately dropped bombs on western, northwestern, and central Germany. Anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 26 planes, 18 of which were four-engined bombers.

The Dittmar Speech: Germany's leading military analyst, General Dittmar, tonight delivered his weekly radio address. He discusses the new Allied drives on the western front, which are also the outstanding theme of today's news items. [illegible] Dittmar argues that the weather optimistic in tone, about the German chances of halting the admittedly menacing drive from the west. « It is certain that the prerequisites for checking the Allied large-scale attacks are much more favorable today than they were weeks or months ago. The longer the fight lasts, the more losses and the wearing out of material will burden the western enemy's decisions. »

Negus Avenges « Favorite Wives »: More and more news items of what might be called « human interest » and distraction value, devoid of direct connection with the current military problems, are now appearing in broadcasts to the German people. For example, the last week has seen a rise in descriptions of lurid crime items. Another type of item of possible diversionary function is illustrated by the following broadcast to German soldiers:

« In answer to a charge by the London Bonomi Government that the Negus of Ethiopia had deported female employees of Italian firms as slaves to his court, Haile Selassie replied that this was only a retaliation measure. During the occupation of Ethiopia, Badoglio deported the favorite wives of the Negus. Despite all investigations, their whereabouts have not yet been established. »

Eastern Front: The Transocean correspondent sums up the situation on this front as the « lull before the storm. » German air reconnaissance reports « Soviet concentrations of troops and the bringing up of war material on a very large scale. » The commentator appears somewhat uncertain as to where these concentrations will strike, but one of the predictions which he does venture to assert with confidence is: « The Soviets are lining up for a battle on the East Prussian border, along the Narev front and the Vistula, between Warsaw and the foothills of the Ruthenian Carpathians. » But he adds that beforehand the Soviets may be aiming at more immediate successes in Kurland and Hungary.

Continued Fighting Around Forli: Late evening Fascist radio programmes stated that the British 8th Army resumed the attack on both sides of Forli this morning, and that violent fighting is in progress. The British attack was preceded by a strong artillery barrage. « The German reaction was strong », and « the enemy attack was checked near the main German line of defence. »

« The situation south of Bologna is unchanged. »

Fascists Tackle Problem of « Inflation »: Within the past week the Fascist radio has repeatedly warned against and explained the so-called causes of inflation. Tonight, the commentary on the subject begins by saying that « the necessity of putting a decisive brake on inflation is one of the greatest anad most pressing of all problems within the Fascist Republic. » Supposedly, the measures being adopted to prevent inflation are intended to protect particularly « those who live on fixed salaries, and those who depend on modest incomes, as well as small savers. » There is an urgent need, it is said, to « reduce every expense to the minimum. » Otherwise, the commentator adds, any government measures in favor of workers might be neutralized by inflation. Hoarding in Fascist territory, which it would appear is in full swing is strongly attacked.

Dissension in "Invaded" Italy Aids Fascism: The Fascist radio throughout today quoted liberally from political editorials appearing in the official news organs of the various parties in "invaded" Italy. The Action Party, the Christian Democratic Party, and the Communist Party received the most attention and their allegedly conflicting viewpoints were presented as proof that unbridled dissension exists within the Bonomi Government. « Through fighting each other, our enemies work for us, and, therefore, for Italy, for they thereby revive the hope that Fascism will return inevitably to liberate the country from disease and from her brutal nurses ».

The Dittmar Speech: Germany's leading military analyst, General Dittmar, tonight delivered his weekly radio address. He discusses the new Allied drives on the western front, which are also the outstanding theme of today's news items, as well as commentaries. Dittmar argues that the weather is unfavorable for large-scale military action now and, hence, attributes the Allied offensive to a mood of desperation, which he sums up as: «an offensive at any cost.» The desperation supposedly springs from Allied war-weariness and from a «growing disappointment among the British and American people, who do not wish to bury the hopes for an early end of the war, which they had nourished since the invasion.»

Another political, as opposed to military, motive for the drive is, according to Dittmar, a desire by the western Allies to counter-balance from their end any «success of the Soviets in the east or southeast.»

German Prospects on Western Front: The same commentator makes the following prediction, very cautiously of troops and the bringing up of war material on a very large scale.» The commentator appears somewhat uncertain as to where these concentrations will strike, but one of the predictions which he does venture to assert with confidence is: «The Soviets are lining up for a battle on the East Prussian border, along the Narev front and the Vistula, between Warsaw and the foothills of the Ruthenian Carpathians.» But he adds that beforehand the Soviets may be aiming at more immediate successes in Kurland and Hungary.

In reply to the alleged lament of the anti-Fascist parties, to the effect that the failure of Bonomi's Government is due to the absence of capable leaders, the Fascist commentator reminds us ironically that most men of any calibre went north with Republican Fascism. This theme is particularly strong throughout other and related commentaries, most of which try to prove that the Allied authorities, as well as the Bonomi Government, have perforce realized that the Fascist régime was quite effective, and that its administrative framework will have to be sustained.

Finally, it is asserted, in various ways, that the real aim of the liberation committees is not that of achieving unity, but rather of undermining and overthrowing the Bonomi Government — and then the deluge, authoritarian and dictatorial, from below.

FRENCH 1ST ARMY REACHES RHINE; GERMANS RETREAT ALONG ENTIRE FRONT

LONDON, November 20 — Troops, tanks, and armored cars of the French 1st Army reached the Rhine, southeast of Mulhausen, early last night, after a spectacular two-day 30-mile advance through the Belfort Gap and Alsace. The drive was spearheaded by troops of the 1st Motorized Division and armored cars of a colonial infantry regiment.

Allied press dispatches reported that the major French rated 11 more towns and are pushing on toward the eastern side of the hills.

Press dispatches reported tonight that the Germans are in a general retreat all along the 400-mile western front. At some points in eastern France, their withdrawal was approaching a rout with vehicles clogging roads bumper-to-bumper under continual Allied air attack.

Flying one sortie after another, Allied planes are taking on repeated loads of fuel and ammunition and blasting the convoys off the roads.

The American 3rd Army thrust along the western fringe of the Saar River Valley east of the Moselle assumed the proportions of a drive up the famous Moselle Gate toward Trier and Coblenz on the Rhine, press dispatches reported. The Americans in Germany are on a 10-mile front, and have reached a depth of five miles, east of the Luxembourg border.

The general German withdrawal on this front still is going on, although more slowly. Strong enemy rear-guards, supported by tanks, are covering their retreat. At one point, advancing American troops are under fire from guns in the Maginot Line.

Resistance ends in Metz

A late dispatch tonight reported that organized German resistance inside the fortress city of Metz had ceased, except for snipers and for troops holding out in the northwestern section of the city. Earlier today, German SS troops engaged the Americans in hand-to-hand and street fighting, while members of the German Home Guard fired from fortified positions.

German convoys attempting to flee the city before the last road was cut yesterday, were caught by American tanks lined up on a ridge dominating the road. The Americans held their fire until the enemy convoys were within complete range, and then blasted them off the road.

American 1st Army troops by-passed the German stronghold of Eschweiler today, and drove to within sight of the Cologne Plain. They broke out of the northern tip of the Hürtgen forest four miles from Düren. The city of Eschweiler is being pounded by Allied artillery from the west and south.

Allied observation planes today reported a decided movement of German motor transport to the east behind the German front. The Germans were reported to be withdrawing from the ares of Düren and Jülich. Other pilots reported that anti-aircraft installations between Allied lines and the Roer River were unoccupied.

On the entire Allied front north of Aachen, the British and American Armies slowly advanced eastward in the most powerful attack ever mounted on the western front in an attempt to break through to the Rhine and the great Ruhr Valley.

In the Geilenkirchen sector, the Germans made two counter-attacks, one of which was broken up before it began; the second gained some ground before it was thrown back. The enemy infiltrated into the town of Suggerath, captured yesterday, but were thrown out after hard fighting

LONDON, November 20 — Troops, tanks, and armored cars of the French 1st Army reached the Rhine, southeast of Mulhausen, early last night, after a spectacular two-day 30-mile advance through the Belfort Gap and Alsace. The drive was spearheaded by troops of the 1st Motorized Division and armored cars of a colonial infantry regiment.

Allied press dispatches reported that the major French forces were within 11 miles of the Rhine Valley industrial city of Mulhausen, but reports from the French Consulate in Zurich said early tonight that French armored units had reached the city itself.

The fortified town of Belfort was taken in the eastward drive by troops of the French 2nd Motorized and 5th Armored Divisions after bitter fighting at Essert, controlling the approaches from the west. The troops were formed by General Jean Delattre de Tassigny into specially trained combat groups, with particularly accurate and powerful resources. They were aided by French Forces of the Interior.

The French forces on the Rhine are reported to have freed a number of towns in the Rhine area, where the frontiers of France ,Switzerland ,and Germany meet near Basle. Swiss reports said that the towns of Neuweiler and Hagenheim were taken. Another neutral report stated that German troops have abandoned their frontier posts and customs houses in the face of the French drive near the Swiss border.

French spearheads, which reached the Rhine, are now through the Maginot Line. Ahead, are the formidable triple barriers of the Rhine River, the Siegfried Line, and the Black Forest.

American and French forces have seized the entrances to four of the six main passes through the mountains, and both Allied Armies are advancing rapidly. They have liberated the Saar River Valley east of the Moselle assumed the proportions of a drive up the famous Moselle Gate toward Trier and Coblenz on the Rhine, press dispatches reported. The Americans in Germany are on a 10-mile front, and have reached a depth of five miles, east of the Luxembourg border.

LATE BULLETIN

GERMANS RETREATING INTO SWITZERLAND

LONDON, November 20 — Germans fleeing in the face of the French 1st Army drive, are retreating into Switzerland rather than to return to Germany, Swiss reports reaching here stated tonight. They are being disarmed by Swiss frontier guards.

The Swiss radio reported tonight that fighting has spread to the Swiss border, and the German wounded are being removed to Basle hospitals.

French and German artillery have been exchanging fire across the Rhine near the Swiss border, and members of the French Forces of the Interior are standing guard on the river's west bank.

The Swiss radio also said that Allied troops are erecting a bridge across the Rhine southeast of Mulhausen.

GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACK IN FORLI' AREA: RECAPTURE MONTE FORTINO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 20 — While activity on most fronts of the Allied Armies in Italy continues to be confined mostly to patrols, Polish troops of the 8th Army have been in the midst of heavy fighting in the Forli area, and they have successfully repulsed two counter-attacks by German forces at Converselle, a village about six miles southwest of the Po Valley town, it was announced today.

German activity in the Forli area became more intensive in the last few days and, after two nights of hard fighting, the Germans on Saturday recaptured Monte Fortino, a mile north of Converselle. Monte Fortino was taken by Polish troops of the 8th Army on Thursday, but the Germans opened a counter-thrust with heavy artillery in their attempt to relieve the pressure from Polish troops at this end of the line.

Further enemy counter-attacks on Polish positions at Converselle, just below Monte Fortino, were repulsed, and the Polish troops have improved their positions.

Five miles north of Forli, there was heavy enemy shelling in the area of Villa Franca di Forli.

In the Ravenna sector, 8th Army patrols have crossed the River Ronco, west of Molinaccio, four miles south of Ravenna. Strong patrols made contact with the enemy in strength holding the north bank of the Scolo Lama Canal, and the Germans suffered casualties.

Positions remained unchanged along the Montone, in the drive for the approaches to Ravenna.

Maintaining strong pressure with aggressive patrolling, Allied positions were improved along the entire 5th Army front yesterday.

Enemy attempts to infiltrate 5th Army lines at several points were repulsed. (PRO)

RUSSIANS CLOSE IN ON MISKOLC, HATVAN, AND EGER

MOSCOW, November 20 — Red Army forces are closing in on Miskolc, Hatvan, and Eger, all important rail centers between northeastern Hungary and Budapest. Today they captured Dyosgyor, five miles west of Miskolc, together with several other places and the railway station at Kishtalya.

The railway from Budapest northeast to Hatvan, and thence north into Czechoslovakia, is under Russian artillery fire.

Dispatches pointed out that the capture of Hatvan and Miskolc will completely paralyse enemy movements northeast of the Hungarian capital, and at the same time will allow Marshal Rodion Malinovsky to begin the outflanking of Budapest from the north.

In the capture of Gyoengoes, announced yesterday, two battalions of German infantry were wiped out and eight tanks destroyed. In the advance towards Miskolc, large stores of ammunition were captured, including 70,000 shells and 45,000 mines, a supplement to the Soviet communique announced, and German and Hungarian prisoners totalled 5,000.

No material changes were reported elsewhere on the Russian front. The Russians yesterday damaged or destroyed 45 German tanks and shot down 25 enemy planes. (OWI - Reuter)

350,000 GERMANS IN BALKANS THREATENED

ROME, November 20 — British, Russian, Yugoslav, and Albanian forces are coördinating their land, sea, and air efforts to cut off 350,000 Germans trying to escape from Albania and Yugoslavia, Allied communiques and dispatches revealed tonight.

Marshal Tito's communique has reported continued fighting in the region of Urosevac, in the Kacanik Pass northwest of Skoplje. His forces have reached the approaches of Sintlja and Ljiljan. Albanian Patriots wiped out a German column trying to relieve Prizren, 20 miles northeast of Kukes, killing 550, and destroying 100 lorries.

Meanwhile, British paratroopers dropped in Albania between Lake Ochrida and the coast, are coöperating with Albanian forces to harass part of the 100,000 German soldiers in this sector. A successful action was fought between Elbasan and Tirana for the defense of a bridge, and 80 Germans were killed.

Bulgarian forces east of the River Ibar continued to press strongly along the whole front, giving the Germans no opportunity to reorganise in new positions, the Bulgarian communique said tonight.

Bombers, escorted by fighters, destroyed two road bridges and two railway bridges in the Ibar River Valley, as well as attacking other targets in the valley. The Mitrovica-Raska railway line was again cut in several places. (OWI-Reuter)

AMERICAN FORCES HOLD ALL OF MAPIA GROUP

PEARL HARBOR, November 20 — American forces have completed the occupation of all of the islands in the Mapia Group, north of New Guinea, while other forces have landed on Asia Island, farther west, it was officially announced today.

A British warship was the flagship for the Mapia operations, and took part in the naval bombardment which preceded the landings, press dispatches said. British naval participation in the Pacific operations indicates a new phase of British-American sea action against the Japanese, one correspondent pointed out.

The Asia Islands, attacked yesterday, are about 130 miles north of western Dutch New Guinea. The assault troops met with light opposition, dispatches said.

In line with the new advances, the U.S. Navy Department has announced that in the three years of the war, American naval forces have cleared almost nine million square miles of the Pacific, have sunk 1,400 enemy ships, and shot down or otherwise destroyed 10,000 Japanese planes.

Meanwhile, tonight's communique from General Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters revealed that the air and ground battles on Leyte are becoming bogged down almost completely by a tropical typhoon which is lashing the island.

However, American infantrymen of the 32nd Division were reported as still making "steady progress" in reducing strongly-fortified Japanese positions near Limon, at the northern end of the island's Ormoc corridor.

The road block across Ormoc highway, south of Limon, is being held despite heavy Japanese attacks. The Imperial 1st Division, aided by artillery and armor, is attempting to break through the trap enfolding them around Limon.

Leyte-based American fighters, meanwhile, attacked enemy communications lines and installations throughout the Ormoc corridor, and at the same time 35 enemy bombers ineffectively raided American positions, losing seven to U.S. fighters and anti-aircraft fire.

Pacific Fleet Headquarters at Pearl Harbor, announced tonight the loss of one American destroyer, two destroyer escorts, and seven other vessels of naval forces under Admiral Thomas Kinkaid in the Pacific due to "enemy action or the perils of the sea."

The vessels were not lost in the recent great naval battle of the Philippines. Associated Press said that today's reported losses raised the total of American Navy ships of all types lost since the beginning of the war to 228.

Among the 10 vessels reported lost were the USS Abner Read, a destroyer; the USS Eversole and USS Shelton, destroyer escorts. (OWI - Reuter)

ROME, November 20 — British, Russian, Yugoslav, and Albanian forces are coördinating their land, sea, and air efforts to cut off 350,000 Germans trying to escape from Albania and Yugoslavia, Allied communiques and dispatches revealed tonight.

Of these fleeing German forces, 100,000 are at present in the mountainous district northeast of the Scutari-Podgorica line, some of them are in northern Albania, and others are in western Yugoslavia. Here, Marshal Tito's armies, side-by-side with the Russians from the east and British troops landed secretly by sea and air, are closing in on the Germans who are making desperate efforts to reach Sarajevo, and escape to Austria. These German troops already have been pushed out of Greece or forced westward by the advancing Russian and Bulgarians.

British guns that drove the Germans back from El Alamein, and Commandos who gained experience in the landings in France, are supporting these operations and also are extending their hold northward along the coast.

Less than 55 miles farther east, the Russians and Bulgarians are pushing forward to reduce the gap containing two roads accessible for the German retreat.

Overhead, Balkan and Desert Air Force planes are attacking rail and road transport, troop concentrations, and communications from as far north as Zagreb.

German escape shipping in the few remaining Adriatic ports also is being bombed. Two British destroyers ranged the northern Adriatic on Friday and bombarded enemy positions on Rab Island, 40 miles south of Fiume.

CHINESE TROOPS ENTER BHAMO

KANDY, CEYLON, November 20 — Chinese troops have occupied the southwest sector of Bhamo, important Japanese base and river port on the Irrawaddy River in northern Burma, today's communique from Southeast Asia Command headquarters announced.

Chinese troops moved into Bhamo after a dive-bombing attack which left the Japanese defenders stunned, press dispatches said.

In another Southeast Asia action, British troops fighting down the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway corridor have met strong Japanese resistance near the village of Pinwe, about 60 miles west of Bhamo, the communique reported.

East African troops have pushed south along the Chindwin River in northeastern Burma, and are now about 135 miles northeast of Mandalay.

In the South China campaign, the Japanese are making strenuous efforts to cut the Burma Road at Kweiyang, capital of the Province of Kweichow. An American press service estimated that the Japanese have thrown a quarter-million troops into this section. In an effort to cut off the Burma Road terminus of Kunming from Chungking, the Japanese have sent two more columns against Hwaiyuanchen, on the Liuchow-Kweiyang railway, and have outflanked the town from the north and south, the Chinese High Command announced from Chungking.

The Chinese also announced the fall November 17 of Hsingheng, about 40 miles southwest of Luichow, on the left flank of the advancing Japanese forces.

A potentially fresh threat to Kweichow has developed with further Japanese advances west of Poaching, 63 miles west of Hengyang. The Chinese communique said Japanese troops pushing westward had reached a point 18 miles west of Paoching two days ago, and were being engaged by Chinese troops. (OWI)

GELSENKIRCHEN, MUENSTER BOMBED

LONDON, November 20 — The Scholven Buer synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen and railyards at Münster, main supply base for German armies on the northern flank of the western front, were bombed today by Flying Fortresses of the 8th USAAF.

The Flying Fortresses, numbering 160, were escorted by more than four times that number of Mustang fighters and Thunderbolt fighter-bombers, which also strafed targets in western Germany.

This afternoon, RAF Lancasters, escorted by fighters, attacked unspecified objectives in the Ruhr.

Today's attacks followed a heavy bombing of southern Germany yesterday and Saturday by 600 aircraft from Italian bases, carried out while the Britain-based 8th USAAF was grounded by bad weather.

On the Continent, tactical combat units braved hazardous flying weather to join the battle along the western front. Bombers and fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF flew more than 1,800 sorties against enemy troops, fortifications and communications yesterday. By nightfall, they had destroyed 15 enemy planes in the air; disabled 46 locomotives, destroyed 270 trucks, and knocked out more than 300 rail cars and 28 gun positions.

During the day's operations, 500 medium and light bombers ranged up and down the front ahead of the 9th, 1st, and 3rd U.S. Armies, in close support of attacking infantry. They dive-bombed and strafed nine towns in the vicinity of Aachen.

Thousands of Germans trying to escape from Metz were killed by bombs or gunfire through the narrow corridor still open, press dispatches said yesterday. Convoys jamming the road eastward were spotted, and the remnants of a once-great German army were badly hit, and their equipment strewn all over the countryside.

The centers of Düren and Jülich, and the smaller fortified area of Heinsburg, are today nothing but bomb craters, a New York Herald Tribune dispatch said today.

All roads in the vicinity are impassable, and railway yards are piled high with smashed transport and ruined supplies destined for the German lines.

From the Ruhr to Karlsruhe, Allied air attacks have caused such chaos that widespread demonstrations of German discontent have occurred, said a Zurich dispatch. The Gestapo and SS have launched a new wave of arrests against defeatists, the dispatch added. Allied air attacks are also being used by foreign workers and anti-Nazis as cover for their underground activities.

German air activity was directed against southern England last night, and more damage and casualties were caused. (OWI - Reuter)

PARIS, November 20 — General Dwight Eisenhower tonight gave high praise to the French 1st Army's soldiers

These demolished areas, Admiral Ramsey said, were heavily booby-trapped, and contained every type of enemy mine. At the same time, the Allied naval Commander-in-Chief revealed that Dieppe, a much smaller port than Antwerp, had already handled as much as 7,000 tons of material in one day, despite the damage left by the Germans. ALLIES LIST DEATH-PENALTY CRIMES

LONDON, November 20 — Crimes of German civilians in Allied-occupied German territory, which are punishable by death, have been enumerated in a decree of the Allied Military Commission in Germany, it was announced today.

The list of capital crimes includes espionage, use of arms against the Allied forces, action in favor of the Nazi Party or any other organization dissolved by the Allies, illegal possession of firearms, posing as a member of the Allied forces, looting, and desecrating corpses. (UNN)

CZECHS RELEASED FROM SWITZERLAND

LONDON, November 20 — Units of the puppet Czechoslovak «Protectorate» Army, who had been interned in Switzerland after escaping from German-held Italy, have left Switzerland by permission of the Swiss Federal Government, and will join the Czechoslovak Army fighting in northwest Europe, official Czechoslovak sources announced today.

The «Government Army,» which was formed in Bohemia under German auspices, were sent abroad by the Prague Nazis in an effort to prevent its members joining Patriot forces. One detachment sent to Turin crossed the Alps and made contact with the Allies. Part of a battalion joined the Partisans, later crossed the Swiss frontier, and were interned in a special camp. All of them volunteered to join the Czechoslovak Liberation Army. (PWB)

M.A.A.F. STRIKES IN BALKANS, SILESIA, ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 20 — Allied bombers today expanded their Balkan operations to hit not only at the main German escape routes in Yugoslavia, but also at targets in Moravia, central Czechoslovakia; Upper Silesia, Hungary, and the Po Valley and Bologna fronts in Italy.

Strategic and tactical flights during the day again were aimed at German troop concentrations, communications, marshalling yards, and motor equipment along the route on which German forces are attempting to make their retreat from Visegrad to Sarajevo. The air action was in concert with the three-direction land drive of British troops of the Land Forces Adriatic, Marshal Tito's Partisans, and the Red Army.

For the third successive day, heavy bombers and fighter-bombers of the 15th USAAF pounded the highways from Novi Pazar to Sarajevo ,along which the German divisions are moving. An announcement here said today that the movement of large forces of enemy troops, retreating north from Greece and Macedonia, and now concentrated in central Yugoslavia, will be affected by the MAAF attacks.

EISENHOWER CONGRATULATES FRENCH

PARIS, November 20 — General Dwight Eisenhower tonight gave high praise to the French 1st Army's achievement on reaching the Rhine. General Eisenhower said:

«I am glad that the reaching of the Rhine should be a French victory. It has always been my wish to give the greatest possible help to the French authorities to enable them to take the greatest possible part in the liberation of the country.

«My great desire, as a sincere friend of France, is that the position of France should be her traditional position — not at the end of the war, but before the war ends.»

General Eisenhower said that the mass call-up in Germany has supplied men of only relatively weak fighting value, but, he added, «Do not let us forget that every German with a machine-gun still is dangerous.» (OWI)

PORT OF ANTWERP TO BE OPENED SOON

LONDON, November 20 — The great port of Antwerp will soon be open to feed supplies to the Allied Armies now on the offensive in the west. This was revealed today by the naval Commander-in-Chief, Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsey.

He said that great efforts were being made to clear the Schelde Estuary, pointing out that among the tasks confronting the Allied Navies was the sweeping of the channel, 75 miles long and nearly a mile wide.

In Antwerp, itself, about 3½ million square yards of demolished quayside installations had to be cleared.

An announcement here said today that the movement of large forces of enemy troops, retreating north from Greece and Macedonia, and now concentrated in central Yugoslavia, will be affected by the MAAF attacks.

Rail Line Bombed

Liberators and Lightning fighter-bombers also hammered today at the narrow-gauge rail line from Sarajevo to Brod, which is on the main line to Germany and Hungary, and three bridges on the escape route were bombarded.

An early inventory taken tonight of the day's strafing activities showed that 10 locomotives were destroyed in the Ljubljana-Zagreb area of Yugoslavia, and that many bridges, motor vehicles, and railroad equipment were destroyed or damaged in the area of the main objective — the only rail line still open to the fleeing Germans in Yugoslavia.

Escorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF also bombed the oil refineries at Blechhammer, in Upper Silesia. Blechhammer is the eighth-largest synthetic plant in Germany, and had been capable of producing 300,000 tons of oil a year.

Fortresses and Liberators, bombing by instruments, assaulted targets in Moravia, in central Czechoslovakia.

Tactical Air Forces operations today also joined in the intensive air campaign in the western end of the Balkans to hit railroad rolling stock in northern Yugoslavia.

Enemy supply dumps in the eastern Po Valley and the 8th Army battle area east of Forli were primary targets today of RAF fighter bombers.

Spitfires and Kittyhawks did most of the bombing in support of 8th Army troops in the area of Forli, with fairly good results, according to tonight's announcement.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 760021

Thunderbolts supported 5th Army action by successfully bombing targets in the Bologna and Imola areas.

Rail lines were cut, and craters were blasted in highways in the eastern Po Valley by RAF heavies.

Bad weather again settled over northern Italy, and medium bomber operations were hampered. Some fighter-bomber missions also were cancelled.

An announcement tonight of the results of yesterday's strafing attacks between Budapest and Vienna by the 15th USAAF disclosed that 71 locomotives were destroyed, and considerable railroad rolling stock and motor transport were destroyed or damaged in the attack on German traffic to the Hungarian front. It was the largest number of locomotives destroyed in a day's action since September 2, when 84 were wrecked by MAAF planes.

Yesterday, escorted heavy bombers continued to assault strategic targets, communications, and enemy troop concentrations in Yugoslavia in the drive to cut off the main German retreat routes running from Visegrad to Sarajevo, it was announced today.

In daylight yesterday, bombers of the 15th USAAF, the RAF and the Balkan Air Force pounded railway marshalling yards and motor equipment along the enemy escape route to Sarajevo, and, at night, RAF heavies concentrated on targets along the Albanian-Yugoslavia border, where British paratroopers and troops of the Land Forces Adriatic have joined Marshal Tito's Partisans.

Adriatic Shipping Hit

Coastal Air Force units also attacked shipping in the Adriatic yesterday, while the RAF was active in destroying or damaging bridges and equipment in northern Yugoslavia.

Successes were registered in all these air operations supporting the British, Yugoslav, and Russian units, it was reported here. Bridges were hit, many locomotives destroyed, and a large quantity of motor vehicles was said to have been destroyed or damaged in the air action concentrated on the objective of stunting the German retreat between Novi Pazar and Priboj, in southern Yugoslavia, and Visegrad and Sarajevo in central Yugoslavia.

Lightnings of the 15th USAAF bombed enemy troops moving along the main escape corridor in daylight, and, at night, RAF Wellingtons, Liberators and Halifaxes dropped most of their bombs on the eastern end of Podgorica, on the Albanian-Yugoslav border, where German troops are said to be lodged.

The air strikes on enemy communications in the central Yugoslavia sector were reported here today to have resulted in a direct hit on the Visegrad bridge by RAF bombers, and destruction of many vehicles and locomotives by the 15th USAAF.

The RAF heavies and mediums split into three forces. Two of them attacked motor transport on the roads, and a third force aimed at a breach of the Visegrad bridge. More than 500 tons of bombs were dropped by the three forces in 24 hours, which, it was announced here, is a record for RAF heavies and mediums in Italy.

Widespread Strafing Attacks

Other operations of MAAF again were concentrated yesterday on strategic strafing attacks on communications in Austria and Hungary, and RAF activity in northern Italy, where fighter-bombers and light bombers struck at Po Valley communications and close-support objectives on the Italian front.

Excellent results of the tactical operations in northern Italy were reported here today.

FARM, FISHERY, FORESTRY EXPERTS TO MEET

ROME, November 20 — For the first time since the liberation of Italy, all compartmental experts of agriculture, forestry, and fisheries will meet here November 30 to discuss problems of rehabilitation.

The Italian Minister of Agriculture, Fausto Gullo, summoned the conference, which will survey methods of developing a maximum program of production in the three fields during 1945.

To provide basic information for the guidance of this development, the Italian Ministry of Agriculture, in collaboration with the Agricultural Sub-Commission of the Allied Commission, today issued a report surveying prospects and needs for 1945.

Copies of the report, in Italian and English, were being distributed today to Italian and Allied agricultural officials in compartmental and provincial levels.

The basic Allied economic policy of reviving production to reduce to a minimum the Italian demands on Allied resources and of developing Italy as a source of supply for further operations, has been a guiding principle of the program.

Under war conditions, any forecast of crop production becomes speculative, officials said, and hence, the totals of 1936 have been used in the following schedule for the whole of Italy (including areas not yet liberated):

Crop	1945	Quintals	1936
Wheat	57,387,210		61,118,350
Rye	1,272,045		1,321,950
Barley	2,153,726		1,925,780
Oats	4,163,755		4,783,000
Rice	8,441,805		7,339,606
Corn	27,742,350		30,510,900
Horse beans	3,992,240		5,244,740
Other dried legumes	3,075,310		3,454,370
Potatoes	32,433,650		26,379,630
Tomatoes	8,878,710		9,685,850
Truck crops	21,016,300		17,800,020
Sugar beets	30,297,800		26,128,330
Tobacco	485,836		421,703
Hemp (fiber)	772,680		898,180
Hemp (seed)	41,029		33,830

Depletion of work animals and other livestock by German looting, the state of repair of farm machinery, destruction of farm storage buildings, tillable areas flooded or mined by the Germans, and demolition of fertilizer plants by the Germans, were among the factors that had to be reckoned in the estimates.

Excellent results of the tactical operations in northern Italy were reported here today.

Fighter-bombers of the RAF took advantage of a midday break in bad weather over the Po Valley to attack road and rail targets. Thunderbolts searched out and destroyed 19 motor vehicles, a locomotive, many railroad cars, and four buildings. A hangar five miles south of Parma was damaged .

A span in each of two railroad bridges on the outskirts of Modena and at Bologna were destroyed by the Thunderbolts, which also wrecked three highway bridges in the area.

Marauders successfully attacked the Brenner Pass communications, despite a massive smokescreen and active enemy resistance.

The Desert Air Force disrupted enemy communications at Faenza by making unusable two road bridges and a rail bridge near the town.

In the operations in Austria, five oil fields and an airdrome in the Vienna area again were the targets of the 15th USAAF in the campaign to destroy the only remaining source of fuel to the Germans. Although the targets were bombed by instruments, scattered hits were observed.

Airdromes and communications in the Esztergon and Veszprem areas near Budapest were strafed in the air action over Hungary. (PRO)

Depletion of work animals and other livestock by German looting, the state of repair of farm machinery, destruction of farm storage buildings, tillable areas flooded or mined by the Germans, and demolition of fertilizer plants by the Germans, were among the factors that had to be reckoned in the estimates.

Essential requirements of farm machinery imports were estimated for 1945 to include 1,610 tractors, 960 ploughs, 1,240 binders, 290 balers, 100 combines, and 50 trailers.

The report emphasized encouraging production of the early maturing forms of livestock, such as rabbits, pigs, and sheep, in accord with estimates of the forage crop for 1945.

The most important factors in the approaching discussions of the program — preparation of which has required six months of research — will be availability of fertilizers, crop priorities, and crop rotations, the report showed. (UNN)

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE HELD ESSENTIAL

ROME, November 20 — Meuccio Ruini, leader of the Democratic Labor Party and Minister Without Portfolio, said in a speech at Foligno today, that, while economic planning was indispensable, private initiative and enterprise were the first requisites for the reconstruction of Italy.

« It would be absurd to allow laissez-faire prejudices to lead us into despising plans, which are indispensable if only for the help which Italy must obtain from the Allies, » he said.

Ruini urged Italians, however, to rely more on their own resources than on government plans. The value of individual effort, he said, has been amply illustrated by the present rise of agriculture.

Both firms and private persons should take all possible advantage of recent measures, such as the removal of road blocks, which give wider scope for freedom of trade.

Referring to the problem of communications, Ruini said the Italian Government had presented to the Allies a plan for the co-ördination of land, sea, and air transport, suggesting, among other things, that rail lines used by the military should also be opened to civilian transport. (UNN)

NAZIS MASSACRE ALL MEN OF ITALIAN TOWN

SAN GIOVANNI VALD'ARNO, November 20 — How the Germans four months ago massacred virtually the entire male population of the Italian township of Meleto, near here, was told in a dispatch received from a UNN reporter today.

The wife of one of the victims said that early in July German soldiers reached the town in a lorry and forced the population to assemble in the square. The women were pushed into a large cellar, where they were kept until noon. The men were divided into groups of 20, taken away, and killed. One group was machine-gunned, in a barn, the bodies covered with petrol and set on fire. Several women, who saw the corpses later, said there were indications that some of them were still alive when they were burned.

According to the latest unofficial figures, the remains of about 100 men have been recovered.

Some details of the Meleto massacre were also given by the Archbishop of Fiesole, Mgr. Giorgis, who was in Rome recently. He described how the parish priest, Don Giovanni Fondelli, was shot by the Germans when he tried to prevent the massacre. (UNN)

GERMANS KILL 37 ITALIAN HOSTAGES

BAGNI DI LUCCA, November 20 — The Germans killed 37 residents of this famous resort town last summer because Italian Patriots blew up a bridge across the Serchio River, which divides the town into two parts, a United Nations News correspondent said in a dispatch today.

An investigation disclosed that the residents were chosen at random and were shot at German Army headquarters, the correspondent wrote. Later, as the Allied drive sped northward, the Germans began a drive against persons suspected of Patriot activity, hanging 14 additional residents of the town.

People of Bagni di Lucca lived in daily terror as the Germans, desperate at the advancing Allied Armies, went on a murdering and looting spree, investigating authorities were told. They took all the town's livestock and followed the same procedure at the neighboring communes of Borgo [illegible] (UNN)

UNIVERSITY COURSES FOR ALLIED SOLDIERS

FLORENCE, November 20 — Special courses will be instituted at Florence University, after the cessation of hostilities, for members of the Allied forces awaiting shipment home, it was announced today.

The announcement, made by Minister of Education Guido De Ruggiero, said that the courses, to be given by both Allied and Italian professors, would be made possible by materials supplied by the Allies.

It is hoped that this scheme will enable Allied soldiers to resume their studies more easily on returning home. (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

U.S., BRITAIN, CANADA, AGREE ON AIR PLAN

CHICAGO, November 20 — The United States, Great Britain, and Canada have agreed on a plan for post-war civil aviation based on open competition and equal opportunity for all nations, according to a spokesman for the international civil aviation conference which is meeting here.

This plan, a compromise measure worked out by the delegations of the three countries, will be offered today as a provisional document to be examined by the 51 other countries represented. If accepted, world air routes could be mapped as soon as the military authorities approve, the spokesman added.

The plan would operate under what is called the « full planes policy, » by which every nation engaged in international air commerce may operate planes as frequently as traffic requires, on condition that the line meets the accepted standards of profitable enterprise.

Under the plan, the international organization set-up would have advisory powers in economic matters, the spokesman said. (PWB)

Several women, who saw the corpses later, said there were indications that some of them were still alive when they were burned.

According to the latest unofficial figures, the remains of about 100 men have been recovered.

Some details of the Meleto massacre were also given by the Archbishop of Fiesole, Mgr. Giorgis, who was in Rome recently. He described how the parish priest, Don Giovanni Fondelli, was shot by the Germans when he tried to prevent the massacre. (UNN)

GERMANS KILL 37 ITALIAN HOSTAGES

BAGNI DI LUCCA, November 20 — The Germans killed 37 residents of this famous resort town last summer because Italian Patriots blew up a bridge across the Serchio River, which divides the town into two parts, a United Nations News correspondent said in a dispatch today.

An investigation disclosed that the residents were chosen at random and were shot at German Army headquarters, the correspondent wrote. Later, as the Allied drive sped northward, the Germans began a drive against persons suspected of Patriot activity, hanging 14 additional residents of the town.

People of Bagni di Lucca lived in daily terror as the Germans, desperate at the advancing Allied Armies, went on a murdering and looting spree, investigating authorities were told. They took all the town's livestock and followed the same procedure at the neighboring communes of Borgo and Pescali. (UNN)

GERMANS DESTROY OLIVE MILLS

LUCCA, November 20 — After a survey showed that the Germans had destroyed deliberately all the large olive-processing mills in the Florence, Pistoia, Lucca, and Pisa areas, Allied Military Government officers combed the vicinity to find small mills that they could aid in beginning operations.

In the Lucca area 627 small mills have been reopened, while 139 began operating around Pistoia, and about another 200 around Florence.

AMG agricultural experts helped the mills to obtain transport, repair parts, power, and technical advice. (UNN)

A.M.G. REPAIRS PISTOIA COURTHOUSE

PISTOIA, November 20 — The Palazzo Pretorio, 14th Century Gothic courthouse, which was badly damaged by a German land mine last summer, has been temporarily repaired by the Allied Military Government and now is being used for court sessions, a United Nations News correspondent said in a dispatch today.

The land mine had ripped through all the floors of the ancient building. AMG officials provided lumber, cement, and glass, which were used by local workmen in repairing the building. (UNN) national civil aviation conference which is meeting here.

This plan, a compromise measure worked out by the delegations of the three countries, will be offered today as a provisional document to be examined by the 51 other countries represented. If accepted, world air routes could be mapped as soon as the military authorities approve, the spokesman added.

The plan would operate under what is called the "full planes policy," by which every nation engaged in international air commerce may operate planes as frequently as traffic requires, on condition that the line meets the accepted standards of profitable enterprise.

Under the plan, the international organization set-up would have advisory powers in economic matters, the spokesman said. (PWB)

ADMINISTRATION PLAN FOR REICH SET UP

WASHINGTON, November 20 — Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius announced tonight that much of the European Advisory Commission's plan for the administration of enemy areas already had been set up, but that, owing to military considerations, it had not been possible to make the details public. YUGOSLAV PREMIER ARRIVES IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, November 20 — Yugoslav Premier Ivan Subasic arrived here today from Belgrade, Radio Moscow announced tonight. Subasic was accompanied by the Acting President of the Committee of National Liberation and by members of the Soviet mission to Yugoslavia.

Subasic later conferred with Foreign Affairs Commissar V. M. Molotov. (Radio Moscow)

UNSUCCESSFUL REVOLT IN BOLIVIA

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA, November 20 — A rebellion in the town of Oruro, 150 miles southeast of here, was suppressed yesterday a few hours after it had broken out, according to an American press service report tonight.

Reuter reported late tonight that four leaders of the revolt had been executed, and that order had been restored throughout the country.

The excuted leaders were the engineer Brito, brother of Colonel Meliton Brito who headed the revolt; Colonel Garron; a civilian, Loayza Beltran; and Colonel Pacieri. Beltran was said to have blown up an important bridge in Oruro, the second-largest mining center of Bolivia and the third-largest city in the country.

The remaining revolt leaders fled after military officers, whom they had forced to join the rebellion, had escaped. (Reuter)

SCOBIE TO DEMOBILIZE GREEK PATRIOTS

ATHENS, November 20 — Maj. Gen. Ronald Scobie, commander of Allied land forces in Greece, will undertake the demobilization of all Greek national resistance forces on December 10, it was announced today by Greek Premier Georges Papandreou. British patrols are already disarming resistance forces in the suburbs. (OWI)

BELGIAN PATRIOTS AGREE ON DISARMING PLAN

BRUSSELS, November 20 — The method for handing in arms held by Belgian resistance groups has been established in agreement with the Allied Command, Radio Brussels said tonight quoting a communique issued by the Belgian National Union of Resistance Groups.

The communique said that a list will be made of those arms still in use by resistance forces for special missions. They will be handed over as soon as the missions are fulfilled.

If the regional resistance groups should be unable to dispose of their arms, it was agreed that they will inform the nearest Allied authorities, who will take charge of the arms' removal.

The communique added: «In order to avoid any possible interference with Allied military operations, the handing over must be carried out without delay as soon as this order has been either read in the press or heard over the radio.» (OWI)

T.U. CONVENTIONS OPEN IN U.S.

WASHINGTON, November 20 — Two American trade union organizations, representing a total of 13 million U.S. workers, opened their annual national conventions today.

The American Federation of Labor, with seven million members, convened in the southern city of New Orleans, while the Congress of Industrial Organizations, representing six million men, met in the midwest city of Chicago.

In a report presented to the assembled delegates, the AFL executive council advocated unqualified U.S. participation in a world security organization as essential to maintenance of a lasting peace. Full participation by representatives of American workers in international economic conferences and agencies set up to deal with world economic problems also was urged.

«We must safeguard the rights of individual nations while promoting international security,» the report declared. Referring to labor's part in the war, the report said that, while the immediate responsibility of labor was to win the war, its future job will be «to promote the well-being of the worker.»

Tremendous increases in America's record output of heavy munitions and equipment must be made if the production front is to keep pace with rapid military advances on every sector, Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general of the U.S. Army Service Forces, told the AFL convention.

Acknowledging the miracle of production already accomplished by American labor, General Somervell disclosed that current schedules call for an immediate 35 per cent increase in the heavy ammunition output; a 31 per cent boost in production of heavy trucks; and a 35 per cent jump in current tank production.

«This is the situation we have to face,» he said. «The rapid pace of our advance in Europe and the Pacific has created a sharply increased need for many items of equipment at once, or to reduce the force of their offensives.

«We are ahead of our military timetables. To keep ahead, we must move our production timetables forward, and get from our factories today, material that was scheduled for later delivery.» (OWI)

MURRAY CALLS FOR INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, November 20 — Philip Murray, President of the U. S. Congress of Industrial Organizations, in his report to the seventh annual CIO convention, called for a conference of representatives of United Nations labor organizations.

Murray said that the issues «for which the war is being fought are affected by the fateful decisions which are being made today.» He declared it was necessary for labor to establish a unified position, if it is to have an effective voice in shaping world destiny.

«The war has taught us that America cannot and does not stand alone, isolated from the rest of the world,» said Murray, adding that the peace depends on «intelligent international cooperation with other nations.» He said the CIO looked with great hope to the outcome of such conferences as those at Bretton Woods and Dumbarton Oaks and urged that labor take a part in making its lasting peace, submitted a three-point program for the prevention of future wars, and urged labor's participation in international economic conferences and agencies dealing with matters which affect the welfare of workers. WEIZMANN SAYS TERROR MUST BE STAMPED OUT

LONDON, November 20 — Doctor Chaim Weizmann, President of the World Zionist Organization, stated recently in Jerusalem that the most important task of the Zionist organization is to stamp out terrorism which is threatening to undermine all that has been achieved in Palestine in the last 60 years.

«I suffered a grievous personal tragedy,» Doctor Weizmann said, «when my son, a flying officer in the RAF, was lost in operations, but it was with a deeper sense of shock that I heard about the murder of Lord Moyne.» (BBC)

U.S. VETERANS TO BE HELPED IN FARMING CAREERS

WASHINGTON, November 20 — United States Department of Agriculture extension agents are coöperating with federal, state, civilian, and veterans' committees in establishing ex-servicemen in farming, stated Paul V. Kepner, assistant to the Department's extension service. He added:

«We want to see qualified men find their way on to farms under conditions that will give them a more than even chance of a successful future.

«I see no reason why wise investment in mechanical seeders, tractors, and other farm equipment used on a contract basis by farmers cannot provide mechanically proficient ex-servicemen with a good living.

«Welding shops in the right areas should prove good investments. Electricians, carpenters, and engineer corps men will be needed in farming districts.» (OWI)

WAR COSTS U.S. 250 MILLION DOLLARS A DAY

WASHINGTON, November 20 — In the month of November alone, the war will cost the United States 7,500 millions of dollars, President Roosevelt said today when he launched the sixth War Loan drive.

The president urged every American to practice self-denial, so that the fighting services might have all they needed, and expressed his confidence that the success of the new war loan would be an example to the world of democracy in action.

«The war is not over yet,» said the President, «by many a costly battle; while if we have every reason to be proud of what has been done, even optimistic about the ultimate outcome, we have no reason to be complacent about the tough road that lies ahead.» (PWB)

INSIDE GERMANY

HITLER'S WHEREABOUTS IS STILL A MYSTERY

LONDON, November 20 — The question of the silence and whereabouts of Adolf Hitler remained as much of a mystery to the German people today as it did to the outside world.

Reports reaching here from various sources indicated that the German people, already facing military defeat and disaster, were greatly concerned over the status of their political leadership, not knowing whether Hitler or Heinrich Himmler was the political head of the German nation. There was every indication that Himmler, whether temporarily or permanently, had assumed Hitler's dictatorial powers.

Murray reaffirmed labor's no-strike pledge, and rededicated the CIO to a continuance in the war effort. He said:

«Because of the deep-rooted convictions of our membership in the cause of democracy and freedom, we have been most sensitive to the need of having all policies and programs, both of our organization and of the nation, attuned to the single goal of achieving the quickest military defeat over our Axis enemies, the utter destruction of Nazism, and the avoiding of any possibility of a negotiated peace.

«Regardless of what it may take, our fight against Nazism and Japanese war lords must be continued and carried forward to a complete and successful conclusion. Until we have accomplished complete and absolute destruction of the German and Japanese military forces, there can be no question of our basic responsibility to the nation to continue intact our no-strike pledge.» (OWI)

NEW ORLEANS, November 20 — The executive council of the American Federation of Labor, reporting at the AFL's 64th annual convention today, urged full United States participation in a world organization to maintain

The Nazi Party, in the face of world-wide speculation, still remained silent on the Hitler question.

Meanwhile, reports continued to come from neutral capitals. The New York Times today carried a report from its Stockholm correspondent that Hitler was seen in Berlin on November 8, remaining there just one day on a hurried trip by air from Berchtesgaden.

If the report of Hitler's visit is true, the story said, it gives the lie to Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels' claim that Hitler did not have the time to make his usual beer hall putsch anniversary speech on November 9.

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 20 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the 8th Army sector, Polish troops have driven off further enemy counter-attacks on Converselle, and have improved their positions.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

DIVISION

Elsewhere on the front of the Allied Armies in Italy, activity has been confined to patrols.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of 15th Air Force heavy bombers yesterday bombed targets in Austria and Yugoslavia.

Strategic fighters bombed and strafed targets in Austria, Hungary, and Yugoslavia.

Medium and heavy bombers of the RAF Strategic Bombing Force attacked troop concentrations in Yugoslavia.

Po Valley communications and close-support objectives on the Italian front were targets for Tactical Air Force fighters, fighter-bombers, and light bombers. Excellent results were reported from these operations.

Adriatic shipping was attacked by Coastal Air Force units.

Planes from the Balkan Air Force attacked road communications, troops concentrations, and rail targets in Yugoslavia.

Last night, heavy and medium bombers attacked troop concentrations in Yugoslavia.

From these operations, one of our heavy bombers and 20 other aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew more than 2,200 sorties.

Naval:

Allied light coastal forces operating between Spezia and Genoa on the night of November 18-19 observed two enemy convoys cruising offshore, one proceeding north, the other south. The two convoys met in the darkness and, in the ensuing confusion, the enemy ships were fired upon by their own shore batteries and they proceeded to engage each other. At this stage of the proceedings, our boats also came under fire, and withdrew.

When the position became clarified, our craft attacked in the face of heavy gunfire. Torpedoes were fired. One enemy ship was hit and blew up with so violent an explosion that the engines in our craft moved in their beds. Though the enemy gunfire caused superficial damage to two of our boats, they sustained no casualties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 20 — Today's communique:

In the Venlo area of southeastern Holland, Allied forces have cleared the wooded area between Helden and Kessel, and reconnaissance elements have reached Maas at Kessel.

North of Meijel, crossings were made over the Deurne Canal.

Medium, light, and fighter-bombers and rocket-firing fighters operating in strength, again struck at the enemy's rail and road supply routes to the battlefront.

In northern and eastern Holland and beyond the frontier into Germany, northwest of the Ruhr and in the Rhineland, railway lines were cut in some 50 places. Many locomotives and a large number of railway trucks and road vehicles were either destroyed or damaged. Medium and light bombers attacked road and railway bridges at Venlo, and railway targets at Kempten and Viersen.

Further progress has been made in our attacks in the Geilenkirchen-Aachen sector. The town of Geilenkirchen was taken yesterday.

Several counter-attacks were contained in the vicinity of Prummern and we made gains east of Setterich, which has been cleared of the enemy. Farther south, Höngen, Kinzweiler, and St. Jörk are in Allied hands.

Our patrols are advancing through wire entanglements and minefields in the southern outskirts of Eschweiler, and Advances of several miles were made against moderate resistance in offensives north and southeast of Blamont.

Eleven more towns have been freed in the area farther south, including Rechicourt, Harbouey, and Badenviller.

In the Vosges Mountains, Gerardmer has been freed.

Our troops thrust almost through the Belfort Gap, reaching Sappois, within 20 miles of the Rhine. Other units have driven to within three miles of Belfort.

East of the Belfort Gap, medium bombers went for the Rhine bridge at Neurenberg.

A storage depot at Zabern, 20 miles northwest of Strassburg, an ordnance depot at Pirmasens, and two enemy radio stations were among the day's targets for other medium, light, and fighter-bombers, and rocket-firing fighters.

From all air operations, 29 fighters and three bombers are missing, but four of our fighter pilots are safe.

At least 16 enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air during the day.

A sharp attack by enemy ground forces on Mardick, in the Dunkirk area, was firmly repulsed on Saturday morning. Yesterday, strongpoints and gun positions in the area were attacked by fighter-bombers. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, November 20 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in Hungary, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Chanolosh, Gersel, Irma, Chaba, Diósgyror, Ostrosh, Jegersalok, Demyen, Demeslo, Marhach, and Jishonsa, and the railway station of Kishtalya.

On other sectors of the front, patrol activities and, at several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During November 19, our troops disabled or destroyed 45 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 25 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 20 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On November 11, motorized elements of a Piedmont Patriot brigade attacked the Fascist garrison at Sangano, in Turin Province, where, during a previous engagement, the Patriots had lost their commander, Sergio De Vitis. In the last action on this sector, three enemy soldiers were killed, nine wounded, and 11 taken prisoner.

Near Rocca Ciglié, in Cuneo Province, Patriot patrols blew up a railway bridge over the Tanaro River. During the early part of November, superior German forces succeeded in pushing back Patriot detachments at Cogne and adjacent districts, in the Province of Aosta. The Patriots withdrew with slight losses, but later made a daring raid into the enemy camp, killing 11 Germans and wounding 30 others, without loss to themselves.

On the night of November 3, in the Vicenza area, a Patriot battalion blew up the railway bridge over the Bacchiglione River and derailed a train loaded with war material. The locomotive and five cars were destroyed.

Traffic on the Vicenza-Padova, Vicenza-Treviso, and Vicenza-Schio lines was interrupted. (PRO)

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 20 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Yesterday, the third defensive battle for Aix la Chapelle flared up with unprecedented fury. The Americans, throwing into the fire masses of artillery, planes, tanks, and infantry formations, tried to force a break-through. The German front withstood the attack.

In the Geilenkirchen sector, some positions changed hand several times during the day, in the course of extremely fierce fighting. Some hundred prisoners were captured.

Between Würselen and the Hürtgen Forest, our troops again destroyed 35 tanks. The sacrifice of thousands of American soldiers in this sector resulted in the gain of only a small strip of ground.

In the town area of the northeastern Lorraine frontier, and east of Mörchingen, our troops halted most of the enemy attacks.

Between the Rhine-Marne Canal and Saint Dié, the enemy advanced in fierce fighting.

North of Montbeliard, attacking French formations were halted by our determined defense.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

In the immediate vicinity of the Swiss frontier the enemy, taking advantage of his protected flank, succeeded in penetrating into Alsace.

Over the western theater, there were fierce dog fights. German fighters brought down nine planes out of superior enemy formations.

Greater London and the Antwerp area were subjected to bombardment with « V-1 » and « V-2 » by day and by night.

Italy:

In central Italy, in the Etruscan Apennines and at the Adriatic coast, numerous attacks of U.S. troops were frustrated.

In the Adriatic Sea, German motor assault boats sank two enemy trawlers loaded with supplies.

Eastern Front:

At Apatin and Batina on the banks of the Danube, all Bolshevik attempts at broadening their bridgeheads failed.

In the Balkans, east of the Pristina-Mitrovica Road, our troops again repulsed Bulgerian attacks.

Southeast of Budapest, the Soviets, after yesterday's high tank losses, resumed their attempts at breaking through with infantry only. Our divisions smashed all attacks, and wrested some ground from the enemy in powerful counter-thrusts.

Bombers destroyed 40 planes on the ground, and damaged 10 others on a Soviet airdrome.

South of the Matra Mountains, as well as in the Miscolc and Tokai sectors, strong Bolshevik attacks remained unsuccessful, except for some minor penetrations.

In the front bulge southeast of Libau, the enemy again launched a major attack after an intense artillery preparation, and fierce bomber attacks. The first wave of the attack collapsed. Fierce fighting against fresh forces is in progress.

On the Sworbe land front, the garrison of the peninsula is engaged in fierce fighting against the enemy who achieved a penetration. German naval forces support our troops by their fire.

Air:

In the western Reich territory, Anglo-American bomber formations continued their attacks on the civil population, and shelled trains.

Anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 21 four-engined bombers out of a force of U.S. bombers which attacked Vienna and other localities in southeastern Germany. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

Western Front: The latest reports received so far tonight, concerning the great new Allied drives on this front, give the following picture (via the German News Agency):

Neither one of the two outstanding Allied claims of the day, the taking of Metz and the taking of Geilenkirchen, is conceded. However, the importance and power of the Allied drives are emphatically admitted. It is attributed to « temporary brightening up of weather, » with the word « temporary » (optimistic, from the German viewpoint) as the opening word in the whole despatch. The Aachen area is singled out as being « again the scene of a very strong concentration of enemy forces. »

The only hint of Allied success at Geilenkirchen is the euphemistic, though not inaccurate statement that the Americans are on « both sides » of the town. As usual in recent German reports, the admitted Allied gains are regularly accompanied by such phrases as « insignificant ground » and « with heavy losses » to qualify the gains.

