Last night, heavy long-range batteries of the Navy shelled ports in southern England with good success. At St. Margaret, an enemy battery was so heavily hit when the Germans retorted to English long-range fire that only one gun continued firing.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

In Italy, in the Adriatic coastal sector, the power of the major enemy attack, yesterday, increased in fury. Our divisions, in grim fighting, inflicted particularly heavy losses on the enemy, and repelled all attacks except for one local infiltration, which was sealed off. Our troops again achieved a complete defensive success. During yesterday's fighting, 58 enemy tanks were destroyed.

From August 26 to 31, 994 terrorists were killed in action in the French rear, during mopping up operations.

In the eastern Carpathians, our mountain troops frustrated Soviet attacks in fierce fighting, with bloody losses for the enemy. In the northwestern part of the Vistula bridgehead of Baranov, the Bolshevics were pushed further back despite stubborn resistance. Yesterday, northeast of Warsaw, the enemy, supported by strong tank and bomber formations, continued his attempts at breaking through. Troops of the Waffen SS again achieved a complete defensive success, and brought down 47 enemy tanks. Between the Bug and Narew, our troops, in the course of nine days' grim fighting, smashed the attack of 30 Soviet rifle divisions and several tank and assault gun formations, and frustrated the enemy attempts at breaking through toward Scharfwiese. A cavalry corps alone fighting at the focal point of the battle, destroyed 138 enemy tanks and assault guns, as well aircraft guns of freighters, and anti-aircraft guns of the Navy. (Radio Berlin)

Poland: The Polish Prime Minister of the government in exile at London has offered the Kremlin the eastern part of his country in order to be accepted as a member of the Polish Bolshevik government at Lublin.

TRANSOCEAN AND DNB

Italy: « The British command now seems to be considering a plan to support operations by landing in the coastal sectors of Rimini, Venice, Trieste, and the Istrian Peninsula, in order to get at the rear and flank of the defenders. In view of events in Rumania, this intention is doubtless accompanied by nervous political speculations concerning the northern Balkans. »

South France: Although Americans in the Rhône Valley continued their attacks in the Valence area, in the Isère and Drôme valleys, the majority of the German formations were able to reach the area north and northwest of Lyon.

North France: East of Arnhem, heavy fighting took place in the Peronne area and near Albert, where SS Panzer Grenadiers inflicted grave losses on the attackers in furious street fighting. In the same area, massed Allied tank wedges pushed beyond Arras to the north, north-east, and north-west as far as the area west of Lens.

Eastern Front: « There was practically no fighting at the northern part of the eastern front. In the area north-east of Warsaw, the enemy continued his attacks, supported by artillery fire and battle planes. » Soviet troops are said to be « advancing » in Rumania toward the Bulgarian border.

GERMAN FRONT IN FRANCE BROKEN DIEPPE, ARRAS, VERDUN, SEDAN LIBERATED

SHAEF, September 1 — On the eve of the sixth year of war the German front in northern France has been completely broken on both the American and British sectors, and the routed German forces are reeling back for the final battle on German soil. Allied troops are racing across the last few miles to the borders of France, to Belgium and toward Germany itself.

Ahead of General George Patton's armored forces, which have reached Verdun and Sedan near the Belgian border, there is no sign of organized resistance. On the 300-mile front from the Channel to Verdun, the German line has given way.

It was at Sedan that the German panzer elite crossed into France, and that behind them rolled 150 German divisions in the pink of condition and with the best equipment. But, for every single panzer which entered, the Allies have now returned with 30 more, and with 100 planes for every unit of the Luftwaffe.

General Patton caught the Germans off balance, as he has done before, by throwing his armor in one direction, then swerving suddenly in another. The British-Canadian front is so fluid that in some cases there are no lateral communications.

Canadian forces, breaking through at Rouen, have captured Dieppe, it was reported tonight. The same Canadian units which lost so heavily at Dieppe two years ago rode into the city from the south without firing a shot. They were the Essex Scottish and the Royal Hamilton Light Infantry and the Royal Regiment of Canada, all units of the 2nd Canadian Division. This advance cuts off all German troops in the port of Le Havre and in the triangle of territory between Le Havre and Dieppe.

Shattered units of some 15 divisions are believed to be in this area.

While Dieppe was being occupied, other Canadian troops reached the Channel at La Treport, 14 miles east of Dieppe.

Le Havre Two Miles

West of Rouen, Canadian, Belgian, and Netherlands troops fought their way 20 miles toward Le Havre and are within two miles of the port, in contact with outpost troops. There are indications that the German garrison at Le Havre may attempt a suicide stand to deny the Allies the use of that port for as long as possible. British infantry units under Canadian command have established two more bridgeheads west of Rouen, toward the sea.

North of Paris, General Courtney Hodge's 1st Army is in Compiegne, scene of the signing of the Armistice in 1918 and where Hitler imposed his peace terms on the French in 1940. In their advance northward, American troops liberated the towns of Senlis and Creil. Other units, after capturing Crepy, have advanced to Bethancourt and Haramont, and others going eastward have reached Vaumoise.

The battle has become a full pursuit and it is no longer superior gun power that decides the rate of advance. It is the capacity of the men behind the front to maintain supplies. The daily requirements of the advancing armies add up to the equivalent of 30,000 three-ton trucks moving from the base to the front. Pilots report that they are moving up in bumper-to-bumper fashion.

Elements of General Patton's 3rd Army, in an eastward thrust through St. Dizier, have liberated Commercy, to advance within 58 miles of Germany's Saar Basin.

Other American forces, driving southeast from Troyes, are in the vicinity of Bar-sur-Seine.

In Brittany, Allied troops closing in on Brest advanced almost to the coast west of the port in the area south of St. Renan. American medium bombers attacked German strongpoints in the port today, it was officially announced.

In less than 24 hours, the 3rd Army linked Reims and Verdun, an accomplishment that took the Allies four years to complete in the last world war and that then cost thousands of lives. Few casualties were suffered in this new march.

Flying-Bomb Sites

To the west, along the coast of France, Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery's 21st Army Group is rolling up the flying-bomb belt at a rapid rate. A late dispatch tonight stated that forward elements of General Dempsey's armored forces are now in Arras, whereas earlier today they were half-way between Amiens and Arras at Hebuterne. They have driven 80 miles in three days, and have approached the back door to Pas de Calais itself. They are now 40 miles from the Belgian border and 60 miles from Dunkerque, from which the British forces successfully withdrew in May 1940.

A large number of flying-bomb launching platforms have already been captured, and in the area between Le Havre and the Somme there are at least 100 installations. The main supply line to scores of others has been severed by Allied aircraft.

Other British forces have moved northeast of the Somme from Amiens to Longore, halfway to Abbeville, thus narrowing the German escape corridor along the coast to 20 miles in depth. German troop concentrations near Abbeville were bombed today by British medium bombers. Shattered units of some 15 divisions are believed to be in this area.

While Dieppe was being occupied, other Canadian troops reached the Channel at Le Tréport, 14 miles east of Dieppe.

ST. MIHIEL LIBERATED

WITH U.S. 3RD ARMY, FRANCE, September 1 — The American 3rd Army liberated the fortified town of St. Mihiel, on the right bank of the Meuse River, 32 miles southeast of Verdun, it was reported late tonight.

The Americans won a notable victory at St. Mihiel in September, 1918. The city was then an important salient in the lines of the Germans, who were attacking Verdun.

AMERICANS REACH JOINVILLE
BRITISH LIBERATE MONTDIDIER

SHAEF, September 1 — American armored units have advanced southwest of St. Dizier and are in the vicinity of Joinville, it was reported late tonight. Other units moving eastward from Vitry le François have advanced 18 miles along the Marne-Rhine canal.

British forces driving northeast from Beauvais have liberated Montdidier.

American armored forces from the Reims area have passed through Rethel to the Grand Forêt de Signy, 29 miles from the Belgian border.

In the Compiègne sector, Allied troops are encountering the stiffest resistance yet met. (Reuter)

R.A.F. ATTACKS LONG-RANGE WEAPON DEPOTS U.S.A.A.F. BOMBS ENEMY TRANSPORT

LONDON, September 1 — RAF Bomber Command this morning bombed German long-range weapon supply depots in northern France.

Today's attack, which was made by Spitfire-escorted Halifaxes without the loss of a single aircraft, carried into the second consecutive day the RAF bombing of these supply depots. Yesterday, a force of 600 Halifaxes and Lancasters dropped their bombs on these targets.

Last night, Mosquitoes attacked Duesseldorf and other objectives in western Germany with 4,000-pound bombs, and left big fires among the few remining industrial areas of the city. These night attacks cost the RAF seven planes.

Aircraft of the British Fleet Air Arm were also active last night, attacking enemy shipping off the French coast. They set one large merchant vessel on fire and scored four hits on a second. Three other enemy ships were believed to have been hit during the attacks.

Both yesterday and today, Allied fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over northern France, Holland, and Belgium almost unopposed, attacking German transport and troop concentrations.

Thunderbolts of the 8th USAAF today attacked German rolling stock, locomotives, freight cars, trucks, and automobiles from Mons, in Belgium, to Roermond, in Holland. One group alone disabled 68 locomotives and destroyed or damaged 98 freight cars. Another group planted 600-pound bombs on canal locks northwest of Eindhoven, Holland, in a low-level attack. This group also bombed trains and marshalling yards west of Nijmegen, and strafed railroads and highways.

At the request of Lt. Gen. Omar Bradley, Marauders pounded forts and gun positions in Brest. German troop concentrations were strafed near Abbeville, where the escape corridor is being steadily narrowed by Allied gains.

Yesterday, Allied fighters and fighter-bombers destroyed 290 vehicles and damaged nearly 300 in German convoys retreating between the Seine and Abbeville. In addition, they destroyed or damaged 63 railroad cars and 13 locomotives.

Supply System Unhampered

In contrast to the gruelling experience of German troops and transport retreating by road or rail, Allied supply vehicles moving up behind the swiftly advancing armor are able to travel bumper-to-bumper at many places, with the Germans making no attempt to disperse them.

Photographs taken during yesterday's raid on a suspected German headquarters near Metz by Mosquitoes of the 2nd TAF show considerable damage to buildings and personnel, it was announced this evening. Direct hits were seen on buildings believed to have housed 2,000 personnel, and casualties and fires were caused.

No flying bombs were over southern England last night, but a few were sent over early this morning, causing damage and a small number of casualties.

The 9th USAAF Bomber Command dropped over 10,000 tons of bombs in more than 8,500 sorties during the month of August. Their aim was to impede, immobilize, or destroy German armies fleeing through northern France, said a report from 9th USAAF headquarters yesterday, surveying August activities.

Their missions included 48 attacks on railway bridges, 22 on highway bridges, 28 on supply dumps, 16 on coastal batteries and strongpoints, three on troop concentrations, and two on railway installations.

The fourth anniversary of the victory of the Battle of Britain will be celebrated at all RAF stations on September 15. A public commemoration will take place on September 17, with thanksgiving services in churches through-

The Germans began their assault on France at Verdun in February, 1916. Had Verdun fallen at that time, the entire French line would have been broken. The attack lasted until 11 July 1916, and although the key fort of Douaumont was captured by the enemy on February 25, it was later reoccupied by the French, and all attempts to break through failed.

The siege of Verdun lasted almost to the end of the war, and approximately 1,000,000 men were killed in the fighting. The French there lived up to their proud motto: «Ils ne passeront pas.» (OWI)

SMUTS CONGRATULATES MONTGOMERY

SHAEF, September 1 — «The Allied victory in the Battle of France will be long remembered as one of the greatest feats of arms of this war and all wars,» Field Marshal Jan Smuts said today in a message of congratulation to Field Marshal Montgomery. The message said: «The Allied victory under your immediate command in the battle of Normandy, now merging into the decisive Battle of France, will remain, in its conception and execution, as much as in its far-reaching results, one of the greatest feats of arms of this and all wars.»

Adding that this victory, with that in the Mediterranean, gives Montgomery a foremost place among holders of the field marshal's baton, Smuts concluded: «And so, on to final victory under the wise organizer of our grand comradeship of arms in the west, General Eisenhower.» (BBC)

GERMAN CHANNEL GUNS IN ACTION

LONDON, September 1 — German long-range guns fired about 100 shells at the British southeast coast for nearly four hours this morning. Several towns received hits.

The shells came over in short intervals to explode in the vicinity of Dover. The bombardment began a little before 0200 hours, when the Germans opened fire with long-range guns at Calais and Cap Gris Nez. Later, guns at Wimereux joined in the bombardment, which ended before first light. (Reuter)

F.F.I. CLEAR LOIRE DEPARTMENT

LONDON, September 1 — French Forces of the Interior have reached Montvilliers, Radio Paris announced today. Montvilliers is the town where Marshal Petain and Pierre Laval, heads of the Vichy Government, were reported to be under guard by German troops. It is threatened with encirclement, said the broadcast.

Southwest of Lyon, the town of Montbrison has been taken by the FFI, said tonight's communique from General Koenig's headquarters. With the liberation of this town, the whole Loire Department is entirely free of the enemy.

South of Lyon, French Resistance forces engaged a German column, coming from Valence and killed 500 Germans, including a general and a colonel. In the Rhone Valley

DIEPPE — SCENE OF COMMANDO RAID IN 1942

LONDON, September 1 — Dieppe was the scene of a nine-hour daylight raid by British, Canadian, American, and Belgian troops on 19 August 1942.

An estimated 6,000 Allied troops, mostly Canadians, went ashore in landing barges under cover of warships and Allied planes. They destroyed a six-gun battery, an ammunition dump, a radio location station, and an anti-aircraft battery, then « withdrew as planned. »

Strong German resistance was met, and heavy Allied casualties resulted. Most of the armor put ashore was lost.

The Germans claimed to have taken 2,185 prisoners, including 617 wounded. (OWI)

It is threatened with encirclement, said the broadcast.

Southwest of Lyon, the town of Montbrison has been taken by the FFI, said tonight's communique from General Koenig's headquarters. With the liberation of this town, the whole Loire Department is entirely free of the enemy.

South of Lyon, French Resistance forces engaged a German column coming from Valence and killed 500 Germans, including a general and a colonel. In the Rhone Valley retreating German columns fleeing from the Allied 7th Army are running the gauntlet of the FFI, and are being harried on both flanks.

General Koenig's special communique issued last night to announce the capture of Bordeaux revealed also the capture by the FFI of two other important towns in northern and Eastern France, Tonnerre, southwest of Troyes, and Chambery, east of Lyon on the main rail line to Turin. FFI assaults on German convoys and the German rail system have been stepped up in the last few days, particularly in the north and east, the communique added.

The situation in southeastern France was outlined in an announcement yesterday from the Algiers headquarters of General Cochet, military delegate for the southern zone. He reported that in the Savoy region, the FFI are being supported by American troops and bitter battles are being fought against German units seeking to retain the mastery of the Alpine heights.

On the Franco-Swiss frontier, the famous French Chasseurs Alpins, the « Blue Devils, » have taken over the frontier posts from the FFI and are keeping a rigorous watch to prevent the escape of French collaborationists. A Reuter dispatch from Zurich, reporting this, added that the FFI are treating captured collaborationists humanely. Notorious Fascists are being imprisoned pending trial. The property of lesser collaborationists is being confiscated and given to families who lost their belongings in German reprisals or in the fighting against German troops.

German troops retreating in the south, desperate and hopeless, are resorting to new atrocities against the civilian population, as well as against members of the FFI. General Cochet issued a solemn warning to German troops in the southern zone, saying: «Those responsible for such crimes against the laws of war and the principles of humanity are hereby warned that they will be called to account and punished for their crimes. Their names are known by the French Resistance fighters.» (OWI-Reuter)

AMERICANS OF 7TH ARMY 42 MILES FROM LYON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 1 — American forces of the 7th Army, advancing northward up the Rhône Valley in pursuit of the smashed German 19th Army, and moving northward in the area of the Drac River valley to the east, were within less than 42 miles of Lyon, France's second largest city, it was announced here late tonight.

One American force was reported in contact with remnants of the decimated German Army somewhere between Tournon, 10 miles north of Valence, and Bourg de Péage, 11 miles to the northeast. The second force, actually closer to Lyon, was located only in «a north of Voiron,» an important road and rail junction point 42 miles southeast of the great French industrial center. No details were given of the direction being taken by this force, or its exact location.

Heavy enemy movements were reported today on roads leading north and northeast of Lyon, where roads lead around the Swiss frontier to the Vosges and the German frontier.

French forces following American columns up the Rhône Valley today occupied the town of St. Agreve, 25 miles west of Valence, and cleared the west bank of the Rhône River up to a point opposite this river town.

Along the Italian frontier, American troops yesterday entered the village of Condamine-Chatelard, and advanced eastward to clash with German forces pouring from the Larche Pass at the frontier itself, in the road leading southward to Cuneo and to the Italian Ligurian coast of Savona.

The village of Condamine-Chatelard, a village of about 1200 souls, perched along the loftiest mountain road in all France, had been burned by the German troops, in reprisal for French Patriot activity, before the American entry.

French forces, fanning westward from the Rhône Valley north of Avignon, yesterday occupied the town of Arles 37 miles northwest of the river town. Mopping up of small pockets of enemy resistance continued at Pont St. Esprit and Roure St. Andeol, 22 and 30 miles north of Avignon on the Rhône, and at Barjac and Vallon, roughly 15 miles to the west of the river in the same sector.

On the Riviera, where American troops were yesterday reported to have passed through Nice to approach to within 13 miles of the Italian frontier, the situation remained unchanged, it was said. (PRO)

RED ARMY MASSES FOR SWEEP THROUGH BALKANS

MOSCOW, September 1 — Red Army troops today captured Giurgiu, the Rumanian city on the north bank of the Danube River, on the Bulgarian frontier.

This advance of 40 miles below the Rumanian capital put Russian troops at a point 210 miles upstream from the Danube Delta, and left them in position for a wide invasion of Bulgaria or a sweep through the Balkans to join Marshal Tito's battling Yugoslavs.

Bucharest said that Russian troops had begun to pull back to their own people to fight against the Germans.

Russian war machines continued to roll through the city. The Rumanians were puzzled, said a Russian commentator, because the tanks and trucks were not heaped with stolen geese and pigs.

GERMANS ATTACKING IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

LONDON, September 1 — German troops in Slovakia are increasing their pressure against Czechoslovak forces in an attempt to regain the vital road and railway link in the Vah River Valley, in order to protect Germany's rear communications for their forces threatened in Rumania and Hungary, it was reported in the communique issued today by the headquarters of the Czechoslovak armed forces.

The heaviest fighting is in the Zilina-Trencin sector, where the Germans have thrown in large forces to defend a railway link between Germany and Bohemia on one side, and Bratislava, Hungary and Rumania on the other. Zilina is a very important railway hub where lines from Breslau and Warsaw join. There are two big armament works in this sector; one in Belsa, the other in Povazska Bystrica.

In eastern Slovakia, Kezmarok was evacuated after heavy fighting, and Levoca was recaptured, the communique said.

The call-up of reserve troops is going on and the concentration of Czechoslovak units is progressing. There has been strong enemy air activity over Slovakia.

Patriot forces are in control of the Banska Bystrica radio station. Broadcasts in the Slovak and Czech languages called on officers, non-commissioned officers, and enlisted men of the army and all Slovak Patriots to join the fight.

The station also announced the formation of a national council to direct the fight against the Germans and the puppet Slovak régime. Germans living in Czechoslovakia were urged to join the Patriots in the liberation of the country from the Nazis.

The German Underground station Volkssender also called on the Germans to take up arms, sabotage trains, and blow up factories. (OWI-Reuter)

HULL SAYS HUNGARY MADE NO PEACE BID

WASHINGTON, September 1 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull said late today that Hungary thus far has put out nothing substantial in the way of peace feelers.

Asked if any German surrender proposals had been received by the Allies, the Secretary said that he knew only of peace hints expressed by Nazi propagandists.

Of the remainder of the Balkans area, Hull declared that the situation involved so many rumors that it would be dangerous to comment at the moment. (OWI)

BULGARIAN PEACE TALKS SUSPENDED

CAIRO, September 1 — The Bulgarian peace talks were temporarily suspended today as a result of the reported resignation of Premier Ivan Bagrianov's cabinet in Sofia, it was officially announced.

The resignation of Bagrianov's cabinet was broadcast over Radio Sofia, which stated that the government will remain in charge of the administration until the formation of a new cabinet.

The German news agency, DNB, quoted Bagrianov as saying:

«The Government is anxious to avoid war with the Soviet Union. To achieve this, the disarming of non-Bulgarian troops entering Bulgaria or stationed on Bulgarian territory was decreed. The Bulgarian Government has also ordered the withdrawal of her occupation troops.»

of the direction being taken by this force, or its exact location.

Heavy enemy movements were reported today on roads leading north and northeast of Lyon, where roads lead around the Swiss frontier to the Vosges and the German frontier.

French forces following American columns up the Rhone Valley today occupied the town of St. Agrève, 25 miles west of Valence, and cleared the west bank of the Rhone River up to a point opposite this river town.

Along the Italian frontier, American troops yesterday entered the village of Condamine-Chatelard, and advanced eastward to clash with German forces pouring from the Larche Pass at the frontier itself, in the road leading southward to Cuneo and to the Italian Ligurian coast of Savona.

The village of Condamine-Chatelard, a village of about 1200 souls, perched along the loftiest mountain road in all France, had been burned by the German troops, in reprisal for French Patriot activity, before the American entry.

French forces, fanning westward from the Rhone Valley north of Avignon, yesterday occupied the town of Arles 37 miles northwest of the river town. Mopping up of small pockets of enemy resistance continued at Pont St. Esprit and Roure St. Andeol, 22 and 30 miles north of Avignon on the Rhone, and at Barjac and Vallon, roughly 15 miles to the west of the river in the same sector.

On the Riviera, where American troops were yesterday reported to have passed through Nice to approach to within 13 miles of the Italian frontier, the situation remained unchanged, it was said. (PRO)

RED ARMY MASSES FOR SWEEP THROUGH BALKANS

This advance of 40 miles below the Rumanian capital put Russian troops at a point 210 miles upstream from the Danube Delta, and left them in position for a wide invasion of Bulgaria or a sweep through the Balkans to join Marshal Tito's battling Yugoslavs.

Reuter said tonight that fresh forces of Russian tanks and motorized infantry were rolling into Rumania from areas far to the Russian rear, that the 4th Ukrainian Army is poised for an assault on Hungary through the Carpathians, and that General Malinovsky's 3rd Ukrainian Front was expected to reach the borders of Yugoslavia within the next few days.

Radio Berlin admitted tonight that strong Russian pressure was being applied against German defenses in the lower Carpathians, and said that fast Russian motorized divisions are massed for a drive through the Iron Gate in western Rumania.

The Soviet communique reported nothing but patrol activity elsewhere along the Russo-German front.

From Warsaw, Polish General Bor reported further Partisan losses to German units within the city. Reuter said, however, that Nazi troops in and around the Polish capital were showing marked signs of being winded, and that equally strong indications of German exhaustion were showing up on the Baltic front.

Back in Bucharest, the townspeople held a big demonstration as Rumanian soldiers who had been taken prisoner at Stalingrad paraded through the streets. They were carried back home by the advancing Russian armies, and were

The call-up of reserve troops is going on and the concentration of Czechoslovak units is progressing. There has been strong enemy air activity over Slovakia.

Patriot forces are in control of the Banska Bystrica radio station. Broadcasts in the Slovak and Czech languages called on officers, non-commissioned officers, and enlisted men of the army and all Slovak Patriots to join the fight.

The station also announced the formation of a national council to direct the fight against the Germans and the puppet Slovak regime. Germans living in Czechoslovakia were urged to join the Patriots in the liberation of the country from the Nazis.

The German Underground station Volkssender also called on the Germans to take up arms, sabotage trains, and blow up factories. (OWI-Reuter)

HULL SAYS HUNGARY MADE NO PEACE BID

WASHINGTON, September 1 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull said late today that Hungary thus far has put out nothing substantial in the way of peace feelers.

Asked if any German surrender proposals had been received by the Allies, the Secretary said that he knew only of peace hints expressed by Nazi propagandists.

Of the remainder of the Balkans area, Hull declared that the situation involved so many rumors that it would be dangerous to comment at the moment. (OWI)

BULGARIAN PEACE TALKS SUSPENDED

CAIRO, September 1 — The Bulgarian peace talks were temporarily suspended today as a result of the reported resignation of Premier Ivan Bagrianov's cabinet in Sofia, it was officially announced.

The resignation of Bagrianov's cabinet was broadcast over Radio Sofia, which stated that the government will remain in charge of the administration until the formation of a new cabinet.

The German news agency, DNB, quoted Bagrianov as saying:

"The Government is anxious to avoid war with the Soviet Union. To achieve this, the disarming of non-Bulgarian troops entering Bulgaria or stationed on Bulgarian territory was decreed. The Bulgarian Government has also ordered the withdrawal of her occupation troops."

There has been no official Allied confirmation of Bagrianov's assertions about the disarming of non-Bulgarian troops, or of the withdrawal of Bulgarian troops from Yugoslavia or Greece.

Meanwhile, in Moscow, the Soviet-Rumania armistice conferences were under way today after arrival last night of the chairman of the Rumanian delegation, M. I. Patrascanu, and two other members.

The first interview between Foreign Affairs Commissar Molotov and the Rumanians began last night at 2200 hours, Moscow time, just as the guns of the capital roared out their thunderous salute for the Red Army's entry into Bucharest.

In Hungary, the new government headed by Lakatos is not expected to last long, according to Hungarian circles in Ankara. It is described as intensely unpopular. All strategic points in Budapest have been occupied by the Germans, and Radio Moscow reported that railway strikes have broken out in Hungary.

German diplomats, unable to return from Turkey to the Reich because of the recent developments in the Balkans, will be interned in the German Embassy in Ankara or at the Consulate General in Istanbul, it was announced in An-

GERMAN FRONTIER GUARDS CROSS TO TURKEY

CAIRO, September 1 — According to reliable reports, Reuter said here today, a party of 194 German soldiers, who had been guarding lines of communication on the Greek-Turkish border, crossed the frontier and surrendered to Turkish authorities.

Turkish officials told the major heading the group that they had no transport available, but were willing to accept the surrender. (Reuter)

HALF-MILE WEDGE DRIVEN INTO GOTH LINE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 1 — Eighth Army infantry and tank forces, supported by British destroyers offshore and by fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, yesterday battered a half-mile-deep wedge into the Adriatic coastal defenses of the enemy's Goth Line guarding the Valley of the Po.

In fierce fighting, during which enemy forces counter-attacked repeatedly, the strongpoint of Montecchio, center defense position of the network of concrete and earthwork fortifications across the Adriatic coastal corridor, has been captured. The lateral road, running along a slight ridge north of the Foglia River, which bound together the German coastal defenses, has also been overrun, at Montecchio, it was announced here today.

Enemy forces have already rushed forward reinforcements to hold their line, a formidable network of defensive positions constructed along the natural barrier of the Apennines ridges across nearly the whole width of Italy, except at the Adriatic end, where artificial defenses, based on the Foglia River, have been erected across a 10-mile-wide coastal plain.

Some of the bitterest fighting of the entire Allied attack, which now covers a 16-mile wide front, is centered in Pesaro, where veteran troops of the 1st German Parachute Division are battling Polish and British forces pushing into the city from the south. Polish troops entered the port town near the mouth of the Foglia River Wednesday, only to be counter-attacked the same morning, and again yesterday morning, by the grim, blue-garbed troops who clung so fanatically to the center bastion of the Germans' last great defensive line in Italy, at Cassino. Both attacks were beaten off, and British and Polish forces were reported today to have established their position along the railway tracks which skirt around the southern edge of town to follow the coast.

The village of Montecchio, 7½ miles southwest of Pesaro along the road across the coastal plain, and the center defensive position in the enemy's fortifications in this sector, was captured when 8th Army troops, closely supported by tanks, followed patrol forces which had probed enemy positions on the north bank of the Foglia River.

Enemy Rushing Reinforcements

Battling their way through the outer defenses of the Goth Line, these forces have penetrated at one point to a depth of 1,000 yards into the heart of the enemy's main position. The latest official report described these armoured [illegible] established among enemy defenses. It is in this [illegible] however, patrols encountered enemy forces at Cousuma, reported captured by British troops yesterday. In the upper Tiber Valley, the communique reported a four-mile advance, but no details were given of this gain in a sector where one of the most important defenses of the Goth Line, at Bagno di Romagna, is located.

In the Florence area, the village of Vinciglato, three miles north of the Arno and northeast of Florence, was occupied. Northwest of Florence, no contact was made with enemy forces.

Enemy patrols continued to cross the Arno River west of Florence, and two strong enemy scouting forces were engaged in the vicinity of Lastra, six miles west of Florence, and forced to retire. German artillery laid down fire on Allied patrols attempting penetration in this area.

On the 5th Army front, aside from a three-hour artillery barrage in one sector, and reports of demolitions in the Monte Pisano district east of Pisa, there was little offensive action.

According to a prisoner of war, whose story was revealed in official reports today, the Goth Line has been renamed the Geering Line, because, the German prisoner said, it was considered adapted for "all round" defense. Whether the new designation was official, or merely the quip of troops, the prisoner apparently did not say. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. DESTROYS 157 PLANES ON GROUND

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 1 — Mustangs of the 15th AAF destroyed 157 enemy planes of all types on the ground in strafing operations on three airdromes in central Europe during Wednesday and Thursday, it was stated today.

On Wednesday, the Mustangs attacked the Groszwardein aerodrome in Rumania and the Kecskemet aerodrome in Hungary, destroying 97 enemy planes and damaging 43. On Thursday, the Reghin aerodrome in Rumania was strafed, resulting in the destruction of 60 enemy planes and an undetermined number damaged.

The report added that the German aircraft were jamming the aerodromes in vain attempts to retreat from the Red Army advances in the Balkans.

Enemy opposition was encountered over Reghin, and nine enemy planes were destroyed in the Air Intelligence officers pointed out that the failure of more planes taking to the air to avoid destruction could be traced to the fuel shortage caused by the 15th's successful campaign against enemy oil resources.

Other Allied air attacks in Italy included targets near Vicenza and Treviso, and the Mira rail bridge, five miles north of Venice. The Ercolo rail line, 90 miles northeast of Genoa, was also attacked, with both approaches probably cut. Rail lines north and east of Padua were hammered, as well as those in the Venice area, and at Ponte Bello, west of Lake Veneta.

In Coastal operations, the Allied air force attacked four E-boats, claimed hits and reportedly sunk an F-boat in the Gulf of Genoa. Shipping and other coastal targets were attacked at Porto Fino, in the Setri Levante harbor and at Savona.

Further sweeps over Hungary, Rumania, and Yugoslavia were made with good results reported. (PRO)

NORTHERN ITALY AND GOTH LINE POUNDED

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 1 — Supporting Allied ground troops, MAAF Thursday attacked enemy road and rail communications over a wide area in northern Italy, and the Desert Air Force assulted enemy strongpoints in the eastern sector of the Goth Line and blasted guns and fortified positions in the Pesaro sector on the Adriatic.

Full close support was also given on the 5th Army Front, it was stated today.

Battling their way through the outer defenses of the Goth Line, these forces have penetrated at one point to a depth of 1,000 yards into the heart of the enemy's main position. The latest official report described these armoured forces as established among enemy defenses. It is in this threatened sector that the Germans have brought up infantry and tank reinforcements to relieve the hard hit 71st German Infantry Division. Panzer forces are now engaging forward Allied tanks and infantry teams, in efforts to seal off the threatened breakthrough of the main defenses.

Southwest of Montecchio, and between this strongpoint and Monte Calvo, inland anchor of the enemy defenses, troops of the 8th Army have crossed the lateral road at a second point to penetrate the enemys' first line and approach to within 1,000 yards of Monte Gridolfo to the north. Heavy minefields were encountered in this sector, as well as machine-gun nests.

In the Monte Calvo area, 8th Army troops have begun to storm the southern slopes of this inland mountain bastion of the Goth Line, after capturing the nearby height of Monte della Croce.

Despite an enemy counter-attack on Wednesday afternoon, Allied forces continued to push forward, and at latest reports this morning were engaged in hand-to-hand fighting with the German defenders of this key point in the Goth Line.

In the Apennines sectors, Allied forces, although in close contact with the enemy, have not yet reached the main defensive positions of the Goth Line.

In the upper Arno Valley, north of Arezzo, an 8th Army patrol reached Partina, four miles northeast of Bibbiena.

Full, close support was also given on the 5th Army Front, it was stated today.

The Ferrara railway yards, in northeast Italy, vital junction for enemy supplies and comunications to the Goth Line, were attacked late last night by RAF Wellingtons, Liberators, and Halifaxes. An excellent concentration of bombs resulted in a large explosion, and fires were started.

Numerous hits on bridges and roads leading north from Padua, Venice, and the Po Valley were scored. (PRO)

ATTACKS ON BALKAN COMMUNICATIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 1 — Strong forces of escorted 15th USAAF heavy bombers today resumed their attacks on Balkan communications along rail lines of strategic importance to the retreating German forces in the Balkans, it was announced here this evening.

Up to 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators struck at rail bridges and rail yards in Hungary and Yugoslavia. An air field at Nish, in Yugoslavia, was bombed by Flying Fortresses after Lightning fighters had carried out offensive sweeps over the area. A rail bridge at Ferrara, across the Po in northeastern Italy, was also bombed.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, in flights farther north in Italy than at any previous time in the Mediterranean campaign, struck at two road and rail bridges north and northwest of Venice today. The Mitchells covered the northernmost bridge, a rail structure near Feltre, 40 miles northwest of Venice, with a heavy concentration of bombs. Many direct hits were observed.

P-47 Thunderbolt fighter-bombers strafed enemy road patrols in northern Italy in missions carried out from Corsican bases.

Yesterday, Baltimores, Beaufighters, Spitfires, and Mustangs of the Balkan Air Force attacked enemy concentrations in the Balkans and broke up communication lines with bombs, rockets, cannon, and machine-gun fire.

The German strongpoint at Birac, in western Bosnia, was subjected to a particularly heavy attack, while Beaufighters scored 18 direct hits with heavy rockets on a German ammunition store at Maribor. (PRO)

LIBERATED U.S.A.A.F. AIRMEN RETURN TO ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 1 — More than 1,100 USAAF combat crewmen, many of them prisoners of the enemy for more than a year, have been evacuated from Rumania and landed on Italian airfields by Flying Fortresses, it was announced here late this evening.

The crewmen, most of whom had been shot down in the course of almost a year's air attacks against the Ploesti oilfields, were all in apparently good health, it was stated.

To make the preliminary arrangements for the mass evacuation, two 15th AAF Flying Fortresses made the first scheduled landing of USAAF bombers on Rumanian territory on Tuesday, it was stated. At that time, the capital was held only by Rumanian Government forces. The planes brought signal equipment and medical supplies, and set up a detail to handle the transport of the American crewmen to the Italian airfields.

Russian troops entering the Rumanian capital of Bucharest discovered the airmen, who had been freed the day King Michael proclaimed an armistice.

An Associated Press correspondent wrote:

I stood with a group of these American flyers and watched a Soviet motorized column move through the streets.

Among the liberated Allied airmen in the city, I was told, are about 29 Britons.

The Americans had been confined in two camps — those who went down during the low-level bombardment of Ploesti 13 months ago being confined in a stockade near Brasov, and the remainder in a camp at Bucharest.

Their treatment has been far from severe, the airmen themselves told me, and the gates of both prisons were thrown open within a matter of minutes after Michael issued his armistice proclamation.

The U. S. fliers were particularly elated over the German bombardment of the prison wing of the hospital where a number of Americans had been kept prior to August 23.

On that day they moved out, and the German prisoners moved in. Only a few hours later, Nazi dive-bombers came over, apparently singled out the building, and plastered it with bombs. (PRO - AP)

YUGOSLAVS PUSHING ENEMY TOWARD MORAVIA

LONDON, September 1 — Yugoslav Partisan troops were pushing the defeated enemy toward Moravia after their units captured Kursumlija Blao and Laeksandrovac, last night's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters stated.

The communique added that in Metchija, the chrome mine was destroyed south of Djakovica, the German sentries killed, and the mine workers freed.

In Montenegro, Tito's units were continuing their offensive. They captured Mojkkaoc in the drive, and the enemy retreated with huge losses to Jlevlas.

The communique added that the Albanian National Army of Liberation was developing a successful offensive in all sectors. Albanian units which entered Berat battled for several hours and inflicted losses on the enemy.

BULGARIAN TROOPS JOINING TITO

LONDON, September 1 — Bulgarian troops garrisoned in Yugoslavia were said tonight to have clashed with Yugoslav quisling forces, and to have begun a retreat to join Marshal Tito's Partisan Army.

The clash is said to have occurred at Nish, on the main line from Belgrade to Greece, when Fascist forces attempted to disarm the Bulgarians.

Tito's communique said tonight that all enemy communications between Serbia and Bosnia have been cut by Yugoslav units, and that a large sector of western Serbia is now in Partisan control.

The Marshal said that the Macedonian town of Borovo has been taken by his troops, and that the enemy has been cleared from the upper reaches of the Bregalnica River. (OWI)

AMERICAN BOMBERS HIT FORMOSA, SAY JAPS

CHUNGKING, September 1 — The Japanese news agency, Domei, said today that 10 American bombers carried out a swift raid on the Japanese island of Formosa last night.

At the same time, reports reached here saying that Japanese authorities in the Chinese coastal cities of Shanghai and Amoy, both of which have been frequent targets for American bomers, have ordered the evacuation of all Japnationals from a wide area.

The Shanghai-Amoy coastal region, along with the highly developed island of Formosa (Taiwan) is the right flank of Japanese naval control of the East China Sea. The area also protects, by air and sea bases, the approaches to the Philippines from the south.

Formosa lies about 600 miles southwest of the Japanese mainland island of Kyusho.

NAZIS RAZE TWO ITALIAN VILLAGES

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 1 — Hardly a house wall is standing today in either Borgo Lucrezia or Ponte Murello, two little villages standing side-by-side on the Route 3 road to Fano.

Borgo Lucrezia and Ponte Murello have not been battlefields. But today, street after street is ruin upon ruin. There is nothing left but devastation — the work of German spite.

An Allied correspondent had difficulty finding anyone who had lived there. He finally found a postman, who said:

"We knew the Allies were coming, toward the end of last week. Were we to be blamed if we were jubilant? But the Germans hated us for our joy. They said they would turn our villages into 'other Cassinos' — and they went about their work thoroughly.

"Throughout last Friday, explosion followed explosion. It was too fearful for words. Not a single person was allowed to save personal belongings before their houses were crumbled to dust and broken masonry by high explosives. Our little village was reduced to rubble."

Most of the people of these villages were driven north. Two days ago one woman set out to look for her son. She found him — dead — in a hole in a field beside the road. He had been buried up to his chin, and there was a bullet hole in the back of his head. Two older men lay on the ground near him. (UNN)

Offensive Dangerously Close

That the Allied offensive is dangerously close, the Japs freely admit. Tokyo-controlled Radio Manila said yesterday that the Japanese nation is confronted with an emergency, and appealed for unity in the face of the "common danger."

Again today, Radio Tokyo, speaking on the fifth anniversary of the German invasion of Poland, said that Germany's situation "is considerably bad," and warned that Allied nations were sending great numbers of men and vast quantities of materiel to all fronts "to continue their fierce attacks."

The new commander of the USAAF in the Pacific confirmed this prediction today. Lieut. Gen. Millard Harmon said the Allies can hope before long to settle down to the same unremitting bombing attacks against Japan and Jap-held territory as have helped to break the back of German military power.

The general said that the day of 1,000-aircraft attacks against Jap industrial centers was not far off. He added that the job would be an easier one in the east than it has been in the west, since Japan's areas of industry are concentrated in a few sections of the islands — with practically no dispersion.

The aerial offensive against outlying bases continued yesterday with another attack on Davao in the Philippines — the 11th assault in three weeks. Palau Island to the east was also hit, while General Douglas MacArthur's planes patrolling the central waters of the Indies sunk or seriously damaged a Jap destroyer and four merchant ships off the coast of Celebes. Other strafing and bombing missions were carried out over widespread areas of the Southwest Pacific.

In support of ground forces in China, the 14th USAAF shot up a Jap convoy of 90 trucks just north of Changsha.

and General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American wing of fighters and bombers mauled river shipping and Jap airstrips along the Yangtze Kiang, and at Hengyang, Hankow, and Yochow. They bombed and strafed bridges, highways, and Jap installations over the face of China yesterday — without loss of a single plane.

The Chinese High Command tonight said that Japanese troops yesterday retook several strong points from Chinese forces in the area southwest of Lungling, in western China's Salween River sector of Yunnan Province.

A Chinese Army spokesman tonight said that Jap forces have almost succeeded in trapping Chinese elements which launched a counter-offensive against the city of Hengyang, taken by the Japanese last month. He said the Japs have taken Lishiu, in Chekiang.

Other Chinese forces have made gains in a local area around Tengchung, main Jap base along the Salween in China, and are said to have broken through Jap positions around Ichang, important river port on the Yangtze, above Hankow.

From the Burma front, Radio Tokyo reported the death of another Jap general. He was identified as Lieut. General Masanori Yamanouchi, and he was said to have died « of illness » on the battlefield.

In Burma, the Allied communique from Ceylon said tonight, all Japs have been cleared from the western bank of the upper Chindwin River. Allied tanks and infantry have reached a point along the Tiddim road less than 30 miles from Tiddim itself. Lower down, in the Kabaw Valley, Jap resistance to Allied jungle fighter battling far behind the lines was said to have ceased.

CHURCHILL-ROOSEVELT MEETING RUMORED

WASHINGTON, September 1 — Belief is growing in unofficial quarters here that another Churchill-Roosevelt meeting is now imminent and will be held on Canadian soil, said a dispatch to Reuter today.

It is generally assumed that the main topic of discussion will be the war against Japan, but the Germans' desire for peace, to which Mr. Hull referred yesterday, may also enter into the discussions. (Reuter)

POPE CALLS FOR JUSTICE AND CHARITY IN POST-WAR RESTORATION

ROME, September 1 — Pleas for fidelity to Christian principles and social ethics in the economic and social order with the return of peace; for the spirit of charity in coping with the evils with famine and unrest caused by the war; and for solidarity between nations, together with capable international organizations to make the restoration of the world speedy, just, and lasting, formed the theme of the Pope's radio address to the world tonight over Radio Vatican on the fifth anniversary of the start of the war.

« After five years of war, » said the Pope, « mankind paused in horror at the misery into which the spirit of violence and the domination of force had plunged it. It was resolved to take every precaution against repetition of the tragedy, and with the old world lying in fragments, to see arise a new world, healthier, better organised, more in harmony with the exigencies of human nature. The future of Christian civilization in Europe and in the world depends on whether the work of supe rulers can achieve directives and solutions which do not go counter to God's law, and do not offend the human and Christian conscience.

« In one of those evolutions full of contradictions with which history is dotted, the last centuries have seen on the one side Christian civilization being systematically menaced [illegible] and, on the other, the heritage of impatience which looks for nothing from organic reforms, and puts all its hopes in upheavals and violence.

He restated the Church's teaching, laid down in Leo XIII's Encyclical Rerum Novarum, with its principle that for every legitimate and economic social order « there must be laid down as the basic foundation the right of private property. » But, while the Christian conscience could not accept as just a social order denying this right, neither could it accept those systems which recognise the right to private property according to a completely false concept of it, and which therefore are opposed to a true and healthy social order.

« Accordingly, » he said, « where, for instance, capitalism is based on such false concepts and arrogates to itself an unlimited right over property without any subordination to the common good, the Church has condemned it as contrary to the natural law. »

Experience showed, he said, what tyranny human nature was capable of even in our own time, where those deprived of security of livelihood took no further interest in the true and higher values of the spirit, abandoned their aspirations to genuine freedom, and threw themselves at the feet of any political party, slaves to whatever promised them in some way bread and security.

When the distribution of property was an obstacle to the genuine productivity of social life, the State might in the public interest intervene by regulating its use or even decreeing the expropriation of property, giving a suitable indemnity.

He advocated the guaranteeing and promotion of small and medium holdings, with cooperative unions ensuring them the advantages of big business, and where big business, even today, showed itself more productive, the tempering of the labor contract with a contract of co-ownership.

Italy and Rome

Speaking of the « immense duties of a future which seems already near, » and « the acute distress of the moment, » he said that no one would be surprised if, while embracing with equal love all the peoples of the world, his anxiety in this regard was at the present moment focused especially on Italy and Rome. In view of the approaching winter, the fight against misery, famine, unemployment, and economic unrest called for prompt and effective remedies.

He reminded those in Italy who possessed supplies and reserves of food, of their obligation not to withdraw them « through greed of greater profit » from those who « are languishing for hunger, » and he appealed to peoples whose resources had not been substantially affected by the war to give to the population of Italy within their capacity, and without prejudice to what is due to other nations in equal want.

« We readily acknowledge what has been done in this direction by the Allied powers, » he declared, « and we know that it is intended to do still more. We likewise willingly appreciate the efforts made by the Italian authorities. »

Speaking of the transition to peace, he said that many noted that the stages on the journey from the cessation of hostilities to normal conditions of life may reveal graver difficulties than people think. It was accordingly more essential that a strong spirit of solidarity arise between the nations to make the world's restoration more speedy and lasting. He echoed his 1939 Christmas message, expressing the desire for international organizations which, « while awaiting the defects of the past, should be really capable of preserving peace according to the principles of justice and equity, against all possible threat in the future. »

Noting that the desire for a world-wide peace institution was occupying the attention of statesmen and peoples, he said, « We gladly express our pleasure and form the hope that its actual achievement may really correspond in the largest possible measure to the nobility of its end, which is the maintainance of tranquility and security in the world for the benefit of all. »

The future of Christian civilization in Europe and in the world depends on whether the work of sage rulers can achieve directives and solutions which do not go counter to God's law, and do not offend the human and Christian conscience.

«In one of those evolutions full of contradictions with which history is dotted, the last centuries have seen on the one side Christian civilization being systematically menaced to its very foundations; and on the other the heritage of that civilization being ever more diffused among peoples. Europe and other continents are still living, to a varying degree, by the vital forces and principles which the heritage of Christian thought has infused into them by a kind of spiritual blood transfusion.»

Fidelity to Christianity

He addressed an urgent appeal to weigh the gravity of the moment and to consider fidelity to the heritage of Christian civilization. This invitation looked chiefly to achieve loyal and effective collaboration in all those fields in which the very idea of Christianity demanded the creation of a more exact juridical order.

«This is especially true,» said the Pope, «of that group of formidable problems which refer to the setting up of an economic and social order more in keeping with the eternal law of God and the dignity of man. In it, Christian thought insists, as a substantial element, on the raising of the proletariat. The achievement of this in a resolute and generous manner appears to every true follower of Christ not only as a step forward on the path of earthly progress, but also as the fulfillment of a moral obligation.»

Of the economic and social questions that would have to be faced after the war, the Pope warned against the the genuine productivity of social life, the State might in the public interest intervene by regulating its use or even decreeing the expropriation of property, giving a suitable indemnity.

He advocated the guaranteeing and promotion of small and medium holdings, with cooperative unions ensuring them the advantages of big business, and where big business, even today, showed itself more productive, the tempering of the labor contract with a contract of co-ownership.

After urging that prisoners and «civilian internees compelled by the war to eat the hard bread of captivity and forced labor in a foreign land» might receive early liberation after peace, he said:

«The sword can, and sometimes, alas, must open the way for peace. The shadow of the sword may be cast over the transition from the cessation of hostilities to the formal conclusion of peace. The threat of the sword may appear inevitable, even after the conclusion of peace, in order to safeguard within legally necessary and morally justified limits the observance of just obligations and prevent attempts at new conflicts.»

POLISH-SOVIET AGREEMENT PROPOSALS

LONDON, September 1 — The Polish Premier said in London last night that proposals for new agreements for the Poles and the Soviet Government had been forwarded to Moscow. These proposals had been unanimously agreed to by the London Polish Government and by the Underground in Poland.

The principal aims of the proposals were: full independence and sovereignty for Poland; Soviet friendship and alliance for Poland with Britain, France, and Czechoslovakia, and intimate Polish relations with the United States.

The Premier revealed that the new constitutional declaration would create a Polish War Cabinet on the British pattern. The position of the commander-in-chief might be abolished.

When Poland is free, a reconstructed Polish Government will be formed based on the parties in the present London Government and on the Polish Workman's Party, which is the basis of the Polish Committee of Liberation. (BBC)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 1 — Today's communique: Allied Armies in Italy:

In the Adriatic sector, troops of the 8th Army are engaged in heavy fighting with strong enemy resistance from the high ground north of the River Foglia. In some places, penetrations have been made into the enemy positions, and fierce counter-attacks, supported by tanks, have been beaten off.

To the west of the Apennines, other troops of the 8th Army have continued their advance toward the Goth Line, and in the upper Tiber Valley, an advance of over four miles has been made.

Significant gains have also been made in the Florence area, where troops of the 8th Army have made appreciable advances on both sides of the city.

To the west of Florence, 5th Army patrols have been active.

Last night, our bombers attacked rail yards at Ferrara. In these operations, 12 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 11 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,400 sorties.

Navy:

On August 30, British destroyers supporting the Army on the east coast of Italy carried out a successful bombardment of enemy gun positions and transport north of Pesaro.

The naval commander off the south coast of France reports that mine clearance continues with success in the recently-occupied ports and approaches. It is learned that at 0800 hours on August 29, the unconditional surrender of the German garrison on the island of Ratoneau and Pomegues off Marseilles was accepted by the captain of a United States cruiser. Ninety U. S. Marines were landed in the small harbour which lies between the two islands.

Demolitions had been prepared, but the charges were successfully removed and land mines isolated. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

— SHAEF, September 1 — Today's communique:

— Driving on northward from the Poauvais area, Allied forces yesterday reached Amiens, and established a firm bridgehead over the River Somme. Corbie, Villers, Bretteneu, and Morcuil were among the towns taken by this advance. Further to the west, our troops reached Formerie, Buchy, and Forges Les Eaux. North of Rouen, we have captured Totes, halfway to Dieppe, while other forces which crossed the Seine near Caudebec have passed through Lillebonne and reached the area of Saint Romain de Colbos.

The commander of the German 7th Army was among prisoners taken yesterday.

In the Beauvais area, Allied armored units have pushed northeastward along the Brèche river, occupying Bresle and Fouquerolle. Allied troops advancing north of Paris have taken the towns of Senlis, Creil, and Crepy. Forces that took Crepy have advanced to Bethancourt and Haramont. East of Crepy, our troops have reached Vaumouse. Reconnaissance elements are within 2,000 yards of Compiegne.

Gains of about 10 miles have been made by Allied troops moving north and east of Reims. Other troops have entered Laon, where a stiff fight occurred when our forces accounted for three trainloads of German troops who were attempting to withdraw from the town.

Allied troops advancing beyond Saint Dizier have crossed the upper Aisne River several miles north of Saint Menehould. Other troops moving east and southeast of Troyes have made gains to points over 20 miles from the town, reaching the area just east of Bar-Sur-Seine.

In Brittany, Allied troops closing in on Brest have advanced almost to the coast west of the port, in the area south of Saint Renman. The enemy has been cleared from Daoulas Peninsula, south of Brest.

Clouds over France hindered Allied air activity early yesterday, but, operating under improved conditions later in the day, fighters and fighter-bombers attacked enemy road and rail movements in northern France and Belgium.

Motor transports numbering hundreds were destroyed, and locomotives and trucks were hit. Coastal guns on the island of Cezembre were attacked by medium and heavy bombers.

Fuel dumps in the Foret D'Arques and at Nonnay were hit by light bombers, which also attacked military buildings at Vimoy.

During the night of August 30/31, enemy shipping in Channel waters stretching from Dieppe to Dunkirk was attacked by coastal aircraft. One large merchant vessel and a small ship were hit. (Reuter)

Seventh Army:

American troops have advanced to some 50 miles south of Lyon, with the occupation of Valence and Bourg de Peage, in the Rhône Valley. Strong pressure is being maintained against the retreating enemy.

French forces moving southwest toward the Spanish border, while also advancing up the west bank of the Rhône, have entered Montpellier, Beziers, and Narbonne. Forward elements are beyond Arles.

West of the Rhône, mopping up continues in Pont St. Esprit, Bourg St. Andeol, Vallon, and Barjac.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Fighter aircraft of the Strategic Air Force yesterday attacked an airfield at Reghin, in Rumania, destroying 60 aircraft on the ground. It is now known that 97 enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground in operations on 30 August. During night operations on 30/31 August, tactical aircraft attacked enemy transport in northern Italy.

Yesterday, our aircraft continued their attacks on bridges and road and rail transport in northern Italy and on gun positions, supply dumps and transport in the Italian battle area. Other aircraft attacked enemy targets in the Rhône Valley area, transport and bridges in Yugoslavia, and coastal shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and the Adriatic.

Driving on northward from the Beauvais area, Allied forces yesterday reached Amiens and established a firm bridgehead over the River Somme. Corbie Villers, Bretoneu, and Moreuil were among the towns taken by this advance. Farther to the west, our troops reached Formerie, Buchy, and Forges Les Eaux. ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 1 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

A Garibaldi Brigade operating in the district of Genoa is at the moment engaged in a bitter fight against the Nazi-Fascists. The Germans have been forced to undertake large-scale operations against the Patriot forces, which harass the enemy with frequent attacks and carry out uninterrupted acts of sabotage. The Patriots have blown up some bridges and damaged long stretches of the railroads in the Aulla sector.

The Germans though superior in men and materiel are being held by daring strategy of the Patriots.

In the enemy's rear, and especially in the Province of Pistoia (on the Goth Line), groups of Patriots, with the support of Allied air forces, engaged the enemy in open battle, and inflicted considerable losses in men and materiel. The Patriots of this sector damaged all German communications and hindered the flow of supplies from the north to the front line.

In another encounter, south of Pavia, the Fascists lost 30 dead, the Patriots 15.

In Milan, an early curfew did not keep the Patriots from actions against the enemy. Two militiamen were killed by Patriot cyclists, who escaped. Other Fascists were wounded.

The Patriots destroyed a bridge in Capriola, forcing the Germans to ferry their motor trucks across the river.

During one of the recent Allied air raids over Brescia, a bomb fell on the local jail, causing great confusion among the wardens. Among the prisoners were 120 Patriots, who taking advantage of the confusion, escaped. Among them were two farmers from Goito, sentenced to death and awaiting execution. The Special Tribunal of Brescia decided that the director and the wardens were responsible for this escape, and sentenced them to various penalties. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 1 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In northern France, our troops withdrew farther northeastward toward the Somme with the enemy pressing hard in pursuit. The enemy captured Amiens in grim fighting, and proceeded farther in a northeasterly and northerly direction. Counter-attacks are in progress. In the Laon-Rethel sector, the strong enemy pressure in a northerly direction also continues. The enemy, pushing forward from the Chalons-sur-Marne area eastward, broke through the southern part of the Argonnes and advanced on a broad front toward the Meuse. Particularly grim was the fighting in the Verdun area, which was evacuated by our troops in the afternoon. The first major attack having been frustrated, the Brest sector is being kept under continual fierce enemy fire. Fresh attacks on the positions in front of our main lines were frustrated. Particularly grim was the fighting on the Armorique Peninsula. The crew of the naval battery Ceceniire, under the command of Lieutenant-Colonel of the Naval Artillery in Reserve, Seuss, fighting with exemplary courage, continues to lock the entry to the port of St. Malo, despite being shelled without interruption, a battleship joining in the fire.

In the Valence sector, in the Rhone Valley, the stubborn defensive fighting of our rearguards continues.

In Belgium and northern France, from August 10 to 20, 1850 terrorists were killed in action.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

On the Adriatic coast, our troops were engaged throughout the whole day in halting extremely strong enemy attacks, which gradually increased in fury. The enemy succeeded in punching minor gaps into our lines at some points, but did not succeed in achieving the breakthrough [illegible] were sealed off, and 51 attacks, which were partly supported by tanks. In the Vistula bridgehead, west of Baranov, our troops penetrated deeply into the enemy positions in offensive fighting. West of Annapol, a Soviet bridgehead on the western banks of the Vistula was smashed. The 106th Soviet Rifle Division, which fought in this sector, was completely wiped out. Northwest of Warsaw, as well as between the Bug and Narew, new Bolshevist attacks, supported by tanks and bombers, broke down in fierce fighting.

In Estonia, northwest of Dorpat, our grenadiers repelled enemy formations over the River Embach southward in fierce fighting in the forest area.

On the eastern front, yesterday, the Soviets lost 56 planes in dogfights and by the anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force. Yesterday, Lieutenant Schall, pilot in a fighter squadron, brought down 13 Soviet planes, and thus scored his 106th success. In the course of August, the Navy and the Air Force, fighting against the Anglo-American supply fleet, sank 45 freighters and transport vessels totalling 226,500 tons; 28 other ships, totalling 262,000 tons, were partly seriously damaged by torpedo and bomb hits. The loss of a big part of these ships must be reckoned with. The following warships were sunk: an auxiliary plane carrier, two cruisers, 23 destroyers, two corvettes, two submarines, 13 motor assault boats, one motor gunboat, and 11 security vessels. Two battleships, five heavy and light cruisers, 14 destroyers, one corvette, three torpedo boats, and six motor assault boats were damaged.

Last night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on northwestern and western Germany. (Radio Berlin)

Internal French Politics: "The political chaos in the Allied-held parts of France is growing from day to day. The various so-called Underground formations are fighting each other, and are arresting and murdering each other's members."

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

France: The correspondent Max Krull reports upon the military situation in northeastern France. He notes an increase in Allied pressure northward and eastward. "Obviously, the enemy wants to bring about a decision between the Channel coast and the Argonne Mountains on the historical battlefield of the first world war. However, soon points will be reached where the German plans of more active defense will become evident. The long-range shelling of British Channel ports, in any case, is a warning to the enemy that Germany still has ways and means at her disposal to place serious obstacles in his way. Another one of these obstacles in the stubborn German defence of bases on the Atlantic and Mediterranean coast: Lorient, St. Nazaire, Brest, Toulon, and Marseilles are tying down a large number of Allied troops... The enemy captured Amiens and advanced farther north. This fact permits the conclusion the Somme Line will also not be held."

Eastern Front: "The Anapol bridgehead, established by the Bolsheviks several months ago north of the Baranov dent, was eliminated by German troops... In Rumania the Bolsheviks exercised strong pressure without results. The number of Rumanian troops continuing the fight against Bolshevism is constantly increasing."

He notes an increase in Allied pressure northward and eastward. «Obviously, the enemy wants to bring about a decision between the Channel coast and the Argonne Mountains on the historical battlefield of the first world war. However, soon points will be reached where the German plans of more active defense will become evident. The long-range shelling of British Channel ports, in any case, is a warning to the enemy that Germany still has ways and means at her disposal to place serious obstacles in his way. Another one of these obstacles in the stubborn German defence of bases on the Atlantic and Mediterranean coast. Lorient, St. Nazaire, Brest, Toulon, and Marseilles are tying down a large number of Allied troops... The enemy captured Amiens and advanced farther north. This fact permits the conclusion the Somme Line will also not be held.»

Eastern Front: «The Anapoli bridgehead, established by the Bolsheviks several months ago north of the Baranov dent, was eliminated by German troops... In Rumania the Bolsheviks exercised strong pressure without results. The number of Rumanian troops continuing the fight against Bolshevism is constantly increasing.»

FASCIST RADIO

New Weapons: It is not improbable that new German weapons were used in the non-stop bombardment of the British invasion ports.

An Insuperable Barrier: From the northern slopes of the Carpathians up to the Gulf of Finland, the German defence line presents an insuperable barrier to the attacking Bolshevist troops.

British Tank Losses in Italy: During heavy attacks of the 8th Army in the direction of Urbino, the Wehrmacht units destroyed 63 British tanks.

Patrols of the 5th Army, probing the German lines between Florence and the Terrhenian coast, were repulsed with heavy losses. East of Pisa, Allied units crossed the Arno, but were immediately driven back by the quick intervention of German security troops.

Clothing for Freed Italians: The Italian internees who have now become free citizens are in urgent need of winter clothing. «As they are the representatives of Italy in Germany, it is essential that they be decently dressed.»

WAR FRONTS

BRITISH ADVANCE 65 MILES TO AMIENS IN 48 HOURS AMERICANS 70 MILES FROM GERMANY

SHAEF, August 31 — In a spectacular new advance aimed at outflanking the flying-bomb coast the British 2nd Army today drove 40 miles from Gournay-en-Bray to liberate Amiens, 40 miles inland from the English Channel. This 65-mile advance in 48 hours rivals the speed of General Patton's columns who are now reported to be in the Argonne Forest, 70 miles from the German border at Saarbrucken.

There is likely to be only a brief pause at Amiens, which is 60 miles from the Belgian border. The Germans, driven back on the Somme, are likely to fall back into Belgium and the full force of the Allied air strength will be turned to give support to General Sir Miles Dempsey's offensive.

The drive to isolate the flying-bomb coast in the Pas de Calais area is a tremendously personal thing to every British soldier. Enthusiasm grows hourly in the British Army in France for what is now becoming in the soldiers' minds a crusade against the rocket-bomb sites.

Canadian troops have liberated Rouen, 25 miles inland from Dieppe where, in August 1942, Canadian, British, American, and French forces landed, and where a large number of Canadian troops were taken prisoner. Mopping up operations of the Siegfried Line and the German frontier. Reports late tonight stated that American patrols are now operating in the Forest of Argonne, scene of American battles of the last war. This places them less than 70 miles from Germany. Other units have reached Saint Dizier, southwest of Verdun.

The thrust of General Courtney Hodges 1st Army beyond Laon carried the Americans to within 33 miles of the Belgian border. At the railway station in Laon, American forces caught three trainloads of German soldiers pulling out and killed them all.

Forward elements of the American 1st Army, threating north of Paris, have reached Senlis and are in the area of Crepy-en-Valois, 15 miles farther north. Other units are reported to be in Clermont in a drive northward to effect a junction with the British 2nd Army's southern flank.

The equivalent of five panzer divisions have been destroyed, and another six have been severely mauled, including one grenadier division, in northern France between June 6 and August 25, General Eisenhower stated in a report submitted to the Combined Chiefs of Staff. The total German casualties amount to over 300,000 killed, wounded, and prisoner, of which over 200,000 are prisoners.

In the Brittany Peninsula, Allied guns have been shelling gun positions in the port city of Brest. A headquarters report stated that the enemy has been cleared from the area south of the city, and that the attack upon the city itself is continuing. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

BORDEAUX OCCUPIED BY F.F.I.

LONDON, August 31 — French Forces of the Interior were in control of Bordeaux tonight.

Liberation of the city, on La Gironde River, emptying into the Bay of Biscay, was announced in a communique transmitted from General Pierre Koenig's headquarters.

A closing-in battle for the southwestern French city has been going on for several weeks. Last reports, several days ago, said that two columns, one French, one American, were attacking its outer defenses.

Dispatches from FFI troops said today that harassing operations against German communications and lines of supply continued throughout France. Trains have been wrecked and large truck convoys destroyed in the last few days.

In the region southward of Bordeaux, along the Pyrenees, 3,000 German prisoners have been taken, and another 1,000 enemy soldiers have been killed or wounded.

Swiss dispatches said tonight that French Alpine Chasseurs have taken over from FFI troops in the Franco-Swiss frontier region, and that Maquis men are gradually being absorbed by the regular army.

The Swiss reports said that fighting is over in Haute Savoie, that civic policy in the area, and the policy of newspapers in the area, is rigorously Socialistic. (Reuter)

Canadian troops have liberated Rouen, 25 miles inland from Dieppe where, in August 1942, Canadian, British, American, and French forces landed, and where a large number of Canadian troops were taken prisoner. Mopping up operations against remaining snipers in Rouen continues, however. The Canadians have executed a flanking movement and have cut the Rouen-Dieppe road, nine miles north of Rouen.

No Serious Opposition

The cities of Gournay-en-Bray, Beauvais, and Marseilles-en Veauvais were liberated last night by British forces in a 27-mile advance from their bridgehead over the Seine.

With the fall of Fleury-sur-Andelle, which was overrun last night, the Allies have linked their bridgeheads across the Seine in a solid front east of the river from Paris to Rouen. The British threw another bridgehead across the Seine at Caudebec, less than 25 miles east of the great port of Le Havre. It is also reported that Belgian forces have sent patrols across the river at Quillebeuf, 18 miles east of Le Havre.

At no place in their drive toward Germany are the Allied troops meeting serious opposition. The German 7th Army has been destroyed, the German 15th Army has been used up in attempts to bolster the hopeless cause in northern France, the 5th Panzer Army, created out of remnants of shattered units in Normandy, has been largely destroyed. The enemy no longer has a cohesive fighting machine in all of France.

The American 3rd Army, operating on a wide front, began a fresh attack this morning in the general direction Forward elements of the American [illegible] north of Paris, have reached Senlis and are in the area of Crepy-en-Valois, 15 miles farther north. Other units are reported to be in Clermont in a drive northward to effect a junction with the British 2nd Army's southern flank.

LATE BULLETINS

AMERICANS 10 MILES FROM BELGIAN BORDER

SHAEF, August 31 — American forces have crossed the River Meuse and are driving on Charleville, 10 miles from the Belgian border, it was reported late tonight.

These forces are in the outskirts of Sedan, and are driving on toward the Forest of Ardennes.

The German front has completely broken, and the battle toward Belgium has turned into a rout. They are fleeing so fast that it is becoming most difficult for American forces to maintain contact.

Remnants of the 7th German Army, which had already been trapped twice, have now lost the race to Germany, it was stated officially. (Reuter)

BRITISH EXTEND SOMME BRIDGEHEAD TO CORBIE AMERICANS IN COMPIEGNE FOREST

SHAEF, August 31 — The British 2nd Army has extended the Amiens bridgehead across the Somme to the neighborhood of Corbie, 10 miles due east of Amiens, it was reported late tonight.

American forces are advancing on Compiégne through the Forest of Compiégne. (Reuter)

MOSQUITOES HIT FRANKFURT

LONDON, August 31 — RAF Mosquitoes bombed the industrial area of the German city of Frankfurt last night, while other squadrons of the same speedy aircraft, acting as fighter-bombers, harried Nazi rail communications, from the fighting front, deep into the German homeland.

The Associated Press reported that the attacking planes flew as low as 500 feet above the ground, and that many trains were wrecked.

Also during the night, two waves of American medium bombers attacked the German fortress of Cezambre, a small island from which German coast guns have been blocking the entrance to St. Malo harbor, in the great bay between the Brest and Cherbourg peninsulas.

Last night and early today, the Germans resumed flying-bomb attacks on the southern coast of England and on the London area. Observers said the latest attacks, following a short lull, seem to have been directed at England from the direction of Belgium.

The number of bombs sent over was said to have been fewer than usual. However, an official announcement disclosed casualties and damage. Undisclosed numbers of the bombs were shot down by the RAF before they reached the English coast. (OWI-Reuter)

ALLIES IN FRANCE UNDER SINGLE COMMAND

WASHINGTON, August 31 — General Eisenhower will soon take supreme command of all Allied armies in France, both in the north and the south, the Associated Press said today.

The press agency said that General Eisenhower, who has been directing the offensive through northern France, will take over General Patch's 7th Army now moving up the Rhône Valley under a new army command organization plan about to be announced.

"It is understood that General Patch's operations now link in with the campaign in the north rather than with the Mediterranean campaign under General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, because the 7th Army's drive is now an integral part of the overall campaign to crush the Germans in France." (AP)

MONTGOMERY PROMOTED TO FIELD MARSHAL

LONDON, August 31 — General Sir Bernard Law Montgomery is now a Field Marshal. His promotion to the highest grade in the British Army was announced by King George tonight, through the War Office.

Field Marshal Montgomery is one of the few British generals who have been raised to that rank without first having served as Chief of the Imperial General Staff, highest appointive position in the British Army. (Reuter)

FIVE DAYS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

SHAEF, August 31 — Reviewing the Battle of France at a press conference this morning, General Dwight Eisenhower stated that the attack on German forces had gone exactly as conceived, but that the campaign was actually five days ahead of schedule. He predicted in Algiers, before he went to England, that Germany could be beaten in 1944 if everyone on the battlefield and home fronts did his duty. General Eisenhower said that he stood on that forecast.

Before the landings, he said the Allied chiefs had thought it would be more likely — and better strategy for the Germans — to withdraw when they saw they were unable to hurl the Allies back into the sea, and then fight a delaying action back to some better defense system with more direct lines of supply and reinforcement. Instead, the Germans fought in and cut at Caen on a plan of strategy which made every foot there more important than 10 miles laboratonists in Paris, some of whom were armed. There was trouble and nervousness there, especially since the front line was outside the city's east gate.

Asked about the German Siegfried Line, General Eisenhower said that "no defensive line is better than the men defending it." He said he hoped that, by the time the Allies reached the Siegfried Line, the Germans' morale would be badly shaken.

General Eisenhower paid high tribute to the Maquis, who, he said, had been far more effective than many doubting Thomases thought they could be. Apparently, he added, the Maquis can start an uprising in any region, when they wanted to. (OWI - Reuter)

PATTON AWARDED BRITISH DECORATION

LONDON, August 31 — Lieut. General George Patton, commanding general of the American 3rd Army in France, was made Honorary Companion of the Most Excellent Order of the Bath for his work in the North African campaign, it was announced today.

Four other American generals were also decorated by the British Government. (OWI)

BODIES OF 50 PATRIOTS EXHUMED IN PARIS

PARIS, August 31 — A wave of popular indignation swept the city following the exhumation of the bodies of 50 French policemen and members of the French Forces of the Interior. An Associated Press dispatch quoted French papers as saying that the 50 had been shot by German SS troops without trial in the week preceding the liberation of Paris.

Eight of the bodies were recovered Sunday from a common grave in the courtyard of the Caserne de la Republique, German barracks in the heart of Paris; eight others were found in the Luxembourg Gardens, in the university quarter; and 34 were exhumed from three pits in the woods at Vincennes, a suburb east of Paris. DE GAULLE SUSPENDS FOREIGN OFFICE OFFICIALS

LONDON, August 31 — General Charles De Gaulle has suspended all officials of the French Foreign Office who worked for the Vichy Government pending an investigation of their activities, Radio France said in a broadcast today. (BBC)

ANOTHER VICHY MINISTER ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, August 31 — A report by the American Broadcasting Station in England yesterday said that Francois Lehideux, former Secretary of State for Production in the Vichy Cabinet, has been arrested in Paris.

The broadcast said that Lehideux was head of the Renault factory which made tanks and trucks for Germany during the Nazi occupation.

Radio Paris said that the French National Council of Liberation Secretary General for National Education, has issued a decree reinstating with full rights all employees of the Ministry of National Education and Arts who had been dismissed by the Vichy regime for racial and political reasons. (OWI)

50 MILES FROM SPANISH FRONTIER

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 31 — French forces of the 7th Army have swept southwest from the Rhône Valley in an unopposed, 90-mile advance to within 50 miles of the Spanish frontier, it was announced here late tonight.

In the sensational advance along the main highway leading from the Rhône Valley around the Gulf of Lions southward to the great Spanish port of Barcelona, forward elements of General de Lattre De Tassigny's French forces entered the towns of Montpellier, Beziers, and Narbonne.

Two Separate Commands

Now that the northern France front has been tremendously enlarged, due to the successes of the Allied armies, Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery and General Omar Bradley have been given equal command of their respective fronts, General Eisenhower said.

Field Marshal Montgomery will command all Allied forces on the northern, or upper part of the line, while the American commander, General Bradley, will command the center of the line. General Eisenhower explained that General Montgomery, whom he described as one of the great soldiers - of this or any other war, - was in command of the initial tactical battles because the beachhead was a constricted area where a single tactical command was more effective.

General Eisenhower told the war correspondents the American march through Paris was held to establish a definite feeling of confidence within the city, and to help General De Gaulle in his own particular problems. The supreme commander added that there still were many col-

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 31 — French forces of the 7th Army have swept southwest from the Rhône Valley in an unopposed, 90-mile advance to within 30 miles of the Spanish frontier, it was announced here late tonight.

In the sensational advance along the main highway leading from the Rhône Valley around the Gulf of Lions southward to the great Spanish port of Barcelona, forward elements of General de Lattre De Tassigny's French forces entered the towns of Montpellier, Beziers, and Narbonne, 88-miles southwest of Arles.

Although the French forces pushing to the southwest met no enemy opposition, French and American forces, pursuing the beaten German 19th Army up the Rhône Valley north of Valence and toward Lyon, and American forces now within striking distance of the Italian frontier, were heavily engaged today and yesterday.

After heavy engagements yesterday, in which the battered German force broke free from its American pursuers to reach Lyon, American troops today pressed on northward along the east bank of the Rhône, to occupy Valence, only 57 miles south of France's leading industrial city.

French forces of the 7th Army fanned out to the northwest and southwest of the Rhône Valley, maintaining pressure on the enemy forces fleeing overland toward the Valley of the Loire, and occupied the town of Largentière, 25 miles west of Montelimar.

Nice Liberated

American forces yesterday moved eastward along the Riviera to enter Nice, and to approach within 13 miles of the Italian border, as German forces guarding the Alpine frontier passes inland began to grope forward to contact

American troops which might be threatening the Italian border.

American forces, although they have fallen back from Briançon, only six miles from the Italian frontier, still constitute a threat to industrial northwestern Italy, and especially Turin, only 50 miles to the east of Briançon by road and rail.

One German force was reported moving westward from Montgenevre, through the Alpine passes five miles northeast of Briançon, while another enemy formation was said to be moving into France from the Larche Gap, 35 miles to the south, and about 39 miles east of Gap, where American forces have been reported within the past week.

These German forces guarding the Italian frontier, with their communications torn up behind them by recent heavy Allied air attacks on road and rail bridges, and confronted with Allied forces overrunning nearly all of southern France west of the Italian border, are showing increasing «signs of nervousness,» it was reported here.

American forward elements entered Nice, the Riviera's largest resort town, with a population of over 200,000, without any opposition, and proceeded eastward through the town toward the frontier, just beyond Monte Carlo. Damage in the big resort and port town was mainly confined to harbour areas, it was said.

Huge Material Losses

The fleeing remnants of the German 19th Army paid a heavy price for their escape northward along the Rhône Valley, it was stated. In slashing flank attacks Tuesday, when American forces tore at the retreating enemy columns along an 18-kilometer stretch of Highway No. 7, on the east bank of the Rhône south of Livron, 2,000 German motor vehicles, 1,000 horses, twenty 75-mm. anti-tank guns, twelve 77-mm. guns, three complete batteries of field artillery, forty 20-mm. anti-aircraft weapons, eight self-propelled guns, and six railway guns were captured or destroyed.

German rearguards yesterday fought back savagely at intervals from Livron northward to Lyon, blocking at suicide cost American forward elements thrusting into the retreating columns. After several such heavy engagements, the German forces broke free and fled at breakneck speed north to Lyon, 67 miles farther up the Rhône Valley.

The heavy German losses south of Livron were only part of the total price paid by the enemy to save the substantial part of the 15,000 men which formed the German 19th Army.

Two Me-109's, only German planes to come to the assistance of the hard pressed enemy forces, carried out ground strafing of the pursuing Allied troops in the area of Allex and Crest, north of the Drome River.

Immediately northeast of Montelimar, American forces yesterday reoccupied the town of Clare, which they had been compelled to evacuate on the night of August 28/29. Still farther south in the Rhône Valley, French forces of the 7th Army met German resistance in the vicinity of Bourg St. Andeol, 14 miles south of Montelimar.

Seventh Army forces have now captured more than 50,000 prisoners in the two weeks campaign in southern France. (PRO)

RED ARMY ENTERS BUCHAREST, PUSHES ONWARD

MOSCOW, August 31 — The Russian capital celebrated the entry of Red Army troops into Bucharest with 24 salvoes from 324 guns tonight — thus ranking the fall of the Rumanian capital with the greatest victories of the war.

Russian troops entered Bucharest today after a swift drive southward from Ploesti. Marshal Stalin's order of the day, announcing complete Russian control of the city, said that General Malinovsky's troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front wiped out German pockets of resistance in their march from the oil field [illegible] centre, and the Soviet communique say that Russian positions northeast of Praga, at Warsaw, were improved today after German counter-attacks were repulsed. The town and railway station of Radzymin were taken.

A Reuter dispatch said that Red Army units were massing their weight along the East Prussian border, awaiting the order to strike. Reuter added that German commanders have massed new divisions along the threatened line, and that one of them has been named, «The Division to Prevent Invasion.»

From inside Warsaw, General Bor's Polish communique said that fighting continued bitterly, that one old section of the city was in flames after a concentrated aerial attack in which Nazi craft hurled 1,000 bombs into the streets. Despite local Polish gains, said General Bor's communique, the Germans are strengthening their positions.

In Moscow, the newspaper Izvestia said today that Russian troops found a large section of the Ploesti oil fields in flames when they captured the city. Many of the installations were found intact, however, and were said to be ready to produce oil for the Red Army. (Reuter)

CHURCHILL FORESEES INDEPENDENT POLAND

LONDON, August 31 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a message to Poland, declared today that the final battle liberating Europe will «make possible the restoration of a strong and independent Poland.»

Mr. Churchill said that the world is watching the heroic struggle for freedom in Warsaw. The Poles have earned the admiration of all free peoples, and from their sacrifices, a new Poland will be born.

Despite the most barbarous treatment at the hands of the Nazi thugs and torturers, Polish courage and Polish constancy has never faltered, the message continued.

«At home and abroad, Poles under the leadership, first of General Sikorski, and then of his distinguished successor M. Mikolajczyk, have remained as one in their determination to continue with the United Nations the struggle against the German oppressors. Polish armies have won, and are still winning, renown, fighting on all main fronts in the great battle which will liberate Europe, and make possible the restoration of a strong and independent Poland.»

CZECHOSLOVAKS CLAIM CONTROL OF SLOVAKIA

LONDON, August 31 — Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior said today that they now control almost all of Slovakia, or about one-third of all the territory of old Czechoslovakia.

The second communique of the Czech Partisan Army said all but border areas of Slovakia were cleared of German troops, and that heavy fighting continues for several major towns at the eastern and western ends of the region.

One of the towns, Levoca, was said to be only 30 miles from Russian front lines. (Reuter)

RED ARMY ENTERS BUCHAREST, PUSHES ONWARD

MOSCOW, August 31 — The Russian capital celebrated the entry of Red Army troops into Bucharest with 24 salvoes from 324 guns tonight — thus ranking the fall of the Rumanian capital with the greatest victories of the war.

Russian troops entered Bucharest today after a swift drive southward from Ploesti, Marshal Stalin's order of the day, announcing complete Russian control of the city, said that General Malinovsky's troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front wiped out German pockets of resistance in their march from the oil field refinery center, and the Soviet communique revealed that 7,000 prisoners were taken.

Among the prisoners was Major General Stingel, commander of the 76th German Infantry Division. Among those killed was a General Nisch, identified as commander of the 4th German Army Corps.

The Soviet communique said General Malinovsky's troops swept on beyond the Rumanian capital, and overran a number of inhabited localities. West and south of Costanza, troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front continued their advance through several towns and many smaller localities.

Stalin's order of the day did not say that Russian forces had «captured» the city. Moscow revealed several days ago that Nazi troops had been driven from most of the Rumanian capital by Rumanian troops, and said that slight German resistance remained on the outskirts.

Reuter said tonight that the Red Army was massing large forces for a push through Transylvania into Hungary, now that Bucharest is behind the line. The dispatch said that Soviet tanks and tactical aircraft were moving the battlefront forward with a coordination, so crushing in power, that German troops in strongpoints along the way frequently have no time to fire even a single shot before they are overwhelmed.

The Soviet communique tonight disclosed no other major action anywhere along the Russo-German front, except to final battle liberating Europe will «make possible the restoration of a strong and independent Poland.»

Mr. Churchill said that the world is watching the heroic struggle for freedom in Warsaw. The Poles have earned the admiration of all free peoples, and from their sacrifices, a new Poland will be born.

Despite the most barbarous treatment at the hands of the Nazi thugs and torturers, Polish courage and Polish constancy has never faltered, the message continued.

«At home and abroad, Poles under the leadership, first of General Sikorski, and then of his distinguished successor M. Mikolajczyk, have remained as one in their determination to continue with the United Nations the struggle against the German oppressors. Polish armies have won, and are still winning, renown, fighting on all main fronts in the great battle which will liberate Europe, and make possible the restoration of a strong and independent Poland.»

CZECHOSLOVAKS CLAIM CONTROL OF SLOVAKIA

LONDON, August 31 — Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior said today that they now control almost all of Slovakia, or about one-third of all the territory of old Czechoslovakia.

The second communique of the Czech Partisan Army said all but border areas of Slovakia were cleared of German troops, and that heavy fighting continues for several major towns at the eastern and western ends of the region.

One of the towns, Levoca, was said to be only 30 miles from Russian front lines. (Reuter)

MOSCOW ACCUSES BULGARIA

MOSCOW, August 31 — Bulgaria is not remaining true to her pledge of neutrality, Radio Moscow alleged today. The broadcast continued, in part:

«It is a known fact that German armed ships continue to remain in the Bulgarian waters of the Danube and in Bulgarian Black Sea ports, while the Bulgarian Government does not even attempt to intern these ships or their crews.

POLES ENTER PESARO, 8TH CLOSES ON GOTH LINE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 31 — Polish troops of the 8th Army yesterday entered the Adriatic port of Pesaro, as the 8th Army closed in on the coastal defenses of the Goth Line.

Along a 16-mile stretch, combat patrols have crossed the Foglia River, outer water barrier to the concrete and earthwork fortifications of the enemy's Goth Line and are engaged in heavy fighting on the north banks of the river, it was reported.

Polish forces entered Pesaro, a coast town of 22,000 inhabitants, after infantry and tank forces had broken through enemy resistance following sharp fighting on the edges of the town. The Polish forces pushed forward at least four miles from positions occupied yesterday both on the coastal road and inland between the Arzilla and the Foglia rivers.

Forward troops of the 8th Army were reported four to five miles northeast of Urbino, and engaged in heavy fighting in the rough country to the northwest of this Renaissance town. Monte Calvo, inland anchor of the enemy's defenses, is only a few thousand yards north of these foremost troops. The town of Urbania, seven miles southwest of Urbino, was reported clear of the enemy.

Enemy Hold Heights

Enemy forces still occupy the heights of the Alpe di Luna, east of Sansepolcro in the upper Tiber Valley, but 8th Army forces have occupied the towns of Caprese Michelangelo and Sant'Andrea a Sommagio in the Pratomagno Mountains to the west of the Tiber, it was reported.

In the Upper Arno Valley, north of Arezzo, patrol forces have pushed some four miles northeast and northwest along the two main roads branching from Bibbiena, and although enemy forces were contacted at Poppi, four miles to the northwest, British troops occupied the town of Consuma, seven miles northwest of Poppi.

In both the upper reaches of the Arno and the Tiber rivers, 8th Army forces are now within striking distance of the enemy's mountain defense positions following the sweep of the Apennines.

Enemy patrols were active northeast of Florence, and one force crossing one of the Arno's tributaries in this sector was engaged by Allied artillery and compelled to withdraw.

Enemy patrols were also active along the 5th Army front, and two enemy patrols were engaged at points southeast and southwest of Pisa. The 92nd Infantry Division, an American Negro unit, now in combat, probed German defenses on the north banks of the Arno River with patrol forces yesterday in one of its first reported actions. (PRO)

Strategic operations ranged over Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Greece, with 15th AAF fighter-escorted heavies attacking two rail bridges in Yugoslavia on the main routes from Hungary to Belgrade, and P-38 Lightnings using their new high-altitude bombing technique for the second consecutive day.

On the Rumanian border, 15th AAF Mustangs of an all-Negro fighter unit attacked an airfield 130 miles southeast of Budapest and successfully strafed the field, which was unusually crowded with German planes. The Negro fighter group made five different low-altitude strafing attacks, setting many of the planes on fire and damaging installations, as well as destroying several oil tank cars in the vicinity. TARGETS IN GREECE ATTACKED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 31 — The Balkan Air Force yesterday concentrated on enemy road and rail transport in eastern Greece. Near Kalibaka, Mustangs located two small convoys and put seven of the vehicles out of action. Included in their day's tally were five locomotives and two staff cars.

Beaufighters severely damaged three locomotives with rockets near Lamia, while other rocket-firing Beaufighters hit two coastal gun sites and stores on Zirje Island, in the Dalmatians. Other installations bombed included the railway yard at Karlovac, in Croatia, and a bridge at Gospic. (PRO)

RAIL CHAOS IN BALKANS

ADVANCE AHFQ, August 31 — Movement of German troops, supplies, equipment, and transport through the Balkans has been immeasurably impaired by the effective operations of the Balkan Air Force and Patriots who have been specializing in wrecking trains, it was reported today.

A German traveller recently journeying by rail from Vienna almost into Greece was in transit for nine days, due to any number of interruptions and false starts. Between Vienna and Ljubljana, in northern Yugoslavia, a distance of less than 290 miles, he had to change five times, owing to bomb damage to the line. He continued on to Zagreb, via Maribor, but met with demolished tunnels, cut lines, other trains piling up ahead, crashed engines, finally managing to move on to Brod. The Germans stated that the Brod railway yards were in a fearful state, with innumerable blitzed rolling stock and an air raid occurring to throw the German passengers into a panic.

At Sarajevo, the Balkan Air Force bombers were over again, and locomotives were destroyed. The wrecking of a train up ahead made doubly difficult the passage of the German traveller. By auto and air, he managed to continue and after transacting his business near Mostah, he flew part of the way back to Brod, where the main line follows the mountain spine of Yugoslavia and Albania into Greece.

But, the traveller stated, there were further delays due to the close oil refinery which feared an air attack. This area was hardly worth attacking, the German added, because it was completely ruined.

He did not yet reach his final station, because Patriots sabotaged another train and blocked the road. Then, after a long hike to another road he eventually reached the end of his journey — Prizen, in Albania — by pack train. (PRO)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 31 — Continuing the relentless assault on enemy communications and supplies, Corsican-based Thunderbolts of the Tactical Air Force yesterday afternoon dive-bombed the railroad yards at Albengo, in northern Italy, causing explosions and fires among 50 railroad cars, and torn tracks.

Meanwhile, French-flown Thunderbolts flew deep into France but found few targets, yet tracked down and destroyed six trucks and a tank car, while cratering roads and rail lines.

In other operations TAF bombed objectives north of Florence, also in La Spezia harbour, and southwest of Parma.

Coastal aircraft hit enemy vessels in the Sestri Levante harbour, and destroyed a 200-foot barge in the Danube.

U.S. PLANES MAKE WIDESPREAD PACIFIC ATTACKS

CHUNGKING, August 31 — Over the face of China, over the vast distances of the Pacific, United States aircraft continued today to carry out their smashing attacks against Jap supply lines and communications, in what has been described as a war of "bombs against wheels."

River shipping, air strips, warehouses, convoys, and all their protective installations, were targets for heavy and fighter-bombers, from the Kuriles, north of Japan, to the Netherlands Indies island of Ceram.

The attack upon the oil producing island of Ceram, another assault upon the Japanese stronghold of Halmahera, and still others against Japanese shipping off the coasts of New Guinea and Celebes, and the southern Philippines, were carried out by General Douglas MacArthur's air forces. Ships were sunk; barracks were hit; guns were blasted out of the earth.

Meanwhile, United States Navy bombers attacked the Kuriles again sinking a medium tanker filled with badly needed oil, and destroying a large cargo vessel. Jap patrol ships were also hit.

Retreating Japs Pursued

Dirty weather on the Burma front held up the Allied advance south of Pinbaw; but down the Tiddim Road, the forward push continued, with General Joseph Stilwell's 13th Army elements in pursuit of Jap forces retreating into the Chin Hills.

Jap troops in China were reported from Chungking to have advanced beyond the fallen city of Hengyang, which they took three weeks ago. They were said to be headed for Kweilin, with Chinese units moving to intercept their offensive.

From the cities of Towshan and Chunglow, in southern Kwangtung Province, Jap troops have been driven out in flight, and the Chinese are in full pursuit.

Back in the air, the war of bombs against wheels inflicted heavy losses against Jap shipping, aircraft, truck convoys, troop concentrations, around every major field of operations over the scattered Chinese front.

Allied bombs hit airfields at Canton — 100 trucks at Hengyang, rail yards at Yochow, at Hankow, at Sinyang. Allied bombs hit airfields at Pailuchi, at Liuiang, at Tungting River shipping near Kiukiang was sunk. At Changsha, Allied bombs hit 50 trucks. Other aircraft supported ground forces at Ichang, at Tongyang, at Chungsiang. Enemy aircraft were shot down, eight at one place, five at another. Forty-nine were damaged or destroyed.

These blows added up to a Japanese admission that more production is necessary to a continuation of the war. Over Radio Tokyo a Jap commentator said:

«In all these battle areas, there was not a time when our men had enough planes. As a result of Allied attacks, the number of our aircraft steadily diminishes.»

And as for Japanese shipping:

The United States Navy Department said that American submarines have accounted for another 17 Jap ships in recent operations. The craft sunk included two destroyers. The total of Jap shipping losses to American submarines was conservatively put at 723 vessels of the warship and auxiliary classes alone, since the start of the war.

AIR PHOTOS GUIDE LOST TANKS

WASHINGTON, August 31 — Allied tanks lost in the all but impenetrable Burma jungles during the Mytkyina campaign were guided back to their base of operations by aerial photographs dropped by reconnaissance planes, the War Department revealed today.

WASHINGTON, August 31 — Robert D. Murphy, political adviser to General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's Mediterranean High Command, will go to London with the personal rank of Ambassador to take part in the Allied Military Government of Germany, the State Department announced today.

Mr. Murphy will be concerned exclusively with political problems growing out of the approaching invasion and the eventual occupation of Germany, the announcement said.

He will be the ranking diplomat on General Eisenhower's staff, and will be senior to Samuel Reber, who was named several days ago to succeed William Phillips. Reber is an expert on French affairs, and it is expected that he will concentrate on that phase of the war.

Before taking over his new duties, Mr. Murphy will probably go to Washington for consultation. (OWI)

GERMANS ADMIT DISRUPTION OF SUPPLY SERVICE

LONDON, August 31 — A recent order from the German High Command expressed concern over the heavy losses in motor vehicles which resulted in the disruption of the German Army supply services.

After stating that the losses assumed such proportions that they could be replaced only to a limited degree, the order said:

«Nothing can be done about the unavoidable losses in battle, especially where the enemy air force has control of the air in the rear of our lines. But such losses which are brought about by careless or criminal action on the part of the driver or of the commander are inexcusable. The commanders of all units equipped with motor vehicles must be informed of our emergency in this respect and of our experiences as to the effectiveness of the Anglo-Saxon air force. ARDEATINE CAVES COMMISSION CHARGES GERMANS WITH MURDER OF MORE THAN 320 HOSTAGES

ROME, August 31 — Nazi Germany was officially accused today of the murder of more than 320 Italian hostages at the Ardeatine Caves, near Rome, last March 24.

An official Italian investigating commission, headed by Prince Doria, Mayor of Rome, presented a detailed account of the shootings, and recommended that the full facts be referred to the Allied War Crimes Commission so that the guilty may be brought to justice under the terms of the Moscow agreement on punishment of war criminals.

The recommendation was contained in the interim report of the Ardeatine Caves Commission, appointed July 11 by Col. Charles Poletti, Allied Control Commissioner for Region IV, to investigate the circumstances of the murder of the hostages, to exhume the bodies found in the Ardeatine Caves, and to provide for their proper burial.

The Commission reported that the common grave at the Ardeatine Caves actually contains more than the 320 victims the Germans themselves admitted shooting in reprisal for the killing of 32 Germans by a bomb exploded in Via Rasella last March 23 by Italian Patriots.

More than 300 bodies have so far been exhumed but, because of the advanced state of decomposition of the corpses, less than half that number have been identified. Exhumation and identification are still proceeding.

The text of the Ardeatine Caves Commission report to Colonel Poletti follows:

PART I - THE INCIDENT IN THE VIA RASELLA.

At 1400 hours, March 23, a steel gear case about 50×30×30 cm. loaded with 12 kilograms of explosives was placed in a dustman's cart parked in Via Rasella. Around the case, another six kilograms of explosives were packed. The charge was to be set off by ignition of a one-minute fuse. The crate was placed in the middle of the street and observers were placed along the way. A man, disguised as a dustman, stood at the end of the street, and, as the SS approached, gave the pre-arranged signal by raising his hat.

Another man, also disguised as a dustman, lit the fuse and put his hat on the cart as a signal to his comrades that all was well. The charge exploded just as a company of the SS Police Battalion passed in front of the cart. The Germans at the rear end of the column retired to the end of the street, but at Via Boccaccio, where it leads into Via dei Giardini, they were attacked with hand grenades made of modified mortar bombs « 85 » with a fuse time of 4/5 seconds; presumably thrown from windows overlooking the street.

General Maeltzer, German commander of Rome, who was giving a banquet nearby at the Hotel Excelsior in honor of Minister of Interior Buffarini-Guidi, drove immediately to the scene, where he was joined by a large number of German and Italian police officers and special police and militia squads. All houses in the neighbourhood were searched, and all persons found either in the neighbouring houses or on nearby streets were made to line up against the railings of the Palazzo Barberini with their hands over their heads. Several of them were shot on the spot. Whether this was done by order of the German command is not known; but the majority of them were sent, after a few hours, to various prisons in Rome, from which only a few were released the next day.

PART II - THE ARDEATINE CAVES MURDERS

In reprisal for the Via Rasella bombing, the German command, believed to be acting under orders from Marshal Kesselring, ordered that 10 Italians should die for every German killed in the attack. The exact number of Germans who were killed in the bombing or died later from wounds is in dispute, but the German Command itself in a public announcement of the execution of the Italian hostages gave the number of dead Germans as 32.

Accordingly, on 24 March 1944, the required number of hostages were taken from Regina Coeli and Via Tasso jails. Some 200 were taken from the third wing of Regina Coeli Prison, which was dependent on German authority; 50 were taken at the written request of Giulio Caruso, chief of the Questura of Rome, from among political prisoners in the Fascist wing of the jail, and 70 from the persons arrested as a result of the events of the previous afternoon.

The lists were made up with great care. No complete list of hostages is available, but partial lists show that the German and Fascist police, who selected the victims, were careful to choose a large number of Jews and men whom they apparently considered most troublesome to their regime. The list of victims, however, also included a number who were innocent of any political charge, and even included two 14-year-old boys and a priest. A document is now in the possession of the Commission, bearing the signature of Caruso, ordering the chief of the guard at Regina Coeli to turn over to a certain German Lieutenant Tunnat a list of 50 prisoners. Full identification of each was attached to the list. The typewritten list shows 12 names crossed out and substituted in pen at the last minute, for reasons unknown to this Commission.

SS Colonel Dolmann and SS Obersturmbannfuehrer Koppler, chief of the Einsatzkommando Rom des Sicherheitsdienstes, with the aid of Caruso, are believed to have been in charge of preparation of the lists. These two German officers were also in charge of the subsequent execution. A great many of the prisoners had not yet been given a trial of any kind. None of them took part in the bombing in the Via Rasella. Several were due to be released soon from jail, having been found Not Guilty of the charges that brought about their arrest.

About 1400 hours, March 24, the victims were taken from their cells in Regina Coeli and Via Tasso jails, their hands were tied behind their backs, and they were loaded aboard closed German police vans. Those from Regina Coeli were told at first they were being taken away for labor service. German prison guards stripped them of their hats, overcoats, jewelry, and other personal belongings before they were bound and loaded aboard trucks.

The victims were driven out the Via Appia Antica to the Ardeatine Caves, a deep clay quarry whose tunnels are

With the help of the fire brigade, hundreds of tons of earth were removed, and large passageways were cleared to permit access to the bodies.

The chambers where the work had to be done were provided with water supply, an electric plant, a disinfection station, a first-aid post, and all necessary sanitary equipment. Then work began.

At the end of two connecting passages were found two mounds of earth and sandstone in which could be distinguished the partly-buried bodies of the victims piled one on top of the other, decomposed and skeletonized: it was impossible to estimate the number, even approximately. From these mounds, there came an insupportable stench, an odor of putrefaction, of fat substance in process of decomposition.....

With great care and infinite precaution, their faces protected by masks impregnated with deodorant, workers extracted the bodies of the first victims....

(The report then gives a clinical description of the condition of the bodies, which were all found in a state of advanced decomposition.)

The bodies were found in such horrible condition that it would rouse even in the most hardened observers a feeling of grim horror.... All the personnel employed in this sad work were inspired by the same feeling and are continuing the task with the same devotion, the same spirit of sacrifice, and the same sense of duty.

The condition of the corpses excluded the possibility of identifying them by the shape of their features or their salient physiognomical characteristics: the only recourse possible was to make identification by anthropometric and anthropologic evidence: height, weight, shape of the cranium, etc., from some previous deformity or infirmity which might have left a recognizable trace, from the teeth, the hair, the clothes, personal ornaments, or other objects that might be found on the body or in the pockets of the victim.

It was thus decided by the Commission, at the suggestion of the director of technical hygienics, Prof. Cramarossa, and the director of legal medicine, Prof. Ascarelli, to ask the families of the victims to fill out a special questionnaire indicating anatomical characteristics that might be recognized or special characteristics of clothing worn by the victim at the time of arrest, or personal belongings which the victim might have been carrying at the time.

Each victim, cleansed of the dirt that covered him, was accurately studied on an anatomical table by specialists in legal medicine, and exhaustively searched, even to the lining of the clothing. An exact record of every examination was kept, as well as a sample of the cloth of every garment; everything found in the pockets, in the clothes or on the bodies, was put aside. These objects were deodorized, disinfected, dried, and placed in a small sack of strong waterproof paper, each marked with a serial number. Other samples of cloth and a list of objects found were put in another sack bearing the same number, a number also assigned to the corpse and the coffin. The objects and samples of cloth were sent to the Police Academy where, under the acting director of the school, Comm. Sorrentino, and the director of legal-medical services, Prof. Ascarelli, they were studied once again with great care. For this work some 30 special files were compiled, different from those based on height and age, using information furnished by the families. Thus, for example, there were special files listing all those who had artificial teeth, rings, watches, etc. Comparing the data furnished by the families with these special files and the technical reports, an effort was made to identify the victims.

119 Victims Identified

With the work organized in this fashion, under such strict scientific police methods, it has been possible so far (19 August) positively to identify more than 119 bodies out of a total of about 300 exhumed.

command, believed to be Kesselring, ordered that 10 Italians should die for every German killed in the attack. The exact number of Germans who were killed in the bombing or died later from wounds is in dispute, but the German Command itself in a public announcement of the execution of the Italian hostages gave the number of dead Germans as 32.

Accordingly, on 24 March 1944, the required number of hostages were taken from Regina Coeli and Via Tasso jails. Some 200 were taken from the third wing of Regina Coeli Prison, which was dependent on German authority; 50 were taken at the written request of Giulio Caruso, chief of the Questura of Rome, from among political prisoners in the Fascist wing of the jail, and 70 from the persons arrested as a result of the events of the previous afternoon.

The lists were made up with great care. No complete list of hostages is available, but partial lists show that the German and Fascist police who selected the victims were careful to choose a large number of Jews and men whom they apparently considered most troublesome to their régime. The list of victims, however, also included a number who were innocent of any political charge, and even included two 14-year-old boys and a priest. A document is now in the possession of the Commission, bearing the signature of Caruso, ordering the chief of the guard at Regina Coeli to turn over to a certain German Lieutenant Tunnat a list of 50 prisoners. Full identification of each was attached to the list. The typewritten list shows 12 names crossed out and substituted in pen at the last minute, for reasons unknown to this Commission.

SS Colonel Dolmann and SS Obersturmbannfuehrer Kappler, chief of the Einsatzkommando Rom des Sicherheitsdienstes, with the aid of Caruso, are believed to have been in charge of preparation of the lists. These two German officers were also in charge of the subsequent execution. A great many of the prisoners had not yet been given a trial of any kind. None of them took part in the bombing in the Via Rasella. Several were due to be released soon from jail, having been found Not Guilty of the charges that brought about their arrest.

About 1400 hours, March 24, the victims were taken from their cells in Regina Coeli and Via Tasso jails, their hands were tied behind their backs, and they were loaded aboard closed German police vans. Those from Regina Coeli were told at first they were being taken away for labor service. German prison guards stripped them of their hats, overcoats, jewelry, and other personal belongings before they were bound and loaded aboard trucks.

The victims were driven out the Via Appia Antica to the Ardeatine Caves, a deep clay quarry whose tunnels are said to connect with the nearby catacombs used by the early Christian martyrs. Here the trucks backed up to the mouth of the caves and the victims in groups were led to the end of two passageways where they were shot in the head and, in the majority of cases, also in the nape of the neck.

The massacre was carried out by SS troops who, according to residents in the neighborhood, had removed all unit markings from their uniforms. Kappler shootings were under the command of Obersturmbannfuehrer Kappler who, according to an eye-witness, took part personally in the final shootings because he thought the execution was not going fast enough.

The killings went on all evening. The shots were plainly heard at a near-by monastery. Several days after the shootings, the Germans dynamited the passageways in order to block off the entrance and cover the bodies. Later in the week, when relatives began to visit the Caves in search of the bodies, another mine was set off which, instead of sealing the cave, opened a hole in the roof over the execution spot.

PART III - EXHUMATION AND IDENTIFICATION OF THE BODIES

The section of this commission responsible for identifying the bodies lying in the caves began its work July 26.

sacrifice and the same sense of duty.

The condition of the corpses excluded the possibility of identifying them by the shape of their features or their salient physiognomical characteristics; the only recourse possible was to make identification by anthroponastric and anthropologic evidence: height, weight, shape of the cranium, etc.; from some previous deformity or infirmity which might have left a recognizable trace, from the teeth, the hair, the clothes, personal ornaments, or other objects that might be found on the body or in the pockets of the victim.

It was thus decided by the Commission, at the suggestion of the director of technical hygienics, Prof. Cramarossa, and the director of legal medicine, Prof. Ascarelli, to ask the families of the victims to fill out a special questionnaire indicating anatomical characteristics that might be recognized or special characteristics of clothing worn by the victim at the time of arrest, or personal belongings which the victim might have been carrying at the time.

Each victim, cleansed of the dirt that covered him, was accurately studied on an anatomical table by specialists in legal medicine, and exhaustively searched, even to the lining of the clothing. An exact record of every examination was kept, as well as a sample of the cloth of every garment; everything found in the pockets, in the clothes or on the bodies, was put aside. These objects were deodorized, disinfected, dried, and placed in a small sack of strong waterproof paper, each marked with a serial number. Other samples of cloth and a list of objects found were put in another sack bearing the same number, a number also assigned to the corpse and the coffin. The objects and samples of cloth were sent to the Police Academy where, under the acting director of the school, Comm. Sorrentino, and the director of legal-medical services, Prof. Ascarelli, they were studied once again with great care. For this work some 50 special files were compiled, different from those based on height and age, using information furnished by the families. 119 Victims Identified

With the work organized in this fashion, under such strict scientific police methods, it has been possible so far (19 August) positively to identify more than 119 bodies out of a total of about 300 exhumed.

But these studies will not be over even when exhumation is finished. A summary examination of the burial mounds gives the impression that the number of victims found will exceed 329.

After the exhumations, there will be required a more careful study of the corpses that remain unidentified, thus, perhaps increasing the number of identified bodies. This more difficult later stage of the work will require several weeks.

There are 116 investigators now employed at the Ardeatine Caves. This includes four doctors, besides the hygienist and director of legal medicine; 18 firemen, 11 Carabinieri, 16 morticians, and other personnel.

The barbaric method used by the Germans in the killing will be described more in detail when the exhumation is finished, the number of victims is established, and the first important conclusions are reached, at which time the wounds of each victim can be studied in greater detail.

It can, however, be stated that the victims were shot separately with revolver or tommy-gun shots, in the head, or at the nape of the neck. The shots must have been fired at a very short distance, and projectiles of great explosive force must have been used because in the great majority of cases the skull is blown away or the bones are splintered

The victims, their hands tied tightly behind their backs with strong rope, as is shown by the deep scars on their wrists, must have been pushed in groups to the end of the passageways and led in front of the killers one-by-one, and then felled by one or more revolver shots of large calibre. From the position of the bodies, it is deduced that the victims were forced to climb upon the bodies of others already slain, and as each new group was shot, the murderers piled the new bodies on top of the previous victims.

PART IV - RECOMMENDATIONS

A joint statement on war atrocities, signed by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill, and Marshal Stalin, and published in Moscow 1 November 1943, declared:

> "At the time of granting any armistice to any government which may be set up in Germany, those German officers and men and members of the Nazi Party who have been responsible for or have taken a consenting part in the above atrocities, massacres, and executions, will be sent back to the countries in which their abominable deeds were done in order that they may be judged and punished according to the laws of these liberated countries and of the free governments which will be erected therein."

In view of the plain evidence which has so far come to light concerning German guilt for the murder of hundreds of civilians, and in conformity with the declaration of Moscow cited above, the Ardeatine Caves Commission recommends that this preliminary report and the final report to be issued upon completion of the labors of this Commission be forwarded to the Allied War Crimes Commission. FASCISTS' TRIALS ITALIAN GOVERNMENT PROBLEM

ROME, August 31 — Allied authorities are holding notorious Fascists and collaborators with the Germans only until such time as the Italian Government begins trial of such persons, it was made clear today by Lt. Col. J. R. Pollock, Public Safety Head of Region IV, ACC.

"It is up to the Italian Government to get on with the business of trying these persons," said Colonel Pollock. "The Allies are in no wise responsible for delays in bringing these individuals to justice, and their arrest by the Allies does not delay or set aside their trial by the proper Italian authorities." TRAVEL PERMIT JURISDICTION

ROME, August 31 — Regional Public Safety Division Chief, Lt. Col. J. R. Pollock, today announced that Italian police chiefs in Rome, Frosinone, Littorio, Rieti, Viterbo, and Terni provinces now have the responsibility of issuing all permits for civilians to travel south of the Rear Army Control Line.

Applications to travel north of that control line must be made to police chiefs, but final disposition in each case will be made by the AMG/ACC provincial commissioner.

The control line now runs from Orbetello Stazione through Albinia, Latera, Orvieto, Narni, Terni, Scheggino, Visso, and Tolentino to Porta Civitanova.

No permit is required for travel within a province unless, as in the case of Viterbo and Terni provinces, the army control line crosses such a province.

No permit is required to travel between Rome City and Rome Province.

A permit is necessary, however, to travel from one province into another. Issue of such permits is limited to essential travel only. Questor may issue permits to travel to any province south of the Army control line, including Sicily and Sardinia. (UNN)

West of the Rhone, French troops have advanced further northward to the vicinity of Bourg St. Andeol, where enemy resistance has been encountered.

On the Riviera, American troops have moved eastward through Nice. The enemy is making extensive use of mines to hinder the advance in this area.

In the Alps, enemy forces have been active in the vicinity of several Italian frontier passes.

Allied Armies in Italy: In the Adriatic sector, patrols of the 8th Army have crossed the river Foglia on a broad front, and are now meeting strong resistance from the Goth Line positions on the high ground to the north of the river. In the difficult mountainous sector of the Apennines, Urbino has been occupied and our patrols are approaching the River Foglia north of this town.

In the upper Tiber and Arno valley, further advances have been made, and our troops are now close to the Goth Line.

North of Pontassieve, troops of the 8th Army have met stronger resistance, but several important features have been captured.

On the 5th Army sector, there is no change in the situation.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force: Heavy bombers yesterday attacked two rail bridges in eastern Yugoslavia, while fighters of the Strategic Air Force attacked enemy aircraft on two airdromes in Rumania and Hungary.