Belfort: French troops, never referred to as French troops but rather as « Gaullist troops, » have admittedly [illegible] protecting the German flank at « essential local points » of the day's fighting in the east. « The attempt of the Bolsheviks to conquer Budapest by outflanking it has cost them heavy losses and 196 tanks during the last eight days. »

American Atrocities Alleged: The German Radio is launching a campaign evidently designed to discourage German civilians from remaining in Allied-conquered areas and from collaborating with the Allied Military Government. For example, according to the German Home Radio, an American reporter is said to admit that all German civilians « who do not submit to the Anglo-American seizures and pillaging, are shot without any heed. » Germans are also warned by their radio that, if they remain behind in the path of an Allied advance this winter, they will get « neither food nor clothing » from the conquerors.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Germans Recapture Montefortino: In the Adriatic coastal area, the Germans, « boldy stormed and recaptured Montefortino, southwest of Forli. » The Fascist radio attributes this success to « the 8th Army's considerable losses during last week », a factor which allegedly slowed Allied operations in this area.

The American 5th Army south of Bologna has reportedly started new operations, « after a month's standstill; their action so far, however, has been limited to patrol thrusts. »

German E-boats, in an action off the Adriatic port of San Benedetto, « have sunk two enemy vessels loaded with war matériel. »

Fascism Foresaw Menace of « Freemasonry »: The Fascist radio recalls that on 20 November 1925, Mussolini's law on the removal of secret societies in Italy was proposed and adopted. Two of Il Duce's speeches during that year are quoted as illustrative of dire warnings which, through the years, came true. The bill adopted in 1925 is said to have « represented the wish of all classes and all categories of Italians, which were noticing, even if unconsciously, that the Freemasonic movement was threatening the political, social, and economic life of Italy; substantially, however, the question remained unaltered. » This, concludes the Fascist commentator, was due to the fact that the movement went underground; its patiently delcterious activity culminated in a series of « compromises » which allegedly influenced the Fascist capitulation in the summer of 1943. The cancerous inroads of Freemasonry are said to have had « international » impetus. The Fascist radio promises, however, that the coming Axis victory will represent the « definite defeat of intrinigues and of all the low ambitions which originate from Freemasonry. »

Allies Meet Cold Reception in Forli: For two successive days the Fascist radio has stressed the alleged fact that the Allied reception at Forli was far from cordial. Quoting an Allied correspondent of the « Exchange Agency, » tonight's commentator exults that « the enemy, with his venomous propaganda, is now obliged to admit the real nature of the welcome extended by the Italian people to the Allied soldiers. » Referring to Forli as « the citadel of Fascism, » the commentator salutes the citizens of the town, particularly the women, who performed many « acts of valor » in support of Fascist sharpshooters, prior to the Allied entry.

Allies Bomb Parma, Brescia, and Savona Province: It is stated tonight that Allied planes on Saturday made several bombing and strafing attacks on the outskirts of Parma, the town and province of Brescia, and the province of Savona. In Parma, many women and children were allegedly killed and others wounded; in Brescia, there were numerous wounded; in the rural areas of the province of Savona, three persons were reported to have been killed and five wounded.

Bombers destroyed 40 planes on the ground, and damaged 10 others on a Soviet airdrome.

South of the Matra Mountains, as well as in the Miscol- and Tokai sectors, strong Bolshevik attacks remained unsuccessful, except for some minor penetrations.

In the front bulge southeast of Libau, the enemy again launched a major attack after an intense artillery preparation, and fierce bomber attacks. The first wave of the attack collapsed. Fierce fighting against fresh forces is in progress.

On the Sworbe land front, the garrison of the peninsula is engaged in fierce fighting against the enemy who achieved a penetration. German naval forces support our troops by their fire.

In the western Reich territory, Anglo-American bomber formations continued their attacks on the civil population, and shelled trains.

Anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 21 four-engined bombers out of a force of U.S. bombers which attacked Vienna and other localities in southeastern Germany. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

Western Front: The latest reports received so far tonight, concerning the great new Allied drives on this front, give the following picture (via the German News Agency):

Neither one of the two outstanding Allied claims of the day, the taking of Metz and the taking of Geilenkirchen, is conceded. However, the importance and power of the Allied drives are emphatically admitted. It is attributed to «temporary brightening up of weather,» with the word «temporary» (optimistic, from the German viewpoint) as the opening word in the whole despatch. The Aachen area is singled out as being «again the scene of a very strong concentration of enemy forces.»

The only hint of Allied success at Geilenkirchen is the euphemistic, though not inaccurate statement that the Americans are on «both sides» of the town. As usual in recent German reports, the admitted Allied gains are regularly accompanied by such phrases as «insignificant ground» and «with heavy losses» to qualify the gains.

Belfort: French troops, never referred to as French troops but rather as «Gaullist troops,» have admittedly «penetrated into positions protecting the German flank at Belfort,» but «German counter-measures are under way to cut off the advanced enemy forces.»

«Invisible» German Forts: The German Home Radio tonight informs the German people that the «new» fortifications guarding their western front are so cleverly built that they are «invisible.» «The principle according to which they are built is invisibility;» and even the pill-boxes are «organically built into the ground» according to what is called a special «refined» sort of camouflage. In conclusion the German Home Radio states that constantly «the new mimicry [of nature] is being extended into the Reich.»

Eastern Front: A late German broadcast spotlights the «areas east of Budapest and southeast of Libau» as the two still; their action so far, however, has been limited to patrol thrusts.»

German E-boats, in an action off the Adriatic port of San Benedetto, «have sunk two enemy vessels loaded with war materiel.»

Fascism Foresaw Menace of «Freemasonry»: The Fascist radio recalls that on 20 November 1925, Mussolini's law on the removal of secret societies in Italy was proposed and adopted. Two of Il Duce's speeches during that year are quoted as illustrative of dire warnings which, through the years, came true. The bill adopted in 1925 is said to have «represented the wish of all classes and all categories of Italians, which were noticing, even if unconsciously, that the Freemasonic movement was threatening the political, social, and economic life of Italy; substantially, however, the question remained unaltered.» This, concludes the Fascist commentator, was due to the fact that the movement went underground; its patiently deleterious activity culminated in a series of «compromises» which allegedly influenced the Fascist capitulation in the summer of 1943. LaGuardia's Concern for Hungry Florentines Derided: Heavily ironic observations were made today about Mayor LaGuardia's radio address to the people of Florence. La Guardia's concern over the «bread riots» in Florence, and his plea for patience amongst the hungry, are labelled as impertinent and ineffectual.

HUNGARIAN

Reprisals Against Deserters' Relatives: Radio Budapest tonight broadcast a strong warning against deserters, threatening them with court-martial and «possible grave consequences to their relatives» if they behave «in a manner unworthy of an Hungarian soldier.»

WAR FRONTS

CHURCHILL REVIEWS WAR SITUATION

LONDON, September 28 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a review of the war and the international situation, told a crowded House of Commons today that the last seven weeks have completely changed the face of the war in Europe.

The Prime Minister began his review of the war by describing Allied progress in France, Belgium, and Holland. Mr. Churchill, said, in part:

"The foul enemy who for four years has inflicted his cruelties and oppression upon those countries has fled, leaving perhaps 400,000 in killed and wounded, and leaving in our hands nearly half a million prisoners."

"Besides these, there may well be 200,000 of them in the coastal fortresses in Holland whose destruction or capture may now be deemed highly probable."

Most Decisive Battle

Mr. Churchill pointed out that Russia was holding and beating far larger hostile forces than those which faced the Allies in the west, and had through long years, with enormous losses, borne the brunt of the struggle on land.

"Hitler has lost, or will lose when the tally is complete, more than a million men in France and the Low Countries. Other large armies may well be cut off in the Baltic States, in Finland, and in Norway. It is less than a year ago, when the relative weakness of Germany was already becoming apparent, that he was ordering further aggressive actions in the Aegean and the occupation of the islands which the Italians wished to surrender.

"He has squandered and scattered a very large army in the Balkans Peninsula, whose escape will be very difficult. Twenty-seven divisions — many of them battered — are fighting General Alexander in northern Italy.

"Many of these will not be able to recross the Alps to defend the German kilometers. Such vast frittering away and dispersal of forces has never been seen and is of course the prime cause of the impending ruin of Germany.

"When Hitler escaped his bomb on July 20, he described his survival as providential. I think, from a purely military point of view, we can agree with him. But certainly it would be most unfortunate if the Allies were deprived, in the closing phases of the struggle, of that form of warlike genius by which Corporal Schickelgruber has so notably contributed to our victory.

Date of German Defeat

"I shall certainly not hazard a guess — it could be no more than a guess — as to when the end will come. Many persons with the highest technical attainments, knowledge, and responsibility have good hopes that it will all be over by the end of 1944.

"On the other hand, no one — certainly not I — can guarantee that several months of 1945 may not be required.

"There is also the possibility that after organized resistance in the German state and the army is completely broken, fierce warfare may be maintained in the forests and mountains of Germany by desperate men conscious of their own guilt and impending doom.

"These of course would, at a certain stage, deserve the treatment which the Germans have so ruthlessly meted out to the guerrilla movements in other countries. It may be necessary for the Allies to declare at a certain date that actual war against the German state has come to an end, and that a period of mopping up of the band of war criminals has begun."

"Complete agreement on every point was reached at Quebec by the Combined Chiefs of Staff," said Churchill.

"The President and I have both pursued the policy of making no changes other than those forced by death, as in the lamented loss of Admiral Pound, in the Chiefs of Staff charged with the conduct of the war.

Most Decisive Battle

He described the battle of Normandy as «the greatest and most decisive single battle of the entire war. The chaos and destruction wrought by the Allied air forces behind the battle front reduces to petty dimensions all that our own army had to suffer from the German Air Force in 1940.

«The speed with which the mighty British and American armies in France were built up is almost incredible. There are now between two and three million men in France.

«Some time ago, a statement was made by a Senator to the effect that the American public would be shocked to learn that they would have to provide 80 per cent of the forces to invade the Continent. I then said that at the outset of the invasion of France, British and American forces would be practically equal, but that thereafter American buildup would give them steadily the lead. I am glad to say that, after 120 days of fighting, we still bear in cross-Channel troops a proportional of two to three in personnel, and of four to 5½ in fighting divisions in France.

«Casualties have followed very closely the proportion of numbers. We have lost upwards of 90,000 men, killed, wounded, and missing, and the United States, including General Patch's army, over 145,000. Such is the price in blood paid by the English-speaking democracies for the actual liberation of the soil of France...»

COUNTER-ATTACKS IN NANCY AREA REPULSED

SHAEF, September 28 — Three German counter-attacks against the American salient east of Nancy were repulsed, a late dispatch reported tonight.

There is fairly strong German opposition on the west flank of the Eindhoven-Arnhem corridor, but on the eastern flank the Allies are continuing their advance. Resuel, on the Eindhoven-Turnhout Highway, has been recaptured by the Germans. (Reuter)

BULGARIA MUST LEAVE GREECE, YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, September 28 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden stated in the House of Commons today that the British Government considered the complete withdrawal of Bulgarian troops from Greece and Yugoslavia an essential pre-requisite to any armistice with Bulgaria.

The British Government, in consultation with the Greek Government, is carefully watching the Bulgarian position in Thrace, in Greece, where the situation is particularly confused, Eden said. (Reuter)

« In this war there have been none of those differences between professional and political elements as were such a large feature of the last war. We have worked together in perfect harmony. Our confidence in the Chiefs of Staff — British confidence and confidence in the War Cabinet — has steadily grown.

« Obviously, our discussions were concerned with the successful winding up of the war in Europe by bringing about the unconditional surrender of Germany at the earliest moment, and also with a new phase — the war against Japan — which will dominate all minds and command all our resources from the moment the German war is ended.

War Against Japan

« On behalf of the British Government, nearly two years ago I assured the President that Great Britain would pursue the war against Japan with all her resources to the very end, and as I explained to Congress when I last addressed them, we have losses to repair and injuries to repay on the Japanese account at least equal to, if not greater than, those suffered by the United States.

« We owe it also to Australia and New Zealand to help quell forever the Japanese menace to their homelands; and, as they have helped us on every front in the fight against Germany, we will certainly not be behindhand in giving them effective aid.

« Our perseverance in this quarrel is not to be doubted. I offered, some time ago, to embody this undertaking in a definite treaty, but the President made the courteous reply that the British word was enough.

« That word we shall certainly make good. Accordingly, we offered the United States a fine, modern British fleet, and we asked that it should be employed in major operations against Japan. This offer was at once cordially accepted.

« A large portion of this fleet is already gathered in the Indian Ocean. For a year past, our modern battleships have been undergoing a further measure of modernization and tropicalization, to meet the rapid wartime changes in technical apparatus...

Satellite States

« The foreign situation has responded to military events. Never was the Alliance against Germany of the three great powers more close or more effective. Divergencies of views and interest must necessarily be, but at no time have these been allowed to affect in any way the majestic march of events in accordance with agreements and decisions reached at Teheran. One by one, in rapid succession, satellite states have writhed or torn themselves free from Nazi tyranny and, as is usual in such cases, not from Germany to neutrality, but from an alliance with Germany to war.

« This has taken place in Rumania and Bulgaria. Already there is fighting between the Finns and the Germans. The Germans, in accordance with their practice and character, are leaving a trail of burned and blackened villages behind them even in the land of the unhappy Finnish dupes. Hungary is still in the Nazi grip but when, as will happen, that grip is broken by steel hammer blows of war, or it relaxes as a result of internal lesions or weakness of the tyrant: the Hungarian people will turn their weapons with all their strength against all those who have led them through so much suffering to their present ruin and defeat. The armistice terms agreed upon with Finland and Rumania bear naturally the impress of Soviet will, and here I must draw attention to the restraint which has characterized Soviet terms to these two countries, both of which added their quota of injuries to the immense volume of suffering which the Russian people have endured, have survived, and have triumphantly surmounted.

This is the only part that will serve them and their interests, and the more vigor with which they fall upon the Germans, the more they will be likely to draw the attention of the victorious nations from their previous misdeeds.

The Future of Italy

Referring to his visit to Italy, Mr. Churchill said:

« I had conversations with the Prime Minister, Signor Bonomi, and also talked with him and Marshal Badoglio together — they are friends. The Marshal has faithfully observed the conditions imposed at the armistice a year ago. He has done his best to send all possible Italian forces, particularly naval forces, into the struggle with Germany, and he has worked steadily for the improvement of relations between Italy and Britain and between Italy and the Allies. His behavior, on leaving office, in giving cordial support to his successors, is most creditable. Finally, I had an interview with the Lieutenant General of the Realm, whose sincerity and ardor in the Allied cause and whose growing stature in Italian eyes was equally apparent.

« What impressed me and touched me most in my journeys in Italy was an extraordinarily good will toward British and American troops everywhere displayed by the Italian people. As I passed through small towns and villages behind the lines, day after day, the friendliness and even enthusiasm of the peasant and the workman and the shopkeeper and of all classes was spontaneous and convincing. I confess that I cannot feel any sentiment of hostility toward the masses of misled or coerced Italian people.

« Obviously, no final settlement can be made with them until north Italy has been liberated and the basis on which the present government stands has been broadened and strengthened. There are good hopes that this will be achieved — I might say soon, but it is safer to say in due course. It would be a miserable disaster if the Italian people, after all their maltreatment by their former allies and Fascist elements and Mussolini, were to emerge from the European struggle only to fall into savage and violent internal feuds. It was for that reason that, on leaving Rome, I tried to set before the Italian nation some of the broad safeguards which are the breath of our nostrils in this country, and which sustain the lives and freedom of the individual against all forms of tyranny, no matter what liveries they may wear, or what slogans they may mouth.

Punishment of Criminals

« We were all shocked by the horrible lynching outrage in the streets of Rome a week or so ago. Every measure of precaution and authority will be taken to prevent the outbreaks of mob vengeance, however great the provocation may be, and for this, responsibility rests not only with the Italian Government but, ultimately, with Allied military power. Punishment for criminals who have committed the most cruel and barbarous acts under orders from the Germans, punishment of men who have made themselves agents of betrayal of 300 or 400 hostages who were shot en masse in the catacombs of Rome — punishment for that there must certainly be, but it must be punishment of courts of justice, and in strictest adherence to the forms and principles of justice. This shameful incident has been a baffling factor in the Italian scene. Nevertheless, it has not deterred us from issuing a joint statement to which I already referred, and which, so far as Britain was concerned, was of course approved by the War Cabinet before I gave my agreement to it...

Future of the World

« The future of the whole world, and the future of Europe, perhaps for several generations, depends upon the

« The Bulgarian armistice terms have not yet been signed. Soviet intervention in this theater was at once startling and effective. The sudden declaration of war by Russia was sufficient to induce Bulgaria to turn her caitiff arms against the German intruders. Great Britain and the United States have long been at war with Bulgaria, and they have now joined with the Soviets in framing suitable armistice conditions. The Bulgarian people have been plunged by their leaders in the past 35 years into three wrongful, forlorn, and disastrous wars, and in this present war we cannot forget any acts of cruelty and wickedness for which they have been responsible, both to Greece and to Yugoslavia. They have suffered nothing themselves in this war. No foot has been set upon their soil.

« Apart from some bombardments, they have suffered nothing. Some of the worst war criminals are Bulgarians. The conduct of their troops in harrying and trying to hold down at Hitler's orders their two sorely oppressed neighbors is a shameful page, for which full atonements must be exacted. They may want to be treated as a co-belligerant. So far as Great Britain is concerned, they must work their passage for a long time, and in no uncertain fashion, before we can accord them any special status in view of the injuries our Allies in Greece and Yugoslavia have sustained at their hands.

« Meanwhile, let them march and destroy all the Germans they can find. We do not want them as inland Allies.

Future of the World

« The future of the whole world, and the future of Europe, perhaps for several generations, depends upon the cordial, trustful and comprehending association of the British Empire, the United States, and Soviet Russia, and no pains must be spared and no patience grudged which are necessary to bring that supreme hope to fruition. I may say at once, however, that it will not, in my opinon, be possible for these great powers to do more in the first instance than to act as trustees for other states, great or small, during the period of transition.

« Whatever may be settled in the near future must be regarded as only the preliminary to the actual establishment, in its final form, of the future world organization. Those who try, in any country, to force the pace unduly will run the risk of overlooking many aspects of the highest importance, and also of improvements that can bring about a similar state.

« I have never been one of those who believe that all the problems of the immediate future can be solved while we are actually engaged in a life and death struggle with German and Nazi power, and when the course of military operations and the development of the war against Japan must increasingly claim first place in the minds of those in Britain and the United States, upon whom the chief responsibility rests. To shorten the war by one year, if that can be done, would in itself be a boon greater than many important acts of legislation. To shorten this war, to bring it to an end, to bring the soldiers back home, to get roofs over their heads, to get things back to a free life in our country, thus reestablishing and enabling the wheels of commerce to revolve, to get nations out of their terrible frenzy of hate, to build up something like a human and humane world — it is that which makes it so indispensable for us to shorten, be it only by a day, the course of this terrible war.

It is right to make surveys and preparations beforehand, and many have been made and are being made, but great decisions cannot be taken, even for a transition period, without far closer, calmer, and more searching discussions that cannot be held amid the clash of arms. Moreover, we cannot be blind to the fact that there are many factors, at present unknown, which will make themselves manifest on the morrow of the destruction of the Nazi Régime...»

ALLIES RECAPTURE ELST, DRIVE SIX MILES BEYOND

SHAEF, September 28 — The Allied corridor through the embattled Eindhoven-Nijmegen sector of Holland was more firmly held by British and American troops when, in a sudden two-pronged drive, they drove the Germans from Elst and advanced five to six miles beyond the town.

The British 2nd Army drive to the Meuse has blotted out the last German threat to the Allied corridor in Holland and has widened the salient to at least 18 miles — 12 miles wider than it was 24 hours ago. They now have a solid front on the west bank of the Meuse River from Cuijk to Vierlingsbeek, five miles south of Boxmeer.

The bridge over the lower Rhine in the Arnhem sector, from which British airborne troops withdrew, is unlikely to be of any use to the Germans, a press dispatch reported, as British 2nd Army forces have moved up to the south bank in strength. The Germans are prevented from sending troops or supplies across the bridge or across the five to 10-mile stretch of river west of the bridge. German ground forces are being increasingly supported by the Luftwaffe in their attempts to check the growing Allied threat to the northern flank of the Siegfried Line between Nijmegen and Arnhem.

An official spokesman stated that there is heavy fighting with the Germans putting up strong resistance along the Meuse River above Nijmegen and in the direction of the endangered Linge Canal between the two Netherlands river crossings. British forces advancing northeastward from Bemmel have gained two to three miles.

The German escape route is now barely 25 miles wide between the northwestern bulge of the Nijmegen corridor and the south end of the Zuider Zee.

Fierce fighting is going on along the banks of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal where the Germans are vigorously defending their positions. On the western flank, British troops have forced a new bridgehead over the dyke near Ryckevorsel. A press dispatch stated that the Germans appear to be withdrawing from this sector.

Enemy Counter-Attacks

On the American 1st Army sector, Allied troops are battling stubborn German defenders in pillboxes and concrete strongpoints of the Siegfried Line near Hurtgen, eight miles southeast of Stolberg and 14 miles southeast of besieged Aachen. In the Aachen area, American troops are making constant but small gains against stiff German resistance. The Germans are counter-attacking in battalion strength from the high ground that rims the battlefields to the east and south of Aachen, but they have gained no ground.

American 3rd Army troops were driven back to their original positions today after reaching a bridge leading into the moated Fort Driant on the west side of the Moselle River near Metz. The fort is one of the three main bastions guard-

GERMAN TRANSPORT CENTERS HIT FOR 4TH DAY

LONDON, September 28 — Heavy bombers kept up the offensive against German manufacturing and transportation centers during the day when over 1,000 American bombers escorted by over 500 Mustangs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings, attacked war factories in the Magdeburg, Kassel, and Merseburg areas. A railroad marshalling yard and a synthetic oil plant at Magdeburg, and the Henschel tank works at Kassel were among the targets attacked.

The American attack was the fourth successive daylight operation over the Reich following yesterday's RAF night operations against German transportation around Kaiserslautern, industrial city in the Saar Basin, and the attack on Kassel. Night intruder aircraft of the RAF Bomber Command attacked airfields well behind German lines. Two aircraft were missing from this operation.

In continuation of the non-stop pounding being dealt enemy depots and supply lines in advance of Allied troops, Allied medium bombers today hit the German supply center of Emmerich, east of Arnhem.

Yesterday morning, RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes, under cover of Mustangs and Spitfires, attacked the Bottrop Wilhelm synthetic oil plant, six miles north of Essen, and also attacked targets elsewhere in the Ruhr area.

Making almost 1,000 sorties, the 9th USAAF continued their assault yesterday against airfields, railways, highways, troop concentrations, and heavily defended forts in the Rhineland area. Bullets, high explosives, and rockets tore into the Siegfried Line defensive system along a 78-mile front.

RAF Mosquitoes last night strafed German railroads in the area from Venlo, east of Eindhoven to Hanover. Roads, vehicles, and barges in a section east and west of the Scheldt region in Holland were blasted along with targets in the area from Utrecht to Apeldorn.

Allied planes yesterday destroyed at least 137 German planes during their attacks in Germany and the Netherlands. Of the 137 German planes, 80 were destroyed in the air. Allied losses were 44 heavy bombers and 16 fighters.

It was announced in the House of Commons today that the total number of houses either damaged or destroyed by flying bombs was 1,029,995. Of this number, 27,511 houses are beyond repair; 52,277 were seriously damaged and not habitable; 77,030 houses were damaged but habitable; and 873,177 houses were slightly damaged. (OWI)

JET-PROPELLED PLANES BEAT FLYING BOMBS

WASHINGTON, September 28 — British jet-propelled fighter planes have gone into action with success against German rocket bombs, it was announced here today. Further development of the craft, still cloaked in secrecy, is underway.

It is better than the German version which has been engaged by Allied fighters on several occasions. Allied pilots reported that the Nazi fighter has poor maneuverability, but a high speed and rate of climb, and the statement warned that more extensive and effective use of the German type can be expected.

It was disclosed that American experiments with flying bombs have developed weapons with far greater possibilities than those the Germans have launched against Britain.

Emphasis has been placed on controlling the bombs in flight, in contrast to the German «buzzbomb» that must fly a fixed course.

Army airmen consider the flying-bomb less efficient than strategic bombing, but believe it can supplement the bombing plane as a tactical and strategic weapon. (OWI) out the last German threat to the Allied corridor in Holland and has widened the salient to at least 18 miles — 12 miles wider than it was 24 hours ago. They now have a solid front on the west bank of the Meuse River from Cuijk to Vierlingsbeck, five miles south of Boxmeer.

The bridge over the lower Rhine in the Arnhem sector, from which British airborne troops withdrew, is unlikely to be of any use to the Germans, a press dispatch reported, as British 2nd Army forces have moved up to the south bank in strength. The Germans are prevented from sending troops or supplies across the bridge or across the five to 10-mile stretch of river west of the bridge. German ground forces are being increasingly supported by the Luftwaffe in their attempts to check the growing Allied threat to the northern flank of the Siegfried Line between Nijmegen and Arnhem.

An official spokesman stated that there is heavy fighting with the Germans putting up strong resistance along the Meuse River above Nijmegen and in the direction of the endangered Linge Canal between the two Netherlands river crossings. British forces advancing northeastward from Bemmel have gained two to three miles.

The German escape route is now barely 25 miles wide between the northwestern bulge of the Nijmegen corridor and the south end of the Zuider Zee.

Fierce fighting is going on along the banks of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal where the Germans are vigorously defending their positions. On the western flank, British troops have forced a new bridgehead over the dyke near Ryckevorsel. A press dispatch stated that the Germans appear to be withdrawing from this sector.

Enemy Counter-Attacks

On the American 1st Army sector, Allied troops are battling stubborn German defenders in pillboxes and concrete strongpoints of the Siegfried Line near Hurtgen, eight miles southeast of Stolberg and 14 miles southeast of besieged Aachen. In the Aachen area, American troops are making constant but small gains against stiff German resistance. The Germans are counter-attacking in battalion strength from the high ground that rims the battlefields to the east and south of Aachen, but they have gained no ground.

American 3rd Army troops were driven back to their original positions today after reaching a bridge leading into the moated Fort Driant on the west side of the Moselle River near Metz. The fort is one of the three main bastions guarding the city.

American fighter-bombers opened attacks today on the ring of Metz forts west of the Moselle in direct support of ground forces. They blasted seven groups of fortifications with 12 tons of high explosives and incendiaries.

South of Metz, nine of 30 German tanks were destroyed in a German counter-attack in the Dieuze area.

A press dispatch stated that bad weather was beginning to have its effect on the Allied drive into Germany and has given the Germans an opportunity to mass their best troops for a defense of the 11 major bridges across the Rhine.

On the Channel coast, Canadian troops are within 3,000 feet of the harbor at Calais. The citadel has been captured and the fall of the town is imminent. The Germans, however, still control the town and port area. In support of ground troops, Lancasters of the RAF Bomber Command attacked fortified Germans positions this morning. Over 2,000 German prisoners have been taken, as well as six 14-inch cross-Channel guns.

Supreme Headquarters announced today that Major General R. E. Urquhart commanded the 1st British Airborne Division in the Arnhem sector. He had been taken prisoner by the Germans, but subsequently escaped and is now safe. It was also announced that the American 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions participated in the Eindhoven-Nijmegen operations. (OWI - Reuter)

EISENHOWER'S PROCLAMATION TO GERMANS

LONDON, September 28 — The text of General Dwight Eisenhower's first proclamation to the German people, made public here tonight, follows:

"MILITARY GOVERNMENT — GERMANY. SUPREME COMMANDER'S AREA OF CONTROL. I, General D. Eisenhower, Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Force, do hereby proclaim as follows:

"Forces serving under my command have now entered Germany. We come as conquerors, but not as oppressors. In areas of Germany occupied by forces under my command we shall obliterate Nazism and German militarism. We shall overthrow Nazi rule, dissolve the Nazi Party, and abolish cruel, oppressive, and discriminatory laws and institutions which the Party has created.

"We shall eradicate that German militarism which has so often disrupted the peace of the world. Military and Party leaders, the Gestapo, and others suspected of crimes and atrocities will be tried, and, if guilty, will be punished as they deserve.

"Secondly, supreme legislative, judicial, and executive authority and powers within occupied territory are vested in me as Supreme Commander of Allied Forces, and as military government is established, it is to exercise these powers under my direction. All persons in occupied territory will obey immediately and without question, all enactments and orders of the Military Government. Military Government courts will be established for punishment of offenders.

«Resistance to Allied forces will be ruthlessly stamped out. Other serious offenses will be dealt with severely.

«Thirdly, all German courts and educational institutions within occupied territory are suspended. Volkesgerichtshof [People's Court], Sondergerichte [Special courts], SS Police Courts, and special courts are deprived of authority throughout occupied territory.

«Reöpening of criminal and civil courts and educational institutions will be authorized when conditions permit.

«All officials are charged with the duty of remaining at their posts until further orders, and with obeying and enforcing all orders or directions of the Military Government or Allied authorities, addressed to the German Government or German people.

«This applies also, to officials, employees, and workers of all public undertakings and utilities, and to all other persons engaged in essential work.» (Reuter)

CANADIANS AND PATRIOTS LIBERATE BELLARIA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 28 — Italian Patriots and Canadians of the 8th Army yesterday liberated the town of Bellaria, seven miles north of Rimini, as British and Dominion troops expanded their bridgehead across the Rubicon to more than 20 square miles, it was announced here this morning.

Canadian Corps troops, pushing north along the Adriatic coastal road to within less than 22 miles of Ravenna, found Italian Patriots in control of Bellaria and were able to press on across the mouth of the Rubicon, while further inland British and Dominion troops extended to a 10-mile front their hold on the hilly ground northwest of the stream.

In the center of the Italian front, where American troops of the 5th Army have been meeting exceptionally heavy enemy resistance, the heights of Monte Sasso di San Zanobi, 21 miles south of Bologna, were re-captured yesterday after nearly two days of bitter fighting. The hill mass, a spur of lofty Monte la Fine, where American forces are strongly entrenched, was taken by enemy forces in a strong counter-attack on the night of September 25/26, when German forces fought savagely to regain positions on which they might continue their stand south of the Po Plain. Farther east, American forces captured the road-junction town of Castel del Rio, on the Santerna River and 15 miles southwest of Imola, and the Rimini-Bologna Highway.

Castiglione Liberated

At some points, the official announcement said, American and British troops of the 5th Army advanced as much as two miles to capture important features. South African troops, fighting with the 5th Army, were reported to have captured the village of Castiglione, 26 miles from Bologna, and representing an advance of three miles from their former positions at La Storia, on this same road. Despite enemy counter-attacks in this sector, American and South African forces now hold a 10-mile front, a due east-and-west line across the intervening mountains between Castiglione and the main Florence-Bologna Highway, at Monte Beni.

Farther east, British forces captured the town of Bocconi and pressed northward along the Forli road against heavy enemy resistance. These British forces are now less than 20 miles from this Po Valley town, across the Apennines, while other British troops, pushing west from Rimini, are the same distance away across the edges of the Po Plain. Other British troops, now within 13 miles of Faenza, met heavy enemy resistance and counter-attacks in the area of Marradi, eight miles northwest of Bocconi.

Eighth Army forces reported only slight gains yesterday in their thrust northwest from Rimini along the Emilia Highway. Canadian troops were fighting within 1,000 yards of Coastal Air Force planes, in sweeps over the Gulf of Genoa, scored cannon hits on a 1,000-ton vessel, and struck a schooner and barges.

Bad weather held heavy and medium bombers on the ground yesterday, and also restricted close-support operations with ground forces in Italy. (PRO)

GREEK GENERALS CONFER WITH GOVERNMENT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 28 — Two Greek guerrilla generals have met with members of the Greek Government and with General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson in a conference held at Allied Force Headquarters, and have declared their full acceptance of the orders of the Greek Government and of the Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, to effect «The speediest possible liberation of Greece,» it was announced here today.

The two Greek Patriot leaders, General Zervas, Chief of the EDES, a leftist faction among Greek Partisans, and General Sarafis, met General Scobie, General Officer Commanding for Greece, and the Greek Government, in a recent conference. The conferance was presided over by General Wilson.

The official announcement today said that «Decisions were taken with complete unanimity for the coördination of the efforts to free Greece, and to maintain complete order.» (PRO)

GREAT VICTORY ON SAN MARINO-RIMINI LINE

WITH 8TH ARMY, ITALY, September 28 — A great victory was scored by the 8th Army in smashing the most resolute German resistance on the San Marino-Rimini line which guards the approaches to the plains of Lombardy, a United Nations News correspondent reported.

This battle was the grimmest in which the 8th Army has been engaged in Italy, a military observer stated. For more than three weeks after the Allies had broken through the Goth Line at Pésaro, the Germans fought with desperate determination. They threw in men and material with almost reckless ferocity and they paid dearly for their opposition. The countryside is littered with smashed equipment and the roadside graves are quiet evidence of the German sacrifice.

Eighth Army forces were called on to unleash a maximum of fighting power and to concentrate a weight of armor into dislodging the Germans from their defensive line. An example of the effort involved is that a greater weight of bombs was dropped on the San Fortunato feature near Rimini in aerial attacks than ever was dropped before on any area, with the exception of the tonnage dropped on Caen, in western France. YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE THREE MORE TOWNS

LONDON, September 28 — Today's communique from Marshal Tito's National Army of Liberation Headquarters quoted by the New Yugoslav Telegraph Agency said that the Partisan forces, developing their successful offensive in Slavonia, have captured three towns, including Slatina, eight miles from the Hungarian border, and reached the banks of the strategic Drava River, which forms the boundary between Hungary and Yugoslavia.

In eastern Serbia, the town of Kuceva, at the foot of the Homoljske Mountains, and 12 miles from the Rumanian border, has been freed.

In Dalmatia, the Patriot troops have captured the German strongpoint of Petrovo Polje, north of the port of Split.

The broadcast communique said units were «developing a successful offensive» in northern Yugoslavia across a possible escape line of German forces trapped in the Balkans.

On the Ligurian coastal sector, 5th Army forces reported the capture of the villages of Vallecchia and Quercetа, some nine miles north of Viareggio. (PRO)

2,500-TON VESSEL STRUCK IN ADRIATIC

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 28 — Mustang fighter-bombers, operating despite unfavorable weather yesterday destroyed a 2,500-ton enemy merchant vessel in Parenzo Harbor, on the east coast of the Istrian Peninsula, it was announced here today.

The long-range fighters attacked the ship after a «train-busting» foray over enemy supply routes connecting Padua, Treviso, and Udine, in northeastern Italy, in which 19 enemy locomotives were claimed as destroyed. Two direct bomb hits were scored on the vessel, whose boilers exploded, sending columns of smoke and débris nearly a 1,000 feet into the air.

Continuing their drive toward the Rumanian border, the Partisans have routed a German column near Rudnik, near the Serbian Montenegrin border.

In western Serbia, Tito forces killed 150 Germans and took 80 prisoners, including the aide-de-camp to a general captured a few days ago.

A communique issued last night by Marshal Tito's Headquarters said that Yugoslav Partisans, in a series of clashes, have killed more than 1,000 Germans, and taken 275 prisoners.

At Gracania, whose capture was announced yesterday, the Patriots killed 80 Germans, and took 130 prisoners.

Other Partisan units derailed three trains on the Zagreb-Karlovac rail line in northwestern Yugoslavia, and destroyed two trains on the Brod-Sarajevo line extending south through the central part of the country.

The Partisans wiped out other groups of Germans in battles in the region below Belgrade on the Leskovac-Nis road in southeastern Serbia, and near Jesnica in western Serbia, and destroyed or captured a large number of enemy trucks and other equipment.

In western Herzegovina, near the coast, Yugoslav fighters reported killing five German officers, including a general, as they destroyed an enemy car on the Imotski-Duvno road. (OWI)

YUGOSLAV GENERAL JOINS TITO

LONDON, September 28 — Divisional General Lazar Milosavljevic, a well-known Yugoslav officer and professor at the Belgrade military academy, has reached liberated Yugoslav territory and put himself at the disposal of Marshal Tito's headquarters, it was announced last night by the Yugoslav Telegraph Agency. (PWB)

TROOP-LADEN JU-52'S SHOT DOWN

CAIRO, September 28 — Beaufighters of the Middle East command shot down two troop-laden JU 52's last night in a sweep over the eastern Mediterranean.

The huge German transport craft were said to have picked up their passengers from islands in the Aegean, from which the Germans are trying desperately to evacuate trapped personnel.

Beaufighters also attacked a German-held Aegean harbor, scoring hits with rocket projectiles on two enemy vessels. (PWB)

RUSSIANS WITHIN SIGHT OF RIGA

MOSCOW, September 28 — Two Russian army groups were advancing on the Latvian capital city of Riga tonight, with their advanced observation posts well within sight of the ruined streets.

Front-line Russian dispatches said today that German blockhouses in the streets can be seen clearly through field glasses, and that endless waves of Red Air Force bombers are keeping the port and sea approaches under control.

A coördinated attack to smash this last important Nazi escape harbor on the upper reaches of the Baltic front was underway tonight, shortly after units of Marshal Govorov's Leningrad Front, coming down the coast from Estonia, had joined up with units of General Maslennikov's 3rd Baltic Front.

Troops who made the junction were said to be advancing on Riga at the rate of 15 miles a day, pushing southward along the shores of the Gulf of Riga. In the face of this advance, the Germans were said to be fighting «to the last breath».

The Soviet communique said the only other major engagements taking place on the long Russo-German front were in the area south and southeast of Sanok, in southern Poland. There, Red Army forces have taken another 30 small villages as they battle over the Carpathians toward the Czecho-Slovak frontier.

Tito Opens Frontier

The Soviet Government disclosed tonight that Marshal Tito had granted permission for the entry of Red Army troops into Yugoslavia — for the duration of operations against the Hungarian frontier.

The agreement provides that Russian troops will evacuate Yugoslav territory just as soon as tactical developments permit, and that Tito's civil administration of Russian-occupied areas shall continue undisturbed.

Simultaneously, the German news agency, DNB, said that Russian troops have crossed from Rumania into Yugoslavia in the general area above the Iron Gate. The same source said last night that Russian forces had pierced the Hungarian frontier for a depth of five to seven miles. (Reuter)

HELSINKI, September 28 — Finnish troops were reported pressing a three-pronged drive in north-central

«In both sectors our units are waging heavy defensive fights and are inflicting heavy losses on the enemy,» said the communique.

«There is quiet in the southern sector. In the east, near Vernar, there is intensive reconnaissance activity and very strong air activity on both sides.» (OWI)

RUMANIA DISSOLVES GERMAN MINORITY PARTY

BUCHAREST, September 28 — The Nazi organization of the German minority in Rumania has been dissolved by decree of the Rumanian Ministry of Justice, said the Bucharest paper Universal yesterday. Persons of German extraction who have been serving in the German Army will lose their rights as Rumanian citizens and are subject to the requisitioning of property.

Coöperation with the United Nations and the development of democratic institutions in Rumania were pledged by King Michael in an interview with foreign press correspondents in Bucharest, Radio Moscow said today.

King Michael said: «The struggle being waged by the Rumanian Army, shoulder-to-shoulder with the Red Army against our common enemy, is the beginning of a good neighbor policy and mutual confidence between Rumania and the Soviet Union, and of our close coöperation with other United Nations.»

Of the Rumanian domestic policy, he said: «The present Government is supported by four political parties. Such an alliance will form the guarantee of a normal development of democratic institutions in the country.» (PWB)

BULGARIAN PATROLS ACTIVE

LONDON, September 28 — Bulgarian activity against the Germans yesterday consisted mostly of patrol actions, a Bulgarian communique, broadcast from Sofia, announced today.

U. S. CARRIERS STRIKE 65 JAP SHIPS

PEARL HARBOR, September 28 — Carrier-based aircraft of the United States Pacific Fleet sank or severely damaged another 65 Japanese vessels, including a destroyer and three destroyer escorts, in a wide sweep over Philippine waters five days ago.

A communique compiled from reports of returning forces said that 36 Japanese aircraft were shot down in the course of operations, and that, in addition, about 30 small water craft were sunk or damaged.

Peleliu Falling to Americans

Meanwhile, the last of the Japanese were besieged and under annihilating fire on Peleliu Island in the Palaus tonight.

A United States Naval communique issued here said that the island, which lies 525 miles east of the Philippine Island of Mindanao, fell into American control today.

Japanese dead thus far were counted at 7,517. On the island of Angaur, six miles to the south, Japanese dead were put at 1,020, as the last of the enemy there was being mopped up.

FINNISH TROOPS DRIVE AHEAD

HELSINKI, September 28 — Finnish troops were reported pressing a three-pronged drive in north-central Finland today, in an effort to smash retreating German forces leaving a trail of burned villages behind them, the Associated Press reported.

One column, based on the Bothnian Gulf at the Port of Oulu, was heading along the coast in the direction of Kemi and Tornio, and was reported to have reached the Ijoki River where the Germans blew up a railroad bridge.

More Finnish troops are being moved to the north to trap the 100,000 Germans in Finnish Lapland, a correspondent of the National Broadcasting Company reported yesterday. He added that the Germans are continuing to retreat and are wrecking bridges, buildings, and laying mines as they go.

A second column plunged from Puolanka — in the heart of Finland — northwest toward Pudasjarvi, an important road junction, while the third column advanced from Poulanka northeast toward Taivalkoski, and almost directly east of Pudasjarvi. (OWI)

Batavia Strafed

Allied striking power has hit deep into the Japanese-held Netherlands Indies. General Douglas MacArthur reported a strafing attack on the Netherlands Indies capital of Batavia yesterday. The British Admiralty said its submarines on patrol in waters surrounding Java and Sumatra have sunk 32 Japanese vessels.

In the same area, MacArthur's bombers have sunk two 1,000 ton freighters and another of 3,000 tons. They were bombed off the Celebes.

Other aircraft of American task forces in the Pacific continued the hammering bombardment of Japanese positions on the Kuriles, the Volcanos, the Marianas, the Carolines, the Marshalls, and on the islands of Wake, Wotje, and Mille, scoring direct hits on airfields and harbor installations.

Japs Licked

Lieut. Gen. Walter Kreuger, commander of the American 6th Army, speaking of the Jap position in the Pacific, declared today that «the Japs are licked. »

General Kreuger, who leads an army which is expected to play an important rôle in liberation of the Philippines, said that « any sensible nation » in the position of the Japanese would surrender.

He added that defeat, though certain, cannot be timed; that there are too many unpredictable factors in the Asiatic war for any estimate of how long the fight may continue.

Kweilin Unrelieved

The Chinese High Command said today that a third Japanese column has struck out of Kwantung Province toward the Kwangsi Province capital of Kweilin, and that encirclement of the capital's defensive positions at Paoching was almost complete.

To the south, Allied aircraft of the Southeast Asia Command bombed the highway at Wanling, on the Burmese-Chinese border. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

ONLY A SHELL OF RIMINI REMAINS

RIMINI, September 28 — A mere shell of this city, recently liberated by the Allied Armies in Italy, remains. Most of the buildings have been severely battered by shell fire from land, sea, and air. The port area of the city has been left horribly scarred and almost totally razed.

A United Nations News special correspondent who visited this city soon after its liberation reported that few buildings had escaped destruction. One of the most notable buildings, however, which emerged unscathed, was the grand opera house. It still stands in the square, towering high above the masses of rubble strewn about the city.

Hardly a building boasts an unbroken pane of glass, and destruction and debris catch the eye anywhere one may travel through the streets of this Adriatic port city.

From the condition of the city, it was obvious that the population had been evacuated long before the actual battle invested this area. The Germans who were housed in the city after the citizens departed made little effort to clean up the town. Weeds and blades of grass can be seen growing in cobblestone streets and along the piles of smashed bricks and masonry.

Allied authorities wasted no time in getting to work on the rehabilitation of the port facilities, and it was estimated that in a short time, Allied supplies could be received across its docks. (UNN)

NAZI MINES KILLING MANY CIVILIANS

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 28 — Areas far distant from probable military objectives were heavily mined by German troops retreating through the seaside villages north of Rimini.

A UNN correspondent reported today that many civilians have been killed by these mines, and that large areas over which normal activities must take them are heavily planted with high explosives.

Except for this indiscriminate mining, described as like «seed spread on the wind,» the coastal area immediately north of Rimini was only slightly damaged. The enemy's retreat before Allied attacks had given him too little time for systematic demolition. (UNN)

BLACK MARKET RING SMASHED

PALERMO, September 28 — A large-scale campaign has been initiated by the combined forces of the Italian municipal police, carabinieri, and soldiers of the Italian Army against black marketeers using Italian railways for transporting grain destined for sale on the black market.

Yesterday, 50 public security officers, 50 carabinieri, and 50 soldiers were despatched with orders to carry out the search of a train running on the Catania-Palermo line. The train was surrounded by the police and the soldiers, who succeeded in capturing the culprits attempting to escape.

Twelve person were arrested on charges of illegal possession of arms and for illicit dealings on the black market. One hundred quintals of grain were confiscated. (UNN)

The newspaper Il Popolo stated that the Allied statement opened new horizons toward the economic and political redemption of Italy, and is most encouraging to those engaged in the work of reconstruction.

L'Italia Libera, refering to the declaration, stated that the stages through which Italy is passing toward a new way of life are slow and painful, but are the results of the efforts of the Italian Government. Those who seek to undermine this work have only to consider the results attained and the goal of the Italian people so well defined in the Hyde Park Statement.

The Risorgimento Liberale remarked that the prouncement must be viewed as the suspicious omen of a new epoch.

L'Avanti said that the joint statement of Roosevelt and Churchill on Italy has clarified the political horizon and allows for the consideration of the problems of Italian reconstruction with greater confidence.

The Risorgimento of Naples, in connection with the statement made by the two Allied leaders, noted that the assistance of Great Britain and the United States assumes great importance before the work of reconstruction yet to be accomplished. This help will allow Italy to participate in an ever-increasing measure in the war effort of the United Nations which will strengthen still further the bonds of friendship and solidarity.

La Voce, Naples daily, stated that the heroism of the Italian Liberation Corps and of Italian Patriots, and the decisive weight of the Italian Fleet in the war against the Germans, have demonstrated what the true feeling of the Italian people are. (UNN)

HULL WARNS NEUTRALS ABOUT WAR CRIMINALS

WASHINGTON, September 28 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced today that neutral nations had been warned that they would lose American friendship «for years to come» should they give sanctuary to Hitler or other Axis leaders after the war.

Mr. Hull stated that the governments of Sweden, Turkey, Switzerland, Spain, and other neutral nations have either given assurances that they will not permit Axis nationals to flee within their borders, or that they are fully aware of the problems that such action might provoke. No indication has yet been received of the views of certain other governments, Mr. Hull stated.

«The State Department is continuing to impress upon those governments whose policy has not yet been clearly stated, the importance it attaches to the taking of adequate measures to insure that Axis war criminals do not find asylum in their countries,» he continued.

The United States has the support and approval of the British and Soviet governments in bringing pressure on these other governments.

A few hours before Mr. Hull's statement, the Soviet Embassy sponsored publication of a statement that Russia's participation in the settlement of this war would provide «the best guarantee» that Hitler would not escape punishment after this war, as Kaiser Wilhelm did after the last. (OWI)

WASHINGTON, September 28 — The State Department revealed today that eight Allied nations have signed a new maritime agreement for the pooling of their ships until after the end of the global war.

The State Department said the new agreement, signed in London last month, replaces the present arrangements providing for a shipping pool until the end of hostilities in Europe.

BRITISH COMMONWEALTH LABOR MANIFESTO

LONDON, September 28 — The Labor parties of the British Commonwealth of Nations held their final session here yesterday.

A manifesto issued at this final conference stated that only an international order built for collective security and economic expansion can be the final guarantee against future wars.

«Peace without prosperity for the great mass of wage and salary workers would be both a shame and a danger,» stated the manifesto.

«The principal wartime financial controls should be maintained until more permanent and satisfactory arrangements can be made. Banks and other financial institutions should be made the servants of the community.

«Funds available for investment should be brought under national and international control and direction, with the view of ensuring full employment, higher production, and raising the standards of living everywhere.

« Wartime arrangements for the bulk purchase through state agencies of foodstuffs and raw materials should continue. »

The conference decided that the defeat of Japan must be pursued with the same vigor and persistance as the attack against Germany.

« After the defeat of Germany and Japan, all the necessary steps must be taken to put it beyond their power to revive their attempt to dominate other peoples by aggressive means.

« War criminals should be visited with swift justice, and social and political institutions which permitted the emergence of Nazism and Fascism must be destroyed.

« As these are destroyed, every effort must be made to rebuild the Labor Trade Union and Coöperative movements in defeated countries.

« All peace-loving nations, both great and small, should have a full democratic voice in the new world organization.

« There should be as rapid a development as possible in the direction of an international police force, international control of all armaments, and the automatic imposition of economic and, where necessary, military sanctions against any country declared guilty of aggression.

« A world organization will build a permanent court of international law and create a strong and efficient international civil service to be provided with an ample budget.

« The conference recognises the need for regional organizations which shall perform functions appropriate to the interests of nations whose relationship is specially close by reason of their geographical situation or other causes.

« The major responsibility of this conference is to ensure that all governments pursue an international policy which will encourage the victory everywhere of democratic and socialist forces. » (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 23 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the central sector, American and British troops have continued to exert unrelenting pressure against strong enemy resistance, and at some points during the last 24 hours have advanced as much as two miles to capture important features.

On the Adriatic coast, British and Dominion troops now have crossed the Rubicon on a front of over 10 miles, and have extended their bridgehead to a depth of more than two miles. Dominion troops captured the town of Bellaria, and other 8th Army troops are closing in on the town of Savignano.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Although weather restricted operations yesterday, fighter-bombers attacked road and rail transport over a wide area in Holland and western Germany. In northern Belgium, our ground forces have further extended the bridgehead over the canal west of Turnhout.

Active patrolling on both sides continues from north of Aachen to the Lunéville area. Our troops are meeting still opposition from German pillboxes and strongpoints near Hurtegen, southeast of Stolberg.

West of Metz, an enemy counter-attack was contained in the vicinity of Gravelotte. Other counter-attacks were dispersed near Coincourt and Bezance, northeast of Lunéville, with heavy losses to the enemy.

In the Calais area, our troops closing in on the town across the flooded ground to the west were given close support by fighter-bombers. A concentrated attack on fortified positions in the town was made by heavy bombers, one of which is missing.

Air:

Over 1,100 heavy bombers, with strong fighter escort, attacked industrial targets at Cologne, a synthetic oil plant at Ludwigshafen, a tank factory at Kassel, an ordinance factory at Mainz, and railway yards at Ludwigshafen, Mainz, and Cologne.

Strong fighter opposition and intense flak were encountered. Thirty-six aircraft were destroyed in combat, and five more on the ground. Forty-two bombers and seven fighters are missing. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 23 — Tonight's communique:

During today, northwest and west of Parnu (Pernov) our troops cleared off disorganized enemy groups on the western coast of Estonia, and also occupied over 200 populated localities, including Pavasi, Likula, Mazkula, Virisuv, Goritse, Sheakulye, Kuli, Virmsare, Tarvi, and

E[illegible] weather held up the operations of Allied light coastal forces in the Gulf of Genoa until the night of 26/27 September, when an Anglo-American force of three boats sighted and attacked a north-bound enemy convoy 25 miles to the southeast of Genoa.

The convoy consisted of two medium-sized ships escorted by a corvette. One of the ships was hit by torpedoes and blew up with a very heavy explosion, which indicated that she was carrying a cargo of petrol. Although no explosion was seen, it is probable that the second ship was also hit by torpedoes. Our craft withdrew under heavy fire from the corvette.

When another group of our boats appeared on the scene, they found only the corvette sheltering under cover of the coastal batteries. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 28 — Today's communique:

Land:

The withdrawal of our forces north of Neder Rijn has been completed.

Fighting continued throughout yesterday in the area north of Nijmegen, where Allied troops made some progress.

On the west of the salient, an advance was made south of Oss, and the villages of Heesch and Nistelrode were freed.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked strong points and gun positions in the Arnhem-Nijmegen area, and strafed road and rail transport behind the enemy lines in Holland. There were many combats, and according to reports so far received, 41 enemy aircraft were destroyed. Ten of ours are missing.

To the east of the Allied salient, an attack was made by medium bombers on communications at Goch, near the German frontier.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 28 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique: Venetian Patriots liberated Vedronza, in the province of Udine, on September 23. Captured war material included two mortars, two anti-tank guns, two heavy machine guns, rifles, and ammunition. The Germans suffered losses in dead and wounded. A part of the garrison now is being pursued by Garibaldi Brigade forces. Prompt intervention of the Patriots prevented the destruction of the power plant.

Piedmont continues to be the Region where the struggle against the Nazi-Fascists is most active and intense. Near Alba, Patriots of Cuneo Province captured a transport column which was carrying aircraft material.

Clashes also took place in the southern Biellese area, where Patriot positions have been consolidated. In this district, the spirit of revolt is also spreading among Fascist troops, many of whom are deserting. On August 25, the Germans confined Fascist troops to their barracks and compelled them to choose between deportation to Germany or collaboration in German atrocities against civilians.

In Piedmont, Liguria, and Lombardy, Garibaldi Brigades are operating according to a unified plan. During the second half of the month of August, Ligurian Patriots were in control of the Montebruno zone of the Trebbia Valley, in the province of Genova. The road between Rezzoaglio, in Genoa Province, and Marseilles was also in Patriot control. Other Garibaldi Brigade forces, advancing from Montoggio in the direction of Montebruno, liberated Torriglia, also in the province of Genoa. For six days, Patriots were in control of the Genoa-Chiavari Road, the only route to Genoa from the south which remained open.

According to latest information, the battle mentioned yesterday, in which 60 Germans were surrounded and annihilated, took place at Boccassuolo.

Sabotage activities are spreading. In Bresica Province, a tunnel on the Iseo-Edolo Line was dynamited; in the Province of Sondrio, a railway line was interrupted by the destruction of electric power installations near Morbegno.

Between September 1 and 10, two bridges were destroyed near Savoniero, in the Province of Modena. Two others were put out of use near Suzans and La Valle, respectively, in the provinces of Udine and Belluno.

Latest information disclosed that Bellaria and Sant Agata, in the Adriatic sector, had been liberated prior to the entry of Allied troops in those localities. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 28 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the fighting area of West Holland, a stronger enemy attack launched across the Turnhout Canal of Antwerpen, was stopped by counter-attack. An enemy bridgehead north of Turnhout was smashed.