Medium bomber operations were prevented by unfavourable weather.

Fighter-bombers attacked railways and roads leading from the Po Valley to the Goth Line, and fighters were active against motor transport and rail lines in the Rhone Valley.

Other aircraft attacked ports and shipping in the Adriatic and the Gulf of Genoa, and military targets in Yugoslavia.

From these operations, seven of our aircraft are missing. MAAF flew over 1,000 sorties. (Pro)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 31 — Today's communique:

Allied armor yesterday drove swiftly northward from the bridgeheads over the lower Seine.

Bypassing scattered areas of enemy resistance, our forces captured Gournay-en-Bray, Beauvais, and Marseille-en-Beauvaisis, and leading troops are now within 20 miles of Amiens.

Further west, we have reached a point eight miles northeast of Rouen. Fleury-sur-Andelle is in our hands. Opposite Duchair, our troops cleared the enemy from the south bank of the Seine.

Troops from the Mantes-Gassicourt bridgehead are advancing northward along the Epte River, and have reached a point less than two miles south of Chaumont-en-Vexin.

Other advances were made beyond the northern suburbs of Paris. In a drive to the east of the capital, Allied forces have reached Reims. Armored units moving toward the Aisne River are 10 miles north of Reims, and elements which crossed the Vesle River are now several miles southeast of the city.

Our reconnaissance elements have penetrated to points a mile and a half north and northeast of Laon to Montaigu, 10 miles southeast.

The bridgehead across the Aisne near Soissons has been extended east and north.

In the Marne Valley, our troops have crossed the river and are opposite Epernay, with some elements one mile south of the town. Up-river forces which made another crossing have reached Les Grandes Loges, eight miles [illegible] of the Chalons-Reims road.

ANOTHER FAMOUS FLORENCE PAINTING MISSING

ROME, August 31 — The world famed «Adam and Eve» by Cranach, early 16th-century painter of the German school, has disappeared, it was announced here today by the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission.

The painting hung originally in the Uffizi Gallery at Florence, and was taken by the Germans to art caches near the city. Later, a German colonel reported the picture had been «lost» in the shuffle, according to reports unearthed by Allied officers.

Nazi Marshal Hermann Goering, it is said, has often expressed his admiration for the Cranach nudes. (UNN) in the area of Ploesti and south of Ploesti, and today entered the city of Bucharest. The troops of this front, continuing their offensive, liberated from the German invaders over 200 populated localities, including Buzoetve, Panatavu, Razavatsy, Peiskovit, Vengeshki, Goreshki, Tarunty, Sohani, Rakovo, Jatta, Singe, Terpnihu, Poteshki, Sodokloveshki, Unte, Tabareli, and Primeshki, and the railway stations of Pleshovo, Krioeshki, Ungra, Uljash, Trevi, Kozmy, Preveshki, and Sungulat.

Troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front captured over 7,000 enemy officers and men from the encircled groups. The Commander of the 76th German Infantry Division, Major-General Stingel, who was also a Commandant of Jassy, was among the prisoners. Commander of the 4th German Tank Corps, Infantry-General Mick, was found dead on the battlefield.

West and south of Constanta, our troops, in the course of their advance, captured the towns of Modzivia, Bessarabia, Carmensilva, Karasuer, and Montaglia.

On all other sectors of the front, reconnaissance activities took place.

During August 30, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 27 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, eight enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 31 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Italian Patriots in control of strategic Alpine passes inflicted serious losses on the enemy in their recent attempts to withdraw. Patriot activity has been so serious a problem for the Germans that they were discussed at a war council meeting held at Bergamo.

General Diamante, who is serving the Germans and is the officer commanding the Lombardy sector, admitted that 1,000 Patriots had entered Milan the preceding night.

General Montagna, military commander of the Piedmont sector, advised against calling up more young men because the order would have resulted in more desertions to Patriot ranks.

In a village of the Biellese sector, four Patriots, surprised by a unit of Republican guards, were killed. During the following night, a group of Patriots overwhelmed the Fascist unit and killed 22 soldiers.

Milanese Fascists, who already feel the helplessness of their position, have fortified their local offices with defensive obstructions to resist any possible attack. A bomb placed in a restaurant in Milan which is frequented by Germans exploded, resulting in many casualties. In reprisal, the Germans shot 24 hostages, adding greatly to the anti-German feelings prevalent among the people.

In Novara Province, a village was burned and 13 persons were killed by the Fascists with the sole motive of terrorizing the people, in the hope that in this way they would deter the population from assisting Patriots. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 31 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

North of Paris, the enemy, who pressed hard on the heels of our retreating troops, was stopped.

Enemy attacking columns which proceeded northward from Beauvais are being counter-attacked.

In the Laon-Reims sector, our troops are engaged in grim fighting with enemy tank forces which gained further ground in a northeasterly and northerly direction.

In the Rhône Valley, the enemy pressure increased, particularly toward Valence. All enemy attacks were smashed in grim fighting.

[illegible] continues to be kept under retaliatory fire and tanks, as well as naval forces. The enemy spearheads which had penetrated our positions were smashed by counter-attacks. Southwest of Pesaro, grim fighting continues at two infiltrations.

In Rumania, the enemy pressure increased toward Ploesti. On the southeastern border of Transylvania, resumed grim Bolshevist attacks were frustrated.

On the remaining parts of the eastern front, yesterday, major fighting developed only northeast of Warsaw. A Soviet attempt at breaking through toward the town was again frustrated, and 24 tanks were destroyed.

USAAF bombers, taking advantage of weather unfavourable for the defense, launched terror raids on Bremen and Kiel. Other enemy bombers struck at some localities in Hungary. Last night, isolated British planes dropped bombs on the Rhine-Main Valley.

In the Channel and the Indian Ocean, submarines destroyed six enemy ships totalling 36,000 tons, and one destroyer, as well as one patrol vessel, in grim fighting, and brought down one enemy plane. (Radio Berlin)

FURTHER PROGRESS MADE IN SOUTHERN FRANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 30 — In advances last night and today, American troops of the 7th Army have made progress in clearing the enemy from the east bank of the Rhône River north of Montelimar.

In the vicinity of Loriol, near the mouth of the Drone River, resistance is being overcome. Near Chabeuil, six miles southeast of Valence, stiff opposition was encountered during the night. The town of Clary was retaken and Saucet was mopped up; both are northeast of Montelimar.

Heavy losses were inflicted by our artillery and aircraft on a three-mile enemy column estimated to include 200 vehicles, 100 horses, 75 carts, and a number of pieces of horse-drawn artillery, which was moving along Highway 7 in this sector.

Fighting to Disengage

The battered German 19th Army, slashed by fierce air assault and subjected to clawing flank attacks along a 20-mile-stretch of Highway 7 on the east bank of the Rhône, was fighting desperately yesterday to disengage and escape across the Drone river from its American pursuers.

With the bridges across this tributary of the Rhone smashed by Allied bombers, the German forces were en-sixth German general to be captured in the two-weeks-old campaign in southern France, was taken prisoner at Montelimar.

Montelimar has been occupied by the American forces, after small groups of enemy resistance in the town had been cleaned up.

The German forces have lost heavily both in casualties, transport, and equipment in their frantic efforts to escape from the Rhône Valley trap. In two days, approximately 600 motor trucks and two complete batteries of 88-mm. guns have been captured in this area.

Allied air supremacy, given increasing weight by the establishment of airfields in southern France, has taken a heavy toll of the retreating German columns. Forced to move in daylight hours by the stabbing pressure of the advancing American land forces, the Germans have had to expose their long, vulnerable transport columns to fighter-bomber attacks which have left the German line of retreat strewn with twisted wreckage. Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force have ranged ahead of the retreating enemy, cutting bridges and cratering roads in their path, and creating long delays in the enemy's transport movements.

Enemy Reenters Briançon

Nearly 90 miles to the northeast, where American troops last week occupied Briançon, only six miles from the Franco-Italian frontier, German forces have been rushed from Italy to block this direct threat to industrial northwestern Italy, and have compelled a temporary American withdrawal to the outskirts of this fortress town. On August 24, Mitchell bombers of the Tactical Air Force struck at two road bridges, north of Turin, Italy, to head off two German Panzer divisions racing towards southern France. The planes, returning from a routine mission, were ordered to attack the village of Setti and its approaches when the tank forces were reported assembling.

Briançon is connected both by road and rail routes with Turin, only 50 miles to the east over the Maritime Alps, and the two German Panzer divisions may well have reorganized and continued their trip to guard the approaches to the industrial heart of Italy.

Allied forces have captured approximately 45,000 prisoners in their two weeks campaign in southern France, and have liberated a total area of more than 20,000 square miles including France's second-largest city, Marseilles. In the Marseilles area alone, 10,000 prisoners have been captured. At Toulon, in addition to the general commanding the ground

The battered German 19th Army, slashed by fierce air assault and subjected to clawing flank attacks along a 20-mile-stretch of Highway 7 on the east bank of the Rhône, was fighting desperately yesterday to disengage and escape across the Drone river from its American pursuers.

With the bridges across this tributary of the Rhône smashed by Allied bombers, the German forces were employing pontoons to ferry the remnants of at least five divisions across the Drone at a point six miles east of its confluence with the Rhône.

The focal point of the savage onslaught against the retreating German columns was at Loriol, 15 miles north of Montelimar and two miles from the banks of the Drone river. Here, at this small village on Highway 7, German rearguards battled savagely to hold back the American forces threatening to cut off the enemy forces still to the south, and retreating northward to cross the river. Only a couple of miles to the east, American forces had already seized a foothold on the north banks of the Drone, and occupied the village of Allex, as well as the small town of Grane, on the south banks of the river.

Although official reports declared that the attacks on the German 19th Army extended along a 20-mile front, mostly between Montelimar and Livron, it was not clear whether American forces had actually crossed the Drone north of Loriol to engage the fleeing Germans on both banks. Livron is only 2½ miles north of Loriol on Highway 7, and only 17 miles north of Montelimar.

American forces of the 7th Army yesterday captured Major Gen. Otto Richter, commander of the 198th Infantry, which with the 11th Panzer Division has formed a backbone of the badly-mauled German 19th Army. General Richter, ... have been captured in this area.

Allied air supremacy, given increasing weight by the establishment of airfields in southern France, has taken a heavy toll of the retreating German columns. BRITISH REACH GOURNAY AND BEAUVAIS

SHAEF, August 31 (Thursday) — British and Canadian troops have reached Beauvais and the road and rail junction town of Gournay, pushing northeastward from the Seine bridgehead, it was announced here early this morning.

The advance across the lower Seine has now driven 28 miles beyond the river's banks in a push aimed at wiping out the flying-bomb launching bases along the northern French coast. (Reuter)

9TH USAAF HITS FUEL DUMPS NEAR DIEPPE

9TH USAAF HQ, August 30 — Havocs of the 9th USAAF this afternoon attacked an important enemy fuel storage depot near Dieppe, it was announced tonight. The Havocs dropped their bombs through a heavy cloud cover on the depot near Arques la Bataille, about five miles southeast of Dieppe.

The attack was carried out following a request by American ground forces. The enemy fuel supplies were believed to be intended for use by German forces operating north of the Seine. (PWB)

U.S. SUBMARINES SINK 17 JAP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, August 30 — The U.S. Navy today announced that American submarines operating in the Pacific have sunk 17 more Japanese ships, including two destroyers. The new sinkings bring to 723 the total number of Japanese warships and fleet auxiliaries sent to the bottom by American submarines since Pearl Harbor. (OWI) forces, the German Vice Admiral Ruhfus has surrendered to the French Forces of General de Lattre de Tassigny, it was announced today.

In secondary advances in the Rhône Valley, French forces yesterday reached the town of Bagnols, 16 miles northwest of Avignon, and four miles west of the Rhône, while American forces took Vaireas, 16 miles southeast of Montelimar and the same distance east of the main waterway.

On the eastern flank of the Riviera bridgehead, American forces are consolidating their position on the west bank of Var River, where they are less than 20 miles from the Italian frontier. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. - OPERATION UPPERCUT -

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 30 — As a result of road and rail blocks carved into the countryside by the Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Force, German divisions defending southern France were isolated from the interior within five days after the Allied landings.

This was the second phase of the "Operation Uppercut" air plan for supporting the liberating forces. The first phase was the softening up of enemy defenses before D-day and the blasting of beach defenses just before the landings began.

Before the entry into Toulon, which was softened by air blows at enemy coastal and naval guns, the German 19th Army was cut off in an area from Montpellier on the west, Arles on the northwest, and Valence to the north.

Road and rail arteries along the Rhône, Durance, and Var valleys were severed in many places.

The enemy's attempts to reinforce his southern France positions from northern Italy were slashed on both sides of the border, and inside the ring German movement was harried night and day by fighters and light bombers.

In the five-day period, the Tactical Air Force flew 11,066 sorties and dropped 4,300 tons of bombs, destroying 18 bridges and damaging 52. Almost 300 motor transports were destroyed in that time, and 435 damaged; 129 railroad cars and 22 locomotives were destroyed, and 351 cars and 14 locomotive damaged.

Allied ground forces lost no time moving forward to the farthest northern reaches of the area which Tactical Air Force planes had isolated during the first days of the campaign. (PRO)

CRUISER "OMAHA" TOOK PORQUEROLLES

WASHINGTON, August 30 — The United States cruiser Omaha forced a German garrison to surrender the island of Porquerolles during the landings in southern France, the Navy Department said today.

The garrison, which guarded the eastern approaches to Toulon, ran up the white flag, said the announcement, after two days of steady shelling from the cruiser's guns. (OWI)

FRENCH AIRMAN RAISED TRICOLOR AT TOULON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 30 — The French Tricolor was first raised in Toulon by a lieutenant colonel of the French Air Force and his six-man crew, who had persuaded their captors to surrender even before the ground forces arrived, it was reported here today.

The surrender of Fort Gardane, with a 400-man garrison, was effected by these French fliers while French infantrymen were fighting in the city's outskirts.

Shot down in the Mediterranean and later captured by the Germans, the fliers were imprisoned in the Gardane fortress. The French lieutenant colonel described the hopeless position of the German forces to the officer in command, and on August 23, faced with FFI attacks, the German officer ordered his men to lay down their arms.

Hauling down the swastika and raising the Tricolor was a Reuter despatch today. The Germans deliberately weakened their garrisons in the foothills of the Pyrennees in order to form a strong column to repulse the Maquis' advance on Mauleon. However, the FFI surrounded and destroyed the entire column, inflicting casualties amounting to 8,000 killed and prisoners. (Reuter)

YANKS PASS REIMS; PATTON STABS AHEAD BRITISH SURGE ON FLYING-BOMB BASES

SHAEF, August 30 — On all salients of the northern France front, battle-line dispatches tonight reported more Allied gains.

An announcement here said that American troops had reached the ancient cathedral city of Reims, battleground of the last World War, and had swept over the Vesle River for further gains of several miles east of the city.

North and south of Reims, General George Patton's armor pushed forward in characteristic secrecy, leaving to the Germans to say that American forward spearheads were approaching St. Dizier, eastward of Vitry, below the Marne.

Reuter said the German report indicates an advance of 20 miles beyond Patton's last reported forward positions, and puts the American general's armor only a little more than 80 miles from the nearest point on the German frontier.

Still other United States armored units have reached the Aisne 10 miles north of Reims, have crossed the Marne in the area of Epernay, and have reached Les Grandes Loges, eight miles northwest of Chalons. Chalons itself has been liberated.

Belgium 40 Miles

American troops north of Reims were reported tonight to have reached a point within 40 miles of the Belgian frontier, in the area of Foret de St. Michel. The bridgehead across the lower Seine, it was said here, was 25 miles in depth, and its forward elements had reached Neufmarche, just below the important road junction of Gournay. SHAEF said resistance around Rouen, on the left flank of the bridgehead, was still fairly stubborn, although Radio Berlin reports indicated that Nazi forces were preparing to evacuate the city.

German forces still left on the south side of the Seine have been reduced to those remaining in two loops of the river, according to dispatches from British and Canadian forward headquarters. They were said to be resisting fiercely.

On the north side of the river, General Sir Miles Dempsey's 2nd Army was reported to be surging forward over the flying-bomb launching bases, 14 of which have already been taken by British troops.

Reuter said the start of the British drive was impressive; that nothing Hitler has can stop it. It was begun with an order of the day from a senior British general, identified as one of the "battle-winning desert generals," in which the troops were told:

"We are now in the van of the Allied armies. We are about to start a deep drive into enemy territory. This is the country from which the Germans launch their flying-bombs against us. For the first time in this war we are fighting directly to free our homes, our wives, and our children from German attacks. Every yard we advance reduces the area from which he can launch his weapons." (Reuter-BBC)

This was the first German stronghold in Toulon to fall to the Allies, and started the disintegration of German resistance in the city, it was stated. (PRO)

FFI TIGHTEN RING AROUND LYON

LONDON, August 30 — French Forces of the Interior have liberated Clermont Ferrand at the north end of the Auvergne Mountain range, said today's communique from General Koenig's headquarters.

The FFI have also liberated Tarare, 12 miles northeast of Lyon, Bourgoin, 20 miles southeast, and Bourg Saint Maurice. The ring around Lyon is being drawn tighter. Several points inside the town are already controlled by FFI. It is now the Germans who are organising themselves into pockets of resistance.

At Bordeaux, the Germans have withdrawn to the north bank of the Garonne. Stranded German groups in the southwestern departments are now attempting to make their getaway.

How the FFI wiped out a German column east of Bayonne by a clever pincer movement last week is told in

GERMAN PORTS, BOMB SITES HIT «Q» TRAIN DESTROYED

LONDON, August 30 — Two 8th USAAF airfleets, each about 750 planes strong, attacked German targets in western Europe today.

This morning, the first force of Fortresses and Liberators concentrated their explosives on the flying-bomb sites along the northern French coast, which the British 2nd Army is rapidly approaching by land.

This afternoon, a second force of Fortresses flew to north Germany to attack the vital North Sea ports of Kiel and Bremen. Mustang fighters escorted the bombers throughout the day.

Cloud formations prevailing this morning hampered the attacks on the flying-bomb sites in the Pas de Calais. A communique said that Allied aircraft met no German air opposition, and only meagre anti-aircraft fire. Only one bomber was lost, and all fighters returned.

Cloudy weather continued into the afternoon and forced the heavy bombers over Kiel and Bremen to drop their bombs by means of instruments.

These attacks on Kiel and Bremen continued the general Allied air offensive now being directed against Germany's northern ports. Last night, while strong forces of RAF Lancasters bombed the Baltic ports of Koenigsberg and Stettin, RAF Mosquitoes raided Berlin and the North Sea port of Hamburg, and laid mines in enemy waters. The Mosquitoes left large fires burning in the German capital.

The Lancasters dropped more than 1,200 bombs on Stettin alone, and left fires which burned for hours, with smoke rising to 26,000 feet.

For Stettin, last night's attack was the second this week. This second-largest port in Germany, which the Germans have been using to supply material and reinforcements to their armies on the Russian front, was bombed on Monday night when Koenigsberg, the East Prussian capital, was also blasted.

Yesterday evening 50 Beaufighters of the RAF Coastal Command, escorted by Mustangs of the Air Defense of Great Britain, attacked an enemy convoy of five vessels in the Heligoland Bight, west of the Kiel Canal. Torpedoes and rocket projectiles fired by the Beaufighters left an armed naval auxiliary, a merchantman, and two escorting flak ships afire. Two Beaufighters failed to return from this operation.

A Nazi «Q» train carrying hidden ack-ack guns was among the targets hit by Spitfires of Air Defense of Great Britain during offensive patrols over Holland yesterday. The «Q» train was composed of goods and military passenger coaches. When the Spitfires opened fire, the sides of a number of the rail trucks fell open and Bofors guns went into action.

After the Spitfire crews opened fire all the flak was silent, and the locomotive was wrecked. None of the Spitfires was harmed.

Another Spitfire formation hit a train carrying German plane parts, and again wrecked the locomotive. British planes also strafed an armed enemy transport vessel at the mouth of the Zuyder Zee.

Aircraft of the 9th USAAF were over Belgium, France, and western Germany yesterday bombing and strafing enemy transport, ranging from Brussels in the north to Lyon in southeastern France, without opposition. About 90 locomotives and 310 railway cars were damaged or destroyed, and more than 318 vehicles were hit on the roads, as well as two roundhouses, warehouses, and two tunnels.

FRANCE READY TO ASSUME WORLD ROLE

PARIS, August 30 — The people of France have felt the need, by instinct and by reason, to satisfy the two conditions without which nothing great ever has been achieved — ardor and order, General Charles De Gaulle declared in a radio address here last night.

«The republican order,» said General De Gaulle, «which can exist only under the authority of the State, and ardor, dedicated to the legal and fraternal reconstruction of France, are the very bases of the French Republic.

«France renders homage to all those who contributed to the victory of Paris».

General De Gaulle named the Parisian people, the FFI, and «above all the soldiers of France, many of whom died on the battlefield and so many others have been executed by the Germans.»

He added that France pays homage to the brave and valiant Allied armies whose assistance has made possible the liberation of Paris and is making certain the liberation of the entire territory by helping crush the German power.

General De Gaulle closed with these words:

«The nation feels that the future offers promise, but certainly that we shall emerge from this war victorious. We are now certain that France will be reborn again and once more take her place among the great nations of the world — among the greatest nations of the world.»

RED ARMY TAKES PLOESTI

MOSCOW, August 30 — Ploesti, the largest oil refinery center in Europe west of Russia, has fallen to Red Army troops of General Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Front.

Capture of the city, which lies a little more than 50 miles directly north of Bucharest, was announced by Marshal Stalin in a special order of the day tonight. Said Stalin:

«The capture of Buzau and Ploesti completes the liberation of all oil industry centers in Rumania from the German Fascists.

«Tonight, at 2100 hours, Moscow will salute the victorious troops with 20 salvos from 224 guns. They will henceforth bear the name of Ploesti Troops.

General Malinovsky's forces pushed on beyond the oil city and tonight were within 18 miles of the Rumanian capital.

These same troops yesterday captured 15,000 German officers and men, including three divisional commanders and one corps commander. Among these were two generals. One was identified as General Keil, artilleryman, of the 7th Army Corps. The second was identified as Lieut. Gen. Weigner, of the 79th Infantry Division.

The rest of the long Russo-German front remained comparatively static. The 3rd Ukrainian Front continued its advance in eastern Rumania, capturing more than 100 inhabited localities.

But on the Baltic front, in the Tartu area, German counterattacks, all of which were beaten off, held up the Russian push to the Baltic Sea, into the area of the great Estonia-Latvia trap.

North of Rumania, the only Russian advances were reported from the Lomza salient, northeast of Warsaw. Several towns were overrun. From this sector, the Germans reported a resumption of the Russian offensive, and said that German lines had been breached at several points.

From Warsaw itself, a Polish communique from General Bor's headquarters revealed that German troops have regained some of their lost ground within the city. (Reuter)

NAZIS LOSE HUGE PLOESTI OIL STORES

LONDON, August 30 — The Allied command estimated here today that the Germans lose about 5,500 tons of oil a day as a result of the Red Army's capture of Ploesti.

The present oil production capacity of the great Rumanian oil city was put at approximately two million tons a year, a figure far below the potential production capacity because of concentrated aerial attacks carried out since last May.

The top potential capacity of Ploesti refineries was put at 10 million tons of oil yearly. (Reuter)

PLIGHT OF WARSAW PEOPLE DESCRIBED

LONDON, August 30 — «Nothing can now be dropped by parachute into Warsaw without falling into German hands,» General Zymerski told correspondents at a Press conference in Lublin reported by Reuter correspondent.

«If the insurgents had one entire district, it would be possible to help them, but they hold only isolated buildings.»

Zymerski said that the people of Warsaw were without water and light, and were hiding in cellars in defiance of the German ultimatum to leave the city and go to the western outskirts holding white handkerchiefs. Out of 1,000,000 population, only 70,000 obeyed the order, and they are now in a desperate plight, foodless and shelterless in a concentration camp near Warsaw, said the general.

NAZIS LOSE HUGE PLOESTI OIL STORES

LONDON, August 30 — The Allied command estimated here today that the Germans lose about 5,500 tons of oil a day as a result of the Red Army's capture of Ploesti.

The present oil production capacity of the great Rumanian oil city was put at approximately two million tons a year, a figure far below the potential production capacity because of concentrated aerial attacks carried out since last May.

The top potential capacity of Ploesti refineries was put at 10 million tons of oil yearly.

PLIGHT OF WARSAW PEOPLE DESCRIBED

LONDON, August 30 — «Nothing can now be dropped by parachute into Warsaw without falling into German hands,» General Zymerski told correspondents at a Press conference in Lublin reported by Reuter correspondent.

Zymerski said that the people of Warsaw were without water and light, and were hiding in cellars in defiance of the German ultimatum to leave the city and go to the western outskirts holding white handkerchiefs. Out of 1,000,000 population, only 70,000 obeyed the order, and they are now in a desperate plight, foodless and shelterless in a concentration camp near Warsaw, said the general.

U.S. WARNS NAZIS ABOUT POLISH ARMY

LONDON, August 30 — In a State Department declaration issued yesterday, the United States recognizes the Polish Home Army as a combat force and warns Germany that she will be held responsible for damages inflicted on the Poles, it was reported here today.

The American statement follows a similar declaration made by the British Government.

BULGARIAN PEACE DELEGATION IN CAIRO

CAIRO, August 30 — A Bulgarian armistice delegation has arrived here.

It was met on arrival by Allied Balkan experts, both civil and military.

Members of the delegation were accompanied by a British officer who had been doing important work in the Balkans.

The delegation is expected to have full authority to sign an armistice — which may, however, not be completed without reference to the Government in Sofia.

Reuter correspondent in London revealed that Allied armistice terms to Bulgaria were completed at the end of last week by the European Advisory Commission. They have been approved by the British and United States govern-

A dispatch from Istanbul said that the Bulgarian peace envoy and former speaker of the Bulgarian Parliament, Moushanov, who returned hurriedly to Istanbul last night from Sofia, left today — presumably for Cairo. He had a conference with Balabanov, the Bulgarian Minister to Turkey, before leaving.

In Bulgaria, a home radio broadcast today advised the people that Bulgarian occupation troops are now being brought home from Greece, Yugoslavia, and other places.

CZECH PARTISANS ISSUE COMMUNIQUE

WASHINGTON, August 30 — Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior issued their first communique today, telling of what was described as «an urgent situation» within the Czech frontiers.

An uprising of the Czech Underground Army was confirmed by the German news agency, DNB, which said today that German troops had been moved into critical areas to fight the Partisans, and «to restore peace and order.»

The town of Cadca, on the frontier between Slovakia and Moravia, is reported to have fallen to a Partisan assault, and heavy fighting was said to be going on in several regions of the Czech interior. (OWI)

MASARYK PRAISES CZECH HOME ARMY

LONDON, August 30 — Jan Masaryk, Czechoslovak Minister of Foreign Affairs, tonight praised the Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior fighting the German troops in Slovakia.

In a broadcast over the BBC he said:

«The Slovak people are giving an answer to the traitors who would lead them to disaster. Before the whole world, they are demonstrating their real feelings, their loyalty to democracy. They are the first to fight for the Czechoslovak Republic on the home front in open, regular military formations.»

8TH ADVANCES OVER TWO MILES ON ADRIATIC

ADVANCE AFHQ August 30 — Polish and British troops of the 8th Army yesterday pushed forward over two miles along the Adriatic coast to approach within a little over four miles of the coast port of Pesaro, while farther inland other forces seized the high ridges south of the Foglia River and advanced to the south banks of this water barrier of the enemy's Goth Line in several places.

The 8th Army forces captured the three-mile ridge stretching from Monte Bellila, southwestward to San Angelo, only after fierce fighting, in which the crack 1st German Parachute Division, veterans of Cassino, strove to stem Allied advance threatening to overwhelm the German coastal defenses.

On the inland flank of the 8th Army advance, forward elements were reported to have reached Monte Colbordolo and Monte Fabbri, after crossing the Apsa River, an inland tributary of the Foglia River, and to have taken positions within 1,000 yards of this water barrier of the formidable German defences at a point roughly 12 miles in from the coast.

Foglia Bridges Demolished

Bridges across the Foglia River have already been demolished along this inland sector, indicating, it was said, that the main body of the German forces have withdrawn to their fixed position in the Goth Line just northwest of the stream.

In the immediate coastal area, British troops, operating with Polish forces, made a 4,000-yard advance along the

ALLIED RAID ON KORCULA ISLAND ANNOUNCED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 30 — Infantry, artillery, and RAF regiment forces, under the operational command of Land Forces, Adriatic, and supported by aircraft of the Balkan Air Force and units of the Royal Navy, carried out a successful operation against enemy forces on the Dalmatian island of Korcula on the night of August 26-27, it was announced this evening.

Casualties were inflicted on the enemy and gun positions and ammunition dumps were damaged.

Air Vice Marshal W. Elliot, C. B., C.B.E. D.F.C., who commands the Balkan Air Force, which was specially created to aid the armies of resistance in the Balkans, coordinated the units partaking in the operation.

After completing their mission, the ground forces withdrew unhampered, the announcement added.

BALKAN AIR FORCE ADDS TO ENEMY CHAOS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 30 — Adding to the chaos of the whole enemy communication system in southeastern Europe, the Balkan Air Force yesterday carried out 19 separate missions over the Balkans, ranging from eastern Greece to the borders of Hungary.

One Beaufighter squadron, sweeping the Larisan area in Greece, twisted the girders of a railway bridge with bombs, put seven locomotives out of action, destroyed many of the trucks they were pulling, and bombed another rail bridge sucessfully.

An airfield building was also attacked, and the adjacent gun positions were machine-gunned.

Spitfires successfully attacked rail communications, and Mustangs scored on a northbound road convoy. (PRO)

MAAF HEAVIES RANGE WIDE AGAINST ENEMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 30 — German communications and supplies were again bombed yesterday in sweeping air attacks on targets in Italy, Hungary, Yugoslavia, and Czechoslovakia by up to 750 heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF, while other formations flew armed reconnaissance in southern France, and port and shipping along the Italian coast were attacked by the coastal air force.

Liberators scored hits on railroad bridges at Salcano, Italy, in the Udine-Gorizia area, as Lightnings hit both approaches of a rail bridge at Latisana, between Trieste and Venice, in a high-level attack. Other targets in Italy included Ferrara, Rovereto, and enemy installations on the Goth Line. Supporting ground forces in Italy, Spitbombers, Kittyhawks, Mustangs, and Spitfires attacked ammunition and supply dumps, roads, rail lines, junctions, and rail yards, destroying 18 motor trucks and a locomotive, and cutting roads in many places.

Railway Gun Silenced

A big German railway gun which had been impeding the advance of the Allied Army in the Adriatic sector was effectively silenced by the accurate bombing of an RCAF Spitfire squadron in a recent sortie, it was reported today.

The enemy gun, operating from the shelter of a tunnel near San Stefano, was sealed in its underground lair by direct hits which cut the tracks at both ends. The gun did not fire again.

The same squadron has made hundreds of missions in this sector, bombing an enemy gun concentration near Candelaria recently, attacking the marshalling yards at Sant Arcangelo, strafing German radio installations north of Castiglione, and missing a good score of blasted communication and bombed bridges.

In the immediate coastal area, British troops, operating with Polish forces, made a 4,000-yard advance along the coastal highway leading from Fano to Pesaro and on up the Adriatic coast. Polish troops moved forward to occupy high ground between the Arzilla and the Foglia River at a point little over four miles south of Pesaro, while forward troops captured Monte Lucca, 2,000 yards north of Carignano, taken two days ago.

North of Urbino, occupied Monday, troops of the 8th Army pushed into the hills to within four miles of the inland anchor of the German coastal defenses, Monte Calvo, against only slight enemy opposition.

Italian troops with the 8th Army yesterday pushed forward to within one mile of the Metauro River, at a point southwest of Urbino, and west of the town of Acqualagna.

In the upper Arno Valley, north of Arezzo, the town of Bibbiena, only five miles from the main defensive works of the Goth Line, has been occupied by 8th Army forces, which are pressing forward both east and west of this town, into country now evacuated by the enemy.

East of Florence, 8th Army thrusts penetrating five miles north of Pontassieve, have forced further enemy withdrawals in this sector. The area up to two miles northeast of Florence is now reported clear of the enemy.

On the 5th Army front, only minor patrol clashes and routine artillery exchanges were reported. (PRO)

High-Altitude Bombing

The inauguration of high-altitude bombing took place yesterday when a veteran fighter group, operating Lightnings of the 16th AAF, attacked a rail bridge in northeastern Italy, it was announced today.

Following the successful bombing attack, the planes swept the area as fighters, destroying six locomotives, damaging others, and strafing railroad cars.

The technique of high-altitude bombing involves fighters' bombing in formation on a lead plane which carries the bombardier and bombsight. It was pointed out that, though the Lightnings cannot carry so great a weight of high explosives to an objective as a similar formation of heavies, nevertheless, their greater speed makes them ideal for hit-and-run tactics. Three German planes were shot down by Patriots.

On the Belgrade-Zagreb line, a train was derailed and 35 Germans were killed.

In Slovenia, in the Domzale-Moravce sector, Patriot units in strong fighting attacked large German concentrations. In Primorska, Yugoslav troops captured Cepovan, Likva, and Lazna after severe fighting. (OWI-Reuter)

PACIFIC PINCERS CLOSING ON JAPS

ALLIED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HQ, August 30 — The heavy Allied aerial attack on the former Dutch naval base at Amboina, and the continued offensive against Jap territory along the coast of central China, indicated clearly today that Japan may soon be cut off from her vital sources of supply in the conquered islands of the Netherlands Indies.

Amboina, which lies immediately south of the island of Ceram, on the northern circumference of the Banda Sea, was the second-largest Dutch naval base, ranking just below Soerabaja, on Java, as a bastion of the Indies. The base fell to superior Jap naval forces not long after the fall of Singapore.

More than 70 heavy and fighter-bombers unloaded 138 tons of explosives on the Jap-held base yesterday, leaving the barracks area and the rim of the wide harbor in roaring flames. A 3000-ton ship was set afire offshore.

Meanwhile, other Allied aircraft, operating from bases in China, attacked Jap depots and communications lines along the central Chinese coast. This area controls the Strait of Taiwan, between China and the Island of Taiwan (Formosa) and from it the Japs maintain control of the China Sea.

With this Chinese coastal area neutralized, and bases in the Indies made untenable, Japan's defense lines would be driven backward to the Jap mainland, and the vital sea routes over which she supplies her home war machine would be severed.

Supplementing the raids on Amboina and the Chinese coast, General Douglas MacArthur's airmen also attacked the strong Japanese base on Halmahera Island, north of Ceram and on a direct line to the Philippines.

The one-time Portuguese Island of Timor, northwest of Australia, was also attacked, while other United States aircraft struck at Palau, at the Volcano Islands, and at Paramushiro, in the Kuriles, north of Japan. (OWI)

GUAM TO BECOME A SMALL PEARL HARBOR

GUAM, August 30 — Guam is destined to become a miniature Pearl Harbor from which the winning blow against Japan can be struck, Major General Henry Larson, new commander of Guam's defenses and development, said at his first press conference.

He said that «Guam will be everything that an important base implies,» and emphasized that the development of the island, which American forces recently won from the Japanese, would be one of the major engineering projects of the Pacific war.

«This base is important offensively to launch the action which is going to win the war; defensively, because here rest the installations promoting the security even of the United States,» General Larson said. «With this island in our hands, we shall be in a position to insure peace afterwards.»

General Larson also stated that the program for the rehabilitation of the natives will include a back-to-the-soil movement, governmental employment for those skilled in trade, and reconstruction of their ruined houses. (OWI)

JAPS APPOINT NEW WAR MINISTER

LONDON, August 30 — Radio Tokyo announced today that the Japanese Vice Minister of War in the new cabinet of Premier Kuniaki Koiso, Lt. Gen. Kyoji Tominaga, had been relieved of his post. He has been replaced by Lt. Gen. Kaneshiro Shibayama, the radio added.

The German News Agency reporting the change noted that Tominaga had held his post for more than a year, and said that he had been appointed to another important position.

Another Japanese war chief to be relieved of his post, according to said Radio Tokyo, is Lt. Gen. Heitaro Kimura, supreme military councillor and chief of the Armament Administration headquarters. Lt. Gen. Haruji Tani, chief of the General Affairs Bureau of the Armament Administration headquarters, was appointed to succeed him.

Meanwhile, Radio Tokyo continues to warn its listeners of a possible Allied invasion of the Japanese homeland.

«The attack might come from the south, along the small islands between Japan and Formosa, or from the east through the Bonin Islands, or from the north along the Kurile Islands,» it said Sunday.

The possibility of Allied landings on the coast of China was considered. Tokyo also discussed an Allied air offensive from the rear position on the China Continent, to meet a force arriving from the Pacific front.

The Japanese are worried over eventual Allied offensives against the Netherlands East Indies, Malaya, French Indo-China, and Burma. On Friday, following the Allied carrier-based air attack on Sumatra, Radio Tokyo reported that an emergency meeting of the military authorities in Borneo took place with the object of «bolstering the spirit of defence.» (OWI)

FRENCH WILL CONTINUE FIGHT AGAINST JAPS

ALGIERS, August 30 — France will continue to fight on against the Japanese until total victory, the French Committee of National Liberation declared in a statement broadcast yesterday over Radio France.

The statement followed reports that Vichy authorities on August 29 had invested Vice-Admiral Decoux, Governor General of Indo-China, with absolute powers permitting him to carry out with complete autonomy his policy of collaboration with Japan, and a Tokyo report of August 25 that Japan considered French Indo-China henceforth an autonomous province of the Nipponese Empire.

The statement declared: « France, at war with Japan since 8 December 1941, and already at grips with her at sea, intends to pursue the struggle at the side of her Allies and with all her available strength, not only until the liberation of her territory, but also until the total crushing of her enemies, in Asia as in Europe. »

U.S.N. AVIATION CELEBRATES 31ST ANNIVERSARY

WASHINGTON, August 30 — United States naval aviation is celebrating its 1st anniversary today with approximately 100 aircraft carriers « in or near action » and the announcement that « blows (against Japan and Germany in the past year) were light compared with the blows we are now prepared to deliver. »

Vice Admiral Aubrey Fitch, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Air, said that the carriers include 14 of the mighty Essex type and nine of the fast powerful Independance class converted from cruisers. More than 70 carriers were commissioned during the past year, and work was started on two or three 45,000-ton battleship type carriers.

Today is also the first anniversary of Task Force 58, which has scourged the Japanese so effectively in the last eight months. Admiral Fitch added that « Task Force 58 was just a sweet summer zephyr, compared to the arrangements of ships, planes, and other weapons — old and new — which are ready to lash out now.»

Admiral Fitch said that U. S. Naval aviators averaged more than four Japanese planes shot down for every U. S. plane lost during the year. The actual score, he said, was more than 2,300 Japanese craft destroyed against 560 Navy planes lost. A high percentage of the American pilots were rescued, he added.

The Admiral said: «Long before another anniversary rolls around, naval aviation will be hurling at least two more new weapons against the foe — a twin-engined fighter and a scouting plane of unmatched speed and range.»

Admiral Fitch warned against expecting an 'early end to the war against Japan, although staggering blows have been, and will be thrown against the enemy.

He paid tribute to the baby flat-tops for winning the Battle of the Atlantic and to the Essex-type carrier which, he said, made possible the bringing of the battle to the doorstep of the enemy in the Pacific.

The U. S. Navy announcement said that with 47,000 Navy and Marine Corps pilots, 34,000 planes, and 213 aviation shore installations, the U. S. Navy has multiplied its air arm seven-fold since 7 December 1941. (OWI)

CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL FOR U.S.A.A.F. SERGEANT

WASHINGTON, August 30 — Technical Sergeant Forrest L. Vosler, radioman in a badly-damaged Flying Fortress, although seriously hurt himself, offered to give his life that his plane might return safely to its base. Today the sergeant is a holder of the highest award of the United States military forces — the Congressional Medal of Honor.

A War Department citation retold today the story of Vosler's heroism. Returning from a mission over Bremen, last December, the sergeant's plane was badly hit by anti-aircraft fire. Vosler was wounded in the face. Shards of metal lodged in his eyes. He was struck in the chest.

Vosler, said the citation, pleaded to be thrown overboard, to lighten the ship, to give it a chance to get home. Shortly afterward, the pilot decided to ditch the ship. Vosler, though all but blinded, repaired his broken radio set by touch alone, and signaled a distress call. The ship came down on the water. There, Vosler held onto a wounded comrade until the other members of the crew could float a dinghy and save both of them. (OWI)

ALLIES BRING 704,000 TONS OF FOOD TO ITALY

ROME, August 30 — Colonel Charles Poletti, Regional Commissioner, Region IV, ACC, in a radio broadcast today stated that the Allies have brought in one year 704,000 tons of food supplies, including 541,000 tons of grain, to help alleviate the food problems of the Italian people.

He pointed out that the painting exhibition now in progress at Palazzo Venezia represents the first step toward the resurrection of the artistic spirit after the apathy caused by the war.

He said it would be a mistake for Italians to abandon themselves to feelings of despondency as a result of the destruction now surrounding them. There is nothing that cannot be remedied by men endowed with energy and good will, he said. (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

PEACE PLAN UNLIKE LEAGUE, ROOSEVELT SAYS

WASHINGTON, August 30 — President Roosevelt, at a press conference, said that in the proposed international peace organization being discussed informally here, there were 50 points on which it differed from the League of Nations.

Among the differences to be found, Mr. Roosevelt, in reply to a question, enumerated cooperative plans for food and finance. He emphasized that the new organization should be very, very different from the League, and more workable.

There must be a small body that can act quickly, he pointed out, after outlining the principles agreed on in the present talks — an assembly of all nations, and a small council and a world court.

If anyone kicks over the traces and violates a frontier, Mr. Roosevelt said, there must be quick action.

The council of the world security organization would have force at its disposal to move immediately in such occurrences, he indicated.

The aim of American officials at the Dumbarton Oaks (Washington) conference now going on, was to achieve an organization that would step on a prospective war in advance, Mr. Roosevelt explained, adding that it should have more power than the old League of Nations.

Previously, Edward Stettinius, U. S. Undersecretary of State, was asked by journalists what would be the rôle of the smaller Nations in the proposed organization.

Stettinius replied that a previous statement of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, was clear, and that all of the delegates working on the problem have had the welfare and equality of the small countries at heart.

Stettinius estimated that the British-Russian-United States conversations would last another two weeks, and that then the Chinese-British-United States talks would start. (OWI)

SOUTH AFRICA PLANS FOR PEACE

CAPE TOWN, August, 30 — The South African supplies conference yesterday outlined the country's plans for the period after the surrender of Germany and during the remaining campaigns in the Far East. Field Marshal Smuts said that South Africa would be called on in still greater measure to do ship repairing and to supply coal; the Union was already one of the biggest coal exporters in the world; the country's program for the next year must be dovetailed into that of the United Nations.

Marshal Smuts added: «We ought to organise our effort so that war production will slide smoothly into peacetime production, and preparations for the post-war era. We should, as far as possible, avoid a sudden break and collapse of employment. Employment must be kept up.»

BIDDLE DENOUNCES GERMAN MONOPOLIES

WASHINGTON, August 30 — The United States Attorney General, Francis Biddle, testifying before the Senate military sub-committee yesterday on cartel arrangements, said that the United Nations should break with German monopolistic firms because they constituted a menace to the world. The purpose would not be to destroy German economic life, but to put its industries where they will no longer constitute a menace to the civilised world.

GERMANS ON ISLE OF MAN PREFER TO REMAIN

DOUGLAS, ISLE OF MAN, August 30 — Two hundred of the 600 German internees here who are ready for repatriation have announced that they prefer to stay behind. The other 400 will leave here this weekend. The 200 remaining guests have chosen to stay here where they have food and safety. (Reuter)

CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL FOR U.S.A.A.F. SERGEANT

WASHINGTON, August 30 — Technical Sergeant Forrest L. Vosler, radioman in a badly-damaged Flying Fortress, although seriously hurt himself, offered to give his life that his plane might return safely to its base. Today the sergeant is a holder of the highest award of the United States military forces — the Congressional Medal of Honor.

A War Department citation retold today the story of Vosler's heroism. Returning from a mission over Bremen, last December, the sergeant's plane was badly hit by anti-aircraft fire. Vosler was wounded in the face. Shards of metal lodged in his eyes. He was struck in the chest.

Vosler, said the citation, pleaded to be thrown overboard, to lighten the ship, to give it a chance to get home. Shortly afterward, the pilot decided to ditch the ship. Vosler, though all but blinded, repaired his broken radio set by touch alone, and signaled a distress call. The ship came down on the water. There, Vosler held onto a wounded comrade until the other members of the crew could float a dinghy and save both of them. (OWI)

ALLIES BRING 704,000 TONS OF FOOD TO ITALY

ROME, August 30 — Colonel Charles Poletti, Regional Commissioner, Region IV, ACC, in a radio broadcast today stated that the Allies have brought in one year 704,000 tons of food supplies, including 541,000 tons of grain, to help alleviate the food problems of the Italian people.

He pointed out that the painting exhibition now in progress at Palazzo Venezia represents the first step toward the resurrection of the artistic spirit after the apathy caused by the war.

He said it would be a mistake for Italians to abandon themselves to feelings of desperadency as a result of the destruction now surrounding them. There is nothing that cannot be remedied by men endowed with energy and good will, he said. (UNN)

DELEGATES TO STUDY WORKERS' MOVEMENTS

ROME, August 30 — Walter Schevenel, Secretary General of the International Trade Union Federation, has joined other labor delegates from Britain and the United States here, for research on labor problems. One of their first aims will be to ascertain the objectives of workers' movements in Italy, and to offer them advice. (UNN)

POPE RECEIVES ATTLEE

VATICAN CITY, August 30 — Pope Pius XII today received the Rt Hon. C. R. Attlee, Lord President of the Council and Deputy Prime Minister of Great Britain.

Mr. Attlee was accompanied to the Vatican by Sir Osborne Francis D'Arcy Godolphin, Minister of Great Britain to the Holy See.

After his audience with the Pope, Mr. Attlee presented his staff.

As already announced, the Pope will address the world in a radio broadcast on Friday, September 1, on the fifth anniversary of the outbreak of the war. The address will be made in Italian, but will be re-broadcast in English, Polish, French, German, Spanish, and Portuguese. (PRO)

Mr. Roosevelt said, there must be quick action.

The council of the world security organization would have force at its disposal 'to move immediately in such occurences,' he indicated.

The aim of American officials at the Dumbarton Oaks (Washington) conference now going on, was to achieve an organization that would step on a prospective war in advance, Mr. Roosevelt explained, adding that it should have more power than the old League of Nations.

Previously, Edward Stettinius, U. S. Undersecretary of State, was asked by journalists what would be the rôle of the smaller Nations in the proposed organization.

Stettinius replied that a previous statement of Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, was clear, and that all of the delegates working on the problem have had the welfare and equality of the small countries at heart.

Stettinius estimated that the British-Russian-United States conversations would last another two weeks, and that then the Chinese-British-United States talks would start. (OWI)

SOUTH AFRICA PLANS FOR PEACE

CAPE TOWN, August 30 — The South African supplies conference yesterday outlined the country's plans for the period after the surrender of Germany and during the remaining campaigns in the Far East. Field Marshal Smuts said that South Africa would be called on in still greater measure to do ship repairing and to supply coal; the Union was already one of the biggest coal exporters in the world; the country's program for the next year must be dovetailed into that of the United Nations.

Marshal Smuts added: « We ought to organise our effort so that war production will slide smoothly into peacetime production, and preparations for the post-war era. We should, as far as possible, avoid a sudden break and collapse of employment. Employment must be kept up. »

PHILIPPINE COMMISSIONER ADDRESSES HOUSE

WASHINGTON, August 30 (UNN) — In his first speech before the House of Representatives, Colonel Carlos P. Romulo, new resident commissioner of the Philippines, stated that the time had come when « at last we can see the way clear to the Philippines. »

Colonel Romulo spoke on the 28th anniversary of the passage of the Jones Act, which set in motion the machinery for eventual Philippine independence — which, he said, the Filipinos « earned in 1941 when they offered their lives beside Americans in the blackest hour that America has known. »

Stating that he spoke for 17 million Filipinos, Colonel Romulo said:

« The Jones Act was our victory. You let us win it upon this floor. It was a pledge made, and America has kept that pledge. »

NORWEGIANS DESTROY NAZI PETROLEUM STOCKS

LONDON, August 30 — Norwegian Patriots recently destroyed tank installations on the Oslo Fjord and set fire to the oil stores in Drammen, at an estimated cost to the Germans of 350,000 litres of gasoline and oil, Exchange Telegraph said yesterday, quoting Norwegian circles in London.

Near Son, patriots destroyed many thousands of tons of diesel oil and of oil stored for the use of U-boats. At Skien, they ruined a petrol store by putting tar into it.

The Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported that Norwegian Patriots recently blew up the Oslo street-car depot and destroyed between 80 and 100 aero-engines, a number of planes, and a million litres of fuel oil stored there by the Nazis.

«Despite an especially strong guard,» the Swedish paper said, «the Patriots succeeded in entering the cellar of the depot, where they placed their charge of dynamite. The whole floor was blown away and a huge flame rose over the building. The fire raged more than 24 hours, and the damage was total, but it is known that no Norwegians were killed or wounded.»

NAZIS SEIZE HOSTAGES IN ALSACE

WASHINGTON, August 30 — The Swiss newspaper Basler Nachrichten, in a dispatch received today, said that the Nazis had begun seizing hostages in Alsace to «blackmail» the population into inactivity,» and that «several hundreds» are now being held.

The despatch added: «In towns and villages along the Swiss border up to Strasbourg, persons who had enjoyed a good reputation with the people are constantly being arrested, especially doctors, lawyers, priests, and merchants.

«Not all are people who can be regarded as oppositionists, but include also those whose activities up to now served the Germans.» (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 30 — Today's communique.

Navy:

Reporting on August 28, the naval commander off the southern coast of France said that various parties of enemy troops trying to escape in boats from the occupied coast have been rounded up by naval forces and made prisoners of war.

Minesweeping activity continued in the assault area.

In the Adriatic on August 28, in support of the Army, one of His Majesty's destroyers carried out successful bombardment in the Pesaro area.

Allied Armies in Italy:

Eighth Army's advance toward the Goth Line on a broad front continues. In the Adriatic sector, all the high ground south of the River Foglia has been secured after stiff fighting and patrols have reached the river in many places.

In the upper Arno Valley, Ribbiena, from which the road leads directly up to the Goth Line some five miles beyond, has been occupied by our troops. Advances in the mountainous country east and west of this town have been made up to three miles on a broad front into country recently occupied by the enemy.

Eighth Army troops thrusting forward north of Pontassieve are now nearly five miles beyond the town, and the enemy has been forced to make a further withdrawal in this sector.

Active patrolling has been maintained on the 5th Army

Other forces attacked rail communications in northern Italy, Hungary, and Yugoslavia.

Tactical aircraft continued their attacks on roads and bridges in northern Italy and on enemy transport in the Rhône Valley. Other aircraft attacked enemy targets in the Italian battle area, bridges and road and rail transport in Yugoslavia and Greece, and shipping and harbor installations in the Gulf of Genoa and along the eastern Adriatic coast.

In these operations, 12 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 21 of ours are missing. One of our aircraft is missing from night operations on August 28 - 29.

MAAF Flew approximately 2,000 sorties.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 30 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied forces continuing their sweep beyond Paris have crossed the Aisne and Marne rivers in the upper Marne valley. Mopping up is in progress in Vitry le François and our troops have reached Marson and Lepine. Other units are less then one mile south of Chalons, on the west side of the river. Chateau Thierry, on the Marne, has been occupied, and our armored units have moved north to take Soissons and established a bridgehead across the Aisne at Pont Arcy, 14 miles to the east. Other troops are advancing through the area between the Marne and the Aisne north of Meaux and Chateau Thierry.

In the Paris area, advances have been made through the northeastern outskirts of the city beyond Le Bourget and Montmorency, and further west elements have cleared the Foret de Saint Germain and moved northward to a point less than two miles south of Pontoise.

The bridgehead across the Seine in the vicinity of Mantes-Gassicourt has been further enlarged to the north and to the east beyond Meulan. Contact was made with troops pushed on to the town of Elreganty, and from there to the village of Longchamps.

The Paris-Rouen road was also cut near the village of Ecouis by troops from the Louviers bridgehead. In the evening, contact was established between these two bridgeheads.

Southeast of Rouen, our forces advanced in the face of persistent opposition and captured the village of Boos, some five miles from the center of Rouen. In the Caudebec area, fighting was heavy, but the forest of Brotonne was cleared, and the whole of this loop on the river is now in our hands.

In Brittany, hard fighting continues at Brest as Allied forces close in slowly on the port.

Air:

Air operations yesterday were restricted by the weather. Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked enemy rail and road movement over a wide area in the Low Countries, western Germany, and in France as far south as Lyons.

Large numbers of locomotives, railway cars, and motor transport were successfully attacked, and 20 enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground near Brussels. Six of our aircraft are missing. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 30 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the sector south of Turin, Patriots carried on effective and intense activity against the Nazi-Fascists. Strong German attacks were repulsed and the enemy suffered heavy losses. Patriots of the same sector destroyed a considerable number of armored cars and caused much damage to railway bridges and German communications, including the Padua-Vicenza railway.

The Nazi-Fascists did not succeed in their attempts to break the resistance of the Garibaldi Brigades in the northern Apennines, in order to protect enemy rearguards from Patriot attacks. Large-scale German attempts at mopping up Patriots in the province of Parma and in the Ossola Valley resulted in failure.

On July 29, Patriots occupied Monte Cusna and Monte Prampa, in the Carpineti sector, between the Crostala and Secchia valleys.

During the period August 9 to 18, clashes took place between groups of Patriots and Fascist Black Brigades, who are under the direct control of the Fascist leaders. Both sides suffered losses.

It may now be revealed that the Genoa strike took place June 9, when the assassination of Bruno Buozzi was learned. Silvio Parodi, Major of Genoa, had consented to 20% of the workers being deported to Germany. He was consequently executed by Patriots. Ventura, Saletta, Sbarbaro, and Motta, all of them Fascists, were also executed. Basile is now the chief collaborator of the Germans in Genoa. The insurrectionist spirit there is kept alive by the clandestine Socialist newspapers Riscossione, L'Operaio and Il Partigiano, the latter representing the Matteotti Brigade.

Alfredo Magnolfi, the boxer, who had placed himself at the service of the SS and was responsible for killing and torturing Patriots, was executed by the Patriot Tribunal of Florence. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 30 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Our divisions having frustrated in fierce fighting up to seven times enemy attacks launched from his Seine bridgeheads northwest of Paris, withdrew to new positions farther northeast, according to orders received.

The town Rouen was evacuated after the complete destruction of the port installations and all objects important from a military angle. Between Paris and Reims, strong U. S. forces attacking in a northerly direction were stopped in grim fighting. In the southern part of Soissons, fierce street fighting is in progress. South of the Marne, motorized enemy units advancing eastward reached the region of Chalons-sur-Marne, where grim fighting rages. In the Rhône Valley, the troops covering our flanks repelled numerous enemy attacks launched from an easterly direction. A big number of enemy tanks was destroyed. In the Alps, west of the French-Italian frontier, the town Briançon was recaptured in grim fighting with French terrorists and U. S. reconnaissance forces.

In the night of August 30, west of Dieppe, motor assault boats sank an enemy destroyer. In the same waters, armed ferryboats and security vessels of the Navy destroyed a British destroyer of the Hunt class, which broke apart after a heavy explosion.

Baranov, repeated Bolshevist attacks remained unsuccessful. Northeast of Warsaw, as well as between the Bug and Narew, our troops stemmed fresh Soviet attacks, supported by tanks and bombers, in fierce tank battles.

In the northern sector, west of Modon and northwest of Dorpat, enemy attacks were smashed and heavy losses inflicted on the Soviets.

In the night, troop concentrations and Soviet assembly areas in the Modon and Dorpat sector were attacked by our fighter and night bombers. USAAF bombers attacked the towns Maehrisch-Ostrau and Oderberg, as well as Hungarian territory. In the night, the British Air Force, violating Swedish neutrality, made terror attacks on Stettin and Koenigsberg. In addition, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin and Hamburg. Air defense forces brought down 82 four-engined bombers in the course of these attacks. (Radio Berlin)

AMERICAN FORCES REACH THE RHONE 54 MILES NORTH OF AVIGNON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 28 — American forces of the 7th Army have reached the Rhône River near Montelimar, more than 80 miles from its mouth, and have inflicted heavy losses on the retreating columns of the battered German 19th Army, struggling to make its escape northward past other American forces 60 miles to the northeast.

Nearly 15,000 German troops, including elements of the 11th Panzer and 198th Infantry divisions, are pouring through the narrow valley bottleneck formed by the Dauphiné Alps, under heavy Allied air attack, in desperate efforts to escape the threat of entrapment by Americans and French Forces of the Interior at Grenoble, to the east of the Rhône.

These German forces, consisting of scattered elements of at least five divisions, have been engaged in a series of savage rear-guard actions for the past several days, striving to ward off the American attacks at their east flank as they withdrew along Highway 7, on the east bank of the Rhône.

MITCHELLS BOMB RHONE BRIDGES

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 28 — Mitchell bombers made their second-longest flight in the Mediterranean theater today to bomb three Rhône River bridges north of Lyon and behind the retreating German 19th Army, it was announced here this afternoon.

The approach of one of the spans, 20 miles north of Lyon, was completely blown up and two other spans at the city's outskirts 15 miles to the north were well covered by the bomb pattern, it was said.

No planes were lost from the long flight.

Up to 750 heavy bombers today struck at two oil refineries and communications targets in Austria, Hungary, and Italy.

For the fourth successive day, bombers of the 15th USAAF met with only slight enemy fighter opposition, although they penetrated into areas which heretofore have been heavily defended by the Luftwaffe.

The two oil refineries hit were a synthetic plant at Moshlerbaum, 22 miles northwest of Vienna, which was attacked by Flying Fortresses; and the Szony refinery on the Danube, 50 miles northwest of Budapest, where Liberators carried out the mission. Both targets had been previously attacked.

Rail yards at Miskolcz in Hungary, 100 miles east of Budapest at a junction of lines leading to Rumania; and bridges at Avisio and over the Ora River on the Brenner Pass line, and over the Tisza River at Szolnok, 50 miles south of Budapest, were also attacked.

Medium bombers also attacked the central railroad bridge at Pontremoli, 18 miles north of La Spezia and 25 miles behind the enemy Goth Line in northwestern Italy. An airdrome at Villa Franca di Verona, 10 miles southwest of Verona, a railbridge west of Parma and the Ligurian coast harbors of Asvona, Imperia, and Monaco were also bombed today. (PRO)

WAR FRONTS

AMERICAN FORCES REACH THE RHONE 54 MILES NORTH OF AVIGNON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 28 — American forces of the 7th Army have reached the Rhône River near Montelimar, more than 80 miles from its mouth, and have inflicted heavy losses on the retreating columns of the battered German 19th Army, struggling to make its escape northward past other American forces 60 miles to the northeast.

Nearly 15,000 German troops, including elements of the 11th Panzer and 198th Infantry divisions, are pouring through the narrow valley bottleneck formed by the Dauphine Alps, under heavy Allied air attack, in desperate efforts to escape the threat of entrapment by Americans and French Forces of the Interior at Grenoble, to the east of the Rhône.

These German forces, consisting of scattered elements of at least five divisions, have been engaged in a series of savage rear-guard actions for the past several days, striving to ward off the American attacks at their east flank as they withdrew along Highway 7, on the east bank of the Rhône.

Withdrawal Harassed

With the Rhône River bridges smashed behind them, the Germans' withdrawal has become critical. At least a 40-mile stretch of the Rhône corridor must be traversed before the threat to the east flank of these forces can be considered removed, and meanwhile they are being slashed from the air in savage attacks. Allied aircraft have played a «telling part» in the American thrust into the Rhône Valley, and in the resulting disorganization of the retreating German forces, it was officially stated here. The cleanup of enemy resistance in Marseilles and Toulon was still continuing yesterday, with more than 7,000 prisoners taken in and near the two coastal cities, which have been torn by street fighting now for nearly a week since their occupation by French forces of General de Lattre de Tassigny.

Enemy resistance in Marseilles is now confined almost entirely to the harbor area, it was said. Marauder and Mitchell bombers of the Tactical Air Forces swarmed over Ratonneau and Pomegues islands in the harbour in the fourth successive day's attack yesterday to deliver a «knock-out blow» against these heavily fortified island strongholds.

Fires and explosions raged through the fortresses as the bombers struck heavy guns which had been firing into the city, and set off the German ammunition cache on the larger island.

On the eastern edge of the Riviera bridgehead, American forward elements have advanced to the Var River, northwest of Nice, at several points, it was announced. No particulars were given of the American thrust, which would

CARRIER-BORNE AIRCRAFT ATTACK PADANG

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HQ, August 28 — Carrier-borne aircraft of the Allied Eastern Fleet have again attacked the Japanese-held island of Padang, on the western coast of Sumatra in the Netherlands Indies.

Direct hits were observed on rail yards, warehouses, wharves, coaling jetties, air strips, and the large cement works. Several Jap ships were set afire. A cloud of smoke and pillars of flame rising a thousand feet into the air obscured the target area as the planes returned to their sea base. One Allied plane was shot down. (FWB)

VERNON BRIDGEHEAD EXTENDED

SHAEF, August 28 — The Vernon bridgehead across the Seine River is now five miles long and three miles deep, it was reported late tonight.

The Canadians hold a nine mile stretch on the east bank between Pont de L'Arche and Elbeuf.

At the points where the Germans are trying to scramble across the river in an effort to escape encirclement, the area is about 200 yards wide. (Reuter)

600 MARSEILLES COLLABORATIONISTS ARRESTED

ALGIERS, August 28 — About 600 collaborationists have been arrested in Marseilles. These include the Vichyite prefect, one senator, two members of the Chamber of Deputies, and a newspaper editor.

The food situation in Marseilles is serious, and the Government is taking steps to have supplies brought from neighboring ports. Present stocks of grain would enable a daily supply of 150 grams of bread per head to be made to the population of the Riviera, but it is hoped to improve this, as little damage has been done to the railways.

With the exception of Toulon and Marseilles, there has been on the whole little damage to property in the southern zone. (Reuter)

CAPTURE OF MEAUX THREATENS ALL GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS IN FRANCE

SHAEF, August 28 — With the capture of Meaux, and the crossing of the Marne River, the American 3d Army is now within striking distance of Germany, and its position between the Seine and the Marne valleys threatens the remaining German communications through France to the Reich. This major offensive appears to be directed to the east and northeast and opens a drive on the historic Marne battlefield, where a German push on Paris was halted 30 years ago.

To the southeast, where American troops are less than 122 miles from the German border in the Saar, great strides have been made. A late dispatch tonight placed American troops northeast of Troyes on the main road approaching Arcis-sur-Aube. Other units of General Patton's rapidly advancing 3d Army are in the vicinity of Romilly-sur-Seine. Forward dumps have been established for their armored divisions, so the battle of pursuit toward the Rhine may get into swing. The right wing can now race forward, confident that strong infantry forces are coming up from behind to consolidate their lines.

65,000 Prisoners Taken

In the Seine River bend, between Troyes and Romilly, Allied troops are annihilating the remaining German pockets, some of which contain as many as 1,000 troops. Since the landings on the Normandy beachhead, the American 3d Army has taken 65,000 prisoners, and has killed 16,000 enemy troops.

To the north, a new Allied bridgehead was established last night across the Seine River east of Louviers, 14 miles south of Rouen. There was apparently little opposition, but the Allied troops met machine-gun fire from hidden German positions.

The Allies have now established another area for a major German defeat in the three loops of the western banks of the Seine. The loop traps are east, west, and south of Rouen, in which elements of three German infantry and two tank divisions are enclosed. There has been no attempt to help or reinforce these troops. All German reinforcements appear to have been switched to the territory southwest of Paris in an effort to meet the Allied drive which threatens to outflank the whole Le Havre Peninsula and the flying bomb coast.

Canadian armored elements are now across the Seine, supporting infantry units which have crossed the Seine between Elbeuf and Pont de l'Arche in large numbers for the past 30 hours.

Without aerial reconnaissance, the Germans are fumbling blindly for Allied troops spilling across the Seine. German soldiers, who two hours before had been in rear billets, were fighting for their lives against confident American and British columns who overrame scattered German rearguards wherever they met them.

The crossings at Louviers and at Vernon were the opening wedges in an encircling move about Rouen and to the north where the Germans were reported by Allied airmen One blew up, and three others were thought to have sunk. A fifth was repeatedly hit and was driven ashore.

In the Brittany Peninsula, gains of 1,000 yards have been made by American forces advancing on the German garrison at Brest. (OWI - Reuter- BBC)

GERMAN TRANSPORT FACILITIES BLASTED

LONDON, August 28 — German air, land, and sea transportation facilities were the targets of about 400 American fighters and fighter-bombers today. Bomb-carrying Thunderbolts, Mustangs, and Lightnings flew thousands of sorties and bombed and strafed marshalling yards, airdromes, trains, barges, motor vehicles, radio and flak emplacements, power stations, tanks, and buildings. They ranged over France, Belgium, Holland and Germany in search of their objectives. Fleeing German troops in France were attacked from the air.

These daylight attacks were the sequel to similar devastating blows dealt on German transport facilities in Holland last night, and a Mosquito raid on Mannheim.

With claims not yet fully checked, this morning's missions resulted in more than 200 locomotives being shot up and disabled, and approximately 200 railroad cars destroyed, plus an additional 1,000 damaged. Nearly 300 motor vehicles were destroyed or damaged.

Associated Press said the planes also exploded an ammunition train carrying many tons of explosives, near Budenville, with a blast which jarred the whole countryside.

Allied Air Forces which have flown 8,500 sorties in large scale assaults in the past four days, yesterday sent an estimated 2,500 four-engined bombers winging over enemy targets which were bombed with nearly 10,000 tons of explosives.

Yesterday's achievements by Allied planes included the destruction of, or damage to, 191 locomotives, 1,100 railroad cars, 700 motor vehicles, 29 barges, and 44 field guns in France.

Late yesterday the RAF twice attacked a large concrete structure in the Pas de Calais which was believed to be connected with the threatened German use of long-range rockets, said the BBC today.

A British Air Ministry communique, reviewing the flying-bomb attacks against England, said 450 bombs were launched in the week ending at 0600 hours today, making a total of about 7,700 since the attacks began.

Around noon today, bombs again fell on London and southern England, but the attacks were limited and short, according to an Associated Press account. This report noted that some bombs came from new directions, which suggested that the Germans are using sites newly-constructed or shifted from other locations. (OWI-Reuter)

R.A.F. MINE STETTIN SHIP CANAL

LONDON, August 28 — The Stettin Ship Canal, a main supply route for the German armies defending East Prussia, has been blocked as a result of mines laid by the RAF. The mine-laying operation was carried out by a force of Lancasters of RAF Bomber Command on the night of August 18, the British Air Ministry revealed tonight.

It is now considered certain that, as a result of this mine-laying operation, all shipping in the port of Stettin was completely immobilized and vital supplies held up, the Air Ministry News Service said.

Stettin is the main port of entry for raw materials from Scandinavia. It is significant that the Swedes have now refused to underwrite war risk for their mercantile marine trading in German waters, the News Service added.

The mines were dropped on the Stettin ship canal while other aircraft of Bomber Command were devastating large areas of the port of Stettin. A force of Lancasters, detached from the main bomber stream as it crossed the coastline, went down to a few hundred feet to lay mines in the canal. Severe anti-aircraft defense met the bombers from German

Canadian armored elements are now across the Seine, supporting infantry units which have crossed the Seine between Elbeuf and Pont de L'Arche in large numbers for the past 36 hours.

Without aerial reconnaissance, the Germans are fumbling blindly for Allied troops spilling across the Seine. German soldiers, who two hours before had been in rest billets, were fighting for their lives against confident American and British columns who overcame scattered German rearguards wherever they met them.

The crossings at Louviers and at Vernon were the opening wedges in an encircling move about Rouen and to the north where the Germans were reported by Allied airmen to be fleeing before the advancing Allied forces.

The German pocket west of the Seine continues to narrow. A late dispatch from headquarters tonight stated that reconnaissance units have reached Quillebeuf, 14 miles northeast of Honfleur at the extreme left flank of the Allied line. The towns of Rouzat, directly east of Pont Audemer, and Bourneville, northeast of Pont Audemer on the main road leading into the Forêt Bretonne, have been occupied. The pocket has now been reduced to a depth of four miles, and the Germans inside it have been practically cut into two groups.

German forces attempting to make the hazardous crossing are undergoing incessant pounding from Allied planes using bombs, machine guns, cannon, and rockets. The only escape route left to them is the Forêt Bretonne, and that is under heavy artillery fire.

Reconnaissance planes report German rail movement westward from the Low Countries toward Le Havre and the Seine, but it has not been determined whether they carry reinforcements or are for evacuation purposes.

German naval units, trying to escape from their isolated ports, ran into British and American light naval forces early yesterday. Five heavily armed enemy vessels were torpedoed.

Associated Press said the planes also exploded an ammunition train carrying many tons of explosives, near Budonville, with a blast which jarred the whole countryside.

PATROL CRAFT GET ANOTHER NAZI SHIP

LONDON, August 28 — For the fourth successive night, Allied patrol craft operating in the English Channel have intercepted and sunk German shipping seeking to escape from ports in northern France.

The Admiralty said tonight that one supply ship was sent to the bottom and another was left in a sinking condition after a short, fierce engagment off the coast of Normandy at an early hour this morning. German escort ships were damaged in the engagement. The Allied attackers, said the Admiralty, returned with one man slightly wounded. (OWI)

F.F.I. ACTIVITY CONTINUES

ALGIERS, August 28 — French Forces of the Interior have liberated Romans, northwest of Valence, and the aerodrome of Chabreuil, according to a communique issued yesterday from General Cochet's headquarters.

The FFI took 100 prisoners near Valence, where a German column lost 110 dead, many wounded, a machine gun, and four lorries, the communique added.

An enemy column of 300 men, 25 vehicles, and five cannon surrendered in the Department of Gard, after having lost 55 killed and 100 wounded.

The communique reported the departments of Aude and Pyrenees almost cleared of the Germans.

Patriots attacking garrisons at Cahors and Castelsarrasin, in the southwest Pyrenees, put 500 men out of action in five days and wiped out the garrison of Oloron, which was trying to reach Spain. They took 96 prisoners on August 24 in Somport Valley.

FFI losses are much smaller than those of the enemy, the communique said. (PWB)

BRITAIN-ITALY AIR ROUTE SHORTENED

LONDON, August 28 — Aircraft will soon fly from Britain to Italy by way of Paris and Marseilles. The restoration of the old route will cut the distance flown from 3,000 miles to 1,000 miles, said the BBC today.

Up to now, the journey has taken about two days, and involved five separate hops. British Overseas Airways have arranged for this service as soon as Le Bourget and other airports are ready for use. (BBC)

12 NAZI DIVISIONS ANNIHILATED BY RED ARMY

MOSCOW, August 28 — Twelve German divisions encircled by overwhelming Russian forces which last week swept through and beyond the Moldavian capital of Kishinev, in eastern Rumania, have been annihilated, the Russian communique said tonight.

Previous reports from Russian correspondents said that at least 100,000 Germans were fighting desperately within the trap southwest of Kishinev, and that they were running short of supplies, and were being subjected to a constant mauling by Russian artillery and aircraft.

Preceding the communique, two orders of the day issued by Marshal Stalin disclosed the capture of three more Rumanian towns — and the establishment of a bridgehead area across the Danube.

The bridgehead was obtained by units of the Russian Black Sea Fleet which stormed and captured the port of

Tulcea, German fortress on the right bank of the Danube about 40 miles east of fallen Galatz. At the same time, other fleet units captured the Black Sea port and German naval base of Sulina, on one of the outlets of the Danube Delta.

In this area, Russian troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front took another 5,000 prisoners in today's advance. On the 2d Ukrainian Front to the west, another 6,000 Germans laid down their arms.

Reuter said tonight that the Red Army advance into Rumania had pushed to within 50 miles of the Ploesti oil fields. «With both pillars of the Galatz gap gone,» said Reuter, «masses of Soviet troops, tanks and guns are swinging through the foothills of the Transylvanian Alps in a sweeping advance toward Bucharest.» The Rumanians said they had overcome all German resistance in Bucharest itself, but that fighting between German and Rumanian troops continued north of the capital.

The German military commentator, Colonel Ernst von Hammer, said today that Russian cavalry had crossed the Hungarian border over the Carpathians. Presumably he meant that Russian forces had advanced farther into that Transylvanian Rumanian territory which the Nazis forced Rumania to cede to Hungary. The German colonel also said that a new Russian offensive had begun on the Finnish front, north of Lake Ladoga. There was no confirmation from Moscow sources.

In Warsaw, fierce fighting continued in the streets, according to a communique from Polish General Bor's headquarters. Northeast of the Polish capital, the Russians captured the town of Ostra-Nazovetsky, important highway junction south of Lomza. It was on this front, according to German reports Saturday, that the Russians opened a new offensive over a 50-mile salient, in the direction of the Polish Corridor.

Of the Baltic front, the Russian communique tonight said only that more towns in the Valga area have fallen to the Red Army. One of the objectives was described as a rail junction. (Reuter-BBC)

HULL ON RUMANIAN, BULGARIAN ARMISTICE

WASHINGTON, August 28 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull told a press conference today that the United States would be represented by both military and diplomatic officials in Moscow at the signing of the armistice terms with Rumania.

He said the State Department had been kept advised, and was familiar with the steps leading up to the present Rumanian situation, in which the Soviet authorities were primarily taking the initiative. He added that he hopes very soon to give details as they exist, when the matter assumes definite shape.

Asked if terms had been handed to Bulgaria, Hull said it would be found that the Allied forces were prepared for all such steps as the occasion arises. He added that Bulgarian officials had been in touch with different Allied Governments, and that the United States had been informed of progress, mainly through Soviet officials and through the European Advisory Commission. RUMANIANS FIGHTING GERMANS

LONDON, August 28 — A Rumanian General Staff communique issued today said Rumanian troops yesterday captured the village of Ottopeni and an airfield about eight miles north of Bucharest.

Heavy fighting was reported still to be going on north of the capital.

Rumanian troops took more than 800 German prisoners at Brasov and Tesiu, as well as large quantities of war material and a depot of medical supplies.

The disarming of German troops is proceeding in the rest of Dobrudja, Muntenia, and Oltenia, the communique added. (PWB)

ISTANBUL, August 28 — The American and British Ambassadors and the Bulgarian Minister to Turkey were last night reported to be in Istanbul by the Associated Press.

The dispatch said: «The United States Ambassador (to Turkey), Laurence A. Steinhardt, hurried here after spending only two days in Ankara following a 36-hour trip from New York.» (OWI)

RUMANIAN SURRENDER EXPLAINED BY PRISONER

ISTANBUL, August 28 — Lieut. Col. Gardine De Chastelaigne, the British officer whose return here after having been a prisoner in Rumania was reported yesterday, said today that Rumania's surrender was an almost direct result of the Allied victory in France.

The colonel, an expert on Rumanian affairs, parachuted into Rumania on a secret mission more than six months ago.

An Associated Press dispatch, based upon a written statement of Colonel De Chastelaigne, asserted that the Allied break-through in France had given the lie to Hitler's promises of aid to Rumania.

Antonescu last saw Hitler on August 4. He won Antonescu to continuing the war by promising that the armored divisions moved from Rumania to the Lwow region would be returned, and by assuring Antonescu that Germany had enough reserves to stabilize both the eastern and western fronts, the British officer reported.

On August 22, Michael and his advisers decided that the Allied victory in France had proved Hitler's promises and assurance completely false. The King then took matters into his own hands and ordered the arrest of Antonescu while the latter was arguing with the King in the royal palace.

De Chastelaigne added that King Michael then decoyed other members of the cabinet to the palace for a conference, and had them all locked up.

The German Minister, Baron von Killinger, was called to the palace the next day and informed of Rumania's decision three hours before the King's broadcast proclamation.

Late that evening the new Premier, General Sanatescu, gave the chief of the German military mission to Rumania, General Hansen, two hours to order German troops to evacuate communication centers, and to clear the Bucharest-Ploesti Road.

De Chastelaigne said that Hansen indicated assent and left the palace with the King. The Rumanians, however, anticipated German treachery, and troops were stationed at Ploesti, where there were German armored units. Apparently this produced the battle north of Bucharest, won by the Rumanians.

Michael Hero of the Day

Corroborating De Chastelaigne's reports, the Istanbul correspondent of the London Times said today that King Michael has emerged as the hero of the day.

With far more determination and maturity than might have been expected from a young man of 22, he succeeded in a few hours and in a masterful way in extricating his country from the impossible position into which it had sunk through years of misgovernment, The Times correspondent reported.

Pointing out that the new Rumanian government is supported by virtually all political parties, The Times dispatch added concerning King Michael: «Today he is the idol of the people.»

Premier Sanatescu told his people over Radio Bucharest today: «Soviet forces are coming to our country as friends, to liberate Rumania from the Germans.»

Also on Radio Bucharest today, Konstantin Bratianu, Liberal Party leader, a minister without portfolio in the new cabinet, urged the people to take up arms against «all those who endeavor to prevent democracy's victory.»

HUNGARIANS URGED TO OVERTHROW GOVERNMENT

LONDON, August 28 — Pro-Allied Hungarians yesterday called on the last big Axis satellite in Hitler's collapsing Balkan front to quit the war, as the Germans strove desperately to keep weakened Hungary in line by rushing defense construction workers to her frontiers, the Associated Press reported today.

The Free Hungarian Council in London issued an appeal to all Hungarians to overthrow their government and turn their weapons against the Germans. The Council manifesto was drafted under the chairmanship of Michael Karolyi, who was president of the Hungarian Republic for a brief period in 1918, before that regime was supplanted by Bela Kun's Communist government.

A Moscow dispatch said the Germans have rushed workers to Hungary's borders, especially Transylvania, where they are particularly vulnerable, because of Rumania's sudden declaration of war against Germany.

GOVERNMENT PREPARES RETURN TO GREECE

CAIRO, August 28 — The Greek Prime Minister, George Papandreou, was quoted by Radio Cairo yesterday as stating that the Greek Government is ready to go to Greece with the first Allied forces, in order to establish the Government on Greek soil.

The Greek cabinet at a meeting yesterday discussed political and military measures to be taken in the Balkans, according to Reuter. Reports from Balkan countries were laid before the meeting.

M. Papandreou, who presided, gave a detailed account of his recent conversations in Italy with Prime Minister Churchill. (Reuter)

POLISH SPEARHEADS REACH ARZILLA RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 28 — Polish spearheads, thrusting in advance of the deepening bridgehead established by troops of the 8th Army north of the Metauro River, have reached the Arzilla River, within five miles of the Adriatic port of Pesaro, it was announced here today.

In advances of up to six miles, troops of the 8th Army have captured four inland towns and have occupied the outskirts of the small port of Fano, as German forces withdrew behind the line of the Arzilla River crossing the Adriatic coastal corridor. The German 4th Parachute Division, held in its position by heavy Allied artillery fire and then struck by the advance of Polish and other forces, suffered heavy casualties.

East of Florence, in the center of the Italian front, 8th Army forces, in advances up to three miles, have pushed north and east of Pontassieve, important highway junction town at the confluence of the Sieve and the Arno rivers.

Although these forces had met increased enemy artillery and anti-tank fire and were encountering extensive demolitions, they had penetrated to points four miles north of Pontassieve and six miles to the east before the momentum of their thrust had been slowed. Troops of the 8th Army now hold the summit of Monte della Mattera, dominating the whole narrow Adriatic coastal corridor to Pesaro and beyond, and yesterday advanced to occupy the village of Monbaroccio to the north and features to the northeast and northwest. The troops of the 8th Army have by-passed the village of Saltara, 8½ miles southwest of Fano, to capture Carlocelo, a mile to the northwest, and also occupied Possimbrone, 10 miles southwest of Fano, and Isola del Piano, three miles north of this inland road center. Fano, seven miles southeast of Pesaro, was reported clear of the enemy, although 8th Army forces had penetrated to the town's outskirts.

Extensive Minefields

At the inland end of the advance along the Adriatic coastal corridor, German forces are employing extensive minefields, booby-traps, and demolitions to cover their retreat.

In the upper Arno Valley, leading elements of the 8th Army were reported in contact with the enemy at Bibbiena, 11 miles north of Arezzo.

No change was reported in the Apennines positions east of the Tiber River, although patrol forces pushed three miles north of Apecchio, eight miles east of the river.

German forces maintained small arms, machine-gun, and artillery fire both east and west of Florence, and, according to the official reports, showed "Nervousness" about 8th Army intentions west of this city.

There was little to report on the 5th Army front.

FIVE ITALIAN FARMERS CITED FOR HEROISM

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 28 — Five Italian farmers, who plunged into the burning wreckage of a crashed Allied bomber to rescue five of its crew, have been cited for their heroism by Brigadier General C. H. Beverly, Commanding General of the 15th Air Force Service Command, it was announced here today.

The men were working in a wheat field when the bomber, crippled in an attack against enemy-occupied territory, crashed nearby.

The Italian farmers ran to the wreck and, although the plane, a B-24 Liberator, was in flames and ammunition was exploding, wrenched open a door to drag out five of the trapped and injured crewmen.

ALLIES IMPOSE CLAMP ON AEGEAN GARRISONS

CAIRO, August 28 — Combined Allied air, sea, and land operations have clamped one of the tightest blockades of history around scattered German garrisons in the Aegean islands, the United Press reported today, quoting authoritative quarters.

The Allied operations have resulted in the sinking of an estimated 78 per cent of the shipping available to the enemy forces trapped in that area, the dispatch added. Thirty-two of the estimated 51 vessels originally available to the Germans in the area have now been sunk. The enemy losses total about 62,000 tons.

FLEEING JAP TROOPS INTERCEPTED

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, August 28 — Japanese troops fleeing overland from Manokwari have been intercepted by American troops from Sansapor. The Americans broke up the Jap formations, killing 320 and taking 199 prisoners.

Palau Island was attacked at noon Saturday, the communiqué added, 57 tons of bombers were dropped, setting docks on fire.

Other bombers dropped 50 tons of bombs on the Liang airdrome on Amboina Island, starting many fires.

Japanese installations, defense points, and shipping in and near Davao on the southernmost Philippine island of Mindanao were smashed by other Allied bombers.

North of the Celebes, three Jap ships were damaged in bombings on sea lanes.

The U. S. Navy reported yesterday that big land-based Army Liberators dumped 42 tons of bombs on Japanese positions at Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands last Friday. Despite fierce enemy resistance, the Allied planes unloaded their bombs and all returned to their base safely. Two Jap fighters were destroyed and two were damaged.

CHUNGKING, August 28 — American heavy bombers have struck again at Japanese supply depots in the Shanghai area, blasting munitions dumps and warehouses full of vital military supplies needed by the Japanese for their new offensive just begun in Honan Province.

Chief targets were at Woosung, 13 miles north of Shanghai at the mouth of the Yangtze Kiang, along which Jap river boats carry essential material to troops funned outward through central China.

These same planes of the 14th USAAF struck at Shanghai two weeks ago, severely damaging the Italian liner Conte Verde, once scuttled by its Italian crew, but raised by the Japs and converted into a transport.

The new Jap offensive in Honan was revealed today by the Chinese High Command, which said that Jap troops on the long-static Honan front had funned westward from the Hankow-Peiping railway, and had reached objectives about 30 miles east of the important river junction city of Miyang.

Chungking also said tonight that Chinese troops have launched new attacks on the main Japanese supply line north of the Jap-captured city of Hengyang. In this area, American planes continued to harass Japanese convoys and river shipping, and attacked troop concentrations.

Meanwhile, the Southeast Asia Command disclosed that English and Indian troops have begun a new jungle offensive 160 miles behind the Japanese lines in northern Burma. The jungle raiders, said the communique tonight, have been setting ambushes, and generally mauling Jap convoys and communications lines.

Forward from these same Japanese lines, General Joseph Stilwell's 14th Army forces swept deeper into Burma today, and were reported to have reached within four miles of the Jap stronghold of Chindwin, operations base on the Tiddim Road about 40 miles inside Burma.

BURMA COMMANDERS CONGRATULATED

LONDON, August 28 — General Sir Claude Auchinleck, Commander-in-Chief, India, has sent a message to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Supreme Allied Commander, South-east Asia, congratulating him on "the signal victory over the Japanese after their much advertised attempt to invade India."

"We take pride in the fact that a large proportion of your troops should belong to the Indian Army, and that the Royal Indian Navy and Air Force should have played a notable part in this campaign," said the message.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Richard Peirse, Air Commander-in-Chief, Southeast Asia Command, has written to General Sir George Giffard, General Officer Commander-in-Chief, 11th Army Group, on the Allied victories on the Burma front.

The message said, "This is the most costly reverse that the Japanese Army has yet suffered. It has proved conclusively that British and Indian soldiers have the mastery over the enemy, even in the worst possible jungle conditions."

General Giffard replied, "Without your unstinted help in attacking the enemy wherever he was found, we could not have defeated the Japanese divisions.

"The courage and skill of pilots and aircrews flying through some of the worst weather in the world, over appalling country, was the admiration of us all." (Reuter)

LIBERATED ITALY

CHURCHILL ADDRESSES MESSAGE TO ITALIAN PEOPLE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 28 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill today addressed a message of encouragement and hope to the Italian people upon the occasion of his departure from Italy, following an extensive tour of the battlefronts and visits with Allied troops before they left for their landings on southern France.

During his visit here, Mr. Churchill conferred with the Lieutenant General of the Realm, Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, and members of the Italian cabinet. Following is the text of Mr. Churchill's message.

"On leaving the shores of Italy after a profoundly interesting and instructive visit, I should like to send a few words of encouragement and hope to the Italian people. I was most deeply touched by the extraordinary kindness with which I was welcomed in all the villages and small towns through which I have driven in traversing the entire front.

"There is no doubt that in the Zone of the Armies the again into the clutches of the Fascist totalitarian system in any guise in which it might present itself.

Such systems of governmental tyranny breed in the conditions of social dislocation, economic hardship, and moral depression which follow in the wake of war and defeat. It is at such crises in their history that the peoples should be most on their guard against the insidious parties after power, and most zealous in the preservation of their liberties.

When a nation has allowed itself to fall into a tyrannical regime, it cannot be absolved from the penalties due to the crimes of that regime, and naturally we cannot forget the circumstances of Mussolini's attack on France and Great Britain when we were at our weakest and people thought that Great Britain would sink forever — which in fact she has not done. But in the main, speaking for the British —though the other victorious Allies would have to have a say in this — I believe that the British nation will be happy to see the day when Italy, once again free and progressive, takes her place amongst the peace-loving nations.

It has been said that the price of freedom is eternal vigilance. The question arises: What is Freedom? There are one or two quite simple practical tests by which it can be known in the modern world in peace conditions.

Is there a right to free expression of opinion and of opposition and criticism of the government of the day?

Have the people the right to turn out a government of which they disapprove, and are constitutional means provided by which they can make their will apparent?

Are there courts of justice free from interference by the executive, free from all threats of mob violence and all associations with any particular political party?

Will those courts administer old and well-established laws which are associated in the human mind with broad principles of decency and justice?

Will there be fair play for the poor, as well as the rich, the private person, as well as the government official?

Will the rights of the individual, subject to his duties to the state, be maintained and asserted and exalted?

Is the ordinary peasant or workman, earning his living by his daily toil and striving to bring up his family, free from the fear that some grim police organization under the control of a single party, like the Gestapo, started by the Nazi and Fascist parties, will tap him on the shoulder and pack him off, without fair or open trial, to bondage or ill treatment?

These are some of the title deeds on which a new Italy could be founded.

After the last war, the Allies enabled Germany to set up a democratic and broadly-based government under the Weimar Constitution, but all this was wrecked by Hitler and his tyrannical gang, with the result that miseries unmeasured have engulfed the German people, and another fearful war has engulfed the world.

The first duty of all is to purge the soil of Italy from the foul German taint. This can only be done by hard fighting. I rejoice that large new Italian forces will soon join the Allied Armies. After this has been done, and the power of Hitlerism is broken forever, the responsibility will lie on Italy to make sure that no similar fate deprives her of the liberties she will gain at the end of this hard road of error and suffering.

In Great Britain and the United States the common man is not afraid of the state or the government. If he is oppressed by the government, however weak or poor he may be, his rights will be championed by public opinion, and sustained by the power of parliament based on universal suffrage. It is the freedom from this fear which must never be overlooked.

Hard work, strong resolve, high inspirations, and, above all, true unity, will all be needed if Italy is to nourish her people and resume her place among the leading powers of Europe. Political excitement and the clash of many parties will not achieve these simple joys and rights which the eyes of the people so desire.

General Giffard replied, "Without your unstinted help in attacking the enemy wherever he was found, we could not have defeated the Japanese divisions.

ANOTHER 10,000-TON U.S. CRUISER LAUNCHED

PHILADELPHIA, August 28 — The U.S.S. Little Rock, a 10,000-ton light cruiser named after the capital of Arkansas, was launched here yesterday.

Representative Brooks Hays of that State told the spectators that this class of cruisers is "the hottest item in naval combat" and that reports from the Pacific, where the U.S. Navy controls the waters, say that cruisers of the Little Rock class have made naval history. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

CHURCHILL ADRESSES MESSAGE TO ITALIAN PEOPLE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 28 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill today addressed a message of encouragement and hope to the Italian people upon the occasion of his departure from Italy, following an extensive tour of the battlefronts and visits with Allied troops before they left for their landings on southern France.

On leaving the shores of Italy after a profoundly interesting and instructive visit, I should like to send a few words of encouragement and hope to the Italian people. I was most deeply touched by the extraordinary kindness with which I was welcomed in all the villages and small towns through which I have driven in traversing the entire front.

There is no doubt that in the Zone of the Armies, the relations of the Italians with the British, American, and other Allies are of the most friendly and cooperative character. The same is true of all the rest of the liberated territory. Of course, owing to the hard conditions of war, the disorganization caused by the demolitions of the enemy, the shortage of shipping and transport, much hardship may arise in particular places. I have given directions to the British representatives in the various international bodies concerned to do their utmost, in harmony with their colleagues, to meet these difficulties, and I am sure these efforts will be warmly supported by our Allies.

At the end of the war in Europe, which may not be so far off as was formerly expected, there is one gift which will certainly be given to Italy when normal conditions are restored — the priceless gift of freedom. It has often been said that countries are divided into two classes — one, where the people own the government and the other, where the government own the people.

Italy has suffered a long period of governmental tyranny under the Fascist regime, which has terminated in frightful disaster and most cruel suffering which have befallen the Italian people. She would be very unwise to let herself fall opposition and criticism of the government of the day?

Have the people the right to turn out a government of which they disapprove, and are constitutional means provided by which they can make their will apparent?

Are there courts of justice free from interference by the executive, free from all threats of mob violence and all associations with any particular political party?

Will these courts administer old and well-established laws which are associated in the human mind with broad principles of decency and justice?

Will there be fair play for the poor, as well as the rich; the private person, as well as the government official?

Will the rights of the individual, subject to his duties to the state, be maintained and asserted and exalted?

Is the ordinary peasant or workman, earning his living by his daily toil and striving to bring up his family, free from the fear that some grim police organization under the control of a single party, like the Gestapo, started by the Nazi and Fascist parties, will tap him on the shoulder and pack him off, without fair or open trial, to bondage or ill treatment?

These are some of the title deeds on which a new Italy could be founded.

After the last war, the Allies enabled Germany to set up a democratic and broadly-based government under the Weimar Constitution, but all this was wrecked by Hitler and his tyrannical gang, with the result that miseries unmeasured have engulfed the German people, and another fearful war has engulfed the world.

The first duty of all is to purge the soil of Italy from the foul German taint. This can only be done by hard fighting. I rejoice that large new Italian forces will soon join the Allied Armies. After this has been done, and the power of Hitlerism is broken forever, the responsibility will lie on Italy to make sure that no similar fate deprives her of the liberties she will gain at the end of this hard road of error and suffering.

In Great Britain and the United States, the common man is not afraid of the state or the government. If he is oppressed by the government, however weak or poor he may be, his rights will be championed by public opinion, and sustained by the power of parliament based on universal suffrage. It is the freedom from this fear which must never be overlooked.

Hard work, strong resolve, high inspirations, and, above all, true unity, will all be needed if Italy is to nourish her people and resume her place among the leading powers of Europe. Political excitement and the clash of many parties will not achieve these simple joys and rights which the mass of the people so desire.

There was an English statesman many years ago — "The Great Commoner" as he was called, who made a fierce exhortation to the parties and bitter faction of the British Isles when he exclaimed: "Be One People!"

Seventy years later, this was the theme which Mazzini preached, and the ideal which Garibaldi accomplished. Italy must recapture the ideals of freedom which inspired the great Risorgimento.

May this thought rest with you through your trouble, and may your friends, both in England and across the ocean, see their hopes rewarded. (PIO)

A.C.C. FORMS SINGLE SOUTHERN REGION

ROME, August 28 — Effective today, all three previously designated Allied Control Commission regions for Italy south of Naples have been consolidated, together with Campobasso and Foggia provinces, to form one Southern Region.

Col. C.E. Temperly, MC, is named Southern Regional Commissioner with headquarters at Naples. He succeeds Colonel Chapman, who has been assigned to another post. (ACC)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 28 — Today's communique: Naval — The landings in southern France continue according to plan. There is great minesweeping activity off the newly-occupied ports and coast. Units of the Allied navies continue to support the army on both flanks.

Allied Armies in Italy. — There has been further evidence of the enemy's intention to withdraw to more advantageous positions covering the Gothic Line on many sectors of the front.

Troops of the 8th Army have advanced, and are now in contact with enemy positions four miles north of Pontassieve and six miles east of that town.

In the upper Arno Valley, our leading elements are in contact with the enemy at Rubbiena and in the hills east and west of the town.

In the Apennines, patrols thrusting forward from Apecchio, recently occupied by us, are some three miles north of the town, and have reached Piobbico and Fermignano to the northeast.

In the Adriatic sector, troops of the 8th Army have advanced and occupied Isola del Piano, Mombaroccio, and the outskirts of Fano.

On the 5th Army front, enemy patrols have been particularly active in the area south of San Maria Immonte.

Seventh Army. — American forces of the 7th Army have reached the Rhône River in the vicinity of Montelimar and for several days, in a series of actions, have inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, who has been attempting to ward off a serious threat to his east flank.

In the Marseilles and Toulon area, further progress has been made by French troops in mopping up remaining enemy resistance. More than 7,000 prisoners have been taken in and near the two cities, increasing the total for the southern France campaign to more than 30,000.

On the east coastal flank of the bridgehead, American forward elements have advanced to the Var River at several places.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force. — Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked two synthetic oil refineries at Blechhammer in Silesia, the Venicone and Aviano viaducts, and the Ferrara rail bridge in northern Italy, and the Borovnica viaduct in Yugoslavia. Escorting fighters attacked rail transport.

Our troops are approaching Provins, and to the northwest they have advanced to the vicinity of Lagny sur Marne.

The enemy has been cleared from Bourdenay and Saint Lupien, south of Nogent-sur-Seine.

In the Paris area, the situation is now generally quiet, although resistance continued on Sunday at Champigny. The Bois de Boulogne has been cleared of Germans, but minor isolated groups have been operating in the Bois de Meudon, on the southwestern outskirts of the city.

The elimination of enemy forces between Paris and Mantes-Gassicourt has been proceeding mainly in the vicinity of Villennes-sur-Seine, near Poissy. Allied bridgeheads over the Seine at Mantes-Gassicourt, Vernon, and east of Elbeuf were strengthened and enlarged. Our troops pushed eastward from Pont Audemer in face of stubborn enemy resistance, and the road from that town to Bourgachard is now in our hands. Clearing of Forêt de la Londe is now almost complete.

In Brittany, gains have been made by forces fighting near Brest.

Enemy troops, vehicles, and barges concentrated on the west bank of the Seine at Rouen have been attacked throughout the last 24 hours by hundreds of Allied aeroplanes. Waves of light and medium bombers dropped thousands of fragmentation and high-explosive bombs in their second consecutive day of operations against these targets in spite of intense anti-aircraft fire. Attacks lasting several hours were also delivered by strong formations of fighters and fighter bombers. Results were excellent.

Other formations of light and medium bombers hit two fuel dumps at Bucy les Pierrepont and in the Forêt du Samoussy, northwest of Rheims, as well as radio installations near Boulogne.

Locomotives, military vehicles, and hundreds of railway cars were destroyed or damaged by other fighters, which bombed and strafed over wide territory from the mouth of the Seine to Luxembourg, Germany, and into Denmark.

Escorted heavy bombers again hit shipping targets at Brest without loss.

Sixteen enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air and 14 on the ground. Seventeen of ours are missing.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ AAI, August 28 — Today's Resistance Front Communique:

Civil war is openly fought everywhere in Northern Italy between patriot groups and Fascist Black Brigades. These, in spite of the German support, are unable to prevent the insurrectional movement, which is constantly increasing. Savage reprisals are taken by the Nazi-Fascists against defenseless villages, under pretense that help was given to patriots. However, the efficiency of the Garibaldi Brigades, which are helped by the solidarity between patriots and the local population, is not shaken. The enemy is paying for the massacres of civilian populations with severe losses. Those responsible for reprisals, the Fascist leaders, the traitors and spies, are tried by patriot court martials and executed.

A battle took place near St. Ubald Pass (Alpine Region) following an attack in force by the enemy. The Germans were forced to withdraw, leaving 30 dead and 50 wounded. The patriot losses were 12.

Another German attack in the Monte Grappa zone has been repulsed. The patriots, who had inflicted losses upon the enemy, remain masters of the situation.

Waldensian patriots have blown up a locomotive in a tunnel near Ivrea, causing its complete destruction, and interrupting enemy traffic.

Sabotage increases day by day. Railways, and telephone and telegraph lines are the chief targets. Many trains have been derailed and some bridges have been destroyed.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 28 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

West of Rouen, yesterday, the enemy fiercely attacked our rear guards on the southern banks of the Seine. His attacks were everywhere smashed by the concentrated fire of our defensive arms. East of Elbeuf, an enemy bridgehead was narrowed down in a counter-attack. Fresh enemy attacks were frustrated and 20 tanks, as well as six armoured reconnaissance cars, were destroyed. North of Nantes, the enemy tried to broaden his bridgehead, but succeeded only in gaining a little ground, despite the use of strong infantry and tank forces. In Paris, many German strongpoints continue to oppose a stubborn resistance. Enemy attacks, supported by tanks, which were launched from the city in a northeasterly direction, were stopped by counter-attacks.

Southeast of Paris, the enemy pushed back our troops toward the lower reaches of the Marne in grim fighting. When asked to capitulate by the Americans, the commander of the fortress of Brest refused. Subsequently, the enemy launched a major attack with infantry and tank forces. The fighting grew in intensity throughout the whole day. The garrison of Brest, supported effectively by batteries of the Army, Navy and anti-aircraft guns, repelled all attacks. The enemy suffered high losses. Seven tanks were destroyed. Some local infiltrations into glacis of the fortress were sealed off. Our movements in the Rhone Valley are being carried out according to plan. Several enemy attempts at advancing from an easterly direction toward the road in the valley were frustrated.

Armed ferry boats and motor assault boats, in grim fighting with a strong escorted enemy cruiser squadron, sunk one destroyer and one motor assault boat in the waters west of Fécamp. Two German vessels were lost and one was damaged. An enemy cruiser was seriously damaged by torpedoes fired by Italian vessels off the coast of southern France.

One hundred and seventy-four terrorists were killed in action in the French rear.

London is being kept under heavy retaliatory fire with V-1.

In Italy, the enemy made several unsuccessful reconnaissance thrusts in the Arno sector. On the Adriatic coast, several strong enemy attacks remained unsuccessful.

In Rumania, on both sides of the Pruth, our troops are engaged in fierce fighting aiming at a breakthrough. The enemy, advancing in a southerly and westerly direction, crossed the Sereth and, despite the grim resistance of our Northwest of Mitau, northeast of Modohn, and northeast of Walk, grim enemy attacks were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our troops. North of Dorpat, the enemy, who had advanced, was stopped by a counter-attack.

Over the eastern front, 50 enemy planes were shot down in dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force. Enemy bombers, protected by overcasting clouds, made daylight attacks on some localities in western and northern Germany, particularly on Duisburg and Emden. Other raids were made on upper Silesian territory. During the night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Mannheim and Ludwigshafen. Twenty-four enemy planes were brought down in the course of these attacks.

Planes over Denmark: Seven of the Anglo-American planes flying over Danish territory on Saturday night were shot down.

GERMAN HOME STATIONS

Rumania: German front correspondents report that the Rumanian civilian population has no confidence in the empty promises of the traitor Michael. A mass emigration of all the classes of the population has started. They are trying to put themselves under the protection of the German Wehrmacht.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Paris: «The heavy destruction done to Paris is only partly due to actions between regular troops. Most of the fires raging at many points in Paris resulted from acts of terrorism, by which the Communist elements fighting against (sic) the F.F.I. are trying to usurp power.»

Brittany: The most important event in Brittany yesterday was the beginning of a large-scale American attack against the fortress of Brest. The American commander, General Patton, threw into this battle four divisions supported by strong artillery and air formations. The attack is said to have been repulsed with heavy American losses.

Battle for the Seine: The military commentator Dr. Kroll believes that all movements on the western front indicate that the Seine will in the near future play an important rôle as regards the further development of operations. As a result of the withdrawal to the right bank of the Seine of the last German elements, fighting has spread to the immediate vicinity of Rouen. Moreover, the Allies are continuing their stubborn attempts to outflank and unhinge the German positions on the Seine.

German detaching movements in the Rhône Valley are fully under control of the German command, which has succeeded in eliminating Allied harassing attempts from the east.

Eastern Front: The situation on the lower Pruth is marked by a concentration of German contingents which are battling their way westward. Parts of the Rumanian formations are fighting against the pro-German Iron Guards and other «loyal» Rumanians. North of Warsaw, the Soviets have sent into battle some new formations, which are being met by fresh German reserves.

FASCIST RADIO

An Italian military commentator claims that the Germans are avoiding a major battle in France and are withdrawing toward a shorter line which will provide them with an excellent springboard for their future counter-offensive.

The recapture of the Modane Pass constitutes a grave threat to the Allied armored formations advancing in the Grenoble region. All Allied attempts to wrest this pass from the Germans were frustrated, and the attackers chased back to St. Paul.

AMERICAN FLOOD SPREADING OVER FRANCE, CLOSER TO REICH

SHAEF, August 27 — Operational silence which has covered the position of the American 3rd Army was lifted late today by an official announcement that American armored forces have reached Pecy, northeast of Melun and directly south of Coulommiers, in a 21-mile drive from Nangis, which had already been occupied.

Another American spearhead, advancing from the Fontainebleau bridgehead, has liberated Nogent, important road junction on the Seine, and in a drive southward captured the towns of Bourdenay and Saint Lupien.

Late dispatches tonight stated that mopping-up operations in the Troyes sector have aroused greater German opposition than has up to now been encountered. Today's communique stated that American forces were 12 miles north of Troyes, which brings Allied troops to within 170 miles of the German border at Strasbourg. An unconfirmed report by the Algiers radio said that forward elements of General Patton's 3rd Army had reached Vitry, 45 miles southwest of Verdun.

Operations against the remnants of the German 7th [illegible] north of the Seine estuary continue and Germans reaching the headquarters of the British 2nd Army indicated that the Germans were in a frantic retreat in a due easterly direction north of the river, leaving only dim rear guards or none at all.

In the pocket west of the Seine, which is now hemmed in by Canadians, Belgians and Dutch, progress was described as steady, with fairly strong rearguard actions by the Germans. Strong opposition for the moment prevents the Allies pushing out of the bridgehead across the Risle River at Pont Audemer.

Battle for Brest

Two hundred Marauders and Havocs of the 9th USAAF today attacked German troops and vehicle concentrations in the Rouen loop. More than 4,000 offensive sorties were flown by Allied aircraft yesterday and about 500 enemy transport vehicles were destroyed or damaged north and east of Paris.

German attempts to escape from northern France by sea under cover of darkness have been frustrated by light British and American naval units, which, since August 13, have sunk or damaged 50 enemy vessels and have forced many others to turn back toward the coast.

An Associated Press dispatch stated that Le Havre, France's second port, which was converted into a fortress city by the Germans, has now been virtually evacuated except for garrison troops and demolition squads.

Headquarters announced that slow but steady progress was being made in the battle for the supply port of Brest on the tip of the Breton peninsula. Gun positions and fortified targets were again attacked without loss by escorted heavy bombers. (AP-OWI-Reuter)

US-RAF HEAVIES GANG UP

LONDON, August 27 — Strong forces of British and American heavy bombers joined forces today in daylight attacks on enemy targets in the Ruhr Valley and along the Franco-German border.

The big Halifaxes probably 500 of them escorted by RAF Spitfires, dropped heavy bomb loads on the synthetic oil plants at Homberg-Meerbeck in the Ruhr, while an equal number of Liberators and Fortresses smashed at other unspecified military targets in northwestern Germany.

Meanwhile, Thunderbolt fighters strafed tactical targets on the Franco-German border areas.

Designed for night operations, the Halifaxes in recent weeks have been devoting their attention to the flying bomb ramps in the Pas de Calais area, now menaced by the Allied land advances.

AMERICAN FLOOD SPREADING OVER FRANCE, CLOSER TO REICH

SHAEF, August 27 — Operational silence which has covered the position of the American 3rd Army was lifted late today by an official announcement that American armored forces have reached Pecy, northeast of Melun and directly south of Coulommiers, in a 21-mile drive from Nangis, which had already been occupied.

Another American spearhead, advancing from the Fontainebleau bridgehead, has liberated Nogent, important road junction on the Seine, and in a drive southward captured the towns of Bourdenay and Saint Lupien.

Late dispatches tonight stated that mopping-up operations in the Troyes sector have aroused greater German opposition than has up to now been encountered. Today's communique stated that American forces were 12 miles north of Troyes, which brings Allied troops to within 170 miles of the German border at Strasbourg. An unconfirmed report by the Algiers radio said that forward elements of General Patton's 3rd Army had reached Vitry, 45 miles southwest of Verdun.

Operations against the remnants of the German 7th Army trapped south of the Seine estuary continue and German forces are beginning to surrender unable to withstand the violent artillery and aerial bombardment. The last remaining escape road leading to Rouen from the west has been cut with the occupation of Bourg Achard, 8 miles northwest of Elbeuf.

Germans Losing Equipment

The Canadian 1st Army is mopping up remaining German elements in the La Londe Forest, barrier to the city of Rouen.

The new Allied bridgehead over the Seine at Pont de L'Arche has been extended along the river to the area of Elbeuf. From this point the Canadian forces are already pressing in to clean up the Seine river loop below Rouen.

British troops in considerable force expanded their holdings on the north bank of the Seine at Vernon after a three mile advance northward in an effort to gain high ground.

The Germans are using Duclair, nine miles northwest of Rouen, as well as Rouen, as an escape route. While the Nazis are getting some troops out of the narrowing pocket, they are losing most of their equipment, and what little does get across the Seine is being wrecked by the RAF. Reports

GERMANS GIVE UP IN BUCHAREST

LONDON, August 27 — All German resistance in Bucharest has ended and the capital is now completely calm, the Rumanian Army communique, broadcast over Bucharest Radio, announced tonight.