All enemy attempts to widen the Eindhoven-Nijmegen penetration area were frustrated. Northeast and southeast of Nijmegen, stronger enemy attacks were also repelled under support by our own fighter formations. The enemy, who had penetrated here, was thrown back by counter-attack.

Increasing artillery activity on both sides is reported from the Aix-la-Chapelle, Eifel, and Metz sector of the front.

Strong enemy attacks, supported by tanks, which were launched from the Nancy area in a northward direction, were repelled. Our own armored units' attack, however, in the area near and south of Château Salins, is being continued with further good progress.

On September 27, during heavy battles in the region of Epinal-Remiremont, several strong enemy attacks launched with previous artillery preparation and strong tank support, were also smashed. Territory which had been lost previously was retaken by counter-attacks. Fighting is still in progress here.

advancing from Orsova toward the south were repulsed, and enemy units which had crossed the Danube were smashed.

On the Hungaro-Rumanian border, our troops repelled the advancing enemy on several points between Szegedin and Gross-Wardein.

In Transylvania, between Torenburg and the East Carpathians, German and Hungarian troops repelled during the period from September 15 to September 26 the onslaught of over 30 infantry divisions and several Russian and Rumanian motorized corps, in the course of bitter fighting. The intended break-through was frustrated.

The enemy suffered heaviest losses in men and material. Since September 1, the enemy lost 134 tanks and storm guns, 112 guns, 51 flame throwers, and over 500 machine-guns. In addition, more than 1,000 prisoners were taken.

Along the northern slopes of the Forest Carpathians, numerous Bolshevist attacks were repelled or held in bitter fighting.

In Warsaw, a further town sector yesterday capitulated under the impact of our arms. Remnants of the rebel movement were encircled in the old Mokotov Fortress. Several thousand prisoners were taken and, in addition, over 5,000 Polish civilians evacuated. Thus, a success has been achieved entitling to the hope that the entire rebellion will be completely smashed within a short time.

At Budauen, several local attacks of the Bolshevists did not succeed.

Between the River Duena and the Riga Bight, numerous enemy attacks were frustrated by the resistance of our stubbornly fighting troops.

Twenty-four Soviet planes were shot down in aerial combat by anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe, on the Arctic Sea Front.

Air:

Enemy bomber formations launched terror attacks against the cities of Kassel, Cologne, Mannheim-Ludwigshafen, and Mainz, as well as against several localities in the Rhenish-Westphalian area.

Seventy-two enemy planes, including 65 four-engined bombers, were brought down, in bitter aerial combat, by German fighter planes. Three planes were downed by anti-aircraft artillery. Further, 18 American bombers were brought down over the Holland battle area.

Last night, the enemy dropped numerous explosives on Kaiserslautern. (Radio Berlin)

Despite the fact that military law did not grant such treatment to the rebels, the German Command has complied with their request to this effect. It was taken into consideration that the rebels had first been incited by London and Moscow, and had then been abandoned by them.»

German Denial of Allied Landings: Berlin: «Apropos of Allied reports claiming that wholesale landings had been made on the Dalmatian coast, Berlin military quarters declare that no large-scale Allied landings were made on the Dalmatian coast except for one of the usual Allied Commando raids upon some islands off the Dalmatian coast, which, moreover, were not occupied by German troops.»

American «Intention» on Western Front: «In the entire area of Flanders and the lower Rhine, the American intention is obvious: to advance from the base of Eindhoven and Nijmegen in a northwestern direction, in order to separate the German forces stationed in the district of the Rhine Estuary from the deployment area of the Rhenish-Westphalian industrial district, and thereby to eliminate the northern German flank, after their parachutist operations for this purpose had failed.»

FASCIST RADIO

Violent Fighting in Italy: A violent battle rages from the Apennines to the Adriatic coast. Kesselring's soldiers are holding out tenaciously and preventing the enemy from achieving any success. Fluctuating fighting took place around Montebani, while around Sant'Arcangelo the enemy made some infiltrations. There was no material change in any of the other sectors of the front.

Allies Refuse to Feed Italy: Allied news agencies have to admit that the misery in Allied-occupied Italy is far greater than it was under the rule of the Social Republic. While the Fascist Régime brought up supplies, in spite of bombed roads, interrupted railroads, and scarcity of transport, the Allies refuse to fulfil their promises and grant the required assistance.

METZ CIRCLED: GERMANS REPORTED WITHDRAWING TO SIEGFRIED LINE

LONDON, November 18 — The Allied encirclement of the German-held fortress city of Metz was completed today after the last highway leading northeast from the city was cut, press dispatches reported tonight. A four-pronged drive launched against the fortress overran about a third of the city late this afternoon.

Troops of the U. S. 5th Infantry Division by-passed a German bastion in the southeastern part of the city with light losses and joined with advance elements of the U. S.

The American 3rd Army flank, swinging southward from Thionville gained eight miles today and troops are now astride the secondary Metz-Saarlautern road at Burtoncourt and Vry.

American 9th Army and British 2nd Army troops, after gaining high ground on either side of the city, today captured the large German frontier town of Geilenkirchen, 12 miles north of Aachen. Allied guns pounded the city while American infantry and British tanks fought their way in.

Six miles southeast of Geilenkirchen, American 9th Army forces advanced through countless pillboxes, gun emplacements and anti-tank ditches and captured the town of Siersdorf. The Germans threw in major forces, including armored units, in an effort to halt the American advance.

On the southern flank of the American 9th Army front, Allied forces gained two to three miles against stiff opposition. Wurselen, Weiden and Broich were among the towns taken in the drive toward the Roer River.

Artillery of the U. S. 1st Army laid down a ceaseless barrage against Eschweiler and Allied forces surged forward four miles in one of the greatest gains since the attack opened four days ago. Fighting is in progress on the outskirts of the large German road center and troops are astride the Adolf Hitler Highway leading toward Cologne. The highway is a six-lane military route which will be valuable to the Allied advance into the Rhineland.

French in Alsace

In the northern edges of the Hürtgen forest east of Aachen, American troops have made good progress on each side of the German held-town of Stolberg. At Stolberg itself, heavy fighting was in progress and late reports said troops have entered the city.

The American drive to the north and east of Stolberg directly threatens the important rail center of Düren, on the main road to Cologne. Allied forces are less than eight miles away.

Far to the south, French 1st Army forces drove within four miles of the heavily defended town of Belfort, key to the mountain gap leading to the open plains of Germany and the Rhine. In a wide out-flanking movement, French troops and tanks reached a town 10 miles to the southeast of Belfort in Alsace. Strong German resistance is being met.

On the northern flank of the French 1st Army, a new offensive carried U. S. 7th Army troops into the road center of Blamont, 40 miles from Strassbourg on the Rhine. Press dispatches reported that the offensive was maintained all along the Vosges Mountains sector.

Troops of the U. S. 5th Infantry Division by-passed a German bastion in the southeastern part of the city with light losses and joined with advance elements of the U. S. 95th Division coming in from the northeast.

The trapped German garrison, estimated at between 2,000 and 3,000 home guard soldiers, was fighting desperately in the northern and southern sections of the city. Five German-held forts still are holding out.

With the American 3rd Army thrust into the Saar Basin and its sweep southeastward from Thionville, the German army is reported to be in a general withdrawal to the Siegfried Line.

The German retreat was first observed yesterday when American planes attacked German columns streaming toward Saarlautern, Saarbrücken and Saargemund. Concentrations of fleeing Germans were seen in the St. Avold area, 14 miles southeast of Saarbrücken.

The American thrust into southwestern Germany at the Luxembourg border, spearheaded by the U. S. 10th Armored Division pushed two miles beyond Perl and captured Besch, on the eastern bank of the Moselle. Other units fanned out to the east and are in Wochern.

Swinging Southward

To the southeast, 3rd Army forces have captured Buschdorf and have crossed the German border north of Launstroff. Other forces are within 200 yards of the German frontier at Schwerdorf.

Siersdorf. The Germans threw in major forces, including armored units, in an effort to halt the American advance.

On the southern flank of the American 9th Army front, Allied forces gained two to three miles against stiff opposition. Wurselen, Welden and Broich were among the towns taken in the drive toward the Roer River.

Artillery of the U. S. 1st Army laid down a ceaseless barrage against Eschweiler and Allied forces surged forward four miles in one of the greatest gains since the attack opened four days ago. MILLION NAZIS ELIMINATED SINCE D-DAY

SHAEF, November 19 — Allied fighting men have eliminated more than a million German soldiers since June 6, General Eisenhower said in a radio broadcast to the American people today on the eve of the launching of the sixth War Loan Drive.

Referring to the feat by Allied soldiers, General Eisenhower said: «They have achieved one of the most remarkable victories of all times.»

«During the great breakthrough in Normandy in late July and in the sweeping exploitation that carried them all the way to the German frontier, the tactical pattern always has been the same — sudden and devastating air attacks followed by an intensive artillery bombardment and then the forward surge of infantry and tanks to break the defenses and capture towns and hurry forward once again.

«In their relentless drive they liberated France, Belgium and Luxembourg. This achievement was made possible only through the great expenditure of bombs and ammunition which had been accumulated in England before the French landings and then rushed day and night to the front.»

Throughout his talk, the Allied Commander-in-Chief stressed the importance of ammunition supplies, pointing out that the greater the flow the lesser the toll of human life of Allied soldiers.

He said: «Today we are firing ammunition that would not have been used until next February or March if we had been content with a slower advance or if we had been ready to sacrifice soldiers to save materials.

More Ammunition Wanted

«We are now hammering at the massive crust of armor surrounding the German fortress. More than ever before we need ammunition.

«Expenditures raced ahead of our receipts from home, but I know that you do not want the leaders of American soldiers to substitute the additional cost in lives for ammunition that could so surely save those lives. I owe it to every American soldier in this greatest fighting force to urge upon you increased production of ammunition, signal equipment, winter clothing, engineering materials, vital medical instruments — and again ammunition, always ammunition.

«In the capture of Aachen, the army used 300,000 rounds of 105-millimeter ammunition in two weeks, and even so the reduction of that place was delayed because of the shortage of ammunition. In spite of all, we continue to attack. Five thousand rounds of ammunition are being poured every minute against German defenses. Each month our guns are hurling six million rounds against hostile trenches, forts and pillboxes while our mortars add another two million rounds.»

General Eisenhower concluded his broadcast by saying: «We are well aware that this calls for superhuman effort on your part. But you already have accomplished miracles in war production. We know that when you understand that your increased work will shorten the war and save thousands of lives, you will perform this new and even greater miracle.» (OWI - Reuter)

PLANES AND GUNS IN NEW TECHNIQUE

WITH THE AMERICAN 1ST ARMY IN GERMANY, November 19 — The American 1st Army advancing into Germany is greatly helped by the teamwork of U. S. planes and artillery in a technique that has been brought to perfection, said Harold Denny, New York Times correspondent, in a dispatch yesterday.

MORE ROCKETS, SHELLS WANTED BY U.S. NAVY

CHICAGO, November 19 — The speed of American advances in both war theaters has created new production problems for The United States Navy, Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief, said last night.

Accelerated operations, Admiral King said, «are placing a heavy strain upon reserves of certain vital items, and production of these items is falling behind the mounting requirements.

«For example, assault transports and supply vessels which traverse the wide Pacific carrying battle troops and their battle equipment to enemy beachheads are not being produced rapidly enough for us to maintain our momentum.

«Rockets are a major item in which we are short. They have proved so effective when launched either from ships or planes that the production program has had to be expanded from eight million dollars, established in the first quarter of 1944, to 161 million dollars, in the third quarter of 1945.

«We are not getting enough high capacity ammunition — the kind that is used against shore installations. Experience has shown that extensive pre-invasion bombardment saves lives, and the Navy has therefore stepped up its production schedules to a 1945 peak that will exceed the recent production rate by about 50 per cent.» (OWI)

FIGHTERS DESTROY 91 ENEMY AIRCRAFT

LONDON, November 19 — American fighter pilots destroyed a total of 91 aircraft over southern Germany yesterday, according to reports from 8th USAAF headquarters today, 64 planes, including more than 30 jet-propelled craft, were destroyed on the ground and 27 in the air. In addition, pilots reported a large number of locomotives, railway cars, oil cars, gun positions and radio towers destroyed or damaged. From the operation, in which about 400 Thunderbolts and Mustangs took part, eight aircraft are missing.

Eighth USAAF fighter planes made their bag of 91 enemy planes during the 1,200-mile run to Munich and back — the second longest strafing attack on record. Support was also given to all Allied armies on the Western Front.

Fortresses, villages, bridges and military barracks along the whole length of the American front were struck by fighters of the 9th USAAF giving support for the four American armies. American fighters, with 200-pound fragmentation bombs tucked under their wings, ripped in ahead of the American 1st Army giving close-support to tanks and infantry pushing toward the Rhine.

The recent RAF concentration bombing on Düren and Jülich is almost without parallel in any previous attack by the RAF, an air Ministry communique said today. Photographs showed that the center of these recently fortified towns — among the main defenses of the Rhine — have been destroyed. Over 5,600 tons of bombs were dropped and almost all fell near the aiming points. Enormous damage was done to both towns and all roads out of them are impassable.

Meanwhile, all roads out of Metz are jammed with escaping transport, and Allied aircraft have taken advantage of the situation to bomb and strafe this target.

In addition, Allied planes have gone ahead and bombed Saarbrücken and other temporary German refuge towns in the Saar Basin.

Last night, RAF Lancasters attacked synthetic oil plants at Wanne-Eickel in the Ruhr, and before dark other Lancasters bombed the German town of Münster, one of the transport centers for traffic to the Western Front, the Air Ministry announced today. Münster's airfields also were among the targets of American fighter-bombers yesterday.

WITH THE AMERICAN 1ST ARMY IN GERMANY, November 19 — The American 1st Army advancing into Germany is greatly helped by the teamwork of U. S. planes and artillery in a technique that has been brought to perfection, said Harold Denny, New York Times correspondent, in a dispatch yesterday.

The dispatch said: «Our aircraft did deadly work against enemy artillery. Again and again our artillery observers riding in spotting planes low over the battlefield located enemy batteries as the flashes of their guns betrayed them.

«Our observers radioed their positions to our guns which then fired a burst of colored smoke on the batteries. That marked them for our fighter-bombers circling overhead and they dived down and bombed them.

«The effect of this strafing became apparent late today. The volume of German artillery fire slackened markedly, though earlier in the day it had been the most active of any on this front.

«Every 100 yards our men advanced shows more clearly that the Germans had hoped to hold us up here for the winter. Every advance brings our men up against more mines and barbed wire and pillboxes. The Germans manning these defenses began surrendering more easily today.

«German tanks sent to counter-attack troops on the left of our line were stopped and forced to withdraw. Yesterday morning five enemy tanks ventured out to support one of the German's rare counter-attacks against our infantry in the vicinity of Stolberg. Our artillery opened up on them and at the same time fighter-bombers were summoned. All five tanks were knocked out and the German troops were put to flight.» (OWI)

BRITISH CLOSER TO FAENZA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — While German forces tightened their defenses around Faenza in an effort to hold back the 8th Army that is closing in on the town from two directions, British troops of the 8th Army continued their pressing drive from the south on that front to capture Golfara, five miles from the current objective.

An announcement here today said that Golfara was captured on Friday. Yesterday it was announced that Monte Fortino, a mile west of Golfara, was captured by Polish troops of the 8th Army. However, heavy fighting continues in this area, with the Germans counter-attacking with heavy artillery.

The 8th Army has engaged the enemy along the Montone and action also is reported beyond Ghiaia.

On the 5th Army front, Allied aircraft supported front-line troops by bombing and strafing enemy artillery and other installations. On the right flank, it was said, there were several clashes between Allied patrols and the enemy.

In the central sector, 5th Army troops drove off a small enemy attack about two miles west of Livergnano, with losses to the Germans. Farther west Brazilian troops of the 5th Army improved their positions and repulsed enemy patrols in the vicinity of Monte Cavalloro, north of the Reno River. (PRO)

VIENNA OIL BASIN AGAIN BLITZED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — The Vienna oil basin — the only source of natural oil left to the Germans — was attacked again today by escorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF, it was announced tonight.

The operations also included an assault on oil targets at Linz, 95 miles west of Vienna, and on an airfield at Horsching, eight miles southwest of Linz. It was the first attack by the 15th USAAF on the Horsching airfield, which recently was the base for German FW-190's.

All the strategic bombings today were carried out by instruments but in some cases results were observed. Clouds of black smoke, visible for 10 miles, indicated that the Vienna targets were damaged. With the loss of oil fields in Rumania, Poland and Hungary, the Vienna oil basin is the only productive outlet for German fuel.

Mustangs strafed rail and road traffic between Vienna and Budapest, destroying several locomotives and motor vehicles.

The aerial campaign against bridge targets, rolling stock, guns and enemy-occupied buildings in northern Italy and Yugoslavia was continued today by TAF fighters and fighter-bombers, although their operations were hampered by bad weather.

Railroad yards were attacked by Thunderbolts and destruction of railroad cars was reported at Padua. In the Bologna battle area, Thunderbolts bombed enemy occupied areas with generally good results and three rail lines were believed knocked out 10 miles north of Verona.

Flying armed reconnaissances in the Zagreb, Yugoslavia sector, Thunderbolts destroyed or damaged six locomotives. (PRO)

FRENCH SHIPS SHELL LAND TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — French warships again have attacked enemy land installations near the French-Italian border, it was announced here today.

A bridge and barracks were fired on with nearly 200 rounds by the French cruiser Georges Leygues and direct hits were obtained.

In the same area, on the same date, (not given-UNN), the French destroyer L'Alcyon bombarded enemy pillboxes and troop concentrations with good results.

Enemy positions also were attacked in the northern Adriatic on Friday, by two British destroyers, it was announced. (PRO)

TANK CORPS REMEMBER CAMBRAI

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19:

Cambrai day regimental day of the British Royal Tank Regiment, will be observed tomorrow on the anniversary of the battle of Cambrai in 1917 — the first mass tank attack in military history.

The battle proved the power of tanks. The action, in which 437 tanks were used, resulted in a penetration of several miles of the German line and the capture of many prisoners on the first day of the demonstration of the mass mechanized assault.

Tanks first were used in 1916 as a device to conserve

The appearance of a « mighty new field gun » in accordance with direct instructions of Marshal Stalin was announced here today on the occasion of Artillery Day, the second anniversary of the beginning of the Russian Stalingrad offensive.

Moscow's Izvestia said that Stalin watches the performance of each type of gun and is kept informed of how the guns behave in battle.

The production during November of six new « perfected and mightier » types of trench mortars and two new kinds of munitions was also announced today. The caliber of Soviet tank and anti-tank guns has increased one and a half times, and their armour-piercing capacity five times, it was revealed.

Marshal Stalin, in a special order of the day, proclaimed the anniversary, honoring the terrific weight of fire-power which has played so important a part in sending the Germans back-tracking over a distance almost twice as broad as their own homeland. (OWI-Reuter)

RUSSIANS ASK R.A.F. TO BOMB TARGET

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — Balkan Air Force Spitfires and Spitbombers, operating from Greece, have been bombing targets at the special request of the Red Army forces converging on the German escape routes through Serbia, it was announced here today.

The Russians also asked the RAF in Greece to concentrate west from Prestina to Pec, in southeastern Montenegro, and to strafe important road junctions in Yugoslavia in co-ordination with Red Army operations. The joint attacks are intended to turn the German withdrawal into a rout.

The announcement said that as a result of a particularly successful attack by the RAF on an ammunition train near Prestina, 60 miles north of Skoplje, the Russians have sent expressions of appreciation to RAF headquarters here. (PRO)

ANOTHER LANDING IN MAPIA GROUP

PEARL HARBOR, November 19 — In their third landing in four days on islands of the strategic Mapia group, between New Guinea and the Philippines, American troops yesterday invaded Fanildo Island, it was announced here today.

Capture of Fanildo would give General MacArthur's forces complete control of the Mapia and eliminate a Japanese observation position in this area for observing Allied convoys and planes heading for the Philippines.

A communique received late tonight said that Japanese forces on Leyte Island have brought up artillery and tanks in a determined attempt to break through to the north and relieve the isolated Japanese pocket in upper Ormoc corridor.

It was also announced that Japanese casualties have now passed the 45,000 mark. Eight thousand enemy casualties were inflicted in the destruction of a Japanese convoy in Ormoc Bay on November 10.

American casualties to date in the fighting here were placed at 1,133 killed; 4,432 wounded, and 126 missing.

Pegun Island was invaded on Wednesday last. On the next day, U. S. troops went ashore on Bras Island, where mopping-up operations now are being completed A Reuter report tonight said that the landings on Pegun were commanded by a British veteran of the Sicilian operation, Captain Lord Ashbourne, of the Royal Navy.

Captain Ashbourne was the first British officer to be in charge of an American landing in the Pacific theater.

The dispatch said that the bulk of the Japanese garrison had fled in the face of the American force, and only

RUSSIANS 30 MILES FROM BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 19 — In the struggle along the Budapest-Miscolcz railway Marshal Malinovsky's forces today captured the town and railway station of Gyonyos, 30 miles from Budapest, and five miles north of the main railway line.

The Russians now hold the greater part of the line, but some intermediate and widely separated points are still in German-Hungarian hands, and the Germans and Hungarians are still trying to regain other stations by frequent counter-attacks.

A dispatch said today that apart from its importance as a line of communication, the railway, with its embankments and building's, forms part of the German and Hungarian-defense scheme which the Russians must break through in order to penetrate into the areas north of Budapest or northwest toward Bratislava, the capital of Slovakia.

On other sectors of the Russian front there was patrol activity and at a number of points fighting of local importance, tonight's Soviet communique announced. In yesterday's fighting, 17 German tanks were knocked out, and 25 enemy aircraft were shot down.

A communique received late tonight said that Japanese forces on Leyte Island have brought up artillery and tanks in a determined attempt to break through to the north and relieve the isolated Japanese pocket in upper Ormoc corridor.

It was also announced that Japanese casualties have now passed the 45,000 mark. Eight thousand enemy casualties were inflicted in the destruction of a Japanese convoy in Ormoc Bay on November 10.

American casualties to date in the fighting here were placed at 1,133 killed; 4,432 wounded, and 126 missing.

Pegun Island was invaded on Wednesday last. On the next day, U. S. troops went ashore on Bras Island, where mopping-up operations now are being completed A Reuter report tonight said that the landings on Pegun were commanded by a British veteran of the Sicilian operation, Captain Lord Ashbourne, of the Royal Navy.

Captain Ashbourne was the first British officer to be in charge of an American landing in the Pacific theater.

The dispatch said that the bulk of the Japanese garrison had fled in the face of the American force, and only 13 enemy troops — who had killed themselves with grenades — were found.

Further details of the air attack on the Japanese naval base in Brunei Bay, off the northeast coast of Borneo, yesterday, revealed that the escorted heavy bombers flew more than 800 miles to make the attack. A battleship and cruiser were left in flames and 112 tons of explosives were dropped on other shipping in the harbor.

General MacArthur's communique yesterday also announced the sinking of an enemy freighter off Luzon, in the Philippines, and the destruction of two other freighters off the coast of Borneo, all in addition to damage to other shipping. (OWI - Reuter)

JAPS CHANGE NAVAL CHIEF AGAIN

NEW YORK, November 19 — Vice Admiral Shibuya has been appointed vice chief of the Japanese Naval General Staff, apparently with the task of attempting to rebuild the Japanese Navy after its crushing defeat in the second battle of the Philippines, according to Tokyo Radio last night. He takes the place of Vice-Admiral Inouye who was appointed to the post less than two weeks ago.

Shibuya was previously commander of the Hiroshima and Kure naval arsenals and naval superintendant in the Munitions Ministry. (OWI)

OIL PIPE BUILT FROM INDIA TO CHINA

CHUNGKING, November 19 — Existence of a secretly-constructed pipeline to bring hundreds of tons of petrol and oil from India to China for the Allied armies and air force was announced today by the U. S. Army.

The tremendous quantities of fuel that must now be flown, barrel-by-barrel, into China will soon be pouring through the pipeline, freeing vital transportation facilities for movement of munitions and arms into the China theater.

The line which will carry fuel from Calcutta to China is said to run in a huge curve up the valley of the Brahmapatra through eastern Bengal and across the Burma border in the area of the Himalayas.

It cuts across wild Assam and Burma country, irrespective of physical obstacles. It rises from sea level to mountain passes 4,000 feet high, and when it eventually crosses into China, it will scale 10,000-foot passes. The pipe will carry fuel for American bombers. (Reuter-OWI, BBC)

BRITISH JOIN PARTISANS IN MONTENEGRO

AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — British troops of the Land Forces Adriatic, supported by aircraft of the Balkan Air Force, have joined Marshal Tito's Partisan forces in the fighting in Montenegro and Hercegovina and in one sector have successfully engaged enemy fortifications at Risan, southwest of Yugoslavia and 12 miles northeast of Cetinje, it was announced here today.

Risan is 30 miles southeast of Dubrovnik, which was liberated recently by the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation.

British paratroops of the Land Forces Adriatic, in conjunction with Albanian troops, are operating between Lake Ochride and the coast and are harassing the withdrawing Germans. Lake Ochrida is just northeast of the junction point of the Greek-Yugoslav-Albanian border.

The first announcement of the landing of Allied troops by sea and from the air in Albania and on the islands off the Yugoslav coast was made here September 27.

Planes of the Balkan Air Force continued their intensive support of the British-Partisan action in Albania and Yugoslavia yesterday through bombing and strafing of enemy troop concentrations, roads and rail bridges and motor transports in two main areas in Dalmatia. Besides striking at tactical targets, they hit at enemy communications in the rear.

The areas attacked from the air were Nevesinje, where there is a concentration of German troops, and near Podgorica, another German concentration point.

Nevesinje is 40 miles north of Dubrovnik and Podgorica is in southern Yugoslavia, about 10 miles from the Albanian border.

Other targets in the air attack were Vauidejes, in northern Albania about 50 miles north of Tirana; Scutari, and Novi Pazar, in southern Yugoslavia.

Mustangs also bombed a train near Visegred, 50 miles east.

Beaufighters of a South African squadron shot 56 rockets into the German-occupied village of Ostrzac, 19 miles northeast of Bihac. The village was left covered in smoke and dust.

The air action in the Albanian-Yugoslav drive yesterday was concentrated on an objective of destroying the German troops and thousands of motor vehicles moving northward along the road between Novi Pazar and Priboj, in southern Yugoslavia.

Two forces of RAF Wellingtons attacked the road stretches, while a third force, consisting of RAF Liberators, Halifaxes and Wellingtons bombed the marshalling yards at Sarajevo, where rail traffic was reported to be heavy, harassing the withdrawing Germans in conjunction with Albanian troops.

Some German infantry has succeeded in penetrating to Rogatica, between Visegrad and Sarajevo, but Partisan demolition of communications forced the momentary enemy success to a standstill, the communique reported.

To the east, Yugoslav troops repulsed several German counter-attacks in the Uzice area and captured new positions. The Germans are fighting desperately to hold this sector to safeguard the withdrawal of their forces from the Ibar Valley region to the south.

Bulgarian and Russian troops have broken through defenses guarding the eastern flank of the German retreat corridor through the Ibar Valley and are closing in on Pristina, about 50 miles northeast of Skoplje, yesterday's Bulgarian communique said. The communique reported that other troops further south, advancing toward the junction of the Varday and Ibar valleys, captured the town of Urosevac, 30 miles northwest of Skoplje. (OWI)

FORTS START FIRES AT HONG KONG DOCKS

KANDY, November 19 — Chinese units which sealed off the Japanese garrison at Bhamo, in northern Burma, repelled two strong enemy counter-attacks from the southeast yesterday, while to the east other units of the Chinese 38th Division wiped out the last resistance pocket in the Momauk area, an Allied communique announced today.

In the Chindwin Valley, West African troops advanced to Paluzewa, 16 miles north of Kalewa and about 140 miles northeast of Mandalay. They reached Paletwa, the main river port in the Kaladan valley, and found it deserted by the enemy.

Planes of Eastern Air Command yesterday destroyed two bridges near Kalewa and attacked other objectives in the Chindwin region to support the ground operations. On Friday, enemy aircraft and factories, and road rail and river traffic were damaged in central and southern Burma and northwest Siam.

The 14th USAAF on Friday night sent Flying Fortresses to bomb installations at Fort Bayard, on the Liuchow Peninsula, and the Kowloon docks at Hongkong, setting fires. In attacks on the Hsingsheng waterfront on the same day, 95 per cent of their bombs landed on their targets, damaging gas tanks, munitions, and river craft and strafing enemy troops on the roads. NAZIS BETWEEN YUGOSLAVS AND BRITISH LONDON, November 19 — Troops of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation are closing in on the Germans' main escape routes running west from Visegrad to Sarajevo, Marshal Tito announced today.

At the same time, other Yugoslav units are attacking an alternate escape route running north through the Drina Valley, the communique said.

These moves indicated that the isolated German forces remaining in Yugoslavia are being squeezed between the British and Partisan forces controlling most of the Dalmatian Coast, and combined Soviet - Yugoslav - Bulgarian forces pressing in from the east, southeast and south.

Participation of British forces in action against the enemy in Montenegro and Hercegovina was officially revealed today. In Albania British paratroopers are operating between Lake Ochrida and the coast and have been

FRANCE ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

PARIS, November 19 — General de Gaulle, in an address over the French home radio today, said that despite daily difficulties, France is well on the road to recovery.

The French 1st Army at the gates of Belfort had captured nearly 10,000 prisoners in three days, he said and added: « Within eight months we shall have in Europe a great army worthy of France. I should add that our navy, which is again sailing the seven seas, is also coming into its own again. »

Turning to the international sphere, General de Gaulle said that France is slowly regaining the position which the government wants her to occupy.

« It is already realized abroad » he said, « that France's influence is growing daily and that she will have a part to play with other nations for the good of all mankind. » (Reuter)

PLAN FOR REBUILDING FRANCE

PARIS, November 19 — A program of national reconstruction, drafted by Pierre Mendez-France, French Minister of National Economy, and sponsored by General de Gaulle, was unanimously adopted by the French Cabinet on Friday, it was reported today.

The program includes measures intended to break ruthlessly any attempt to increase the cost of living. After the reduction of the circulation of bank notes, which reached more than 600,000 million francs during the German occupation, by the aid of the internal three per cent loan, the French Government plans heavily to tax profiteers and to make an inventory of their wealth.

The industrial part of the program, the dispatch said, will be concentrated on the resumption of production in the coming months, intensifying the restoration of the basic industries, as well as repairing, and building necessary equipment for these industries.

The French government plans to nationalize some of the vital industries, the reports said, but «within order and legality.» It was understood that the national economy may be divided into three sectors:

One section left entirely free, another nationalized and a third only under state control. The plan called for smaller industries to be left free; armament industries, mines and such big industries as those building railway material and locomotives, to be nationalized; those industries producing parts and accessories to be under state control.

Mendez-France said that the plans for the nationalization of some of the key industries are still in embryo form, a New York Herald Tribune dispatch said.

The report quoted the French Minister as saying that he was satisfied with the rate of exchange — 200 francs to the pound and 50 to the dollar. (OWI)

WAR UNIFIES DUTCH TRADE UNIONS

LONDON, November 19 — The struggle against German forces during the occupation of Holland has led to a new unity among the trade union groups of Limburg and Brabant provinces, according to a correspondent of the Observer.

Before the war there was no co-operation between the Catholic, Protestant and Social Democratic trade unions, the dispatch said. During the occupation, however, the members, suffering the same tribulations, worked together and came to respect each other's points of view.

There is now a widespread movement to form one body of all the trade unions on a nonsectarian basis, the correspondent said. The union members also want a more democratic organization of industry in the interest of the community and the formation of a unified, progressive party. (OWI)

WASHINGTON, November 19 — The launching of 28 cargo vessels since Saturday, November 11, brings to 4,117 the national total of cargo ships launched from U. S. yards since December 7, 1941, the U. S. Maritime Commission announced yesterday.

The 28 vessels launched in the past week are made up of 10 special ships of undisclosed tonnage, eight long-range vessels of 4,700 to 16,500 tons each, seven Liberty ships of 10,500 tons and three Victory ships of 10,800 tons. (OWI)

ITALIAN PILOTS PRAISED FOR GOOD WORK

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — Blows struck by Italian Patriot airmen in harassing the German withdrawal from Albania and Yugoslavia will have a far-reaching effect, Air Vice-Marshal W. Elliot, Commander of the Balkan Air Force, told the commanding officer of the Italian fighter wing operating with the RAF in a recent congratulatory message.

«Good luck to you,» he said, «and may you have many more successes.»

Marshal Elliot's plaudits were conferred on the Italian fliers after their exploits in one day's strafing operations recently. He referred to the Italian fighter wing's determined attacks on enemy columns in extremely bad weather, and commended them for their fortitude and perseverance.

Italian pilots, flying Macchis and Airacobras, have for sometime been active in the RAF attacks on German transport columns in Albania and Yugoslavia.

They have been on sorties with the RAF almost daily and they have reported on return from their missions that a large number of vehicles have been destroyed and damaged. These successes have been registered despite weather conditions which at this time of the year are usually adverse, with low clouds and often rain and snow, and despite formidable German anti-aircraft fire.

One of the best days the Italian fighter wing had recently was on November 12, when the wing claimed 29 motor vehicles destroyed and the following damaged: 26 motor trucks, nine carts, one tank and two guns. Low clouds that day over Albania prevented complete observation of results of the mission.

Three days earlier, despite cancellation of many missions because of poor flying weather, the Macchis and Airacobras destroyed 28 vehicles, damaged 35, and bombed one bridge. (PRO)

BEST OLIVE HARVEST IN 10 YEARS LIKELY

BARI, November 19 — The coming olive harvest may be one of the best in the last 10 years, the newspaper Gazzetta del Popolo said today.

It was estimated that crude oil production in liberated Italy would reach about 1,789,063 quintals plus an increase of 100,000 quintals if the quantity of oil refined for human consumption were added.

Comparing these figures with the population figure of the liberated zone, the newspaper estimated an average ration of 8.4 liters per person annually. (UNN)

MILLIONS OF GARMENTS FROM RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, November 19 — Since 1939, American Red Cross chapters produced 29,384,780 garments, of which 21,776,280 have already been received or are en route for distribution to civilians in foreign countries, Basil Connor, Chairman of the American Red Cross, said here today.

The garments have been shipped to American Red Cross war relief operations in Allied and liberated countries wherever shipping facilities were available. Millions of commercially-produced garments have also been shipped to needy populations.

Nearly 7,000,000 garments have gone to Britain during and since the heavy bombings, said Connor, and a substantial reserve has been established there to make possible immediate assistance for victims of flying-bombs. A reserve has also been provided for rapid distribution of garments to liberated France, Belgium and Holland.

About 4,000,000 garments have been sent to Russia, 2,500,000 to Italy and over 5,000,000 to France, the greater part of which is still en route. Under special arrangement with the blockading authorities, over 500,000 garments for children were sent to Greece before liberation and, recently, some 400,000 garments remaining in the Middle East after distribution to Polish and Greek refugees there were made available for distribution in Greece.

Among other places which, during the past five years, received American Red Cross clothing are Finland, Iceland, Poland and North Africa. At the request of the U.S. Navy Department, garments are also being distributed to Guam, Saipan and Tinian Islands in the Pacific. (OWI)

PISA AND SIENA UNIVERSITIES TO REOPEN

FLORENCE, November 19 — Two of the oldest universities in the world — the University of Pisa and the University of Siena — will re-open this week, it was announced today by officials of the Allied Military Government and Allied Commission, who took a large part in preparing both institutions for re-opening.

The University of Pisa, despite badly battered buildings, which Allied authorities have partially repaired, will re-open on Saturday, November 25. At that time the new rector of the University, who will be chosen by members of the faculty, will be installed and classes will reopen to several hundred students. The Pro-Rector is Dr. Luigi Russo.

A communal and academic ceremony and colorful procession is planned for the re-opening of the University at Siena on Sunday, November 26. Famous as early as the 14th century, the university at Siena will open its classes in buildings untouched by the war.

The ceremony at the University of Pisa, an institution mentioned in history as early as the 12th century, will be held amid wreckage which is now being cleaned up by workmen under the supervision of Allied education officers. The buildings were badly damaged during the fighting for the city, with much of the damage inflicted by the Germans. A German mine wrecked a tower and most of the library and scientific equipment was looted by the Germans.

The Germans also looted 23 cases of books from the specialist library, which was one of the finest in Europe, and medical equipment from the clinics and wards of the university's medical school. Some of this equipment has already been replaced by the Allied Commission's Public Health Sub-Commission from the hundreds of tons of medical supplies arrived from the United States during the last two months for the exclusive use of Italian civilians.

Other sections of the University suffered heavily the German looting and destruction.

In spite of these difficulties the faculty, under the direction of Pro-Rector Giovanni Cicogna, is planning to begin its school year on January 15.

The University of Pisa buildings were dated 1493 and were extended by Cosimo I in 1543. Galileo was appointed professor of mathematics there in 1610. (UNN)

ENGLISHWOMAN RESCUED BY PARTISANS

FLORENCE, November 19 — Mrs. Eileen Medici, an Englishwoman who was sentenced by a Nazi dominated Fascist court to 30 years imprisonment for helping a British officer, her nephew, is now working a section of the Allied Military Government here.

The Nazis had asked the Fascists to sentence Mrs. Medici to death, but her lawyer's eloquent plea saved her. Since the Allied liberation of Florence, Mrs. Medici, who had been the wife of the late Major Reginald Mander of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, has worked for AMG and has been an active member of several local civilian welfare organizations, including the AMG assistance committee, which is run by prominent Florentine citizens. This committee receives Allied food and medicines through AMG, investigates pleas for assistance and distributes the food and medicine directly.

Mrs. Medici was arrested on November 12, 1943, by Mario Carita, hated head of the Florence Fascist SS, after an informer told of her assisting her nephew, Major Dorsey Mander of the Green Howards, who had escaped from a German prison camp. She was tried and sentenced June 2 and was rescued from the local prison by a band of Florentine Partisans on July 10.

In her office at the Palazzo Vecchio Mrs. Medici explained: «I am very busy doing two things: 'serving' my sentence in the service of the Allies and trying to regain my British citizenship.» Mrs. Medici lost her British nationality when she married an Italian citizen in 1936. (UNN) interpreted it as Hitler's confession of ultimate defeat and a determination to rally Nazi fanatics to continued resistance.

«Hitler has rejected German national unity...,» the paper said. «He obviously regarded the military collapse of Germany as inevitable and therefore he does not care for measures which in any case could only postpone it.»

The paper went on to say that «quasi-religious fanatics who fight for their faith and not for their country are Hitler's last hope.

Inside Germany, there were growing signs of disorder and disobedience. From Berne an Associated Press report said yesterday that industry is at standstill in some areas, partly because of fuel and transport difficulties, and partly because authorities are unable to compel workers to remain at their jobs due to constant Allied air raids. According to the Arbeiter Zeitung, there is widespread discontent and at one place — Halle, in Westphalia — barricades have been thrown around the town to suppress disorder.

Nazi Reprisals

The Journal de Genève, in Switzerland, reported yesterday that «Down with Hitler» slogans and other deprecatory remarks about the Nazi regime are appearing with increasing frequency on the walls and pavements of many German cities and towns.

Mass reprisals have been taken against this activity, the Soviet News Agency Tass said tonight, quoting Berne sources. Concentration camps are full of individuals regarded as «unreliable» by the Nazis, the dispatch said, and added that the Gestapo is conducting a widespread purge affecting «tens of thousands» of people.

Added to the Nazis' increasing difficulties is the prospect of severe food shortages in the Reich this winter. A speech by Nazi Food Minister Backe, reported today by the German News Agency DNB, said that livestock herds had been reduced because of fodder shortages, and advised the German people to prepare themselves for «a still greater preponderance of vegetables in their diet.»

According to a dispatch today in the New York Herald Tribune, the British Ministry of Economic Warfare estimated that, compared to last year, the German grain harvest is 10 per cent less, livestock fodder three million tons less and supplies of sugar beets and potatoes for civilians further reduced. Bread, fat, butter and cheese rations have all been cut.

The Stockholm paper, Dagens Nyheter, said yesterday that Captain Peter Riedel, Assistant Air Attaché of the German legation in Stockholm, resigned his post and asked Swedish permission to take up residence as a private civilian. The dispatch added that Reidel renounced allegiance to the Nazi Party after a dispute with one of his superiors in the legation «known to be an active member of the Gestapo.» (OWI-Reuter)

NAZIS RAID HOLLAND FOR LABOR

LONDON, November 19 — More than 100,000 Dutchmen have been shipped from occupied areas in The Netherlands to Germany since October, said an Aneta dispatch from here today.

The dispatch quoted Underground reports reaching the Netherlands Government in Europe as saying that men from 17 to 50 years old are being carried off constantly and that all men between those ages in the Achtermoek area of Gelderland province have been rounded up. In the town of Enschede, in the same province, 1,400 male inhabitants have been shipped off.

Similar reports come from Utrecht and the district of Gool and, the dispatch adds, even Netherlands Red Cross personnel have been included in the deportations.

Since the Allied liberation of Florence, Mrs. Medici, who had been the wife of the late Major Reginald Mander of the Duke of Cornwall's Light Infantry, has worked for AMG and has been an active member of several local civilian welfare organizations, including the AMG assistance committee, which is run by prominent Florentine citizens. This committee receives Allied food and medicines through AMG, investigates pleas for assistance and distributes the food and medicine directly.

Mrs. Medici was arrested on November 12, 1943, by Mario Carita, hated head of the Florence Fascist SS, after an informer told of her assisting her nephew, Major Dorsey Mander of the Green Howards, who had escaped from a German prison camp. She was tried and sentenced June 2 and was rescued from the local prison by a band of Florentine Partisans on July 10.

In her office at the Palazzo Vecchio Mrs. Medici explained: «I am very busy doing two things: 'serving' my sentence in the service of the Allies and trying to regain my British citizenship.» Mrs. Medici lost her British nationality when she married an Italian citizen in 1936. (UNN)

INSIDE GERMANY

NEUTRALS REPORT HITLER ILL

LONDON, November 19 — Official Germany tonight still failed to offer any explanation for the mysterious silence of Adolf Hitler, thus adding to the current confusion of the German people.

Remembering the attempted assassination of Hitler last July, the German people, according to reports reaching here, are endeavoring to learn — despite the rigid Nazi Party censorship — whether Himmler has succeeded Hitler and whether the Nazi dictator is dead, or alive. Hitler is obviously unable to carry on his duties as head of the Reich.

While Berlin remained non-committal on the mystery of Hitler's continued silence, two neutral papers — hundreds of miles apart — tonight reported that the Nazi leader is unable to utter a word following a throat operation performed the last week of October.

In Stockholm, Aftontidningen published the report and said the operation was performed by a Viennese specialist, Professor von Eicken. A similar report, quoting German sources, was published by the Basle Arbeiter Zeitung, which added that Hitler's condition was so serious that Himmler was preparing the German people «for a grave announcement.»

Today's Observer here, commenting on Hitler's proclamation which was read to the German people last Sunday, ing frequency on the walls and pavements of [illegible] cities and towns.

Mass reprisals have been taken against this activity, the Soviet News Agency Tass said tonight, quoting Berne sources. Concentration camps are full of individuals regarded as «unreliable» by the Nazis, the dispatch said, and added that the Gestapo is conducting a widespread purge affecting «tens of thousands» of people.

Added to the Nazis' increasing difficulties is the prospect of severe food shortages in the Reich this winter. A speech by Nazi Food Minister Backe, reported today by the German News Agency DNB, said that livestock herds had been reduced because of fodder shortages, and advised the German people to prepare themselves for «a still greater preponderance of vegetables in their diet.»

According to a dispatch today in the New York Herald Tribune, the British Ministry of Economic Warfare estimated that, compared to last year, the German grain harvest is 10 per cent less, livestock fodder three million tons less and supplies of sugar beets and potatoes for civilians further reduced. Bread, fat, butter and cheese rations have all been cut.

The Stockholm paper, Dagens Nyheter, said yesterday that Captain Peter Riedel, Assistant Air Attaché of the German legation in Stockholm, resigned his post and asked Swedish permission to take up residence as a private civilian. The dispatch added that Reidel renounced allegiance to the Nazi Party after a dispute with one of his superiors in the legation «known to be an active member of the Gestapo.» (OWI-Reuter)

NAZIS RAID HOLLAND FOR LABOR

LONDON, November 19 — More than 100,000 Dutchmen have been shipped from occupied areas in The Netherlands to Germany since October, said an Aneta dispatch from here today.

The dispatch quoted Underground reports reaching the Netherlands Government in Europe as saying that men from 17 to 50 years old are being carried off constantly and that all men between those ages in the Achtermoek area of Gelderland province have been rounded up. In the town of Enschede, in the same province, 1,400 male inhabitants have been shipped off.

Similar reports come from Utrecht and the district of Gooi and, the dispatch adds, even Netherlands Red Cross personnel have been included in the deportations.

Another dispatch — from the Berne correspondent of the Stockholm Aftontidningen — said that distress in German-occupied Netherlands is becoming «catastrophic.» In the Hague and Amsterdam the gas supply has been completely cut off, while in Rotterdam gas is available only for short periods.

The dispatch added that publication of Dutch health statistics is no longer permitted by the German authorities, but it is evident that the health of the population is approaching a serious crisis owing to undernourishment. Tuberculosis especially is increasing. More, Rotterdam's modern hospital, with all its equipment and supplies, has been taken over by the Germans on 12 hours' notice. (OWI)

GERMANS FEAR SLAVE LABOR

LONDON, November 19 — Nazi Party anxiety over the growth of well-organized armed bands of Russian, Polish and other foreign workers in Germany, is expressed in a circular letter issued by the Reich Labor Leader, which recently fell into Allied hands, BBC reported today.

«These armed bands pursue a well-planned policy of injuring the Reich,» by all possible methods, complained the Labor Leader. «They way-lay and murder security personnel, incite unwilling workers to slack in their jobs, threaten drastic action if their orders are not obeyed and attack foreigners of pro-German interests.

Orders have been given that all foreign workers must be more carefully watched, both on and off duty, and surprise searches must be made for hidden arms. (BBC)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 19 — Today's communique:

Allied bridgeheads across the Derivation Canal (Zig Canal) have been enlarged.

We have cut the Meijel-Panningen road and reached the vicinity of Helden. Opposition was light but many mines were encountered.

Progress north and south of Gellenkirchen has now completed encirclement of the town except for a narrow escape corridor northeast along a railway.

Units to the north freed Niederheide and made gains of 1,500 yards farther east. Units to the south launched an attack at first light yesterday in face of moderate opposition and freed Hunshoven and Prummern. We are in the outskirts of Suggerath.

Farther south we have taken a number of towns including Puffendorf and contained two counter-attacks.

Our forces made slight gains against mortar and small arms fire in the area south of Wurslen and moderate progress against stubborn resistance in the Stolberg area. Wire obstacles and minefields delayed our advance.

Farther south Allied forces entered Germany near the Luxembourg border and are in the town of Buschdorf. Other elements are at Ritzing and in the Halstroff area. We also have units in Schwerdorf and Heckling.

Our forces are at the north and south edges of Metz. Gains up to two miles in the Blamont-St. Dié sector freed 12 towns including Raon l'Etape in the Meurthe Valley which was found heavily mined. Villages have been set afire by the enemy.

Our forces in the Belfort Gap freed many towns and drove to within a few miles of Belfort.

Along the Swiss border we have advanced nearly 23 miles in three days.

Air:

Communications and supply lines behind enemy lines from Nijmegen to Belfort were attacked by medium and fighter-bombers in strength yesterday. Bridges, rail and road focal points and transport vehicles were among the targets.

Münster, a center of rail and water transport, was hit by a strong force of escorted heavy bombers. Close support to our attacking forces was given in all sectors by fighter-bombers.

In the areas of Eschweiler and Düren, fortified villages, troop concentrations and military barracks were hit by medium and light bombers.

Near the towns of Gellenkirchen, Jülich, Düren, Stolberg and Grevenbroich troops, armored units, gun positions and strongpoints were strafed in low-level attacks by fighter-bombers.

Oil storage and transport facilities in the Munich, Hanau, and Ulm areas were hit by fighter-bombers. Airfields at Lechfeld, Leipheim and Mengen were strafed by other fighter-bombers which destroyed more than 60 enemy planes on the ground and damaged others.

Enemy fighters were encountered principally in the Frankfurt and Neustadt areas and in combats which ensued 25 of them were shot down. A synthetic oil plant at Wanne-Eickel was attacked last night by a force of heavy bombers. (Reuter)

Aircraft of the Tactical Force again concentrated against close support targets in the battle zones of Italy and enemy communications in the Po Valley, as well as communication and other targets in Yugoslavia.

Units of the Coastal Air Force attacked shipping in the Adriatic, and aircraft of Balkan Air Force were active against military targets in Albania and Yugoslavia.

From these operations, 18 of our aircraft are missing, and two of our planes are missing from night operations of November 17/18.

It is now known that nine of our heavy bombers reported missing on November 17 have returned safely to base.

MAAF flew approximately 2,700 sorties yesterday.

Navy:

The French cruiser Georges Leygues carried out bombardments of a bridge and barracks near the Franco-Italian frontier. In all, she fired nearly 250 rounds and obtained direct hits.

On the same date in the same area, the French destroyer L'Alcyon engaged enemy pillboxes and troop concentrations with good result.

On 17 of November in the northern Adriatic, the British destroyers Lauderdale and Eggesford bombarded enemy positions on Rab Island. Nearly all the salvos were on the target. (PRO)

MOSCOW, November 19 — Tonight's communiqué:

During today, in Hungary, our troops captured in fighting the town and railway station of Gyöngyös, and also occupied several other populated localities, including Gernockap, Gerontöl, Tophalu, Decs, Heveszugra, Boldok, Gaugakhävy.

On other sectors of the front, patrol actions and on several points fighting of local importance took place.

During November 18, our troops disabled and destroyed 17 German tanks.

In air-fighting and by anti-aircraft fire, 25 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 19 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Apennines of the Modena sector, units of a Garibaldi brigade on the night of November 7 attacked and destroyed a German motorized column, composed of 14 vehicles. The enemy lost 60 men in killed and wounded.

In Val di Scrivia continual Patriot activities against communications and highway centers have induced the German divisional command to propose a truce in the sector crossed by the Genoa-Serravalle-Scrivia highway. The proposal was rejected by the Patriots.

In Val d'Aosta Fascist troops had retired from their positions since the beginning of October. Taking advantage of the winter season, the Germans undertook mopping-up operations against the Patriots. After resisting for a long time and making the position of the enemy hard and costly, Patriots were finally compelled to withdraw from a few localities but retained some positions on high ground.

In the Bergamasco sector a brigade of Patriots carried out a daring raid in the vicinity of Piazza Brembana, killing three Germans and capturing 30. Patriots also captured a large quantity of arms and equipment. (UNN)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 19 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

British troops of the 8th Army have captured Golfara, a small village nearly a mile east of Monte Fortino, where Polish troops have been engaged in heavy fighting.

On the remainder of the front, patrols have been active.

Land Forces Adriatic:

British troops of Land Forces Adriatic are cooperating with Yugoslav Army of National Liberation forces in Montenegro and Hercegovina and are in contact with the enemy. These operations are being supported by aircraft of the Balkan Air Force.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of 15th AAF heavy bombers yesterday attacked airfields in northeast Italy, targets in the Vienna area, and German troop concentrations in Yugoslavia.

RAF heavy and medium bombers were also active against Yugoslav targets.

On 17 of November in the northern Adriatic, the British destroyers Lauderdale and Eggesford bombarded enemy positions on Rab Island. Nearly all the salvos were on the target. (PRO)

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 19 — The Supreme Command of the German Armed Forces announces:

Western Front:

In south-eastern Holland, our troops defended the forefield of the Meuse positions and repulsed major British attacks before the bridgehead of Roermond.

Also on the third day of the battle near Aachen, our front withstood unshakeably the enemy assault. American divisions attacking all day long succeeded in entering at some places into our fighting zone in the battle area of Geilenkirchen, the bulk of attackers however, was smashed by concentrated defensive fire soon after leaving the initial positions particularly near Wuerselen and Stolberg. Forty-five American tanks were destroyed yesterday by our defence.

In the area of Metz our garrison troops are heroically holding out. Immediately south of the town, they repulsed the pressing enemy. In our positions in Lorraine, Panzers and Grenadiers are engaged in a battle with Americans advancing on a broad front. 250 prisoners were taken in our counter-attacks in the area of Moerchingen. Between Rhine-Marne Canal and Badonvillers attacking American regiments were checked after having made slight ... itorial gains. Major enemy attacks on Burgundy Gate on both sides of Montbeliard and on the Swiss border failed.

Artillery fire within the reach of our fortresses in the West intensified. The garrison of St. Nazaire smashed an enemy thrust against its eastern front.

Last night, our fast bombers and battle planes dropped numerous bombs on an enemy supply base in the area of Aachen. Fires and explosions were observed.

The area of Greater London and Antwerp were again subjected to intensified long-range shelling.

Italy:

In central Italy, German Alpine troops threw the enemy out of a penetration point in the mountains of Gallicano. On the entire remaining front, fighting on both sides was confined to vehement reconnaissance, in the course of which we made again numerous prisoners.

In the Balkans, the Bulgarians launched strong attacks in the area east of Pristina-Mitrovica. They were warded off. Attacks made by bands in the area of Mostar were frustrated with heavy casualties to the enemy. In Croatia, several groups of bands were again smashed.

Eastern Front:

In Central Hungary, the enemy attempted for the seventh day running a decisive break-through; we succeeded in frustrating this in spite of the large forces thrown in. Soviet tank, and infantry formations attacking on a broad front were halted in hard fighting. Penetrations east of Budapest and south of Miskolc were immediately sealed off. Our defence accounted for 21 enemy tanks.

Concentrated Bolshevist attacks were repelled on the Dukla-Pass road.

The Soviets started a new attack, with superior infantry and tank forces and supported by naval artillery against the land front of the Swerbe peninsula. Light German naval forces joined in the fighting and frustrated enemy attempts to land on the eastern side of the peninsula. On the land front fighting is still in progress.

German 'U' boats sank five destroyers and two guard vessels out of a naval force consisting of patrol units and submarine chasers.

Contrary to the stipulations of the Geneva convention, always strictly observed by us, British naval forces lately repeatedly captured German hospital ships together with wounded German soldiers and held the ships in Egyptian ports for weeks. These pirate enterprises culminated in the bombing, machine-gunning and subsequent sinking of the clearly marked hospital ship Tuebingen by British terror planes on return from Alexandria on November 18, in flagrant violation of international law.

Air:

Anglo-American combat- and low-flying aircraft resumed their terror-attacks against the civilian population in day-light as well as in the early evening yesterday. There was damage to property especially in the residential quarters of Bochum, Münster and Vienna. Up to now the destruction of 14 enemy aircraft was reported.