The communique also announced the capture of 12,000 German troops. North of Bucharest, heavy fighting is in progress against the enemy « who is stubbornly resisting », the communique said. (Reuter)

Last night, the RAF gave direct support to the Red Army advance on East Prussia with a major attack on the capital city of Koenigsberg. It was the first RAF attack on the East Prussian capital and one of the longest bombing missions of the war.

Ships Scuttle for Port

The concentrated attack started large fires in this port and military base, 100 miles from the Russian front. Other bombers dropped 1,700 tons on Kiel, where smoke from large fires rose to 15,000 feet.

Meanwhile Mosquito bombers attacked military installations in Berlin and Hamburg. Extensive mine-laying operations also were carried out. The Air Ministry said 20 bombers are missing.

Sunday morning and again in the afternoon, the RAF Coastal Command attacked and damaged enemy vessels off the French coast and drove them back to port. Four planes did not return.

Harold Mayes, Reuter correspondent, in a dispatch Saturday, wrote that retreating German forces used almost every imaginable type of river craft in attempts to ferry across the Seine to safety, but that all types suffered the same fate under the tremendous attacks of the Allied Tactical Air Force.

The TAF had a successful day north and northeast of Rouen, where the Germans appeared to have their only chance to get their motor transport across the river. All enemy transport was ceaselessly hammered, and by Saturday evening one air group alone had accounted for 140 transports destroyed, along with 10 tanks and heavy gun.

A wood east of Lillebon believed to be full of German vehicles was combed out completely by rockets from the planes.

Biggest Bombs Go Down

The British Air Ministry announced on Saturday night that RAF Bomber Command planes on Thursday smashed through concrete E-boat shelters with 12,000-pound bombs at Ijmuiden, Holland, about 15 miles northwest of Amsterdam. The Germans believed them to be bomb-proof.

Reconnaissance since then revealed that one bomb blew open a crater five yards wide in the roof of one shelter. Another bomb left a 20-yard crater in the shelter, which appeared also to have been undermined by the blast.

This bomb, and one which made a crater 30 yards across, have demolished a camouflaged structure on the landward side of the main shelter.

For a short period Saturday night the Germans fired a small number of flying bombs against southern counties of England, including the London area. Damage, but no casualties, has been reported, Reuter said.

The Paris radio reported that German planes which bombed Paris Saturday night started large fires. A number of persons were victims, Reuter reported.

The German News Agency said that German bombers were again over Paris before dawn Sunday, Reuter said.

TOULON CLEARED, GARRISON BOXED

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 27 — The fortress city of Toulon has been cleared of the enemy after six days' street fighting, and one of the heaviest air and naval bombardments in the Mediterranean campaign, it was announced here today.

The remnants of the trapped German garrison, which has waged a fanatic resistance from the more than a dozen fortresses ringing France's main Mediterranean naval base, have now been driven into the island-like headland due south of Toulon, and into the wooded, sea end of Cap Cicie peninsula to the southwest.

Two major fortresses are located in these areas where general, Major General Sigfrid Boje, commander of the German administrative headquarters in Marseilles.

About 1,000 prisoners have been captured from a single regiment which had been ordered to counter-attack American forces near Grenoble, but surrendered instead. According to prisoners, this regiment had originally been part of a force which undertook to withdraw into Italy, but was cut off by the lightning Allied advance.

Still Holding Out

The principal German resistance in Marseilles is now centered on high ground on the northern edges of the city, north of the Marseilles Canal. Here an enemy force estimated at several thousand is still holding out, although the bulk of the great port city is now freed. Other scattered groups of Germans were reported in the Quatre Chemins, Saint Joseph, Le Melon and port districts.

German resistance on the southwestern edges of Toulon collapsed with the capture of the fortresses of Artigues and Malbousquet in the immediate harbor area. Deprived of the support of these bastions, the German garrison of the fort atop the village of Six-Fours, three miles southwest of Toulon, and the nearby districts of Bregaillon and Marvive were unable to continue their resistance.

One group of 11 German prisoners taken at Marseilles contained men up to 71 years of age and five men physically disabled. The prisoners said that they had been recruited for civilian work but instead were impressed into the German Army and forced to guard depots and marine warehouses.

MEDIUMS HIT MARSEILLES GUN SITES

ADVANCED AFHQ, August 27 — Mitchell and Marauder bombers of the Tactical Air Force today carried out 12 successive air attacks on German gun positions on the islands of Pomegues and Ratonneau in Marseilles harbor, to give direct air support to French troops mopping up the last remaining pockets of enemy resistance in the great Mediterranean port.

Returning crewmen said that the successive waves of bombers had caused heavy explosions and fires in the fortress areas. One immense explosion sent smoke columns 15,000 feet into the air.

Medium bombers today again attacked the rail bridge at Berceto, 25 miles southwest of Parma, Italy. Three direct hits were reported. Fighter-bombers carried out attacks on enemy supply lines and claimed hits on a 7,000-ton enemy freighter, which was set afire. Fighter-bombers also destroyed a road bridge north of Florence and damaged another near Cuneo.

DE GAULLE SHOT AT IN CATHEDRAL

LONDON, August 27 — An attempt on the life of General de Gaulle was made in the Cathedral of Notre Dame de Paris yesterday during a great thanksgiving service for the liberation of the city.

French Fascists fired shots at General de Gaulle and at the assembled congregation from the upper galleries of the Cathedral, said the BBC.

French police and Allied soldiers present at the service fired back at the assailants. There was no panic although people took cover immediately. General de Gaulle was unhurt.

Within five minutes of the shooting at 16.30 hours yesterday, machine-guns opened and rifle shots were heard from all points of the compass, said an American broadcaster who was in the Place de la Concorde at the time. People ran as bullets sprayed into the crowds. Then a row of tanks which had been guarding the passage of De Gaulle to Notre Dame started firing and Allied machine-guns

Fort Janas, at the headlands at Cap Cicie, covers with the field of fire of its big coastal batteries the sea approaches to Toulon from the southwest.

Many Prisoners in Toulon

In Marseilles, where sporadic fighting has continued since General de Lattre de Tassigny's French forces entered the greatest Mediterranean port city on August 23, eight districts of the metropolis have now been cleared of enemy opposition, including the summit of Notre Dame de la Garde overlooking the old port and the surrounding southern sections.

French forces of the 7th Army are continuing their mopping-up operations in Marseilles and southwest of Toulon.

Heavy casualties were inflicted on the enemy and many prisoners taken in the occupation of Toulon.

Seventh Army forces had taken an estimated 23,000 prisoners up to the day before yesterday, it was announced here. Included among this number was a fourth German

Today, German fighter planes strafed the streets of Paris at intervals for about half an hour.

Paris, though liberated, is still the scene of sporadic clashes between French Patriots and Germans holding out south of the Seine.

EISENHOWER VISITS PARIS

PARIS, August 27 — General Eisenhower today visited Paris, and that part of the city which went to bed last night got up this morning after the wildest Saturday night in years, to touch off another frenzied demonstration in greeting the general and his British, French and American staff, Howard Cowan, representing the combined American press, said in a dispatch.

"I have come here to pay the tribute of the Allied forces to the indomitable spirit of Paris. General Eisenhower said as his ceremonial tour of the city ended in the shadow of the Arc de Triomphe.

«The Luftwaffe tried to burn Paris down last night» said Cowon «and a handful of British, Canadian and American troops with the help of the Parisians themselves, tried to drink the town dry, but this morning crowds standing on tiptoe jammed the Champs Elysee and shouted themselves hoarse for the Allied general with the smile as broad as a Kansas prairie.» (OWI)

NAZIS BIGGEST TANK «A SISSY»

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY August 27 — Mechanical failures and faults in the design of the biggest enemy tank, the Mark VI Tiger, contributed largely to German defeat in the battles south of Rome acreeding to a German prisoner.

Of a group of 16 Tiger tanks, all but two brought from southern France, 13 broke down through failure of drive mechanism or tracks, or because they could not take sudden drops in ground without damage, the prisoner said. When American forces began overtaking the Germans, all of these tanks but one had to be destroyed to prevent them falling into Allied hands. (PRO)

GERMANS SHELL CHARTRES CATHEDRAL

NEW YORK, August 27 — In a despatch to the New York Herald-Tribune from Chartres, Joseph Driscoll said the Germans used the towers of the famous French cathedral as artillery observation posts.

The dispatch supplements earlier reports of how American troops dislodged German snipers from the cathedral towers.

After inspecting the towers with the cathedral Curé, and other correspondents, Driscoll watched German heavy artillery ranging on the cathedral. The Curé told the correspondents that, despite its age, the 12th century cathedral had never been damaged in a war until this one, when a German plane, damaged by enemy action, jettisoned its bomb load as it flew past and did minor damage.

For four years, said the Curé, the Germans had used the towers as artillery observation posts. They appropriated the keys and kept everyone out. They had also erected red lights around the towers as beacons to planes coming home from raids on England. It was natural to suppose, added the Curé, that having made such uses of the towers against the wishes of the French, they would assume that the Americans would do likewise. (OWI)

GESTAPO MAJOR THWARTS NAZI GENERAL

MASEILLES, August 27 — German General Scheffer asked the French commander of Marseilles for a three-hour armistice last Wednesday to discuss terms of capitulation for the Nazi garrison holding out in the old port sector. But a Gestapo major refused to give his assent to the proposed terms and the fighting went on.

The meeting between the French commander and the German general took place in front of the fort in the old port area. The Nazi asked for safe conduct and protection from FFI troops. The Frenchman answered that his Maquis were well-disciplined; that there need be no fear.

The French commander said the terms of surrender were unconditional. Scheffer looked at the Gestapo major. The major indicated that he should refuse. Scheffer shrugged his shoulders said surrender was impossible. The Nazis withdrew and the battle was resumed, despite the French commander's warning that only annihilation of the German unit would be the outcome. (UNN)

BEWILDERED NAZIS VAINLY SEEK SAFETY

BERNE, SWITZERLAND, August 27 — Confusion reigns in northeastern France as German troops move in all directions, but mainly to the north and east, said a reliable report reaching here on Friday.

German troops, many in civilian clothes, found French patriots everywhere and frequently dived for cover as American tanks crossed their paths, the dispatch said.

The first question asked by German intelligence officers of German soldiers who have fled from the south is the whereabouts of the German headquarters to which they had belonged. The German High Command, is attempting to form a picture of the military situation in the south which, since the invasion, has become vague in the extreme.

German planes attempting to land in southern and central France have found airfields occupied by the Allies. In northern France the transport situation deteriorates hourly as French railwaymen stop work whenever possible.

A frontline dispatch published in the Berlin Press and quoted by the Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said: «Even at night, transport is difficult. There are only two or three hours of darkness during which the roads can be used and then they are chock full of men and vehicles. As soon as the sun rises all must disappear.»

NEW VOICE ON VICHY RADIO

LONDON, August 27 — Vichy Radio went on the air yesterday under the control of the French Forces of the Interior, identifying itself as «Radio Vichy Libre,» announced the liberation of the station.

Two proclamations were broadcast through the Vichy transmitter, the seventh to come under the control of the FFI. The first informed the people of the capture of the city and laid down regulations for the distribution of food. The second, signed by a member of the FFI High Command, urged all citizens to obey orders and remain at their posts. (OWI)

PARIS PEOPLE WERE HUNGRY

PARIS, August 27 — The Paris Underground newspapers on Saturday published their first above-board editions, BBC reported today. All political prisoners have been freed.

The first convoy has left for Paris carrying food and medical supplies.

The Allies found Paris at starvation level after four years of German occupation Reuter reported. Paris has had no milk for a week. People considered themselves lucky to get even one loaf of bread each week, and this involved endless queueing. There was no meat and no sugar.

«There has been nothing for a week except bread — sometimes!» a Parisian told the correspondent. Because of the lack of food many children have rickets and tuberculosis.

The air of excitement in Paris is beginning to simmer down. A soldier can now walk the streets without being hugged and kissed. People are strolling or cycling down the streets, quietly savoring freedom and the absence of the Gestapo.

Three thousand British persons interned in the St. Denis Barracks in Paris, have been freed and will be repatriated, Radio Paris announces.

Peaceful City

Don Whitehead, Associated Press correspondent, said that: «Paris is bathed in sunshine and happiness today, and below the windows of my hotel in the heart of the city spreads a scene of peace contrasting strangely with the turmoil of battle that raged yesterday. «Around each parked jeep is a group of men, women and children, talking and laughing with American soldiers who are giving them cigarettes and sweets, and sharing their 'hard rations'.» (AP-BBC)

GERMANY WEAKER THAN IN 1918

NEW YORK, August 27 — Germany is more decisively beaten now than she was when she surrendered in 1918, said a New York Herald Tribune columnist on Saturday. Germany's armies on the western front are in much worse shape, he said, and again her satellites are deserting her. German cities are exposed to air attack.

Whereas in 1918 the Russian army was beaten on the eastern front it is, in 1944, the most powerful land force in the world, said the columnist, and it is continuing the offensive. If the Germans were capable of acting rationally, he concluded, there would now be an immediate offer of unconditional surrender. (OWI)

HUNGARY'S LAST CHANCE

LONDON, August 27 — It is reported from Berne, said the BBC today, that Balchalk, former Hungarian Minister to London, now living in Switzerland, has telegraphed to Regent Horthy in the name of a «Committee of Hungarian diplomats» to refuse to recognise the Stojav government.

Balchalk urged Horthy to put an immediate end to the war and to ask for an armistice.

GERMANS ARE DEPRESSED

LONDON, August 27 — As the Allied armies get closer to the German frontier a tidal wave of depression is sweeping over the country, the BBC said today.

Quoting German press reports of stiffer sentences for resistance to total mobilization and for listening to Allied broadcasts, the BBC added that chaos and depression are increasing throughout the Reich.

More and more people are refusing to do emergency services and many are leaving the area where they are living without the required permission. Neutral observers describe the curtailment of entertainment as a scheme to get recruits for the defense of the Reich. (BBC)

8th ARMY OVER THE METAURO, DEEP BRIDGEHEAD

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 27 — Troops of the 8th Army have crossed the Metauro River to establish there a bridgehead seven miles wide and four miles deep at its point of greatest penetration, within nine miles of the Adriatic port of Pesaro, it was announced here today.

Polish troops, pushing forward under heavy shellfire and against strong enemy rearguards, have reached a point a mile west of the town of Borgo Lucresia, six miles inland, while other forces, supported by tanks, have pressed forward to seize the dominating high ground of Monte della Matera, five miles to the west and four miles from the Metauro River.

In this sector the important lateral highway leading from Fano, on the Adriatic coast, has been overrun by the advancing 8th Army troops, and enemy outpost positions on the north banks of the Metauro have been driven back, it was announced.

Allied bombers struck at enemy communications in the Pesaro area in night attacks geared to the coastal advance.

Thrust East of Florence

The Adriatic coast attacks coincided with gains of up to three miles in the inland sectors of the 8th Army Front, where British and Indian troops thrust forward east of Florence and in the mountains flanking the upper Arno and Tiber river valleys toward the Gothic Line defenses, newly out of the towering Mugello Range of the Appenines.

The crossing of the Metauro River by 8th Army forces began Friday night, along the seven-mile stretch from Borgo Lucrezia, six miles southwest of Fano, inland to Montefelcino. The towns of Saltara and Serrungarina, about a mile apart and a mile northwest of the Metauro River in the center of the bridgehead, have been captured. At its point of deepest penetration, the 8th Army bridgehead incorporated the high ground around Monte della Matera, just south of the inland town of Mombroccio and dominating the coastal corridor.

Forward elements pressing into the hills west of Fossombrone, 15 miles inland from the sea, found this important road junction town apparently evacuated by the enemy.

8th Firmly Established

German forces are withdrawing along the whole 8th Army front, it was officially stated. Enemy forces counter-attacked unsuccessfully against Allied troops holding key Monte Foresto, in the Alpe di Catenaia between the upper reaches of the Arno and the Tiber north of Arezzo, on Friday.

On the 5th Army front the situation remained unchanged, it was stated. German forces appeared to be increasingly sensitive to 5th Army patrol actions and kept the front along the Arno intermittently lighted with flares during hours of darkness. Patrol clashes occured near the junction of the Elsa and the Arno rivers some miles west of Florence, and artillery and mortar fire was employed by both sides between this sector and the sea.

It was announced today that elements of the 92nd Infantry Division, a Negro formation, are now in combat with the 5th Army. (PRO)

FAMOUS CORPS FIGHTS IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 27 — The 13th British Corps, a veteran unit with the longest history of continuous action in the British Army in this war, is among the forces fighting on the Italian Front, an official announcement stated here today.

The famous force, which won for Britain her earliest victories in the war in the fight for Bardia in the western desert, and participated in the Tunisian and Sicilian campaigns, was last reported in action in the sector just west of the town of Arezzo when the first bridgehead was secured over the Arno River. PARACHUTIST TOOK HIS DOG ALONG

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 27 — An RAF sergeant and his dog, landed by a plane of the Balkan air force, in Yugoslavia, prepared with Partisan aid the ground strip from which 900 wounded Partisan troops were recently evacuated, it was revealed here today.

The field was prepared in a section infested with German troops concentrated in garrison towns only four miles and 10 miles away.

Sergeant Ian McGregor, veteran of four parachute descents in the Balkans was the RAF ground engineer who made the landing to prepare the site. He took with him his dog Romo presented to him by Partisans on a previous mission. (PRO)

RED ARMY CAPTURES GALATZ

MOSCOW, August 27 — Galatz fell to the Red Army today. This city, the most important Rumanian port on the Danube, a large communication centre, and the guardian of the gap leading into southern Rumania was captured by troops of the 3rd Ukrainian army under General Tolbukhin, said an order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin tonight.

Fifty miles further west, Russian tank and infantry units under General Malinovsky took Focsani by storm, and pushed on 55 miles southward to carry Rammicul-Sarat by assault.

This latest advance brings the Russians to within 65 miles of Ploesti and 90 miles of Bucharest. The road to both cities now lies wide open to the Red Army. Already heavy fighting is raging in the Ploesti area and in the northern outskirts of Bucharest between Rumanian and German troops, according to the German military commentator, Ernst von Hammer.

Above Focsani, northwest of Galatz, Russians Cossacks are striking deeper into the mountains along roads and railways leading into Transylvania and Hungary. The Moinesti oil lands in this region have been occupied. The Germans are falling back into the Carpathian passes before what von Hammer today called «far superior Russian forces».

West of the Arno, patrols pushed to within a mile of Bibbiena and occupied the village of Poggio Falito after some enemy opposition. Eighth Army forces are now firmly established in a series of mountain positions across the Pratomagno Range at the upper end of the Arno's looping bend to the southeast of Pontassieve.

Between Florence and Pontassieve, at the confluence of the Arno and its tributary, the Sieve, enemy forces appear to be withdrawing into the mountains north of Highway 67 on the north bank of the Arno, it was announced. British patrols have reached points east of the town of Pelago, three miles east of Pontassieve, without meeting any enemy opposition.

Negro Troops in Action

An Indian patrol and British forces met enemy resistance, however, around San Donato, four miles east of Florence and on the north banks of the Arno near its junction with a tributary, the Berre della Sieci.

Ports Sealed

On the whole Rumanian front, Soviet troops are striking swiftly and cleaning up German strongpoints, said a dispatch from Moscow.

On the Danube itself, high-powered armed cutters of the Soviet Black Sea Fleet are moving up and down its winding branches, blocading shipping and effectively sealing ports.

The Red Army, navy and air force are working on a single plan, to cut off, capture or destroy Germans. The plight of those caught southwest of Kishinev is being duplicated on a small scale in many other sectors. Relays of Soviet planes are constantly flying over the front, reporting the movements of bewildered German units. Prisoners are coming in at a rate rarely equalled in any Soviet offensive of this war. One war reporter found 16,000 Germans in a single column, including a German general. The Rumanian High Command communique tonight reported the capture of 12,000 German prisoners.

The latest dispatches from the encirclement area southwest of Kishinev point to the imminent end of the Germans there. They have been sliced into two groups and are being destroyed. German attempts to break out have shown some slackening in the past 24 hours.

In Warsaw, where the battle for the city has now been raging for four weeks, great damage has been caused by bombs, artillery and flame-throwers. Despite heavy odds, the Poles are holding their ground and denying the Germans important roads leading to the Vistula.

In a radio message, Polish Underground forces today thanked the RAF for arms and supplies sent them from Italy, some 800 miles distant.

RAF planes flew a round trip of 2,000 miles to Koenigsberg last night, in direct support of the Russian offensive against East Prussia. With the Russian army only 100 miles away, Koenigsberg has become an advance base for the German army, and is of great importance to them at the present stage of the campaign.

The British Air Ministry said the city's defences were quickly saturated during the first and major attack. Large quantities of new flame-throwing incendiaries were in the bomb-load.

The Soviet Information Bureau announced the sinking of an enemy submarine in the Baltic Sea by a pilot of the Baltic Fleet air arm. The pilot, Captain Lesnikow, has sunk seven enemy vessels in all his operations, including three transports, three minesweepers and now a submarine.

NAZI LOSE SEVEN GENERALS IN ONE DAY

MOSCOW, August 27 — The German Army lost seven generals today — on the battlefield, and not before Gestapo firing squads.

The Russians found the bodies of three German generals dead on the battlefield southwest of Kishinev, where remnants of the encircled German group are now surrounded in a forest north of Hancesti.

On the 3rd Ukrainian Front today two German Army Corps commanders were taken prisoner, and two divisional commanders.

In today's bag of prisoners, the Russians also captured one German Alpine division, one German heavy artillery regiment, and the remnants of two Rumanian infantry divisions.

In addition, 8,000 Germans were captured on the 2nd Ukrainian Front and more than 10,000 on the 3rd Ukrainian Front.

These figures were given in tonight's Soviet communique.

RUMANIANS ENCIRCLE GERMANS

LONDON, August 27 — Inside Bucharest the liquidation of the largest nests of German resistance continued on Saturday, a communique from the Rumanian general staff, broadcast by the Bucharest radio early today, said.

«Powerful enemy forces moved to attack the capital. Our troops counter-attacked and succeeded in encircling the zone held by the enemy, and in compressing the German forces into a reduced area, where liquidation of the enemy is imminent,» the communique reported.

The Bucharest radio on Saturday night broadcast an appeal to the nation «to unite and fight side by side against the German traitors.»

Signed by the four parties comprising the national democratic bloc supporting the King and the new Government of National Unity, the manifesto said: «Our nation is passing through a most difficult hour of its history. Every achievement of our past generations, every hope entertained for future generations, is in danger.

«The war is coming to a close. Germany is crumbling. Everywhere Hitler's armies are defeated. Allied victory is clear. After five years of slaughter the day of reckoning is approaching.

The Russian home service Saturday night broadcast a statement from the People's Commissariat for Foreign Affairs that the Germans are trying to form a puppet government in Rumania under Horia Sima, leader of the Fascist «Iron Guard.»

An interesting point in the armistice terms was the encouragement given to Rumania to recover Transylvania, snatched from her in the Vienna award, Reuter's diplomatic analyst pointed out, adding the prediction that the Rumanians can be relied upon to liberate Transylvania from Hungary.

RUMANIA'S EXIT A DECISIVE WAR FACTOR

LONDON, August 27 — The sudden exit of Rumania from the war may turn out to be one of the decisive factors of the war, said the diplomatic correspondent of the London Sunday Express quoted by the BBC today.

«The Russians,» he said, «will now be able to advance unhindered at a great speed against the oil centers and take over the large part of Rumania's rich harvest on which Hitler had relied. Military experts are satisfied that the German forces are running short of oil just when swift movements are vitally necessary to the defense of Germany.

«The shattering of Germany's railways from the air, which is to be intensified immediately, means that all vital transport must go by road and this means a greater need for oil. The whereabouts of all Germany's synthetic oil plants and dumps in many parts of the country are known and they are being dealt with by Allied bombers.

«The battle of Germany will be on in a matter of days, not weeks. More German soldiers will now be required to defend Germany's back door, and it is the view of the experts that they are simply not available.

«Soon Allied forces in northern France, will have airfields from which they can bomb Germany day and night, the bombers being able to carry less petrol and greater bomb loads.

«Both the shortage of manpower and the shortage of supplies are at the point of crisis. The position of the Allies in southern France makes it physically impossible for Spain to send any more woolfram to Germany, while Sweden is virtually cutting off all trade with the Reich.»

«The enemy tried to reinforce his troops in Bucharest with a powerful group that forced a crossing of the Danube at Giurgiu. After violent reaction by our defence forces, the enemy troops that had entered Giurgiu withdrew south of the Danube.

SUMATRA TARGETS BOMBED

KANDY, CEYLON, August 27 — Allied headquarters in Ceylon announced today that on August 24 carrier-borne Allied aircraft smashed installations at Indaroeng and Emmahaven, near Padang, on the island of Sumatra.

The main target was a large cement plant at Indaroeng, supplying Japanese requirements for fortifications in the entire occupied area. The plant was heavily bombed, clouds of smoke and flames towering 1,000 feet in the air after the attack.

Two vessels totalling 6,000 tons were hit and left to flames. Numerous hits were also scored on wharves, warehouses, and a coaling jetty and on railway yards.

Fighters and bombers of the 14th USAAF carried out widespread attacks on enemy communication lines, supply centers and airfields in Chinese war zones.

In the Canton area docks and river shipping were heavily hit; supply depots west of Hengyang were strafed. An enemy supply ship was left sinking south of Hanoi and a 5,000-ton vessel was probably sunk 150 miles east of Hong Kong. Pilots of the Chinese wing of the 14th Air Force, on a mission north of Chenghsien, destroyed three planes of an enemy interceptor formation. One Allied plane is missing from these operations. (OWI)

GETTING READY FOR JAPAN

WASHINGTON, August 27 — Although the war will soon be five years old Britons «have no thought that we might begin to relax now,» Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, told an American radio audience last night.

The Ambassador had just returned from a visit to his home country.

Lord Halifax described Germany's leaders as desperate men who have everything to lose by peace. In England, he said, there is a conviction that «now is the time, when the enemy is gasping and reeling under heavy blows, for us to put in the maximum energy and fight harder than ever before.»

He added: «When I was in England I saw that already many of our plants have been switched to the production of special equipment against the time when you and we will turn our full strength on the Japanese.» (OWI)

BULGARIA TO GET TERMS SHORTLY

LONDON, August 27 — Allied armistice terms will be in the hands of the Bulgarian Government shortly, Reuter's diplomatic correspondent wrote today. The terms have already been dispatched to Sofia, the correspondent believed.

In the radio announcement from Bulgaria no reference to total evacuation of Bulgarian troops from occupied areas of Greece and Yugoslavia was included, but this will be a condition to which the Allies will attach paramount importance, Reuter said.

Rupture of relations between Bulgaria and Germany is bound to follow Bulgaria's disarming of German troops. (Reuter)

PALAU ISLAND ATTACKED AGAIN

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, August 27 — Palau, the much-bombed Japanese island guarding the central approaches to the Philippines, has been attacked again, this time with 85 tons of explosives dropped by bombers of the Southwest Pacific Command, said General MacArthur's communique today.

The communique said that a «sizable force» of Liberators attacked the town and harbor of Koror at noon yesterday. Smoke from the fires started rose to 1,000 feet.

On the same day another strong force of Liberators attacked Ceram and Ambonna, to the west of Dutch New Guinea, with over 100 tons of bombs, starting huge fires. Near Boeroe, halfway between Dutch New Guinea and the Celebes, Allied air patrols destroyed or damaged a freighter transport of 6,000 tons with two direct hits.

Other planes ranged over Halmahera, leaving fierce fires and a small freighter blazing, while attack planes and fighters zoomed over the entire Vogelkop Peninsula.

Last night's communique issued from Admiral Nimitz's headquarters reported that eight attacks have been made on Japanese strongholds in the West Pacific.

Island Mankind

Frank Kelly, in a despatch to the New York Herald Tribune, said that the mopping up of large numbers of Japanese soldiers is continuing on Saipan, Guam and Tinian islands in the Marianas. Kelly said he had been informed that 2,500 Japanese have been killed on Saipan since July 9, the day the island was declared secure. He added that many of them had been conducting a sort of guerrilla warfare against the American forces, hiding out during the day and operating at night.

most of it went to the German army of occupation. Today, the radio said, the food supplies which go there will be solely for the French population.

Meanwhile food from Normandy and Brittany is on its way to Paris for distribution among the most needy. From Bayeux yesterday a long line of British and Canadian trucks moved eastward carrying both food and medical supplies for the relief of Parisians. Three thousand tons of food will be brought to Paris by the Americans during the next six weeks, said the Algiers radio. FRENCH PACT PRAISED BY PRESS

LONDON, August 27 — The agreement reached by British, French and United States authorities for administration of civil affairs in France was praised by the Times today.

«The effect of the agreement thus has been to accord to the Algiers administration the same authority over civil affairs as will be enjoyed by the governments of Holland, Belgium, and Norway, and to make it in fact — if not explicitly in name — the recognized guardian of French sovereignty until such time as the will of the French people may be clearly expressed in general elections,» the newspaper wrote.

The Times pointed out that, long before the formal agreements on civil affairs were even prepared, the French (Algiers) provisional government's representative in Normandy, M. Coulet, «had been entrusted by General Eisenhower with responsibility for civil affairs.»

«The decision proved wholly wise. The energy and wisdom with which M. Coulet's difficult duties have been carried out have won for him and for the French civil authorities as a whole, the increasing confidence of the Allied military staffs.» (MOI)

RIGHTS FOR ITALIAN WOMEN

ROME, August 27 — In a speech delivered to a group of women today, Palmiro Togliatti, Minister without Portfolio, said that women must play a more important role in the future political life of Italy.

«After the trials that Italian women endured during the 20 years of the Fascist regime, one cannot argue that they are too immature to participate in Italian politics,» the head of the Communist Party in Italy said. «Commissioners of various bodies are today being selected. WASHINGTON, August 27 — The first President of the Iceland Republic, Svenn Jonsson, said at a Press conference today during his official visit to Washington: «Our relations with the United States have expanded greatly in commercial, cultural and other fields. We buy much more now from the United States than from any other country.

«Most young people who look beyond the country's boundaries for added education and cultural contacts look toward the United States. These relations will not end when the war is over.

«When contacts with other Scandinavian countries are again established it is our wish that relations with the United States may be maintained on as great a scale and in as good a manner as possible.» (Reuter)

GREEKS PROTEST IN ATHENS

CAIRO, August 27 — A 24-hour general strike was declared in Athens Thursday in protest against the deportation to Germany of 1,500 civilian hostages, reported the Hellenic News Service Friday.

Germans were reported to be seizing people indiscriminately in Athens for forced labor in the Reich.

A Moscow report states that fierce fighting between Greek Patriots and German occupation forces has broken out in many parts of Greece. Several German garrisons have been wiped out. (OWI)

AUSTRIAN PATRIOTS STRIKE AT GERMANS

STOCKHOLM, August 27 — Austrian patriots recently attacked near Linz a transport column carrying more than 100 political prisoners to a German concentration camp, reported the Basle correspondent of the Stockholm paper Morgontidningen Friday. Both patriots and liberated prisoners escaped before German reinforcements arrived.

In a recent attack on the town hall and post office at Sankt Veit, Austrian Patriots took hundreds of ration cards and official stamps, said the dispatch. (OWI)

FINNS RESTLESS AT PEACE DELAY

STOCKHOLM, August 27 — The Finnish Army and the workers of Finland are becoming increasingly restless at the delay in beginning peace negotiations, said the BBC correspondent here yesterday.

Observers were quoted as foreseeing serious trouble inside Finland if the delay continues much longer. (BBC)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 27 — Today's communique:

Allied troops advancing eastward toward the upper Seine valley have reached the river in the northern outskirts of Troyes and at a point 12 miles north Nearer Paris armored units have launched an attack between Melun and Corbeil where a bridgehead had previously been established.

Approximately 10,000 enemy troops, including the German commander and his staff, were taken prisoner in Paris. One enemy strongpoint has been holding out in Champigny on the southeast edge of the city and small enemy groups are still operating in the northeast and northwest suburbs.

Within the city formal resistance has ceased but some sniping continues.

In the Seine valley, armored elements which have advanced along the south side of the river in the area between Montes-Gassicourt and Paris are encountering slight opposition.

Allied forces have closed in toward the south bank of the Seine and have crossed the river at Vernon and Pont de Larches. Further west our troops have captured Bourgtheroulde and are clearing enemy from Foret de la Londe.

In the coastal area the enemy has been driven over the lower Risle and Pont Audemar is in our hands.

Heavy fighting is in progress in the area north of Brest on the Brittany peninsula where the enemy garrison is offering stubborn resistance.

Gun positions and fortified targets were again attacked without loss by escorted heavy bombers.

Attacks on enemy transport in northeast France by our fighter-bombers and fighters are being extended into Belgium and Germany. Locomotives and hundreds of motor vehicles and railway cars some loaded with ammunition and oil have been destroyed or damaged during the last 24 hours especially near the Seine at Rouen.

Marshalling yards at Gisor and Charleroi were also hit.

Rail movements in the Lille, Amiens and Dieppe areas have been pounded incessantly.

Concentrations of enemy troops and vehicles seeking passage over the Seine were hit throughout the day by waves of escorted light and medium bombers which dropped fragmentation and high explosive bombs. Their targets also included four fuel dumps to the east and southeast of Rouen.

Enemy air opposition was slight but heavy antiaircraft fire has been concentrated at many points to the east of the Seine.

Six enemy aircraft were shot down and at least 12 others destroyed on the ground. Seven of our bombers and 17 fighters are missing. (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 27 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Southern France: French forces have completed the occupation of the city of Toulon with the capture of the Six-Fours fortifications and the districts of Abregaillon and Marylise. Enemy resistance continues only on the Peninsula south of the city and in the forest south of Six-Fours. In Marseilles main progress was made in liquidating scattered enemy pockets. The advances of Tactical aircraft continued to support the ground forces in the battle area. In southern France, gun positions roads and rail lines were attacked. Similar targets also were attacked in northern Italy. Other tactical aircraft carried out attacks on military objectives in Yugoslavia, and coastal shipping in the Adriatic and on the west coast of Italy.

Last night, our bombers attacked communications in the Pesaro area on the east coast of Italy.

Twelve of our aircraft are missing from these operations. MAAF flew more than 2,000 sorties. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 27 — Today's Italian Resistance Front Communique:

A group of Patriots which has been operating actively in the Reggio Emilia sector has been reinforced by volunteers.

Patriots stopped a train to liberate their fellows who were being carried off by Nazi-Fascists; they killed 30 Nazi-Fascists.

The Nazi-Fascists, who were incapable of eliminating the resistance of the local Garibaldi Brigade, vented their anger on the helpless civilian population with acts of savage violence. Women and children were massacred. The Germans are using explosive bullets in firing on the inhabitants, and are subjecting them to sadistic torture.

Nazi-Fascists attempted to carry out mopping-up in the Reggio Emilia sector operations with no effective results, but lost 86 men. Patriots remained in control of the above-mentioned sector.

One of the bitterest engagements in this Province lasted 5 days and cost the enemy numerous losses.

In addition to killing Nazi-Fascists in such encounters, detachments of Patriots executed several officers and Fascist hierarchs, including the military commander of Reggio Emilia.

Patriots are concentrating their efforts on acts of sabotage against railway lines, highways, and telegraph and telephone lines. (UNN)

RUMANIAN

LONDON, August 27 — Today's Communique:

Our troops continue their operations for the capture of their assigned objectives. In the capital, where all German resistance has ceased, complete calm reigns.

North of Bucharest, heavy fighting is in progress against the enemy who is stubbornly defending his position. Enemy strongpoints are being liquidated one by one. The town of Targoviste, with its airfield, was captured this morning.

Along the Buzau-Ploesti highway and around Ploesti, the enemy is marshalling strong forces with the aim of crossing the mountains in the Prahova region.

Throughout the territory of Wallachia, Oltenia and Dobrudja, where our troops are in full control of the situation, internment and disarming of German troops continued.

In Transylvania, German troops, supported by some Hungarian formations, attempted to cross the border. They were repelled with heavy losses. At two other places, the enemy was disarmed and we captured over 3,000 prisoners and large quantities of war material, including large medical stores.

On the Danube, a German convoy attempted to escape westwards; it was pursued and attacked by our river flotillas and by shore batteries. So far, two motor torpedo boats and four tugs have been sunk. Another 10 ships have been damaged and two captured.

Our air force yesterday shot down 10 enemy aircraft, including two large transport planes.

A total of 12,000 prisoners have been captured to date together with marshalling yards packed with German railway carriages and hundreds of lorries and cars.

Enemy resistance continues only on the Peninsula south of the city and in the forest south of Six-Fours. In Marseilles much progress was made in liquidating scattered enemy pockets. The advances of American troops eastward along the Riviera coast from Antibes continues slowly. Opposition is chiefly artillery fire and dense mine fields.

Allied Armies in Italy: British and Indian troops of the 8th Army continue to gain ground towards the Goth line east of Florence and in the mountains on either side of the upper Arno and Tiber valleys, representing in some cases advances of three miles. Meanwhile other troops of the 8th Army have crossed the Metauro river driving in enemy outposts, and have established a bridgehead on the north bank of the River. This bridgehead incorporates the high ground about Monte della Mattera just south of Mombaroccio.

On the 5th Army front there has been no change in our forward dispositions although patrols have been active across the river.

Mediterranean Allied Air Forces: Operating in support of Rumanian government forces against the enemy medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked an airdrome and troop concentrations in the Bucharest area, and a train ferry at Giurgiu, on the Danube. Escorting fighters conducted offensive sweeps over the target area. Other formations of heavy bombers concentrated their attacks on rail viaducts and bridges in north eastern Italy, and north western Yugoslavia.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 27 — Tonight's communique:

On August 27 north and southeast of Valka our troops captured over 50 inhabited localities.

East and southeast of Praga our troops successfully repelled attacks by enemy tanks and infantry and improved their positions.

Troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front, as a result of a swift attack by tanks and infantry, today carried by assault Focsani and Rimnicul-Sarat, important communication centres and strong points in the German defences. Over 150 other inhabited localities were captured.

On August 27, the following troops surrendered to the 2nd Ukrainian Army with their full equipment: the 4th Alpine Division, the 7th Heavy Artillery Regiment and remnants of the 4th and 6th Infantry Divisions of the Rumanian army. In addition we captured over 8,000 German officers and men.

Troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front today captured Galatz, an important railway junction and the most important port on the Danube, as well as clearing the eastern bank of the river Prith from Cahul to Reni and capturing the town of Volcanesti. Simultaneously troops of this front waged a successful battle for the liquidation of the enemy group encircled southwest of Kishinev. Remnants of this group are surrounded in a forest north of Hancesti and are being annihilated.

On the battlefield, the bodies of the commanders of the 15th German Infantry Division, Major General Sperl, of the 294th Infantry Division, Major General Eichstedt, and of the 384th German Infantry Division were found.

According to incomplete data, on August 27, forces of the 3rd Ukrainian Front captured more than 10,000 German officers and men, including an infantry general of Infantry Postel, the commander of the 39th German Army Corps, Major General Tronel two divisional commanders, and another corps commander.

On other sectors of the front there was reconnaissance activity and at some points fighting of local importance.

During August 26, on all fronts, 128 German tanks were disabled or destroyed and 89 enemy aircraft shot down in air combat or by ack-ack fire. (Radio Moscow)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 27 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

West of the Lower Seine, our rearguards repulsed numerous attacks by the sharply following enemy. From his bridgehead, north of Manles, the enemy made stronger attacks, but was able to gain little ground only.

In Paris, embattered street-fighting extended also to the north-eastern part and the outer districts. As a result of stubborn resistance offered by our strong-points in the city the enemy constantly is suffering heavy casualties. South of Paris, as well as in the area of Troyes, the Americans attacked with strong forces and in fighting suffering heavy losses advanced some kilometers towards the north and east. Enemy motorized forces trying to block the Rhone valley in the area of Montelimar, were pushed back towards the east. Enemy attacks on Valence were repulsed and numerous tanks shot up.

During the past few days, naval operations off the western coast of France and the Dutch coast have increased in number and violence. Our patrol forces were frequently engaged in heavy fighting with superior enemy naval forces. One enemy destroyer and one E-boat were heavily damaged. Our formations also suffered losses in vessels.

The V-1 fire continues on the area of Greater London.

On the western wing of the Adriatic front, the enemy carried out numerous unsuccessful reconnaissance thrusts.

In the Adriatic coastal sector, the enemy again launched heavy attacks all of which were smashed except for some penetrations.

In Rumania, enemy motorized formations and strong tank forces are advancing in a southerly direction. German units are engaged in heavy fighting to break through the Soviet bolt positions on both sides of the Lower Pruth.

On the slopes of the East Carpathians, our troops repulsed fierce Soviet attacks in several sectors and destroyed numerous enemy tanks. West of Stanislavov, Hungarian troops took some mountain positions.

In the Vistula bridgeheads west of Baranov, west of Kazimierz and south-east of Varka, enemy attempts at breaking through were repulsed partly in counter-attacks. Between the Vistula and Narew, the defensive battle continues with unabated ferocity. In bitter fighting, a Bolshevist breakthrough attempt was prevented, and the enemy who had penetrated was brought to a standstill.

West of Modohn, as well as west of Lake Peipus, our troops repulsed renewed Bolshevist attacks and sealed off some penetrations. The ruins of the town of Dorpat fell into enemy hands after hard street-fighting. Yesterday, the enemy lost 75 planes on the Eastern Front.

In Arctic waters, our submarines sank another destroyer. Damage was caused particularly in residential districts to cultural places and welfare institutions. Enemy planes also dropped bombs on Berlin and Hamburg.

Soviet bombers attacked the town of Tilsit. Fighter formations and anti-aircraft artillery shot down 71 enemy planes including 56 bombers over the Reich area and the occupied western territories. Additional nine enemy planes were shot down over the south-eastern region.

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

France: The correspondent Flato writes that the expected shift of Allied attacking activity in northern France from the Lower Seine to the area of the middle and Upper Seine seems to take shape more and more. Commenting on the Allied report that the thorough destruction of the Cherbourg harbor does not allow its vital use of harbor facilities for the Allies, it is stated that the Allies are thus not yet in possession of a first-class harbor in France.

Paris: Fighting in Paris continued with unrelenting vigor. Americans and de Gaullist formations are increasingly employing heavy weapons and the extent of destructions in the city has further increased. German nests of resistance in the city are defending themselves at many points against the Allies who brought up considerable reinforcements.

Eastern Front: Colonel Ernst von Hammer in his report on operations in the central sector of the Eastern Front writes that the Soviets launched furious attacks with strong forces from both Vistula bridgeheads and after gaining ground temporarily were thrown back. The focal point of the fighting in the central sector is said to be still in the area between Warsaw and Bialystok. South of Warsaw there is violent fighting. East of Warsaw, the Soviets deeply penetrated into the German lines but German tank grenadiers brought the enemy thrust to a standstill. It is said that during this fighting, the new German tank blasting weapons of the army proved to be of outstanding efficiency.

Rumanian Part of Eastern Front: The Soviets in the Rumanian part of the Eastern Front have advanced to the lower reaches of the Sereth. Parts of German formations are engaged in heavy fighting against Soviet outflanking attempts on both sides of the Lower Pruth.

Rumania: Diplomatic correspondent Dr. Siegfried Horn states that the veil which King Michael and his clique have thrown over their treason has been torn by the report of the official Soviet news agency on the armistice terms. This report is said to have indisputably revealed that the traitors intentionally cheated their people by asserting they would lead Rumania out of the war. Furthermore, this official report disclosed that Rumanian traitors shamelessly lied when they attempted to justify the state of war which they proclaimed against Germany by saying that their intention to keep friendly relations with Germany has been answered by Germans with hostile action.

Hungary: A report from Budapest states that news spread by foreign agencies and radio stations about an alleged government crisis in Hungary are freely invented.

Fighting in Rumania — It is reported that Rumanian troops in the course of Saturday have opened hostilities against German formations. Very heavy fighting developed in the northern outskirts of Bucharest and in the area of Ploesti where Rumanian troops trying to disarm German formations were thrown back suffering heavy losses. The correspondent Colonel Ernst von Hammer writes: "In view of the unhindered Soviet advance, the situation of German troops stationed in the extreme southern wing of the Eastern Front has thus become rather precarious."

German military quarters emphatically state that German troops continue to regard Florence as an open town. The Allies themselves have destroyed by air attacks and artillery shelling monuments of art.

ALLIES REACH RIVER RHONE ARE FIVE MILES FROM ITALIAN FRONTIER

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 26 — American and French forces of the Allied 7th Army yesterday thrust out both to the west and to the northeast to reach the Rhone River at Avignon, Tarascon, and Arles, and to approach within five miles of the Italian border at Briançon, 90 miles inland from Nice.

With these latest gains, Allied forces, aided by French Forces of the Interior, have liberated a great bloc of southern France, extending along the coast from the mouth of the Rhône to within 10 miles of Nice, and extending inland 20 miles to Avignon at its western end, and nearly 90 miles at its eastern edge to Briançon. Except for isolated pockets of enemy resistance at Toulon and Marseilles, this expanse of more than 2,000 square miles is now once more free.

American troops and French Forces of the Interior occupied Briançon, a fortress town of 7,500 population. Briançon is 22 miles southeast of Grenoble, which an American "flying column" entered Tuesday after the most spectacular advance of the entire Provencal campaign.

Toulon, and to the east, pockets of enemy resistance were being mopped up. Fort de Colle Noire, a powerful group of three huge coastal defense positions commanding the entrance to Toulon harbor from the east, and one of the strongest points held by the enemy, was occupied.

Today's naval communique reported that this area east of Toulon had been subjected to heavy naval bombardment, and that a United States destroyer had landed a small force of French troops in the Giens sector without opposition. The Peninsula of Giens is just east of the big fortress group of Fort de Colle Noire. Caporun, between the fortress and the harbour of Toulon, was also occupied. French forces now hold practically the entire city of Toulon, as well as the great naval arsenal with its near mile-square maze of quays, forges, workshops, repair facilities, shipbuilding slips, and storage depots, which once formed the home base of the French Mediterranean Fleet. The inner forts of Lamalgue and Mourillon, on the western edges of the city, were also invested by the French troops.

The only organized resistance in the Toulon area is now in the Six-Fours area, on the peninsula to the southwest of the big naval base. Fort Dartigues and Fort Malbousquet, grim bastions guarding the entrance to the inner roadsteads, were captured today in mopping up operations which wiped out the last of the ring of at least a dozen forts encircling Toulon inland and seaward.

In Marseilles, also, French forces have consolidated their positions within the great port city, and were attacking enemy troops holding the Fortress Pinnacle on which the ancient basilica of Notre Dame de la Garde is situated, 500 feet above the old port of the city.

Extensive Demolitions

German demolitions within Marseilles have been extensive, it was reported here tonight. Quays, drydocks, warehouses and other port facilities have been wrecked; both Port Miraheau and the old port at the southern end of town have been severely damaged, with the entrance to the latter blocked by the hulk of a sunken ship. Other ships have been scuttled so that they block quaysides and abstract inner ship berths. The main harbor entrance is also blocked in this fashion.

Briançon, occupied by American troops and French Forces of the Interior, is a fortress city of greatest importance guarding the Franco-Italian frontier at the confluence of the Durance and the Guisane river valleys. A town of about 5,000 population, Briançon is ringed with 12 major fortifications, as well as numerous batteries. It is on the direct rail line to Turin, 80 miles to the east, and the heart of northwestern Italy's industrial district.

Avignon is the fourth largest city liberated by the 7th Army in southern France. With a population over 50,000, it is the capital of the Department of Vaucluse, and was for a period of 70 years the seat of the mediaeval papacy.

Tarascon and Arles, Rhone towns south of Avignon, and reached by French forces of the 7th Army, have populations of 8,000 and 16,000, respectively.

Carpentras and Cavaillon are pleasant rural towns of

ALLIES REACH RIVER RHONE ARE FIVE MILES FROM ITALIAN FRONTIER

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 26 — American and French forces of the Allied 7th Army yesterday thrust out both to the west and to the northeast to reach the Rhone River at Avignon, Tarascon, and Arles, and to approach within five miles of the Italian border at Briançon, 80 miles inland from Nice.

American troops and French Forces of the Interior occupied Briançon, a fortress town of 7,500 population. Briançon is 22 miles southeast of Grenoble, which an American «flying column» entered Tuesday, after the most spectacular advance of the entire Provençal campaign.

French troops reached the Rhône at Arles and at Tarascon, about five miles farther north, while American forces moved into Avignon, 20 miles from the mouth of the river, and then swerved northward.

Communications Nerve Center

With the three river towns within their grasp, the Allied forces control the nerve center of road and rail communications in southern France, bunched along this 10-mile stretch of the lower Rhône Valley, where traffic from the industrial north turns east along the Riviera. Tarascon, center of the three river towns, is only eight miles east of the rail center of Nimes, the hub of routes north to Vichy and west to Toulouse.

American forces also occupied the towns of Carpentras and Cavaillon, roughly eight miles northeast and southeast of Avignon, respectively, and reached Sault, 12 miles north of Cadenet, in the Durance River valley.

In the bitter fighting to reduce the German hold on the fortress city of Toulon, where a trapped enemy garrison has held out now for five days, the main fortress group guarding the seaward approaches to the great naval base has been captured.

At midday yesterday, it was reported, French forces had made «substantial progress» in their occupation of the fortress group of Forts de Cap Brun, Cap Aiguille, between the fortress and the harbour of Toulon, was also occupied. French forces now hold practically the entire city of Toulon, as well as the great naval arsenal with its near mile-square maze of quays, forges, workshops, repair facilities, shipbuilding slips, and storage depots, which once formed the home base of the French Mediterranean Fleet. The inner forts of Lamalgue and Mourillon, on the western edges of the city, were also invested by the French troops.

The only organized resistance in the Toulon area is now in the Six-Fours area, on the peninsula to the southwest of the big naval base. Fort Darugues and Fort Malbousquet, grim bastions guarding the entrance to the inner roadsteads, were captured today in mopping up operations which wiped out the last of the ring of at least a dozen forts encircling Toulon inland and seaward.

In Marseilles, also, French forces have consolidated their positions within the great port city, and were attacking enemy troops holding the Fortress Pinnacle on which the ancient basilica of Notre Dame de la Garde is situated, 500 feet above the old port of the city.

Extensive Demolitions

German demolitions within Marseilles have been extensive, it was reported here tonight. Quays, drydocks, warehouses and other port facilities have been wrecked; both Port Mirabeau and the old port at the southern end of town have been severely damaged, with the entrance to the latter blocked by the hulk of a sunken ship. Other ships have been scuttled so that they block quaysides and obstruct inner ship berths. The main harbor entrance is also blocked in this fashion.

Briançon, occupied by American troops and French Forces of the Interior, is a fortress city of greatest importance guarding the Franco-Italian frontier at the confluence of the Durance and the Guisane river valleys. A town of about 5,000 population, Briançon is ringed with 12 major fortifications, as well as numerous batteries. It is on the direct rail line to Turin, 80 miles to the east, and the heart of northwestern Italy's industrial district.

Avignon is the fourth largest city liberated by the 7th Army in southern France. With a population over 50,000, it is the capital of the Department of Vaucluse, and was for a period of 30 years the seat of the mediaeval papacy.

Tarascon and Arles, Rhone towns south of Avignon, and reached by French forces of the 7th Army, have populations of 8,000 and 16,000, respectively.

Carpentras and Cavaillon are pleasant, rural towns of 9,000 and 11,000 population, located in rich farmlands to the east of Avignon.

Sault is a small village at the eastern border of Vaucluse Department. (PRO)

SURRENDERED PARIS GARRISON NUMBERED 10,000

SHAEF, August 26 — The German garrison which surrendered in Paris is estimated to be 10,000 men, a late press dispatch reported tonight.

One German strongpoint is holding out at Champigny, at the southeast edge of the city. There are some groups resisting in the northeast and northwest suburbs.

There is considerable German movement eastward from Le Havre. (Reuter)

BOMBARDMENT OF TOULON DEFENSES

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 26 — The USS Nevada, 29-year-old American battleship, formed part of the bombarding fleet which helped silence the mighty coastal fortresses guarding Toulon, it was announced here today.

The Nevada, accompanied by the French battleship Lorraine and the American cruisers Quincy and Augusta, approached the outer roadsteads of Toulon to pound the big fortresses ringing the base to seaward. Among the gun positions silenced, it was said, were two naval turrets which the Germans had removed from the French battleship Provence and placed on a headland south of the main harbor.

An Allied battleship and two cruisers early Thursday night carried out the bombardment of enemy forces still holding out at the southern edges of Marseilles harbor, while four Allied cruisers carried out a heavy assault on the three remaining coastal batteries active in the Toulon area.

The French cruiser Emil Bertin fired 73 rounds from its six-inch guns into the harbor of Nice, at the eastern edge of the bridgehead, and set a merchant vessel afire. Allied destroyers supported land forces in the Cannes and Nice area. They damaged a bridge over the River Var. (PRO)

WILSON CONGRATULATES ALLIED COMMANDERS

ADVANCE, AFHQ, ITALY, August 26 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean, has sent messages of congratulations on the operations in southern France to the Allied ground and naval commanders, it was announced here today.

In a message to Lieut. General Alexander Patch, commanding general of the 7th Army, General Wilson praised the «determination and drive» of the Allied forces which he predicted would «result in the total destruction of the German 19th Army in southern France.

The Supreme Allied commander also congratulated Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief of Allied naval forces, for the «masterful manner in which the invasion forces had been marshalled, transported, landed, supported, and supplied» by Allied naval forces.

General Wilson asked that his congratulations also be sent to General de Lattre de Tassigny and to the officers and men of the French forces. (PRO)

ALLIED NEWSMEN MOTOR TO GENEVA

GENEVA, August 26 — Allied war correspondents arrived here in a jeep today, having driven up through France far ahead of General Patch's 7th Army.