Western Front: Transocean correspondent Walter Plato writes about the « third battle of Aachen » which has so far failed to achieve the desired break-through. He also states that for the first time since the battle of Germany began the Americans can no longer count on overwhelming artillery support, due to the growing strength of German defence. Nevertheless, the enemy succeeded in gaining some ground north of Aachen, after penetrating the German lines and capturing Geilenkirchen. Plato describes these operations as a « large-scale offensive. »

[illegible] Guenther Weber puts the Siegfried line but in Metz itself they are still resisting fanatically.

Writing about the new German fortifications in the West, the Transocean reporter Gerhard Emskoetter mentions the fact that when the Allies got « dangerously near to the Reich frontiers in early September, » a coherent line of positions was built along the then existing front which, whilst being « a masterpiece of improvisation and organisation, » was not sufficiently deep. Innumerable new lines of fortifications rose behind the front-line, thanks to the total mobilisation of the German people. Time is in on the side of the Germans as every week new camouflaged fortifications are growing in the whole depth of the Reich. »

Eastern Front: Karl Bluecher, the Transocean reporter, believes that the lull on the Eastern Front (except in Hungary, of course) might break any time, owing to the approaching winter; German reconnaissance observed considerable Soviet preparations for the winter-offensive from the Narev river to Kurland, in the north. The fury of the battle of Hungary has shown a tendency to increase, accentuated by considerable Soviet reinforcements. It is estimated that the Soviets have about 35 divisions in Hungary alone. Although the Bolshevists made several breaches in the German and Hungarian lines east of Budapest and south of Miskolc, the decisive break-through was once more denied to them and the line remained intact.

Low Spirit of American P.O.W.'s: Transocean Reporter, Guenther Weber, quotes a German officer in charge of a POW camp, giving the following three reasons for the low morale of recently captured Americans: firstly, growing German resistance and the devastating effect of German artillery fire; secondly, the disappointment felt at failing to enter Berlin on October 15; thirdly, the privations of winter warfare. During the past few days innumerable American soldiers were taken to German field hospitals, suffering with frozen limbs.

Enough Food for Everyone in Germany: In a radio address, Minister of Agriculture Herbert Backe stated that through the loss of certain regions hitherto occupied by German armed forces, German agriculture was confronted by new big tasks requiring a supreme effort on the part of German peasants. He was confident that the foodstuffs at Germany's disposal were quite sufficient and the food situation could be considered safe in the sixth year of war. He was « glad to state that the German children looked particularly well fed. »

New U-boat Campaign Envisaged: Admiral Doenitz, C.-in-C. of the German Navy spoke to ammunition workers in a German port envisaging a new turn in the U-boat campaign against Allied shipping. « Owing to the success of German naval warfare, England has already had to reduce her exports by 50 per cent and further reductions may be expected... »

Unemployment in Italy: Transocean quotes Alonso, Rome correspondent of a Madrid paper, saying that in Rome alone 150,000 manual workers and about the same number of professional workers are unemployed. Out of a hundred people, ten work occasionally, eight earn their living as black-market dealers, eighteen live on the earnings of their children, ten have replaced female domestic servants, and four are begging, whilst the remaining forty await miracles... » The Government is unable to pay the unemployed even a 100 lire in relief per day. He also quotes a communiqué of the Italian Socialist Party, blaming the Allies for the chaotic condition prevailing in the part of Italy occupied by them. « It would not do for the Inter-Allied Control Commission to interfere much longer with the affairs of Italian civilians. »

The Hungarian virtue of heroism must work miracles against the numerically superior enemy if this were to be achieved. This miracle, however, was within the limits of possibility if all Hungarians united in the struggle and fought to grim death.

BRITISH JOIN AMERICANS IN NEW OFFENSIVE; METZ INVESTED BY U.S. FORCES

LONDON, November 18 — Elements of the British 2nd Army joined with the American 9th Army today in a new offensive southeast of Geilenkirchen, and also attacked north of the town toward Geilenkirchen itself, it was reported late tonight. This is the first announcement that British troops are on this sector of the front.

The new Allied offensive, launched in clear weather and supported by tactical aircraft, gained 1½ miles against fairly stiff opposition and captured the town of Prummern, north of Immendorf. The new attack was synchronized with the assault by the U. S. 9th Army to the south which resulted captured Helden, to the southwest of Venlo, the main German communications center west of the Meuse.

Other British forces striking north toward Venlo have secured a number of bridgeheads over the Zig Canal, and have advanced three miles. To the south at Roermond, British troops are within one mile of the former road and rail center on the Meuse, and are along the banks of the Meuse on a 10-mile stretch.

The American 3rd Army drove several miles into Germany today, while other American forces invested the German fortress city of Metz.

Late dispatches reported that American troops entered the outskirts of Metz from the north and south, while other U. S. 3rd Army forces crossed one of the main bridges leading into the city from the west. Units of the 95th Infantry Division, northeast of the city, made gains of a mile and a half along a four-mile front from a point near Villers L'Orme to Mechy, on a secondary road leading northeast out of Metz.

The main road and rail lines leading out of the city have not yet been cut, but they are both under heavy artillery fire. Over 9,300 prisoners have been captured so far on this sector. To the south of the city, 5th Infantry Division forces are mopping-up remaining enemy units guarding the airfield.

Patton Crosses Reich Frontier

In a surprise northward drive, Lieut. Gen. George Patton's forces crossed the German border at the junction of France, Luxembourg, and Germany, and made an advance of two miles to Ober Perl. American forces are now along the German border on a 15-mile front, the southernmost advance placing Allied forces at Bouzonville, 10 miles directly west of the large Sear Basin city of Saarlautern.

The French 1st Army in a five mile advance today captured the large communications center of Montbellard, less than 10 miles south of Belfort. Other forces driving on Belfort are within six miles of the fortress dominating the main mountain pass into Germany. Late dispatches reported that French troops are fighting inside the western end of the vital gap.

French troops made considerable advances south of the Doubs River, and captured Seloncourt, just north of the Swiss frontier.

A London Times correspondent said that an estimated 1,250,000 men make up the six Allied armies driving into or toward Germany along the 450 mile front from the Swiss border to eastern Holland. The Allied armies are throwing their main weight against the three practical invasion routes into Germany, the dispatch continued. It is in the Aachen, the Moselle, and the Belfort Gap sectors that a flood of men and engines of a war of precision and power, never known before, is hurtling against the steel and concrete of a desperate enemy. Though the German fortified lines remain, the dispatch said, they have only weakened divisions to cover them. (OWI-Reuter-AP-BBC)

BRITISH JOIN AMERICANS IN NEW OFFENSIVE; METZ INVESTED BY U.S. FORCES

LONDON, November 18 — Elements of the British 2nd Army joined with the American 9th Army today in a new offensive southeast of Geilenkirchen, and also attacked north of the town toward Geilenkirchen itself, it was reported late tonight. This is the first announcement that British troops are on this sector of the front.

The new Allied offensive, launched in clear weather and supported by tactical aircraft, gained 1½ miles against fairly stiff opposition and captured the town of Prummern, north of Immendorf. The new attack was synchronized with the assault by the U. S. 9th Army to the south which resulted in the capture of Puffendorf, a minor road junction, and Würselen, three miles northeast of Aachen. Siersdorf and Setterich in the same sector were also taken.

On the main U. S. 9th Army front, American troops have thrown back three strong German counter-attacks supported by armor. The Germans are putting up heavy resistance to protect the vital industrial district of the Ruhr. American troops encountered elaborate enemy entrenchments and pillboxes.

To the south of the American 9th Army, troops of the U. S. 1st Army pushed beyond Gressenich, which they captured yesterday, and have driven to within eight miles of Düren, once a vital communications and supply center for the Ruhr defenses.

The American troops are moving ahead under intense shellfire from massed German guns. Bitter fighting is reported east of Stolberg. In some sectors of the front, however, there is some indication of the weakening of German resistance. Captured pillboxes, generally manned by 24 men, have been defended by three or four men.

American infantry moving across fields blocked by mile-long barbed-wire coils are blasting pillbox after pillbox. Thunderbolt fighter-bombers have been supporting ground operations.

To the north of the main Allied offensive, British 2nd Army troops pushed five miles southeast of Meijel and Late dispatches reported that American troops entered the outskirts of Metz from the north and south, while other U. S. 3rd Army forces crossed one of the main bridges leading into the city from the west. Units of the 95th Infantry Division, northeast of the city, made gains of a mile and a half along a four-mile front from a point near Villers L'Orme to Mechy, on a secondary road leading northeast out of Metz.

The main road and rail lines leading out of the city have not yet been cut, but they are both under heavy artillery fire. Over 9,300 prisoners have been captured so far on this sector. To the south of the city, 5th Infantry Division forces are mopping-up remaining enemy units guarding the airfield.

Patton Crosses Reich Frontier

In a surprise northward drive, Lieut. Gen. George Patton's forces crossed the German border at the junction of France, Luxembourg, and Germany, and made an advance of two miles to Ober Perl. American forces are now along the German border on a 15-mile front, the southernmost advance placing Allied forces at Bouzonville, 10 miles directly west of the large Saar Basin city of Saarlautern.

The French 1st Army in a five mile advance today captured the large communications center of Montbeliard, less than 10 miles south of Belfort. Other forces driving on Belfort are within six miles of the fortress dominating the main mountain pass into Germany. Late dispatches reported that French troops are fighting inside the western end of the vital gap.

French troops made considerable advances south of the Doubs River, and captured Seloncourt, just north of the Swiss frontier.

A London Times correspondent said that an estimated 1,250,000 men make up the six Allied armies driving into or toward Germany along the 450 mile front from the Swiss border to eastern Holland. The Allied armies are throwing their main weight against the three practical invasion routes into Germany, the dispatch continued. It is in the Aachen, the Moselle, and the Belfort Gap sectors that a flood of men and engines of a war of precision and power, never known before, is hurtling against the steel and concrete of a desperate enemy. Though the German fortified lines remain, the dispatch said, they have only weakened divisions to cover them. (OWI-Reuter-AP-BBC) closing in on Faenza from the east and south, it was announced today.

The enemy forces again in prepared positions after more than a week of protracted withdrawal held British tanks and infantry without gains along a three-mile wide front south of the Emilia Highway and four miles southeast of Faenza. Heaviest fighting occurred in the vicinity of a cross road, just southeast of the village of Fugna, hub of a network of secondary roads leading into Faenza across the farmlands south of the main highway.

While German forces held their new positions east of Faenza, Polish troops of the 8th Army, pushing up from the south, captured Monte Fortino, 5½ miles south of the Po Valley town, to tighten the cordon which is cutting into German defenses from two sides. German counter-attacks failed to relieve the Polish pressure at this end of the enemy's line, apparently based on the upper stretches of the Samoggia River.

With the enemy's withdrawal from the Forli area and the lowlands to the northeast, the 8th Army now holds an almost straight front of 30 miles, resting on its northeastern end on the flooded marshlands south of Ravenna, and at its southwestern end joining with 5th Army forces at Modigliano, 10 miles southwest of Faenza, and at the junction point of the Acccrata, Tramazzo, and Ibola Rivers.

Pushing steadily northwestward, despite German resistance which utilizes every stream and dominating feature to stiffen its delaying tactics, the 8th Army, in conjunction with the 5th, which pins the enemy's right flanks southeast of Bologna, is slowly scraping the Po plain clear of German forces.

Ravenna Isolated

As this scraper pushes along the southern rim of the valley, Ravenna and its surrounding area, hemmed in now on three sides by natural and German-diverted watercourses, is more and more left isolated.

Patrols of the 8th Army have reported no contact with enemy forces which withdrew following the blowing of the retaining banks of the Montone and the Ronco Estuary, just south of Ravenna, although mines were left scattered throughout this area.

Extensive minefields also were reported to the southwest, along the course of the Ronco and the Montone Rivers. Armor and artillery units forced the withdrawal of an enemy outpost just south of Ravenna Airfield, and inflicted casualties, while another small rear-guard force near Ghibullo on the Ronco and an outpost southeast of San Pancrazio, east of the river, were cleared.

Enemy planes showered incendiary bombs on Forli Thursday night, but little military damage resulted. Enemy planes also attempted to carry out an attack on Modigliano, captured Thursday by 5th Army Indian and British troops, but were repulsed by artillery fire. Enemy air forces were again active in the Livergano sector south of Bologna, but inflicted neither damage nor casualties.

Allied fighter-bombers were extremely active along the enemy's front opposite the 5th Army, striking at gun positions, command posts, bivouac areas, and supply dumps.

Despite clearing weather, roads remained rough and slippery on the 5th Army front, and some forward troops still have to be supplied by means of rubber boats, to ferry swollen mountain streams. (PRO) from the Germans the direction of the main blows, and to deny the Germans the advantage of air reconnaissance.

RED ARMY GAINS IN NORTHEAST HUNGARY

"In these conditions, no-man's-land along the whole front is now a hunting ground of ghostly, hooded figures in snow-camouflage overalls, sometimes meeting in fierce silent encounter with bayonet or gun-butt."

AMERICANS CONTINUE DRIVE ON LEYTE

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 18 — An American force has driven a deep wedge into isolated Japanese pockets north of Limon on the Island of Leyte, while other units have established a strong roadblock on the Ormoc Road below Limon, a key village on the mountain pass road leading from Pinamopoan to the Ormoc corridor.

The U. S. 32nd Division, whose presence in the Philippines was mentioned for the first time in General MacArthur's communique last night, is now deployed in the sector north of the front Japanese line and has contacted isolated enemy strongpoints.

Action on Leyte Island is now swirling south of Limon.

The Japanese made a desperate effort to send a truck convoy through to their troops north of Limon. The convoy was sighted and destroyed by American fighter-planes, the communique said.

Fifteen out of 30 Japanese planes attacking American military installations at Dulag, on the eastern coast of Leyte, were shot down by intercepting American planes, and three more were destroyed by anti-aircraft fire.

Unescorted American Liberator bombers hit airfields in the Davao region on the Island of Mindanao yesterday with 1,200 tons of bombs. Whole areas of the enemy airfields were devastated by the attack, dispatches said.

The Navy Department last night identified the six ships lost in the Philippine naval engagements in the period of October 22 to 27. They were the light carrier, Princeton; two escort carriers, the Saint Lo and Ganibier Bay; two destroyers, the Johnston and Hoel; and one destroyer escort, the Samuel B. Roberts.

Jap Naval Disaster Summarized

Describing the six-day naval action in the longest naval communique of the war, the Navy Department said the "Japanese are still wondering what hit them." The communique gave the complete story of the engagements which ranged from Formosa to the southern Philippines.

Against the American loss of six warships, the Japanese lost two battleships, four carriers, six heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, and "an undetermined number of destroyers," all of them definitely sunk, the communique said. So severely damaged that they may have sunk before reaching port were one Japanese battleship, three heavy cruisers, two light cruisers, and seven destroyers. In addition, damaging hits were scored on six battleships, four heavy cruisers, one light cruisers, and 10 destroyers.

"The victory not only made possible the continuing supply of men and munitions to General Douglas MacArthur's successful invasion forces, but, by its magnitude, can conservatively be said to have greatly reduced future casualties in both men and waterborne equipment," the communique said.

Australian armed forces will take an integral part in the crushing of Japan, Sir Frederick Eggleston, newly appointed Australian Minister to The United States, said yesterday at a press conference in Washington. He emphasized that the complete defeat of Japan was unequivocally essential to peace and stability in the Pacific. One stage of future Australian operations will be to clear out the Japanese from islands bypassed in the drive to the Philippines. An estimated 250,000 Japanese are still entrenched in the area between Leyte Island and the Solomons, includ-

MOSCOW, November 18 — Marshal Malinovsky's troops made further advances all along the northeastern sector of the Hungarian front extending from the Saja Valley south of Miskoicz to Tura, 20 miles northeast of Budapest, and captured Tura, Ledasha, Kal, Kerecsen, Huszebech, Hort, and several other places.

Commenting on Russian strategy in northern Hungary, the London Times correspondent in Moscow said today that from their newly-won positions, the Russians now have a double opportunity.

"They can either concentrate on the envelopment of Pest by a wheeling movement towards the Danube north of the capital, or, leaving the fate of the city to the forces pressing in from the south and southeastward, they can by-pass the Matra Mountains, and run up toward southern Slovakia, only 30 miles away."

No changes were reported on other sectors of the Russian front in tonight's Soviet communique. The usual figure of enemy tank losses was not given, though 19 enemy aircraft were reported to have been shot down.

All along the Soviet-German front, from East Prussia to the Polish plains, a "bloodless, but none the less furious, contest between concrete mixers and transport" is going on, a Moscow dispatch said today, as the Germans desperately try to perfect a new east wall before the storm breaks, and the Russians amass troops, tanks, and guns for a big push.

"As in previous years," the dispatch continued, "a big effort is being made by the Soviet High Command to conceal

CHINESE TIGHTEN GRIP ON BHAMO; ISHAN FALLS

KANDY, CEYLON, November 18 — In northeast Burma, troops of the Chinese 38th Division are tightening and stiffening the ring around the Japanese stronghold of Bhamo, in preparation for the final drive on the town.

Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's command announced today that the Chinese troops expanded the wedge driven into Japanese positions along the Namhkan Road, southeast of Bhamo, to clear a land route to China.

It was announced that the Chinese, striking from the east of the town, advanced southwestward across two main roads and reached the Irrawaddy River, cutting the last Japanese routes to the south of Bhamo.

On the Chindwin front, Allied troops pushed southward from Kalemyo for more than 10 miles toward Mandalay.

Japanese forces advancing in Kwangsi Province of South China have captured Ishan, on the Kweichow-Kwangsi railroad, Exchange Telegraph reported today. Ishan is a railroad city about 113 miles southeast of Kweilin.

A communique from General Wedemeyer's Headquarters today announced that bombers of the 14th USAAF have destroyed hundreds of Japanese troops and pack and cavalry horses in attacks on railroads and roads in the Liuchow-Ishan area.

In central China, the communique continued, bombers of Maj. Gen. Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing attacked shipping on the Yangtze, destroying a power launch and six smaller boats. In a daylight attack, heavy bombers hit Changsha, in Hunan Province.

Northern-based fighters of the 14th USAAF, striking deep into Japanese-occupied territory as far as Hsuchow, approximately 150 miles west of the Yellow Sea, destroyed 21 locomotives on the Lunghai railroad. There was no enemy interception.

An Associated Press correspondent in a dispatch from Chungking today quotes General Wedemeyer as saying that «the Japanese situation in northern Burma is deteriorating.» When Bhamo (terminus of the northern branch of the Burma Road) falls, General Wedemeyer believes «it will be definitely precarious.» The General added that the prospective opening of the Ledo Road and the reopening of the Burma Road would enable the Chinese to receive heavy guns and other equipment which could not be brought in by air.»

Indian Army casualties up to the end of the fifth year of war total nearly 140,000, it was officially announced today. The figures showed 15,000 killed, more than 39,000 wounded, and over 7,500 missing and the rest prisoners of war.

Officials at the Dodge Automobile Division of the Chrysler Corporation in Detroit, Michigan, today announced that they have begun shipping thousands of trucks to haul munitions and personnel over the Burma and Ledo Roads and other areas of the Chinese war theater. (OWI)

MISCELLANEOUS GERMAN TARGETS BOMBED

LONDON, November 18 — A strong force of RAF Halifaxes with fighter escort today attacked Münster, the big rail junction and water communications center through which German troops and war materials pass to the Holland battlefield.

Mustangs and Thunderbolts of the 8th USAAF were also out today, 400 of them attacking oil storage dumps, airfields, and oil wagons in the Munich, Ulm, and Hanau areas of southern Germany.

Still another Allied air force participated in today's assault on Germany when over 100 Thunderbolts and Lightnings of the 9th USAAF attacked enemy troop concentrations, communications, and gun positions in the Aachen-Gellenkirchen-Düren area. Other fighter-bombers attacked Aldenhoven, Jülich, and Grevenbroich, dropped fragmentation bombs on Stolberg, and bombed road and rail transport at Saarlautern, Neunkirchen, and Leinigen, all in support of the drive toward Cologne.

Last night, RAF planes flew to the Goteborg Archipelago, off the Swedish coast, and attacked a German convoy. A ship believed to be carrying ammunition blew up and sank after receiving a direct hit.

Enemy air activity was directed against southern England last night, causing damages and casualties, it was announced today. (OWI-Reuter)

M.A.A.F HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK VIENNA AREA

AFHQ, ITALY, November 18 — Escorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF today attacked military targets in the Vienna area and four German airfields in northeastern Italy, it was announced here this evening.

The targets in the Vienna area were not disclosed, but the attacks were once again carried out by employment of newly-developed instrument bombardment techniques.

The four Italian airfields hit by the heavy bombers were those at Udine and nearby Aviano, and at Villafranca and Vicenza, southwest and northeast of Verona. Intense flak was encountered in the Vienna area.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force today carried out successful sweeps against bridges, gun positions, and rolling stock in the Brescia and Verona areas. Thunderbolt fighter-bombers carried out close-combat assaults on enemy positions in the Bologna battle area.

Yesterday, in a series of air attacks by USAAF and RAF heavy bombers and medium bombers, the Mediterranean Allied Air Force tore up road and rail bridges along the escape route of trapped German forces in the Balkans, and subjected these forces to heavy hammering, it was announced today.

Medium bombers, used for the first time in 11 months in attacks against Yugoslav targets, struck three bridges, 75 miles southeast, 40 miles southeast and 10 miles northwest of Zagreb.

RAF Wellington bombers, now employed in daylight operations, attacked German transport columns on two stretches of road in southern Yugoslavia, near Sjenica. Another formation made direct hits on a group of over 60 enemy motor vehicles parked near Prijelpolje. Liberators bombed the Zagreb and the Maribor rail yards, on the main line running into Austria from Yugoslavia.

RAF night bombers attacked two airfields near Udine and Vicenza in northeastern Italy, obtaining a direct hit on runways and buildings. (PRO)

GENERAL CLARK STRESSES ROLE OF A.A.I.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 18 — Lt. Gen. Mark Clark, Commanding General, Allied 5th Army, yesterday told officers and men of his command assembled to receive awards and combat commissions that the Allied armies in Italy have kept 25 German divisions engaged in Italy and away from the crucial western and eastern fronts in the past two months, it was announced here today.

Comparing the rôle of the 5th and 8th Armies to football guards and tackles, General Clark said that these troops had blocked strong enemy forces while the main Allied armies drove into the Reich from the west and the east. Some 40,000 of the enemy's forces in Italy have been «knocked out» in this two-month period.

NAZIS RAZED PORT OF ROTTERDAM

WASHINGTON, November 18 — The Netherlands Government reports that the Germans have destroyed all the port facilities of Rotterdam, the third-largest harbor of Europe, a London dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune said yesterday.

After looting warehouses and removing all useful machinery to Germany, the dispatch said, the Nazis began razing the port on the night of September 22, and continued dynamiting it for two weeks.

Three of the largest inner ports, the Waal, the Maas, and the Rhine harbors, were the first objectives. All the Rotterdam quays rested on wooden pilings. The Nazis fixed underwater time-bombs to them, and when the foundations went, the concrete quays broke and slithered down to the harbor bottom. Large sheds and cranes disappeared into the water.

The Nazis also set fire to oil tanks, warehouses, and even entire dwelling districts of Dutch harbor workers. The damage is estimated at 1,000 million dollars, the dispatch said.

Rotterdam's secondary ports, Vlaardingen, Schiedam, and Maasluis, were treated in the same manner. (OWI)

FROM FRONT LINE ITALY TO HOME LEAVE

ROME, November 18 — Muddy, begrimed, and unshaven, certain British infantrymen have had the unusual experience of being in the Italian front line on one day, and aboard a Britain-bound troopship some two days later.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

These soldiers were being sent on a month's leave in England under the scheme referred to by Prime Minister Churchill in the House of Commons yesterday, by which a number of men who have fought overseas for long periods are being given a month's leave at home. The scheme, which is already operating in some units in Italy, often entails the taking of small parties of men straight from the front line and transporting them directly to the port of embarkation.

There were two instances recently when parties of men from British line regiments — unshaven and in mud-soaked uniforms — found themselves on a home-bound ship after being in the line a day or so earlier. (UNN)

ALBANIANS OUSTING GERMANS FROM TIRANA

MARSHAL TITO'S HQ, YUGOSLAVIA, November 18 — Fierce fighting is in progress in Tirana, capital of Albania, and troops of the National Army of Liberation have taken the city hall, radio station, and other municipal buildings, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

The Germans now hold only scattered points in Albania, and their lines of communication are under ceaseless attack. The Yugoslavs are also inflicting heavy losses on the enemy in Montenegro, and heavy fighting is reported from western Serbia, where the Germans are attempting to hold open an escape route from the Cacek area to the south. FINNISH CABINET MEETS HELSINKI, November 18 — Finland's new cabinet, under the premiership of Juho K. Paasikivi, held its first meeting yesterday; appointment of seven additional members of the cabinet was announced.

The Finnish radio quoted Paasikivi as saying at the meeting that Finland has fulfilled and will continue to fulfill the terms of the armistice with the Soviet Government. He also asserted that Finland will maintain and develop cordial economic and cultural relations with Sweden.

Paasikivi said that he had «attempted to compose a government in such a way that it represents in every possible way the political situation in Finland.»

The new additions to the cabinet are: M. Pekkala, Social Democrat, Minister Without Portfolio; R. Svento, Social Democrat, Assistant Foreign Minister; U. Kekkonen, Agrarian, Minister for Justice; S. SOVIETS CELEBRATE «ARTILLERY DAY»

MOSCOW, November 18 — The anniversary of the beginning of the Red Army's offensive at Stalingrad, which has been designated «Artillery Day» by the Soviet Government, will be observed tomorrow with 224-gun salutes in the capitals of Soviet Union republics, press dispatches said today.

Artillery was the factor that turned the German tide, and it was the heavy concentration of Soviet heavy gun-fire that sent the Germans recoiling time and again from the Volga. It was with this in mind that the Soviets chose to name the anniversary «Artillery Day,» the dispatches said.

At Stalingrad, the Red Army had one gun for every four yards of front. Later, at Kiev in 1943, it had one gun for every three yards, and in 1944, on the Karelian Isthmus, one for every two yards.

But the German artillery opposing the Soviet was far from insignificant, the dispatches pointed out. Between 1940 and 1943, all Europe manufactured guns for the Germans.

CAPTURED SUB IN SERVICE OF R.N.

LONDON, November 18 — A German submarine, captured in August, 1941, after a depth charge attack by a Hudson bomber of the Coastal Command off the coast of Iceland, is now in the service of the Royal Navy, a Reuter dispatch said today.

The submarine, with the German designation U-570, was captured intact and is now manned by a selected British crew. Its main task is to hunt U-boats. (Reuter)

ARNOLD PAYS TRIBUTE TO LEIGH-MALLORY

WASHINGTON, November 18 — American concern over reports that Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory is missing was voiced last night by General H. H. Arnold, Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Army Air Forces.

General Arnold said: «The news that he is missing in action is of grave concern, not only to the British Empire, which he so ably represented, but to The United States as well. His contribution toward the successful prosecution of the war has been tremendous, and his handling of the USAAF units under his control has been outstanding. We stand to lose a friend and an extremely capable commander.»

General Arnold expressed the hope that the missing Air Marshal might yet be found alive. Sir Trafford, accompanied by Lady Leigh-Mallory, was flying to the Far East to take up his new appointment. The plane in which he was travelling left England on November 14.

A London message stated today that the RAF authorities have not yet given up hope of finding Sir Trafford's aeroplane. A search is still going on, and search parties are combing areas on the plane's route.

One theory advanced is that the plane may have been shot down by a German long-range fighter. (Reuter)

ALLIES RAISE EMPLOYEES' WAGES

ROME, November 18 — On the joint recommendation of the Allied Commission and of the chief military employers of civilian labor in liberated Italy, the Allied Forces Local Resources Board has authorized a general wage increase to all employees of the armed forces in Italian Government territory, effective 16 November 1944, in order to meet the increased cost of living, it was announced today.

The increases range from 40 to 60 lire a day, the larger amount applying to employees in the lower pay categories. These increases constitute a temporary cost-of-living bonus, which is added to the workers' present pay predicated on the basic rate of 1 October 1944.

Examples of how the new increases will affect present pay scales follow:

A worker now receiving 85 lire a day will get an increase of 60 lire, making his new wage 145 lire.

A worker getting 140 lire a day will receive an increase of 50 lire, making his new wage 190 lire.

A worker earning as much as 185 will have an extra 40 lire, bringing his wage up to 225 lire.

In granting the increases, the armed forces recognized the necessity of an upward adjustment in wages to meet higher prices, so that there should be no impediment to the

FINNISH CABINET MEETS

HELSINKI, November 18 — Finland's new cabinet, under the premiership of Juho K. Paasikivi, held its first meeting yesterday; appointment of seven additional members of the cabinet was announced.

The Finnish radio quoted Paasikivi as saying at the meeting that Finland has fulfilled and will continue to fulfill the terms of the armistice with the Soviet Government. He also asserted that Finland will maintain and develop cordial economic and cultural relations with Sweden.

Paasikivi said that he had «attempted to compose a government in such a way that it represents in every possible way the political situation in Finland.»

The new additions to the cabinet are: M. Pekkala, Social Democrat, Minister Without Portfolio; R. Svento, Social Democrat, Assistant Foreign Minister; U. Kekkonen, Agrarian, Minister for Justice; S. The Soviet guns, the correspondent said, fought and won the duel with the entire armaments industry of the Continent ranged against them. (OWI)

MANILA BAY VIRTUALLY USELESS TO JAPANESE

ABOARD A CARRIER FLAGSHIP OFF THE PHILLIPINES, Undated — American carrier-based planes have rendered Manila Bay and its Cavite Naval Base in the Philippines «virtually useless to the enemy,» a delayed dispatch from an American press correspondent quoting U.S. Navy pilots, said today.

«After nearly two months of attacks, Manila Bay's once-excellent anchorage is a shambles, according to reconnaissance photographs, which show many half-submerged hulks in the comparatively shallow waters of both Manila and Cavite,» the dispatch added.

«Effective bombing of the shore installations and the constant threat of American air attacks have had the net effect of depriving the Japanese of these bases. The old floating drydock USS Dewey, which first was hit Septem-

COUNTERFEIT NOTES IN CIRCULATION

ROME, November 18 — Counterfeit Allied military currency, 1,000 and 500-lire notes, which are known to be in circulation in the Rome area, can be detected only by careful examination, an official of the Rome Area Allied Command said today.

The notes, which are usually passed by Italian women on the street who approach Allied soldiers and ask for change, are good imitations of the genuine bills. There are, however, a few characteristics by which the fake notes can be detected. The bogus 1,000-Lire notes are printed on paper of inferior quality, and the blue lines in the words «Allied Military Currency» stand out more than on the genuine notes.

On the reverse side, the figures 1,000 can be seen through from the other side without putting it to the light.

Counterfeiters have made a 50-lire note into 500 by simply adding a zero. These bills are more difficult to detect, but the green ink on the note is paler than on the genuine, and the small lines around the figure 500 are not very fine. (UNN)

FASCIST LEGAL PROVISION ABOLISHED

ROME, November 18 — Crimes committed against officials of the Fascist Party are no longer to be considered as having been committed against servants of the State, it was decided today by the Italian Supreme Court of Justice.

This decision is in accordance with the decree of 27 July 1944, which «abrogates all penal provisions issued by the Fascist Government to safeguard its institutions and political organs.»

The decision was provoked by the case of Dr. Giuseppe Magnotti, who appealed for reconsideration of his sentence of 24 years confinement for having murdered, in July 1936, the Secretary of the local Avellino Fascist organisation «in his capacity as a Public Servant.» (UNN)

GENERAL FAVAGROSSA SUSPENDED

ROME, November 18 — Army Corps General Carlo Favagrossa, Minister of Production in the Badoglio Government, has been suspended from his duties by order of the Assistant High Commissioner for Epuration, Mauro Scoccimarro, it was announced today.

Before the Armistice, General Favagrossa was, first, Commissioner for War Production and, later, Under Secretary of State. (UNN)

NEW ROME POLICE CHIEF CALLS FOR ALERTNESS

ROME, November 18 — «There will be no room for those who shirk their duties,» said Luigi Ferrari, newly appointed Chief of Police, in a recent order of the day issued to all ranks of the Corps of Public Security, it was announced here today.

In this order of the day, Ferrari said:

«I have assumed control of public security aware of the difficulties which I must overcome in order to infuse new life into a Corps sorely tried by political and wartime vicissitudes.»

Speaking of the efforts being made to improve the moral and material welfare of the Corps, Ferrari said:

«In spite of the scanty resources at the disposal of the Administration, the reconstructive activity of the Government, together with the benevolent assistance of the Allies, gives you assurance of the most favorable conditions possible in the difficulties under which the great majority of citizens, especially state functionaries, are suffering.

«It is, therefore, only right to expect that the Corps will justify the hopes placed in it.

ALLIES AID OLIVE OIL DRIVE

ROME, November 18 — As an aid to the current campaign to collect the products on the olive-oil harvest in the People's Oil Pools (Oliari del Popolo), 3,000 petroleum drums have been lent by the British Army, the Allied Commission announced today.

The drums are being cleaned and repaired by the Army, and will be allocated where the lack of oil-storage is most acute, AC's Agriculture Sub-Commission reported.

Provincial agricultural committees are meeting weekly to discuss methods to improve the Oliari del Popolo plan.

Bari Province has organized its communes into zones under control of groups composed of the three law-enforcing bodies — the Carabinieri, the Guardie di Finanza, and the Guardie di Questura.

The purpose of this zoning is to avoid overlapping, and to conserve manpower in supervising deliveries of the oil to Oliari del Popolo, officials of the Italian Ministry of Agriculture pointed out.

Further enterprise was demonstrated in some provinces where arrangements are being made for individuals from several adjoining communes to hold combined meetings at which members of the provincial committee will participate.

In some areas, sub-committees are being formed to discuss wage problems, prices for pressing olives, and recommendations to prefects on the granting, refusal, or cancelling of licenses to oil-press owners.

In some provinces the press-owners (frantoiani) have formed small committees to advise prefects and agricultural inspectors on the suitability of press-owners for licenses.

Organisation and Coöperation

Mayors (sindaci) are expected to coöperate closely with communal committees, police agencies, and the UCSEA (Uffici Comunale Statistico e Economico dell'Agricoltura — the farm statistical organization) in supervising the oil-presses, local sales, production, and stocks of oil, officials said.

Formation of road-touring squads consisting of four men (representatives of the three policing agencies and UCSEA) to insure delivery of all products from the oil-presses to Oliari del Popolo also is under consideration.

The general opinion today from provincial and communal meetings is that the price fixed by the Italian Government is satisfactory. These prices (for example, 6,000 lire a quintal for first-grade oil) are nearly four times higher than the 1942-43 prices.

The Italian Ministry of Agriculture has notified all prefects, sindacos, agrarian officials, and agricultural inspectors of the strict enforcement methods to punish evaders of Oliari del Popolo.

Officials also have received instructions on how to submit requirements for fuel, power for oil presses, solvents, and transport, subject to the amount available.

Because the provincial and communal committees shouldered neighborhood responsibility reasonably well in the summer campaign for Granai del Popolo, these committees have been retained to support Oliari del Popolo, Italian officials declared.

In fact, the possibility of elevating these committees to

YUGOSLAV FOREIGN COMMISSAR ARRIVES IN ROME

ROME, November 18 — The Commissar for Foreign Affairs of the Yugoslav Committee for National Liberation, Dr. Josip Smodlaka, has arrived in Rome to take up the additional post of Yugoslav delegate in the Advisory Council for Italy, it was announced today.

The announcement, made by the Yugoslav Delegation to the Advisory Council, said that the new delegate will have the personal rank of Ambassador.

Dr. Smodlaka represented Yugoslavia at the Versailles Peace Conference, and was subsequently Minister to the Vatican, Madrid, and Berlin. He resigned following King Alexander's assumption of dictatorial powers, in 1929. (UNN)

REHABILITATION OF VIA EMILIA DESCRIBED

WITH A.A.I., November 18 — Rehabilitation of the Via Emilia, course of one of Italy's greatest motor roads, is described by a United Nations News correspondent in a dispatch today. He wrote:

«Via Emilia is the ladder up which the 8th Army is climbing rung by rung — S. Arcangelo, Savignano, Cesena, Forlimpopoli, and Forli lie behind them, and they are now reaching out for Faenza. Via Emilia is rapidly being restored to its former perfection. Its surface suffered from shelling and the wear and tear of heavy transport, vehicles piled high with equipment for men and guns, and massive tanks.

«Today, Italians are working feverishly repairing the road, filling holes, and removing ruts and bumps. The Italians are tackling the job in an enthusiasm born of their knowledge that their task has a dual purpose aiding both the Allied war effort and the reconstruction of Italy.» (UNN)

AMERICAN WAR VETERANS PROMISED LAND

WASHINGTON, November 18 — Millions of acres of irrigated land will be made available to American veterans, President Roosevelt announced yesterday in a message to the National Reclamation Association's annual convention in Denver, Colorado. The war veterans will be given the opportunity to purchase land at reasonable prices, before other persons.

Mr. Roosevelt said that The United States «must make a place on the land for large numbers of returning servicemen» under a program which will follow a «well established reclamation policy,» and «preserve the family farm, which has been a key institution in the development of our democracy.»

American plans for the development of new river basins dwarf all engineering developments ever attempted, Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, told the Association. (OWI)

POST-WAR BRITISH CIVIL SERVICE PLAN

LONDON, November 18 — Further details of the post-war recruitment scheme for the British Civil Service, embodied in a White Paper accepted yesterday by the Government, have been published today. The most notable points are as follows:

1. Of vacancies that have «accrued» during the war, not less than 75 per cent in administrative classes, 66 2/3 per cent in executive classes, and 50 per cent in clerical classes will be filled by ex-servicemen, including men from the Merchant Navy.

Other «accrued» vacancies will be open to civilians who have lost the normal opportunities of entry to the service, and are faced with the problem of beginning a new career.

A proportion of the remaining vacancies are to be reserved for ex-service women.

2. Recruitment will be through «reconstruction competitions» — written examinations in general subjects, and interviews. Examinations and preliminary training will be held, in many cases, abroad, but appointees will have to wait the normal time of release from the services.

Competitions will extend over a long enough period to give the last man out of service as good a chance as the first, with sympathetic treatment of prisoners of war recommended.

3. Present temporary civil servants will have to enter competition to secure permanent establishment.

This scheme, the Times says, «achieves a proper balance between the community's need for public service of a high quality, and the legitimate claims of a generation of men and women deprived by the war of the normal chances of entering public service.» (MOI)

INSIDE GERMANY

HITLER REMAINS SILENT; DISORDER INCREASES

WASHINGTON, November 18 — Hitler today remained silent and invisible, his condition — or his fate — a mystery to all but the members of the innermost Nazi councils, while from within Germany come reports which indicated widespread disorder and defeatism.

These reports told of growing passive resistance in the Rhineland and in parts of East Prussia, of a peace demonstration suppressed by the Gestapo in western Germany, of terrible epidemics in Nazi-dominated Austria, of arrests and shootings, and of terror powerless to halt a growing disintegration.

Dispatches from neutral European capitals reaching here today indicated that Hitler may still be alive in Berchtesgaden, but is rapidly failing in mental and physical health and kept from violent outbursts only by a fantastic stream of false news reports about German «victories.»

A British Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Stockholm said the Nazi Party chieftains had erected an elaborate wall of silence around the Führer to prevent his learning the actual extent of the military reverses suffered by Germany since midsummer. The dispatch added:

«On the advice of Hitler's physicians, a special news staff was set up at Berchtesgaden under the personal supervision of Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Himmler's right-hand man and chief of the Reich security office, to edit a special «good news» edition of the Völkischer Beobachter.

«Printed daily, the Berchtesgaden edition of Hitler's favorite newspaper contains only the most favorable 'news' from the fighting fronts, and carefully doctored stories picturing the German people as fanatically loyal to their Führer.»

Radio Moscow said yesterday that a famous surgeon and other physicians are attending Hitler at Berchtesgaden. The broadcast identified the surgeon as Professor Otto Sauerbruch, long labelled as an anti-Nazi who normally would be called to attend Hitler only on the most serious occasion.

An American dispatch from Berne, Switzerland, today said that Nazi authorities have ordered censorship of all domestic mail in Germany, presumably in an effort to prevent the spread of unrest stirred up by the military reverses and Hitler's prolonged silence. (OWI)

SPANISH UNION REJECTS PROVISIONAL PLAN

LONDON, November 18 — The Spanish National Union, representing mainly Spanish Communists, issued a statement today refusing to support Sr. Maura, the exiled right wing Republican, in his plan for negotiating with France for the formation of a provisional government, the BBC reported.

In its statement, the Spanish National Union claims to be the only organization uniting all Spanish anti-Fascists. (BBC)

FRANCO FORCES REPRESSING MAQUIS

WASHINGTON, November 18 — A press association dispatch from Paris which quoted «advices from the Spanish frontier» said the Franco Government was taking «drastic repressive measures» against known Republican sympathizers, and spoke of an attack by Maquis on an ammunition convoy in the region of Gerona. Maquis were reported to have fired a factory in Seville which was working for the Germans. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 18 — Today's communiqué:

Allied Armies in Italy:

West of Forli, Polish troops of the 8th Army have captured Monte Fortino and repulsed several counter-attacks.

Elsewhere, patrols have been active without any sub-[illegible] bridges over the Canal de Derivation [Zig Canal] at a junction of the Noorer Canal.

Northwest of Roermond, the village of Horn was freed.

Trains in the Dutch-German frontier zone at several points between Legden and München-Gladbach were attacked by fighter-bombers.

In the sector between Geilenkirchen and Blamont, our forces continued to advance in face of heavy artillery fire and stiffening resistance. We have taken Gressenich, eight miles southwest of Düren.

Fighter-bombers gave support to ground forces attacking fortified towns and ground defenses and rail and road targets behind enemy lines. Gun positions, strongpoints, troops concentrations, and supply dumps were attacked, and locomotives, railroad cars, and road transport were destroyed.

Action ranged from Düren, Jülich, and Aachen in the north, through the area of the Saar Valley, and from Metz to Colmar and Mulhouse in the south.

Medium bombers attacked a supply depot at Hagenau.

Five enemy aircraft were shot down in the course of the day's operations, while 15 were destroyed on the ground near Frankfurt.

Twelve of our aircraft are missing.

Advances were made by our ground forces at many points along a 100-mile sector between Blamont and the Swiss border.

Several villages were taken in the vicinity of Blamont and south of Saint Dié. Other villages in the path of our advance were burned by the enemy.

In Belfort Gap, our armored and infantry forces made new gains, reaching Montbeliard and a number of other towns southwest of Belfort. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, November 18 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in Hungary, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Gernat-Meneki, Shayolat, Tishtokay, Novay, Andornak, Kerechen, Kapolna, Tep, Hot, Tura, and Svalko, and the railway stations of Huszebech, Kal, Ludash, and Hort.

On other sectors of the front there were no changes.

During November 17, in aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 19 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 18 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In Liguria, Patriot action is continually increasing with, as special object, the lines of communication converging on Genoa.

Roads most frequently under attack have been the Chiavari-Scoffera-Novi Ligure, Genoa-Bargagli, and Genoa-Busalla routes, and the Genoa-Novi Ligure Autostrada.

On November 3, Torriglia on the Genoa-Piacenza road fell under Patriot control, and 400 officers and men of a Fascist Alpine brigade were captured, together with all their arms and equipment.

The Nazi-Fascists react to this activity by furious mopping-up operations, by deporting to Germany those under arrest, or forcing them to work on fortifications in the same zone.

On November 5, in Emilia, a violent clash occurred between two brigades of Modena Patriots and three German columns which attempted to attack them. More than 250 of the enemy were killed, and many wounded. The Patriots lost 40 men.

Allied Armies in Italy:

West of Forli, Polish troops of the 8th Army have captured Monte Fortino and repulsed several counter-attacks.

Elsewhere, patrols have been active without any substantial changes in our forward positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday bombed targets in Germany, Austria, Hungary, and Yugoslavia.

Tactical Air Force medium bombers bombed communication targets in northern Italy and in Yugoslavia.

Fighter-bombers, fighters, and light bombers supported the armies in Italy in great strength, attacking close-support targets in the battle area and communication lines.

Shipping in the Adriatic and communications and troop concentrations in Yugoslavia were also attacked.

Last night, medium and heavy bombers attacked rail targets in northern Italy.

Eighteen of our heavy bombers and 10 other aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew about 2,500 sorties. (PRO)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 18 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Yesterday, the battle at Aix la Chapelle flared up to the greatest fury on a front of more than 70 kilometers. Both sides fight ferociously, with strong tank and artillery forces, in rainy and foggy weather.

North of Aix la Chapelle, our troops, in exemplary steadfastness, smashed the enemy attacks which were repeated up to 42 times. The enemy suffered high losses in fluctuating fighting for some hard-fought localities. During the first two days of the defensive battle, 122 U. S. tanks were destroyed.

East of Diedenhofen, yesterday, our troops were engaged in extremely grim fighting. The enemy succeeded in advancing farther eastward.

Enemy spearheads were halted at the fringes of Metz.

In the Mörchingen sector, the U. S. divisions, having suffered heavy losses, did not continue their major attacks.

In the northern parts of the western Vosges and at the Burgandy Gate, the fierce fighting against advancing U. S. and French formations continues.

London and the Antwerp area were again subjected to the bombardment with our long-range weapons.

Italy:

Successful German operations are reported from Italy.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, our movements are being carried out according to plans.

Between Budapest and the Miskolcz area, the Bolsheviks time and again tried unsuccessfully in repeated attacks to force a break-through in the defensive battle. German and Hungarian formations, in powerful counter-thrusts, succeeded in maintaining the front intact. The enemy again suffered high losses in tanks and men.

In the other sectors of the eastern front, the day went by without major fighting.

Air:

Our Air Force attacked enemy supply columns, destroyed a goods train and set 14 others on fire.

Anglo-American terror bombers attacked Vienna, Salzburg, and localities in Upper Silesia. In addition, bombs were indiscriminately dropped on western and southwestern Germany.

Twenty-seven enemy bombers were brought down.

GERMAN

German Silence on Western Front: At a time when the Allies are launching a series of drives on this front from Holland to the Swiss border and have entered Metz with patrols, the German Radio and news agencies tonight have so far kept a complete silence concerning both Metz and the western front as a whole. The latest German statement on this entire front remains the communiqué of mid-afternoon, printed above.

Eastern Front: Tonight, the German News Agency analyzes the Russian military strategy and foresees in a frank and sober tone an apparently serious threat to what remains of the German position in the Balkans. « In the south, the Bolsheviks have assembled a considerable part of their attacking potential on the Hungarian battlefield, with the following aim: to wear down Hungary, and to cut off the German forces situated in the Balkans. »

The silver lining in these cloudy prospects is the commentator's belief that this Bolshevik concentration on the above sector of the front must, by its very nature, result in « drawing off forces from other sectors » which will be correspondingly less menaced by Soviet « attack. »

Foreign Workers Decorated: In pursuance of its established trend of claiming eager collaboration from the non-German fellow-tenants in the fortress of Germany, German sources tonight announce the medals awarded to « guest workers in German armament plants » for their « distinguished service. » Their « extraordinary attitude » is lauded.

Not worthy is the striking difference in the number of teen medals are bestowed upon Croatians, and an even smaller handful on Hungarians, Swiss, and Spaniards.

Military: News from the Italian front is scanty in scope and relatively optimistic in trend. The main stress continues to be the confidence-evoking one of picturing military operations as more or less stalled by the winter lull. Even the Allied drive south of Faenza is being presented as no great exception to this phase of martial hibernation, the drive being characterized as « blocked by the resistance offered by German troops, which have inflicted serious losses. »

A later broadcast adds that the Allied resumption of operations in the western Apennines, north of Grottaroto-da, has likewise been blocked. This was done by « wiping out American 5th Army formations » which had admittedly « infiltrated into German positions. » In consequence, listeners are reassured that « the main fighting line has been reëstablished. » In similar vein, the Bologna sector is briefly dismissed as « unchanged. »

Bullitt versus Togliatti: The Fascist Radio devotes considerable attention, to Bullitt's already much-dissussed article in Life magazine, « whose circulation far exceeds that of all other similar magazines. » The former American ambassador to Paris is cited as the source for the allegation that the Communist leader Togliatti « received the sum of 25,000 dollars from Stalin on leaving Russia for Italy. »

The dispute between Bullitt and Togliatti is presented, with malevolent neutrality, in a manner calculated equally to discredit the character of both men. The Communist leader is pictured to Italian listeners as a thoroughly avaricious, as well as shady plotter, while his opponent Bullitt is scorned as « a Jew, prominent in Freemasonry. »

Anniversary of Sanctions Against Italy: Today, the anniversary of Allied sanctions against Italy, is the occasion for stern warnings from Fascist radio commentators to the Italian people. The lengthy excoriations are addressed most particularly to that supposedly significant group of ex-Fascists, now turn-coats, who once were strong supporters of the idea of an Imperial Italy; the period in question is, naturally, the Ethiopian War. These once Fascist leaders (who now « send telegrams to the Negus imploring his forgiveness, and asking him to open the gates of Abyssinia to Italian imigration. ») are blamed for not remaining faithful long enough for Italy to realize the benefits of the Ethiopian and other (projected) imperial campaigns. Instead, the Fascist radio objects, they have, by their abandonment of Fascism's ideals, played into the hands of British Mediterranean imperialism.

At this point of attack, the commentators remind the Italians that Britain herself at first tolerated the Italian Ethiopian venture, after her own designs on Ethiopia and the Nile had failed to materialize. « It was only when Italy had changed its structure and had taken up quite a different rôle in the international field — through the exclusive merits of Fascism — that Britain's attitude changed very considerably. » Nevertheless, « Fascism presented Italy with an Empire, and the felonious king with an imperial crown. » But for Britain's interference, it is avowed, these gains would have flowered to the infinite good of Italy.

Though Britain is roundly attacked for her treachery, she is equally warned that her brief day is drawing to a close because of the implacable « advance » of the Russian and American « empires. » « Britain will pay for what she has done to Italy, first with sanctions and then with the war she forced on the Italian people. »

On German Soldiers. Radio Budapest last night broadcast an appeal to the Hungarian public not to give credit to rumor-mongers who are trying to create a hostile atmosphere against the German Army by spreading stories about requisitioned houses and stolen livestock. « It would

SIX ALLIED ARMIES GAIN IN ALL SECTORS OF 450-MILE WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, November 17 — All along the 450-mile Western Front, from The Netherlands to the Swiss frontier, the six Allied armies drove steadily forward today against moderate German resistance and, in general, bad weather.

At the northern end, on the British 2nd Army front, press dispatches reported tonight that few Germans excellent progress on a fairly wide front, and that a number of towns have been taken.

The American 1st Army's drive to the east carried them through the German road and rail stronghold of Stolberg, five miles east of Aachen. Another 1st Army column captured Gressenich, three miles east of Stolberg.

Press dispatches said the American offensive evidently caught the Germans off balance while they were preparing for an attack on Aachen.

Most of the activity on the American 3rd Army sector centered around Metz, where the battle continues with undiminished violence through heavy rain and snow. The German escape gap to the east was narrowed to three miles, and artillery fire has been directed at the last road out.

Lieut. Gen. George Patton's forces are within 1½ miles from the city on the north, west, and south, and are bypassing German forts. They are reported in the suburbs of the fortress city, and are fighting for the airfield a mile southwest of the city.

Gestapo Guards Metz Exits

Captured German soldiers reported that the German High Command ordered the Metz garrison to defend the city. They have a substantial garrison and tank traps and street barricades have been erected. All roads have been mined. It is unlikely that there will be any German evacuation, as all exits are being guarded by the Gestapo.

On the northern flank of the American 3rd Army offensive, the Thionville bridgehead has been extended to 12 miles with the capture today of Monneren, Lecroix, Metzervisse, and Stukange. American troops are now in position to cut the last rail line leading northward out of Metz to Germany. On the eastern edge of the line, American forces were tonight reported one mile from the German border.

The American 7th Army was today closing in on the large communications centers of Blamont and St. Dié, but bad weather has held Allied advances to a minimum.

To the south, the French 1st Army advanced along the north bank of the Doubs River and is in the vicinity of Laire, eight miles southwest of Belfort and four miles north of Montbeliard.

The Germans are in general retreat and are burning all French towns, including Blamont and St. Dié. The German plan is to demolish every building in which French and American troops could find shelter from the bitter cold and snow of the high mountain country.

SIX ALLIED ARMIES GAIN IN ALL SECTORS OF 450-MILE WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, November 17 — All along the 450-mile Western Front, from The Netherlands to the Swiss frontier, the six Allied armies drove steadily forward today against moderate German resistance and, in general, bad weather.

At the northern end, on the British 2nd Army front, press dispatches reported tonight that few Germans remained west of the Meuse River and all prepared positions had been abandoned. The few German troops remaining are armed with machine and anti-tank guns.

British troops are converging on the large German communications center of Roermond, and are within one mile of the city. A British spearhead driving on Roermond from the north captured Buggenum. On the north end of the British front, German opposition in the Venlo sector stiffened considerably. German artillery fire was heavy, and mortar and machine-gun fire were accurate.

The triangle formed by the Noorer, Wessem, and Zig Canals was almost entirely cleared of the enemy, and British troops are within 4½ miles of the German border.

The American 1st and 9th Armies, which opened their offensive yesterday with the support of over 6,000 planes and a thunderous artillery barrage, gained from one to two miles today as they drove eastward from their five to 10-mile breach in the Siegfried Line.

Lieut. Gen. William Simpson's 9th Army troops threw back a medium-strength German counter-attack which was supported by Tiger tanks. American troops pressed forward with fighter-plane support over ground heavily mined and booby-trapped. Since the announcement yesterday of the capture of Immendorf and Beggendorf, no indication has been given as to the extent of the 9th Army drive toward the Rhine. Preliminary reports said they are making

GERMANS FLOOD LOWLANDS SOUTH OF RAVENNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 17 — Retreating German forces have dynamited the high banks of the Fiumi Uniti to loose the flood waters of the Montone and the Ronco Rivers over some 10 square miles of lowlands south of Ravenna, it was announced here today.

The German demolition of the retaining walls of the swift-flowing estuary only a mile south of Romagna's second city has spread flood waters over an eight-mile-wide coastal strip on the right flank of the advancing 8th Army, and has made the maneuver of the Allied forces extremely difficult, it was said.

That some German rear-guards may have been cut off by the rapidly spreading waters was indicated by reports that small German forces were still guarding the southern approaches to Ravenna Airport, some three miles south of the dynamited stream. A number of prisoners were taken from one rear-guard company in this sector.