An Associated Press dispatch said AP newsman Edward Kennedy had arrived with correspondents for the Chicago Times, the International News Service, and the London News Chronicle. A lone soldier jeep driver went along as a bodyguard. (OWI)

NEW ATTACK ON BREST
FIVE ALLIED BRIDGEHEADS OVER SEINE

SHAEF, August 26 — A new attack on the great port of Brest has begun with ground, air, and naval forces making the assault in close cooperation, it was announced tonight. A force of 250 Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked the port installation while naval forces engaged shore guns.

A new bridgehead across the Seine was established at Vernon, north of Mantes-Gassicourt today by British troops after a brilliant maneuver in which a march of more than 40 miles was covered in six hours. The Allies now have five substantial bridgeheads across the Seine, Melun, southeast and troops attempting to swim across the river. Under the tremendous attacks of Tactical Air Force planes, practically all German movement across the river had ceased.

General Dwight Eisenhower stated today that the «elimination» of the German 7th Army as a fighting entity has decided the battle of France.

At the bottom of the pocket, American troops are mopping up in the loop of the Siene between Elbeuf and Louviers, which was by-passed in the initial push. The forest has been cleared, but the Germans still hold the small town of Pont de L'Arche, on the bank of the river.

A press dispatch reported that elements of the German 15th Army have been withdrawn from the rocket-coast fortifications, and will probably be sent into battle against the Allied bridgehead north of Paris. (AP-Reuter-OWI)

ALLIES USE NEW WEAPON IN FRANCE

LONDON, August 26 — A Reuter correspondent today described a new, secretly-produced British weapon which is said to have played a large part in Allied victories in western France.

The devastating offensive weapon, a flame-thrower which when mounted on an armoured vehicle can belch flames over a distance of 160 yards, is said to be the largest of its type, and is fed with liquid fuel and compressed gas. (Reuter)

HEAVIES BOMB OIL TARGETS, BREST DEFENSES

LONDON, August 26 — For the third consecutive day Allied heavy bombers today attacked targets in Germany. While nearly 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF concentrated on a number of Germany's dwindling oil-plants, other 8th USAAF bombers struck at the big Atlantic port and naval base of Brest. They attacked German batteries fortified targets in support of the Allied ground assaults aimed at crushing enemy resistance in Brest. Today's bombing followed last night's «drenching» of the Brest defenses with 1,350 tons of explosives by RAF bombers.

Clear weather over France and Germany today enabled both forces to drop their bombs visually, and results were generally good. The German oil targets attacked were the Schovian-Ruer and Nordstern synthetic oil plants at Gelsenkirchen, an oil refinery at Emmerich near the Netherlands border, an oil finishing plant at Salzbergen, west of Osnabruck, and synthetic oil facilities at Ludwigshafen, near the Swiss border.

German oil supplies north of the Seine were also attacked and destroyed today. Striking in nine waves, American bombers left four German fuel dumps in the Compiegne-Laon area a mass of flames and smoke. These dumps were strategically located petrol points where the Germans had vast stores in readiness for their tanks and other heavy equipment which they were about to ferry across the Seine from the north bank. Without these vital stores, an American official statement said, a rapid and well-organized German retreat will be difficult.

Last night, RAF planes were out in force, attacking sea and land targets from the Frisian Island to Peenemunde. One thousand bombers attacked targets in France and Germany, including flying bomb sites and a large concrete structure believed to be connected with the use of long-range rockets.

SHAEF, August 26 — A new attack on the great port of Brest has begun with ground, air, and naval forces making the assault in close cooperation, it was announced tonight. A force of 250 Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked the port installation while naval forces engaged shore guns.

A new bridgehead across the Seine was established at Vernon, north of Mantes-Gassicourt today by British troops after a brilliant maneuver in which a march of more than 40 miles was covered in six hours. The Allies now have five substantial bridgeheads across the Seine. Melun, southeast of Paris, was freed today by American troops after a hard battle and the other bridgeheads at Corbeil, Fontainebleau, and Montereau are being strengthened. Allied forces at Mantes are 100 miles from the borders of Belgium and Alsace-Lorraine.

It was announced tonight that American forces pushing eastward beyond the Yonne River, a tributary of the Seine, have taken Marigny le Chatel, northwest of Troyes.

The Germans west of the Seine are rapidly being squeezed into an area which is hourly becoming smaller. Allied troops today reached Pont Audemer, on the eastern side of the River Risle, in their relentless drive to the lower reaches of the Seine. Other Allied troops driving north have reached Bourgtheroulde, 11 miles southwest of Rouen.

The Germans are now virtually compressed into the narrow strip of the Seine's lower bank, where the only depth of their positions is afforded by the river's bends. The Germans hold on the Seine's southern bank is less than 15 miles wide. It is estimated that 40,000 enemy troops are caught in this new pocket as well as some armor.

These latest advances have brought the whole trap south of the Seine Estuary within range of Allied guns, and the escape roads from Rouen can also be brought under shell-fire. The whole strength of RAF fighters and fighter-bombers in Normandy was turned today against German escape attempts. Attacks were made on troops in rowboats, barges,

Last night, RAF planes were out in force, attacking sea and land targets from the Frisian Island to Peenemunde. One thousand bombers attacked targets in France and Germany, including flying bomb sites and a large concrete structure believed to be connected with the use of long-range rockets.

The main objective was Russelsheim, where large fires were left burning at the Opel motor works. Darmstadt and Berlin were also hit by Mosquitoes.

Enemy Convoy Attacked

Beaufighters of RAF Coastal Command attacked an enemy convoy of six merchant vessels and 11 escorts northwest of Borkum, the easternmost of the Frisian Islands. A British Air Ministry communique said the planes fired rockets, torpedoes, and cannon, and left three heavily-armed escort vessels ablaze, another smoking and another on fire. All the Allied aircraft returned from this operation, in which a Polish Mustang squadron also took part.

In an area from the Pas de Calais to Lille, Mosquito bombers ranged far to attack motor transports and trains. One Mosquito formation found an eight-mile long convoy north of Aachen, and scattered it with cannon and machine-gun fire.

Also included among the targets hit last night was the flying bomb and rocket experimental center at Peenemunde, which was hit by 8th USAAF heavy bombers during daylight only a few hours earlier.

London and the southern counties of England were not attacked by flying-bombs for a period of over 30 hours — the longest lull in flying-bomb raids since they began more than 10 weeks ago. Associated Press said the lull was possibly a result of the heavy attacks on the bomb sites as the Allied armies advance towards the flying-bomb coast. A large 'nest' of flying bombs in the Havre region is now believed to be menaced. According to the News Chronicle, eight V-1 sites have been examined by technical and intelligence personnel, who found none was near completion.

A total of 93 German planes were destroyed in the air and on the ground during offensive patrols and attacks by Allied planes on Friday, SHAEF announced today.

Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF supporting the American advance in France in three days ending yesterday destroyed more than 1,000 motor vehicles, 118 enemy planes, and 60 tanks, it was reported today. Enemy ground losses on Friday alone were 54 tanks destroyed and 50 damaged. Enemy air opposition was the greatest encountered for some time. The 9th USAAF lost 32 planes in the three-day period.

The 2nd TAF was also active yesterday. During sweeps over the lower reaches of the Seine, they set afire two enemy ships of 3,000-tons and 5,000 tons which later sank. Friday's 2d TAF sorties also resulted in the destruction of over 1,000 motor vehicles, nearly 20 barges, two motor vessels, and other river craft. During 1,245 sorties, eight Allied aircraft were lost.

Sixty Distinguished Flying Crosses were presented to pilots of the 19th TAF Air Command in ceremonies at landing strips in France today. A pioneer Mustang group of 9th USAAF which has destroyed 471 German planes in less than 10 months was awarded the Presidential Unit Citation by Maj. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Associated Press reported.

'DIG OR DIE' - IS MOTTO OF RETREATING GERMANS

CHARTRES, August 26 — Retreating under the withering attacks from Allied Air Forces, the German Army in northern France has adopted the motto «Dig or Die.» Nervous German convoy drivers keep one eye on roadside foxholes as they pull back without air protection.

An Associated Press correspondent reported that for 30 miles along main or secondary roads to Chartres, small bundles of straw were tied to saplings every 50 yards to show the way to emergency foxholes and slit trenches for German convoys under air attack. As soon as a Nazi driver heard the sound of Allied strafing planes he swung the vehicle off the road and dived into the trench.

Each foxhole is four to six feet deep and long enough for two to four men, the dispatch continued. Some are surrounded with barbed wire — perhaps to keep Allied soldiers away — perhaps to keep French cows from tumbling in on the occupants.

«Nothing shows more completely the German inability to cope with Allied air power than these futile and crafty slit trenches. Instead of the Luftwaffe overhead to protect them so that they can fight on, the Germans are given holes in the ground in which to hide,» the dispatch concluded.

MORE GERMAN ESCAPE SHIPS SUNK IN CHANNEL

LONDON, August 26 — Light United States and British naval forces have frustrated further German efforts to escape by sea from ports in northern France.

Before dawn today, coastal patrol warships, joined by the French destroyer La Combattante, intercepted a German convoy off Cap D'Antifer. Five of the German ships were sunk, and a remaining two were driven ashore.

At the same time, British torpedo boats engaged two other Nazi «escape ships» and drove them into Fécamp harbor badly damaged. In still another engagement yesterday, British torpedo boats blew up two out of three German ships interrested off Holland.

The Admiralty said tonight that Allied naval forces in these engagements suffered neither damage nor casualties.

UNCONDITIONAL GERMAN SURRENDER OF PARIS

PARIS, August 26 — The final unconditional surrender of Paris was signed at 1800 hours yesterday in a baggage master's office in Montparnasse railway station in Paris. General Dietrich von Choltitz, German commander of the Paris garrison, first surrendered personally to General Leclerc and then to the United States Corps Commander of which Leclerc's 2d Armored Division is a part.

Describing the surrender, an Associated Press dispatch said the order to German troops to cease resistance in the military district and defense points was signed by General von Choltitz. Copies were given immediately to German officers who were escorted by American, British, and French officers in jeeps to parts of the city where German units were fighting.

Outside the baggage room where the surrender took place, a dozen members of Von Choltitz' staff, from full colonels down, sat dejectedly on the floor of the station, with their legs dangling over the tracks. They were guarded by a lone French police. Bullets crashed through the massive glass-paned shed over the tracks, showering them with glass splinters, and each time a bullet hit, they ducked, the dispatch said.

General Charles de Gaulle was in the city at the time of the surrender, but did not meet the German commander. Today, he laid a wreath on the Unknown Soldier's tomb under the Arc de Triomphe, reported Radio Paris.

The French capital is now fairly quiet, said an announcement from SHAEF, although some mopping up is still being carried out.

Arc de Triomphe Battle

Yesterday afternoon, in the Place de l'Etoile and around the Arc de Triomphe, an amazing battle developed in the middle of a magnificent parade of liberation watched by crowds delirious with joy, reported a Reuter correspondent. As the colorful procession wound down Boulevard Victor Hugo, it went straight into the midst of a ferocious fight with German stormtroopers barricaded in buildings near the Arc de Triomphe. The parade continued as its forward elements engaged the enemy and attacked them in their strongholds, while civilians stood around waving flags and cheering them on.

Gaily decorated tanks and halftracks began to fire on the enemy with civilians at their sides, as the notes of a French bugle signalled the advance into battle, said the dispatch. Women hugged and kissed the soldiers as they loaded their guns, and then ran for cover. Exploding shells seemed to shake the Arc de Triomphe itself, and many women knocked down by concussion of explosions merely laughed. The Maquis could be seen dragging frightened German soldiers with them, and a heavy guard was needed to prevent the population from rending them in pieces.

In all, the battle of the Arc de Triomphe lasted three hours. At one point the Germans exploded a huge ammunition dump, and for half an hour skyrockets arched into the sky.

On the outskirts of Paris, roads were jammed with vehicles trying to bypass road blocks, including trees chopped down by the French to hinder the Germans.

Later, the news came of General de Gaulle's arrival in Paris to the accompaniment of a thunderous ovation from the people.

General Koenig's communique tonight announced that the FFI had liberated seven more big French towns and had driven the Germans out of the Tarentaise valley in the Savoy region. The towns are: Foix, near the Pyrenees; Mont de Marsan, south of Bordeaux; Carmaux and Albi, east of Toulouse; Aix les Bains, and Gueret, Creuse and Concarneau, in Brittany.

«WARSPITE» SMASHES COASTAL BATTERIES

ABOARD H.M.S. WARSPITE, August 26 — The 15-inch guns of the British battleship Warspite yesterday carried out what is believed to be the greatest single naval bombardment of the war.

In a little less than 2 1/2 hours, she hurled about 212 tons of high explosives at four German shore batteries on the Brest Peninsula. These were smashed, and a concentration of German artillery was all but annihilated, as the Warspite softened up the area to clear the way for a scheduled ground force attack further inland.

A Reuter correspondent said French fishing smacks continued to trawl offshore, «apparently oblivious of the nonstop sea blitz, as the Warspite hurled 212 rounds 18 miles shoreward.

«I watched the bombardment from the starboard side of the admiral's bridge,» he wrote «but after seeing a steel door unhinged by the terrific blast effect I quickly changed to the portside.

French gratitude to the Allies was expressed in a speech broadcast last night from Paris by Georges Bidault, president of the National Council of Resistance. «France is today a new country of free men,» he said. «You can still hear the enemy cannons and the French rifle fire being almost continuously exchanged, but confidence and enthusiasm are not on the side of the largest calibers.»

LOUVRE TREASURES SAFE

PARIS, August 26 — The priceless art treasures of the Louvre were removed to secret hiding places in 1939, and have escaped damage, the United Press said today.

AIR ATTACKS CUT NAZI OIL PRODUCTION

SHAEF, August 26 — A joint statement of United States and British air forces issued here today said the production of finished oil products for Germany was reduced an estimated 49 per cent by Allied air bombardments during May, June, and July.

The statement said that day and night Allied air attacks from bases in Britain, Italy, and Russia on oil installations in Germany and her satellite countries, resulted in a sharp curtailment of German production capacity of both gasoline and lubricants.

"The enemy," the statement added, "is finding the resulting situation extremely troublesome, as is indicated by the overriding priority he has given to the repair and rebuilding of synthetic and natural oil plants seriously damaged.

"A number of these installations have been repaired and put back into production. As a result of this emergency work it is possible that some improvement in the overall oil situation may take place by the end of August, but in view of our continuing attacks, it is too early to say what the exact situation will be then." ISMAIL ON THE DANUBE FALLS TO RED ARMY

MOSCOW, August 26 — Red Army troops reached the banks of the Danube today, capturing the town of Ismail, important German stronghold protecting the delta area, about 40 miles east of Galatz.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said the city was overrun by troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, and the Soviet communique added that in the course of the day's fighting these forces captured 21,000 prisoners, most of whom were German.

Counting German losses in the Rumanian battle, Reuter said tonight that the Reichswehr has given up 300,000 men in the last six days, and that German armies in Rumania are now faced with total collapse.

In the Kishinev area, overrun by Soviet soldiers several days ago, the number of Germans trapped in a steadily tightening Russian encirclement was estimated tonight to be about 100,000.

The Russian Army newspaper, Red Star, said today that the situation of the surrounded enemy is becoming more critical every hour. Elements of 12 Nazi divisions are enclosed in the trap, and they were said tonight to be running short of supplies.

From the banks of the Danube northward to Warsaw tonight, there were no Russian reports of any major gains. But east and northeast of the Polish capital, in the drive toward the Polish Corridor, Soviet dispatches said Red Army troops pushed forward into several small towns after beating off German counter-attacks.

A more sensational report on the front northeast of Warsaw came from the German News Agency's military correspondent, who said the Russians today began a 50-mile-wide offensive on this sector. The commentator estimated the strength of the new drive at 150,000 men. He said there [illegible]

RUMANIAN DICTATOR ANTONESCU ARRESTED ARMISTICE TERMS PUBLISHED

MOSCOW, August 26 — Former Rumanian dictator Ion Antonescu, who assumed dictatorial powers and forced the abdication of King Carol in 1940, has been arrested and is now being held by the Rumanian Royal Guard, an official Soviet statement declared here tonight.

The official announcement said that Antonescu had rejected the Soviet peace terms, agreed to by the United Nations, including the annullment of the Vienna award of Transylvania to Hungary. King Michael of Rumania and the new Rumanian government of General Sanatescu have agreed to accept the terms of the armistice.

Radio Moscow broadcast an account of the Armistice negotiations between Russia and Rumania regarding the terms of the armistice offered to Rumania in April, 1944. The conditions were:

First to break with Germany and join the common struggle with Allied forces, including the Red Army, against the Germans with the object of reestablishing the independence and sovereignty of Rumania.

Second, the reestablishment of the Soviet-Rumanian frontier under the agreement of 1940.

Third, indemnities for damage caused to the Soviet Union by military operations and by the occupation by Rumania of Soviet territory.

Fourth, return of all Soviet and Allied prisoners of war and internees.

Fifth, to ensure freedom of movement across Rumanian territory in every direction to Soviet troops and other Allied troops should the military situation render it necessary. The Rumanian government is to render every possible assistance thereto by all means in its power in regard to communications by land, sea, and air.

Sixth, the Soviet Union agrees to the annulment of the Vienna arbitration award on Transylvania and to the lending of assistance in the task of liberating Transylvania.

The Russian statement said that, according to available information, Bucharest is firmly held by the new Rumanian government. Bucharest is being shelled with anti-aircraft guns as the Germans have no other artillery. The Germans are also pounding the regions of the military barracks from the air.

Nazi Mission Interned

It was further announced that the German military mission, headed by General Zaitzer, and other German nationals, have been interned. The German News Agency earlier today said that the German Legation was besieged by Rumanian troops, and that there was no possibility of establishing contact with either the German minister or his collaborators.

Rumanian troops have occupied the Carpathian passes.

The Rumanian attaches in Sweden, Denmark, and Finland have declared their loyalty to King Michael and their support of his new regime, the Swedish Telegraph Bureau reported today from Stockholm. The dispatch said the Rumanian Legation in Copenhagen had broken with the Germans and the staff had gone to Sweden.

resulting situation extremely troublesome, as is indicated by the overriding priority he has given to the repair and rebuilding of synthetic and natural oil plants seriously damaged.

«A number of these installations have been repaired and put back into production. As a result of this emergency work it is possible that some improvement in the overall oil situation may take place by the end of August, but in view of our continuing attacks, it is too early to say what the exact situation will be then.» (OWI)

ISMAIL ON THE DANUBE FALLS TO RED ARMY

MOSCOW, August 26 — Red Army troops reached the banks of the Danube today, capturing the town of Ismail, important German stronghold protecting the delta area, about 40 miles east of Galatz.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said the city was overrun by troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, and the Soviet communique added that in the course of the day's fighting these forces captured 21,600 prisoners, most of whom were German.

Counting German losses in the Rumanian battle, Reuter said tonight that the Reichswehr has given up 300,000 men in the last six days, and that German armies in Rumania are now faced with total collapse.

In the Kishinev area, overrun by Soviet soldiers several days ago, the number of Germans trapped in a steadily tightening Russian encirclement was estimated tonight to be about 100,000.

The Russian Army newspaper, Red Star, said today that the situation of the surrounded enemy is becoming more critical every hour. Elements of 12 Nazi divisions are enclosed in the trap, and they were said tonight to be running short of supplies.

From the banks of the Danube northward to Warsaw tonight, there were no Russian reports of any major gains. But east and northeast of the Polish capital, in the drive toward the Polish Corridor, Soviet dispatches said Red Army troops pushed forward into several small towns after beating off German counter-attacks.

A more sensational report on the front northeast of Warsaw came from the German News Agency's military correspondent, who said the Russians today began a 50-mile-wide offensive on this sector. The commentator estimated the strength of the new drive at 150,000 men. He said there were 14 infantry divisions and several tank corps involved in the tremendous push.

On the Baltic front, the Russian vise closing in on trapped German divisions squeezed beyond liberated Tartu today, taking an undisclosed number of inhabited localities and several railway stations. To the south, below Riga, the Russian advance was held, but not set back, by strong German infantry and tank attacks. North of Valga, 70 small towns and villages have been overrun in the continued advance. (Reuter)

WARSAW REPEATS APPEAL TO RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, August 26 — Patriots fighting in Warsaw today broadcast repeated appeals over the Polish Radio to the International Red Cross for aid to families imprisoned by the Germans in a concentration camp at Pruszkow, 12 miles from the city.

The Nazis have driven out the inhabitants of all the houses in districts not captured by the Underground forces and then set fire to the dwellings.

The appeals said that «tens of thousands» of civilians were stuffed into the camp, and that «the ill, the aged, the women, and the children are among those imprisoned at the camp.» (OWI)

The dispatch said the Rumanian Legation in Copenhagen had broken with the Germans and the staff had gone to Sweden.

Dr. Juliu Maniu, minister without portfolio in the new Rumanian cabinet and leader of the National Peasant Party, issued a statement broadcast yesterday by Radio Bucharest in which he condemned the Germans for their betrayal of Rumania. He said:

«Our allies of yesterday, whom we housed in our country for four years and in whose interest Rumania sacrificed more than a half million men, have attacked our capital by land from the air, because Rumania is defending her legitimate interests. The German commanders ordered their armies to attack and destroy the capital, and started aggressive air operations against the Royal Palace.

«Allied troops and our men from the former front line nearing the capital, and our armies now fighting at home, will put an end to this passing difficulty. We must everywhere disarm the German Army, confiscate its weapons, and prevent the Germans from acting either as an army or as individuals.» (Reuter-OWI)

BULGARIANS DISARM NAZIS, ASK FOR PEACE TERMS

MOSCOW, August 26 — Bulgaria, whose position in the now isolated southeast corner of Europe became hopeless after the capitulation of Rumania, has ordered the withdrawal of all German troops from Bulgarian soil, has already disarmed some Nazi units, according to an official statement broadcast tonight, and has assured the Soviet Union that she intends to adhere to a policy of strict neutrality from now on.

Today, from the Soviet Information Bureau, came this official statement:

- Bulgarian Minister for Foreign Affairs, Dragonov, has made a declaration to Soviet Charge d'Affaires, Comrade Kirsanov, on behalf of the Bulgarian Government, to the effect that the Bulgarian Government has taken a decision to maintain complete neutrality. Dragonov stated that in the event of German troops at present in Rumania retreating into Bulgaria, they would be disarmed and dealt with in accordance with provisions of the Hague Convention. -

Meanwhile, the Bulgarian radio said the Sofia Government has approached the United States and Great Britain for information regarding terms under which she may withdraw from the war. (OWI)

TENSE SITUATION REPORTED IN HUNGARY

WASHINGTON, August 26 — The puppet government of Hungary is making desperate attempts to counteract the mounting nation-wide peace movement, which is daily gaining strength following Rumania's armistice request and Bulgaria's peace overtures, reports indicated today.

The German news agency, DNB, today quoted a German Foreign Office spokesman as saying that a reshuffle of the Hungarian cabinet has taken place. The agency said, "This move became necessary following developments in southeastern Europe."

This latest move on the part of the Hungarian puppet Premier, Doene Szujay, is a sequel to his decree of yesterday dissolving all political parties in the country.

An Overseas News Agency dispatch from Berne yesterday said civil war is expected to break out in Hungary any time now. The dispatch said the country has been thrown into panic as a consequence of Rumania's surrender. Further evidence of the tense situation in Hungary can be seen in the fact that the Hungarian cabinet has been in continued session since the announcement of Rumania's action. (OWI)

8TH ARMY EAST OF FLORENCE ADVANCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 26 — Enemy resistance in a large section east of Florence and west of Bibbiena (north of Arezzo) in the vicinity of the Pratomagno Mountain mass, collapsed yesterday and British and Indian troops of the 8th Army advanced up to three miles in the difficult mountainous country.

The enemy collapse here and the speedy Allied Advance into the positions around the Allied flank east of Florence. Troops of an Indian division moved through the Mountains west of the Arno and reached Ogmi. Enemy demolitions were seen at Bibbiena and Poppi. Enemy positions about three miles northeast of Rignano were found abandoned and explosions were heard in the Pelago area and to the north.

In the Florence vicinity, British patrols reached Castel di Poggio, four miles northeast of the center of the city, after some opposition.

Polish troops on the Adriatic sector inflicted severe losses on the enemy during heavy fighting which drove the Germans back beyond the Metauro River. The Poles destroyed or captured 20 self-propelled guns, including seven 88 millimeter Hornets, 12 anti-tank guns, and six tanks.

The Allied forces found hard going here. All roads and river crossings in the area were found to be heavily mined and booby-trapped. But the Polish soldiers kept contact with the enemy, capturing Pieve, a village on the north [illegible] of Highway 3. There Latisana rail bridge over the Tagliamento River between Trieste and Venice.

Liberators again bombed the Ferrara rail bridge over the Po, hit for the third time in four days. Although one of the most heavily defended targets, the bridge has now been smashed at its northern end.

Ravenna Railyards Hit

RAF Wellingtons, Liberators, and Halifaxes last night attacked the railway yards at Ravenna, the key supply point for German troops in the Adriatic sector.

The Allied planes made concentrated attacks in excellent illumination, many sticks of bombs falling across the yards. One of the many fires started increased rapidly and was visible 7 miles away. At the end of the attack, the target was obscured by smoke, which rose about 3,000 feet.

Fighter-bombers and light and medium bombers flew offensive sorties over the Italian front yesterday, attacking gun positions, motor transport, road and rail communications, and rail yards and other objectives. A locomotive, 33 motor vehicles, 12 tank cars, and other rolling stock were damaged.

The Balkan Air Force, operating in support of Partisan forces in Yugoslavia, attacked enemy barracks in Croatia and Albania. The first point struck was at Bjelovar, east of Zagreb, where an enemy barracks consisting of 20 blocks of buildings was effectively dive-bombed. The enemy gun posts were unable to fire a single shot at the attacking planes.

This attacking force then turned its attention to a railroad stretch between Zagreb and Banova Jaruga, shooting up four trains, two of them carrying troops.

Allied tactical aircraft continued their attacks on enemy transport in the Rhone and Po Valleys, smashing at rail and road bridges in the Rhone Valley. In northern Italy, widespread attacks were carried out on enemy transport and communications. (PRO)

GENERAL CLARK REVIEWS BRAZILIANS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 26 — Lieutenant General Mark Clark, Commander of the Allied 5th Army, today reviewed the tanned, determined troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, now with the 5th Army, in ceremonies honoring Brazil's national holiday.

General Clark told the green-clad soldiers, cream of the Brazilian Army, that their presence with the 5th Army was an "indication of the solidarity of purpose" of Brazil and the United States, and forecast for the Brazilian troops "a great part" in the Allied victories yet ahead.

General Clark was accompanied by Major General Joao Baptista Mascarenhas de Moraes, commanding general of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, Brigadier General Euclides Zenobio da Costa, commander of troops of the formation; and Major General Chadebec Lavallade, former chief of the French military mission to Brazil. MIHAILOVICH HIGH COMMAND DISSOLVED

LONDON, August 26 — The Yugoslav Government announced today that the high command headed by General Draja Mihailovich has ceased to exist, by order of King Peter.

Marshal Tito has announced that joint operations by British and American ground troops and Yugoslav Patriots might be expected on a growing scale in the near future, Joseph Morton, correspondent for the combined American press, wrote in a delayed dispatch from Tito's headquarters.

Decisions on this were reached at a recent conference in Italy between Prime Minister Churchill, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean theater, and Marshal Tito, the dispatch added.

There was further fighting four miles northwest of Ippolito, while Monte Paganuccio was occupied after some fighting.

On the 5th Army's western sector, there was slightly increased artillery and patrol activity. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES AID RUMANIANS AT BUCHAREST

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 26 — Formations of «Liberators,» escorted by long-range fighters, today flew from Italy to aid Rumanian Government forces defending Bucharest against German attacks, it was announced here this evening.

The heavy bombers blasted the Otopeni airfield, nine miles north of the Rumanian capital, from which the Germans were carrying out an air bombardment of the chief city of their former ally, and the German Army barracks at Buzeasa, 19 miles to the northeast. A third formation attacked the train ferry at Giurgiu, on the Danube, the only direct link between Bulgaria and the Bucharest area.

Flying Forts also attacked three rail lines leading into northeastern Italy today. Targets were the Avisio viaduct on the Brenner Pass line, the Borovnica viaduct, in Yugoslavia, on the line from Ljubljana to Trieste, and the buildings was effectively dive-bombed. The enemy gunners were unable to fire a single shot at the attacking planes.

This attacking force then turned its attention to a railroad stretch between Zagreb and Banova Jaruga, shooting up four trains, two of them carrying troops.

Decisions on this were reached at a recent conference in Italy between Prime Minister Churchill, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean theater, and Marshal Tito, the dispatch added.

From Marshal Tito's headquarters today's communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, said that Allied planes supporting his forces have destroyed German traffic and communications points in the Zagreb-Belgrade sector.

Oil wells and two trains, one loaded with oil, were set on fire, and bombs were dropped on Nova Gradiska and Banova Jaruga, the communique added.

In Croatia, the enemy offensive in Moslavina was broken, the enemy including the 1st German Cavalry Division and other reinforcements.

In Banat, Tito's units captured two enemy strongholds.

As a result of the agreement between the Royal Yugoslav Government and the Yugoslav National Liberation Committee, the government will be kept informed of the country's needs, Premier Ivan Subasic told Yugoslav journalists at the end of his temporary stay in liberated territory.

«As you see, the Royal Government is closely linked with the supreme headquarters of Marshal Tito, and now that General Velebit (Tito's military representative) is in London, the government can always learn the needs of the people and of the army.

«One of the greatest tasks of the Royal Government is to do everything to carry out its duty towards the people and the Army,» Premier Subasic said. (PWB-OWI-Reuter)

JAP SHIPPING IN CELEBES HIT

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, August 26 — Skip-bombing Mitchells and Liberators set fire to a light Japanese cruiser, sank five medium freighters, damaged two others and 40 barges in a raid in the Celebes on Thursday, it was announced in the communique.

Liberators set fire to Japanese installations at Halmahera in a raid in which 59 tons of bombs were dropped, the report added.

Many large fires and explosions were observed when Halmahera, in the Moluccas, was again attacked.

A Pacific Fleet Headquarters announcement said that Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, was bombed by Liberators during the night of August 23-24. Meagre anti-aircraft fire was encountered and there were no interceptions.

Pagan and Agrigan islands, in the Marianas, were attacked on August 23 and several fires started. Mitchells bombed Ponape again. (PWB)

CHINESE BESIEGING INNER WALLS OF TENGCHUNG

CHUNGKING, August 26 — Chinese troops have driven into the heart of the Japanese stronghold of Tengchung, in western Yunnan Province, and today were attacking enemy forces within the walls of the inner city, said the Chinese High Command.

The Chungking communique said that a Japanese counter-attack was thrust back, and that large quantities of supplies, including medical stores and tinned foods, were taken.

Fighting continued for the Burma Road city of Lunching, not far from Tengchung, and to the south of the city Chinese forces were said to be assaulting strong Japanese hill positions.

In Burma, still further south, Japanese forces retreating from the Imphal Plains defeat in India were said to be in such swift flight from General Stilwell's 14th Army forces that they have failed to set off demolitions prepared for the destruction of bridges along the route.

Dispatches from northern Burma said tonight that Allied troops have driven another 22 miles down the Mandalay railway from their base at Mogaung, in pursuit of Japanese forces retreating toward Tiddim. Allied columns are now about 32 miles within the Burma frontier.

A United Press dispatch from the Salween River area of Yunnan reported tonight that the first American troops to fight on Chinese soil in this war are members of an anti-aircraft battalion.

With their 40-mm. Bofors guns, said UP, these Americans have repeatedly raked Japanese trenches and pillboxes, firing thousand of rounds daily in support of Chinese infantry fighting in the mountains flanking the Salween Valley. Last week these U.S. gunners were credited with breaking up a strong Jap counter-attack. (OWI)

UNRRA MAY ENTER ENEMY COUNTRIES

LONDON, August 26 — The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will seek authority to enter enemy countries on the heels of the army, the Associated Press reported today.

Under its present charter, UNRRA is specifically forbidden from operating in enemy territory.

The necessity to begin arranging for history's biggest mass migration is the reason for which the change will be sought, at UNRRA's conference next month in Montreal.

Concerning liberated countries, Lewis Gannett, a correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune, said in a dispatch today that schedules for supplying pigs, bulls, farm machinery, seed potatoes, seed wheat, and other items needed to set such nations on their agricultural feet have already been drawn up by UNRRA experts.

Gannett quoted Sir John Russell, chairman of UNRRA's subcommittee on agriculture, as reporting that Europe under German occupation has suffered the loss of more than half its pre-war pigs and poultry, and that in terms of possible

NO SPANISH IRON FOR GERMANY

LONDON, August 26 — The cutting of overland connections between Spain and Germany and the cancellation of Swedish shipping insurance to German ports have drastically reduced Germany's supplies of iron ore, said a report by the Ministry of Economic Warfare issued yesterday.

The FFI are now in control of the entire Franco-Spanish border, thus closing all routes to Germany, the report said.

It added that in 1943 and the first half of 1944, Spanish iron ore was shipped to Germany at the rate of nearly 500,000 tons a year, yielding an iron content of 250,000 tons a year. The Spanish ore is particularly valuable because of its low phosphorous and sulphur content.

Already the Swedish exports of iron to Germany have been about halved, by Sweden's action in cancelling insurance for shipping to German ports, the report said. It added that Germany has little hope of offsetting these losses from other sources. (PWB)

Gannett quoted Sir John Russell, chairman of UNRRA's subcommittee on agriculture, as reporting that Europe under German occupation has suffered the loss of more than half its pre-war pigs and poultry, and that in terms of possible poundage of bacon and pork, the loss is still greater.

The cattle are lean, and milk production is down even worse than is the number of cows on hand.

UNRRA's assumption is that as national governments take over in liberated countries, they will turn to UNRRA for advice and supplies.

«While it probably will take six or seven years to restore Europe's cattle herds to their pre-war position, the UNRRA experts believe that the milk yield can be increased more rapidly by importing certain types of feed, and that pig and chicken production can be increased appreciably within months,» Gannett wrote.

Meanwhile, UNRRA already has placed its first relief orders for woolen utility garments. Worth about $6,000,000, they will be produced in Canada.

The United States has accumulated a decidedly substantial reserve of relief clothing, but this will not be enough.

United States military authorities — who will be responsible for relief in its earliest stage — are placing relief orders in Latin America, since manpower is more readily available there than in the United States.

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 26 — Today's communique:

Naval. — A report received from the naval commander off the southern coast of France, covering naval activities for the 24 hours ending midnight, August 23/24, indicates that the unloading of troops and stores continues satisfactorily. Naval bombardment was carried out on enemy positions between Marseilles and Glen. After a bombardment in the Glen area, a U. S. destroyer landed a small force of French troops without opposition.

Enemy guns in the Candes area were engaged during the early morning by destroyers, and numerous fires started. In the same neighborhood, units with the U. S. navy destroyed gun emplacements and fired upon concentrations of motor transport. Pillboxes were also attacked and a fire started in an oil storage depot. Naval aircraft continued their activity by successfully attacking enemy communications and transport. It is reported that on August 25 H. M. S. Aurora and Sirius, with the French battleship Lorraine and the French cruiser Gloire, were in action with enemy batteries at S. Mandrier, south of Toulon. Their bombardment was most successful.

On the night of August 24/25, Allied light coastal craft operating near Genoa attacked two enemy vessels with torpedoes. One of the enemy ships was sunk, and the other damaged.

Allied Armies in Italy. — On the 5th Army front, west of Florence, no major change in the enemy dispositions has been apparent. Active patrolling has been maintained.

Late on August 24, a breaking of enemy resistance east of Florence and in the mountain massif in the bend of the Arno between Pontassieve and Bibbiena was discerned. As a result, on August 25, British and Indian troops of the 8th Army advanced into the difficult mountainous country in many places, up to an advance of three miles.

East of Bibbiena, it is evident that with Monte Foresto now firmly in our hands, the enemy has been forced to effect a further limited withdrawal.

In the upper Tiber Valley, although the enemy still holds Monteloglio in strength, other positions to the east which he previously held have now been evacuated.

In the Adriatic sector, Polish and Italian patrols have maintained contact with the enemy in the approximate line of the Metauro.

Seventh Army. — Steadily advancing, American and French troops have reached the Rhône at several points in southern France, and have driven near the Italian border in the Alps.

Several more important towns have been occupied or [illegible] Tarascon and Avignon on the

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 26 — Today's communique:

More Allied armour and infantry are in Paris, following the entrance of the 2d French Armoured Division Friday morning, and all resistance in the southern and southwestern outskirts has been overcome.

By noon yesterday, one armoured column had crossed the Sevres bridge over the Seine and another column had progressed into the southern part of the city. Infantry followed the armour, and advanced to the Cathedral of Notre Dame.

South of Paris, the enemy holds the east edge of the Seine between Villeneuve Saint Georges and Corbeil. Between Corbeil and Melun, reconnaissance elements have crossed the river. No changes have been reported from the areas of Montereau or Montargis, both of which are in our hands.

The enemy is withdrawing northeast from Montargis, and we have patrols as far east as Troyes. Elbeuf has been liberated, and Allied troops between there and the sea are rapidly approaching the Seine. The River Risle has been crossed at many places, and our troops hold both banks as far north as Montfort-sur-Risle. We have taken Honfleur and Beuzeville.

Further to the southeast, Epugnes and Saint Georges du Vievre are in our hands, and British and Canadian forces have made contact with American troops.

Brest was subjected to attack by land, air, and sea. Enemy strongpoints, including the arsenal, were attacked by medium and heavy bombers yesterday afternoon and last night. Coastal batteries and selected targets were bombarded from the sea.

A fuel dump at Clermont, east of Beauvais, was attacked by medium bombers during the afternoon.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked tanks, motor vehicles, and barges, particularly in the lower Seine and eastward from the river. Medium bombers also hit concentrations of motor vehicles near Rouen. There was more opposition in the air, and 51 enemy aircraft were shot down; others were destroyed on the ground. Twenty-one of our aircraft are missing.

Motor transport and trains in northeastern France were attacked during the night by our light bombers. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 25 — Tonight's communique:

During today, north of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting the populated localities of Remu, Saigla, Varla, Mazula, Uhtaleva, and Meuri, and the railway stations of Ikstoya and Tyarkna.

North of Valga, our troops occupied in fighting over 70 populated localities, including Vervi, Ranmu, Palupelne, Horuste, Posha, Pripalu, and Lesko, and the railway stations of Palupere, Pota, Myagitse, and Kairi.

Southwest of Jelgava, our troops successfully beat back enemy tank and infantry attacks.

Northeast and east of Praga, our troops repelled enemy tank and infantry attacks; and as a result of counter-attacks, occupied the following populated localities: Kuligi, Galonitse, Mole, Ostrovets, Miagu, Lugavashka, Haonte, and Volyu-Bashtovska.

Troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front, continuing their offensive to the west and south of Roman, captured the towns of Ruhus and Oneshki, and also occupied in fighting over 150 other populated localities, including Negresht, Slobodye, Zanyesht, Orleshki, Redu, Horseny, Vainezhki, Usheshki, and Mergun, and the railway stations of Pyatra, Rostno, Podaiyen, Ruhus, Heneut, Moineshki, and Oneshki.

North of Kokshany, troops of this same front, continuing their offensive, captured the town and railway junction station of Otzhutnoya, and also occupied in fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Potana, Pungure, Tergul, Yhoreshki, and Puseny. Today, to these

Several more important towns have been occupied or entered including Arles, Tarascon, and Avignon on the Rhône, Cavaillon and Carpentras in the same sector, and Briançon in the Alps near the Italian frontier.

Except for pockets of enemy resistance, notably at Toulon and Marseilles, nearly all of southern France east of the Rhône and south of Avignon and Briançon has now been liberated.

In Toulon the French have captured the maritime arsenal and the portions of the city to the east.

Sporadic resistance continues in Marseilles.

MAAF. — Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked two aircraft factories and an airfield near Brno and an airfield at Prostejov, in Czechoslovakia.

During the night of August 24/25, our tactical aircraft attacked enemy transport in the Rhône and Po valleys. Yesterday, they continued their attack on bridges and road and rail transort in the Rhône Valley. In northern Italy, widespread attacks were carried out on enemy transport and communications and on gun positions in the battle area. Other aircraft attacked rail transport in Yugoslavia, and coastal shipping.

Last night, our bombers attacked rail yards at Ravenna.

In these operations, 13 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 12 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew more than 1,900 sorties. (PRO)

MOSCOW, August 25 — Tonight's communique:

During today, north of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting the populated localities of Remu, Salgla, Varla, Mazula, Uhtuleva, and Meurt, and the railway stations of Ikatoya and Tyarkna.

North of Valga, our troops occupied in fighting over 70 populated localities, including Vervi, Rannu, Palupelne, Horuste, Pusha, Prigalu, and Lodka, and the railway stations of Palupere, Puta, Myagitse, and Kairi.

Southwest of Jelgava, our troops successfully beat back enemy tank and infantry attacks.

Northeast and east of Praga, our troops repelled enemy tank and infantry attacks, and as a result of counter-attacks, occupied the following populated localities: Kuligu, Galubitse, Mole, Ostrovets, Mlagu, Lugavashka, Hsente, and Volya-Rashtovska.

Troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front, continuing their offensive to the west and south of Bismun, captured the towns of Buhus and Oneshki, and also occupied in fighting over 150 other populated localities, including Negreshi, Slobodye, Zanyesht, Orleshki, Rodu, Horseny, Volneshki, Usheshki, and Mersun, and the railway stations of Pyatra, Rostno, Podolyen, Buhus, Homcut, Molneshki, and Oneshki.

North of Kokshony, troops of this same front, continuing their offensive, captured the town and railway junction station of Otzhutnova, and also occupied in fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Poiana, Pangure, Tergul, Yhoreshki, and Puseny. Today, to these same troops, 1st Guard, 1st, 8th, 12th Infantry, and 1st Tank Rumanian Divisions have surrendered. Also, the troops of this front have captured over 10,000 German officers and men.

Troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, developing their offensive, captured by assault the regional center of the Ukraine, the city and fortress of Ismail, and also cleared of the enemy the left bank of the River Danube, from the mouth of the Pruth to the mouth of Ileyun Kirlo-Danube, and occupied the district centers of the Ismail Region, the towns of Ilene and Bolgrad. These same troops, today, captured 21,000 enemy officers and men, most of them Germans.

Southwest of Kishnev, our troops continued their successful liquidation operations of the encircled German-Fascist troops. In the course of stiff fighting, our troops separated the enemy groups into disorderly parts, and occupied the following populated localities: Barev, Mnogoneshty, Kurladan, and Raka-Golden. The fighting for the annihilation of the encircled enemy groups continues.

On other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 25, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 86 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 79 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 26 — Today's Italian Resistance Front comunique:

As German troops withdraw to the Goth Line, Patriot brigades, operating beyond the Arno and behind German lines, are intensifying their activities to trap the enemy at the most critical point of his withdrawal.

Enemy communications, convoys bearing food supplies, enemy patrols, and isolated garrisons are subjected to continual and thorough attacks by patriot forces.

Farther to the north, the volunteer corps fighting for liberty is very actively engaged in fighting against the enemy. In the upper Staffora valley, near Voghera, a Nazi-Fascist battalion was routed by patriots after fierce clashes. Patriots killed and wounded 200 Germans. In the Belluno sector, patriots of the daring Julia and Beretta brigades attacked German forces repeatedly, killing more than 500 men.

Patriots attacked and dispersed Republican Guard bivouacs in Mompiano, in Brescia Province, in a daring night operation.

At Paluzza, in the Province of Udine, 85 Shepherds were killed in reprisal for the death of two Germans.

The Monte Amiata group of patriots during the entire period of its activity killed 50 of the enemy, wounded 10, and took two prisoners. Patriots destroyed 42 vehicles and captured a notable number of arms and munitions. Patriots derailed 80 railway trains, disrupted telephone and telegraphic lines in approximately 900 places, interrupted or prevented railway communications in 400 places and blew up two bridges. FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 26 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

West of the lower reaches of the Seine, our divisions, in the beachhead positions, which had been narrowed down repelled all enemy attacks. Particularly grim was the fighting in Elbeuf, which the enemy had temporarily penetrated. He again was driven out by a counter-attack. In this sector, the fierce fighting continues. Bombers last week made a concentrated attack on enemy troop concentrations in Brionne, Northwest of Paris, an enemy attempt at crossing the river in battalion strength was frustrated. Yesterday, the enemy penetrated with strong forces into the southern part of the city, where street fighting was in progress throughout the whole day. The enemy lost 50 tanks and many killed. South of Paris, between Corbeil and Montereau, the enemy, at some points, crossed the Seine and broadened his bridgeheads in grim fighting. East of the Yonne, enemy reconnaissance forces advanced in a southeasterly direction.

Escort vessels damaged three enemy destroyers and a motor assault boat off the coast of western France. The garrisons of our strong points the Toulon and Marseilles sectors maintained their positions in grim fighting against strong enemy attacks. In the Rhone Valley, arm fighting with motorized enemy formations is in progress. The latter tried to interfere with our movements toward Lyons. One enemy destroyer and one corvette were torpedoed by the action of the Navy, off the coast of southern France.

London is being kept under retaliatory fire.

In Italy, in the Arno sector, the enemy made several unsuccessful reconnaissance thrusts. On the Adriatic coast, lesser enemy attacks were frustrated.

In the course of a major operation against the shipping traffic of the bands in the Aegean Sea, the Communists suffered high losses; 143 enemy coastal vessels and sailboats were destroyed or captured.

In the Rumanian sector of the eastern front, our divisions, after having repelled numerous Bolshevist attacks, withdrew to the ordered positions. On August 24, in the bomber and fighter-bomber squadrons attacked the Soviet communications during the night with good effect. Enemy bomber squadrons dropped bombs on some localities in northern Germany and Bohemia, particularly on the towns of Rostock, Wismar, Schwerin, and Bruenn, during the day.

U. S. fighters repeatedly shelled farmers in the fields in low-level attacks.

Particularly, Russelsheim and Darmstadt were attacked by British terror airmen during the night. In addition, enemy planes dropped bombs on Greater Berlin and the Rhenish-Westphalian territory. Air defense forces destroyed 75 enemy planes, 43 of which were four-engined bombers over the Reich and the occupied western territories. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

Rumania: Political circles in Berlin have the impression that in Rumania the situation is not developing according to the plans of the traitors. Behind the Soviet demands on the Rumanians to march against Transylvania, there lurks Moscow's intention to let the Rumanian soldiers die in order to be able to introduce Bolshevism more easily in Rumania. A later German broadcast adds: «The Allies have allowed the Soviet alone to decide the armistice conditions and the further treatment of Rumania. It has been stated in London that the decision to deliver Rumania to Moscow was taken at the Teheran conference.»

Paris: The correspondent Alex Schmalfuss reports that fighting has broken out in Paris. Allied units arrived Thursday evening in Paris with a Gaullist tank formation. The town is burning in many places. It is the French who are responsible for the destruction of their capital. German troops had protected Paris during the four years of German occupation. Now the mob, directed by the enemy, mixed with Communist elements, has caused severe damage to Paris. Special centres of disturbance were the Ile de la Cité and the Louvre, occupied by terrorists. The well-known terrorist General Koenig has set up his headquarters in the Palace of Justice.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

France: The correspondent Sertorius reports that fighting in northwest France has now entered a new phase with the withdrawal of the German 7th Army. Their withdrawal has been mostly achieved already, except for a narrow bridgehead directly south of the mouth of the Seine. There are many indications that the Allies will now try with all their might to force a crossing of the Seine along a broad front instead of, as heretofore, at relatively narrow and isolated places. It is to be assumed that the center of gravity of the invasion army will shift more than before to the middle and to the right wing; that is, to the area of Paris and toward the upper Seine.

Eastern Front: It is admitted that «the Bolsheviks on the extreme south wing of the eastern front gained terrain to the south and west, as a result of the treason committed by the Rumanian clique around the King.» Thereby, the Russian divisions were able to get behind the German divisions. However, the latter succeeded in changing the front so as to get their rear free again. Despite the declaration of war against Germany by the royal clique, no clashes occurred anywhere yesterday between German and Rumanian troops. On both sides of the Vistula, west of Mielec, the Soviets made temporary dents in the German front. «In the Baltic area, the Soviet failed to achieve any decisive successes.»

After their victorious withdrawal, German armies strongly reinforced by fresh troops arriving from eastern France, are falling back to their new line along the eastern banks of the Seine.

Paris, whose cultural heritage has been respected by the Germans during four years of their occupation, is now being destroyed in street fighting started by irresponsible Communist elements. Bitter fighting is in progress inside the Louvre, on the Seine islands, and in other important buildings of the city. Anglo-American tanks have reached the center of the city.

In the Eastern Alps, units of the Wehrmacht completed their mopping-up operations of the patriot forces.

No encounters of importance took place in Italy. The Fascist «Black Brigade» attacked British forces on both sides of the Arno, inflicting upon them heavy casualties and capturing numerous prisoners and war materiel. Near Pontassieve, German forces successfully counterattacked and recaptured most important positions.

AMERICANS LIBERATE CANNES AND ANTIBES APPROACH WITHIN 10 MILES OF NICE

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 25 — American forces of the 7th Army have occupied the famed Riviera resort towns of Cannes and Antibes, in an eastward advance which has brought them to within 10 miles of Nice, it was announced here tonight.

The announcement of the occupation of Antibes marked a further five-mile extension of the Allied hold on the Riviera coast today and followed shortly after the occupation of the resort towns, of Cannes and the inland capital of the Alpes Maritimes Departement, Grasse, 10 miles to the northwest.

At the westward extremity of the bridgehead, now nearly 125 miles in extent along the coast, forward elements of the 7th Army were reported to be nearing the Rhone River at Arles and Tarascon. It was announced here this

To the north, American main forces now have firmly occupied the area covered by their 140 mile "flying column" thrust to Grenoble and the industrial heart of France, it was announced here today.

No details were yet available here on the occupation of Cannes, where American forces had been stalled at La Napoule, three miles across the Gulf of Napoule from the queen Riviera resort town, for the past nine days. Heavy coastal batteries guarding Cannes and the southwest approaches to Nice, 15 miles farther along the Riviera coast, have hurled their huge projectiles against the winding road, making it virtually impassable. But under the savage pounding of Allied warships, these guns have gradually lessened their fire. The last Allied naval attack on these guns around the Gulf of Napoule was reported yesterday, at which time it was said that return fire had still been encountered from the shore batteries.

The possibility that the coastal resort town was taken from the rear was suggested by the wording of the official statement on its occupation, which declared that Cannes had fallen following the taking of Grasse, capital of the Alpes Maritimes Departement, and 10 miles inland from the coast. The official announcement said also that the Allied bridgehead had been extended some five miles farther northeast.

Three main fortresses protect the sea approaches to Toulon and form the backbone of the fierce resistance of the survivors of the German garrison. One of these is Fort Janas, on Cap Cicie, six miles southwest of the city, which commands the entrance into the outer roadsteads of Toulon harbor. A second of the formidable coastal defenses is on Cap Cepet, jutting into the roadsteads due south of the port. Fort de la Colle Noire commands the entrance to the roadsteads from the east.

Fighting in Marseilles was more sporadic and was mainly concentrated in the harbor areas.

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 25 — American forces of the 7th Army have occupied the famed Riviera resort towns of Cannes and Antibes, in an eastward advance which has brought them to within 10 miles of Nice, it was announced here tonight.

The announcement of the occupation of Antibes marked a further five-mile extension of the Allied hold on the Riviera coast today and followed shortly after the occupation of the resort towns of Cannes and the inland capital of the Alpes Maritimes Departement, Grasse, 10 miles to the northwest.

At the westward extremity of the bridgehead, now nearly 125 miles in extent along the coast, forward elements of the 7th Army were reported to be nearing the Rhone River at Arles and Tarascon. It was announced here this morning that forces were pushing west from Salon to approach the big road and rail center at the upper end of the Rhone Delta.

Tarascon, eight miles further north on the river, is connected with the Salon-Arles road by a spur branching off to the northwest midway between these two towns. An Allied column was reported to be one mile beyond Cadenet, 32 miles east of Tarascon, on Wednesday.

Latest reports tonight said fighting continued both in Toulon and Marseilles, where French forces were still mopping up the last German pockets of resistance.

Trapped Garrison Fights

The bitter struggle of the trapped German garrison in Toulon yesterday continued for the fourth successive day since the complete encirclement of the city. Main areas of German resistance were around the naval arsenal, and on the peninsulas to the southwest and southeast which partly enclose Toulon's superb naval harbours. On these headlands protecting the port from the sea, the most powerful defenses of France's chief Mediterranean naval base are situated.

In Marseilles also, the encircled Germans continued their fanatic resistance, although American forward elements were now within eight miles of Arles, important road and rail center at the upper end of the Rhône River delta.

Three main fortresses protect the sea approaches to Toulon and form the backbone of the fierce resistance of the survivors of the German garrison. One of these is Fort Janus, on Cap Cicie, six miles southwest of the city, which commands the entrance into the outer roadsteads of Toulon harbor. A second of the formidable coastal defenses is on Cap Cepet, jutting into the roadsteads due south of the port. Fort de la Colle Noire commands the entrance to the roadsteads from the east.

Fighting in Marseilles was more sporadic and was mainly concentrated in the harbor areas.

French forces entered the town of Ollioules, just west of Toulon, to bring the total of liberated towns to well over two score. (PRO)

CANADIANS JOIN AMERICANS AT LOUVIERS BRITISH AT ELBEUF, VON KLUGE REPLACED

SHAEF, August 25 — Remnants of the German 7th Army, being relentlessly steered into the Seine trap, were encompassed in a pocket 15 miles wide and 20 miles deep by the capture of Honfleur by Canadian troops late this afternoon. Canadian and British forces have made a complete breakthrough all along the western flank of the Allied front.

Canadian forces have established contact with American units on the Seine River. Driving eastward in a 20-mile dash from Beaumont on the Risle River, a western Canadian

GERMANS RETREATING EAST OF SEINE

SHAEF, August 25 — East of the Seine, the Germans are pulling back their forces toward the Reich frontier in order to avoid another great encirclement threat, it was reported late tonight.