U.S. 1ST ARMY FIRES 1,000-GUN BARRAGE

LONDON, November 17 — The American 1st Army today laid down an artillery barrage from 1,000 guns, ranging in caliber from 75 millimeters to 240 millimeters, it was reported tonight. The barrage lasted for one hour before troops resumed their advance. (BBC)

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

East of Faenza, 8th Army patrols pushed to within four miles of this next Po Valley town along the line of Allied advance, to make contact with enemy forces on the Cosina Canal, while British forces, in some strength, crossed the Bolzanino River just south of the main Po Valley Highway to take positions within five miles of Faenza.

Although leading British forces were counter-attacked along the Bolzanino, the advance toward Faenza was made against only light enemy rear-guards. Enemy artillery yesterday subjected Forli to heavy shell fire during a 24-hour period, although previously the town had been practically undamaged by the fighting which swirled around it.

Northeast of Forli, the area about Cocoli, village at the junction of the River Ronco and the Canale Nuovo, was cleared of the enemy, and 8th Army forces advanced to within little over a mile of San Pancrazio, a Montone River crossing some 3½ miles above Forli. Only small infantry rear-guards, entrusted with the task of carrying out demolitions, were encountered in this area.

Southeast of Faenza, Allied infantry and armor moved to within a half mile of the strongly held enemy positions in Castiglione, a village believed to be incorporated in the main enemy defenses now being prepared five miles southeast of the Po Valley town.

On the 5th Army front, British and Indian troops entered the road junction town of Modigliana, 10 miles south of Faenza on the Marzeno River, a tributary of the Montone.

Although enemy forces defended this town for the past week, and had thrown back 5th Army attempts to enter, the Germans suddenly withdrew yesterday, leaving the town filled with booby-traps and mines.

On the western edge of the 5th Army front, American troops made gains of over a mile in the Serchio River Valley, northwest of the town of Gallicano.

Rain and hail, with night temperatures in the low twenties, have already turned the 5th Army front into a wintry scene, reports indicated. (PRO)

RED ARMY TIGHTENS GRIP AROUND BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 17 — Russian forces today consolidated their grip on the Miskolcz-Budapest railway and captured a number of towns on this rail route to the Hungarian capital from the northeast. Their gains today included Karacsond, 40 miles from Budapest on this line; Fusesabony, only 10 miles south of the large town of Eger; and Tisza-Lutsz, 12 miles east of Miskolcz, near Tokay. General Malinovsky's forces in this drive are fighting in the foothills rising above the northern bank of the upper Tisza. With the capture of Fusesabony, they have taken possession of an important railway junction where the north-south line from southern Slovakia cuts the east-west line through Hungary.

No material changes occurred on other sectors of the front, said tonight's Soviet communique. Yesterday, 16 German tanks were destroyed or disabled on all fronts, and 44 enemy planes were shot down.

JAP REGIMENT ON LEYTE SURROUNDED; 16 JAP SHIPS SUNK AT MANILA SUNDAY

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 17 — Units of the American 24th Infantry Division have established a strong road block on the Ormoc Road, four miles south of Carigara Bay on Leyte Island, thereby completing the double envelopment maneuver around remnants of the Japanese regiment, today's communique from General MacArthur's those units which, two days ago, cut the other main road south and southwest from Bhamo extended their patrols in three directions in the Mogaung-Mandalay railroad corridor.

On the Chindwin front, British troops made minor gains in the Pinwe area. Advances were made also by 5th Indian Division troops who pushed on to the east of newly-won Kalemyo to Taungu on the west bank of the Myittha River. Northeast of Allied-held Kalemyo, East Indian forces are engaging a pocket of enemy resistance.

The only air activity announced by headquarters here was an attack on waterfront installations in the port of Mergui in southern Burma.

AIR CHIEF MARSHAL MALLORY'S PLANE MISSING

LONDON, November 17 — The plane in which Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory was travelling to his new command in the Far East has been reported missing, the BBC said tonight.

It was also revealed that Lady Leigh-Mallory was accompanying her husband to southeast Asia. They left England on November 14.

Sir Trafford, whose appointment in the Far East was effective from October 15, was formerly Air Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force under General Eisenhower. In that position he controlled the greatest assembly of air power ever known, and was responsible for launching the mighty air offensive which preceded, accompanied, and followed D-day. He had been head of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force since it was formed in October, 1943.

All possible steps have been taken to locate the plane in which the Air Chief Marshal was travelling. Its crew were experienced, and it was on a standard route to the Mediterranean area. (OWI)

BOMBERS AGAIN BLAST RHINE APPROACHES

LONDON, November 17 — Allied bombers today delivered another attack on the 25-mile arc north of Aachen, at the approaches to the Rhine, in support of General Dwight Eisenhower's new winter offensive. Yesterday's bomber-armada 3,500 strong, constituted the greatest air fleet ever to go into a single action in direct support of an army, the Associated Press said today.

German «West Wall» troops and defenses in front of three Allied armies were bombarded with more than 13,000 tons of explosives. In two separate mass attacks on an L-shaped area 15 miles long and 10 miles deep northeast of Aachen, about 2,400 American and British heavy bombers dropped more than 11,000 tons of fragmentation and anti-personnel bombs.

At the same time, hundreds of medium and fighter-bombers flew in and out over the battle-lines and added to the totals. They hammered a huge arc around the Geilenkirchen sector, attacking at least 12 German towns, miles of highways along which enemy troops were dug in, and dozens of gun positions and communications facilities.

Escorting fighters strafed enemy transport in the Frankfurt and Giessen regions, destroying 20 locomotives, 92 railway cars, and three trucks.

The RAF Bomber Command was given the job of overwhelming the German defenders of Düren, Jülich, and Heinsberg, which had been turned into fortresses.

Ground forces of the American 1st and 9th Armies reported that the results of Allied tactical air attacks ahead of their lines were «highly satisfactory,» and while great columns of smoke rose from towns and villages, these

Ground forces of the American 1st and 9th Armies reported that the results of Allied tactical air attacks ahead of their lines were «highly satisfactory,» and while great columns of smoke rose from towns and villages, these Armies plunged forward into the bombed areas, which the enemy had fortified strongly during the last month.

American gunners used several novel methods to help both RAF and American bombers in their attacks. First Army gunners shelled all German anti-aircraft batteries during the bombing, and used colored flak to indicate targets. Barrage balloons were also flown, presumably, said one correspondent, to indicate the Allied front line.

SHAEF at Paris announced today that each of the four American armies in action on the western front now has its own supporting air unit. The 9th TAC is supporting the 1st Army; the 19th TAC the 3rd Army; the 29th TAC the 9th Army; and the 12th TAC the 2nd Army.

MAJOR WINTER OFFENSIVE BEGUN IN WEST

LONDON, November 17 — The eastward drive of the American 1st and 9th Armies on the western front was described today as a "major winter offensive" by Lt. Gen. H. G. Martin, military correspondent for the Daily Telegraph. He said:

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

« It is evident from the location of the small towns which the 9th Army has already taken to the east of Geilenkirchen that the center of gravity of the attack lies between Aachen and Roermond.

The natural obstacles that the 9th Army will encounter will be the River Roer and the line of the Erft, about 15 miles further on and about the same distance short of Cologne, the correspondent said.

Describing the opening of the 9th Army's assault yesterday, he wrote:

« We saw them go into battle today like unleashed hounds. The Germans climbed out of their mud holes and went stumbling back before our tanks and infantry as they moved relentlessly across open sugar-beet fields toward their first objectives.

« The ground shook with the artillery barrage as the 9th Army's assault got under way to a smashing start. The mile-long tank ditches that German men and women have been digging these past weeks, as we watched them from vantage points, proved no obstacle whatever to our tanks, and not a single German tank challenged our own across open country. » (OWI)

NEW NAZI STAFF CHIEF REPORTED IN WEST

LONDON, November 17 — The strengthened German defense on the western front and the greater skill of the Wehrmacht's operations may be due to the appointment of Lieutenant General Siegfried Westphal as German Chief of Staff, Reuter said tonight.

Unknown outside the inner ranks of the German High Command, Westphal is a professional soldier with no concern for politics. His unrestricted direction of high German strategy is further evidence that Hitler has relinquished control of the Nazi armies.

Westphal directed the early battles in the African campaign of 1942, when he was Chief of Stff to Rommel, and was responsible for the German capture of Tobruk and the subsequent advance to El Alamein.

He quarreled with Rommel after the German offensive was checked, and was back in Germany at the time the British counter-offensive drove back Rommel. (Reuter)

LONDON, November 17 — Ferench Patriots aided almost 2,000 British airmen to return to England after they had been forced down, while several hundred other fliers were hidden from the Germans until the arrival of Allied troops, Air Minister Sir Archibald Sinclair said tonight.

Paying tribute to the people of France for the gallantry and organization of the Patriots, Sir Archibald said: « Our airmen were welcome wherever they landed, despite the fact that the French Patriots knew full well that discovery would bring hideous reprisals. » He added that the RAF, together with the air forces of the British dominions, paid [illegible] to the French men and women who were shot

Strong forces of up to 750 escorted heavy bombers yesterday successfully bombed the Munich and the Innsbrück rail yards, the latter the northern terminus of the Brenner Pass line. Returning from these attacks, the formations were intercepted by 30-RP enemy fighters, nine of which were shot down.

Other escorted heavy bombers carried out attacks on German escape routes in Yugoslavia.

From all these missions, 18 heavy bombers are missing.

RAF heavy bombers carried out a night attack on a Po Valley railway bridge. Medium bombers scored hits on at least 10 bridges in this region. (PRO)

TITO'S FORCES NEAR ZAGREB

BELGRADE, November 17 — Marshal Tito's forces are approaching Zagreb, capital of Croatia and only 100 miles from the Austrian frontier, the Free Yugoslav Radio said tonight.

The Germans, under General von Welch, Commander-in-Chief of the Balkan Army, and local quislings are building pillboxes, digging trenches, and mining the city, the broadcast added.

Food is scarce in Zagreb and water supplies irregular, the broadcast added. In the past few days there have been clashes between the inhabitants and the Germans and quislings. Marshal Tito has an « extremely strong » backing in Zagreb, the broadcast concluded. (OWI)

NEW FINNISH CABINET FORMED

HELSINKI, November 17 — Premier Paasikivi today announced that his newly-formed cabinet will include Carl Enckell as his Foreign Minister, Uhro Kekkonen (formerly Minister of the Interior) as Minister of Justice, Minister for Home Affairs Hillilae, Defense Minister Walden, Finance Minister Helo, and Minister for Labor and Communications Vuori.

Carl Enckell, Hillilae, and General Rudolf Walden, Minister of War, are the only hold-overs from the previous cabinet.

Premier Paaskivi was prominent in negotiations which resulted in the armistice with the Soviet Union.

A BBC political commentator, discussing the new Finnish Government, says it is set up on a broader basis than any in recent years. It represents a definite but limited swing to the left.

The Democrats hold seven seats out of 18, two more than previously, and this group includes the head of the party.

BRITAIN PROTESTS JAP TREATMENT OF P.W.

LONDON, November 17 — The British Government has forwarded «the strongest possible protest» against Japanese maltreatment of Allied war prisoners, War Minister Sir James Grigg told the House of Commons today.

The War Minister said that he had received first-hand accounts of Japanese inhumanity from a party of survivors from a sunk Japanese transport carrying British and Australian prisoners of war from Singapore to Japan last September. The survivors were rescued by U. S. naval forces, and have arrived in England.

The Japanese used these prisoners to construct a railway through «primitive, disease-infected jungle land» between Siam and Burma, the minister added. The prisoners had not lost morale, he continued, but the death-rate was at least one in five.

Later, the prisoners were sent to Singapore and shipped on to Japan. En route, the ship sank. Grigg said that the Japanese deliberately picked up their own survivors and left the prisoners to drown. American submarines, he added, rescued about 150 of the men. The War Minister paid tribute to the American crews who risked their lives in this rescue work. (OWI)

AIR TRAINING PLAN IN CANADA TO END

LONDON, November 17 — The Joint Air Training Plan in Canada, under which 100,000 Allied airmen had been trained up to last April, will end next March, Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Air Minister, told the House of Commons today.

The Allied war situation, and particularly the air crew position, mean that Britain could dispense with the Joint Air Training Plan except on a skeleton scale, Sir Archibald said.

Simultaneously, training in South Africa and Southern Rhodesia is being considerably reduced.

Sinclair said that the plan had been a «vast effort creating an overwhelming impact of superior strength in the air upon the enemy.» (OWI)

WAR PRISONERS ALLOT PAY TO FAMILIES

ROME, November 17 — Allotments of pay made by Italian prisoners of war to their families in liberated Italy totaled more than 3,660,000 lire in the last five days, the Allied Commission announced today.

About 5,000 such prisoners have forwarded allotment requests since the plan started to become widely known among prisoners about six weeks ago.

Administrative arrangements for these bi-monthly allotments to lighten the war hardships for families at home in liberated Italy were developed by AC's Finance Sub-Commission and AC's War Materials Disposal and Italian Prisoners of War Sub-Commission, in collaboration with the Italian Government.

Under this plan, written requests from prisoners of war are forwarded by the Allied authorities to General Pietro Gazzera, the Italian High Commissioner for Prisoners of War. He, in turn, hands these requests over to the Italian Ministry of War for payment to the families every two months.

CONDITIONS IN ROME PRISONS TO BE IMPROVED

ROME, November 17 — Living conditions in the Regina Coeli prison and other penal institutions in Rome are to be improved, it was resolved at a meeting today of Allied and Italian authorities, attended by Colonel Charles Poletti, Regional Commissioner for AMG Region IV.

Damage to cells in the recent disturbances is to be repaired, and hygienic and sanitary conditions ameliorated, the meeting decided. The bread ration will be maintained at 500 grams and, as far as possible, the quality and quantity of the food will be improved. (UNN)

ANTI-FASCIST LEADER HAILED IN FORLI

FORLI', November 17 — Bruno Angeletti, anti-Fascist leader of Romagna, returned to his native town of Forli last week for the first time since his arrest by the Fascists in July last year, says a UNN correspondent in a delayed dispatch. The 51-year-old lawyer, whose out-spoken criticism of the Fascist Régime had landed him in prison more than once during the past 20 years, was released by the Badoglio Government after the armistice.

He was, however, overtaken by the advancing Germans, and in September was again arrested and thrown into prison at Bologna. He escaped from his Fascist jailers, only to be retaken at Forli and again jailed. This time, a second escape was carefully engineered by Patriot forces, and he finally found sanctuary in the neutral territory of San Marino. (UNN)

NEW LEAVE SCHEME FOR BRITISH FORCES

LONDON, November 17 — Prime Minister Churchill outlined to the House of Commons today a plan to give home leave of about a month to a number of men who have fought overseas for considerable periods. The first monthly quota of about 6,000 men to come under the scheme has been alloted to Italy and North Africa, the Middle East, Iran, India, Southeast Asia, and East Africa. In all, said Mr. Churchill, a total of some 80,000 men will be able to come home in 13 four-weekly periods.

He said the problem of leave for troops overseas was an «intractable» one. However, the shipping situation was such today that the time taken on the journey of sending men on leave had been reduced considerably, said the Prime Minister.

Mr. Churchill said that the War Office had itself proposed that the «system of repatriation of men with long, continuous service overseas should be supplemented by a leave scheme for the benefit of those who, while not yet qualified for repatriation, have... borne the burden of campaigns fought often in adverse climatic conditions.»

LONDON, November 17 — Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that the terroristic activities of certain Jewish groups in Palestine must cease, and those responsible for the activities must be destroyed, if there is to be any hope of a future for Zionism.

He said, in the course of a statement on the recent murder in Cairo of Lord Moyne, British Resident Minister in the Middle East, by two members of a Jewish terrorist band:

«I have received a letter from Dr. [Chaim] Weizmann, President of the World Zionist Organization and a very old friend of mine, who has arrived in Palestine, in which he assures me Palestine Jewry will go to the utmost limits of its power to root out this evil from its midst.

«In Palestine, an executive of the Jewish Agency has called upon the Jewish Community — I am quoting his actual words — "to cast out members of this destructive band, to deprive them of all refuge and shelter, to resist their threats, and to render all necessary assistance to the authorities in the prevention of terrorist acts and in the eradication of terrorist organizations."

«These are strong words, but we must wait for these words to be translated into deeds.»

He said that while primary responsibility for dealing with the terrorists rested with the Government, the success of the anti-terrorist campaign «depends upon the wholehearted coöperation of the entire Jewish community. This His Majesty's Government is entitled to demand and receive.»

The Prime Minister said that «numerous arrests» have been made of persons suspected of complicity in terrorist activities, 231 having been deported from the country. He said the Palestine authorities are conducting a thorough campaign against the terrorist Stern Gang, and the «larger but hardly less dangerous Irgun Zeva'i Leumi» organization.

Of Lord Moyne's murder by two members of the Stern Gang, Mr. Churchill said:

«It has affected none more strongly than those like myself who, in the past, have been consistent friends of the Jews, and constant architects of their future. If our dreams for Zionism are to end in the smoke of assassins' pistols, and our labors for its future to produce a new set of gangsters worthy of Nazi Germany, many like myself would reconsider the position we have maintained for so long in the past.»

VETERANS TO SHARE U.K. CIVIL SERVICE JOBS

LONDON, November 17 — A large proportion of post-war vacancies in the British Civil Service are to be reserved for men and women now with the armed forces, under recommendations of a White Paper accepted today by the Government.

An added benefit for servicemen set forth in the proposals is the opportunity of taking examinations while still on military duty, with the assurance that if they pass, Civil Service jobs will be waiting for them when they are discharged.

Special centers are to be established in all war theaters, where candidates will be allowed to take the examinations.

It is planned that military personnel be allotted positions in 75 per cent of the vacancies in the administrative class, 66 per cent in the executive class, and 50 per cent in the clerical class.

ROOSEVELT URGES YEAR'S MILITARY TRAINING

WASHINGTON, November 17 — President Roosevelt told a news conference today that he hoped legislation requiring one year's government service of the nation's youth in peace-time will get through Congress this winter.

Stressing the need for a training year, Mr. Roosevelt cited the large percentage of young men rejected in the draft in this war for physical reasons. He recalled the physical advantage gained by the younths who went through the Civilian Conservation Corps program early in the New Deal, and said a universal training program would give the nation a large percentage of young people trained to defend the country in case of future wars.

Also speaking at the rally, sponsored by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, were the Earl of Halifax, British Ambassador, and Andrei Gromyko, Soviet Ambassador to The United States.

The New York Times, in an editorial yesterday, spoke of the united U.S.-Soviet war effort as «a brotherhood in arms, cemented by blood shed in a common cause,» and as a «foundation on which future relations between The United States and Russia must be based.»

The Soviet newspaper Pravda, in an editorial on the anniversary, said:

«History can boast of only a few joint large-scale military operations against a mutual enemy which have been carried out as completely and accurately as the one developed at Tehran.

«They laid the sound foundation of coöperation which will continue in post-war times to create and preserve lasting and firm peace between nations.»

TITO CALLS FOR UNITED YUGOSLAVIA

BELGRADE, November 17 — Marshal Tito told the anti-Fascist youth of Serbia today that they will be responsible for rebuilding a united and improved Yugoslavia. Furthermore, he said, a united Yugoslavia must be completely divorced from politics, because there is only one united organization in that country — «a national front for all.»

Marshal Tito said in a straightforward terse statement:

«We do not want Yugoslavia as it was before the war. We want a flourishing, young country here. When we have finished with the hated occupation and completely liberated our country, I rely upon you to be in the most responsible places.

«The young generation entered this struggle with a pure heart and the desire to create a better future for themselves and the generation to come. Youth must be inspired with one political idea — that of brotherhood and unity, the idea of creating a better future for a federal Yugoslavia. There is no time for politics, or gathering around this or that party.

DEMOCRATS WIN 243 SEATS IN U.S. HOUSE

WASHINGTON, November 17 — The Democratic Party will hold 243 seats in the American House of Representatives when the new Congress convenes January 3, it appeared today — barring unexpected switches due to a late count of soldiers ballots in some states. The Republicans will have 190 seats, and the American Labor Party (a minority party) one.

Unless the soldier vote reverses the present trend of election results in Missouri and Pennsylvania, the Democrats will occupy 57 seats in the Senate, the Republicans 38, and the Progressives (a minority party) one. This is a net gain of one Senator for the Republicans.

WAR HAS BROUGHT U.S., U.S.S.R. CLOSER TOGETHER

NEW YORK, November 17 — Relations between the Soviet Union and The United States have grown even stronger and closer since the countries joined in prosecuting a war against a common enemy, Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius yesterday told a New York rally observing the 11th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between the two governments.

Mr. Stettinius said:

"As we have fought and worked together, we have come to know each other better, and as we have found cordiality, our relations have grown.

"Differences in points of view and methods of work shrink as there is a mutual knowledge and understanding of each other's ways of thinking and living. I am certain we will work out whatever problems confront us, in full realization that the goals of each of us must be the common goals of both of us."

Mr. Stettinius spoke of the post-war proposals formulated at the Dumbarton Oaks Conference, the groundwork for which was laid at the Moscow Conference a year before. He said the Dumbarton Oaks proposal for world security will be completed in coming months. Common efforts for victory have shown that common efforts can also be made to ensure lasting peace, he said.

Speaking of the close ties and relations between the people of the Soviet Union and The United States, the Acting Secretary of State said:

"The interests and instincts of our peoples turn toward peaceful productive arts, raising of great enterprises, development of public services, advancement of science and the humanities. Both our peoples have vast resources to

GREEK PREMIER MAKES AGREEMENT WITH LEFTISTS

ATHENS, November 17 — Greek Prime Minister Georges Papandreou revealed today that a full agreement has been reached with the left-wing ministers, Exchange Telegraph reported. The dispatch added that the leftists had confirmed this.

The agency said the Greek Government has issued an order prohibiting the carrying of arms except by authority of a military commander.

Finance Minister Svolos said that the Greek liberation front, which had played a leading part in assuring national unity, should do nothing to provoke a rupture.

General Thoneos will remain Commander-in-Chief and General Ventirisu, Chief of Staff. The agency said that the Prime Minister pointed out that Greece is still in a state of war, and that so long as its forces are under Allied command all other intervention is excluded. (OWI)

Byrnes had planned to resign his office this week, but agreed to remain, at the President's personal request, until Germany is defeated. It also was revealed that the new director will make a tour of the European fighting fronts. (OWI)

AGREEMENT REACHED ON AVIATION PLAN

CHICAGO, November 17 — Delegations representing The United States, Britain, and Canada at the International Civil Aviation Conference here reached an agreement last night on the final draft of the proposal for an international aviation authority to regulate commercial air competition after the war.

The terms of the agreement will not be announced until the proposal has been drafted in language acceptable to the three delegations, a spokesman said. He added that the formal proposal containing the views of the three nations will represent a conciliation of differences on major points, rather than a compromise.

While officials gave no indication when the final draft would be submitted to the conference as a whole, it is expected that a plenary session will be called as soon as the document is ready for presentation.

The proposed draft will contain recommendations of regulations for control of air routes, transport rates, and passenger quotas. (OWI-Reuter)

NEW FRENCH APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED

PARIS, November 17 — New French diplomatic appointments announced by Radio Paris today were: Air General Francois Dastier de la Vigerie and Gaston Maugras to be French ambassadors to Brazil and Turkey, respectively.

Dastier was second in command under General de Gaulle of the Fighting French Forces in Britain, and Maugras was former French Minister to Athens, and later Belgrade.

Vincent Auriol has been elected President of the French Foreign Affairs Commission at the Consultative Assembly. He was Socialist minister of finance in the Leon Blum Cabinet in 1936-1937. He escaped from France to Britain in October 1943.

Raoul d'Autry has been appointed French Minister of Reconstruction and Town Planning by General de Gaulle, a Reuter dispatch said yesterday.

M. d'Autry was formerly an executive of a French railroad, and was active in relief work of the French Resistance movement during the period of German occupation. (OWI - Reuter)

BELGIAN PREMIER EXPLAINS ORDER TO DISARM

HIMMLER REPORTED DEPUTY FUEHRER: GOERING CONFERS AT LUDWIGSHAVEN

LONDON, November 17 — Increasing confusion among the Nazi hierarchy in Germany is reported in neutral press reports received today here and in Washington, with Hitler's whereabouts still shrouded in mystery, and Nazi leaders attempting desperately to adjust internal affairs.

According to a Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Mail, Hitler on Tuesday appointed Heinrich Himmler « Deputy Führer. » This new appointment, alleged to have been made in another Hitlerian proclamation, would virtually oust Hitler's closest colleagues, Herman Göring and Joseph Goebbels, from personal succession to the Führer.

Göring himself is reported in Zurich to have arrived in Ludwigshaven, on Lake Constance, for a conference with a number of Luftwaffe chiefs.

The proclamation appointing Himmler Deputy Führer was read by Reichsminister Hans Heinrich Lammers at a meeting of Nazi Party leaders in the Berlin Chancellory. No attempt was made by the Nazi leaders to explain, even to each other, the reason for Hitler's absence from this epoch-making event in Nazi history.

The Swedish Helsingborgs Dagblad, foreshadowing the accession of the Hangman to even greater power, said Tuesday: « Himmler is even less popular than Hitler. He is even less popular than Goebbels. However, Hitler is no longer what he used to be, while Himmler actually has more power than Hitler. »

Already Himmler's order to district Nazi leaders that property owners should be forced to burn everything at the approach of the Allied forces has incensed the rural population of Germany, the Swiss paper Journal de Genève said yesterday. Leaders of the party and its subsidiary organizations receive an increasing number of letters threatening them with death and the burning of their property. Anti-Nazi inscriptions are being painted on walls and pavements in both Berlin and the provinces.

The organization of the Volkssturm is the subject of increasing complaints against the Nazis, the Geneva correspondent of the London Daily Express said today. Managers complain that it is disrupting industry, and workmen who must labor 72 hours a week say they are not fit to take military training during their few rest hours. Neutral travellers from Germany report a growth in passive resistance throughout the Reich.

Yet, although all reports from Germany indicate no slackening in the Nazi program of annihilation for Germany through continued and useless bloodshed, Himmler's new ascendance to top power in the Nazi ranks raises a question which might affect every war front in Europe: Will the German Army support Himmler?

The Swedish paper Jönköpingsposten said editorially: « The German Army has been sworn to allegiance to Hitler, and not to Himmler. In 1939, Hitler nominated Göring as his successor. Göring has great influence in officers' circles. What would happen if he should try to exercise that influence? Göring and Himmler hate each other. »

BELGIAN PREMIER EXPLAINS ORDER TO DISARM

BRUSSELS, November 17 — There are political groups in Belgium which claim a monopoly of resistance and patriotism, and want to exploit the claims for political aims, Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot said in a broadcast last night concerning the order that resistance groups must surrender their arms by November 18.

He said that this order was issued in agreement with the Allied high command.

As to the resistance movement, he said that the Government «had given concrete proof of its high opinion» of the movement, and of a «determination to preserve intact the moral power represented by resistance movement fighters.» (Reuter)

LONDON, November 17 — Smuggled out of Nazi-enslaved Czechoslovakia, a pledge from Czechoslovak students to remain loyal to their democratic traditions reached the outside world yesterday.

The message was received in London in time for International Students' Day, celebrated annually on November 17 to commemorate the 124 Czech students murdered by the Germans on 17 November 1939.

Saluting the students of the United Nations who are now fighting for victory, the Czechoslovak students said that Students' Day next year will be celebrated in Prague.

Among those who signed the pledge were students who took part in the anti-German demonstrations leading to the massacre five years ago today. (PWB)

SWEDISH OPPOSITION TO GERMANY INCREASING

WASHINGTON, November 17 — Increased Swedish-German tension was highlighted today by new German frontier violations, the rounding up of Gestapo agents in Sweden, and the report that the German Minister to Stockholm has returned to Berlin.

Radio Stockholm said yesterday that German troops have committed «repeated flagrant violations» of Swedish neutrality and «assaults» on Swedish territory combined with « theft and arson » which have aroused much indignation in the Swedish press.

Another Swedish broadcast said a German patrol of four soldiers from Norway was taken into custody near the Norwegian border by Swedish military personnel. The broadcast added that German troops also crossed from Finland to a small Swedish Island. There they tore down a barn and took back to Finland timber from another barn and household goods left by refugees.

An American press dispatch said yesterday that « Swedish police, reflecting Sweden's increased opposition to Germany, are rounding up a number of foremost Gestapo agents in Sweden regardless of position or occupation. » The dispatch added:

« First on the list was the chief of the German tourist bureau in Stockholm, Baron Berndt von Gossler, who was ordered to leave Sweden immediately as 'an undesirable alien.' The Finnish Nazi writer Oehnulf Tigersiedt, who recently arrived in Sweden as a refugee, was also ordered to leave the country.

« It is reported, however, that these two are only the beginning, and that as soon as possible three or four more will follow, including two members of the so-called German Academy of Stockholm — an institution outwardly engaged in cultural work, but actually seething with Gestapo agents — and one or two members of the commercial departments of the German Legation, one of whom is believed to be the main figure in Nazi underground work in Sweden.

« It is learned that many other Germans and Nazis in Sweden have destroyed documents and packed their suitcases, preparing for a hasty departure before the Swedish police are able to ask unpleasant questions.

The Swedish action, so far, has not been directed against Germans with diplomatic passports, but Von Gossler and others carried a pass which gives the bearer a semi-diplomatic capacity.

« The Swedish public and press are enthusiastic at the police action, but would like to see it extended to certain Nazi diplomats. »

The Government also ordered the expulsion of Henning Dalsgaard, Danish journalist, who was interned two months ago when he came here as a « refugee. » The Danish press service said Dalsgaard wrote pro-Nazi propaganda articles in Swedish newspapers. (OWI)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 17 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the Adriatic coastal sector, the Germans have blown the banks of the Fiumi Uniti, thereby causing further large floods south of Ravenna.

British troops of the 8th Army have improved their positions north and west of Forli.

Polish troops have captured the village of Conversello, northwest of Castrocaro, and are in contact with strong enemy defenses on the commanding feature of Monte Castellaccio.

On the right flank of the 5th Army, British and Indian troops have occupied the important road centre of Modigliana.

Further west, American troops of the 5th Army have made gains of over a mile in the Serchio Valley.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Fighter-bombers have given support by attacking positions west of Venlo.

We have taken Wessem, and are within a mile of Roermond.

Three miles farther north, Buggenum has been freed, while other troops reached the Canal de Derivation in the Broekhide area.

Contact has been established between forces south of the Noorer Canal and troops which captured Meijel.

In the Geilenkirchen sector, our units launched attacks and made gains of several thousand yards. We are in Floverich and Immendorf. These operations were preceded and supported by air attacks in very great strength and by heavy, medium, and fighter bombers.

In support of our ground forces in the Geilenkirchen area fighter-bombers attacked at least 12 German towns and bombed and strafed dug-in enemy troops, gun positions, and communications.

In the Düren-Eschweiler area, 1,200 heavy bombers, escorted by 480 fighters, attacked enemy strongpoints, field batteries, and ack-ack guns. Some of the escorting fighters also strafed enemy transport in the Frankfurt and Giessen region.

Bombing generally was in adverse weather, although some crews reported seeing good results through breaks in the clouds. Medium bombers, none of which are missing, hit gun positions at Echtez and Luchem, east of Eschweiler.

Another force of heavy bombers, numbering 1,150 with an escort of 250 fighters, struck at the towns of Düren, Jülich, and Heinsberg, immediately behind the enemy lines. Bombing was controlled throughout by master bombers, who claim all attacks were highly concentrated.

Striking deeper into Germany, other fighter-bombers attacked railway targets in the vicinity of Cologne. Eight fighters and fighter-bombers are missing from the day's operations.

Farther south, our forces continued to attack, enlarging the Moselle bridgeheads.

We have troops in the vicinity of Monneren, Lacroix, and Metzervisse in the Thionville area.

Stuckange is in our hands, and our forces are in Augny and Marly, south of the Metz.

In the Blamont-St. Dié area, resistance was moderate, but progress is slow. St. Dié and several other villages in the path of our advance were set afire by the enemy, and many explosions were heard.

In the approaches to the Belfort Gap, the momentum of our drive has been maintained. Several towns have been freed north and south of the Doubs River. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, November 17 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in Hungary, our troops captured in fighting the town and railway junction of Fuzesabony, and also occupied several other populated localities, including Guda, Sali, Maklar, Karacsond, Adasch, Vyendeshhalas, Chani, Jakspenesaru, and Zhumbok, and the railway stations of Tiszalutsz, Maklar, Karacsond, Halatarantosh, and Jakspenesaru.

On other sectors of the front, there are no material changes.

During November 16, our troops disabled or destroyed 16 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 44 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

During today, in Hungary, our troops captured in fighting the town and railway junction of Fuzesabony, and also occupied several other populated localities, including Guda, Sali, Maklar, Karacsond, Adasch, Vyendeshhalas, Chani, Jakspenesaru, and Zhambok, and the railway stations of Tiszalutsz, Maklar, Karacsond, Halataraniosh, and Jakspenesaru.

On other sectors of the front, there are no material changes.

During November 16, our troops disabled or destroyed 16 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 44 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 17 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriot activity in the front-line zone continues to be intense, contributing by patrol actions, sorties, and acts of sabotage to the advance of the Allied Armies.

At Forli, a little while before its liberation, Patriots blew up a German Mark IV tank, together with its entire crew, by placing mines at a crossroad. The tank commander and other German soldiers were killed.

On the night of October 31, in the Veneto zone, a Patriot battalion from Treviso disarmed the garrison of Gaggio and San Michele del Quarto, capturing arms and munitions. On the night of November 5/6, the same unit damaged a bridge over the Livenza, along the Motta-Meduna Road.

During a party given at Moncalieri to the 16th E-boat flotilla on the occasion of their departure for duty, Patriots caused the explosion of a bomb, killing six Fascists and wounding five, among whom was the commander, Bonicciuolli.

Patriots succeeded in blocking, by mines, the Turin-Carmagnola railway line for six days.

Italian Patriots have killed 4,000 of the enemy in the blowing up of a tunnel near La Lanterna at Genoa, which was used by the Germans as an arms depot, according to preliminary reports, which gave no other details. (UNN)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 17 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the front sector running from Geilenkirchen to the Hürtgen Forest, yesterday, the third battle at Aix la Chapelle started after heavy bombing attacks. The bulk of the attacking enemy formations, caught by the fierce defensive fire of all our arms, was immobilized before our main lines. Only in some sectors east of Geilenkirchen and at Stolberg, did the Americans penetrate our positions. They lost 39 tanks in a small sector within a few hours. The battle is in full swing.

In the Metz sector, the enemy continued his fierce concentric attacks, but did not achieve any notable progress. At Gravelotte, an enemy force was encircled and relief attacks frustrated. According to later reports, our troops fighting in Lorraine destroyed 52 enemy tanks and armoured reconnaissance cars on November 14 and 15.

Between Blamont and Raon l'Étape, U.S. regiments continue to exert pressure on our positions. French formations advancing on the upper reaches of the Doubs were halted in fierce fighting.

Greater London and the Antwerp area were again subjected to long range bombardment with « V-1 » and « V-2 ».

Italy:

In central Italy, local fighting flared up on the Ligurian coast after a long lull.

At Gallicano, attacking enemy battalions were repulsed or driven back in counter-attacks by our mountain troops.

Between Modigliano and the Adriatic Sea, prisoners were made during the successful defence against numerous attacks of the 8th Army.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, repeated Soviet attacks proceeding from a bridgehead at Batina were smashed, and the enemy shuttle-service seriously hampered by our Air Force.

East of Budapest, south of the Matra Mountains and in the Miscolcz Plain, the defensive battle grew in intensity. German and Hungarian formations are counter-attacking the enemy, who penetrated our positions in some sectors. The other Bolshevik attacks were frustrated in grim fighting.

Strong formations of bombers, fighter-bombers and night bombers supported the ground formations and destroyed enemy supply columns, particularly at Kecskemet.

Nothing of moment is reported from the other parts of the eastern front.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers launched attacks on localities near the front of the western theater.

In addition, the residential districts of Munich and Innsbruck also were attacked. Precious cultural monuments fell victim to the bombs, particularly in Munich. The population suffered losses.

Thirty-six Anglo-American planes were destroyed by air defense forces, five of them by Italian fighters.

GERMAN

Goebbels Article: Tonight, the German Radio has broadcast a long article by Dr. Goebbels, in which he says that the Allied plan to set up governments in the liberated countries of Europe is a « dangerous illusion. » « Behind the facade of these governments, » he says, « the Bolshevik power apparatus will be established. Step by step, and with the help of a mob, these governments will be ousted in favor of full-fledged Soviet cabinets. »

Metz and Aachen Drives: Both Allied and German sources agree tonight that the two biggest military items in the western theatre are the Allied drives in the Metz area and in the Aachen area. Concerning the former, DNB concedes that « minor breaches of local importance were achieved by American tank and infantry forces launching thrusts from the northern direction against the Metz bridgehead on the ninth day of the battle in Lorraine. »

Concerning Aachen, the same source states: « In coördination with their efforts in the big battle in Lorraine, now raging 10 days with increasing violence, the Americans opened their expected new large-scale offensive from both sides of Aachen yesterday. »

« Small, » « Polite, » and « Healthy » Brazilians: The first detailed German account of the Brazilian troops on the Italian front appears today in a report by the correspondent Von Hohenbach. He describes them as « more polite than the Yankees, » and also as « more intelligent. » He finds them « small but healthy, » deems their uniforms not « practical, » and observes that these habitués of a more torrid clime are « suffering the utmost under the severe cold. » He is particularly impressed by their pay:

« Brazilians are the best-paid soldiers in the world. Their pay is one-third higher than that of the North Americans, and amounts from 75 to 100 dollars for ranks from Private to Sergeant Major. »

Eastern Front: Colonel von Olberg reports: « During the last 24 hours, bad weather prevented the development of military operations from the Baltic coast to northern Slovakia. » But the big battle of Budapest « continues to rage. »

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Allies Take Modigliana: The Fascist radio reports that very heavy fighting continued throughout the day, in the Adriatic sector and in the Apennine area. « The focal points of the battle area are in the areas east of Forli and south of Faenza ». It is admitted that in the Faenza area the Germans, « after very stubborn defense in the mountain zone, » abandoned the much-contested town of Modigliana and established a new defensive line farther north. Fighting in this area continues.

Mass Graves Discovered at Bologna: The alleged discovery of mass graves and torture chambers at Bologna is exploited for a venomous attack on « outlaws » and « anti-Fascists ». According to Fascist radio reports, « Black Brigade » and German and Italian police units unearthed the pits of mangled bodies at the height of an encounter with outlaw bands ambushed near a Bologna hospital. The two adversaries suffered an equal number of casualties.

This new incident at Bologna is linked with the often mentioned episodes in Istria. Both are said to be part of a « horrible chain of anti-Fascist crimes committed against loyal and honorable Italians ».

General Alexander, who « boasts of having outlaw bands at his command », is chiefly indicted, but heavy censure also falls on the Bonomi Government, « which recently placed these bandits on the same footing as combatant soldiers ».

British Secret Agent Arrested by Fascists: The reported arrest, in the Province of Apuania, of the « British Secret Service Agent » Harden, is reported at length and in the style of sensationalism. It is stated that Harden's mission, allegedly self-confessed, was to enter the Italian Socialist Republic to obtain data on German and Fascist military objectives, « so that these could be bombed by the enemy air force. » At the same time, he was instructed to obtain information which would aid the Allied campaign in the Apennines.

It would appear that Harden had been a key figure of espionage in Italy since his arrival here « from London in

GERMAN

Goebbels Article: Tonight the German Radio has broadcast the text of the weekly political analysis by the Nazi Minister of Propaganda. Goebbels's chief theme today is a restatement of the long-established German propaganda trend that Bolshevism is attempting to rule the world and, hence, is a menace to the Allies and not to Germany alone.

Considering the recent events in Finland, Rumania, Bulgaria, and Poland, Goebbels endeavors to explain these events as part of what he calls the « Trojan Horse » technique of Soviet Russia. By this, he means that, in the countries liberated from German rule, the Russian policy is « not to instal Bolshevist governments in the beginning, but, instead, to give some Communists a sort of listening post within leftist democratic governments. » The future development of this supposed ruse, predicts Goebbels, will be: « After a short period of grace, and with the assistance

« Brazilians are the best-paid soldiers in the world. Their pay is one-third higher than that of the North Americans, and amounts from 75 to 100 dollars for ranks from Private to Sergeant Major. »

It would appear that Harden had been a key figure of espionage in Italy since his arrival here « from London in August, 1943. » In Rome, as the guest of the « well-known Jew Meyer, » Harden allegedly made contact with the « major exponents of Italian Free-Masonry, i. e. Generals Ambrosio, Roatta, Carboni, and Armellini, as well as Munitions Minister Favagrossa, Orlando, Badoglio, and his son. » His chief persuasive triumph at this time was said to have been that of « convincing Carboni to intensify the negative action undertaken by the General Staff in connection with Axis operations in Sicily. »

The Fascist radio further states that amongst papers found on Harden's person was a letter from Badoglio, dated September 8, saying that London's instructions would be carried out in their entirety. « Ever since August, 1943, Harden had been in touch with Badoglio and with the Italian Jews. »

SIX ALLIED ARMIES ON OFFENSIVE IN WEST

LONDON, November 16 — Six Allied armies were on the offensive today along the 450-mile western front from Holland to Switzerland.

The American 1st Army and the American 9th Army launched a new attack on Germany at 1400 hours GMT today from the Netherlands area. Preceding the 1st Army attack, more than 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by 450 fighters, hit targets in front of the advancing troops at Düren and Eschweiler, directly east of Aachen. After the bombs were dropped, the massed guns of the 1st Army laid down a tremendous barrage, and then the ground forces moved forward.

No indication has been given as to the position of the American 9th Army, which is commanded by Lieut. Gen. William Simpson. Called the "Mystery Army," as it was last heard of two months ago when it liberated Brest, the 9th Army swung into action today and was likewise supported by a heavy aerial attack on German positions to its north.

It is expected that British tanks and troops may soon collide with German armor known to be in this sector.

To the south of the newly-launched American 1st and 9th Army offensives, troops of the American 3rd Army have increased their encircling threat to Metz.

One American spearhead driving southward from Maizieres les Metz today captured Woippy, 1½ miles north of the fortress city on the west side of the Moselle River. The German escape gap from Metz to the east has narrowed to seven miles. All escape roads are within range of American artillery.

American infantry driving on Metz from the south captured Augny, and are two miles southwest of the city. Forces on the western side of the Moselle, after by-passing the formidable Fort Driant, have reached Jussy.

Heavy German counter-attacks prevented further American advances from the south and west. The Germans recaptured Peltre, 2½ miles southeast of Metz. The Germans also retook Fort Hubert, west of Metz, in a flanking attack.

Patton Gains Ground

General George Patton's eastward thrust toward the Saar Basin gained important ground today. Troops of the 35th Division drove into Morhange (Giorchingen) and Baronweiler, while another force cleared Gebling, directly north of Dieuze. A tank battle was reported in progress at Burgaltdorf, just north of Gebling.

To the west of Dieuze, the 26th Division captured Marsal and cleared the last Germans out of the strategic wooded ridge overlooking Dieuze.

At the southernmost end of the Allied line, the French 1st Army launched an offensive yesterday on a 3-mile front in the Belfort Gap sector, making gains of several miles on both sides of the flooded Doubs River in the foothills of the Alps.

The attack was strongly supported by artillery, and was launched in snow and rain along both sides of the Doubs, which is overflowing its banks and turning the surrounding terrain into a sea of mud. Troops in this sector are colonials from Morocco, Senegal, and Algeria, under the command of General Bethouart.

All first objectives have been gained, press dispatches reported, and heavily mined areas successfully negotiated. The town of Arcey, 11 miles southwest of Belfort and five miles west of Montbellard, was among the 10 villages liberated. At the southern end of the French 1st Army front the village of Ecurcey, three miles from the Swiss border, was captured. (OWI - Reuter - AP - BBC)

SIX ALLIED ARMIES ON OFFENSIVE IN WEST

LONDON, November 16 — Six Allied armies were on the offensive today along the 450-mile western front from Holland to Switzerland.

Called the «Mystery Army,» as it was last heard of two months ago when it liberated Brest, the 9th Army swung into action today and was likewise supported by a heavy aerial attack on German positions in its path.

Press dispatches reported tonight that the 9th Army was transferred 800 miles across France, Belgium, and Holland, and was moved across communications lines of several other armies. The dispatches said the 9th Army was apparently attacking north of the American 1st Army's Aachen sector and south of the British 2nd Army, where it would be in a position to implement the threat to sweep away the German north flank.

The British 2nd Army drive to clear the west banks of the Meuse gained momentum today, and British troops were reported late tonight to have reached the Meuse at Wessem. The main German forces have been pulled back, and only small, well-armed units have been left to cover their retreat.

A sharp frost last night hardened the soft, boggy ground, and today British forces advanced toward the river in bitter cold. Heavily sown minefields are being encountered, and going is difficult over ditches and rivulets.

The British spearhead driving down the main road from Weert to Roermund, major German road and rail communications hub, have captured Baexem, four miles from the city. The towns of Heythuijzen and Grathem to the northwest were also seized in the two-day-old offensive.

American infantry driving [illegible] captured Augny, and are two miles southwest of the city. Forces on the western side of the Moselle, after by-passing the formidable Fort Driant, have reached Jussy.

Heavy German counter-attacks prevented further American advances from the south and west. The Germans recaptured Peltre, 2½ miles southeast of Metz. The Germans also retook Fort Hubert, west of Metz, in a flanking attack.

The attack was strongly supported by artillery, and was launched in snow and rain along both sides of the Doubs, which is overflowing its banks and turning the surrounding terrain into a sea of mud. LATE BULLETINS

U.S. 9TH ARMY ATTACKING NORTH OF AACHEN

LONDON, November 16 — The American 9th Army launched its new offensive northeast of Aachen between Eschweiler and Geilenkirchen, it was reported late tonight.

In the first few hours of attack, the U. S. 9th Army captured Immendorf, on the main Geilenkirchen-Düren Highway, and Beggendorf, directly to the south. (OWI-Reuter)

YUGOSLAVS STILL ADVANCING

LONDON, November 16 — The Free Yugoslav Radio, broadcasting tonight's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, reported that, following the liberation of Skoplje, in southern Yugoslavia, the Germans are still being driven northward and Marshal Tito's troops have now liberated another town 30 miles to the north. German troops, driven from integrated natural defenses based on the Montone River and the Canale Nuovo, which connects this stream with the Ronco farther east, are being forced back across the hodge-podge network of streams east of Faenza in a dangerously lengthening line, it was apparent from today's reports.

Allied forces have now thrust 34 miles along the main Po Valley Highway northwest from Rimini, and are within five miles of Faenza, third in the string of a dozen major towns and cities strung along this important road from the coast to Milan.

As a result of the German retreat along the southern edge of the Po Plain, 8th Army forces are now in positions some 10 miles west of the line of Ravenna, where enemy forces are hemmed in between Allied advance forces and the extensive Comacchio Marshes to the north.

Sharpest clashes yesterday centered in the sector just south of the Emilia Highway, where strongly armored German rear-guards were engaged by advancing 8th Army infantry and tanks.

Here, at the point of deepest penetration into the Germans' sagging line, enemy infantry forces supported by self-propelled guns were driven from strongpoints in a group of ruined houses near the Lazzaro Creek, a shallow tributary of the Montone, and, farther west, the Allied vanguard thrust across the Bolzanino, another minor tributary of the Montone, to reach a lateral road within five miles of Faenza. In the process of clearing high ground just east of this stream, Allied troops captured 20 enemy prisoners. Farther south along this deep bulge pressing toward Faenza, 8th Army forces captured Patrignone, five miles west of Forli, and occupied other features to the north, west, and south.

Four Villages Liberated

Polish troops, who are moving slowly toward Faenza from the south, yesterday captured the village of San Savino, eight miles from the Po Valley town, and sent patrols forward toward Castellaccio della Pietra, only seven miles south of Faenza. These forces are pushing forward into the hilly country between the Marzano and the Samoggia Rivers, two of the major tributaries of the Montone.

North of the Emilia Highway, where the front now swings northeast from the area of the Montone River to the Ronco River in an arc four to six miles west and north of Forli, Allied forces yesterday occupied three small villages. Northernmost of these was Cocolia, six miles northeast of Forli, and at the junction of the Ronco River and the Canale Nuovo. A small-scale Allied attack on this German strongpoint was repulsed by the enemy Tuesday, but the village was evacuated during the night.

Branzolino, four miles north of Forli, was captured after fighting in which patrol forces penetrated beyond the village.

The third village, San Martino di Villafranca, like the others lying between the canal and the Montone River's sweeping westward bend, was occupied after enemy forces had withdrawn to the eastern banks of the Montone. Allied patrols which crossed the stream reported strong enemy dispositions along the line of the river.

On the 5th Army front, aside from small gains by Indian troops converging on Modigliano in conjunction with 8th Army troops, there was nothing to report. (PRO)

RUSSIANS WITHIN 12 MILES OF BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 16 — Red Army forces, clearing the last fortified villages in the highly-concentrated battleground on the fringes of Budapest, today captured the rail junction of Gyomro (Dyorno), 12 miles southeast of the Hungarian capital, the Soviet communique announced tonight.

AMERICANS TIGHTEN GRIP ON LIMON

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 16 — Infantrymen of the 24th Division and dismounted 1st Division cavalrymen are tightening their grip on the Japanese salient at Limon, four miles south of Carigara Bay on Leyte, General Douglas MacArthur's Headquarters announced tonight.

Meanwhile, American long-range artillery « continues its havoc » throughout the enemy-held corridor leading from Pinamopoan to the beseiged port of Ormoc.

American amphibious troops yesterday landed on the Mapia Islands, 145 miles northwest of Biak on the northern New Guinea coast under cover of a heavy naval bombardment, it was announced today. The small landing force met only slight resistance, and immediately pushed on inland.

The landing was made to knock out Japanese coast watchers who had been operating warning stations on the islands to report on flights of American planes northward, the announcement added.

In the double flanking drive by U.S. troops of the 24th Division at the northern end of the Ormoc corridor on Leyte, a Japanese regiment has been almost completely encircled, an American press service dispatch said today.

The Japanese are fighting desperately from caves and hill positions around Limon, the dispatch continued. But the Americans are slowly annihilating them in savage hand-to-hand fighting.

Commenting today in Washington on developments in Leyte, Major James S. Richardson, American military analyist, said that the Japanese forces are being maneuvered into a more compact formation in their valley positions and are being kept « off balance. » Thus, he added, Gen. Tokoyuki Yamshita, despite his considerable force, is prevented from developing sufficient « elbow room » to take counteraction on a major scale.

Leyte today is an arsenal of liberation in the making, said an American press correspondent in a delayed dispatch describing the transformation of that embattled agricultural land into a formidable U.S. base.

Japan's army and civilians were urged to « overthrow the military » who had led them on a « ruinous adventure, » by Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, Resident Commissioner of the Philippine Commonwealth Government, in a message today over the Voice of Freedom radio on Leyte. He also read a message of congratulations from President Roosevelt on the occasion of the 89th anniversary of the founding of the Commonwealth. (OWI-Reuter)

EAST AFRICANS CAPTURE KALEMYO; CHINESE MILE FROM BHAMO

KANDY, CEYLON, November 16 — East African troops have captured Kalemyo, last remaining stronghold blocking India-China land communications, 16 miles west of Kalewa on the Chindwin River, today's Southeast Asia communique said.

In northern Burma, Chinese troops gained about three miles east of Bhamo yesterday to reach a village about one mile from the town. Two main roads running from it to the south have been cut. Allied troops driving on Bhamo from the north made slight gains.

The taking of Kalemyo climaxes a 200-mile gain by the 5th Indian Division in a month. Any Japanese remaining south or east are faced with the choice of remaining where they are, or moving across treacherous jungles.

The capture of Kalemyo is also an entirely new conquest for the British 14th Army in Burma for, as BBC correspondent Richard Sharpe says, « we have not held it since the Japs drove us out of Burma 2½ years ago. »

Secretary of State for India, L. S. Amery, announced today in the House of Commons that 54,000 Japanese have been killed in operations on the Burma front.

RUSSIANS WITHIN 12 MILES OF BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 16 — Red Army forces, clearing the last fortified villages in the highly-concentrated battleground on the fringes of Budapest, today captured the rail junction of Gyomro (Dyorno), 12 miles southeast of the Hungarian capital, the Soviet communique announced tonight.

Russian tanks and infantry, as well as powerful artillery guns, were reported to be massing around the city on the eastern bank of the Danube. Press correspondents reported late tonight that Red Army troops have broken through the German line covering Budapest and are pouring toward the eastern outskirts.

Battalions of German mobile guns patrolling the city's outskirts are meeting massed Soviet tank attacks. Press dispatches reported that hundreds of German and Hungarians are crossing over to Soviet lines to surrender. The Germans have rushed up more reinforcements which were immediately thinned out by Russian artillery fire.

Red Army forces, driving toward Budapest from the northeast, captured the rail junction town of Jaszarokszallas in a flanking movement, the communique said. They are now 33 miles northeast of Budapest.

While the main Russian forces thrust at Budapest, troops on the northern flank of Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Front are attacking among the mountains near Miskolc. They threaten to cut off German units in this sector from those trying to defend Budapest, and to sever the routes to Austria and central Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet communique reported active reconnaissance activity on other sectors of the front. Yesterday, Red Army troops disabled or destroyed 10 German tanks.

the Americans are slowly annihilating them in savage hand-to-hand fighting.

Commenting today in Washington on developments in Leyte, Major James S. Richardson, American military analyst, said that the Japanese forces are being maneuvered into a more compact formation in their valley positions and are being kept « off balance. » Thus, he added, Gen. Tokoyuki Yamshita, despite his considerable force, is prevented from developing sufficient « elbow room » to take counteraction on a major scale.

Leyte today is an arsenal of liberation in the making, said an American press correspondent in a delayed dispatch describing the transformation of that embattled agricultural land into a formidable U.S. base.

Japan's army and civilians were urged to « overthrow the military » who had led them on a « ruinous adventure, » by Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo, Resident Commissioner of the Philippine Commonwealth Government, in a message today over the Voice of Freedom radio on Leyte. He also read a message of congratulations from President Roosevelt on the occasion of the 89th anniversary of the founding of the Commonwealth. (OWI-Reuter)

EAST AFRICANS CAPTURE KALEMYO; CHINESE MILE FROM BHAMO

KANDY, CEYLON, November 16 — East African troops have captured Kalemyo, last remaining stronghold blocking India-China land communications, 16 miles west of Kalewa on the Chindwin River, today's Southeast Asia communique said.