The Germans are reported to be retreating from Rouen eastward to Beauvais and beyond. Other German forces are retreating northeast of Montargis. (Reuter-BBC)

NAZI RUMANIAN FRONT LOSSES 205,100 IN FIVE DAYS

MOSCOW, August 25 — German losses in killed and captured on the 2d and 3d Ukrainian Fronts were put at 205,500 in five days, according to an official Soviet statement tonight.

Moscow added that 984 German tanks and self-propelled guns were destroyed in the same period on the Rumanian front, along with 200 Nazi aircraft. (AP)

AMERICANS REACH TROYES

SHAEF, August 25 — The American 3d Army, smashing across the heart of France, has reached Troyes, important communications center on the upper Seine and only 37 miles from the Marne, it was reported late tonight by the Associated Press. (AP) armored car regiment joined with American forces at La Haye Malherbe, a small town three miles west of Louviers.

To the north of this flying column, British reconnaissance units, spearheading an armored advance, reached other American forces at St. Armand des Hautes Torres, five miles southwest of Elbeuf.

Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge, German commander-in-chief in the west, has been relieved of his command and has been replaced by Field Marshal Model, formerly commander-in-chief of the German armies in the central sector of the Russian front, it was announced in a Free Germany broadcast over Radio Moscow.

With their backs to the bridgeless Seine, German troops are putting up little more than sporadic rearguard actions which are being brushed aside. Fighting has become a pursuit of the Germans as they try to reach the remaining ferries along that part of the river still within their lines. The Argentan holocaust is being strafed mercilessly by Allied aircraft. The German 7th Army is no longer a fighting organization.

British and American troops have effected a junction in the area of Brionne, in the River Risle the last barrier before the Seine which is a natural point for the Germans to make a final, despairing stand to permit as many troops as possible to escape from the onrushing Allied armies.

Between Honfleur and St. Philbert, northernmost point on the Risle to be reached by the Allies, all main roads leading south from Berneville have been cut. North of Brionne, St. Gregoire du Vievre has been overrun by rapidly advancing Allied troops. Thrusting eastward from Bernay, which was liberated, other forces have reached the Risle.

To the southeast of Pont L'Eveque, forward elements have pushed across the Calonne River to seize Cormeilles. The Foret de St. Gatien has been captured. Seizing the high ground at Blangy, Allied units advanced on the line of the River Calonne from the area of Moyaux to the south and Les Authieux to the north. Other units moving northeast from Montal have reached the area of Drague.

Excellent Air Targets

Better weather today allowed Allied fighters and fighter-bombers to continue their attacks against escape barges and crossing points north of Elbeuf. There has been a steady trickle of troops and material across the river.

Airmen reported that the road leading south and east from Dieppe, Amiens, Beauvais, and the surrounding areas, were jammed with German traffic. Large numbers of German trucks were seen racing toward the Marne River and the German frontier. Northwest of Paris, German motor transport is speeding through the night with all lights on, providing excellent targets for Allied airmen.

A senior RAF officer in France stated that "the wholesale slaughter of the cream of Von Kluge's armor may never be repeated again in this war. We just can't hit armor the enemy hasn't got." Dispatches said roads in the Seine pocket were lined for miles with the litter of wrecked German tanks and military vehicles.

German resistance has stiffened in the Elbeuf area, where the American advance toward the mouth of the Seine has been temporarily held up. The city is still in enemy hands, and there is strong resistance in the woods on either side.

A German counter-attack in the Manles-Gassicourt area, made without armor, was unsuccessful. The Allied bridgehead here is being strengthened.

Elements of General Leclerc's 2d Armored Division have broken into Paris and have joined with the French Forces of the Interior, it was officially announced here today. The French division had to overcome many obstacles in the shape of road blocks, demolitions, and mines before entering the city.

ALLIED AIRCRAFT ATTACK LUFTWAFFE TARGETS

LONDON, August 25 — Allied Air Forces took advantage of the second successive day of good weather over the Continent and today attacked four important aircraft plants, three air force stations, and the Peenemunde flying bomb and rocket experimental station in Germany. Over 1,100 heavy bombers participated in the operations, which rounded off 36 hours of widespread air activity ranging from Normandy to Peenemunde, in which 5,000 planes from Britain and Italy struck at enemy oil and industrial targets, and flew in support of the land forces.

Detailing today's variety of German targets, a USAAF communique said that over 1,100 8th USAAF heavy bombers, escorted by Thunderbolts and Mustangs, attacked bomber assembly and components plants at Wismar; a bomber components plant at Lubeck; a bomber assembly plant at Rostock; and a synthetic oil plant at Politz. German Air Force stations at Anklam, Schwerin, Neubrandenburg, and an air force research station at Hechlin were all bombed. Today's blow at Peenemunde, lying on the Baltic 110 miles north of Berlin, was yet another in the series of attacks aimed at crippling the experimental station where flying bombs and rockets are developed.

Returning crews reported generally good results in today's attacks.

Simultaneous with heavy bomber operations over Germany, nine waves of Marauder and Havoc medium and light bombers attacked the fortifications of the besieged Brittany port of Brest for almost a solid hour.

An announcement from General Eisenhower's headquarters said about 300 planes participated in the attack. Associated Press added that elements of three German divisions have been locked in the Brest forts for several weeks.

Meanwhile, the U.S. 2d TAF announced that its Bostons and Mitchells bombed a gasoline and oil dump at Clermont, in central France, and blew up a long string of freight cars at a nearby siding. The bombers were accompanied by the Fighting French Lorraine Squadron.

The constant harrying of German communications continued without respite last night, with RAF Mosquitoes blasting objectives in France and Belgium. British, Canadian, and other Allied aircraft were credited with destroying at least 65 enemy vehicles last night in the Gournay area, 50 miles northwest of Paris, on the railroad to Dieppe. Two trains were bombed in Gournay station, touching off large fires and explosions. Fifty railway cars and a German staff car were reported destroyed in other sweeps. Only one plane was listed as missing from these night operations.

Serious Naval Damage

Shortly before darkness fell last night, RAF Coastal Command rocket-firing planes seriously damaged two German destroyers fleeing from Bordeaux. These two 1,800-ton warships were left on fire.

According to a German announcement, 70 British carrier-borne aircraft yesterday attacked Altenfjord, on the coast of Norway. No details of this reported attack are available from Allied sources.

Two Allied pilots have particularly distinguished themselves in air operations and have established new records. SHAEF announced that Group Captain Johnny Johnson, an English pilot, shot down his 36th and 37th German planes in an air battle northeast of Paris on Wednesday. Capt. John T. Godfrey, of the 8th USAAF, a Mustang flier, to make a final, despairing stand to permit as many troops as possible to escape from the encroaching Allied armies.

Between Honfleur and St. Philbert, northernmost point on the Riale to be reached by the Allies, all main roads leading south from Beuzeville have been cut. North of Brionne, St. Gregoire du Vievre has been overrun by rapidly advancing Allied troops. Thrusting eastward from Bernay, which was liberated, other forces have reached the Riale.

To the southeast of Pont L'Eveque, forward elements have pushed across the Calonne River to seize Cormeilles. The Forêt de St. Gatien has been captured. Seizing the high ground at Blangy, Allied units advanced on the line of the River Calonne from the area of Moyaux to the south and Les Authieux to the north. Other units moving northeast from Monnai have reached the area of Broglie.

The American thrust beyond Sens has not yet been checked by the enemy, it was reported in a press dispatch tonight. Without air reconnaissance, the Germans sent two armored columns into the area, and they were severely beaten by the American vanguard. So great is the distance covered in General Patton's 3d Army advance, that supply now equals enemy activity as a major problem. The Allies were aided, however, in the capture of 37 tank cars of gasoline and Diesel oil.

Southeast of Paris, secure bridgeheads are now established across the Seine at Melun and east of Fontainebleau. To the east of Fontainebleau, Montereau was occupied. And to the south, Montargis was captured, but fairly heavy fighting continued in the area of the fort where a determined enemy garrison was holding out.

The American 3d Armored Division has been accorded the special honor of being named the « Spearhead Division, » in recognition of its brilliant record of almost incessant fighting from the end of June through to August 18, when it helped to close the trap on the remnants of the German 7th Army in the area of Fromental, on the southern flank of the Allied pocket.

It was announced at Supreme Headquarters that Lieut. General Neil M. Ritchie, Lieut. General John T. Crocker and Lieut. General Walter J. H. Horrocks are corps com-

Godfrey has also destroyed 18 German planes in the air.

United Press today announced that Allied tactical aircraft in northwestern France yesterday destroyed or damaged 367 German motor vehicles, two tanks, 27 locomotives, 15 freight cars, 45 oil cars, and 42 barges. In the record-making strategic bombing of 13 major enemy targets yesterday, 25 bombers of the 1,300 heavies sent from Britain were lost, most of them because of flak. Only five fighters failed to return.

More flying bombs were sent across the English Channel this morning in an attack which was on a smaller scale than for the past few days. The bombs met anti-aircraft fire, and a number were quickly destroyed. Damage and casualties were caused.

Londoners were urged to keep their children away from the capital by the British Minister of Health, Henry U. Willink. He declared today that heavy casualties and shocking damage to property had resulted, and that historic Lincoln's Inn in Chancery Lane dating from 1518 was among the famous buildings smashed by the bombs. « We have to expect that these dangers will continue for some time, » said Willink. « Cornered beasts are dangerous. »

THREE GERMAN WARSHIPS SUNK IN CHANNEL

SHAEF, August 25 — Eight German warships attempting to escape from Le Havre early today, were sunk or damaged in a battle with American and British light naval forces, an Admiralty communique announced tonight.

The Allied ships intercepted the German craft at the mouth of the Seine, blew up an escort vessel, an armed trawler, and an E-boat, and damaged at least five other enemy warships in a series of running battles.

British and American ships were not damaged, and personnel suffered only slight casualties, the communique added. (OWI)

FRENCH TROOPS ENTER PARIS
BITTER FIGHTING IN CITY

LONDON, August 25 — The French 2d Armored Division, under the command of General Leclerc, has joined French Forces of the Interior in the continuing battle for the liberation of Paris. Another Allied column, closing in on Paris from the west, entered Versailles this morning.

The BBC quoted the FFI Paris radio station, Radio Diffusion Nationale Francaise, as stating that French troops began crossing the Boulevard St. Michel at 0820 hours today, while an American tank column was approaching Les Invalides and Port de Orleans. General Koenig's headquarters of the FFI announced that patriot forces hold the city's main official buildings and most of the public highways, but that the Germans are «solidly entrenched in some places.»

The Germans are resisting in the Luxembourg Gardens, and in the Place de la Republique, where the Bastille formerly stood, they launched a counter-attack with incendiary grenades against FFI troops in an underground station. Anti-tank guns are also firing around the Majestic Hotel. The central sector of Paris is still controlled by 9,000 Germans, and the FFI is fighting bitterly.

General Joinville, chief of the national staff of the FFI, broadcast an interior order of the day, summoning all Parisians to join in «the last efforts for liberation.»

Parisians Jubilant

Despite the bitter fighting going on in the streets of Paris, thousands of people lined the streets—veterans of the last war, young men of the FFI—joyfully dancing, singing the Marseillaise, crying «Vive la France.» James MacClancy, British United Press correspondent, wrote that the whole city had broken out into a flash of flags — every French, British, and American flag they could find, was hung out of windows and on flagpoles. The people of Paris cheered the big American lend-lease tanks with grinning French pilots waving from the turrets.

The FFI radio reported that General Charles de Gaulle has arrived in Paris. He was quoted as saying to the cheering crowds that greeted him: «I only wish to say to you — Long live Paris! Long live France! Long live the Republic!»

French Forces of the Interior have entered Lyons, it was announced in General Joseph Pierre Koenig's communique. During the last few days, the communique said, a number of airdromes in the south of France have been recaptured by patriots, including those of Eybens, near Grenoble, Carcassonne, Lezignan, Toulouse-Francazale, Limoges, and Bourges.

The Swiss paper Feuille d'Avis of Neuchatel reported that FFI defensive activities had completely disorganized German resistance in the region of the French Alps and in the Rhone Valley.

An Associated Press dispatch from the Spanish-French frontier said that all the territory held by France's internal army in southwest France, many miles from the nearest Allied troops, is under perfect control. The people are determined not to let their desire for vengeance against

7,250 FLYING BOMBS AGAINST ENGLAND

LONDON, August 25 — About 7,250 flying bombs are estimated to have been launched against England since the start of the attacks in mid-June, a statement from the Air Ministry and Ministry of Home Security said yesterday. About 2,000 of this total were sent over during the first three weeks of August, the statement added. (PWB)

ALLIED AIR STRATEGY REVEALED

WASHINGTON, August 25 — The War Department today explained the plan of Allied air attacks used to strangle German communications before and after the landings in northern France.

Begun in April, the attacks were built up in force until the German forces were pocketed in a countryside where they discovered most of the crossroads, culverts and bridges had been bombed out.

As summarized in a report prepared at 9th USAAF headquarters, these strategic operations were designed in five phases — all to prevent movement of enemy troops and supplies:

1. Attacks in April and May on railway yards, tracks, and bridges around the French eastern frontier, and all the way into Germany — east of Cherbourg and Calais, the two most likely landing coasts.

2. Beginning May 11, operations against the Seine bridges.

3. Operations against bridges, embankments, and choke points in the Paris and Orleans gap, and bridges crossing the Loire from Orleans to the Bay of Biscay.

4. Starting on D-day, attacks on enemy traffic within this blocked-off area, including operations against German troops and supply movements in the immediate fighting zone.

5. Strafing and bombing of all railway and road traffic by which the Germans tried to move supplies and reinforcements from the Calais region and elsewhere in northern and eastern France, and from Germany, to the battle area.

The air forces first struck German supply lines at their sources, then cut them as they crossed into France. Then the fliers set three barriers around Normandy and Brittany and choked intermediate points of communication within these areas.

The air forces then caught the last remaining trickles of German traffic in the day-to-day zone of operations, and thwarted the German last-minute efforts to bring supplies and reinforcements to the armies being smashed by the Allies' overwhelming strength. (OWI)

GERMANS SHELL CHARTRES CATHEDRAL

NEW YORK, August 25 — In a delayed dispatch to the New York Times today, correspondent Gene Currivan said that the Roman tower of the world-renowned Chartres Cathedral was hit by German shells on the afternoon of August 17, on the day after American troops dislodged enemy snipers from the 11th-century edifice.

Currivan added that the overall damage in Chartres is negligible. (OWI)

3,641 GERMAN PLANES DESTROYED IN 70 DAYS

LONDON, August 25 — In the first 70 days of the invasion of France, Allied Air Forces destroyed 2,990 German aircraft in aerial combat in addition to 651 destroyed on the ground — a total of 3,641 it was announced at Supreme Headquarters yesterday.

During the same period, Allied losses totaled 2,958. This figure includes both strategic operations over Germany and tactical operations in support of troops in France. (OWI)

RED ARMY TAKES TARTU ADVANCES 43 MILES IN RUMANIA

MOSCOW, August 25 — Soviet troops have captured the strategically important rail junction city of Tartu, in central Estonia. An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said tonight that troops of the 3d Baltic Front, under General Maslennikov, took the town by storm today, and swept onward.

From the far southern Russian front, Soviet dispatches reported that 12 German divisions have been encircled south of captured Kishinev, capital of Moldavia, beyond which the Russians have advanced with sensational speed.

The Tartu junction controls the eastern main rail line running from Tallin, on the Estonian north coast, to Riga in Latvia, and was the chief communications route for the whole German effort to halt the Russian drive to the sea aimed at annihilating the trapped German Baltic divisions.

On the far southern Russian front General Malinovsky's 2nd Army was said tonight to be pouring into the so-called Focsani Gates between the lower hills of the Carpathians and the Danube delta. Front-line dispatches indicated that Russian troops have swept forward about 40 miles farther into Rumania in little more than 24 hours.

Reuter said tonight that organized resistance in some areas of Rumania has ceased. Other dispatches said that the Red Army was moving so quickly through big enemy formations that large encircled and militarily disorganized areas have been left behind.

Cossack squadrons were said to be hunting for German units among the disorganized Rumanian troops in what was described as one of the biggest mopping-up operations of the whole Russo-German war. No estimate of the number of prisoners taken could be made tonight, since large groupings lie here and there in scattered areas behind the front.

Further indication that the Rumanian front was folding up before the Russian drive lay in a Bucharest radio announcement that strong formations of German aircraft had bombed the city. The Rumanian capital lies about 100 miles south of the most advanced Russian elements, indicating a mass withdrawal of German forces from the Rumanian front.

Russian dispatches from the Warsaw sector said tonight that flames from burning areas of the Polish capital city were «glaring red on the horizon.» From inside the city, Polish General Bor's headquarters reported continued bitter fighting in the streets. The Germans were said to be shelling and dive-bombing everywhere, and to have set fire to Holy Cross Church, sepulcher of the composer Chopin.

From Moscow came the announcement that the 3d Czech Brigade, Russian-trained and armed, has received its battle banner, and will join the Red Army in the liberation of Czechoslovakia. (Reuter-PBC)

B.B.C. SAYS RUMANIANS CONTROL BUCHAREST

LONDON, August 25 — The BBC quoted Radio Bucharest late tonight as saying that the Rumanian capital had been «liberated» from all foreign forces by Rumanian troops.

However, there were no reports indicating that German troops in the area of Bucharest had put up anything like a stiff fight to hold the city.

On the contrary, Radio Bucharest announced that Luftwaffe formations had bombed the city in strength, indicating that German forces have withdrawn from the lower reaches of the Danube Valley in the face of the overwhelming Russian offensive now battering through the so-called Focsani gate, about 100 miles northeast.

Further suggestion that German forces in the city were negligible in number came with reports that Rumanian crowds had demonstrated in the streets, along with parading Rumanian soldiers, hailing the new government's decision to admit that the war was lost. These demonstrations took place this morning.

Reuter said earlier today that Allied military observers believed Germany had begun to recall her troops from all of the southeastern corner of Europe and that Hitler would hold the Aegean islands only because it was cheaper to hold them than to attempt an evacuation.

Confirmation of this suspected withdrawal came from the German news agency, DNB, which announced today that

WHAT COLLABORATION COST RUMANIA

LONDON, August 25 — Commenting on the surrender of Rumania, the London Times says that the decision of its king and government to cease all hostilities is an event of the highest military importance.

Political commentators point out that of all the satellites, Rumania has paid the highest price in human lives for her leaders' decision to join in the war for plunder in Russia. More than 500,000 Rumanians have already been killed, wounded, or captured in Russia. Thousands more were cut off in the Crimea, and still more in the Dnieper bend.

One of the richest agricultural countries in Europe, Rumania cannot today feed her own citizens. So much Rumanian oil has gone to Germany, that oil-burning Rumanian furnaces have had to be converted to coal. Prices of shoes and clothes, according to the admission of the Rumanian economist, Ballescu, have gone up as much as 1,000 per cent. The country has also paid a high price in economic dislocation, administrative chaos, and uncontrollable inflation.

Rumania's efforts to get out of the war are hailed as one more proof that Germany has lost the war.

History pointed the way to the distressed nation. In 1916, Rumania abandoned her central European allies to join the Allies. As a result, Rumania found herself doubled in size (114,000 square miles) after the war.

History is pointing the way to the Allies also, for it was the Allied penetration into Bulgaria in September, 1915, that led to the collapse of the German cause in the Balkans, and the desertion of her satellites. It spelt the beginning of the end for Germany, just as it does today.

Commentators point out that Rumania has acted none too soon. The fact that she realised that Germany was powerless to interfere with her decisions even before the news of Paris and Marseilles will not be lost on Bulgaria and Hungary. To obtain any consideration from the United Nations, and to avoid destruction during what may be the last weeks of the war, the other satellites must be equally prompt.

The Daily Telegraph correspondent, Lieut. General H. G. Martin, wrote today: «The cause of the Rumanian change of heart lies in the conviction that Germany is going down in what may prove one of the most complete and shattering disasters in all history.» (UNN-Reuter)

8TH ARMY ADVANCES ON GOTH LINE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 25 — Further progress in the 8th Army drive toward the formidable Goth Line was reported today.

East of Pontassieve, Allied troops established firm positions on the western slopes of Monte Secchieta. The important hill feature of Monte Foresto has been taken.

Enemy counter-attacks forming on north of Monte Foresto were broken by artillery fire. Capture of Monte Foresto and explosions heard from north of Bibbiena, indicate a probable enemy withdrawal here to main Goth Line positions, now only about 10 miles north of Monte Foresto, it was stated.

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army continue to press against diminishing enemy resistance between the Apennines and Florence. In the upper Arno Valley, the villages of Castelnuovo, Firmiche, and La Montanina have been taken.

Only patrol activity and exchanges were reported on the 5th Army front.

Northeast of Florence, British patrols penetrated three miles both northwest and northeast of Rignano without making contact with the enemy. In the mountains west of the Arno, forward elements have reached Genina, and have contacted the Germans in Tuffiano. East of the Arno, patrols reported Valenzano, Vogognano, and Badia clear of the enemy.

In the Adriatic sector, Italian elements have reached groupings lie here and there in scattered areas behind the front.

Further indication that the Rumanian front was folding up before the Russian drive lay in a Bucharest radio announcement that strong formations of German aircraft had bombed the city. The Rumanian capital lies about 100 miles south of the most advanced Russian elements, indicating a mass withdrawal of German forces from the Rumanian front.

Russian dispatches from the Warsaw sector said tonight that flames from burning areas of the Polish capital city were «glaring red on the horizon.» From inside the city, Polish General Bor's headquarters reported continued bitter fighting in the streets. The Germans were said to be shelling and dive-bombing everywhere, and to have set fire to Holy Cross Church, sepulcher of the composer Chopin.

From Moscow came the announcement that the 3d Czech Brigade, Russian-trained and armed, has received its battle banner, and will join the Red Army in the liberation of Czechoslovakia. (Reuter-BBC)

B.B.C. SAYS RUMANIANS CONTROL BUCHAREST

LONDON, August 25 — The BBC quoted Radio Bucharest late tonight as saying that the Rumanian capital had been «liberated» from all foreign forces by Rumanian troops.

However, there were no reports indicating that German troops in the area of Bucharest had put up anything like a stiff fight to hold the city.

On the contrary, Radio Bucharest announced that Luftwaffe formations had bombed the city in strength, indicating that German forces have withdrawn from the lower reaches of the Danube Valley in the face of the overwhelming Russian offensive now battering through the so-called Focsani gate, about 100 miles northeast.

Further suggestion that German forces in the city were negligible in number came with reports that Rumanian crowds had demonstrated in the streets along with parading Rumanian soldiers, hailing the new government's decision to admit that the war was lost. These demonstrations took place this morning.

Reuter said earlier today that Allied military observers believed Germany had begun to recall her troops from all of the southeastern corner of Europe, and that Hitler would hold the Aegean islands only because it was cheaper to hold them than to attempt an evacuation.

Confirmation of this suspected withdrawal came from the German news agency, DNB, which announced today that all communications between still-occupied Hungary and Rumania had been suspended.

Meanwhile, from Ankara, came reports that Rumanian forces have entered Transylvania for a fight with Hungarian troops. If true, this is the first localized, and almost internecine battle to break out within the Axis household. Transylvania was Rumanian territory occupied by the Hungarians as a result of an enforced, Nazi-dictated «agreement» at Vienna. (Reuter - BBC)

BULGARIANS WITHDRAWING FROM GREECE

LONDON, August 25 — The Bulgarian Army is on the march home, Dennis Martin, Reuter correspondent, reported today.

In a despatch to London, Martin said that three years of unparalleled brutality in Macedonia and Thrace are coming an end, and that the Bulgarian command has issued orders withdrawing from these territories at least 11 divisions which have been assisting the Germans to garrison the Balkans.

Official quarters here declined comment. (Reuter)

History is pointing the way to the Allies also, for it was the Allied penetration into Bulgaria in September, 1918, that led to the collapse of the German cause in the Balkans, and the desertion of her satellites. It spelt the beginning of the end for Germany, just as it does today.

Commentators point out that Rumania has acted none too soon. The fact that she realised that Germany was powerless to interfere with her decisions even before the news of Paris and Marseilles will not be lost on Bulgaria and Hungary. To obtain any consideration from the United Nations, and to avoid destruction during what may be the last weeks of the war, the other satellites must be equally prompt.

Forward elements have reached Madonna del Ponte at the mouth of the Metauro, 13 miles up the coast from Senigallia. (PRO)

GERMAN AIRCRAFT FACTORIES ATTACKED

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 25 — Medium forces of Italy-based heavy bombers today struck at two aircraft factories and two airdromes near Brno, in Czechoslovakia, it was announced here this afternoon.

Two of the targets attacked were the Brno-Lisen aircraft and component plant, manufacturing ME-190 fighters, and the Brno-Kurim engine plant, which is believed to produce aero-engine parts for assembly elsewhere.

Liberators and Flying Forts encountered no opposition from the ground or in the air.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force today made new record penetrations into southern France to attack two bridges northeast of Lyons.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

It was reported today that 15th AAF heavy bombers had blocked the last remaining Po River bridge between Bressana, in northwest Italy, and the Adriatic, when they hit the railway bridge at Ferrara.

Fighter-bombers attacked guns, roads, and bridges north of the battle line in southern France.

53 Enemy Planes Downed

Allied bombers attacked the rail yards at Bologna, in northern Italy, last night, it was announced today.

During the night of August 23/24, Allied planes attacked communications in the Po Valley.

The assaults on oil refineries and aerodromes in Czechoslovakia, Hungary, and Yugoslavia yesterday were carried out by strong forces of escorted heavy bombers.

In these and other supporting operations in southern France and northern Italy, 53 enemy aircraft were destroyed. 19 of ours are missing. (PRO)

BOMBING OF RUMANIAN OILFIELDS ONE OF «DECISIVE FACTORS» IN WAR

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 25 — The intensive four-month campaign carried out by the heavy bombers of the 15th AAF against the oilfields and communications in Rumania «may have proved to be the decisive factor in the war with Germany,» it was announced here today.

The special air force statement said that the campaign, completed on August 19, when the last of the great cluster of refineries was severely damaged, had made the Balkan nation «more a liability than an asset to the Wehrmacht.»

The 15th AF carried out 91 attacks on the Rumanian targets and dropped 24,000 tons of bombs in the course of 10,000 sorties. Nearly 350 bombers and fighters were lost in carrying out these crippling attacks, which reduced Ploesti's production of crude oil by 70 per cent, and its output of gasoline by 95 per cent.

This campaign began «as a long-range support of the Red Army,» but was continued even after the slackening off of activity on the Bukovina front.

The air force statement concluded, «In a struggle for possession of the country's wealth, the Germans were defeated by long-range air power.» (PRO)

CIL PRAISED BY AFHQ

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 25 — High praise for the «fighting qualities and fortitude» of the Corps of Italian Liberation was given today in an official statement issued here.

Special commendation was also given to Italian Administrative troops, who, together with the many units of the CIL, are playing an active part in the task of liberating their country. The statement said.

Much has recently been heard of the activity of Italian Patriots behind the enemy lines, but not so much has been heard of the less colorful, but equally important activities of the regular troops of the Italian Army. The Italian Army, reorganized after the armistice under Allied supervision, has assumed more and more responsibility, and has rendered increasing assistance to the Allied cause.

Since its formation, the troops of the Corps of Italian Liberation have been operating continuously in the Apennine sector of the front under both the 5th and 8th armies. CIL forces fighting alongside Polish troops of the 8th Army have recently taken part in the successful advance through the mountainous country, where their pre-war training stood them in good stead, from Pescara to the present front line. The CIL, by their fighting qualities and fortitude under the many difficulties they have encountered, have earned high praise from senior Allied commanders.

CHURCHILL RECEIVES ALLIED PRESS

ROME, August 25 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill received Allied war correspondents at an «off the record» conference on Wednesday in the main hall of the British Embassy, it can now be revealed.

The Prime Minister, in semi-formal dress from his visit with the Pope, was in exceptionally good humor, as he answered the questions of about 35 Allied newspapermen. After the Prime Minister had touched on various phases of the war and current problems, he was asked by James Kilgallen, dean of the American press corps, how many of the famous Churchill cigars he smoked each day.

In the only statement of the conference which he allowed to be placed on record, the Prime Minister replied, «That depends on their size.» (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS WIPE OUT 500 GERMAN SOLDIERS

LONDON, August 25 — Five hundred German soldiers have been wiped out in Montenegro by Yugoslav Partisan forces, and fierce fighting is still in progress in that region, Marshal Tito's communique stated today.

The communique also said that many soldiers from enemy formations in Serbia were coming over to Marshal Tito's National Liberation Army. In another action by Partisan troops, a column of the 373d German Infantry Division in Western Bosnia had been entirely broken.

A delayed Associated Press dispatch from the Marshal's headquarters reported that an American Military Mission, headed by Colonel Ellery C. Huntington, had arrived in Yugoslavia. This is the fourth Allied military mission to join the Partisans. (Reuter - AP)

U. S. PLANES HIT WAKE

WASHINGTON, August 25 — Widespread new attacks have been carried out by United States naval aircraft on Jap-held Pacific islands, the Navy Department announced tonight. The attacks included assaults on Wake Island, and on other Japanese bases in the Marianas, the Carolines, and the Marshalls. (OWI)

U. S. PACIFIC AIR BASES CLOSING IN

7TH USAAF HQ, CENTRAL PACIFIC, August 25 — The advance of United States forces in the Pacific in the last eight months has closed on a 3,000-mile gap between the southwest and the central Pacific areas, it was disclosed today.

Brig. Gen. Robert Douglass, commander of the 7th USAAF in the Central Pacific area, said that air bases of General Douglas MacArthur's forces were 4,000 miles southeast of his own hub of operations last January. But planes of the 7th, and MacArthur's 5th USAAF, now have advanced operation bases separated by only 1,000 miles.

General Douglass revealed that heavy aircraft of both the 7th and 5th Air Forces have used each other's bases for operations which constitute the longest shuttle-bombing flights on record. He said the route, which included the first reconnaissance and bombing of the Marianas, is a 3,500-mile triangle from the Marshalls to the Marianas to the Admiralties.

Allied heavy aircraft dropped 156 tons of bombs on Japanese camp and bivouac areas on Halmahera Island, destroying enemy installations and starting many fires, General MacArthur's communique said today. Enemy interceptor activity in this raid was reported to be practically non-existent.

Heavy bomber attacks were also reported on Kai Islands, where 36 tons of explosives were dropped, and on the town of Saumlaki, on one of the islands of the Tanimbar group, south of Dutch New Guinea.

The communique also said formations of fighters and fighter-bombers carried out day-long bombing and strafing operations against airfields in the MacCluer and Geelvink Bay areas, while light bombers and patrol craft hit targets

Still less has been heard of the valuable assistance rendered by the large number of Italian administrative troops.

All these troops employed in the docks, depots, and other supply installations in the rear areas, have by their work contributed a great deal to the recent Allied victories. The hard work of these Italian units for the Allied cause in the rear areas deserves high praise, and should be appreciated by the Allied Armies in Italy and by the Italian people themselves.

Other troops have been placed under the command of armies and are doing valuable work at railheads and dumps.

Many Italian engineer units are giving valuable assistance in maintaining the roads so vital to the supply of the forward troops.

Special mention must also be given to the Italian pack mule companies which have done magnificent work in all kinds of weather, often under heavy enemy fire, bringing supplies forward to the fighting troops over country impassable to other forms of transport.

Italian morale is rising because the Italian soldier is now conscious of the part he is playing in the liberation of his country. (PIO)

U. S. FORCES PREPARE JAP «COUP DE GRACE»

NEW YORK, August 25 — A Southwest Pacific dispatch to the New York Times said today that United States Navy and Army commanders in the Pacific theater are quickly getting into position for the death blow at Japan.

The dispatch said that preparations on an «amazing scale» were evident everywhere for throwing a mass of men and materials at the Japanese just as soon as hostilities cease in Europe.

The plans include a transfer of Allied Air Force from Europe to the Pacific area, said the Times, adding that

STILWELL RETAKES KIT LOST IN '42 RETREAT

NEW DELHI, August 25 — American General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters said today that the north Burma campaign this year has retaken more than 10,000 square miles of territory from Japanese control.

Dispatches added that General Stilwell's forces have recaptured large quantities of supplies that had been abandoned by British and American troops in their retreat out of Burma in 1942. Trucks and light cars and Australian anti-tank guns were among the booty.

Meanwhile, Chungking said that Chinese troops were fighting in the center of Tengchung, western Yunnan Province city, and Jap strongpoint along the Burma Road. Other Chinese forces, supported by American aircraft, were attacking near Lungling, another vital link on the old India-China supply route.

The Chungking communique also said that United States bombers have smashed at Japanese installations around Foochow, Fukien Province city lying on the western shores of Taiwan Strait, about 80 miles across the water from the Japanese island of Formosa. Barracks, shipping, airfields, and coastal installations received direct hits.

Still other American aircraft yesterday harried Japanese supply lines up and down the Yellow and the Han rivers, destroying cargo boats and bridges.

From Ceylon, Lord Louis Mountbatten's headquarters said that Allied troops striking into Burma in pursuit of the Japanese "Invade India" army, made gains of eight miles in the last three days, and were 10 miles within the Burmese frontier on the road to Tiddim.

Mountbatten himself declared that operations in the Burma theater, considered from the point of view of the numbers of men involved, were among the greatest thus far carried out between Jap and Allied forces.

A United Press dispatch disclosed today that three divisions of Chinese troops have been flown "over the hump" of the Himalayas from China to India, and from thence to Burma, to join in the offensive aimed at freeing the road from Rangoon to Kunming — the old Burma Road.

Allied casualties thus far this year on the Burma front were given as 10,000 killed and 3,000 missing. Jap dead were put at 42,000 for the same period. (OWI - Reuter)

ROME TO HAVE MORE FUEL WOOD

ROME, August 25 — Italian engineers and Allied officers have succeeded in effecting repairs on a destroyed bridge which will result on or about September 3 in a steady supply of 200 to 500 tons a day of sub-lignite, or natural wood, for the stoves of Rome, ACC announced today.

The sub-lignite, long a substitute for coal and charcoal, will in large part meet the city's need for fuel.

Rome normally uses an estimated 200 tons of charcoal a day, but, due to the city's overgrown population, the demand for fuel is so great that sub-lignite fuel will have to be rationed carefully so that every citizen may benefit from the new supplies at present available, ACC officials stated. FRANCE, U. K., U. S. SIGN CIVIL AFFAIRS PACT

WASHINGTON, August 25 — French, British, and United States authorities have agreed upon terms for the administration of civil affairs in France.

A joint statement issued today by the British Foreign Office and the U. S. State Department said that the terms of the agreement are temporary and practical in character, and cover the disposal of captured war material, the dissemination of news, and the distribution of civilian relief supplies. Arrangements are also designed to facilitate the coordination of assistance which the French authorities and people will be able to render the Allied Expeditionary Forces in France.

General Eisenhower, as Supreme Commander, has been authorized to deal with the French authorities at Algiers as the de facto authority in France, so long as they continue to receive the support of the majority of the Frenchmen who are fighting for the defeat of Germany and the liberation of France. The U. S. announcement stated that as the military situation permits, the French people will be given the opportunity to exercise their will in the choice of government.

The Anglo-French agreement was signed in London at the British Foreign Office by Anthony Eden and René Massigli. The Franco-American agreement was reached by an exchange of letters between General Eisenhower and General Koenig. (OWI)

GOEBBELS IMPOSES NEW MOBILIZATION MEASURES

LONDON, August 25 — Drastic new measures aimed at relieving Germany's critical manpower shortage were announced yesterday by Goebbels in his capacity as chief of the Reich's total war effort.

The measures, as reported by the German News Agency, include:

A general suspension of all holidays, to take effect at once. Granting of compassionate leave only after a strict investigation. Far-reaching restrictions on universities. Closing of commercial colleges.

Closing of all theaters, music halls, cabarets, circuses, orchestras, art exhibitions, and art colleges. Closing of all publishing houses, except those dealing with technical literature. Further press restrictions.

Establishment of a minimum 60-hour working week in all offices.

Under this new decree, Goebbels hopes to mobilize tens of thousands of students and members of Germany's cultural life for fighting at the front or working in war industries.

The announcement said that the new law will be applied with full severity against elements who sabotage these measures out of indifference, indolence, irresponsibility, or deliberately. The death penalty will be imposed in particularly serious cases of infringment. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 25 — Today's communique: Allied Armies in Southern France, 7th Army.

American troops of the 7th Army have occupied Cannes and Grasse in an advance in the eastern sector of the southern France bridgehead.

French forces have further tightened their grip on Toulon, occupying the land arsenal within the city and the town of Ollioules to the west. The enemy is still offering stiff resistance in the port area.

In Marseilles, the mopping up of enemy resistance in the port area is in progress.

To the northwest, American forward elements have advanced to less than 10 miles east of Arles on the Rhône River, and north and south of Salon also have made further progress.

The number of prisoners taken thus far is estimated at 20,000.

Allied Armies in Italy:

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army have continued to press the weakening enemy resistance between the Apennines and Florence.

East of the slopes of the Apennines, Italian troops have reached the River Candigiano on a broad front, and entered the town of Acquasagna. In the upper Arno Valley, considerable advances have been made and the villages of Castelnuovo, Fornicbe, and La Montanina have been taken.

East of Pontassieve, troops of the 8th Army have made good progress toward the Gothic Line and are firmly established on the western slopes of Monte Secchieta.

West of Florence, in the 5th Army sector, patrol activity on both sides of the Arno continues.

Two oil refineries and an airdrome in Czechoslovakia, and communications objectives in Hungary, Yugoslavia, and the Po Valley yesterday were attacked by strong forces of

Our forces now closing in toward the Seine Estuary have made further advances. A thrust from the south has brought us to the outskirts of Elbeuf and to Gaillon, southeast of Louviers. The advance from the west gained fresh impetus yesterday, after the last enemy resistance at Lisieux and Pont L'Eveque had been overcome.

Allied forces moving northeast from Monnai have reached the area of Broglie. In a rapid thrust from the Orbec area, our troops have captured Thiberville, and advanced several miles to the banks of the River Risle, east of Bernay, which is in our hands. Other troops from Lisieux have reached the Risle near Brionne.

Southeast of Pont L'Eveque, our forces, after seizing the high ground at Blangy, have advanced to the line of the River Calonne from the area of Moyaux on the right, to Les Authieux on the left.

Farther north, we have captured the Forêt de St. Gatien, and have reached the main road south of Beuzeville.

On the coast, we have captured Trouville, and are approaching Honfleur.

Air: Enemy escape lines in the Seine area were attacked yesterday by fighters and fighter-bombers, as weather permitted. Attacks were continued last night by light bombers, which also struck at motor transport in the Dieppe-Beauvais area, and bombed railways in Belgium and northeast France.

E-boat and R-boat pens at Ijmuiden, in Holland, and shipping at Brest were attacked with good results in daylight yesterday by heavy bombers. (Reuter)

All enemy attempts, during the two days, to break out of the encirclement, were successfully beaten-back by our troops. In the course of fighting in this area, over 15,000 enemy officers and men have surrendered. The liquidation operations of the encircled groups of the enemy are continuing.

On other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During August 24, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 101 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 72 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 25 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The Cairoli Brigade, which forms part of the Arno Division and which has now assumed the name of Potente, formerly its heroic commander, fought strenuously in the Pratomagno and Monte Giovi sectors, seizing control of a complex system of roads. Patriots of this unit attacked 11 Nazi-Fascist barracks in localities of Pescuy, capturing arms and munitions. At Settignono, on August 3, patriots annihilated a group of Germans who tried to impede their advance. One company of the Garibaldi Brigade engaged the enemy in heavy fighting in the mountains where patriots sought to disrupt enemy military traffic. The other forces of the brigade entered Florence from Piazza Beccharia on the morning of August 11. Fighting immediately broke out between patriots and Germans on the Mugnone and Africo line. Patriots captured two 20-mm. machine guns and two 81-mm. mortars.

In 10 months, the Caiani Brigade destroyed, in all, more than 150 vehicles, and killed many Nazi-Fascists in combat; losing 76 men who either died fighting or were executed by the Nazi-Fascists.

Bitter fighting took place between German troops and Italian Patriots who were defending Alpine passes on the Franco-Italian border. German elements fleeing from south-eastern France are attempting to save themselves by crossing the Alps. More German troops were sent to this sector to resist the offensive launched by patriots immediately after the liberation of Grenoble. Patriots intensified their activities in the Savoie area.

During the last two months, the Osoppo Brigade fought bravely and ably, killing 500 German soldiers. Patriots cut railway lines in 32 different places, blew up eight railway bridges, derailed several trains, destroyed 12 highway bridges, and captured, destroyed or damaged many enemy vehicles and convoys. FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 25 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the region to the northwest of Paris, strong enemy forces from the west and south followed our divisions which had withdrawn to the lower Seine. The enemy pressure was particularly heavy to the south of Elbeuf, where a gap in the German front was closed by counter-attack yesterday.

To the west of Paris, powerful enemy forces with strong tank support opened an offensive and pressed forward as far as the western outskirts of the city. Violent street fighting has ensued in the outer suburbs of Paris. Attempts of the enemy to force a crossing of the Seine to the west of Melun were frustrated by a counter-attack. In one sector, enemy forces are still holding out on the eastern bank of the river.

Embittered fighting is going on in the areas of Toulon and Marseilles. In individual strongpoints, our garrisons are putting up resistance with the effective support of the coastal artillery, and are thus enabling all the other forces to withdraw in the direction of Lyons.

In the mountainous area to the east of the Rhône, the forces securing the flanks are engaged in fighting with mechanized enemy forces which are trying to cut off the withdrawing German troops in the Rhône Valley.

Patrol boats sunk an enemy E-boat off the mouth of the Scheldt, and set several others on fire; a German vessel was also lost in this fierce engagement.

Two hundred and two terrorists were accounted for on French and Belgian soil.

The reprisal bombardment of Greater London was kept up by day and by night with greater intensity than hitherto.

There was only mutual patrol activity on the Italian front.

In the south of the eastern front, the German troops are falling back to the Pruth and the Sereth, fighting always now that parts of the Rumanian Army had stopped resisting the Bolsheviks on the order of the group of royal traitors. A large number of enemy tanks was destroyed in these operations.

Strong local attacks of the Bolsheviks were repelled between the Vistula and the Carpathian Mountains. In the Vistula bridgehead to the northwest of Baranov, German infantry and armoured divisions, with the effective support of aircraft and anti-aircraft batteries, have frustrated powerful efforts of the enemy to break through to the

In the region of Dorpat, German and Esthonian troops brought powerful enemy forces to a halt.

Fifty-nine Soviet aircraft were destroyed over the eastern front yesterday, during clashes in the air and by the fire of the anti-aircraft batteries. Lieutenant Hartmann, leader of a fighter squadron, accounted for 11 of these planes single-handed, and thus raised his air victories to 301. Squadron Leader Hartmann is the bearer of the Oak Leaves with Swords of the Knight's Cross to the Iron Cross.

In the course of renewed air raids on a naval base in northern Norway, naval anti-aircraft artillery and escort vessels shot down 20 British planes.

During operations of German U-boats in the Arctic, an auxiliary aircraft carrier and four destroyers were sunk, apart from the cruiser reported sunk on August 23. An additional man-of-war was severely damaged by direct hits of a torpedo.

American bombers attacked several localities in northern and central Germany, and also in the Sudetenland and Bohemia. Particularly the towns of Kiel and Pardubice were hit. Aerial defense forces brought down 48 enemy aircraft, including 43 four-engined bombers, during these raids. (Radio Berlin)

Fighting is going on in the outskirts of Paris, which the Allies «pretended to have occupied.» German units are sustaining the pressure of the Anglo-American tanks which succeeded in penetrating into the suburbs. The Germans, who have received reinforcements, are counter-attacking and have already recaptured several localities. The Wehrmacht Command is taking adequate counter-measures to deal with this threat.

FALL OF TOULON IMMINENT
FRENCH BATTLE IN HEART OF CITY

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 24 — The fall of Toulon, where trapped German forces have now held out for four days against the savage hammering of Allied air, land, and naval forces, is imminent, it was announced here today.

But, although forces of General de Lattre de Tassigny have penetrated into the heart of the city, and were reported this morning to hold the prefecture building and the Place d'Armes in front of the forge works of the great naval arsenal, German troops barricaded in the maze of huge workshops and docks still held out today, in bitter fighting.

French forces have now broken through the defenses to the east of the city, but German troops still resisted savagely from the fortifications southeast of the city.

Fighting in Marseilles

Fighting also continued within the great port of Marseilles today, although Allied troops swept westward to within less than 10 miles from Arles, on the Rhone River.

According to official figures, the area of the bridgehead in Southern France is estimated at up to 8,000 square miles. Allied forces have now entered at least six Departments of Southern France, and have liberated over two score towns and cities, including France's second largest city, Marseilles. The bridgehead extends along a more than 100-mile long stretch of the Mediterranean coast of France, with the besieged garrison of Toulon representing the only remaining pocket of German resistance. At its northernmost extension, to Grenoble, the bridgehead has penetrated into the industrial heart of France, only 55 miles from Lyons.

Enemy resistance everywhere, with the exception of onbattled Toulon, continued to be overcome, and the small enemy units being thrown in piecemeal against the 7th Army's advance are being destroyed or captured, it was stated here. The enemy has definitely been "thrown off balance," it was said, by the "splendid teamwork and aggressiveness" of the Allied forces. (PRO)

FRENCH MOVE INTO MARSEILLES

MARSEILLES, August 24 — At 0739 hours yesterday French Army troops entered Marseilles, the second city in France, and were welcomed by exultant throngs who ignored the dangers of falling German shells and constant sniping still going on. Most of the city is in the hands of the French, wrote a UNN correspondent, the remaining German resistance is located at the port, particularly the strongpoint at Fort St. Nicolas.

A staff officer today estimated that from 3,000 to 4,000 Germans are left resisting strongly in the batteries along the port forts and heavy artillery firing from a point in the bay off the harbour. Street fighting is raging in the port area, and sniping is going on all over the town from isolated Germans. Countless prisoners have already been taken by troops and Partisans.

The correspondent said he entered Marseilles from the east, riding down the Boulevard de la Blancarde with the French infantry. Tanks, guns, and armored car columns were moving in fast to support the infantry, which yesterday took the Autagne strongpoint after a hard fight, and reached the outskirts of Marseilles at La Valentine in the early hours of yesterday.

At the Palais de Longchamps, he saw people running down the wide boulevard dodging snipers, while the Partisans closed in to get the Germans. Smoke from shells covered the city, and the sounds of explosions and shooting

Fighting also continued within the great port of Marseilles today, although Allied troops swept westward to within less than 10 miles from Arles, on the Rhone River, in the only actual mileage gain to be reported today.

Details of the occupation of Marseilles and the number of German prisoners taken after its encirclement are still lacking here. Likewise delayed were reports on the extent of damage to the vast port through bombing and enemy demolitions.

French troops moved forward steadily yesterday on both the northern and the eastern outskirts of Toulon. To the north of the town, the fortress of Faron, one of the inland ring of fortifications defending the big naval base, was captured. At latest reports last night, the big forts to the seaward side of Toulon were still firing, both on French troops inland and Allied naval units bombarding the port from offshore.

Northeast and east of Toulon, a series of stubbornly-held enemy positions were reduced in the village of La Valette, the wooded heights of Mont du Paradis, Carqueiranne, and Mont des Oiseaux, and at La Gardy and Le Pradet near the coast.

No further information was available today of the American forces which had thrust 140 miles inland to Grenoble, or of the 7th Army forces pushing westward along the Durance River Valley toward Avignon. It was announced today that Allied troops were well into the Rhone Delta, with one force within 20 miles of Arles on the road from Salon westward.

Enemy resistance everywhere, with the exception of embattled Toulon, continued to be overcome, and the small enemy units being thrown in piecemeal against the 7th Army's advance are being destroyed or captured, it was stated here. Tanks, guns, and armored car columns were moving in fast to support the infantry, which yesterday took the Aubagne strongpoint after a hard fight, and reached the outskirts of Marseilles at La Valentine in the early hours of yesterday.

At the Palais de Longchamps, he saw people running down the wide boulevard dodging snipers, while the Partisans closed in to get the Germans. Smoke from shells covered the city, and the sounds of explosions and shooting echoed in the streets, but little damage was apparent.

Last night, the Patriots occupied the Prefecture and took prisoners. The prisons have been opened, and political prisoners set free. No Vichy administrators were found, but patrols were looking for them. (UNN)

LATE BULLETINS

GERMANS RESISTING BEFORE PARIS

SHAEF, August 24 — Germans are still opposing the Allied advance on the outskirts of Paris, it was reported here late tonight. The French 2d Armored Division is in the vanguard of this advance.

The German defense on the Canadian flank of the Allied army along the Touques River has cracked.

Lisieux has been cleared of the enemy, except for the northeastern part. (Reuter)

U.S. TROOPS REPORTED ON SWISS FRONTIER

GENEVA, August 24 — The Associated Press said from here today that American troops have arrived at the Swiss frontier. The Americans yesterday were officially reported to have reached Grenoble, about 70 miles southeast of the Swiss border at Geneva, and about 60 miles southeast of the long-held FFI stronghold at Annecy. F.F.I. HARASS NAZIS IN ALLIED POCKETS

ALGIERS, August 24 — German garrisons, supply bases, and communications systems left behind the regular front in many areas of France were under constant attack today by French Forces of the Interior.

Dispatches to General Koenig's headquarters revealed that French Partisan troops took 3,300 prisoners in mopping up operations behind the advancing Allied lines in the Annecy area of southern France.

Large-scale clashes in regions by-passed by regular Allied troops have taken a heavy toll of German lives. The fighting carried on by the FFI releases Allied regulars for the widely-ranging spearhead thrusts deeper into French territory.

In the liberation of Grenoble, said a British United Press dispatch, the FFI «greatly assisted American armored and motorized units as they fought their way through intermittent German resistance.»

From the Swiss frontier tonight came reports that FFI troops were fighting in Lyons, northwest of liberated Grenoble. (PWE)

SWEDEN ENDS RELATIONS WITH VICHY

STOCKHOLM, August 24 — Sweden has broken off diplomatic relations with the Vichy Government, it was officially announced here tonight a Reuter dispatch stated.

Francois Conti, Vichy Charge d'Affaires here, said in an official statement tonight regarding the rupture of relations between his government and Sweden:

«The arrest of Marshal Petain and his removal to Germany has put an end to my mission.» (Reuter)

ALLIES CLOSING NEW SEINE-TOUQUES POCKET

SHAEF, August 24 — Allied troops are forging together the ring around the remnants of the German 7th and 15th Armies, trapped in a pocket bounded by the bridgeless Seine and the River Touques to the east. Allied troops, driving relentlessly toward the Channel, today liberated Louviers, and have reached Elbeuf, one of the German's principal Seine crossings only 25 miles from the sea. The remaining bit of the Seine still available to the Germans is being of liberated Lisieux. To the south of Lisieux, Allied troops thrust northeast of Monnai about five miles, while other units drove northeast from Orbec and reached the village of Thiboutier.

Nazi troops in the narrowing pocket now have only about three main roads leading to the river and the remnants are compressed into an area about half the size they were reported to hold yesterday. A British 2d Army official stated that strict secrecy will be imposed on military movements for the next few days.

In heavy attacks on troop concentrations hiding in and around the wooded banks of the Seine, Allied pilots destroyed 300 motor transports and sunk 15 escape barges. Shortly after midnight and until 0800 hours today, aircraft of RAF Coastal Command carried out 25 separate attacks on German surface shipping evacuating from Le Havre.

To the southeast, American armored forces driving on Paris are meeting with stiff resistance.

Southeast of Paris, American forces are sweeping the Germans back along a 60-mile front. The forces which liberated Sens have thrust 15 miles beyond the city, and are advancing toward Troyes, 130 miles from the German border.

Further back along the line, fairly heavy fighting is going on at Montargis, on the River Loing local German forces, apparently by-passed in the initial thrust, are now trying to make a stand.

Other forces of General George Patton's 3d Army are in the vicinity of Corbeil and Melun. A headquarters announcement this afternoon reported that the Seine had been crossed both north and south of Fontainebleau.

GERMANS ADMIT WITHDRAWAL EASTERN FRANCE

LONDON, August 24 — A German news agency military commentator tonight stated that measures have been taken to concentrate the German's western army on the shortest possible line of resistance falling short of the German frontier.

Such a concentration on a shortened line, the German military commentator added, «will mean an injection of added strength into the German Western Army, and it is preferable to the state of affairs in which our formations are scattered over a wide area.»

The Nazi commentator said that the German Army had been scattered not only because they were an army of occupation in a large country with numerous vulnerable points, but because they were forced into dispersal through General Montgomery's tactics. (Reuter)

SHAEF ISSUES STATEMENT ON PARIS

SHAEF, August 24 — It was officially stated here tonight that the Germans still constitute a threat to Paris.

The official statement said that the Nazis, who had made an armistice with French Forces of the Interior, have changed their minds and have threatened to destroy everything in the city.

«The French in Paris have called for Allied assistance,» said the statement, adding: «This is being furnished.»

It was emphasized here that the liberation of the French capital is not in itself a major objective, that the major objective remains the annihilation of German armies.

Allied troops, driving relentlessly toward the Channel, today liberated Louviers, and have reached Elbeuf, one of the German's principal Seine crossings only 25 miles from the sea. The remaining bit of the Seine still available to the Germans is being pounded by Allied air forces.

On the southeastern boundry of the developing pocket, American troops have liberated the important communications center of Evreux, and have driven on through Le Neubourg, 12 miles northeast of Evreux. Forces advancing northward from Verneuil have reached Conches, 15 miles distant.