In northern Burma, Chinese troops gained about three miles east of Bhamo yesterday to reach a village about one mile from the town. Two main roads running from it to the south have been cut. Allied troops driving on Bhamo from the north made slight gains.

The taking of Kalemyo climaxes a 200-mile gain by the 5th Indian Division in a month. Any Japanese remaining south or east are faced with the choice of remaining where they are, or moving across treacherous jungles.

The capture of Kalemyo is also an entirely new conquest for the British 14th Army in Burma for, as BBC correspondent Richard Sharpe says, « we have not held it since the Japs drove us out of Burma 2½ years ago. »

Secretary of State for India, L. S. Amery, announced today in the House of Commons that 54,000 Japanese have been killed in operations on the Burma front.

Meanwhile, a communique from Maj. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer's headquarters in Chungking revealed that B-24 Liberators of the 14th USAAF bombed the Kowloon docks at Hong Kong last night, sinking one enemy cargo vessel and damaging another.

On the East China fronts Monday, Tuesday, and yesterday, fighters attacked troops on the road in the Liuchow area and also sank a river steamer near Sancha. Railroads and bridges also were hit at Liuchow.

In the central China area, P-40's of Maj. Gen. Clair Chennault's Chinese-American Wing attacked the Siangtan Airfield Monday. Buildings and installations were damaged on the airfield.

Bombers set afire Pingka, on the Salween front, while others destroyed 90 per cent of an enemy-held village three miles north of Mangshih.

The communique revealed that Japanese headquarters at Chefang was attacked, and that fires were started in an enemy occupied area on the Burma Road at Wanting.

The Chinese High Command in Chungking announced today that Japanese forces in Kwangsi have advanced to within 4½ miles of the Kwangsi-Kweichow railway town of Ishan, which, according to the Associated Press, blocks an invasion of the Province of Kweichow.

In the Mogaung-Mandalay railway corridor, British troops made slight gains in stubborn fighting just north of Pinwe about 85 miles southwest of Mogaung. In the Arakan sector, West African troops captured another position west of Paletwa. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

2,400 HEAVIES STRIKE EAST OF AACHEN

LONDON, November 16 — Upwards of 2,400 Allied bombers, accompanied by strong forces of fighter escorts, today blasted key German fortified positions blocking the Allied advance east from Aachen to Cologne and other industrial centers of the Rhineland.

Huge bombing fleets of both the RAF and the USAAF participated in the devastating attack. All reports indicate that the bombings were highly successful.

Over 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the USAAF blanketed the Düren-Eschweiler sector with a concentrated attack intended to reduce the two German strongholds due east of Aachen, lying astride the Aachen-Cologne Highway. They were escorted by 450 Thunderbolt and Mustang fighters.

Within a few hours of this attack, more than 1,150 RAF bombers, accompanied by 250 fighters, went for targets in the same general area. In addition to hitting Düren, the bombers shattered Jülich, northwest of Düren and a key point on another Aachen-Cologne Highway. The RAF planes also bombed Heinsberg, north of Aachen and just east of the Allied front lines in this sector.

In announcing the attack, the Air Ministry for the first time used the term « master bombers » in describing how the bombing was controlled. According to Reuter, these planes control every stage of the attack, including the identification of the target.

Meanwhile, it was announced that in yesterday's RAF attack on Dortmund and the night bombing of Berlin, three bombers were lost. Airfields in Germany also were attacked in yesterday's operations. (OWI - Reuter)

LIAISON PLANES AIDED IN CAPTURE OF FORT

NEW YORK, November 16 — Five unarmed liaison planes attached to the U. S. 90th Infantry Division aided in the capture of Fort Königsmacker, on the northern flank of the American 3rd Army front, an American press service reported today.

The dispatch said that two infantry companies had mounted the top of a fortress held by Germans remaining inside the fort. The American troops were stranded by swiftly-rising Moselle waters without demolitions to blast the doors of the fort.

The American forces sent messages back to headquarters requesting aid, the report said, but they did not count on five liaison planes loaded with 50 pounds of plastic explosives. The midget planes winged out over the swollen Moselle and dropped their bundles of explosives almost at the feet of the American troops, who then went to work and blasted in all the doors. (OWI)

CANADIANS THWART TORPEDO LAUNCHINGS

NEW YORK, November 16 — The Canadian 1st Army frustrated attempts by 200 one-man torpedoes to blow up Allied vessels which would try to run the blockade into Antwerp, an American press service dispatch reported today.

Former German swimming stars, thickly coated with grease and equipped with skin-tight black rubber suits and caps, were prepared to guide the torpedoes through the Schelde Estuary, the dispatch said.

The Canadian 1st Army captured the German swimmers in fortifications two miles from Flushing on Walcheren Island during mopping-up operations. (OWI)

Liberator bombers, acting as the « big guns » of the combined Russian, Partisan, and Allied air forces' attack on fleeing German columns in Yugoslavia, today struck at enemy forces making their way along the Pristina-Sarajevo Highway, with exceptionally good results reported at Visegrad, 35 miles east of Sarajevo.

An escort fighter pilot returning from one of the missions into Germany alone, after the failure of his plane's radio instruments, set a new record bag of enemy planes for an individual pilot by shooting down four out of 12 enemy aircraft which attacked him simultaneously. The fighter pilot, 22-year-old Captain John J. Voll, now has the highest individual total of enemy planes — 21 — in this theater.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force were out in strength today, blasting enemy targets across the Po Valley from the Milan-Cremona-Parma area to the battle area south of Bologna.

Yesterday, Beaufighters of the Balkan Air Force obtained 32 rocket hits on the German-occupied palace of King Zog near Tirana, Albania, in a second attack which left the enemy headquarters « finished, » it was announced here today.

The roof of the large, modern, L-shaped structure collapsed in a mass of flames as a result of yesterday's heavy attacks on Austrian targets, while Liberators, accompanied November 7, also by the rocket-firing Beaufighters.

Other Balkan Air Force rocket-firing planes scored 138 hits on other buildings, used for barracks, in the Tirana area.

Bad weather yesterday restricted operations of the MAAF to 350 sorties. Medium bombers did not operate, but unescorted heavy bombers carried out instrument bombing attacks on Austrian targets, while Liberators, accompanied by Lightning fighters, hit enemy troop concentrations near Novi Bazar, in Yugoslavia. R.N. TORPEDO BOATS SINK SCHOONER, ESCORT SHIPS

LONDON, November 16 — Three British motor torpedo-boats off the Dalmation coast last night sank an enemy schooner with two escorting R-boats and at least two out of five escorting E-boats, it was announced here today. The remainder of the E-boats were damaged and 65 Germans captured.

Spotting the schooner in darkness, the MTB's fired star shells to increase visibility. One of these, descended into a bucket of petrol on the schooner's deck, set the whole craft ablaze and illuminated her escort. The schooner's crew began jumping into the sea.

The British vessels engaged the R-and E-boats for just under an hour. One MTB was hit and put temporarily out of action, but its crew were able to watch while two of the enemy E-boats made off at high speed and then began to attack each other, both scoring hits.

All of the British vessels returned safely to base. (PRO)

MARK CLARK DECORATED BY RUSSIAN GENERAL

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 16 — Lt. Gen. Mark Clark has been presented with the Order of Suvorov (First Class), highest military award of the Soviet Union to be given to an Allied general, it was announced here today.

The award was made by Maj. Gen. Ivan Susloparov, Soviet representative on the Allied Commission in Italy, at the 5th Army front yesterday, in the midst of a severe sleet storm.

The citation stated that General Clark had displayed « outstanding military leadership » in the Italian Campaign.

COMMANDOS ATTACK AEGEAN ISLE OF MELOS

ADVANCE AFHQ., ITALY, November 16 — A small force of Commandos have attacked German installations on the Aegean Island of Melos, and, after inflicting casualties and taking prisoners, have withdrawn, an announcement of the Royal Navy reported today.

The lightning attack on the island, westernmost of the Cyclades Group off the southeastern end of the Peloponnesus, was made on Tuesday, the announcement said. The warships accompanying the landing forces engaged an enemy battery on the island while the raid was in progress.

Melos Island is the site of a former Greek naval base, and is probably heavily garrisoned by German forces unable to make their escape from the Aegean, now completely under Allied naval and air control. (PRO)

ITALIAN FLIERS ATTACK 1,100 ENEMY VEHICLES

ROME, November 16 — The fighter wing of the Italian Air Force attacked about 1,100 enemy motor vehicles in one day's sorties, it was announced here today.

One column of 500 cars and trucks was attacked by these fighter pilots near Pristina (Balkans).

They destroyed 33 vehicles, including a mobile gun, and damaged another 62, including an armored car, by bombing and by cannon and machine-gun fire.

Italian Spitfire and Airacobra fighter-bombers attacked a bridge on the Durazzo Road, and scored two direct hits. (UNN)

UNPLEASANT SURPRISES FOR JAPAN PREDICTED

BOSTON, November 16 — U.S. Secretary of Navy James Forrestal, in a letter addressed to The New England Council's War Conference which is in session here today, said: «We have in store some unpleasant surprises for the Japs,» that «we are making good progress in the Pacific,» and that it remains «a long tough struggle».

Commodore Arleigh A. Burke, who fought in the second naval battle of the Philippines, warned that the Pacific War would take «longer than most people think,» involving a costly invasion that would have to meet «a far more powerful army of hardened veterans than Germany had.» (OWI)

DECISIVE BATTLES TO BE ON ASIATIC MAINLAND

CHUNGKING, November 16 — Maj. Gen. Albert Wedemeyer, commander of United States forces in China and Chief of Staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, in an interview here today said that Japan plans to fight the final decisive battles of the war on the Asiatic mainland, and is steadily reinforcing her substantial strength in South China.

General Wedemeyer, according to Associated Press, said that Japanese strategy, originally based on employment of naval and air forces, had proved ineffective. The Japanese now have gone from an oceanic to a continental strategy, he said, adding, «the Japanese Army is fairly well intact and well-trained and equipped.»

He said that «the best way the Allies can help China is to bring all available resources to bear on the one object — and that is killing Japanese.»

The press dispatch quoted General Wedemeyer as saying that America would continue to support China from the air, bring in whatever supplies possible, maintain efforts in the Pacific to subjugate the Japanese, and organize and train Chinese troops to increase their efficiency. (OWI)

SOCIALISTS ASK ANNULMENT OF ARMISTICE

ROME, November 16 — The Italian Socialist Party today called on Socialist Parties and workers' organizations of the Allied Nations to declare the Italian Armistice null and void, in a declaration made public here.

The declaration also asked for non-military control exercised by the Allied Commission to be reduced, and that Italy be sent the aid necessary to repair the destruction caused by the war.

This demand is justified, the declaration said, by the sacrifices of the Italian people during the last 20 years and the present struggle of the Partisans and the Italian Armed Forces against the Nazis. The declaration added that the Committees of National Liberation are «the only ones who can today represent the nation and guide it in its struggle for independence, for the creation of the new democratic state, and for the moral and material reconstruction of the nation.»

Calling on the new Italian democracy to break with the old political and the social structure of the Fascist state, the declaration asked for «vigorous action by the government, by local administrations, and by mass organizations against reactionary forces which are impeding the democratization of the country.»

Asking that all anti-Fascist parties lay aside their differences, the Socialist declaration said that towards this end «the Socialist Party is ready to pledge all its energies and its prestige, and to assume in the Government and in the administration of the country responsibilities equal to its strength and its duty as the vanguard of the nation.»

In its struggle to destroy every trace of Fascism from Italy, the declaration continued, the Socialist Party counts not only «on popular organizations and on the aid of all progressive classes of the nation, but also on the understanding that the cause of Italian democracy should find in the socialist and workers' organizations of the world.» (UNN)

REPATRIATION OF ITALIAN PRISONERS INCREASES

ROME, November 16 — Italian prisoners of war are being repatriated at a continually increasing rate, the Allied Commission said today.

In September, prisoners brought back to their homeland averaged 30 a day. In October, they were returned from North Africa and India at the rate of 120 daily.

In November, the latter average will be exceeded, AC's Sub-Commission on War Materials Disposal and Italian Prisoners of War predicted.

In November, the latter average will be exceeded, AC's Sub-Commission on War Materials Disposal and Italian Prisoners of War predicted.

The largest party of repatriates so far received consisted of 1,533 especially trained in sanitation work. They arrived recently at Naples to aid in the rehabilitation of public health programs throughout liberated Italy.

October's arrivals included 800 men experienced in police work. Of these, former Carabinieri totaled 500, and former Guardie di Finanza 300.

The prisoners are being repatriated under a joint policy developed by Allied military authorities, the Italian Government, and the Allied Commission.

Priority of selection is determined now by considerations of illness, wounds, age, family conditions, or specific skills required for Italy's reconstruction. The plan is subject to availability of shipping. (UNN)

ROSSELLI MURDERS ACCOMPLICE ARRESTED

ROME, November 16 Captain Manlio Petrignani, now on active service with the Carabinieri, was arrested today by order of Mario Berlinguer, High Commissioner for the Punishment of Fascist Crimes, on a charge of participating in the murder of the Rosselli brothers.

Carlo and Nello Rosselli were murdered in France by personal order of Mussolini on 10 June 1937. They were kidnapped by Cagoulards acting on instructions from the Italian Consulate in Paris, taken to an isolated spot in the Normandy countryside, and there stabbed to death.

Carlo Rosselli, exiled to the prison settlement of Lipari Island for his opposition to the Fascist régime, made a dramatic escape to France in 1926. There he founded the anti-Fascist movement Giustizia e Liberta, forerunner of the present Action Party, and organised the Garibaldi Legion which fought in Spain. Nello Rosselli, who was visiting his brother when the murder was planned, was a history professor of Florence University, and took no active part in politics.

As far as can be ascertained, the other persons suspected of participation in the murder are not at present in liberated Italy. (UNN)

ITALIAN GENERAL ARRESTED

ITALIAN VICTIMS OF NAZISM RECOGNIZED

ROME, November 16 — All Italians, military or civilian, who died fighting the Germans or were shot by them in revenge, will be made honorary members of the Military Resistance Front, the War Ministry announced today.

This measure, which is retroactive to 1 September 1943, means that the victims' families will receive the same army pensions as relatives of members of the regular Resistance Front. (UNN)

CRIME IN ROME DROPS

ROME, November 16 — A notable decrease in crime in Rome was reported today by the Allied Commission.

Last week, crimes were 26 per cent less than the previous week, reports of the Public Safety Division of Lazio-Umbria (Rome) Region, AMG, showed. For example, there were only seven robberies, compared with 11 the week before.

Total serious crimes in the last three weeks were:

Oct. 22 to 28	96
Oct. 29 to Nov. 4	73
Nov. 5 to Nov. 11	54

Civilian crimes last week dropped more than 50 per cent, while crimes by military personnel were 70 per cent lower, which was directly traceable to the recent arrest of two large gangs of deserters of various nationalities, officials said.

Civil police arrested 337 persons on criminal charges in the three weeks (Oct. 22 to Nov. 11).

Increased mobile night teams of Allied military police, Carabinieri, and Metropolitani now are patrolling the city every night in some 30 trucks to promote safety of the public after dark. (UNN)

DISMISSAL OF ALLEGED FASCIST DEMANDED

ROME, November 16 — Dismissal of Captain Giulietti from the Italian Maritime Confederation and the Garibaldi Cooperative, was demanded by the Italian General Confederation of Labor as the prime condition toward granting the former Organisations' request for affiliation, it was announced at a meeting today of the Confederation's secretariat and central committee.

tegiusto Tavolicci in Commune Verghereto in the Province of Forli last July, a United Nations News correspondent was told today.

On July 21, Fascist party leaders and police took reprisals against 71 inhabitants of the village because of alleged civilian sabotage, refusal to coöperate with the occupying Germans, and general animosity toward the Nazis and Fascists alike.

As many inhabitants of the village as could be found were rounded up by the Fascists. Sixty-one women, old men, and children — even infants — were locked up in a farmhouse while 10 able-bodied men were lined up against a wall outside the farmhouse.

In full view of the imprisoned villagers, the 10 men were machine-gunned and the farmhouse was set on fire. As screaming relatives attempted to escape from the pyre, they were mowed down by machine guns.

Some women and children scrambled to the roof, hoping to escape by jumping to the side other than that where the machine-guns continued to spit bullets.

A woman, with a child in her arms and another clinging to her skirt, was shot as she reached the roof. As she fell to the ground, her 10-months-old child toppled from her arms to safety on a hay-mound. The infant was the only one to escape unscathed.

Fifty-two of the women, old men, and children were killed, either by bullets from Nazi machine-guns or by fire set by the Fascists.

Nine others were wounded. (UNN)

FORLI' ADMINISTERED BY ENEMY OF FASCISM

FORLI', November 16 — This liberated city today has a new Commissario Prefettizio, a man — says a UNN correspondent — whose long fight against Fascism made him the unanimous and immediate choice alike of Forli's citizens and of Allied military officials. He is Franco Agosto, for seven years a prisoner of the Fascist régime on Ponza Island in the Gulf of Naples, jailed by the Nazis, and sentenced to be shot.

Agosto, who hid in the mountains for 12 months until the Allies freed Forli when he was selected to administer the town's civic affairs, told the UNN correspondent that party strife would be shunned by the Committee of National Liberation.

«Our work,» he said, «is for the common ideal of reconstruction in Forli, and in making our contribution to the reëstablishment of Italy and the welfare of Italians. Our aim is universal happiness, and we stand firm with the United Nations. The arrival of the Allies here was hailed as a deliverance, and our main desire is to contribute to the effort to speed Allied victory and lasting peace.»

The correspondent said shops are open again in Forli, and that a factory making grates and stoves is doing a rushing business. (UNN)

ITALIAN Y.W.C.A. PLANS NATIONAL CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, November 16 — Plans for a national conference of the Italian branch of the Young Women's Christian Association were disclosed in a letter from Mary Rossi, the National General Secretary, writing to the YWCA World Headquarters in Washington.

Miss Rossi, who was writing in connection with the celebrations of the YWCA's 50th anniversary next Sunday, said that the Italian conference would be held «as soon as we can get in touch with the people up north.» (OWI)

ITALIAN VICTIMS OF NAZISM RECOGNIZED

ROME, November 16 — All Italians, military or civilian, who died fighting the Germans or were shot by them in revenge, will be made honorary members of the Military Resistance Front, the War Ministry announced today.

This measure, which is retroactive to 1 September 1943, means that the victims' families will receive the same army pensions as relatives of members of the regular Resistance Front. (UNN)

CRIME IN ROME DROPS

ROME, November 16 — A notable decrease in crime in Rome was reported today by the Allied Commission.

Last week, crimes were 26 per cent less than the previous week, reports of the Public Safety Division of Lazio-Umbria (Rome) Region, AMG, showed. For example, there were only seven robberies, compared with 11 the week before.

Total serious crimes in the last three weeks were:

Oct. 22 to 28	96
Oct. 29 to Nov. 4	73
Nov. 5 to Nov. 11	54

Civilian crimes last week dropped more than 50 per cent, while crimes by military personnel were 70 per cent lower, which was directly traceable to the recent arrest of two large gangs of deserters of various nationalities, officials said.

Civil police arrested 337 persons on criminal charges in the three weeks (Oct. 22 to Nov. 11).

Increased mobile night teams of Allied military police, Carabinieri, and Metropolitani now are patrolling the city every night in some 30 trucks to promote safety of the public after dark. (UNN)

DISMISSAL OF ALLEGED FASCIST DEMANDED

ROME, November 16 — Dismissal of Captain Giulietti from the Italian Maritime Confederation and the Garibaldi Cooperative, was demanded by the Italian General Confederation of Labor as the prime condition toward granting the former Organisations' request for affiliation, it was announced at a meeting today of the Confederation's secretariat and central committee.

The IGCL alleged that Captain Giulietti, besides receiving subsidies from the Fascist chief of police, wrote letters to Mussolini exalting the Fascist Government's aggressive war, and defining as «traitors to the Fatherland» those who dissented from Fascism.

Giulietti also was alleged to have been paid up to 100,000 lire during February 1944 by the Fascist Republican Government.

Other conditions laid down by the IGCL were that the Maritime Confederation base their policy on «truly democratic lines, as in all other syndical organisations belonging to the IGCL.» (UNN)

MASSACRE OF 62 IN FORLI' PROVINCE REVEALED

HQ, AAI, November 16 — Sixty-two Italian men, women, and children, were either burned to death or machine-gunned fatally by Fascists and Germans at Monarms to safety on a hay-mound. The infant was the only one to escape unscathed.

Fifty-two of the women, old men, and children were killed, either by bullets from Nazi machine-guns or by fire set by the Fascists.

Nine others were wounded. (UNN)

FORLI' ADMINISTERED BY ENEMY OF FASCISM

FORLI', November 16 — This liberated city today has a new Commissario Prefettizio, a man — says a UNN correspondent — whose long fight against Fascism made him the unanimous and immediate choice alike of Forli's citizens and of Allied military officials. He is Franco Agosto, for seven years a prisoner of the Fascist régime on Ponza Island in the Gulf of Naples, jailed by the Nazis, and sentenced to be shot.

Agosto, who hid in the mountains for 12 months until the Allies freed Forli when he was selected to administer the town's civic affairs, told the UNN correspondent that party strife would be shunned by the Committee of National Liberation.

U.K. WAR CONTROLS TO PERSIST UNTIL JAP DEFEAT

LONDON, November 16 — The existing British system of allocating manpower to armed forces and industries will be maintained during the period between the defeat of Germany and the defeat of Japan, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons in reply to questions today. Until Japan had been defeated, he said, the war must have the first call on all the country's efforts.

«As stated in the White Paper to be published today,» he told the House, «the existing system allocating manpower to forces and various industries will be maintained. Nevertheless, it is intended to mitigate, as far as possible, the rigidity of the existing controls over labor.»

Many wartime controls over raw materials, industrial capacity, agriculture, food, transport, and so forth, would likewise be as necessary in the period between the defeat of Germany and the defeat of Japan as they were today, Mr. Churchill said, but here, too, relaxations were possible, and would be made whenever circumstances permitted in an orderly manner.

Any other course, he added, might lead to inflation, would harm the economic life of the country, and would make it impossible to ensure that the nation's resources were devoted to its essential needs and fairly distributed.

After the defeat of Germany, it would be possible and necessary to turn over an increasing part of the nation's resources to civilian production, and exertions must be made to restore export trade and reëquip industry, he said.

The Prime Minister was cheered when he said: «The shortage of housing, both permanent and emergency, must be grappled with as if it were a wartime measure. Active steps must be taken to relieve the shortage of civilian goods.»

The Prime Minister's exposition of the Government view of the reallocation of manpower was echoed by Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, who said:

«We are determined to finish the Japanese war as quickly as possible, even if we have to suffer a little longer at home for lack of civilian products, exports, or anything else.»

Production essential for the war against Japan, he added, would take highest priority when British manpower was reallocated after Germany's defeat.

Discussing the Government White Paper, he said that the main points were, first, eased control over manpower; second, the call-up of men between 18 and 27 for the forces; and third, no further call-up of women for the armed forces.

Persons released from the armed forces, he stated, would be allowed to «look around» for a period before becoming controlled again. Some women with domestic responsibilities would be allowed to leave industry. Broad principles governing the scheme were that certain classes of persons whose retention in industry would be a considerable personal hardship should be allowed to retire. Persons who had been away from home for a long time should be transferred back home if practicable. Experienced workers should be transferred back to their former industries.

The Government, said the Minister, establishes the important principle that in redistribution of manpower it intends to rely on voluntary methods where possible, and to use compulsion only where it cannot be avoided.

He added that there were certain minimum powers of control which the Government felt it must maintain over the movement of labor. Future control would place a larger onus of responsibility upon the employer, and less on the employee. (Reuter)

BRITAIN INTERESTED IN AUSTRIA'S FUTURE

LONDON, November 16 — Britain is particularly interested in the future of Austria, Sir Stafford Cripps, British Minister of Aircraft Production, told a meeting held here yesterday to celebrate the foundation of the Austrian Republic.

«It will be of no use to reestablish democracy in Austria,» he said, «if it is to be allowed to perish within a few years. It will be our job to cooperate closely with the Soviet Union to insure the future safety of Europe.»

He added that the essential function of any international organization would be to make sure that the independence of small states was not menaced by the infiltration of aggressive neighbors. (PWB)

THREE RESIGN FROM BELGIAN CABINET

BRUSSELS, November 16 — Three members of the Belgian Cabinet resigned today. Two of them, Albert Marteaux, Minister for Public Health, and R. Dispy, Minister Without Portfolio, are Communists. The other is M. F. Demany, Minister Without Portfolio. A Reuter dispatch did not give a reason for their resignation, but it was recalled that the Government of Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot has been the target of left-wing criticism on its food policies.

Maj. Gen. G. W. Erskine, Allied Deputy Commander, has informed the Belgian Government that Allied forces will assist the government with a view of ensuring respect for the law and maintenance of order, because both are essential for the conduct of military operations. The message was broadcast by the Belgian radio today at the request of the Inter-Allied High Command. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

BRITAIN, FRANCE AGREED ON PEACE PLAN

PARIS, November 16 — Fundamental agreement between Britain and France regarding the continuation of the war until total victory and the establishment of an international organization for peace was reached in the recent talks between General Charles de Gaulle, Prime Minister Winston Churchill, and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, General de Gaulle told a meeting of the French Council of Ministers yesterday.

The Council of Ministers ratified the participation of France as a permanent member of the European Advisory Commission, said the French news agency, AFP. (PWB)

U.S. WANTS FULLY INDEPENDENT ALBANIA

WASHINGTON, November 16 — The U.S.A. has «repeatedly emphasised its desire for the Albanian people's full independence,» U. S. Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius told his press conference yesterday, commenting on the fact that the U. S. had not recognized any one of the Albanian resistance groups as the Albanian authority.

Three resistance groups were now fighting in Albania, he said, and the Germans had been driven out of the major part of the country.

He added that there will be many problems facing the Albanian people because of the distress created by the German occupation, and resulting in part from diverse traditions and cultural background.

«We expect,» he said, «that in laying the foundation for their regained independence, these sturdy people will be guided by a spirit of mutual trust, tolerance, and coöperation in working out their own political and social problems.»

Portugal's reply to the U. S. note asking assurances that she would not give refuge to war criminals has been received, Stettinius told his press conference. He said that the reply was «not entirely satisfactory,» and that the matter was still under discussion.

He announced that a note from Argentina had been received and was being examined. (OWI)

RUSSIA WANTS PEACE WITH ALL STATES

WASHINGTON, November 16 — The cardinal points of Moscow's foreign policy were outlined by the Soviet Information Board here today. Moscow, said a statement by the Board, recognizes the «coexistence of two systems» — presumably communism and capitalism — and Russia has no intention of intervening in the domestic affairs of other states.

The statement reiterated Moscow's pronouncements of peaceful post-war objectives, and lists what are termed «six fundamental principles of Russia's foreign policy. These principles are:

1. Peaceful relations with all states, irrespective of their political systems.

2. Economic and political cooperation with all states on a basis of sovereign equality, and independence of the contracting parties and of the coexistence of two systems.

3. Alliances with any states with the purpose of protecting both partners from acts of aggression.

4. Categorical renunciation of imperialist expansion at the cost of other nations.

5. Non-intervention in the internal affairs of other states.

6. The strengthening of the coalition of freedom-loving nations in the fight against the Fascist aggressors. (OWI)

SUMNER WELLES URGES SECURITY ORGANIZATION

NEW YORK, November 16 — A world security organization, capable of maintaining the peace and of working toward world order and world social and economic progress, should be set up now in order that it might get to work before the end of hostilities, Sumner Welles, former Under Secretary of State, said last night in an address before the American Academy of Political Science.

Welles, who hailed the American election results as a triumph over the «tenets of isolationism,» warned that no common agreement on all details of a world organization could be found among all the United Nations, and that therefore no international structure ever would be set up if nations refused to enter until it was perfect.

«Every man and woman in The United States,» Welles said, «will have to continue putting his heart and soul into the task of making the peace settlements and the plans for the world organization actually work.» (OWI)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 16 — Today's communique:

Allied forces continued to advance in the Weert area yesterday, pushing forward to a depth of 7,000 yards despite difficult roads and enemy mines.

Transportation targets and gun positions in the Thionville area were attacked by small numbers of fighter-bombers. In this sector, our ground forces cleared Illange, and farther south Fèves and Quaraille have been liberated.

We repulsed counter-attacks in the Enschweiler-Landorf area. Our forces are in Morchingen, Baronweiler, and Gebling and other units reached the Marsal area, and the village of Harraucourt.

Northeast of Baccarat, our troops freed Sainte Pole after hard fighting. In this sector the enemy holds commanding ground and our progress is slow.

Constant pressure continued to force a slow enemy withdrawal southeast of Bruyères.

In the Belfort sector, our troops advanced several miles in the Doubs River area.

A number of villages have been liberated, including Marvelise, Montenois, Lougres, Ecot, and Ecurcey. Several hundred prisoners have been taken.

A synthetic oil plant at Dortmund was attacked by escorted heavy bombers. Berlin was hit by forces of light bombers yesterday evening. (Reuter)

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 16 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On November 1, a group of Piedmont Patriots attacked an enemy column near Rivoli. Twenty Germans were killed and many others wounded.

On November 9, Patriots carried out acts of sabotage along the Turin-Chivasso line, using mines. Traffic was interrupted for several hours.

A few days earlier, near San Didero, a troop train was immobilized by a squad of engineers belonging to a Garibaldi brigade. The locomotive was wrecked and five carriages rendered useless.

On October 28, at Sant'Ambroglo di Torino, seven Germans were taken prisoner.

Patriots attacked another train near Grisignano di Zocco, in Vicenza Province, destroying both the locomotive and four fully-loaded goods trucks.

In the Spezia zone, Patriot activity continues to be very considerable. The Germans having had sufficient of the consequences, have entrusted the task of combatting this activity to the Fascists.

West of Forli, British troops have made further gains near Monte Poggiolo, and have captured Petrignone.

Farther west, Polish troops have improved their positions north of the Florence-Forli Road, which is now entirely in our hands.

In the 5th Army sector, there were no significant changes in our forward positions, but patrols have been active along the entire front.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Adverse weather caused cancellation of most air activity yesterday, but a small number of heavy bombers attacked targets in southern Austria and in Yugoslavia.

Fighter-bombers attacked a few targets in the Italian battle area and in Albania. Adriatic shipping was attacked by medium bombers and fighters.

From these operations, six of our aircraft are missing. There were no claims.

MAAF flew about 350 sorties.

Navy:

On November 14, a small Commando-type landing was made on the Island of Melos. Casualties were inflicted on the enemy and prisoners were taken. At the same time, an enemy battery was engaged by His Majesty's Ships.

The commandos were subsequently withdrawn. (PRO)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 16 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

On the western front, in southeastern Holland and in the Lorraine frontier area, our troops are engaged in fierce defensive fighting against the attacking enemy divisions. Between the Noorder Canal at Weert and the Belgian frontier, the attacks of strong British tank formations developed into grim fighting.

Northeast and east of Diedenhofen, the battle flared up again after a short lull. Fresh U. S. tank forces succeeded, only after grim and fluctuating fighting, in making gains and broadening the bridgehead on the eastern banks of the Moselle.

In the Metz sector, the fierce defensive fighting against enemy forces who launched a concentric attack is in full swing.

East of Gravelotte, the enemy was ousted from a penetration. Our grenadiers and tanks, despite strong enemy pressure, held the battle area between the upper reaches of the French Nied and Dieuze. The Americans penetrated Mörchingen after grim fighting.

South of Dieuze, important hills were recaptured by our counter-attacks, and a number of enemy tanks were destroyed.

Between the Rhine-Marne Canal and the upper reaches of the Meurthe on both sides of the upper Doubs, local fighting for some enemy penetrations is in progress.

London and Antwerp again were subjected to bombardment with our retaliatory weapons.

Italy:

In central Italy, the British attack ceased for the time being. The enemy attacked neither in the Romagna nor in the mountains between Forli and Modigliano.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, our troops reached the area north of the Elbasan-Skoplje line.

East of Budapest, fresh major Soviet attacks were frustrated after small initial successes. Nine enemy tanks were destroyed.

Yesterday, only small-scale operations were reported from the other parts of the eastern front.

Naval:

A strong formation of British cruisers and destroyers attacked a German convoy off the coast of western Norway. Our light escort forces engaged the enemy, though his artillery force was 25 times superior to ours. They kept the enemy formation busy in heroic and devoted fighting till important parts of our convoy had reached the port of destination.

Air:

During the day, Anglo-American terror bombers dropped bombs indiscriminately on western and southern Reich territory.

The Reich capital and localities in western Germany were attacked by British nuisance raiders during the night.

GERMAN

« Usual Frankness » on « Tragic Event »: The German Admiral Saalwechter states today: « With its usual frankness the German army bulletin of November 14th announced the tragic event which happened to the German fleet in having the most up-to-date battleship, the Tirpitz, put out of action by a British air attack. » The Admiral admits: « For the time being, Germany no longer has any battleship which can tie down British battleships of a similar type in the North Sea or in European waters. »

However, the Admiral immediately thereafter adds, with emphasis, that not Germany but Japan will be the chief sufferer from the loss of the Tirpitz, as British battleships might now become available for use in Far Eastern waters.

Giraud Mystery: While Radio Algiers tonight has described a meeting between Giraud and de Gaulle in Paris, Transocean announces from Germany that Giraud is supposedly in Geneva, playing a part in some sort of movement against the de Gaulle government. In recent days, German sources have been connecting General Giraud with the French claimant to the throne, who has been arrested on the Spanish frontier. « Swiss political circles are leaving it the west, in East Prussia, in Kurland (Baltic states), round Budapest, and in Italy. In East Prussia, the Bolsheviks have not succeeded in breaking through. The big attempt at breaking through toward Budapest failed in the same way as did the invasion of the Ruhr area via Holland or the attempt at reaching the Saar. »

Local Attacks in Forli and Faenza Areas: Allied attacks in the Forli area and south of Faenza were said to have been ineffectual, supposedly as a result of « the heavy losses suffered by British and Polish units during the past few days. » One broadcast, however, admitted that the Allies achieved slight successes in some points near Forli. South of Bologna, Allied activity was said to have been hampered by bad weather and by German artillery fire.

Carretta Incident Evoked: The Fascist radio tonight makes capital of a United Nations News despatch which allegedly summarizes the Carretta incident as a mob crime rather than a politically provoked lynching. Two points are made; first, that Allied propaganda has had to retract its original analysis of Carretta as a sinister Fascist criminal, and second, that the presumably disorganized police forces in Rome showed excessive negligence in not arresting (then or later) the common murderers involved.

Increasing Chaos in Rome: Tonight's « quote » for allegedly chaotic conditions in Rome is taken from the Göteborg newspaper Handels Tidningen. The Swedish paper's Rome correspondent, after blaming the existent disorder and disorganization on the Bonomi Government, observes ironically that the only abundance in Rome is that of political parties; five new parties, she asserts, have sprouted in the last five days.

It is further stated that the « tragic situation » in Rome has worsened because of fights between the populace and the Carabinieri, « the people accusing the latter of being in favor of the Monarchy ».

Sicily and Sardinia: « There is continued resistance of Sicilian farmers to Allied orders. » The incident cited as proof of this internecine state of affairs is one involving the seizure, by Palermo Carabinieri, of hidden wheat.

The new theme of alleged strife in Sardinia is tonight illustrated indirectly rather than by specific narration of disorder. It is pertinently reported that the High Commissioner for Sardinia (in a report given before today's assembly of the Bonomi ministers) revealed a gloomy picture of general poverty on the island and a collapse of communications both within Sardinia and externally with the Continent.

Meeting of Fascist Ministerial Council: It is announced that Mussolini today presided over a meeting of the Fascist Council of Ministers. Mussolini himself spoke on the political and military situation, Marshal Graziani on the military situation alone, and the Minister of Finance on the fiscal status for the past and coming year. The Ministers adopted a resolution involving the need for « strengthening of public finances and defending the value of the lire, in particular ». The resolution also appealed to all loyal Fascists to fight against speculation « in this very grave hour of the fatherland's history. »

Propaganda Minister for « Pratical Socialism »: Radio Budapest tonight quoted a long speech by the Hungarian Minister of Propaganda, stressing the supposed pro-proletarian qualities of the present pro-Nazi dictatorship. Typical excerpts:

« On October 15, 1944 [day of the Nazi coup in Hungary] the seemingly unshakeable bastions of liberalism, Jewish capitalism, and the remnants of feudalism were wiped off the pages of history. Seemingly we had been free before that date, but, in reality, we were very much like slaves because we supported a system keeping us on a starvation level. the Elbasan-Skoplje line.

East of Budapest, fresh major Soviet attacks were frustrated after small initial successes. Nine enemy tanks were destroyed.

Yesterday, only small-scale operations were reported from the other parts of the eastern front.

Naval:

A strong formation of British cruisers and destroyers attacked a German convoy off the coast of western Norway. Our light escort forces engaged the enemy, though his artillery force was 25 times superior to ours. They kept the enemy formation busy in heroic and devoted fighting till important parts of our convoy had reached the port of destination.

Air:

During the day, Anglo-American terror bombers dropped bombs indiscriminately on western and southern Reich territory.

The Reich capital and localities in western Germany were attacked by British nuisance raiders during the night.

GERMAN

«Usual Frankness» on «Tragic Event»: The German Admiral Saalwechter states today: «With its usual frankness the German army bulletin of November 14th announced the tragic event which happened to the German fleet in having the most up-to-date battleship, the Tirpitz, put out of action by a British air attack.» The Admiral admits: «For the time being, Germany no longer has any battleship which can tie down British battleships of a similar type in the North Sea or in European waters.»

However, the Admiral immediately thereafter adds, with emphasis, that not Germany but Japan will be the chief sufferer from the loss of the Tirpitz, as British battleships might now become available for use in Far Eastern waters.

Giraud Mystery: While Radio Algiers tonight has described a meeting between Giraud and de Gaulle in Paris, Transocean announces from Germany that Giraud is supposedly in Geneva, playing a part in some sort of movement against the de Gaulle government. In recent days, German sources have been connecting General Giraud with the French claimant to the throne, who has been arrested on the Spanish frontier. «Swiss political circles are leaving it open whether or not General Giraud came to Switzerland to escape arrest after he, in his capacity as leader of the conservative nationalist opposition, acted against de Gaulle.»

German Fronts «Stabilized»: One of the most optimistic military surveys emanating from the German Radio in recent months, in striking contrast with the grim pictures presented by General Dittmar, is tonight's speech by Dr. Scharping of the Goebbels Ministry of Propaganda. Scharping claims:

«The military situation may in general be considered as stabilized. This sentence characterizes the situation in

AMERICANS 8 MILES SOUTH OF METZ ARMORED UNIT DRIVES EASTWARD

SHAEF, November 11 — The American 3rd Army, in the fourth day of its offensive, drove to within eight miles of its objective of Metz today as tank units of the U. S. 6th Armored Division cut across the Pont à Mousson-Saarbruecken highway to capture the town of Silly en Saulnois.

To the east, armored and infantry units made a six-mile advance in 24 hours, capturing the town of Luppy. Five miles to the southeast, a tank-led spearhead rolled into Lucy, directly threatening one of the three main rail lines feeding the German-held fortress city of Metz. American forces in this sector have contacted a larger and more stubborn body of Germans who have been ordered to defend the rail line.

GELSENKIRCHEN AND COBLENZ BOMBED

LONDON, November 11. — American and British heavy bombers combined to deliver a heavy blow to German oil and railway targets in the Ruhr and Rhineland today. These daylight attacks were executed despite heavy snowstorms over Germany, and followed two concentrated attacks during the night on Hanover.

Gelsenkirchen, one of the Luftwaffe's major fuel supply centers, and Coblenz, site of large freight yards on the rail network feeding the western front near Metz, were the main targets of 450 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of 8th USAAF, escorted by nearly as many fighters. One thousand tons of high explosive and fire bombs were dropped on these centers by instrument through dense cloud formations.

Following in the wake of the American bombers over the Ruhr, RAF Lancasters this morning attacked a big synthetic oil plant at Castroprauxel, nine miles northeast of Gelsenkirchen.

A few German fighters were sighted but they failed to challenge the Allied air forces.

RAF Mosquito squadrons attacked Hanover and other unspecified targets in western Germany last night, while night fighters of Bomber Command escorting the bombers attacked airfields destroying one aircraft.

RAF Active

RAF intruder fighters also were active last night, hampering the movement of transport in Germany and occupied Holland. Pilots flew through snowstorms to attack road convoys and enemy airfields. One Allied fighter is missing.

It was announced today at 8th USAAF headquarters that 27 bombers and seven fighters have not yet returned from yesterday's American attacks on the Cologne and Frankfurt regions, but some of these planes are believed to have landed safely in friendly territories. Fighters escorting the bomber forces, and other Thunderbolts on strafing missions yesterday shot up a total of 150 rail cars, 30 locomotives, 100 motor vehicles, six oil cars and five aircraft on the ground. Many airfields were bombed for the first time, an 8th USAAF spokesman said, as the operative strips in the target area have all been built since the Luftwaffe was driven from France.

The great Krupp armament works in Essen is reported, in a dispatch from Stockholm, to have suspended production a few days ago as the result of Allied bomb damage, and there is no indication of when work will be resumed.

«Freight yards have been wiped out and considerable stretches of track torn up,» said the dispatch. «Sluice gates have been blasted in and around Essen, forcing a suspension of work affecting some 200,000 workers.

«Transportation of food and raw materials by water is impossible with the Dortmund-Ems canal drained for a second time by RAF attacks.»

Flying bombs were launched during the night from aircraft over the North Sea against southern England and the London area, and casualties and damage were reported. Ground gunners and fighters destroyed a number of the American forces in this sector have contacted a larger and more stubborn body of Germans who have been ordered to defend the rail line.

While the main forces of the American 3rd Army are drawing closer to Metz from the north and south, the U. S. 4th Armored division in a surprise move thrust northeastward toward Saarbruecken. The new drive, which began at the road junction of Château Salins and passed through Hampont yesterday, gained seven miles today and was last reported in Haboudange (Habuningen), 30 miles southwest of Saarbruecken. The maneuver is evidently aimed at cutting the Metz-Saarburg railway and at outflanking German troops retreating eastward toward the Siegfried Line.

The northern flank of the pincers move on Metz moved slowly southward against stubborn German opposition. The Allies now have three bridgeheads over the Moselle northeast of Thionville and are consolidating and strengthening their positions.

The German line at Maizieres les Metz, seven miles north of the fortress city, was penetrated today by 3rd Army units. The American troops pushed slowly eastward from Maizieres and occupied a small wooded area west of the Moselle River.

Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton on his 59th birthday today was presented with 180 square miles of liberated French territory and with 2,450 German prisoners — both taken in the four-day offensive by his American 3rd Army troops.

Minor activity was reported today on other sectors of the 400-mile Allied front. (OWI-Reuter-AP)

TROOP CARRIERS DROPPED 50,000 PARATROOPS

FIRST ALLIED AIRBORNE ARMY HEADQUARTERS, November 11 — U. S. Troop Carrier Forces of the First Allied Airborne Army, in three airborne operations on the European continent, dropped more than 50,000 paratroops and more than nine million pounds of combat equipment and supplies behind the enemy lines, it was officially revealed here yesterday.

These operations in Normandy, Southern France and Holland were successful in delivering from the air more than 1,000 jeeps, nearly 150 trailers and motor vehicles, more than 3 million 500,000 pounds of ammunition, 500,000 pounds of food rations, four million 500,000 pounds of other combat equipment and supplies, over 1,000 artillery weapons and mortars, 12,000 gallons of gasoline, and 75,000 pounds of land mines and explosives.

In all operations, only two per cent of the aircraft used was lost. (PWB)

ANTWERP WILL BE READY FOR SHIPS WITHIN WEEK

WASHINGTON, November 11 — The Belgian port of Antwerp «will be ready to unload ships within a week,» said War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes in an Armistice Day address today.

While the port was taken early in September, its landward approaches had to be cleared in the Battle of the Schelde Estuary and action south of the Schelde, Allied spokesmen have said that the comparatively undamaged port facilities of Antwerp will make possible large-scale shipments over shortened supply lines to the Allied armies now thrusting their way into Germany and thus permit the mounting of a major offensive. 6,000 GERMAN CIVILIANS RETURN TO AACHEN

WITH THE AMERICAN 1ST ARMY, November 11 — About 6,000 German civilians have returned to Aachen and reconstruction of the city is under way, a dispatch to the London Daily Herald reported today.

The new mayor has a staff of 150 men and 175 women and the German police force consists of 30 men. The American military police are on duty day and night but there has been no unrest among the population.

A civilian hospital which can cope with any type of operation was set up by the first four German doctors who returned to the city and is now functioning.

The report said that the people of Aachen have opened up their own stores, stocked with previously hidden foods and the first co-operative food centers have been established. (OWI)

MILITARY COURT SET UP IN EINDHOVEN

BRITISH CROSS MONTONE SOUTHWEST OF FORLI

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 11 — British Infantry forces of the 8th Army have crossed the Montone River, water barrier of the newest German delaying positions in the southeastern Po Valley. It was announced here today.

The penetration of the German river line defenses, now manned in strength by the enemy forces driven from their positions before Forli, was carried out Thursday on the very afternoon of the day Forli itself was captured. The British forces have since been withdrawn to enable light and fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force to carry out a heavy attack on German defensive forks and tank concentrations in the village of San Varano, two miles southwest of Forli along the road from Florence.

German forces now hold hill positions all along the west bank of the Montone River from Dovadola to west of Forli. Although 8th Army patrols reported the small town of Castrocaro, midway along this 10-mile stretch, clear of the enemy, hills further west and overlooking the stream were occupied in strength by German forces. From west of Forli, the new enemy line follows the left bank of the Canale Nuova, a six-mile-long artificial waterway linking the Montone and the Ronco Rivers. From the village of Coccolia, where the canal joins the Ronco, the enemy line follows this stream to Gambellare, 6½ miles southwest of Ravenna.

The enemy have made approaches to their line northeast of Forli to the sea extremely difficult, both by extensive use of mines, and by heavy artillery and mortar barrages. Although 8th Army forces now hold the town of Forli in its entirety, the fact that the enemy positions are around the western and northwestern edges of the capital make it still a battle area.

Snow on the 5th Army's mountain front yesterday heralded the early approach of winter, and its extreme depth of nine inches in places limited even patrol activities of both Allied and enemy troops. Enemy forces continue to dig in and improve defenses all along the front, laying out mine fields, barbed wire entanglements, trenches and extensive field works.

Momentary clearing of the wintry weather yesterday morning was utilized by Tactical Air Force fighter-bombers to heavily bombard an enemy gun concentration near Settefonti, just east of the Idice River southeast of Bologna. Indian troops on the right flank of the 5th Army reported the only local gain of the day, capture of the snow-covered Monte Budriano, south of Faenza. Snowfall was heaviest in this area. (PRO)

GERMANS FOIL NAZI ATTEMPTS AT SABOTAGE

MONSCHAU, GERMANY, November 11 — The inhabitants of Allied-occupied Monschau in Germany foiled Nazi attempts to organize sabotage, the Associated Press reported Thursday.

When the Nazis sent a former citizen of Monschau back to his home with instructions to wreck the central telephone exchange, the reports said, the man merely removed the vital parts from the exchange and hid them, telling others where they could be found. When the Americans arrived, the equipment was restored.

Before evacuating Monschau, the Nazis also planned to destroy its fire-fighting equipment, but the townspeople had hidden the fire engine in a cave, the dispatches said, and hauled it out only after the Americans came. (PWB)

FRENCH JOURNALIST INDICTED

PARIS, November 11 — The French journalist, Jose Germain Droilly, a leading collaborationist and the author of pro-Nazi articles published in Les Nouveaux Temps, is imprisoned in Fresnes, said the French press agency yesterday.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 11 — Marauder medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, flying in a crosswind of gale force to bomb the Arel rail bridge north of Verona on the Brenner Pass line yesterday, were attacked by 30 enemy fighters, and shot down two of them and damaged five others in the ensuing 30-minute-long air battle, it was announced here today.

Despite the heavy wind and the enemy interception and flak, an «excellent concentration» of bombs struck the 120-foot-wide structure.

In addition to other attacks by medium bombers on the Sacile rail bridge across the Livenza River, 45 miles north of Venice, and on a ferry terminal at Ostiglia on the Po River north of Bologna, a small force of RAF night bombers attacked the Latisana bridge, west of Trieste along the Adriatic coast rail line. BRAZILIANS FLY FIRST INDEPENDENT MISSION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 11 — Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the Brazilian Air Force carried out offensive sweeps over Lake Garda and the Bergamo area in northern Italy on their first combat mission as an independent unit, it was announced today.

In previous flights, the Brazilian fliers were accompanied by American P-47 pilots of the 350th Fighter-Bomber Group, to which the Brazilians are attached.

The flight today by the Brazilian squadron was reported to be without incident. (PRO)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 11 — The British cruiser Argonaut led the convoy of warships and other vessels bringing stores, troops and motor transport to Salonika Harbor Thursday, it was announced here today.

Minefields outside the harbor required extensive sweeping by Allied craft before the convoy could make its way into the Greek port, the announcement said. (PRO)

B-29'S ATTACK SHANGHAI, NANKING, AND OMURA

WASHINGTON, November 11 — Three enemy targets — Nanking and Shanghai in Japanese-occupied China and Omura on the Japanese homeland — were attacked today by a huge force of Superfortresses, the War Department announced.

An earlier announcement by General Henry H. Arnold, Commander-in-Chief of U.S. Army Air Forces, reported only that Nanking had been hit. The later disclosure said the weather had «caused a diversion of part of the effort» and according to a 20th Air Force communique Shanghai and Omura were the alternate targets.

On the basis of preliminary reports, two enemy planes were shot down, seven others probably destroyed and 11 damaged. One of our aircraft is reported missing.

Enemy fighter opposition was described as weak.

The attacks were made in daylight by elements of Major General Curtis E. Lemay's 20th Bomber Command from their bases in China.

At Omura the target was the Omura aircraft factory, which was attacked in a B-29 mission on October 25. It has 75 buildings.

Over Omura, the skies were overcast today and bombing was accomplished through clouds by precision instruments, with unobserved results. Similar weather was reported at Nanking, headquarters of the Chinese puppet government, where also the bombing was by instrument and the effect unobserved.

The communique said: «The target at Nanking was the extensive dock and loading facilities where rail traffic between Shanghai, Tientsin and Manchuria is ferried across the Yangtze River.»

Good bombing was reported by some of the crews over Shanghai, although all elements did not have «sufficient visibility for observation» of results. The target at Shanghai was the Japanese military storage and transshipment facilities on the main Japanese military supply route to the occupied Asiatic mainland.

Burma Advance Continues

The Southeast Asia communique today said that in northern Burma Chinese troops have crossed Taping River in the Myohit area and advanced several miles south towards Bhamo on the Burma road. Other troops, in a flanking movement, have taken Momauk, eight miles east of Bhamo.

British elements moved to within nine miles of Naba Junction on the Myitkyina-Rangoon railroad, 60 miles west of Bhamo. In the fighting near the Chindwin River, East Africans captured another Japanese position. In Kabaw Valley other East African forces moving south captured a Japanese strongpoint to the northeast.

Headquarters of Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U.S. forces in China, announced today that Maj. Gen. Gilbert Cheves, former commander of a base section of the port of Calcutta, has been appointed Commanding General of Services of Supply for the American forces in China.

The announcement said Cheves' assignment is a recognition of the importance of supply in that theater and practically been destroyed with an estimated 35,000 casualties, reinforcements have virtually replaced the Japanese losses.

Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced from Pearl Harbor today that American bombers, based on the Aleutian Islands, made heavy attacks on Japanese positions in the northern Kuriles last Monday.

Three enemy planes were reported destroyed and two of nine self-propelled barges attacked were seen to have exploded in blows at Tori Shima Island. Paramushiru, Matsuwa and Onnekotan Islands also were the targets of 11th Air Force Mitchells and Venturas.

Air attacks on enemy airfields in the Volcano, Bonin, northern Marianas and Marcus Islands also were announced by Admiral Nimitz.

Norman Bell, Associated Press correspondent, after nearly 15 months of covering the war in the north Pacific, said in Seattle, Washington, yesterday that the sea and air of the north Pacific all the way to the Kurile Islands, north of Japan, is controlled by U. S. forces. (OWI)

BRITISH SUBS SINK 45 JAP SHIPS

LONDON, November 11 — British submarines during recent patrols in Far Eastern waters sank 45 Japanese ships, including one large supply ship, one submarine chaser and three landing craft, the Admiralty announced today. (Reuter)

RED ARMY'S DRIVE ON BUDAPEST GAINS GROUND

MOSCOW, November 11 — The railway junction of Ujczasz, north of Szolnok, was captured today by Soviet forces on Marshal Malinovsky's left flank, advancing on Budapest from the east. Other towns, villages and railway stations, including Jasladan, Lenentina and Majzenjarod, were occupied by his armies on this front, which extends in an arc northeastward, its right flank outflanking Miskolcz.

The struggle on the northeast and southeast approaches to Budapest has now become a battle for two highways 35 miles apart on the Hungarian plain, a Moscow dispatch said today. A success on either approach will threaten the Hungarian capital from a new direction.

The cutting of the Miskolcz-Budapest railway line yesterday has increased the difficulties of the Germans' retreat from northern Hungary near the Slovak border as they now have no escape line, the Daily Telegraph said today.

The Budapest radio reported that the Russians have crossed the Danube south of Budapest and are advancing on the main Vienna-Budapest railway.

Bulgarian troops operating against the Germans in Yugoslav territory have occupied the towns of Stip and Veles.

Yugoslav and Soviet forces have crossed the Danube on a 50-mile front astride the Hungarian-Yugoslav frontier and are marching toward the Hungarian town of Pecs, Marshal Tito's communique announced today. The crossings were made at a point 75 miles south of Budapest.

The section of the Danube near liberated Belgrade is being cleared of enemy mines and navigation is beginning, with the hauling of food and coal into the capital.

Poles forcibly mobilized into the German army are crossing over to the Red Army, according to the supplement to yesterday's Soviet communique. Several Polish soldiers deserting from the German ranks said that they wanted to avenge themselves upon the Germans for the sufferings inflicted on the Polish people.

The Soviet Military commentator, Col. Karpov, this afternoon described the present relative stalemate on the Russian front as «a pause before an annihilating new blow at the enemy.»

damaged. One of our aircraft is reported missing.

Enemy fighter opposition was described as weak.

The attacks were made in daylight by elements of Major General Curtis E. Lemay's 20th Bomber Command from their bases in China.

At Omura the target was the Omura aircraft factory, which was attacked in a B-29 mission on October 25. It has 75 buildings.

Over Omura, the skies were overcast today and bombing was accomplished through clouds by precision instruments, with unobserved results. Similar weather was reported at Nanking, headquarters of the Chinese puppet government, where also the bombing was by instrument and the effect unobserved.

The communique said: «The target at Nanking was the extensive dock and loading facilities where rail traffic between Shanghai, Tientsin and Manchuria is ferried across the Yangtze River.»

Good bombing was reported by some of the crews over Shanghai, although all elements did not have «sufficient visibility for observation» of results. The target at Shanghai was the Japanese military storage and transshipment facilities on the main Japanese military supply route to the occupied Asiatic mainland.

Burma Advance Continues

The Southeast Asia communique today said that in northern Burma Chinese troops have crossed Taping River in the Myohit area and advanced several miles south towards Bhamo on the Burma road. Other troops, in a flanking movement, have taken Momauk, eight miles east of Bhamo.

British elements moved to within nine miles of Naba Junction on the Myitkyina-Rangoon railroad, 60 miles west of Bhamo. In the fighting near the Chindwin River, East Africans captured another Japanese position. In Kabaw Valley other East African forces moving south captured a Japanese strongpoint to the northeast.

Headquarters of Maj. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, commander of U.S. forces in China, announced today that Maj. Gen. Gilbert Cheves, former commander of a base section of the port of Calcutta, has been appointed Commanding General of Services of Supply for the American forces in China.

The announcement said Cheves' assignment is a recognition of the importance of supply in that theater and of the enlargement of operations which may follow the reopening of the Burma road. (BBC-Reuter)

ENTIRE JAPANESE CONVOY DESTROYED

LEYTE, PHILIPPINES, November 12 — American carrier planes today destroyed an entire Japanese convoy of six destroyers and four transports, carrying an estimated 8,000 fresh Japanese troops, in a battle in Ormoc Bay, General MacArthur's Headquarters announced.

The U. S. planes caught the convoy attempting to reach land this morning under cover of darkness, the announcement said. The airmen attacked in force, smashing the convoy with bombs and gunfire. Only remnants of the new enemy forces reached shore.

This new Japanese attempt to reinforce their garrison on Leyte Island coincided with a steady American advance in the rugged mountain areas north of Ormoc, the last enemy stronghold on the island, Headquarters announced.

General MacArthur's communique yesterday said that the Japanese are continuing to reinforce their Leyte troops and though the original enemy force on the island has including one large supply ship, one submarine chaser and three landing craft, the Admiralty announced today. (Reuter)

LIBERATED ITALY

ARMISTICE DAY IN ROME

ROME, November 11 — The city of Rome marked its first Armistice Day under Allied liberation today with prayer and ceremony in which representatives of the nations fighting a common enemy participated.

Beginning at down a steady stream of citizens, mostly women, began moving up the white marble steps leading to the tomb of the unknown soldier. Each laid a flower, usually a chrysanthemum, at the tomb, then paused for a moment in prayer and passed on down the steps.

As the day wore on they came by hundreds. In the groups were scores of school children, many led by a teacher who laid the flowers on the tomb. One bent, white haired man stood there longer than the others after he had laid the flower down. He had lost a son and two brothers in the first World War, when Italy fought side by side with the Allies against the Germans.

In the crowds were Allied soldiers who moved up the steps to join the silent ceremony.

On the other side of the Tiber, in the basilica of St Peters, a solemn requiem mass was celebrated at 1100 hours Rome time for the souls of those who fell in the last war. Allied chaplains officiated in the ceremony which packed St. Peters with thousands of soldiers of all the United Nations.

In the Piazza Venezia, the Rome Allied Command held a brief review marking the 26th anniversary of the armistice. Drawn up in the piazza, directly underneath the balcony where Mussolini once preached the gospel of Fascism which sent thousands of men to war and death, were three contingents of American, British and French troops.

Led by Brigadier General Thoburn K. Brown, commanding officer of the Rome Area Command, staff officers of American, British and French armies moved from one national contingent to another to receive a salute. In turn, the 100-piece band of an Algerian rifle division played the respective national anthems — «The Star Spangled Banner», «God Save the King», and «The Marseillaise».

Then the band led the troops in a parade around the piazza in review. In the reviewing stand with General Brown were Brigadier General Le Couteulx de Caumont, and Brigadier Alban Low, two deputy commanders of the Rome Allied Command and other senior officers. (PWB)

O'DWYER NOT TO RETURN TO AC
CLEVELAND APPOINTED EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

ROME, November 11 — Brig. Gen. William O'Dwyer, vice-president of the Economic Section of the Allied Commission, will not return to his post here, it was announced today by the AC.

The announcement added that an appointment of an American to fill the post vacated by General O' Dwyer will be made soon in Washington.

At the same time, the AC also announced today that Harlan Cleveland, special assistant to the Liberated Areas Director of the U. S. Foreign Economic Administration, has been appointed executive director of the AC Economic Section.

In his new post, Cleveland will not replace O'Dwyer. Cleveland will succeed A. G. Antolini, who was executive director of the Economic Section and who served as the section's acting vice-president since General O'Dwyer returned to the United States two months ago to confer

EPURATION OF POLICE FORCE AP D

ROME, November 11 — The Communal Junta of Rome, at which Dr. Guido Laj, acting Mayor, presided, today approved an order of the day asking for the purging of all Fascist and reactionary elements from the local police force. The order also called for reconstitution of the police force along outright democratic lines. (PWB)

ALLIED SOLDIER ARRESTED FOR MURDER

ROME, November 11 — Arrest of an Allied soldier who is charged with the murder of Alberto Gatti, local restaurant owner, eight days ago, was announced today by the Rome Area Allied Command. He will be tried by a military court.

Gatti allegedly was stabbed to death by one of three soldiers who were drinking wine in his restaurant. When they were asked to leave, one refused and became involved in a fight which resulted in the death of the owner.

The RAAC has announced a firm policy that Allied soldiers have been and will continue to be punished for any crimes against the civil population. (PRC)

ITALIANS HONOR GORKI

SORRENTO, November 11 — A special ceremony marked the unveiling yesterday of a memorial plaque in honor of Maxim Gorki, Russian writer.

Referring to Gorki as the «father of Soviet Literature,» «great humanist,» «defender of culture» who «fought injustice, oppression and violence,» Soviet Ambassador Kostylev declared: «The United Nations are today on the threshold of the glorious conclusion of the war against Hitlerite Germany. In these days the figure of Gorki great writer and great anti-Fascist, is dearer than ever to all progressive humanity and to all liberty-loving nations.»

Michael Tarasov head of the Soviet Trade Union delegation, which also attended, the ceremony, said that now that the defeat of the Nazi-Fascist armies is nearing completion, «it is indispensable to point out the importance of the contribution made by the great writer in the defeat of Hitlerite Germany.» (PWB)

ITALIANS READY TO REBUILD WAR-TORN ITALY

WASHINGTON, November 11 — Italy can be rehabilitated both economically and politically with Allied help, Quinto Quintieri, former Italian Finance Minister, said here yesterday.

«Italians have no intention of sitting in despair among our ruins and leaving it to the United Nations to carry on the gigantic task of restoring our-warn torn country,» he added.

Quintieri and Raffaele Mattioli, a director of the Italian Commercial Bank, are here to discuss Italian financial problems.

«A beginning already has been made by us toward rebuilding and reorganizing our resources toward the maximum prosecution of the war. But we cannot build without tools,» Quintieri said. «We must have help from the outside.»

Quintieri pointed out that a ruthless destruction policy by retreating Germans in many parts of Italy, notably the Naples industrial area, caused considerable ruin. He told of destruction of three million olive trees, some of which German troops forced Italian peasants to cut down.

«On the estate of one of my men a mine was planted in every tree to complete the work of devastation,» he

Antolini is returning to the United States, the announcement said. Pending the appointment of a new vice-president, the post will remain open.

Cleveland formerly was head of the Italian section of the FEA. When the U. S. Board of Economic Warfare was created, he assisted in the establishment of a program for neutral trade and blockade.

Cleveland specialized in economics, political science and comparative government at Princeton University and as a Rhodes scholar at Oxford University. He served also in the Farm Security Administration of the Department of Agriculture in Washington. (PWB-AC)

NEW REGIONAL COMMISSIONER APPOINTED

NAPLES, November 11 — Brigadier J. K. Dunlop has taken over the duties of regional commissioner of the Southern Section of the Allied Commission, it was announced here.

Brigadier Dunlop has been in Italy since December, 1943, and has already held the post of regional commissioner of Sardinia. (PWB)

MANY WOMEN JOIN NEW FLORENCE UNION

FLORENCE, November 11 — Women of all classes are joining the local branch of the Union of Italian Women, which has formulated a program calling for the right of women to participate in the political life of Italy.

The Union also has set forth the following aims: to increase aid to the fighting men, their families and families of men martyred by the Nazi-Fascist terror; to collaborate in the Government's epuration activity by appointing delegates in epuration and control commissions; to organize infant welfare for workers' children, and to conduct cultural and recreative activity for poor children.

Referring to the shooting of Giorgio Messiti by a Carabiniere last Monday in Rome, the Union today asked Italian authorities to take measures to prevent similar incidents.

During the past week the Women's Union asked for women's suffrage, for representation on the National Body for the Distribution of Relief Supplies to Italy, and for representation on trade unions and factory committees. (PWB)

UNITED NATIONS

CHURCHILL AND EDEN FLY TO PARIS

LONDON, November 11 — Prime Minister Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden flew to Paris yesterday. They were accompanied by Mrs. Churchill, Miss Mary Churchill, and a number of high government officials.

The Churchill party was met by General De Gaulle, accompanied by four cabinet members and other officials of the French Provisional Government.

It was the first time that Mr. Churchill had gone to France on a visit of state since May 22, 1940, although he visited the Normandy beachhead shortly after the landings in France.

After landing on the French airfield yesterday Mr. Churchill and General De Gaulle inspected military troops lined up in their honor.

The need for Franco-British amity was stressed by General DeGaulle at a luncheon today in honor of the British guests. Their visit, said DeGaulle, was a happy opportunity for the French people to demonstrate their regard for Britain.

Churchill recalled at the Luncheon that he had championed the cause of Anglo-French friendship for more than 35 years.

Although Mr. Churchill's visit had not been announced, press dispatches said large crowds gathered at the airport and people carrying flags lined the road into Paris.

This morning Mr. Churchill, in company with General DeGaulle, attended an Armistice Day ceremony held at the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier. Later he drove down the Champs Elysees with De Gaulle. (OWI - Reuter)

WORLD CEREMONIES HONOR DEAD OF 1914-1918

WASHINGTON, November 11 — Peoples of the United Nations paused briefly at their task of winning the war today to honor their military dead of the last war and to express through their officials a determination that victory against Germany and Japan shall bring an enduring peace.

President Roosevelt made his annual visit to the tomb of America's Unknown Soldier in Arlington Cemetery across the Potomac River from Washington. High Army and Navy officials and representatives of the United Nations grouped about the President as the minute of silence was observed and the Presidential salute of 21 guns was fired.

President Roosevelt's Armistice Day proclamation called upon the people of the United States to rededicate themselves to the job of winning the war and establishing an enduring peace. He said:

«We and our Allies, united to reestablish peace under liberty, have deployed our forces by land, sea, and air and are confident of victory. Under God we are resolved that the victories of this second World War shall produce not merely an armistice but also institutions capable of establishing a peace which shall endure.»

Paris Ceremony

In Paris, Prime Minister Churchill and General DeGaulle, accompanied by Foreign Secretary Eden, drove down the Champs Elysees to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier beneath the Arc de Triomphe. The streets were lined with uniformed police in the blue capes and thousands of cheering Parisians.

Churchill and DeGaulle stood at attention beside the Unknown Soldier's tomb until a cannon shot announced the end of the two-minute silence. Together they advanced and placed on the tomb huge wreaths from the British and French governments.

In London, no official ceremonies marked Armistice Day but unofficially a two minute period of silence was observed throughout the nation and wreaths laid on war memorials. Members of the London Home Guard mounted guard over the Unknown Warrior's Tomb in Westminster Abbey, where a large number of civilians and soldiers attended a brief service.

In Chungking, commanders of the American air and ground forces in China sent messages to their men. Major Gen. Claire L. Chennault, leader of the 14th USAAF, said:

«The original character of this World War anniversary was one of high celebration, but the perspective of the years made it increasingly one of memorial observance.» He paid tribute also to the men of all nations who have died in freedom's cause, and concluded:

«We pledge that we will not again lay down arms until the forces of oppression and injustice have perished from the earth.»

The commanding general of the American forces in China, Maj. Gen. A. C. Wedemeyer, told his soldiers that he joined them in the prayer that «before next November 11 appears on the calendar, a new Armistice Day shall have been added to world history.» (OWI - Reuter)

POPULAR VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT GROWS

WASHINGTON, November 11 — President Roosevelt's margin of victory over Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York in the popular vote for the presidency continued to increase today as late tabulations were completed.

The President now has a total of 24,312,810 votes as against 21,222,287 for Mr. Dewey, giving him a popular majority of 3,090,523. His electoral vote stands at 432 from 36 states, with Mr. Dewey's column containing 12 states and 99 votes. There still are many thousands of soldier votes to be counted, as well as civilian ballots as yet untallied.

Latest returns indicate that the Senate will include 56 Democrats, 37 Republicans and one Progressive (a minority party), with two contests still unsettled. The House of Representatives, latest returns show, will contain 242 Democrats, 187 Republicans, one candidate of the American Labor Party, and one Progressive, with four contests still undecided.

In one of the senatorial contests still in doubt the Democratic candidate, Francis J. Myers of Pensylvania, has a slight lead over his Republican opponent, Senator James J. Davis, the incumbent.

Among those elected to the House of Representatives is an army corporal, C. Melvin Price of the 22nd Congressional District in the State of Illinois. Price, an inventory clerk at a Virginia camp, spent election night unloading apples destined for the camp kitchens.

American editorial comment on the election continued to emphasize the essential unity of all the people on the objectives of war and peace and to predict a bright future for American collaboration with the other United Nations in world affairs. The New York Times, pointing out the importance of close cooperation between the President and the new Senate to that end said:

«The prospects seem brighter now than they have ever been for American leadership in organizing the post-war world for a reign of international law and order.»

The Chicago Sun said the people have «given to Franklin D. Roosevelt a mandate to lead on in the organization of the peace, a United Nations peace in which America must play her full part to prevent or stamp out aggression before it can throw the world into another war, and to build peace positively, by building its essential economic, social and political conditions.» (OWI)

France's first Armistice Day observance in five years began at dusk yesterday when a torch was kindled at the eternal fire burning over the tomb of the Unknown Soldier and was borne in a silent procession through the city.

Relays of runners carried the torch to a clearing at Rethondes in the Compeigne Forest, where Marshal Ferdinand Foch received the Armistice delegation in 1918. In the eyes of the French, it was a ceremony of purification atoning for the dark day in June, 1940, when Hitler insisted that defeated France sign the German armistice at exactly the same hour and in exactly the same place as the 1918 armistice.

A simple ceremony was held at the Meuse-Argonne Cemetery, the largest American overseas burial ground of the last war. It was the first ceremony held there since 1939. A group of American soldiers and members of the Women's Auxiliary Corps of the U. S. Army, sons and daughters of men who had fought and died in the 1917-1918 war, participated in the services.

In Belgium, Prince Regent Albert placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in climaxing the celebration of Armistice Day in Brussels. All morning military and civil bands played martial music while a mile long procession of former service men, Belgian troops, gendarmerie and nurses marched by the Column de Congres.

SOVIET NEWSPAPERS ON AMERICAN ELECTION

MOSCOW, November 11 — Confidence of the American public in a policy of international cooperation was reflected in the reelection of President Roosevelt, the Soviet newspapers, Pravda and Red Star commented today.

Red Star said « the results of the presidential election in the United States give another blow to all of the enemies of freedom-loving people. » By public vote, said the newspaper, the people have given Mr. Roosevelt confidence to conduct a foreign policy assuring international safety and collaboration with other democratic nations.

Pravda said popularity of his foreign policy played a great part in the President Roosevelt's reelection, and commented:

« With Roosevelt's name, the electors symbolized the policy directed to bring to a victorious end, in the shortest time, the wars in Europe and in the Pacific and to reinforce the collaboration and friendship with the great allies, Great Britain and the Soviet Union, in the creation of international security. » (OWI)

visory Commission, U. S. Acting Secretary of State Edward J. Stettinius, Jr., announced today. Similar announcements were made simultaneously in London and Moscow.

Mr. Stettinius' statement said:

«At the Moscow Conference a year ago, the American, British and Soviet governments decided to re-establish in London a European Advisory Commission for the purpose of studying certain European questions and submitting joint recommendations thereon to the three governments.

«Among the matters which are receiving the close attention of the commission is the question of the surrender terms to be imposed on Germany and the treatment to be accorded to that country.

«Conscious of France's vital interest in the solution of the German problem and of the part which France will inevitably play in maintaining the future peace of Europe, the Government of the United States is happy to join in extending to the Provisional Government of the French Republic an invitation to full membership on the European Advisory Commission.

PEACE GROUP SUPPORTS D.O. PROPOSALS

NEW YORK, November 11 — A conference of five American peace organizations yesterday adopted a statement of purpose pledging «hearty support» to the tentative Dumbarton Oaks post-war security proposals.

The conference was held under the auspices of the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace, the Church Peace Union, the National Peace Conference in cooperation with the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Church, the League of Nations Association and the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

The peace conference announced its determination to proceed with discussions of ways and means by which those matters left for consideration by a future United Nations conference can be completed. It urged full recognition of smaller nations and the safeguarding of the rights and interests of such nations.

A recommendation was made by the conference that more emphasis be placed on human rights and that the final constitution for the United Nations World Security Organization have appended to it a bill of rights for all men in all nations.

The representatives of the peace organizations urged that at the earliest possible date, the U. S. Government give formal assent and, by vote of Congress, agree that «the member representing the U. S. on the security council will be able to pledge the nation's quota of the armed forces necessary for the maintenance of order and the prevention of aggression.» (OWI)

AIR CONFERENCE AGREES ON JURIDICAL EQUALITY

CHICAGO, November 11 — The principle of juridical equality of states was accepted by subcommittees of the International Civil Aviation Conference, it was announced yesterday.

Other chief developments were the submission of proposals by Sweden, Portugal and Cuba for temporary international air routes as soon as war conditions permit;

CHINA'S WAR PRODUCTION ORGANIZATIONS

CHUNGKING, November 11 — All Chinese organizations engaged in war production will be merged under a war production board which Donald M. Nelson, President Roosevelt's personal representative in China, will help establish in order to increase Chinese war production the Chungking radio reported yesterday.

Nelson, former chairman of the U. S. War Production Board, will arrive in China shortly. The broadcast quoted the Chungking newspaper, Ta Kung Pao, as saying that Nelson's mission will seek «coordination of the American lend-lease program and Chinas war time production.»

All productive power already in existance, Ta Kung Pao added, will be mobilized as fully as possible so that not a single machine will be allowed to lie idle or half idle. (OWI)

ECONOMIC DEMOBILIZATION OF GERMANY URGED

NEW YORK, November 11 — Economic demobilization of Germany was urged yesterday by Vaclav Majer, Czechoslovak Minister of Trade and Industry, according to a dispatch to the Times today. Such an economic demobilization would be just and would create a more solid basis for a healthy economic life in Europe, he added.

«For years, Germany has abused her position of power to keep other European countries in economic bondage,» Majer declared. «Much of the goods now representing a German monopoly could be manufactured by other countries, including Czechoslovakia.

«The Nazi exploitation of Czechoslovakia resulted in a 300 per cent inflation, and Germany owed the nation 34 million Czech crowns.

«Czechoslovakia therefore considers herself entitled to repayment of the debt and to additional compensation in raw materials, machinery, transport and military equipment.

«The Czechoslovak Government, which is preparing for a return to Prague, has already sent a representative to liberated areas in Slovakia and has decreed that all transfers of property after 1938 are invalid, he declared.» (OWI)

MOLOTOV PLEDGES AID FOR NORWEGIANS

MOSCOW, November 11 — V. M. Molotov, People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs of the USSR, said yesterday at a luncheon he gave in honor of Norwegian Foreign Minister Trygve Lie, «Our countries have now become neighbors as they again have a common frontier.» He added:

«This circumstance will bring still closer together our countries and governments and we must appreciate even more friendly relations between our peoples and take care to strengthen and develop these relations. The Soviet Union helped to begin the liberation of Norway from the Hitlerite invaders and is ready to render every possible assistance to the Norwegian people in the future.»

Foreign Minister Lie said that the enemy is on the eve of his final destruction.

«It will be no exaggeration to say,» he continued, «that the heroic Red Army and Red Navy, under the direction of their wise leader, Marshal Stalin, in cooperation with Great Britain and the United States of America, have saved the civilized world.» (TASS)

AIR CONFERENCE AGREES ON JURIDICAL EQUALITY

CHICAGO, November 11 — The principle of juridical equality of states was accepted by subcommittees of the International Civil Aviation Conference, it was announced yesterday.

Other chief developments were the submission of proposals by Sweden, Portugal and Cuba for provisional international air routes as soon as war conditions permit; solution of the question of the composition of an interim council to function in world aviation before the adoption of a permanent multilateral convention, and progress toward agreement on technical matters concerned with air transport.

The American delegation in sub-committee sessions accepted the alternative proposal of the Latin-American countries, that an interim council be chosen by an assembly in which all signatory states are represented. A full committee session later is expected to concur.

A previous proposal by the U.S. delegation called for an interim council with representation allocated to specific countries.

Substantial strides were reported in the complex task of standardizing technical regulations such as communications, procedures, rules of the air and requirements for licensing aviation personnel.

SWEDEN REJECTS GERMANY'S BALTIC DECLARATION

STOCKHOLM, November 11 — Sweden tonight rejected Germany's declaration that the Baltic is a war zone and that all ships encountered there run the risk of immediately being fired on.

An official Swedish note handed to the German legation here says that the Swedish Government «contests most decidedly the German warning and holds the German Government «entirely responsible for all consequences of any attacks on Swedish ships.»

A Reuter dispatch from London said that the Berlin action is described as against all international law. The German ban means that all ships in the expanse of sea protecting the northern coasts of East Prussia, the former Polish, Danzig and Eastern Pomerania may be fired on at sight by Germans.

Last night the Swedish War Insurance Board warned all Swedish shipping to return to territorial waters.

A dispatch tonight from Moscow said that the new German move is a tacit admission that Berlin fears new operations by the Red Fleet. Simultaneously it freezes the commercial value of Koenigsberg, Danzig, and Gydnia, which lie within the prohibited area. (Reuter)

PLAN FOR SPANISH REPUBLICAN GOVERNMENT

LONDON, November 11 — A six-point program for a new Republican Government in Spain has been unanimously accepted at the Spanish Republican Congress which has been meeting at Toulouse, a dispatch from Paris to the News Chronicle said today.

«Delegates returning to Paris from Toulouse have brought a unanimous decision of the Congress to uphold the proposal for the establishment in Spain of a Provisional National Union Government,» the correspondent added.

«Proposals sent from Madrid by the Supreme Junta of the Union envisage the following program: (1) Immediate break with the Axis and acceptance of the principles of the Atlantic Charter. (2) Expulsion from the Army and civil administration of all Falangists except those forced to join in. (3) Annulment of all sentences passed by "special" tribunals and compensation for their victims. (4) Restoration of freedom — religious, political, press, platform and trade union. NAZI PAPER SUPPRESSED

WASHINGTON, November 11 — An issue of the Nazi newspaper, Der Angriff, associated with the Nazi labor front leader, Robert Ley, has been suppressed by Nazi authorities because of a statement that a «large scale rising» of foreign workers in Germany was to be expected, the Luxembourg radio said yesterday.

Der Angriff was quoted as saying: «German leaders must expect a large scale rising of foreign workers. In certain factories foreign workers make up as much as 80 per cent of the complement.» (OWI)

GERMANS FURTHER RESTRICT USE OF GAS

STOCKHOLM, November 11 — German military authorities have further restricted the use of gas in an order limiting all transport not immediately concerned with front-line fighting to the use of producer gas only, a Chicago News correspondent reported here today.

The new restriction was necessitated by the continued Allied bombardment of German synthetic oil centers and by the loss of Rumanian oilfields, the dispatch said. (OWI)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 11 — Today's communique:

Allied forces continued their advance in the Metz-Nancy sector against light to moderate resistance yesterday.

Chateau Salins has been freed and our units pushed on to Amelecourt and Hampont.

Delme Ridge, six miles east of Nomeny has been reached. We also reached Vigny and Secourt, east of Louvigny.

Small gains have been made in the area of Maizières Les Metz. Fighter-bombers attacked enemy positions east of Metz.

In the Moselle River bridgehead, northeast of Thionville, we made gains south and east of Koenigsmacker and repulsed a minor counter-attack east of the town.

In the Hürtgen area our units continued their attack against heavy resistance from dug-in enemy positions. Many mines are being encountered. A counter-attack was repulsed in the sector.

West of Schmidt we made progress and are clearing pillboxes.

In the area of Aachen and west of Cologne fighter-bombers went for freight yards, railway lines, roundhouses and trains.

Among fighter-bomber targets were freight yards at the Ameln roundhouse, three miles south of Jülich, two trains at Wegberg and a railway control station at Rheindahlen. Other fighter-bombers bombed Heinsberg and the rail and road center of Baal, starting a number of fires. A factory and warehouse near Erkelenz were also attacked.

Enemy strongpoints north of the Forest of Reichswald and a factory at Weeze were hit by rocket-firing fighters.

Fighters and fighter-bombers supported ground operations and continued attacks were made on enemy communications in eastern Holland and across the frontier into Germany.

Rocket-firing fighters attacked a railway junction south of Emmerich.

In the Meurthe River Valley, slight gains were made northwest of Saint Dié and the villages of Le Menil and Biarville have been taken.

A local counter-attack was repulsed east of Bruyeres and in the Vosges enemy attempts to infiltrate were frustrated. (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, November 11 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Following their capture of Forli, British troops of the 8th Army have made further progress northwest of this town.

On the 5th Army front, activity continues to be confined to patrolling.

Navy:

After extensive sweeping operations through thickly laid mine-fields the British cruiser Argonaut accompanied by other warships and a convoy arrived at Salonika on November 9. Troops, stores and motor transport were disembarked.

On November 8/9 the French cruiser Georges Leygues and the U. S. destroyer Madison bombarded enemy guns, troop concentrations and motor transport in support of the army near the Franco-Italian frontier.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Bad weather yesterday greatly restricted air operations.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked ville, we made gains south and east of Koenigsmacker and repulsed a minor counter-attack east of the town.

In the Hürtgen area our units continued their attack against heavy resistance from dug-in enemy positions. Many mines are being encountered. A counter-attack was repulsed in the sector.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 11 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

With the liberation of Forli, Patriot groups are continuing the struggle further north.

Other Patriot groups, in close coöperation with Allied Forces in the Cervia zone, have not only given valuable assistance in the liberation of the city, but have contributed to the subsequent Allied push north.

The enemy in his retreat along the coastal road destroyed an important bridge over the canal which lies just outside the city, and demolished a number of large buildings blocking the entrance road.

Several hours before the Allies arrived, citizens of Cervia led by members of the local Liberation Committee reopened the road, while Patriots were engaged in eliminating German rear-guards. On the arrival of Allied motor transport, the road was once more in perfect order.

Later, volunteers rapidly improvised a bridge to replace the one destroyed by the enemy, thus enabling Allied tanks and motorized columns to cross in pursuit of the enemy only a few hours after entering the city.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Allied officers expressed their satisfaction and gratitude to citizens and Patriots for their eager assistance.

A high-tension cable between Genoa and Milan was cut and on Highway 45, about six miles from Genoa, two bridges were wrecked.

Bridges over the Ticino, the Sesia and the Orco, along the Milan-Turin railway, were also destroyed and at least 20 days will be needed to repair them.

The latest particulars on the Bassano atrocities, committed by the Fascist Black Brigade after the battle in the Monte Grappa sector, confirm that in four villages many prisoners were shot or hanged. Many houses were burned down and the countryside stripped of all its livestock.

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 11 — The Supreme Command of the Armed Forces announces:

Western Front:

On the Lorraine frontier, the enemy attempts to envelop Metz from a northerly and southerly direction with two strong spearheads and to break it out of our front. The focal point of the fighting lies between Seille and the Rhine-Marne Canal.

South of Diedenhofen, the Americans were again driven back beyond the Moselle and the right banks of the river were cleared of the enemy. Farther down the river, northeast of Koenigsmuchem, people's grenadiers encircled the enemy bridgehead and pushed the enemy farther back towards the Moselle.

In the sector north-east of Delme, American formations gave way to the counter-attacks of our reserves.

In the Chateau-Salins sector, the enemy tank forces were reinforced and advanced beyond the town after grim fighting. They lost 52 tanks by our fierce defence.

London and Antwerp continued to be bombarded by our retaliatory weapons.

Italy:

In the Etruscan Apennines, our troops captured numerous prisoners of the 1st, 46th and 78th English infantry divisions in the course of successful operations.

South of Forli, our formations frustrated an attempt of British troops at crossing the Rabbi River and enemy attacks at the western fringe of the town.

Eastern Front:

In northern Macedonia and Serbia, our movements are being carried out according to plans. Several groups of bands were smashed and heavy losses inflicted on the enemy.

In Hungary, the operations were hampered by rain.

Before Budapest, our troops improved their positions by attacks.

North of the central reaches of the Tisa, the attacking Bolsheviks were repulsed and some penetrations of the previous days narrowed down by counter-attacks.

West of the Lupkow and Dukla Passes, the Soviets renewed their attacks after a grim artillery preparation. They collapsed in our fire in front of our mountain positions.

In the frontier area of East Prussia, the fighting flared up again. Bolshevik reconnaissance thrusts on both sides of the Heath of Romintern failed.

ceeded in stopping production. Others said that after the evacuation of northern France, the chance for V-2 had gone. They were wrong.»

These statements are used to lead up to the following significant conclusion: «We must admit that the things which our leading men tell us are right, after all.»

Nazis Claim Russian Opposition Movement: The German News Agency reports that the Foreign Minister, von Ribbentrop, today has received General Vlassov. Indications of renewed Nazi efforts to create an anti-Soviet Russian movement are manifested in the description of Vlassov as the «leader of the liberation movement of the peoples of Russia.»

Western Front: The German military analyst, Sertorius, today treats the new Allied drive in Lorraine. From the outset, his tone is apologetic, explaining to the German people the handicaps under which the Wehrmacht labors. Thus, his lengthy opening sentence is:

«It is the natural course of things that the defender of a front line of several hundred kilometres in length, which a strongly superior enemy is attacking with troops and material at the points which he choses to be the gravity centre during the first phase of a major assault, does his best to give way elastically and to fight delaying actions until on his side the operative reserves have arrived.»

Accordingly, Sertorius envisages the possibility that «the Americans, during the first phase of the present big battle in Lorraine, were able to score certain initial successes.» But he is quick to add that these successes are «by no means decisive for the ultimate outcome.»

Eastern Front: Colonel von Olberg notes that rainstorms continue to «prevent large-scale military activity on the eastern front as well as air reconnaissance behind enemy lines.» He repeats his strategic interpretation of yesterday about the Russians using the lull to «bring up reserves and concentrate war materials in order to begin the winter offensive.» But this time he adds that the Germans are, likewise, using this «breathing space» in order to bring up reserves.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

New German Defence Line North of Forli: Admitting the fall of Forli for the first time today, the Fascist radio states that the Wehrmacht forces have retired to a «new defensive line» north of the town. Fighting continues in the new sector. South of Faenza the «severely mauled» Polish troops were withdrawn from the front. In the central Apennine sector there were local clashes. «Allied troops movements were molested by German artillery and by a heavy raid of German fighter bombers.»

Allied Armistice Celebrations: Today's parade of Allied troops in the «historic» Piazza Venezia is given rueful attention. The Diaz «victory communiqués» of the First World War are recalled as evocative of «the absolute lack of contribution on the part of the Allied forces to Italy's victory at Vittorio Veneto»; hence the Armistice parade today is considered as yet another example of the fact that «the French, the British and the Americans are trying to obtain a boastful credit with the inhabitants of "invaded" Italy».

New Anti-Fascist Party Leader Attacked: It is recalled that Senator Alberto Bergamini, president of the recently formed Democratic Liberal Coalition party, was formerly editor and proprietor of the «Giornale d'Italia».

Further Amnesty Dispositions: After listing the number of defaulters reporting in various provinces (the highest figure for any one province being 800 for Pavia), the Fascist radio tonight announces new measures for rounding up needed workers and dissenters of various categories. «In agreement with German diplomatic and police authorities», it has been decided henceforward not to force «single citizens» to work in the Fascist Republic or in Germany, but

Further Emphasis on V-2: The outstanding propaganda item continues to be the playing up of the success of V-2 against Antwerp and London. In addition to the usual «secret weapon» propaganda angles and the far-reaching claims of damage done, a new propaganda twist has emerged: this is to use the fact that V-2 exists at all as proof to the German people that they should be less skeptical of their government's promises and predictions. For example, the German Forces Radio says:

«There have always been doubters (in Germany) who said that V-2 would never come, as the enemy had succumbed [illegible]

The apparent leniency of the new decree seems contradicted by a codicil which determines that provincial leaders preserve their authority to commandeer necessary labor.

It is announced that those deserters who reported to the «Ettore Muti» legion prior to last midnight's deadline have already been incorporated into a special legion unit, which paraded in Milan today. The majority of the deserters have been «incorporated into soldiers' or laborers' battalions.»

Italian Art Works: Various Allied accusations concerning German pillage of Italian art treasures are hotly denied by the Fascist radio, which bases its reply on the report of the Fascist Minister of Education, Alberto Biggini. Professor Biggini supposedly states that the Germans not only did not steal any of the masterpieces in question but on the contrary went to great pains to protect, catalogue and store them. By contrast it is alleged that the much publicized Allied protection of Italian paintings has been merely a screen to cover their theft and ultimate sale in Allied countries.

NEW BRITISH MAAS DRIVE GAINS MOMENTUM; RING AROUND METZ TIGHTENS

LONDON, November 15 — Despite wintry weather which grounded all but a few reconnaissance planes, success has attended the British 2nd Army's new offensive west of the Maas River between Venlo and Roermond, and all initial objectives have been won on the east flank of the Dutch salient.

Fifty miles to the south, American 3rd Army troops tightened their grip on the Lorraine fortress of Metz and Heavy German counter-attacks also were thrown back by General Patton's men in the area of Thionville, where Maginot Fort guns are being used against them.

North of Metz, the Königsmacher-Thionville bridgehead was lengthened to 14 miles, amid signs of a general German withdrawal to the southeast. The village of Lemestroff was occupied in the advance.

General Sir Miles Dempsey's attack between Venlo and Roermond has gained ground and momentum today and small advances have been made on all sectors of the narrow front west of the Meuse. Three bridgeheads — two over the Canal du Nord, and a third over the Wessen Canal — have joined up into one. Another bridgehead has been established over the Wessen Canal a mile south of Schoor.

British patrols entering the long-contested German stronghold at Meijel found the town undefended, but heavily mined and booby-trapped. Eind, too, has been freed, giving the Allied troops a firm footing on the triangular island formed by the meeting of the Noorder, Wessen, and Maas waterways.

The Germans were surprised when massed British guns hurled their fire power into their positions yesterday afternoon, a front line dispatch said today. Despite the barrage from 400 guns, however, the strike toward the east is still an elbowing-out process to dislodge the outer ring of the German lines, the dispatch pointed out. The Allies still have to encounter the main German positions guarding the gateway to the Rhine.

Battlefield Is Swampland

The battlefield is bleak swampland roughly mid-way between Nijmegen and Aachen, where an obstinate German pocket lies protected behind two canals. Describing this terrain, a correspondent said today: «Despite its flatness, you can never see a great distance in this country. There is always damp, grey mist to baffle visibility. You see green fields glistening with wet, or churned into muddy arabesques by tank tracks.

«The British offensive followed days of painful preparations in heavy rain and mud, to accumulate materials for the advance.»

On the extreme southern sector of the battlefront, the Allies gained up to two miles northeast of Baccarat and forced the enemy to withdraw east of Bruyères. The French 1st Army, under General Jean de Lattre de Tassigny, launched an assault along the line of the Doubs River and directly against the main defenses of the Belfort Gap. The French went forward after heavy artillery preparations and cleared several villages, including Dienville, Ivoux, and Lana.

LONDON, November 15 — Despite wintry weather which grounded all but a few reconnaissance planes, success has attended the British 2nd Army's new offensive west of the Maas River between Venlo and Roermond, and all initial objectives have been won on the east flank of the Dutch salient.

Fifty miles to the south, American 3rd Army troops tightened their grip on the Lorraine fortress of Metz and brought the extremities of their horse-shoe shaped front encircling the citadel to within eight miles of each other. American forces have reached points less than two miles from the citadel on both the south and the west. The German escape corridor to the northeast of Metz still contains four good roads, however.

General George Patton's troops, driving from the west through deepening snow fields on the northern Vosges foothills, have advanced to Fort Huber and Fort Jussy, and its twin fort Jeanne d'Arc, in their thrust toward Metz, and by-passed Fort Driant.

Fort Illange, north of Metz, surrendered unconditionally to the 95th Division early this morning, after the commander had previously refused to come to terms.

American troops, pushing through the southern suburbs of Metz, have captured Peltre, two miles southeast of the city proper and are approaching the outskirts of Magny.

So far, the only opposition from the gigantic fortifications surrounding Metz has been medium-strength artillery fire from Forts Driant and Marival.

The Germans today launched their most determined counter-attack since the start of General Patton's offensive, with substantial tank support around Arrivance, south of the Forest of Remilly.

GERMANS FALL BACK TOWARD FAENZA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 15 — Outmaneuvered German forces, hard pressed by Allied tank and infantry formations which have pierced their canal and river defenses in more than a half-dozen places, yesterday fell back to still another water-line, within five miles of Faenza, it was announced here today.

The enemy forces have withdrawn all along a 10-mile-wide, arching front where British and other forces of the 8th Army have cut a great swathe across the fertile lowlands north and west of Forli, from the junction point of the Canale Nuovo and the Ronco River to the Montone and its western tributary, the canalized Cosina River, which crosses the main Po Valley Highway just five miles from Faenza.

Focal point of the heavy fighting, which forced the enemy to abandon defenses along the Canale Nuovo, and the Montone for new delaying positions farther west, was northwest of Forli, around the captured village of San Tome. Here, enemy forces brought up self-propelled guns and tanks in an effort to contain the British forces pushing forward from their bridgehead across the canal, and in a day-long battle held the British thrust, only to fall back at nightfall to beyond the line of the Montone River.

Due west of Forli, Allied troops crossed the Montone and pushed some 3,000-yards along the Emilia Highway before enemy forces withdrew beyond contact. It is believed that these forces have fallen back behind the line of the Cosina River, a tributary of the Montone, three miles west of Forli.

Southwest of Forli, other Allied troops pushed 1,000-yards beyond San Varano and reported that enemy troops still held positions in this sector south of the main highway.

Farther south, Allied troops advanced over a mile inland from their bridgehead over the Montone, contacting only a small enemy rear-guard of 20, all taken prisoners.

North of Forli small enemy forces which had remained in delaying positions on the east bank of the Canale Nuovo yesterday withdrew at first light, to be followed by aggressive, Allied patrols.

Patrols were also active at Thensea, end of the German line, south of Ravenna. At the inland end of the front held by the 8th Army, Polish forces reported limited advances.

On the 5th Army front, Indian forces made further gains in their approach toward Modigliana, on the Lamone River south of Faenza.

Elsewhere on the 5th Army front, only patrol actions were reported.

No enemy aircraft were active along this front yesterday. (PRO)

RED ARMY 20 MILES FROM BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, November 15 — Forging ahead in their westward sweep toward Budapest, Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's forces today took Tapioszecso, 20 miles from the capital, and reduced Jaszbereny, by-passed yesterday, the last important town before Budapest. Fifty other places in this sector of the front were captured by the Russian's — including Mende, Heves, Emmet, Jakdusha, Tarnaersh, Vaszonnaior, and Varlak.

South of Budapest, Soviet armies now control the 140-mile stretch of the east bank of the Danube from just south of Budapest. Soviet artillery is hammering at German strongpoints on the west bank of the river. Yesterday the Russians moved into Solt and wiped out the German garrison. Hundreds of enemy troops were drowned trying to escape across the Danube and 1,200 prisoners were taken.

Bitter battles are raging on the approaches to Budapest and Soviet troops who penetrated within 20 miles east of the city are encountering what appears to be the most stubborn resistance since Marshal Malinovsky began his broad sian infantry, which moves with exceptionally strong anti-aircraft protection in both guns and fighters.

The East Prussian front remains quiet. Patrols penetrated the German lines northeast of Warsaw and captured many prisoners.

On all fronts yesterday, 21 German tanks were disabled or destroyed, and 10 planes were shot down.

Radio London said today that Finnmark, the northernmost part of Norway, has been entirely cleared of German troops.

The retreating Germans have scorched the earth behind them, the Norwegian Telegraph Agency said yesterday. Every house has been destroyed. Cattle are shot, and what stores cannot be moved over the fjord are burned. The towns of Vardö, Vadsö, and Varangerfjord are reported to have been wiped out, and the herring-oil refineries there destroyed or stripped of their machinery. (OWI-Reuter)

ALLIED FORCES JOIN BEFORE KALEMYO

KANDY, CEYLON, November 15 — Fifth Indian Division troops advancing on the Japanese Burma stronghold of Kalemyo from the west have linked with East African forces attacking from the north, tonight's communique announced.

The Japanese offered strong resistance to the East African assault down the Kabaw Valley, six miles north of Kalemyo. The Indian troops driving on the road from Tiddim eight miles west of the city cleared stockades along the road.

In northern Burma, Chinese troops made only slight advances northeast of Bhamo yesterday. To the east, Chinese forces have occupied a village four miles from Bhamo.

An Associated Press dispatch said that the Chinese troops clearing the Burma side of the road traveled 122 miles in a month against meagre resistance and have 100 miles to go before reaching the Burma Road about 30 miles below Mangshih. (OWI)

R.A.F. HITS BERLIN WITH 4,000-POUND BOMBS

LONDON, November 15 — Mosquitoes of the RAF tonight attacked Berlin with 4,000-pound bombs, it was officially announced here late tonight.

RAF Lancaster bombers, continuing the Allied attack against the Reich's dwindling fuel supply, this afternoon attacked a synthetic oil plant at Dortmund in the Ruhr. The bombers were escorted by Mustang fighters.

In another action, RAF planes flew over Trondheim Fjord, in Norway, and sank an enemy trawler. A second trawler was set afire. It was the third blow in three days by Allied warships and planes at German shipping in Norwegian waters. In two other forays, RAF Lancasters sunk the German battleship Tirpitz on Sunday and the same night British warships practically wiped out a German convoy off southern Norway.

Flying bombs struck southern England and the London area last night, causing casualties and damage.

COST OF WALCHEREN CAPTURE HEAVY

LONDON, November 15 — Allied forces who launched the recent attack on Walcheren, guarding the Schelde Estuary, suffered relatively heavy casualties, both to personnel and craft, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

Fog grounded all planes on D-day (November 1), but, because of the advantages to be gained from attacks from three directions, the commanders decided to assault Walcheren despite the lack of air support, he said.

The attacks were to be made simultaneously across the South Beveland causeway, across the Schelde from

Bitter battles are raging on the approaches to Budapest and Soviet troops who penetrated within 20 miles east of the city are encountering what appears to be the most stubborn resistance since Marshal Malinovsky began his broad sweep up the Danube-Tisza corridor. Before them are the last lines of the German-Hungarian fortifications protecting the city from frontal assault. Only one last loop-line railway and one highroad now remain to be cut to leave the Hungarian capital virtually isolated.

The Germans have not, however, given up hope of resuming direct communication between their groups in northeastern and central Hungary, a Tass dispatch said today. Reinforcements have now gone over to the counter-attack in an attempt to throw the Russians back south of the Budapest-Miskolcz railway, but all their assaults have been beaten off with heavy losses for the German and Hungarian forces.

One Hungarian battalion in a sector before Budapest surrendered as a unit, the commander admitting that he found the situation hopeless, and that he did not wish to sacrifice his men uselessly.

With clearer weather on the Hungarian front, more German fighters have appeared, coinciding with intensified Red Air Force activity.

COST OF WALCHEREN CAPTURE HEAVY

LONDON, November 15 — Allied forces who launched the recent attack on Walcheren, guarding the Schelde Estuary, suffered relatively heavy casualties, both to personnel and craft, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Commons today.

Fog grounded all planes on D-day (November 1), but, because of the advantages to be gained from attacks from three directions, the commanders decided to assault Walcheren despite the lack of air support, he said.

The attacks were to be made simultaneously across the South Beveland causeway, across the Schelde from Breskens to Flushing, and at West Kapelle on the west coast. Heavy bombers of the RAF had breached the dykes in three places, flooding a large part of the island, preventing mutual support of sections of the garrisons, and enabling the assault troops to make full use of amphibious vehicles.

Mr. Alexander said that of a total of 25 support craft engaged, nine were sunk and eight damaged, and of their crews 172 officers and men were killed and 200 wounded. Of 47 other major landing craft engaged, four were sunk and another damaged, while 21 officers and men were killed or missing and 81 wounded.

Royal Marine Commandos suffered 37 officers and men killed, 77 missing, and 201 wounded.

Mr. Alexander paid tribute to the landing craft support squadrons, who drew the enemy's fire while the Marine Commandos were landed successively without heavy casualties. The squadrons, composed of converted landing craft of various types, stood close inshore and engaged enemy shore batteries at point-blank range, while the tank landing craft beached in succession to discharge their vehicles.

Mr. Alexander also paid tribute to the naval beach party which had to work under gun and mortar fire throughout D-day and the following day.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Once ashore, the Commandos came up against tough opposition at nearly all enemy batteries and strongpoints. As the weather improved during the forenoon, the RAF gave close support in increasing degree, and air-spotting became available to the naval bombardment squadron during the afternoon. (OWI)

HALF OF « TIRPITZ » CREW KILLED

WASHINGTON, November 15 — Only 860 of the 1,500-man crew of the German battleship Tirpitz were rescued when the ship was sunk Sunday in Tromsö Fjord, Norway, by RAF bombers, the Swedish newspaper Stockholms Tidningen said yesterday. Many crew members were seriously injured because « the first direct hit on the Tirpitz compressed the exits and prevented the crew from getting out. »

The Tidningen also said news of the battleship's sinking has caused the « greatest dismay » in Berlin naval circles, and that an investigation has been launched to determine why it had not been given better fighter-plane protection. (OWI)

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES STRIKE IN AUSTRIA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 15 — Unescorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF today struck through heavy clouds at targets in the Linz and Innsbruck areas in Austria.

The Liberators and Flying Fortresses released their bombs by instruments. Light to moderate flak was encountered, but no enemy fighter aircraft challenged the Allied bombers.

Yesterday, with bad weather reducing sorties of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces to only five per cent of their normal average operating strength, Coastal Air Force planes carried out an attack on a 1,500-ton enemy vessel off Chioggia, in the Gulf of Venice, it was announced here today.

No details were given of the attack.

Fighters and fighter-bombers, the only other planes to operate yesterday, attacked military targets in the Cremona and Mantua areas, as well as roads, strongpoints, and rail lines in the battle area east of Faenza. (PRO)

R.N. GUNBOATS DESTROY GERMAN CONVOY

LONDON, November 15 — In an action described officially as « the shrewdest blow the enemy has suffered on the Dalmatian coast, » a German convoy which attempted to make a safe passage at night by hugging the cliffs of the Dalmatian coast was destroyed by motor gunboats of the Royal Navy's light coastal forces operating in the Adriatic, it was announced here today.

In six separate attacks, three motor gunboats sank five enemy ships — two schooners, one PIL-boat (used for carrying troops and stores), an E-boat, and an oil lighter — and damaged at least four other vessels.

This action was fought so close inshore that German gunfire started a large bush fire on the cliffs, which, together with the glare of starshells, silhouetted the German targets. (Reuter)

TUTTLE COMMANDER OF GREEK R.A.F. FORCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 15 — Forces now operating from Greek airfields to harass fleeing German columns seeking to escape from the Balkans are commanded by Air Commodore Geoffrey William Tuttle, OBE, it was announced here today.

The commodore, only 38, is one of the youngest British officers in his rank. He was air adviser for the landings in southern France and directed air protection for convoys.

Marshal Albert von Kesselring, attaching great importance to a successful stand in the village, dispatched a battalion of personal shock troops to defend the position against British troops.

The main body of the German troops were entrenched in the factory, surrounded by a high wall, while units of 12 men each took up defending positions in all of the neighboring cottages. The British rushed one cottage after another, attacking with anti-tank guns and hand grenades, until finally they reached a point 20 yards south of the factory. The Germans had the space between them and the British well covered with rifle and machine-gun fire and every attempt by the attackers to hit the enemy positions was met by strong fire.

The British troops finally blew a small hole in the factory wall, forced the enemy to withdraw, and then, in a house-to-house battle, took the village. A savage night counter-attack failed, with heavy losses to the Nazi troops.

A decisive factor in the battle was the use of RAF planes, which swooped low over the German positions, and bombed houses only a few yards from the British line. (MOI)

ELBASAN, ALBANIAN STRONGHOLD, LIBERATED

WASHINGTON, November 15 — Elbasan, the last enemy strongpoint in the interior of Albania, has been liberated by the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's communique said today. The Germans, however, still hold the narrow coastal belt of defiles and northern Albania.

Moving up strong forces from southern Dalmatia, German units succeeded in making contact with their encircled garrison in Knin, said Marshal Tito's communique today.

Bitter fighting continues in this sector, with the enemy trying to evacuate his troops and equipment northward. Yugoslav units are preventing this evacuation by flank attacks and, said the communique, have inflicted severe losses on the enemy. During the past five days, 950 enemy officers and men were killed and 320 taken prisoner. Five tanks, 36 lorries, and seven guns were destroyed, and much other war equipment was captured.

In an attempt to secure communications in the Una Valley, enemy cavalry units drove westward but were repulsed by the Partisans with considerable losses to the enemy. Another enemy thrust to clear Zagerje was thrown back toward Zagreb by fierce Yugoslav counter-attacks. The communique reported the Partisans killed 250 enemy troops and took 70 prisoners. (OWI)

U.S. WARNS NAZIS ON VIOLATING RULES OF WAR

WASHINGTON, November 15 — The State Department today renewed its warning to the Germans against violations of the rules of war in Czechoslovakia, the Associated Press reported.

The new warning was made in a statement by Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, « in connection with recent radio reports of the capture of General Viest, General Golian, and other Czechoslovak officers and soldiers in Slovakia. »

The press service said that the State Department called attention to The United States Government's declaration last September 7 that « all Germans who take part in or are any way responsible for violations » of rules of war « do so at their peril, and will be held answerable for their crimes. » (OWI)

R.H.A.F. RETURNS HOME AFTER 3½ YEARS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 15 — Greek Spitfire and Baltimore fighter and light bomber pilots flew from Italy yesterday to circle Athens and land at a nearby airfield, the first planes of the Royal Hellenic Air Force to return to their homeland after 3½ years, it was announced here today.

The pilots, who have carried out constant attacks on enemy forces in the Balkans and in Greece since their flight from their invaded country in 1941, were given a tremendous welcome at the airfield by their countrymen and air force officials. A Royal Hellenic Air Force unit has served with the Balkan Air Force since its founding six months ago. (PRO)

CZECHOSLOVAK QUISLING ARRESTED

LONDON, November 15 — Andrew Brody, a Czechoslovak quisling, has been captured by the Red Army and handed over to Czechoslovak authorities for trial as a war criminal, a Moscow dispatch said yesterday.

Brody served the Germans as puppet president of Carpatho-Ukraine in October, 1938, and since then has been collaborating with the Hungarian pro-Nazis. (OWI)

PEASANTS RECEIVE ESTATE OF POLISH COUNT

LONDON, November 15 — The estate of one of the richest men in pre-war Poland, Count Alfred Potocki, has been seized by the Lublin Committee of National Liberation and given to the peasantry, a Reuter dispatch said today.

Over 5,000 acres of land formerly belonging to the Count have been handed over to 1,050 families of peasants and farm laborers.

Potocki, a brother of Roman Potocki, the Polish Ambassador in Washington, is alleged to be in Vienna, after having fled from Poland with the Germans. (Reuter)

ROOSEVELT CONFERS WITH O'DWYER ON ITALY

WASHINGTON, November 15 — President Roosevelt told his press conference yesterday that he had conferred during the morning with Brigadier General William O'Dwyer about Italy, which was still a problem. General O'Dwyer, former vice president of the Economic Section of the Allied Commission, recently made a survey of conditions in Italy for the President. (OWI)

MILITARY ABSOLVED IN SICILIAN INCIDENT

ROME, November 15 — Italian military authorities have been absolved of responsibility for the killing of 19 workers and the wounding of 107 during a demonstration at Palermo last October 19, Salvatore Aldisio, High Commissioner for Sicily, told the Council of Ministers today.

Aldisio also declared that investigations had shown no premeditated insurrection on the part of the people.

Italian troops fired on workers who were agitating for an improvement in their living conditions. (UNN)

FOUR MEMBERS OF FASCIST TRIBUNAL FREED

ROME, November 15 — Augusto Ferrazzoli, former Chief Chancellor of the Fascist Special Tribunal, which was dissolved after the liberation of Rome, and three other tribunal members have been released, it was announced today. The evidence against them was found insufficient to warrant their further detention. (UNN)

NEW ITALIAN WOMEN'S UNION FORMED

CATANIA, November 15 — The formation of a new Italian Anti-Fascist Women's Union was announced here today.

Anti-Fascist women of all parties and classes are eligible for membership of the Union, which is affiliated to the Rome central organization. Objects of the club are to assist Italian fighting men, and to give women the fullest opportunity to participate in the political and social life of the country. (UNN)

ROME TRAFFIC CHECK POSTS ABOLISHED

ROME, November 15 — Traffic check posts in this area will be done away with beginning tomorrow, a decree from the Prefect, issued in agreement with the Under Secretariat for Food, announced here today.

FORLI SHELLING ENDS

FORLI', November 15 — Today — six days after the last Nazi clattered away into the north or surrendered to the advancing Allies — the people of this Italian city were able to walk their streets without danger from enemy shellfire, a UNN correspondent reported today. Street cleaners were busily sweeping away debris, and civic officials, aided by military engineers, were taking stock of damaged utilities and services.

The Nazis had Forli within gun range until yesterday, when Allied air attacks finally dislodged or destroyed their artillerymen. The intensive bombardment drove the citizens into cellars and shelters, and kept them there. Even today, Allied officers are not able to estimate the number of civilians remaining in a city which had a normal population of 50,000.

ing from such bits of evidence as half-emptied ration tins — must have been a hurried departure. The city began its program of cleaning up even before German shellfire ceased; street cleaners continued work imperturbably yesterday after a mortar burst only 20 yards away from them.

Despite a promise in writing given to the Bishop of Forli by the German commander, the enemy destroyed three of the town's famous towers, the Duomo, Commune, and Palazzo degli Uffici. A fourth, the Campanile degli San Mercuriale, was saved by the protests of the bishop and a threat of revolt by civilian residents of towns and villages in the Forli area, although the Nazis partially demolished the tower's stairway.

Italian doctors and nurses succeeded in preserving the hospital intact, and in hiding from the Germans considerable quantities of medical supplies. Allied officials praised the work of these doctors and nurses, who today make long trips forward toward enemy-held territory to treat and rescue civilian wounded. Arrangements have been made to give them essential drugs, medicines, and supplies.

Forli Patriots accounted for at least one Mark IV tank and its Nazi occupants, placing mines at a crossroad which blew up the tank. (UNN)

LIBRARIAN PRAISES ALLIED AID FOR ARCHIVES

ROME, November 15 — The work of the Allied Commission in protecting Italian archives was praised today by Frederick W. Shipman, director of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, New York, after a visit of inspection here.

Safety of archives in liberated Italy has been promoted by AC's Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Sub-Commission, to which have been appointed officers who had specialized experience in the National Archives at Washington or at the Public Records Office in London.

Hilary Jenkinson, secretary of the latter, on a recent visit to Italy, voiced similar praise of the Sub-Commission's efforts in guarding not only precious historical manuscripts, but also current records — administrative, legal, and the like — of possible importance in restoration of normal transactions.

Shipman noted favorably that special attention had been given to listing repositories and to finding displaced documents.

Through Allied efforts, losses have been reduced, and as a by-product something approaching a complete survey of Italian archives is developing as a future aid to scholars and administrators, the Roosevelt librarian pointed out.

Italian coöperation has been good, Shipman continued; but without the Sub-Commission, little effective care could be given in areas still under direct military government, or in places where severe disorganization of normal civilian life has occurred.

The greatest loss to records has been the deliberate burning by the Germans in September, 1943, of the most valuable part of the Naples archives, Shipman recalled. (UNN)

A.C. TEAMS AID DEVASTATED AREAS

ROME, November 15 — All available glass in the Allied Commission's buildings — such as glass tops on desks — will be removed to repair windowless Italian civilian hospitals and schools for the winter, the Commission announced today in listing measures to be taken toward relief of devastated areas south of Rome, where the battles for the capital were fought last spring.

These areas, involved in the Allied break-through of the Hitler Line, lie in the provinces of Littoria, Frosinone, Aquila, Chieti, and Pescara, and include also parts of the provinces of Naples and Campobasso.

The intensive bombardment drove the citizens into cellars and shelters, and kept them there. Even today, Allied officers are not able to estimate the number of civilians remaining in a city which had a normal population of 50,000.

Forli is scarred and battered but — except for three of the town's four famous towers, destroyed by the Germans before they retired — by no means in ruins. That the damage was not more severe is due to the fact that Nazi fire consisted largely of anti-personnel mortaring, the UNN correspondent added.

Forli will eat this winter, but there will be little variety in the diet. There is grain in sufficient quantity to feed the population for a long time; the harvest has been gathered, and the Allies are bringing in naptha to work the mill machinery. However, the Germans stole most of the livestock and vegetables, and a big problem was the supply of such semi-essentials as sugar and olive oil.

Water probably will be available within a few days on the first floors of houses at least. After a survey of damage done to the city's waterworks and wells, Allied engineers tested the condition of the water. The question of fuel remains a knotty one, but meanwhile the inhabitants of Forli appear content with their prospects and obviously are happy to have been liberated from the Germans.

Casualties among civilians during the period of Nazi shelling were severe. There were many dead, and the 400 beds of the well-equipped municipal hospital are filled. The Germans demolished many factories, and shops and offices bear evidence of extensive looting before what — judg-

These areas, involved in the Allied break-through of the Hitler Line, lie in the provinces of Littoria, Frosinone, Aquila, Chieti, and Pescara, and include also parts of the provinces of Naples and Campobasso.

More than a third of the 300,000 destitute are children. Lieut. Col. A. D. Bonham-Carter (British), the executive officer for the provinces in Lazio-Umbria Region, estimated in drawing up a relief program.

Two AC teams also are at work already in the provinces in Marche-Abruzzi Region. More officers are being taken from other assignments to aid in the emergency relief.

The devastated areas are entirely in territory under the Italian Government. The population cannot be evacuated because there are so few places with surplus shelter, because equipment and transport for such a mammoth operation is lacking, and because — most important — they do not wish to leave.

The American Relief Committee for Italy and the Red Cross are seeking clothing for these people living in smashed houses, shacks made of rubble, caves, and even dugouts.

Transport of thousands of tons of food to the area is the main difficulty, though within the area the distribution will be hard to mountain hamlets where rain, snow, bad side-roads, and blown bridges keep people in their homes all winter.

Delivery of medical supplies before these hamlets become inaccessible is another problem. A unit of the Friends (Quakers) Service Committee is seeking ambulances.

CHURCHILL PREDICTS HEAVY FIGHTING

LONDON, November 15 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, who returned yesterday from France, told the House of Commons today that extremely heavy fighting «will certainly last for a good long time.»

In the midst of a discussion over possible release of men over 40 years of age from the British Army, the Prime Minister said: «The new fact that stares one in the face is that extremely heavy fighting is continuing week by week...»

Earlier, the Prime Minister had denied a request by James Duncan, Conservative, that men over 40 in «static» military positions be released.

«I need hardly remind you that the static stations are necessary for the prosecution of the war,» he said. «Officers and men over 40 of low medical category... release officers and men for more active duty. In view of the present shortage of manpower, I regret that the present arrangement for indefinite release from the forces can not be altered.»

Cheers greeted Mr. Churchill when he appeared in the House. Later he had lunch with King George. (OWI)

LEAMINGTON, ENGLAND, November 15 — British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said here today that if The United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and France can work together, a long period of peace may come out of this war, «as it must if all civilization is not to be destroyed.»

Cautioning against any belief that means dictation by the major powers, Eden said, «There is nothing I would welcome more than the collaboration and help of all peace-loving states, large or small.

SAN FRANCISCO, November 15 — A proposal for the repeal of the Johnson Act, which prohibits private loans by Americans to European governments which are in default of debts of the last war, was made yesterday by Charles P. Taft, Director of The U. S. State Department's war-time Economic Affairs Division.

Mr. Taft was speaking at the Commonwealth Club here, and was the first U. S. Government official to advocate repeal of the Johnson Act. He said that The United States, as the world's creditor nation, does not need isolationism or a policy of no loans, but instead needs to develop the «skill of a creditor nation.» (PWB)

FRENCH ORDER RENAULT FACTORIES CONFISCATED

PARIS, November 15 — The French Government has ordered the confiscation of the Renault motor car, aircraft engine, and tank factories, a Reuter dispatch said today.

The decision was taken by the French Cabinet toward the end of September, and a week later an official communique appointed Pierre Lefaucheux provisional administrator, pending formation of a state monopoly.

Lefaucheux told 12,000 workers last week-end that technicians, foremen, and operatives will be represented on a committee assisting the managing board. Before the war, the factory employed over 20,000 workers.

The state of Andorra embraces 191 square miles at the Spanish frontier on the south slopes of the Pyrenees Mountains. It has a population of 5,000 persons scattered among six villages. It possesses rich iron mines and valuable timber tracts.

The Spanish Bishop of Urgel, the other co-Prince, was notified of the French action. Annual tribute is paid to both France and Spain. Andorra was granted a constitution as a republic by Napoleon in 1806. (OWI - Reuter)

BELGIAN PATRIOTS MUST DISBAND

BRUSSELS, November 15 — Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot of Belgium has affirmed his Government's decision to end the resistance movement by Saturday, a Reuter dispatch said today. The official Communist newspaper had protested against such disbandment at a time when the Fifth Column allegedly is organizing and reinforcing itself.

The decision to incorporate a number of underground armies into regular state forces by Saturday and consider all others as having reverted to normal civilian life has plunged the Government into a new crisis, and aroused protests throughout the country, the dispatch said.

EVIDENCE INCREASES THAT HIMMLER HAS TAKEN OVER POWER IN GERMANY

LONDON, November 15 — Allied countries, neutrals, Nazi satellites, and the German people themselves tonight looked to Berlin for their answer to the war's most baffling mystery — the whereabouts and state of health of Adolf Hitler.

Tonight all available evidence pointed to Heinrich Himmler as the real power in Germany and as the man who, by terror and by force, is coercing an unwilling people to continue the war.

« There no longer seems to be any doubt that Himmler is acting leader of Germany, » The Times said today. « Hitler has been shut off from active work through illness, and Himmler has extended his great power, and now there is none to challenge him. »

Reichsmarshal Hermann Göring, Hitler's designated successor, may also be ill, the paper added.

The authoritative British Press Association declared that official circles here were convinced that Hitler had lost control, and that Himmler was now the real power, with the result that the Reich will fight to the « last gasp, » regardless of the cost.

An authentic report of Hitler's appearance — as of last September — came from the U. S. 3rd Army front, where a captured newsreel showed Hitler walking through a hospital ward at a time when the Allies were sweeping through France. A Daily Express dispatch, describing the newsreel, said:

Hitler Appeared Exausted, Broken

« He [Hitler] looked astonishingly old, tired, and harassed. His right arm was in a sling. Those who have seen the film remarked on Hitler's extraordinary pallor, and agreed that he appeared an exhausted and broken man. »

EXISTING MINISTRIES FOR U.K. RECONVERSION

LONDON, November 15 — No special ministry will be set up to handle Britain's industrial reconversion from war to peace, Prime Minister Winston Churchill said in the House of Commons today in reply to a question.

He added that responsibility for the job would be shared by the three existing ministries most directly concerned — Labor, Production, and the Board of Trade. (OWI)

peace, but «without for a moment diminishing our war effort.» He said The United States «especially looks forward to a mutually beneficial coöperation with Australia in the Pacific.»

Sir Frederick replied: «Now that the period of acute danger to Australia is over, Australia is determined to contribute her due share in bringing to other countries the security which she now enjoys.» (OWI)

INSIDE GERMANY

EVIDENCE INCREASES THAT HIMMLER HAS TAKEN OVER POWER IN GERMANY

LONDON, November 15 — Allied countries, neutrals, Nazi satellites, and the German people themselves tonight looked to Berlin for their answer to the war's most baffling mystery — the whereabouts and state of health of Adolf Hitler.

Tonight all available evidence pointed to Heinrich Himmler as the real power in Germany and as the man who, by terror and by force, is coercing an unwilling people to continue the war.

«There no longer seems to be any doubt that Himmler is acting leader of Germany,» The Times said today. «Hitler has been shut off from active work through illness, and Himmler has extended his great power, and now there is none to challenge him.»

Reichsmarshal Hermann Göring, Hitler's designated successor, may also be ill, the paper added.

The authoritative British Press Association declared that official circles here were convinced that Hitler had lost control, and that Himmler was now the real power, with the result that the Reich will fight to the «last gasp,» regardless of the cost.

An authentic report of Hitler's appearance — as of last September — came from the U. S. 3rd Army front, where a captured newsreel showed Hitler walking through a hospital ward at a time when the Allies were sweeping through France. A Daily Express dispatch, describing the newsreel, said:

Hitler Appeared Exausted, Broken

«He [Hitler] looked astonishingly old, tired, and harassed. His right arm was in a sling. Those who have seen the film remarked on Hitler's extraordinary pallor, and agreed that he appeared an exhausted and broken man.»

Neutral reports supported the view that Himmler sits in the dictator's chair. The Swedish commentator Bjorn Bjornson declared that Himmler is the real power, and now appoints new generals to the home army and controls the National Labor Service — both keystones of the tottering Nazi state.

In Berne, the Overseas News Agency reported, there is evidence that Himmler already made elaborate preparations to take over the leadership.

As far back as last April, the dispatch said, leaflets were printed announcing a state of utmost urgency in the Reich, and vesting full power over the German people and Wehrmacht in the hands of Himmler.

Partial confirmation of this report came in a dispatch today from inside Germany describing a new decree tightening the Nazi grip on the Wehrmacht. Purporting to be signed by Hitler, Himmler, and Göring, the decree ordered all Wehrmacht officers and NCO's to educate their men in the Nazi spirit. Membership in the Nazi Party is made mandatory — banning the membership lapse formerly permitted men in military service — and permission of officers to join the Party is no longer required.

While Berlin remained silent and the Nazi régime failed to produce a single piece of evidence to show that Hitler was alive, well, and still the leader of the German state, there seemed little question that Himmler and his fellow Nazis were desperately trying to hold off their fate as long as possible.

The Baltimore (Maryland) Sun took this position with the statement: «The leading Nazis know that they are doomed, no matter how the war with Germany is finally concluded. Since the leaders cannot now hope to escape the consequences of their criminality, the prospect of sparing the German people the last phases of the war has no appeal for them.»

Referring to the mystery of the proclamation read by Himmler last Sunday, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch wrote: «Why is Himmler chosen to present this appeal? Goebbels is the head German propagandist, and Göring is still designated as Hitler's successor, but neither read the proclamation.» (OWI-Reuter)

ONLY ALLIES' SUPPORTERS AT PEACE TABLE

LONDON, November 15 — The British Government can see no reason why any country which has not made a positive contribution to the United Nations' war effort should be represented at the peace conference or at any discussions of peace settlement, said Richard Law, Minister of State, in Commons today.

The Minister was replying to a question concerning General Franco and the peace conference.

When Tom Driberg, Independent, asked if he might assume from that «very satisfactory answer» that the British Government would not be deceived by belated lip service to democracy by Franco, Law replied that the Government was «more wide awake than some people suppose.»

Law also said in reply to a question that the arrival of Archduke Otto, Austrian pretender, in Portugal in no way implied political support from the British Government for the Hapsburg cause in Central Europe.

The British Government's policy remained as stated in the declaration issued at the Moscow Conference in 1943 — a free, independent Austria, Law said. (Reuter)

SWEDEN TO DEPORT NAZI TOURIST CHIEF

STOCKHOLM, November 15 — The office of the Governor General here has requested the Ministry of Justice to deport Baron von Gossler, head of the German tourist bureau in Stockholm, the Swedish radio said last night. The governor general's request was made after an interrogation of Von Gossler, who had been held on suspicion of spying. (PWB)

On 13 November in the same area, the USS Benson and the French Destroyer L'Alcyon bombarded enemy barracks and observation posts.

At dawn on 14 November, the British Destroyers Wheatland and Brocklesby bombarded enemy shipping at Bar, between Dubrovnik and Durazzo. Several broadsides fell in the target area.

It is reported from Saloniki that good progress is being made with the unloading of stores and supplies. Good work has been done by the minesweepers in clearing channels through the thickly-laid enemy minefields in the approaches to the port. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, November 15 — Today's communique:

Allied forces attacked in the sector east of Weert against moderate opposition. The village of Eind was freed, and bridgeheads were established over the Noorder and Wessem canals.

In the Metz sector, our forces repulsed counter-attacks and increased their pressure on the city from the north and south.

The bridgeheads across the Moselle in the Königsmacker and Thionville areas have been joined.

Our units reached Frenching and Kuntz, and patrols are in the vicinity of Lemestroff. Other forces have taken Cuny in Coin de l'Hôpital.

We reached the Destrich-Baronweiler area, northwest of Dieuze.

Northeast of Baccarat, gains of up to approximately two miles were made against light opposition.

East of Bruyères, the enemy was forced to withdraw more than a mile. Granges-sur-Vologne and several nearby villages were freed.

In the Belfort sector, limited gains were made against stiff resistance along the flooded Doubs River.

The weather restricted air operations. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, November 15 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On November 9, enemy troops in Piedmont supported by 88 and 165-mm guns, mortars, and machine-guns, attacked Patriot positions near Caprie in the narrowest sector of the Susa Valley.

After a four-hour intensive barrage, the enemy passed to the attack striving to gain possession of the Alpine zone defended by the Patriots.

In spite of their deployment of superior forces, the Nazi-Fascists were repulsed after a bitter struggle, losing 70 dead and 50 wounded.

On the following day, the Germans, trying to retrieve their dead from the battlefield, were again driven back with heavy losses. In this action, Patriots lost six dead and three wounded.

In the southern Piedmont Alps, the Germans took hostages in Cuneo Province, shooting them in reprisal for Patriot acts of sabotage.

In the course of recent Patriot activity, the Germans were found to be carrying war material in vehicles marked with the Red Cross.

Toward the end of October, a Patriot brigade from Treviso, operating in the Veneto zone, held up enemy traffic on the Trento-Udine line, damaging four bridges; and, some days later, the Patriots disarmed the enemy garrison at Carbonera, in Treviso Province. (UNN)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

WEHRMACHT COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, November 15 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Southeast of Helmond, yesterday, the English launched their expected attack. We had been observing and shelling their preparations for a considerable time. Fierce fighting developed on a broad front.

South of Diedenhofen, our grenadiers completed the annihilation of the enemy bridgehead and captured several hundred prisoners.

At Gravelotte and on both sides of the Seille, they are engaged in fierce defensive fighting.

Between the Nied and Mörchingen, German tank formations again frustrated enemy encircling attempts. Twenty-two U.S. tanks were destroyed.

Between the Rhine-Marne Canal and Baccarat, the enemy gained ground in renewed attacks despite the stiff-born defense of our troops.

On both sides of the upper reaches of the Doubs, west of Montbeliard, the enemy resumed his attacks. Grim positional fighting is in full swing.

Artillery duels and shock troop activities are reported from our fortresses and strongpoints in the West.

The London and Antwerp areas were again targets of an intensified long-range bombardment.

Italy:

In central Italy, between Modigliano and the Romagna, northeast of Forli, our grenadiers repulsed continued British attacks in front of new positions.

Despite adverse weather and ground conditions, our movements in the Balkans and in the Finnish-Norwegian frontier areas are being carried out according to plans.

The enemy, under the protection of heavy British naval forces, again tried to land on the Island of Milos in the Aegean Sea. The gallant garrison again repelled the enemy.

East of Budapest, the Bolsheviks continued their attempts at breaking through on a broad front with strong infantry and tank forces. They made no decisive gains against our tanks and grenadiers, who held out under the heaviest fire. At some points of penetration, the front was again closed in powerful counter-attacks.

Since the weather improved, the Soviets launched numerous attacks of up to regimental strength south of Ungvar. They were smashed in front of our positions, despite strong artillery and bomber support. Twenty-nine Bolshevik tanks were destroyed.

No major fighting developed on the other parts of the Eastern Front. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN

Dittmar Military Commentary: An important discussion of Germany's eastern and western fronts occurs in the weekly radio speech by General Dittmar, Germany's leading military commentator. On the west, the speaker predicts that the « present American large-scale attack » on the Lorraine frontier district would probably be the last attack launched by the enemy in the transition period. » After this transition period, Germany will supposedly have overcome her admitted material inferiority. In fact, Dittmar, in one of the most confident statements of his usually reticent and even pessimistic addresses, adds:

« The fighting hitherto has proved that, whenever fighting takes place for a German border district, the enemy is faced with German troop masses of a strength which nobody

the foreign press conference. The statement begins by accusing Sweden, in effect, of mendacity: as the speaker's official diplomatic language puts it, he « expressed German scepticism about Swedish communications concerning violation of the Swedish frontier by German soldiers. » The counter-charge is made that Swedish soldiers illicitly crossed into German-occupied Norway. The Swedish press is accused of « creating an atmosphere of hostility between the German and Swedish people. »

Next, a number of supposedly un-neutral and unfriendly acts by Sweden are listed and denounced in unusually strong language. Sweden is said to do nothing to stop Norwegians from training on Swedish territory to fight the Germans. Perhaps the most sensational charge of all is that « it is a known fact that Anglo-American bombers are using Sweden as a base for deployment on their terror flights against German cities. »

Nazis Back Vlassov Movement: Aside from the Swedish crisis, the most publicized propaganda item of the last two days is the Nazi backing of the ex-Soviet General Vlassov against Stalin. One of the possible motives for this backing seems indicated by Transocean's playing up today the military value to Germany of the Russian prisoners now in German hands, in case they could be used by Vlassov in that « historically important hour when the anti-Bolshevist peoples of Russia, fighting for their liberty, will exchange the first shots with Stalin's troops. »

Yesterday, one of the most featured items was the Vlassov meeting at the castle of Prague. Present were what the German News Agency called « delegates » of the various Russian peoples as well as « invited German guests. » The pro-Nazi General Vlassov told them: « The peoples of Russia, as loyal allies of the German people in the fight against Bolshevism, would never lay down their arms and would fight side by side with the German people until final victory. »

Next, Vlassov proclaimed a « manifesto, » in the name of his « liberation committee, » setting forth the clauses for setting up a new régime in Russia. These clauses include « equal rights for all peoples of Russia » and oppose « exploitation. » Apparently restoration of Tsarism (a subject not mentioned) is not part of this programme.

REPUBLICAN FASCIST

Lull on Italian Front: According to the Fascist radio there was relative calm on the southern front yesterday; today's activity, though punctuated with spasmodic engagements, was equally uneventful. The British 8th Army is reported to have « maintained its pressure » along the Adriatic, but « very stubborn German resistance » repulsed all Allied attacks between Modigliana and the area northwest of Forli.

German naval guns were said to have forced Allied ships to desist and retreat from an attempted bombardment of the Adriatic coast.

Sicily, Sardinia, and Bonomi: For weeks, Fascist commentators have assailed Bonomi and his « so-called » government, emphasizing the imminente dissolution of the latter. The polemics have derived from a variety of partis pris, frequently contradictory within one day, even within one single commentary. Now there is a climax of omniscient exultation based on the supposed « Allied press » announcement that the entire government is about to resign, or better, has already done so.

Tonight, the Fascist radio adds Sardinia to the list of insoluble situations facing Bonomi, Sicily (which long lead the field) yielding the spotlight for the moment. The Rome press is said to be deeply concerned with « the serious situation prevailing in Sardinia, » Italia Libera is quoted as saying that neither the Bonomi government nor the Allies have done anything to meet the « appalling poverty and the state of unrest, » and that the aggregate of penury [illegible] factor of exasperation which may explode at any

« The fighting hitherto has proved that, whenever fighting takes place for a German border district, the enemy is faced with German troop masses of a strength which nobody would have dared to think of a few weeks ago. »

Similarly, the predicted new drives by the Soviets are viewed as « feverish » efforts to strike before here, too, the « period of transition » ends with Germany overcoming her material handicaps.

« New Factor » on Western Front: Sertorius reports today: « A new factor, not altogether unexpected, » has occurred with the attack by the « right wing of the British 2nd Army in the area east of Weert with strong forces against the southwest side of the German Maas bridgehead. » A possible preparation of German public opinion for the loss of Metz seems implied by the remark of Sertorius that « it must not be forgotten that Metz, from the standpoint of the fortress of Europe, represents only an outer position... »

Crisis with Sweden: The news of the last two days indicates growing effort on the part of German propaganda to build up a crisis in respect to relations with Sweden. This is illustrated by the number of serious accusations leveled at Sweden, to appear to justify retaliatory action by Germany.

Transocean at great length describes the statement made yesterday by the official Wilhelmstrasse spokesman to exchange the first shots with Stalin's [illegible]

The Fascist commentator « Vindex » apparently mingling his own opinions with those of a « De Gaullist correspondent, » concludes that the basis for dissension in the Bonomi government is that the parties of the left, the extreme left (Communists) and the right are mutually wary of each other, and hence reduced to virtual impotence. The Communist party, incidentally, is singled out as the on-looker who hopes to profit from the potential clashes. Meanwhile, it is observed that the Allies, rather than admit the failure of their first continental government, are stubbornly supporting Bonomi as a colorless, puppet peace-maker, against the latter's will.

Anniversary of Founding of « Popolo d'Italia »: The 30th anniversary of the establishment of Mussolini's (and Fascism's) mouthpiece is celebrated at some length. The main theme would be the « continuity » of Il Duce's and the party's programme, albeit several marked, and disparate, « historic » evolutions are contained therein. The present stage of Fascism (« Republican » and « Socialist ») is emphasized.

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE: AMERICANS ADVANCE SOUTH OF METZ

LONDON, November 14 — Under a barrage from 400 heavy artillery guns, the British 2nd Army launched a new attack at 1600 hours today against the German pocket west of the Meuse River. The attack began at Nederweert, 20 miles southwest of the German communications center of Venlo.

Meanwhile, the U. S. 1st Army, fighting on the Roer River, today captured Corny. The strongly-fortified town is directly across the river from Fort Driant, which Lieut. Gen. George Patton's men unsuccessfully attacked in a frontal assault some weeks ago.

General Patton launched a third drive on the city of Metz this morning from the west. Press reports said the attack began at Chatel St. Germain, four miles west of the city, but no indication was given as to the progress of the drive.

Northeast of Thionville, on the northern flank of the American 3rd Army drive, 90th Division troops regained all ground lost in a German counter-attack and extended their Moselle bridgehead in the Konigemacker area to seven miles deep and seven miles wide. Press dispatches reported that the eastern end of the bridgehead is within a mile and a half of the German border near the Luxembourg frontier.

Although the four fortresses south of Metz were taken against slight opposition, there have been no reports of a German withdrawal from the city itself. The defenses of Metz are among the most formidable in the world, and are capable of holding out in isolation for a long time. Within the city itself, all civilians not engaged in essential work have been conscripted in labor battalions to dig trenches and to build fortifications, a captured German order revealed.

9 German Counter-Thrusts Repelled

The eastern thrust toward the Saar basin is meeting with stiff opposition on a six-mile front two miles north of the by-passed city of Dieuze. Troops of the 26th Infantry Division and tanks of the 4th Armored Division, in heavy rains, snow, and slush, repulsed nine German counter-attacks and regained all ground lost yesterday. The German counter-thrusts were aimed at keeping the Americans from gaining a ridge in the forest dominating Dieuze.

A 4th Armored Division spearhead has crossed the Metz-Saarburg rail line and driven north of Bensdorf, a main marshalling yard of railways leading from Germany into northeastern France.

Over 6,300 German prisoners have been taken in the week-old offensive.

American 7th Army troops extended their positions in the snow-drifted foothills of the Vosges Mountains and advanced two miles at either end of the 10-mile front. Infantry troops battled against determined German resistance and captured Leintrey, 16 miles southwest of Saarburg, and a mile south of the Nancy-Saarburg rail line.

Farther south, the road and rail junction of Montigny, six miles northeast of Baccarat, was cleared of enemy troops. The Germans in this sector are readjusting their positions after being flooded out by rains and swollen streams, but they are covering their withdrawal by rear-guard actions.

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE; AMERICANS ADVANCE SOUTH OF METZ

LONDON, November 14 — Under a barrage from 400 heavy artillery guns, the British 2nd Army launched a new attack at 1600 hours today against the German pocket west of the Meuse River. The attack began at Nederweert, 20 miles southwest of the German communications center of Venlo. British troops then struck across low-lying swampland at the southern end of the German pocket.

In the first two hours of battle, British troops gained several bridgeheads over the Noorer and Wessem Canals, late reports said tonight. The attack was launched without air support. The lock gates at the junction of these two canals have been captured.

Eight miles to the northeast, British patrols entering the town of Meijel found it abandoned by the Germans. Reports indicated that the Germans are withdrawing their strength from the west banks of the Meuse River.

The southern flank of the American 3rd Army continued to drive on the strongest fortified city in western Europe, and late reports tonight said that troops of the U. S. 5th Division had captured Pouilly, 2½ miles south of Metz.

On a parallel road to the east, another column of 5th Division troops captured Fort Orny, the fourth German fort to fall in the seven-day-old offensive. The capture of these bastions, among the nine main forts in the Metz defense system, was not believed to have opened an actual gap into Metz itself, as the whole zone is covered by cross-fire from the guns in 22 flanking positions.

Other 5th Division troops, advancing toward the pivot of the Saar defense line along the east bank of the Moselle [illegible] all ground lost in a German counter-attack and extended their Moselle bridgehead in the Konigemacker area to seven miles deep and seven miles wide. Press dispatches reported that the eastern end of the bridgehead is within a mile and a half of the German border near the Luxembourg frontier.

Although the four fortresses south of Metz were taken against slight opposition, there have been no reports of a German withdrawal from the city itself. The defenses of Metz are among the most formidable in the world, and are capable of holding out in isolation for a long time. Within the city itself, all civilians not engaged in essential work have been conscripted in labor battalions to dig trenches and to build fortifications, a captured German order revealed.

9 German Counter-Thrusts Repelled

The eastern thrust toward the Saar basin is meeting with stiff opposition on a six-mile front two miles north of the by-passed city of Dieuze. Troops of the 26th Infantry Division and tanks of the 4th Armored Division, in heavy rains, snow, and slush, repulsed nine German counter-attacks and regained all ground lost yesterday. The German counter-thrusts were aimed at keeping the Americans from gaining a ridge in the forest dominating Dieuze.

A 4th Armored Division spearhead has crossed the Metz-Saarburg rail line and driven north of Bensdorf, a main marshalling yard of railways leading from Germany into northeastern France.

Over 6,300 German prisoners have been taken in the week-old offensive.

American 7th Army troops extended their positions in the snow-drifted foothills of the Vosges Mountains and advanced two miles at either end of the 10-mile front. Infantry troops battled against determined German resistance and captured Leintrey, 16 miles southwest of Saarburg, and a mile south of the Nancy-Saarburg rail line.

Farther south, the road and rail junction of Montigny, six miles northeast of Baccarat, was cleared of enemy troops. The Germans in this sector are readjusting their positions after being flooded out by rains and swollen streams, but they are covering their withdrawal by rear-guard actions.

8TH ARMY GAINS NORTHWEST OF FORLI

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, November 14 — Spearheaded by fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force, troops of the 8th Army yesterday broke out of their bridgehead across the Canale Nuovo for a two-mile advance northwest of Forli, it was announced here today.

Pushing across the farmlands between the canal and the River Montone's wide bend on a 1,500-yard front, the Allied forces captured the village of San Tome, two miles north of the main Po Valley highway, and consolidated their positions along a connecting road passing through the village.

Foremost Allied positions are now within 6½ miles of Faenza, next of the string of towns along the Emilia Highway, and within a mile and a half of a secondary crossing over the Montone.

Although both infantry and armored forces were employed by the enemy in their attempts to halt this new 8th Army thrust toward the Montone River, Allied casualties were reported to be very light. More than 100 enemy prisoners of war were captured in the operation.

To the southwest of Forli, Allied troops crossed the Montone itself at two additional points along a five-mile front. British troops made the initial crossing yesterday at a bend 1,500 yards southwest of San Varano, much-bombed German strongpoint on the Florence-Forli Road.

The crossing achieved complete tactical surprise, but enemy forces, which have been strong in this sector, soon formed to launch a heavy counter-attack.

The second British crossing, also southwest of San Varano, was then made, and the Allied positions were consolidated.

The third crossing of the Montone yesterday was made between Castrocaro, where first 8th Army troops passed over the strongly-defended German barrier, and the village of Terra Del Sole, roughly a mile and a half to the northeast.

Approaching Faenza

These forces pressed northwest, to capture the village of Ciola, only six miles from Faenza's outskirts, while the troops which had previously bridged the Montone at Castrocaro pushed two miles due west to capture the hamlet of Bagnolo, and to make contact with the enemy on hill positions around Monte Cerretio.

Although Allied forces have now in several places penetrated enemy delaying positions along the Montone River, south of the main Po Valley Highway, and have overrun most of the watercourses east of this stream north of the road, enemy forces are still provided with additional water barriers at which to delay the Allied thrust along the Po Plain.

Faenza itself is protected south of the Emilia Highway by no less than three streams — the Lamone and its two tributaries, the Marzano and the Samoggia. North of the highway, the Lamone circles toward the coast to empty into great marshlands north of Ravenna.

In this coastal sector of the 8th Army front, patrol forces yesterday cut off and captured an enemy rear-guard force holding the crossing of the coastal highway over the Fossa Ghiata drainage canal, four miles south of Ravenna. The German troops were surrounded by Allied forces which crossed the canal farther east, and circled inland behind the enemy positions, while other Allied units engaged the enemy in a frontal attack. Whether the bridge over the canal at this point was captured intact was not revealed in the official reports.

In the lowlands lying between the Canale Nuovo and the River Ronco, mopping up operations continued yesterday, as strong enemy rear-guards remained in this area, principally around Roncadello, three miles north of Forli. In this area, Allied forces were still held 1,000 yards east [illegible] self-propelled guns.

dapest, Soviet forces liquidated the German bridgehead at Dunaföldwar, midway between Budapest and Baja.

The drives on Budapest from the southeast and the northeast also have made progress against strong German and Hungarian resistance. The heaviest fighting in the battle for Budapest is raging east of the capital, where Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's spearheads are shearing through the German-Hungarian defenses around the Budapest-Miskolcz railway. Already the strategically important city of Jasbereny has been outflanked.

The cutting of the Miskolc-Budapest line of communication at a new point northeast of the Hungarian capital and behind the Germans' northeastern grouping would mean the virtual isolation and neutralization of what is believed to be about half of the German and Hungarian forces detailed for the defense of Budapest. Only the most roundabout route would be available to the Germans along which to fall back on the city.

Red Star said today that heavy artillery systems — which would include the biggest guns in the Red Army — are being used to smash at point-blank range the German tanks making counter-attacks on the approaches to Budapest. Red Star said these guns do not just knock out the enemy tanks, but "smash them to pieces."

The problem of concentrating Soviet forces for the decisive blow, however, is complicated by torrential rains which are washing away roads, a dispatch from here said today.

During the period from November 10 to 13, Russian troops captured 3,600 German and Hungarian prisoners, bringing their total of prisoners in fighting in Hungary from November 8 to 13 to 7,700.

Only reconnaissance activity was reported from other sectors of the front today. Yesterday, 18 German tanks were knocked out and 21 planes shot down. (OWI-Reuter)

JAPS RECAPTURE ISLAND IN THE PALAUS

PEARL HARBOR, November 14 — Japanese forces, launching a sudden counter-attack in the southern Palaus, have retaken a small island formerly held by the United States Marines, it is disclosed in a communique issued by Admiral Chester Nimitz.

The Japanese apparently had held Ngeregong Island, 10 miles northeast of Peleliu, for a week, after landing 200 troops at night during a storm. A small patrol of Marines, who had previously occupied Ngeregong, were taken off in landing craft without casualties.

American warships then blockaded the passage which the Japanese used in penetrating the American-held section of the Palaus, and the enemy invading force was shelled by gunboats.

Ngeregong lies between Peleliu and the Japanese-held Koror and Babelthaup Islands to the north. Correspondents said that there is no indication that the Japanese thrust represented any serious threat to the American positions at Peleliu and Angaur, which United States forces have held since September. Allied airfields are now in operation on both these islands.

The Pearl Harbor communique states that a Japanese destroyer which had been damaged on Friday was sunk by Allied aircraft near Golou, in the Palau group.

A communique from General MacArthur's Headquarters on Leyte tonight said that American infantrymen, pressing down the Ormoc Corridor, have effected a wide envelopment that is threatening the Yamashita line.

The enveloping move was made through the mountains southwest of Pinamopoan on Carigara Bay, and threatens the Japanese line below Limon, the communique added.

An American division has repulsed a small Japanese force attempting to land at Dumulaan, 14 miles south of Ormoc. American dismounted cavalrymen are closing in on Ormoc road and Mount Catabaran, inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese, the communique concluded.

Whether the bridge over the canal at this point was captured intact was not revealed in the official reports.

In this area, Allied forces were still held 1,000 yards east of the canal, mainly by enemy self-propelled guns.

Polish troops yesterday advanced some 3,000 yards along a ridge line south of the headwaters of the Samoggia River to capture monte Casole, nine miles south of Faenza, and were engaged in heavy fighting in still higher ground to the west near the mountain village of Celia.

Eighth army forces in this sector are also pushing northwest along the line of a secondary road leading to Modigliano, in the Lamone River Valley south of Faenza. Indian troops of the 5th Army are converging on this same town from the southwest.

Sporadic harassing fire and patrolling were the only action reported on the 5th Army front yesterday.

Two enemy aircraft, both of which were believed to have been destroyed, continued the small enemy air attacks on the forward areas south of Bologna. An enemy plane also carried out an incendiary and strafing attack in the coastal sector, without causing either damage or casualties.

SOVIETS WIPE OUT GERMAN DANUBE BRIDGEHEAD

MOSCOW, November 14 — The Russians' westward drive on Budapest moved to within 26 miles of the capital today with the capture of Nagykata, while, south of Budapest, the problem of concentrating Soviet forces for the decisive blow, however, is complicated by torrential rains which are washing away roads, a dispatch from here said today.

CHINESE ENCIRCLE BHAMO ADMIT LOSS OF LIUCHOW AND CHIENKIANG

CHUNGKING, November 14 — Chinese troops in north Burma have completed the encirclement of Bhamo, with vanguards within three kilometers of the city, the Chinese communique said today. Also the Chinese High Command admitted tonight that Liuchow was abandoned Saturday, and that Chienkiang, on the highway from Liuchow to Yungning, was captured the same day by Japanese forces.

Bhamo, a Japanese supply base on the great bend of the Irrawaddy River, is a vital point for the control of the Burma Road.

Lieut. Gen. Daniel Sultan, American commander in the India-Burma Theater, commenting on the encirclement of Bhamo, said: "The Japs are in another spot. They might pull another Myitkyina, but their position in the long run is hopeless."

A Reuter dispatch said that the early capture of Bhamo is no longer important because of the pinching off of vital points on either side of the city, which can now be bypassed leaving the current Japanese garrison to be destroyed at leisure.

Chinese forces already are fanning out east and west of the town on a 20-mile front south of the Irrawaddy. A third force is attacking southeast of Bhamo.

Planes of the 14th USAAF continued to attack river shipping, supply lines, and concentrations, especially in the Japanese-occupied Liuchow sector.

In central Burma, thrusts toward Kalemyo from the north and west progress. In the Chindwin sector, East African forces advanced along the west bank of the river and occupied Mallaik, an important Japanese base.

R.N. SINKS NINE GERMAN WARSHIPS

LONDON, November 14 — Nine German warships were sunk by British warships in a convoy battle off Norway on Sunday night, following the sinking on Sunday morning of the German battleship Tirpitz by the RAF.

The British force, composed of two cruisers and four destroyers, took the 11-vessel enemy convoy completely by surprise as it was attempting to make a northward passage off the coast of Norway. In the course of brisk action off Lister Fjord, south of Egersund, nine vessels were sunk or blown up, and a tenth or escort vessel driven ashore.

«After a fierce engagement lasting half an hour, only four blazing hulks remained of the 11 German ships totalling about 25,000 tons,» said a naval reporter who was on the bridge of the cruiser Kent during the action. «The rest had been sunk, with the possible exception of an escort vessel and a merchant ship which may have escaped in the darkness or been driven ashore.»

In a graphic account of the action he said:

«As we passed Egersund Fjord shortly after 2300 hours, we saw the convoy coming north, some of the ships less than five miles from the shore. Our first 8-inch broadsides hit the leading escort vessels. I saw one rear out of the water, her screw turning idly. Then, silhouetted against a glowing sky, she slid bows first under the water.

«By this time, another vessel was blazing; the convoy had scattered, and had begun to fight back. Another ship, evidently an ammunition carrier, exploded with a brilliant red flash.

«Behind us destroyers were twisting and turning with all their guns roaring. Everywhere around us were blazing and sinking ships. While I watched one ship go up, another was suffering the same fate from another quarter.

«An escort vessel approached us, firing hard, but she was hit aft and turned away. A shore battery opened fire, but no one took any notice.» (OWI - Reuter)

MOSQUITO BOMBERS DAMAGE TWO GERMAN SHIPS

LONDON, November 14 — The Royal Air Force struck again today at German shipping off the coast of Norway when Mosquito bombers severely damaged two small coastal vessels. One ship was left burning fiercely with flames 50 feet high.

Headquarters of the 8th USAAF announced the results of its fighter-plane operations between February 1 and November 11 in German-occupied Europe. Fighters destroyed or damaged 26,756 railway cars and 5,348 locomotives in blows that have seriously handicapped the German transportation system, the announcement said.

In addition, 3,246 planes were destroyed or damaged on the ground, and 5,666 trucks and 742 barges were knocked out. (OWI)

FLYING BOMBS OVER ENGLAND AGAIN

LONDON, November 14 — Flying bombs were again sent over southern England, including the London area, [illegible] hit. At 1045, she was seen to be on fire. As the last aircraft turned for home, she was seen heeling over in the shallow fjord waters.»

All around the wreck was a great pool of oil through which plane observers could see the booms meant to protect the German battleship from attack by torpedoes. The Air Ministry said that this was the third attack on the Tirpitz made with 12,000-pound bombs. One bomb apparently hit the vessel amidships, another in the bows, and a third toward the stern. There were also apparently two very near misses which probably did serious underwater damage, so powerful is the explosive effect of the six-ton «earthquake» bombs.

The Tirpitz laid down no smokescreen, despite the clear visibility which good weather made possible. When the first planes appeared, her guns started firing, but after the first bomb hit her, her firing ceased. Smoke began billowing up, and directly afterward there were several explosions. Only one Lancaster is missing from the attack, the Air Ministry concluded.

The Tirpitz was as well protected against air attacks as any capital ship could be. Her decks had thick armor, and she had 16 heavy ack-ack guns, and 16 others of smaller caliber. She had also two catapults for aircraft.

Besides this, her main armament consisted of eight 15-inch guns, with a secondary armament of 12 5.9-inch guns. The battleship had a complement of about 1,500 men, and was designed for a speed of 30 knots.

Although the Tirpitz's importance as a threat has been out of proportion to her actual achievement, strategically, she kept Allied capital ships on the alert to be ready for any sortie she might attempt. The enemy evidently intended using her with other capital ships as commerce raiders, but she was not ready for action until just after the Bismarck was sunk. On 1 June 1941, four days after the sinking of the Bismarck, a reconnaissance photograph disclosed that the Tirpitz had left Kiel, where she had been brought from Wilhelmshaven, the naval base in which she was built.

After trials in the Baltic and spending some time in the Trondheim Fjord, she proceeded to Alten Fjord, and stayed there except for brief sorties, until moved a few weeks ago to her final station near Tromsö.

FIGHTER-BOMBERS HIT PO RIVER OIL PIPELINES

12,000-POUND BOMBS SUNK THE «TIRPITZ»

WASHINGTON, November 14 — The sinking of the Tirpitz «removes a definite threat to Allied operations in the North Atlantic,» said U. S. Navy Secretary James Forrestal, in a message of congratulation to the British Navy yesterday.

The 45,000-ton Tirpitz was Germany's last battleship, and one of the most powerful vessels in the world. The first German battleship to be sunk by bombs alone, she has been lurking in northern waters for over three years, and been attacked by the Allies eight times, the first being in March 1942.

The Air Ministry last night issued a detailed description of the sinking which began, tersely:

«Shortly before 1030 hours Sunday, a force of 32 Lancasters arrived over Tromsö Fjord. At 1030, the Tirpitz [illegible] caliber. She had an [illegible] armor.

Besides this, her main armament consisted of eight 15-inch guns, with a secondary armament of 12 5.9-inch guns. The battleship had a complement of about 1,500 men, and was designed for a speed of 30 knots.

To transport the increasingly scarce fuel across the river, the Germans had constructed near Ostiglia, 10 miles east of Mantua, pumping and transfer stations which took the oil from tank cars, pumped it across the river, and then delivered to other tank wagons which carried it on south to the front. Yesterday's fighter-bomber attacks scored hits on both of these transfer buildings, causing huge columns of smoke.

Although bad weather grounded heavy bombers yesterday, Mitchell medium bombers attacked and destroyed one span of the Padua north railway bridge, and fighters and fighter-bombers knocked out one other Po Valley bridge and took heavy toll of enemy transport along this supply network.

Light bombers and fighter-bombers also carried out heavy close-support attacks in the Faenza-Forli area, and bombed a quay at Porto Corsini, north of Ravenna.

Spitbombers, Kittyhawks, and Mustangs of the Desert Air Force, commanded by Air Vice Marshal W. F. Dickson, and flown by men of the Royal, Royal Australian, Royal Canadian, and the South African Air Force, were congratulated by ground forces for their precise and effective work in the attacks spearheading 8th Army advances, it was announced today.

Balkan Air Force Spitfires, flying from Greek airfields, Sunday dive-bombed an ammunition train near Pristina, Yugoslavia, to cause a mushroom of fire and smoke which rose 12,000 feet, it was announced here today. (PRO)

ALLIES REACTIVATE ITALIAN MINES

ROME, November 14 — Coal now being produced from the mines of Sardinia at the rate of 46,000 tons a month after a year of reactivation by Allied mining engineers will be an important factor in establishing a sound economy for liberated Italy, it was announced today by the Allied Commission's Mining Division.

Although this tonnage does not begin to meet liberated Italy's civilian needs, Italy's pre-war coal imports having totaled about one million tons a month, the reactivation of the coal mines has contributed vitally toward Allied military successes and toward the establishment of valuable foreign exchange credits to Italy. And these mines, as well as important sulphur deposits in Sicily, newly reopened by British and American military engineers, also have given employment to thousands of Italian miners.

In addition to the coal and sulphur mines, Allied assistance is also being extended to mines in Italy producing lignite, iron ore, pyrites, mercury ore, anthracite coal, zinc concentrate, and lead concentrate.

Reactivation Under Difficulties

Thirty-five thousand of the 46,000 tons of Sardinian coal are being shipped to the Italian mainland and to Sicily for both military and civilian use. The Sicilian sulphur, production of which was zero a year ago, is now being mined at the rate of 4,000 tons a month.

British and American mine equipment, machinery, and supplies, valued at four million dollars, plus the advice of expert Allied mining engineers, are giving the Italian mining industry the impetus needed to enable it to take its place in a sound national economy.

Although Italy is a dependent mine product nation, Allied geological and mining experts have combed liberated Italy for mineral production, examining more than 200 mines during the last year.

The task of reactivating Italy's mining industry is not an easy one. Allied mining engineers and geologists are faced with the fact that Italy can never be mineraily self-sufficient. In 1938, Italy's minerals amounted to only three per cent of the total wealth produced in the country. An Allied geological report on Italy made by one of the world's leading mining experts stated:

"Only one-fiftieth of the oil, a tenth of the coal, and a quarter of the iron ore annual requirements are produced within the country. The value of pre-war exports of mineral products amounted to about 17 million dollars in 1938, and consisted principally of sulphur, marble, and mercury. The imports of mineral products had a value about seven times this amount, and consisted principally of coal and oil."

Allied engineers assumed the job of pumping some life into the national economy through mining when the AC's Mining Division was organized exactly a year ago. At that time, the mineral industry was at the point of its lowest depression, with mine employment reduced about one-third, many coal mines shut down entirely, and no production from the Sicilian sulphur mines.

But as the Allied engineers, machinery and supplies were brought in, coal production jumped from about 7,500 tons in November, 1943, to 41,250 tons in January, 1944, while fused sulphur production increased from nothing to 2,146 tons in July, 1944.

Sicilian Sulphur Production

The reopening of Sardinian mines by Allied engineers was achieved in the face of run-down machinery and the destruction of the port facilities at Sant'Antioco by the Germans. A sunken ship was beside the pier and the harbor was mined. Under the direction of the AC's Mining Division officers, the loading pier was repaired, the sunken ship was floated, and the harbor cleared of mines. ROME, November 14 — As a result of numerous thefts from ammunition and other military stores in the Bari zone, Allied military courts for trial of civilians charged with such thefts have been authorized, the Allied Commission announced today.

Two Allied officers have been sent there already to aid in such prosecutions, AC's Legal Sub-Commission said. The number of legal officers there will be increased soon to 10. The Italian penal code will be applied.

The authority to appoint and convene these courts has been given to Brig. J. K. Dunlop, Regional Commissioner for AC's southern region. This territory is under the Italian Government, but the Allies have reserved the right to hold AMG courts as need arises. (UNN)

A sunken ship was beside the pier and the harbor was mined. Under the direction of the AC's Mining Division officers, the loading pier was repaired, the sunken ship was floated, and the harbor cleared of mines. Mining supplies were requisitioned immediately from The United States, and hundreds of tons have been delivered. Production of coal soon moved upward, and 4,000 men were given employment.

Another problem was obtaining mine explosives at a time when all explosives were acutely needed for war production. This problem was solved partially by Allied engineers, who turned over captured enemy shells to a local Italian manufacturer who reworked the explosives into suitable form for industrial use. A small quantity of mine explosives is now being produced.

Some of the mine supplies from The United States which have already arrived include thousands of pounds of angle steel and plate, cable and wire, various chemicals, electric cable, small hand-tools, fuel and lubricating oils, steel pipe, steel drills of all sizes and copper tubing, and, in addition, millions of pounds of explosives and calcium carbide — the latter for mine lighting — and millions of feet of fuse and several million mine detonators.

Another Allied mining achievment has been the reactivation of Italy's lignite mines in sections close to consuming centers, so as to relieve the load on scarce transport. An example was the reopening of the Ribolla lignite mine near Grosseto, north of Rome, where it was necessary to move an entire spur of railroad after the Germans had destroyed a long and [illegible] stretch of roadbed. More than 300 to 400 tons of lignite now arrive in Rome daily, to give its citizens gas for cooking and fuel for essential use.

UNITED NATIONS

U.S. CONGRESS RECONVENES

WASHINGTON, November 14 — Extension of President Roosevelt's extraordinary war powers was the most important piece of business facing the U. S. 78th Congress, which reconvened today for its final session. The 79th Congress, made up of members chosen at the recently-concluded elections, takes office January 3.

Among the problems on the agenda are revival of the federal crop insurance program, a national road-building program, and continuation of the present one per cent social security tax on employers and employees. The questions of compulsory peace-time military training and possible income tax changes are expected to be left for the new Congress. (OWI)

TEN U.S. SOLDIERS ELECTED TO CONGRESS

WASHINGTON, November 14 — Eight American servicemen were elected to the House of Representatives and two to the Senate in last week's nation-wide elections, it was reported tonight. Seven of the eight newly-elected representatives are Democrats.

The election of an eleventh serviceman depends upon soldier votes not yet counted. (OWI)

EDEN REPORTS TO COMMONS ON PARIS TALKS

LONDON, November 14 — Britain's friendship with France is now on «a surer foundation than ever before,» Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today. He was reporting to the Commons, at the

Among them in particular is Georges Bidault, now Foreign Minister of France. It was a great pleasure to the Prime Minister and myself to meet this gallant man, who was himself the outstanding leader of the French Resistance Movement. We could see the same vigour and the same confidence in France's future expressed in the thousands of troops who marched past us in the Champs Elysées, a great many of whom are recently-enlisted members of the FFI, and every man of whom is a volunteer. Everyone who understands the history of France will understand the significance of that last statement, and no one can doubt that, as time and opportunity offer, these men will give as splendid an account of themselves against the hated Nazi foe in the field, as they have already done in the bitter and bloody warfare in the interior of France itself.

«Just one reference to conditions in France, because we should bear in mind that, despite some outward appearances, life in Paris is a constant struggle with material difficulties.

«Almost total lacks of fuel and transport are in themselves a severe hardship in these winter months, but worse than that is the manifold suffering which these people have undergone and continue to undergo.

«There are still over two and a half million French prisoners-of-war, political deportees, and forced laborers in Germany. There is scarcely a family in France which has not a husband or a son still in Germany.

«All parcels, all letters have ceased. In fact, deportees have never been allowed any communication with their families since they were taken away to Germany. It is pretty hard. When we consider those facts, we can perhaps estimate, too, what the absence of these men means to France, not only in the loss of a great part of what was best in the nation's manhood, but in the social, political, and military consequences that this entails, and also the mental distress for those who are left behind.

«It is not surprising that in those conditions France, which after all these years has suddenly regained her freedom, should be like a man emerging from a darkened room into a blaze of light, dazed for a moment and grateful still to his friends for a measure of understanding and encouragement.

«Let us interpret this in terms of France's position as a great power. It was indeed appropriate that the three Allied powers — The United States, the Soviet Union, and ourselves — were able to invite France on this very Saturday to take her place with us as a permanent member of the European Advisory Committee.

Discussions Eminently Satisfactory

«The new situation that was thus created, and the work that must flow therefrom, was naturally the subject of discussions between us in Paris. Of these discussions, I would only say now that both the French ministers and ourselves regarded them as eminently satisfactory.

«I will conclude with this confident message to the House: France's determination to work together with her Allies expresses, I am sure, the heartfelt wish of the French people, and it is the will of the people which is the only sure foundation of foreign policy in a free land.

«France will recover. Before now in her history she has shown powers of recuperation which have astounded the world. It is my belief she will do this again. She can be assured that in her endeavor she will have the constant friendship, understanding, and help of the British peoples everywhere.»

Sir Percy Harris, Liberal, after saying how much the nation and the Empire appreciated the visit to Paris, declared it was the general desire of the nation to reciprocate the welcome the French nation have given by giving a reception to the head of the French people, General de Gaulle, at an early date.

Eden replied:

EDEN REPORTS TO COMMONS ON PARIS TALKS

LONDON, November 14 — Britain's friendship with France is now on « a surer foundation than ever before, » Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today. He was reporting to the Commons, at the Prime Minister's request, on his and Mr. Churchill's visit to Paris.

Mr. Eden said the overwhelming impression of those crowded hours in Paris was the sincerity and spontaneity of the welcome given by every section of the French people. It would, however, « be a great mistake to interpret this welcome as a momentary effervescence; it was, rather, the expression of a deep thankfulness for suffering at last ended. » Mr. Eden continued:

« In his speech of welcome to us, General Charles De Gaulle recalled Hitler's claim that his system would last for 1,000 years. "I do not know," said General de Gaulle, "what will remain of his system in 1,000 years. But this I do know — that in 1,000 years' time France, which has some experience of « blood, sweat and tears, » will not have forgotten what has been accomplished in this war through the « blood, sweat and tears » by the noble British people under the leadership of their Prime Minister."

« Those are generous words. They were uttered by a man who is himself today unquestionably the inspirer and the man who personifies the unity of the Free French people. He has got round him a band of young and vigorous colleagues who have proved their worth in the ordeal through which France has passed.

« It is our hope that the visit which is being paid to Paris will, in due course, be repaid, and I think our French friends know how welcome they will be. »

When Aneurin Bevan, Labor, asked if the Commons could be informed of non-military decisions reached with the French Government concerning France's role in Europe, Eden said:

« As I explained, we examined the consequences that would flow from French participation with the European Advisory Committee. I think that in the debate on the Address [the King's forthcoming speech] there will be good opportunity for a statement. » (Reuter)