On the western side of the disorganized German armies, British, Canadian, Dutch, and Belgian troops are pushing steadily eastward. General von Kluge is attempting to hold the Allies along a line from Lisieux along the Touques River to Pont l'Eveque to the sea, but elsewhere the German forces are frantically seeking to escape the certain death which is closing in about them. They are retreating from their bridgehead across the Seine in a northeasterly direction toward the river to reach the crossings covered by big German guns now firing across the mouth of the river from Le Havre.

British troops on the coastal sector have moved so fast that guns of a British cruiser supporting them were soon out of range behind them owing to minefields yet uncleared.

The Germans made frequent counter-attacks yesterday along the east side of the River Touques in an effort to protect their left flank. Heavy fighting is continuing east going on at Montargis, on the River Loing. Some German forces, apparently by-passed in the initial thrust, are now trying to make a stand.

R.A.F. ATTACKS SHIPPING EVACUATING LE HAVRE

LONDON, August 24 — RAF coastal planes carried out 25 separate attacks on German surface shipping evacuating Le Havre, the Air Ministry announced tonight. The attack began after midnight and continued until early today.

The Allied air attacks against the enemy struck from every direction, attacking the Germans in Germany, France, and Czechoslovakia. More than 1,300 American heavy bombers today successfully attacked oil, aircraft, and industrial targets in central and northern Germany, and at Brux, on the German-Czechoslovakian border, headquarters of the USAAF announced.

The targets were at Merseburg, Ruhland, Brux, Freital near Dresden, Brunswick, and Hanover. Other targets were at Weimar and Kiel.

Last night, RAF Mosquito bombers made a concentrated attack on the German city of Cologne, and also attacked other objectives in the Ruhr. Not a single Allied plane was lost during these operations.

RAF bombers escorted by fighters this afternoon attacked "E" and "R" boat shelters at Ijmuiden, Holland, with 12,000-pound factory busters. Earlier many "F" and

"R" boats included in the Le Havre sea evacuation were attacked for eight hours. Among the escaping enemy armada were corvettes and merchant ships, all of which were attacked by relays of Avengers of the Fleet Air Arm, and RAF Mosquitos and Wellingtons. Many of the enemy ships sought shelter in Boulogne, unable to run the gauntlet of the Allied planes.

The Luftwaffe is coming up in increasing strength as the battle moves closer to the borders of Germany. Fifty German planes which tried to interfere with the Allied bombing of Seine ferries and communications were shot down yesterday in the general area from Sens northwest to the mouth of the Seine. More than half were destroyed in one air battle northeast of Paris when a Canadian Spitfire group shot down 32 out of 80 German planes which attacked them. American Lightnings shot down 13 enemy planes, and lost an equal number.

A total of approximately 7,250 flying bombs have been launched against England, a joint announcement of the Air and Home Ministries stated today. Approximately 2,000 of these bombs were launched during the first three weeks of August.

The 9th U. S. Air Defense Command announced today that it has shot down 239 enemy fighters since it went into action on D-day, June 6. This command coordinates the operation of all anti-aircraft guns and Black Widow night fighters in the American sector in nothern France.

R.A.F. USES NEW TYPE BOMB

LONDON, August 24 — A new type of bomb so powerful that the walls of buildings hit by it are usually levelled to the ground is now being used by the RAF, it was officially announced here last night.

The new type bomb was used in recent attacks on the industrial area of Munich and in a devastating raid on Stuttgart.

Details of the construction of the new weapon have not been announced. (OWI)

"INTERNAL DISORDER" - WEHRMACHT WARNED

LONDON, August 24 — In a broadcast to the Wehrmacht, the German Forces Radio today warned German soldiers against the possibility of "internal disorder."

RUSSIANS MAKE DEEP PENETRATION INTO RUMANIA

MOSCOW, August 24 — The fall of five important Rumanian towns was announced in two orders of the day [illegible] Red Army troops of the 2d and 3d the Danube Estuary — owing to confusion among Rumanian troops."

Some part of this so-called confusion was revealed in front line Russian dispatches which quoted Rumanian prisoners as saying that German troops forced them into battle with guns at their backs.

The Russian communique said tonight that 30,000 prisoners, both German and Rumanian, have been taken in the Danube delta offensive. They are described as dirty, unshaven and footsore, with torn uniforms and broken boots, trudging southward, away from the battle front. Russian dispatches said they appeared to be delighted to get out of it.

Reuter said tonight that the Red Army's swift advance through Rumania threatens Bulgaria and Hungary, and that the huge quantities of booty being abandoned by the Germans indicates that they may have to make a hurried withdrawal from large areas now in the path of the Russian push. Reuter also reported that Russian forces were within 30 miles of the Danube Delta late today.

News from other salients of the Russo-German front was fragmentary tonight. Marshal Konev's troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front were reported racing along the highway toward Cracow, in southern Poland, after smashing through the German industrial center of Dombitsa. It was revealed tonight that the captured city had been an evacuation haven for Nazi war factories driven out of Germany by Allied bombings.

Vistula Battle

From the German radio came news of what was described as a fierce tank battle on the Vistula River front south of Warsaw. The Nazis said that already overwhelming Russian forces had been reinforced by four infantry divisions and several tank corps as the battle got into full swing.

From Warsaw, the Polish commander-in-chief of the Polish Home Army reported that fighting continues bitterly in the streets. Allied planes have dropped munitions and supplies to the Polish Partisans, and some gains, building-by-building, have been made in the heart of the Old City.

Again from the German radio, Russian troops are said to have made further gains west of Bialystok, in the drive on Lomza. This offensive, north of Warsaw, appeared today to be aimed at the Polish Corridor and the German city and seaport of Danzig. A deep penetration into the Polish Corridor would cut off all of East Prussia, where German forces are now massed in an effort to block the advance of Russian troops pushing into the Baltic states.

On the Baltic front, the plight of marooned German divisions in Estonia and Latvia was said tonight to be hopeless. Front-line Russian dispatches said that General Bagramyan's forces have thrust a pincers into the large German rescue army attempting to keep open the small gap in the ring the Russians are closing around trapped Nazi divisions in the coastal areas north and west of Riga.

RUMANIANS FIGHTING GERMANS, HUNGARIANS

WASHINGTON, August 24 — Rumania can now turn to the task of helping to drive the Nazi invader from her country, Secretary of State Cordell Hull stated today at a press conference. He added that Germany thus loses the first of her satellites, and that her hold on the Balkans is breaking.

A Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent in Berne reported tonight that Rumanians are fighting German units in the Black Sea port of Constanza, and are fighting Hungarians on the borders of Hungary. General Sanatescu has declared a state of seige in Bucharest, as it is expected the Germans will attack.

Telephone communications between Berlin and Bucharest have been cut since Wednesday night, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish paper Aftonbladet. The Germans are now without any means of contact with

MOSCOW, August 24 — The fall of five important Rumanian towns was announced in two orders of the day issued here tonight as Red Army troops of the 2d and 3d Ukrainian Fronts made deep penetrations toward the highly strategic valley of the Danube.

The first order issued by Marshal Stalin announced the fall of Kishinev, capital of Moldavia, and strong base and rail junction city for Axis armies defending the low-country route to Bucharest.

The second order of the day announced the fall of Roman, Husi, Bacau, and Barlade, all strategically important towns defending the Danube River Delta and the left flank of the important delta city of Galatz.

Kishinev fell to a combined flanking and frontal assault, to joined troops of the 2d and 3d Fronts. The four other German strongholds were taken by General Malinovsky's 2d Front units in an advance which stemmed directly southward from Jassy, which fell two days ago.

The two-day push made gains of 65 miles, and even from the German radio commentator, Col. Ernst von Hammer, brought an admission that the Rumanian front was folding up under the heavy onslaught of Russian tanks and infantry. As the German commentator put it:

"Russian troops have made deep penetrations toward haven for Nazi war factories driven out of Germany by Allied bombings.

Telephone communications between Berlin and Bucharest have been cut since Wednesday night, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish paper Aftonbladet. The Germans are now without any means of contact with their minister in the Rumanian capital. The reported break in communications followed shortly after Rumania's break with Germany.

Rumania's military capitulation will have momentous consequences on the war in eastern Europe, a Reuter military correspondent declared. Two great Soviet army groups are now released for other moves. That probably means 30 to 40 Soviet divisions are freed for another theater. The German army group guarding the Galatz gap between the Carpathians and the Black Sea is in the midst of hostile country with uncertain communications to the rear.

The road to Bulgaria, eastern Yugoslavia, and Hungary is opened. The Danube route into central Europe is opened to the Red Army, and the Hungarian Plains and Budapest are now directly threatened.

The loss of the Rumanian oil fields and refineries is an economic disaster for Germany. The loss of the Ploesti oil fields means the loss of three million tons of crude oil a year, one-fifth of Germany's total supplies.

A Radio Bucharest broadcast late tonight stated that Communists will be taken into the new Rumanian government. Big demonstrations in favor of peace took place in Bucharest yesterday.

The broadcast also said: «Dictatorial régimes to date, ruling permanently against the will of the nation, have endangered the existence of Rumania as a state by their pernicious policy. Today, dictatorship is thrown overboard. The People have again taken up their rights.

«From now on, we are determined to be masters of our own destiny.» (OWI - Reuter)

RUMANIAN KING'S BROADCAST

LONDON, August 24 — The proclamation by King Michael stated:

«Rumanians, this is a difficult hour for our country. I have decided, for the salvation of the Fatherland, the immediate cessation of hostilities with the United Nations, and I call upon a government of national union to fulfill a determined will of the country to conclude peace with the United Nations.

«Rumania has accepted the armistice offered by the Soviet Union, Britain, and the United States. From this moment, all hostilities against the Soviet armies and the state of war with Britain and the United States will cease.

«The United Nations have guaranteed the independence of Rumania. Anyone who opposes the decisions we have taken and who takes justice into his own hands, is an enemy of our nation.

«I order the Army and the whole nation to fight with all means and at the cost of any sacrifice. All Rumanians must rally round the throne and government. He that does not assist the government and the will of the nation is a traitor to the country.

«They (United Nations) have recognised the injustice of the dictate of Vienna, under which Transylvania was torn from us. At the side of the Allied army, and with their help, we will cross the frontiers unjustly imposed upon us at Vienna.»

The last part of the broadcast was indistinct, but the announcer was understood to say that the future of Rumania depends upon the courage with which Rumanians would defend their rights. The Rumanian national anthem was played at the end of the broadcast. (Reuter)

GERMANY UPBRAIDS RUMANIAN KING

LONDON, August 24 — The German News Agency said today: «King Michael of Rumania, in a proclamation, called on the Rumanian Army to cease the struggle against the Bolshevik invader. The Rumanian chief of state, Marshal Antonescu, has been eliminated by a cowardly act of treachery of the King and a traitorous clique of Anglophile politicians and reactionary sycophants. A national group of patriots has been formed to fight against the King.

«A so-called democratic government set up by the King under the ostensible leadership of Maniu, but in reality led by the Communists, has offered to sell out the country to Moscow.

«Riots have broken out throughout Rumania. A national group of patriots has placed itself at the head of a movement against the King and his treachery, and has issued an appeal to the Rumanian people and the Army to continue the struggle against Bolshevism for freedom and life against death and ruin.» (Reuter-BBC)

BULGARIANS INFORM GERMANY OF PEACE INTENTIONS

WASHINGTON, August 24 — Premier Ivan Bagrianov, of Bulgaria, has reportedly informed the German Minister in Sofia that the Bulgarian Government has decided to break off relations with the German government, a Basle correspondent for the Geneva newspaper La Suisse reported last night.

The London Times diplomatic correspondent stated today that the Bulgarian Government has forwarded an official certainty, the report said, as many garrisons have already mutinied.

The leader of the German minority in Hungary has ordered his followers to form an armed organization, Reuter quoted the Swiss Radio as saying today. (OWI - Reuter)

MANNERHEIM REPORTED READY FOR ARMISTICE

WASHINGTON, August 24 — Field Marshal Carl Gustav von Mannerheim, President of Finland, is preparing for an armistice with Russia, an Associated Press dispatch stated tonight, quoting reports from Finland.

The dispatch also said that the Finnish Minister to Sweden had suddenly departed by air today for Helsinki, in a journey obviously connected with efforts to get Finland out of the war. It is the minister's second trip to Helsinki in two weeks.

A Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Express said that the secretary of the Finnish Foreign Ministry had arrived in Stockholm to confer with Madame Kollontay, Russian Ambassador to Sweden. (OWI-AP)

MOSCOW CALLS ON GERMANS TO SURRENDER

MOSCOW, August 24 — Radio Moscow told the German people today that the United Nations are now on the eve of victory. It urged them to surrender immediately, or «go on fighting uselessly to your own complete downfall.»

The broadcast also urged the Germans to join with all foreign workers in Germany in a mass strike «to put the Nazis out of action» by a sudden, bold stroke. (OWI)

POLISH, ITALIAN TROOPS AT METAURO RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 24 — Polish and Italian troops of the 5th Army, having fought their way to the Metauro River on the Adriatic sector, are now in firm possession of the important eightmile line extending from Montemaggiore to the sea, it was announced today.

Advance elements are already in contact with strong enemy forces north of the river, today's communique reported.

Piagge, to the west of Montemaggiore, and San Giorgio, to the southeast, have been taken. Polish units reached SantIppolito, five miles southwest of Montemaggiore, after some fighting. Italian patrols earlier reached Monte Mortello, 10 miles northeast of Cantiano. Cagli has also been taken.

The battle for the Metauro River line was «fierce,» it was officially stated. The enemy employed more than 50 88-mm. self-propelled and tank guns. German losses were high. Eighty dead were counted on one regimental front alone. Almost 800 prisoners have been taken in the Metauro sector in the past 10 days, bringing to 14,000 the total captured since May 11.

There was little activity on the 5th Army front, apart from normal patrolling and artillery exchanges.

The situation in Florence was described as «stable.» Throughout the day, indiscriminately aimed shells fell in many parts of the city. (PRO)

CZECHOSLOVAK OIL REFINERIES ATTACKED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 24 — Up to 750 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked an airfield and oil refineries in Czechoslovakia, as well as enemy communications in Yugoslavia and Hungary.

Also attacked was the Ferrar rail bridge over the Po River in northeastern Italy. This was the second straight day on which the heavily-defended last remaining span over the Po between Piacenza and the sea was bombed. The structure has been seriously damaged in previous attacks, but apparently is still usable.

The oil refineries attacked were at Kilin and Pardubice, 40 and 50 miles east of Prague. With a combined capacity of nearly 3,000 tons of oil per year, these two refineries have assumed increasing importance with the destruction

LONDON, August 24 — The German News Agency said today: «King Michael of Rumania, in a proclamation, called on the Rumanian Army to cease the struggle against the Bolshevik invader. The Rumanian chief of state, Marshal Antonescu, has been eliminated by a cowardly act of treachery of the King and a traitorous clique of Anglophile politicians and reactionary sycophants. A national group of patriots has been formed to fight against the King.

«A so-called democratic government set up by the King under the ostensible leadership of Maniu, but in reality led by the Communists, has offered to sell out the country to Moscow.

«Riots have broken out throughout Rumania. A national group of patriots has placed itself at the head of a movement against the King and his treachery, and has issued an appeal to the Rumanian people and the Army to continue the struggle against Bolshevism for freedom and life against death and ruin.» (Reuter-BBC)

BULGARIANS INFORM GERMANY OF PEACE INTENTIONS

WASHINGTON, August 24 — Premier Ivan Bagrianov of Bulgaria, has reportedly informed the German Minister in Sofia that the Bulgarian Government has decided to break off relations with the German government, a Basle correspondent for the Geneva newspaper La Suisse reported last night.

The London Times diplomatic correspondent stated today that the Bulgarian Government has forwarded an official request to the British Ambassador in Turkey for the Allied terms upon which Bulgaria could quit the war.

NAZIS DISSOLVE HUNGARIAN POLITICAL PARTIES

LONDON, August 24 — All Hungarian political parties, no matter what their political leanings, have been dissolved by the Nazi-controlled Hungarian Government, it was reported by the German News Agency today.

The decree, effective immediately, prohibited all political activity. Property of the parties, as well as their bank funds, have been confiscated by the police. Any violations, the decree said, would be severely punished.

This dispatch follows a report in the Geneva paper La Suisse last Wednesday, which stated that Admiral Nicholas Horty, Regent of Hungary, convened the puppet government's privy council, which is sitting permanently.

A report from Budapest last night said that dramatic events, similar to those which have taken place in Rumania, are awaited hourly. Military revolution is regarded as a

«...fighting uselessly to your own complete downfall.»

The broadcast also urged the Germans to join with all foreign workers in Germany in a mass strike «to put the Nazis out of action» by a sudden, bold stroke. (OWI)

POLISH, ITALIAN TROOPS AT METAURO RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 24 — Polish and Italian troops of the 5th Army, having fought their way to the Metauro River on the Adriatic sector, are now in firm possession of the important eightmile line extending from Montemaggiore to the sea, it was announced today.

Advance elements are already in contact with strong enemy forces north of the river, today's communique reported.

Piagge, to the west of Montemaggiore, and San Giorgio, to the southeast, have been taken. Polish units reached Sant'Ippolito, five miles southwest of Montemaggiore, after some fighting. Italian patrols earlier reached Monte Martello, 10 miles northeast of Cantiano. Cagli has also been taken.

The battle for the Metauro River line was «fierce,» it was officially stated. The enemy employed more than 50 88-mm. self-propelled and tank guns. German losses were high. Eighty dead were counted on one regimental front alone. Almost 800 prisoners have been taken in the Metauro sector in the past 10 days, bringing to 14,000 the total captured since May 11.

There was little activity on the 5th Army front, apart from normal patrolling and artillery exchanges.

The situation in Florence was described as «stable.» Throughout the day, indiscriminately aimed shells fell in many parts of the city. (PRO)

CZECHOSLOVAK OIL REFINERIES ATTACKED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 24 — Up to 750 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked an airfield and oil refineries in Czechoslovakia, as well as enemy communications in Yugoslavia and Hungary.

Also attacked was the Ferrar rail bridge over the Po River in northeastern Italy. This was the second straight day on which the heavily-defended last remaining span over the Po between Piacenza and the sea was bombed. The structure has been seriously damaged in previous attacks, but apparently is still usable.

The oil refineries attacked were at Kilin and Pardubice, 40 and 50 miles east of Prague. With a combined capacity of nearly 3,000 tons of oil per year, these two refineries have assumed increasing importance with the destruction of other facilities in Austria and with the serious damage at and the possible loss of the great Rumanian oil fields.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force continued their pounding attacks on road and rail targets in southern France and northern Italy. (PRO)

PANZER REINFORCEMENTS FOR FRANCE BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 24 — B-25 Mitchell bombers struck at two road bridges north of Turin, Italy, yesterday, to head off German panzer divisions racing toward the Allied bridgehead in southern France.

Returning from bombing rail objectives in southern France, the medium bomber crews immediately readied for the attack on the village of Settino, 40 miles north of Turin, where two German armored divisions were reported to have assembled. The town itself was heavily bombed, and bridges on both sides of the German reserve forces were blown out.

Mitchells also attacked road bridges at Avignon, on the Rhone River, while fighter-bombers struck at rail and road traffic in the vicinity of Cuneo, north of Nice. French Thunderbolts were among [redacted] planes attacking this sector.

The newly-formed Yugoslav Squadron of the Balkan Air Force yesterday bombed German Army headquarters at Marcetelj, Yugoslavia, in the first attack against the invaders of their homeland since its fall. The Royal Yugoslav Squadron, trained in the Middle East by the RAF, consists mainly of veteran members of the Royal Yugoslav Air Force.

Heavy German fighter opposition yesterday in the Vienna area cost the Luftwaffe 45 aircraft, it was reported today. The targets, the Fanto Vosendorf oil refinery, six miles from Vienna, the Wiener Neudorf aircraft engine factory, and the Markersdorf airdrome, were all well covered by the Allied bombers.

German communications in southern France and northern Italy are now «chaotic», with 36 main bridges cut behind the German forces retreating in France, and 30 of the principal bridges over the Po River in Italy smashed.

In southern France, only the south rail bridge at Avignon, and the War River bridge on the Mont Cenis route, are open, but the railway line itself is cut in five places, and the Germans are forced to send their motor trucks bumping over the railway ties.

In north Italy, a total of 57 road and rail bridges have been destroyed, railway lines have been cut in 13 places, and 26 major highway bridges are impassable, it was said here. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS INFLICT MORE HEAVY LOSSES

LONDON, August 24 — Marshal Tito's forces of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation have inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, and captured a large quantity of war material during the fighting in Serbia, today's communique stated.

The action in Serbia included the destruction of a railway bridge on the Nis-Prior line. Enemy attacks were repelled in the Lika and Gorski Kotar districts of Croatia and Slovenia and prisoners were taken.

The communique also said that an enemy plane loaded with troops was destroyed in Dalmatia. (Reuter)

U. S. PLANES BATTER JAP DEFENSES

PEARL HARBOR, August 24 — United States naval air forces, continuing to batter away at Japanese island defenses close to the enemy's home waters, made a series of punishing stabs into the Marianas, the Kuriles, the western Carolines, and Marshalls in the last four days, a Navy communique announced tonight.

American bombers carried out an effective raid on Paramushiro, in the northern Kuriles, on Sunday. Direct hits were observed on the storage areas of this strongest of northern Japanese bases. A cargo vessel was hit offshore, and seven enemy fighter planes were shot down, without losses to the American formation.

Naval aircraft joined by Army planes attacked Yap, in the Carolines on the following day, hitting barracks areas and airfield installations. On the same day, naval aircraft attacked Rota Island in the Marianas, and bombed airstrips on Nauru. Neutralization raids, said the communique, continue against Jap forces on Wotje, and on Mille Atoll, in the Marshalls. (OWI)

FLORENCE PHYSICIANS WORK WITH PARTISANS

FLORENCE, August 24 — Civilian physicians working with the Partisans battling northward from Florence were praised today by Allied authorities for doing «an outstanding job».

Front-line dispatches said volunteer medical men were going in under fire to aid wounded Patriots in the continuing battle north of this city.

In the city itself, other civilians were hard at work making a survey of medical supplies, as Allied officials labored to prevent the outbreak of diseases as a result of water shortages and poor sanitation facilities.

The city has been divided into five health districts. Students assigned to survey work received high praise today for their full reports of unsanitary danger areas.

The volunteer survey teams include students of medicine, engineering and law. As a result of their work, conditions in the city were said to be returning speedily to normal. (UNN)

ALLIES OVERTAKE JAPS IN BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, August 24 — Allied forces have overtaken and were attacking retreating Japanese troops in northern Burma along the Tiddim Road. The Allied troops were 10 miles inside Burma, having advanced 8½ miles in three days, today's Southeast Asia Communique stated.

The communique also reported that Japanese rearguards in the Habaw Valley are thinning out on tracks running east to the Chidwin. Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Eastern Air Command have considerably widened their area of search for enemy rail and road transport, but little was found.

A communique from the Chinese High Command in Chungking said that Chinese forces now hold a third of Tengchung. The Chinese fought their way into the city through breaches blasted in the city's thick walls by the USAAF. Later, fighters of the 14th USAAF strafed Japanese in the northwest corner of the city.

Chinese captured two hills, one north and the other south of Lungling, the communique said.

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 24 — Today's communique:

Navy:

It is learned that the garrison of the Island of Porquerolles surrendered to a U.S. cruiser on August 22, more than 200 prisoners of war being removed. The island has now been garrisoned by French troops.

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the Adriatic sector, Polish and Italian troops of the 8th Army are now firm on the south bank of the Metauro and in contact with strong enemy positions on the north of the river up to a distance of 12 miles from the coast.

In the upper Arno Valley, British and Indian troops of the 6th Army have again been quick to take advantage of a lessening in enemy resistance, and have made considerable advances on both sides of the river, capturing a number of important features including Mount Foresto.

During the night August 22/23 there was considerable enemy patrol activity in the Florence area, and there were several clashes between enemy patrols and patrols of 8th Army and the Patriots, which resulted in casualties to the enemy. West of Florence, 5th Army patrols remain active.

Seventh Army:

French troops have captured Marseilles, eight days after going into action in Southern France, and are driving westward into the lower Rhone Valley.

A substantial number of prisoners was taken in the capture of the city, in peacetime the principal port of France, and the largest on the Mediterranean. All escape routes were cut by the rapid advance of mobile elements.

Enemy resistance was comparatively slight in Marseilles, but continues stubborn in Toulon, where street fighting is still in progress with much of the city in our hands.

Northwest of Marseilles, further progress toward the Rhone River was made with the occupation of Salon. American forces have driven farther westward in the Durance River Valley.

MAAF:

Tactical aircraft yesterday carried out widespread attacks on bridges and enemy transport in the south of France and Northern Italy, and continued to give close support to the ground forces.

Other aircraft attacked communications and enemy transport in Yugoslavia and Greece.

Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers attacked an oil refinery, factories, and an airfield in the Vienna area. Others attacked a railroad bridge at Ferrara.

In these operations, 45 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 29 of ours are missing. Three of our aircraft are missing from night operations on August 22/23.

MAAF flew approximately 1,900 sorties. (OWI)

SHAEF, August 24 — Today's communique:

Land: Southeast of Paris, Allied forces have reached the vicinity of Corbeil and Melun, and reconnaissance elements are 15 miles east of Sens. Units advancing northward have liberated Evreux, and are now several miles beyond the city. Other units have reached Conches, after freeing Verneuil.

The thrust northeast from Monnai progressed about five miles, and the drive northeast from Orbec reached the villages of Thibboutiere. Several bridgeheads have been made across the River Touques. Fighting continues in the area of Lisieux, where the enemy have taken up strong positions dominating the eastern exit from the town.

In the Pont L'Eveque area, enemy resistance was stubborn, and between there and Lisieux, heavy mortar fire was brought down on our troops crossing the river.

Air: The enemy's dwindling road, rail, and water transport systems were attacked by our aircraft yesterday. Fighter bombers destroyed more than 500 motor transport in woods and on the road in the Elbeuf-Louviers area, and sank 15 river barges at Tournedos sur Seine.

Both flak and enemy air opposition were encountered along the river and as far east as Sens, where our fighters gave support to ground forces. Seventeen enemy planes were destroyed in the air in this sector, and 12 others damaged. Fifteen of our aircraft are missing.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 24 — Thursday night's communique:

During August 24 southwest and south of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting 30 populated localities, including Servanti, three kilometers to the south of Tartu, Remati, Tokila, Lio, Karri, Raydla, and Kalsolaki, and the railway station of Rokka.

Southwest of Jelgava (Mitava), our troops repelled strong enemy tank and infantry attacks.

South of Lomza, our troops continued to advance and occupied 27 populated localities, including Vakenotte, Kotskuvo, Kremvocherys, Jartuzi, Podbelye, Prodnitsa, and Sohovo, and the railway station of Snyadovo.

East and northeast of Praga, our troops successfully beat back all enemy tank and infantry attacks.

Troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front, as a result of an impetuous offensive of tanks, cavalry, and infantry, have routed enemy groups to the south of Jassy, and on August 24 captured the strategically important strongpoints of the enemy defenses, the cities of Roman, Bacau, Barlad, and Husi, and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including the town of Pirgunyavu; the district center of the Maldavian S.S.R. the town of Kalara; large populated localities: Muntiul, Salonye, Tritye, Valematye, Avramezhiu, Cherkeski, Potseshki, Untemetsy, Lozovo, and Kapryanna, and the railway stations of Kalara, Tarantechki, Potseshki.

During August 24, troops of this front captured over 10,000 enemy officers and men. According to preliminary data, in five days of operations, our troops have captured over 28,000 enemy officers and men.

Troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, with the cooperation of the 2d Ukrainian Front, as a result of a skillful encircling maneuver and frontal attack, on August 24 captured by assault the capital of the Maldavian S.S.R., the City of Kishinev. The troops of this front, developing their offensive, occupied over 250 populated localities, including the district centers of Maldavian S.S.R. the towns of Straseny, Kaynari, Lapushna, Valmutrya, Kangat, Chaterlunga, and Kanaklia; large populated localities: Kizusline, Buryley, Eloven, Leutony, Kanechany, Krugloy, Velikane, Porchat, Kazunklie, Semeoglu, Bairamcha, Yeroslavka, Kanchik, Mihaylov, and Obnogait, and the railway stations of Yarbore, Zhol, Kevekai.

In the area west of Belgorod-Dnyestrovsky (Akkerman), troops of this front encircled and annihilated groups of Rumanian-German troops. In this area, over 15,000 Rumanian-German officers and men were captured. The commander of the 9th German Infantry Division, Major General Verner Kebbe, was among the captured. According to preliminary data, the troops of this front, during three days of fighting, captured over 27,000 officers and men of the enemy.

On other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During August 23, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 90 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 82 enemy planes were shot down.

During the night of August 23-24, our long-range air force carried out massive raids on the railway junction of Tilsit, East Prussia. As a result of bombardment, over 30 fires were started, enemy trains, warehouses with armaments, and railway installations were enveloped in flames. In the northwest part of the junction, oil tanks were blown up. With direct hits, warehouses were set on fire, among the fires which enveloped the whole territory, explosions followed. Two of our planes failed to return to their bases. (Radio Berlin)

In several localities in Northern Italy, patriots forced the Germans to build alternative roads to keep open their supply lines.

The general commanding the Italian Liberation, in an order of the day, stated that patriots in the Pongelli sector of Ostra Vetere and those in the Settebello sector recently collaborated with the Italian Liberation Corps with self denial, daring, and comradeship in arms and spirit.

Germans continue to deport to Germany workers seized from factories. Workers in heavy industry are, for the moment, left alone, since the Germans are afraid of a general strike. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 24 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces: In the Toucques and Lisieux sector, as well as farther south, our troops repelled all enemy attacks. An enemy formation which, west of Evreux, had proceeded in a northerly direction, was attacked by our tank formations and stopped. Bomber squadrons supported this fighting and struck at the enemy ferry traffic, and tank and vehicle columns with good effect. Two Seine bridges were destroyed by direct hits. Twelve enemy planes were brought down in dog fights. Northwest of Mantes, at La Roche-Guyonnier, our troops threw the Americans back over the Seine and mopped up enemy forces at the river bend south of the town.

Northeast of Fontainebleau, enemy forces who had crossed the Seine, were thrown back to the other bank of the river in counter-attacks. During the night, bomber formations effectively attacked Evreux. Heavy fires and explosions were observed.

On the coast of southern France, the garrisons of Marseilles and Toulon opposed a stubborn resistance to superior enemy forces. North of Durance, grim fighting with enemy forces, which attempt to check our retreat in the Rhone valley, is in progress.

In the Franco-Alpine area, our formations advance over the pass roads in a westerly direction in face of the stubborn resistance of the terrorists. We recaptured the Maddalena pass after fierce fighting.

London and its outskirts continue to be kept under heavy fire with "V-1."

No important operations except for lively reconnaissance activities are reported from Italy.

In the Adriatic Sea, motor assault boats torpedoed an enemy torpedo boat off Ancona. In the Aegean Sea, a German sub-chaser sank two enemy submarines.

In the southern sector of the Eastern Front, the enemy advanced with infantry and tank formations toward the sector on both sides of the lower reaches of the Pruth. On the central reaches of the Sereth and at Roman, grim fighting also is in progress. Northeast of Warsaw, formations of the Waffen SS frustrated numerous Bolshevist attacks in grim fighting. Between the Bug and the Narew, fierce Soviet attacks were warded off in grim fighting in the forest area. At the infiltration at Mielan, the enemy was still farther repelled. West of the Lake of Pskov, fresh grim Bolshevist attacks were frustrated. Attempts at breaking through toward Dorpat made by several Soviet rifle divisions were stopped.

On the northern sector of the Eastern Front alone, bombers destroyed 60 enemy tanks, 15 guns, and more than 100 vehicles. On the Eastern Front, 54 enemy planes were shot down in grim dog fights. In the course of an attack by Soviet bombers on the Petsamo area and the Varanger Fjord, fighters and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force shot down 29 planes.

In the Black Sea, east of Konstanza, sub-chasers sank a Soviet motor assault boat.

U. S. bombers attacked several localities in the Vienna area. Air defense forces shot down 28 enemy planes, 21 of which were four-engined bombers.

captured the strategically important strongpoints of the enemy defenses, the cities of Roman, Bacau, Barlad, and Husi, and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including the town of Pruzmyavu, the district center of the Moldavian S.S.R., the town of Kalara, large populated localities Muntiat, Salonya, Tritye, Valematye, Avramezhki, Cherzeski, Potseshki, Untenetsy, Lozovo, and Kapryanne, and the railway stations of Kalara, Taranichki, Potseshki...

During August 24, troops of this front captured over 10,000 enemy officers and men. According to preliminary data, in five days of operations, our troops have captured over 20,000 enemy officers and men.

Troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, with the cooperation of the 2d Ukrainian Front, as a result of a skillful encircling maneuver and frontal attack, on August 24 captured by assault the capital of the Moldavian S.S.R., the City of Kishinev. The troops of this front, developing their offensive, occupied over 250 populated localities, including the district centers of Moldavian S.S.R., the towns of Straseny, Kaynari, Lopushna, Vasmatrya, Kangat, Chaterlunga, and Kanaklia; large populated localities, Kozushne, Buretsy, Eloven, Leutseny, Kansellany, Krugley, Velikany, Porchut, Kazankhe, Semeoglo, Bairamcha, Yeroslavka, Kunchik, Mihaylov, and Ghimeghut, and the railway stations of Yarbore, Zhot, Revekai...

In the area west of Belgorod-Dnyestrovsky (Akkerman), troops of this front encircled and annihilated groups of Rumanian-German troops. In this area, over 15,000 Rumanian-German officers and men were captured. The commander of the 9th German Infantry Division, Major General Verner Kebbe, was among the captured. According to preliminary data, the troops of this front, during three days of fighting, captured over 27,000 officers and men of the enemy.

On other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During August 23, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 90 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 82 enemy planes were shot down.

During the night of August 23/24, our long-range air force carried out massive raids on the railway junction of Tilsit, East Prussia. As a result of bombardment, over 30 fires were started, enemy trains, warehouses with armaments, and railway installations were enveloped in flames. In the northwest part of the junction, oil tanks were blown up. With direct hits, warehouses were set on fire; among the fires which enveloped the whole territory, explosions followed. Two of our planes failed to return to their bases.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 24 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On the important Monfalcone-Trieste railway line, patriots succeeded in disrupting German military traffic after repeated acts of sabotage.

Clashes took place between patriots and German troops in Liguria during the first two weeks of August, particularly at Calice Ligure. Patriots killed 40 German soldiers, and wounded 90.

Patriots ambushed an enemy convoy near Cherelo. In the course of the fighting, patriots killed 50 men and captured seven large enemy vehicles; a Nazi major was killed. Patriots took 59 prisoners, including 14 belonging to the Todt organization.

Patriots ambushed enemy troops near Asiago, wounding and killing 50 men and capturing arms and large quantities of munitions. Only one patriot fell and five were wounded. In reprisal, the Germans put 72 families out of their homes. Patriots exchanged German prisoners for the return of hostages that the Germans had seized.

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

Southern France: On the coast of southern France, the Allies pressed forward over the central part of Durance toward the northwest in the direction of the lower Rhône. For this advance, only a few mountain roads can be used, and on these a number of bitter struggles took place against the advancing Allied tanks and franc-tireurs. On the coast, fighting went on west of Cannes and in Toulon. Inside Toulon, the Anglo-American tanks could gain only a few streets. At the combat outpost of the naval commander, violent hand-to-hand fighting took place. The port itself remained in the hands of the defenders.

Shipping Losses: Berlin reports that the losses of British and American auxiliary shipping alone amounts to a total of at least 222,000 tons during the month of August. Most of these losses concerned ships transporting troops.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Sweden Breaks with Vichy: D.N.B. announces: «The Swedish Foreign Ministry announced Thursday evening that diplomatic relations between Sweden and the Vichy Government have ceased to exist.»

Paris: D.N.B. announces: «Rumors that Paris was "liberated" were contradicted today, Thursday, by the headquarters of the Allied Expeditionary Force.» A later despatch from the same agency states: «In certain quarters of Paris, franc-tireurs tried to master the situation. The German Wehrmacht took up the struggle against these franc-tireurs. In a communication from German sources, it is said that upon this occasion the districts concerned suffered heavily.»

Rumania: The first German reference to the new government in Rumania was made by D.N.B. at 1530. It mentioned King Michael's new government and his appeal to the Army to cease fighting against Soviet Russia. Berlin comment stressed the counter-appeal by «a national group of patriots» to continue the war against Russia. King Michael is denounced as a «traitor» and «a Badoglio».

Eastern Front: The feverish defence preparations in East Prussia are stressed. Of the southern sector of the eastern front, it is said: «Owing to the political situation in Rumania and the resulting confusion among Rumanian formations at the front, the Soviets were able to achieve deep penetrations in the areas of their two large-scale attacks near Tiraspol and on both sides of Jassy, in the direction of the mouth of the Danube.» In the east Carpathian forefield, there was only locally restricted fighting.

FASCIST RADIO

The Allies are exerting strong pressure west of the Seine and southeast of Paris. However, the Germans are counter-attacking in all sectors and firmly holding out along the course of the Seine. In several sectors the Allies had to retreat to avoid annihilation.

In the Franco-Italian Alps, German units effected successful mopping-up operations against terrorist bands. The next few days will show the full significance of this new move on the part of the Wehrmacht.

In Italy, the situation remains unchanged, the Polish attempt to ford the Metauro having failed completely. A German military commentator believes that the Allies depleted their troops in Italy to keep up their pressure in France, and are now unable to develop their offensive plans in the Peninsula.

German motorboats penetrated into the port of Ancona and sunk an Allied torpedo-boat.

RUMANIA ACCEPTS RUSSIAN PEACE, JOINS ALLIES

NEW YORK, August 23 — Rumania has accepted a Russian peace offer, according to a broadcast by the Bucharest Radio monitored tonight by the Federal Communications Commission. Bucharest made the announcement in the form of a royal proclamation.

The government of Premier Marshal Ion Antonescu has resigned, Bucharest Radio said, according to the FCC. The broadcast was recorded as saying that the new premier is General Konstantin Sanatescu.

Included in the new cabinet is Julio Maniu, veteran opposition leader and chief of the Peasant Party.

No confirmation of these reports was forthcoming immediately from any Allied source. The Bucharest broadcast was the first word of any definite Rumanian move toward peace, although for several months there have been reports that representatives of the Rumanian Government have been sounding out Allied quarters in the Middle East regarding peace prospects.

Joins United Nations

The Federal Communications Commission also announced that the Bucharest Radio announced that Rumania not only had accepted the Russian peace offer, but had agreed to become an «ally» of the United Nations.

General Koenig said:

«On last Saturday morning, the National Council of Resistance and the Paris Liberation Committee, in accord with the national delegate members and representatives of the Government of the Republic, decreed a national uprising in Paris and the Paris region. The FFI, 50,000 armed men supported by several hundred thousand unarmed Patriots, immediately went into action.

«The Paris police, who had previously gone on strike, seized the Prefecture of the Police, and made the Ile de la Cite a bastion against which the German attacks were shattered.

«Yesterday, after four days of struggle, the enemy was beaten, the Patriots occupied all public buildings, the representatives of Vichy were in flight. Thus, the people of Paris had a determining part in the liberation of their capital.»

The FFI liberation of Paris climaxes a series of engagements in which the FFI have attacked and harried the Germans throughout France, driven them from entire French departments, and occupied a number of towns.

Enemy Losses Named

Details of German losses were listed in an announcement from General Koenig's headquarters last night. Altogether, in a single day's fighting, mostly in clearing pockets of German resistance in the liberated departments, the FFI killed more than 1,400 officers and men and took a large number of prisoners. The FFI also captured a number of German military trucks and much other military equipment, including a munitions dump, a supply depot, and another depot containing 80 tons of ammunition.

Meanwhile, in the areas technically controlled by the Germans, the FFI have kept up their attacks on communications, rail lines, and bridges.

The FFI have liberated Blois, Loches, and Perpignan.

Forces of the Maquis played an important role in the Allied thrust to Grenoble, in southern France, a United Press military correspondent said today. The Maquis assisted the U. S. armored and motorized units as they fought their way through intermittent German resistance. Grenoble is only 24 miles from the Maquis-held department of Haute Savoie, and 75 miles from the Swiss border.

While General Koenig was announcing the liberation of Paris, it was reported that half a million French Patriots, striking from the Alps to the Pyrenees in support of Allied military operations, had liberated 14 departments and recaptured 50,000 square miles in southern France. The FFI announced that, altogether, more than half of France is now under Allied or Patriot control.

The Swiss newspaper Tribune de Geneve quoted an officer of a special German mission, created to evacuate threatened garrisons in various small towns of southern France, as saying: «Under present conditions, we should need at least six months to evacuate General Blaskowitz' army and other Wehrmacht and SS units still stationed in southwestern France.»

A summary of the proclamation, issued by the boy king, Michael, follows:

A new national government will be formed.

Russian peace terms are accepted.

Rumania is to be an ally of the United Nations.

Rumania is taking her fate into her own hands and will fight the «enemy».

All citizens must rally round the throne.

The Vienna award (by which Rumania received part of Transylvania from Hungary) is rejected.

The broadcast, FCC said, was made at 1620 hours, Eastern war time.

The Rumanian action followed by one day a declaration by Bulgarian Foreign Minister Peravan Draganov that his nation was trying to make peace with United States and Great Britain. (OWI)

PARIS LIBERATED BY F.F.I. GERMANS IN FRANCE BEATEN

LONDON, August 23 — The liberation of Paris by the French has been announced by General Koenig, Commander-in-Chief of the French Forces of the Interior and Military Governor of Paris, according to an announcement by BBC today.

LATE BULLETINS

EVREUX LIBERATED

SHAEF, August 23 — Allied forces have liberated Evreux and advanced seven miles beyond it against slight resistance, it was announced here late tonight. Evreux is west of the Seine and is southeast of Le Havre.

Between the Risle and the Seine rivers, Allied forces have begun another great annihilation of routed German divisions in what is described by a Reuter correspondent as «a 19-mile killing ground». Hundreds of Allied guns are throwing enormous firepower into the pocket. Americans on the west bank of the Seine are behind the Germans and British. (Reuter)

FRENCH ARMOURED DIVISION ENTERS PARIS

NEW YORK, August 24 (Thursday) — A Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent at the front reported early this morning that the French 2d Armoured Division has entered Paris. (Reuter)

The paper added that the German Army, to protect these occupation troops in the event of a quick withdrawal, began as early as August 3 to arrest as hostages all of the mayors of villages exceeding 1,500 in population. Many disappeared to escape arrest.

One of the most dramatic aspects of the French Resistance has been the way in which the Maquis have obtained arms. They are fighting with everything from parachuted British tommy guns to revolvers dating from the Boer war. The Swiss radio indicated that one of the conditions of surrender that the Maquis impose on defeated German garrisons is that they must not sabotage their arms and equipment, but must hand it over in good condition. Persons not belonging to the FFI are forbidden to carry arms.

With the French Forces of the Interior in control of Paris, with Allied armor ranging more than 60 miles to the southeast of the French capital and with other Allied troops racing down the mouth of the Seine to cut off the remnants of the routed 7th Army, the enemy in France is beaten. There is no place west of the Rhine where he can hope to make a stand.

Allied troops are now in a race with the enemy, the latter attempting to escape east of the Seine, with Allied armor and other formations closing in on him from the south and from the west, and other units driving to cut off the last avenue of escape northeast of Paris.

The Argentan-Falaise pocket has been liquidated. Here due to amateurish generalship and a retreat started too late an entire German army has been smashed. The enemy has lost more then 100,000 men and a tremendous amount of equipment which cannot be replaced as the Allies drive him from the soil of France.

It is now clear that the Germans are destitute of reserves both in troops and equipment in the entire northwestern part of Europe.

Allied planes, harrying the routed Germans, continue to take a terrific toll of their motorized transport and tanks.

The German 7th Army no longer exists. (Reuter)

ROUTED GERMANS FALLING BACK INTO NEW POCKET

SHAEF, August 23 — Thousands of Germans were retreating west of the Seine into the guns of the Allied air forces and directly into another trap now being drawn by the American 1st Army, which was pushing northwestward down both sides of the Seine, it was stated tonight here.

Between 40,000 and 50,000 prisoners have been taken in the Falaise region, but the number of German dead has not yet been determined, it was also announced. What remains of those forces who were moving to the rear in what Allied air reports called a «rout,» were faced with death or capture by the sudden Allied reverse move in the direction of Le Havre.

This reverse drive was the signal for the French Underground's uprising in Paris, resulting in the French capital's liberation from four years and 76 days under the German invader. There were reports that light artillery from American units was given the Patriots to blast the rearguard German garrisons into death or submission. The Germans, Allied air reconnaissance reported, have been moving from Paris by every road during the last two days.

Official silence for reasons of military security hid the whereabouts of General Patton's 1st Army columns inside from the official confirmation of capture of Sens, far to the southeast of Paris and within 160 miles of the German border. When last heard from, General Patton's armored columns were pointed toward Troyes, 43 miles east of Sens, a city astride the main trunk railways to Alsace-Lorraine and Germany's industrial Saar Valley.

Previous to the drive to Sens, there was a strong battle [illegible] with the 1st Army's armored

The following are the distances from Allied forward positions to the borders of Germany.

Eastern front — touches the East Prussia on border west of Augustov.

Western front, northern sector — 107 miles from Sens to German border.

Western front, southern sector — 150 miles from Grenoble to German border.

Southern front — 200 miles from vicinity of Florence to German border.

BORDEAUX REPORTED UNDER ATTACK

NEW YORK, August 23 — American and French troops were reported, to be attacking the city of Bordeaux. The city lies along the coastal center of the Bay of Biscay, on the Gironde River.

The Associated Press reported from the Franco-Spanish frontier that American and French columns met on the outskirts of Bordeaux yesterday at noon, and immediately began a coordinated assault on the French river port.

Other dispatches from the Spanish frontier town of Irun said that naval gunfire and heavy explosions could be heard from the Bordeaux area. Reports of the Allied assault on the city have not been confirmed from official sources.

MARSEILLES LIBERATED BY FRENCH AMERICANS ENTER GRENOBLE

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 23 — French troops today liberated Marseilles, the Mediterranean's greatest port and France's second-largest city, as American motorized and armored forces of the 7th Army entered Grenoble after a lightning advance of 140 miles through the heart of the French Alps.

Marseilles was occupied by General De Lattre De Tassigny's French forces with a «minimum» of German resistance, it was reported.

Although small pockets of German troops still held out, the deliverance of the city followed swiftly on the completion of a brilliant encircling movement which cut off the last escape routes from the rear.

French troops, pouring southwest of Aix, closed the last 18-mile gap in the tight cordon drawn about the great city today and swept around the shores of the broad marshes to the northwest to close off two highways, the last escape routes open to the German defenders. Westernmost French forces were nearing Martigues, 18 miles northwest of Marseilles, where the southernmost highway, No. 569, crosses the canal leading from the shallow salt lake to the sea at Port le Bouc.

At latest reports here tonight, Toulon still resisted. Its trapped German garrison was fighting viciously to hold the great naval arsenal and port area, although the Allies now hold over 199 miles of the French Mediterranean coast and have swept 140 miles inland to near the industrial heart of France.

Spectacular American Advance

French Forces of the Interior played «an effective support role» in the swift American thrust to Grenoble, it was reported here.

The American and French Patriot forces reached Grenoble after smashing through stiff German opposition at Digne, 80 miles to the south.

The spectacular advance, most sensational so far in the swift-paced extension of the Riviera bridgehead, placed American forces within less than 55 miles of Lyons, third largest city of France, and by-passed, through the «back-[illegible] the last forbidding stretch of the Rhone

Deauville Captured

At the eastern end of the pincers forming the second trap for the Germans were Canadian Army forces who were moving up the coast toward Le Havre. The Canadians captured Deauville and moved toward Trouville before running into German artillery fire.

An Associated Press dispatch stated that Deauville fell to Belgian units while British and Canadian airborne troops, operating as infantry, pushed on to Trouville. Other Canadian units made three crossings of the Touques River farther inland. The Canadians have taken 6,000 more prisoners, bringing its total since August 7 to 19,000.

The Canadian 1st Army, another Associated Press dispatch said, destroyed the German 12th SS Tank Division. A Canadian staff officer said that if this division shows up, it will be the same in number only. It was the 12th SS Tank division, which was charged officially with the murder of 19 captured Canadian soldiers. The Canadians had fought elements of this division in a battle leading to the capture of Falaise before the German division disappeared into the Allied death trap.

Radio Berlin admitted tonight that Colonel General Paul Hausser, commander of the German 7th Army, has been wounded in Normandy.

Berlin said that naval gunfire and heavy explosions could be heard from the Bordeaux area. Reports of the Allied assault on the city have not been confirmed from official sources.

French Forces of the Interior played "an effective support role" in the swift American thrust to Grenoble, it was reported here.

The American and French Patriot forces reached Grenoble after smashing through stiff German opposition at Digne, 80 miles to the south.

The spectacular advance, most sensational so far in the swift-paced extension of the Riviera bridgehead, placed American forces within less than 55 miles of Lyons, third largest city of France, and by-passed, through the "back-door" route, the long, forbidding stretch of the Rhone Valley guarded by the high bluffs of the Dauphine Alps. Here, the Germans might have held back the Allied forces as they poured northward up through the bottleneck of the main traffic artery of southern France.

Six towns, Digne, Sisteron, Aspres, Gap, St. Bonnet, and L'Argentiere were liberated in the swift northward thrust which paralleled the Rhone route through the Durance and the Drac river valleys.

Foundations for the northward thrust, which has brought the Allied 7th Army within little over 200 miles of the Allied 3rd Army last reported at Sens on the River Yonne, were laid in the early stages of the Provence campaign, it was revealed today.

The first official report that American forces were taking this direction came in an announcement on the night of August 20, when it was reported that American forces had crossed the Durance River in several places. On the following day, August 21, the capture of Major General Hans Schuberth, who it is now revealed commanded the forces at Digne, was announced.

Although in subsequent days Allied reconnaissance forces were reported at various points along the Durance, the Asse, and the Verdon rivers, and it was stated that the enemy had become "perplexed and stunned" by the swift movement of the American forces, no inkling of this surprise thrust was allowed to escape.

Along the coast, French and American forces have closed to three miles the narrow escape corridor from Marseilles north around the marshlands of the Etang de Berre, while, inside Toulon, the trapped German garrison fought back at point-blank range the French troops closing in on the great arsenal and dock area.

In violent fighting, French forces cleared and occupied the enemy strongpoint of Hyères, the resort town 12 miles east of Toulon, and swept along the coast to come to grips with the cornered Germans at the eastern edge of Toulon.

With their backs to the sea, the German garrisons of Toulon have organized formidable defensive works around the port area of what was once the home base of the French Mediterranean Fleet.

Mobile artillery, coastal batteries and heavy anti-aircraft guns bristled from every quarter of the besieged fortress city, and although the French assault forces had pushed to within a quarter of a mile of the big arsenal, progress was slow and difficult.

Midway between these two forces, a third French formation thrust through the Chaine de l'Etoile Mountains to capture Allauch, about three miles from Marseilles, and just south of an alternate spur of Highway No. 8 into the port city.

In the western edges of the Allied advance along the Durance River valley, a 7th Army column was reported to have reached a point a mile beyond Cadenet, to thrust to within 29 miles of Avignon along this tributary of the Rhone. Cadenet, six miles northwest of Les Puy, and on the north bank of the Durance River, marks only a small advance in comparison with the swift American thrust along the northeastern reaches of the river into Dauphine and Haute Savoie.

According to late official reports tonight, a further gain of three miles was made by American forces in the Durance River Valley, when they reached today the town of Lauris, west of Cadenet and only 27 miles southeast of Avignon.

The town of Salon, 11 miles northwest of Velaux, where American forces were reported this morning, was also occupied. Salon is 25 miles northwest of Marseilles, on the main highway leading west to Arles. (PRO)

TOULON FORTRESS GUNS STILL FIRING

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 23 — The siege guns of the fortresses ringing the sea approaches to Toulon were still firing last night, although their fire-power had been reduced by the savage pounding of an Allied flotilla of two battleships and three cruisers, it was announced here this evening.

The big guns around Hyeres and Giens Point, 12 miles east of Toulon, were reported to have been silenced by the Allied naval assault, and U.S. destroyers had attacked the island of Portcrolles and had taken off some enemy prisoners, although 150 Germans were said still to be on this outlying island.

There are three main fortresses on the seaward side of Toulon. One of these is Fort Janas, on Cap Cicie, six miles southwest of the city, which commands the entrance into the outer roadsteads of Toulon harbor. A second fortress is on Cap Cepet, extending into the roadsteads due south of the city. The third fortification is Fort de la Colle Noire, a group of three great, linked bastions commanding the entrance into the roadsteads from the east.

In actions at the eastern extremity of the 160-mile-long beachhead, light naval units bombarded enemy guns in the Cannes area, and United States destroyers sank or destroyed four enemy E-boats encountered in these waters.

The unloading of troops and supplies is proceeding well, despite easterly winds and a slight surf, it was announced here tonight. (PRO)

SOVIETS CAPTURE FOUR GERMAN STRONGHOLDS

MOSCOW, August 23 — Three Red Army successes were announced here tonight. Russian forces have captured three German strongholds in Rumania: Akkerman, Bendery, and Vaslui. In the Cracow direction, they carried Dembitsa by storm.

Marshal Stalin issued three orders of the day tonight, addressed to the commanders of the 1st, 2d and 3d Ukrainian fronts, Marshal Konlev, General Malinovsky, and General Tolbukhin.

Marshal Konlev's forces, who took Dembitsa, a large aircraft production and communications center, are now 65 miles east of Cracow. Dembitsa is also an important road and rail junction on the Vistula, only 20 miles from the big Polish city of Tarnow.

General Malinosky's tank and infantry forces, sweeping southward after their victory at Jassy yesterday captured Vaslui, an important communication center between the Pruth and Sereth 88 miles farther down the railway line to Galatz. This latest advance brings the new Rumanian offensive to within 127 miles of Bucharest, and 85 miles of the Galatz gap, the Rumanian gateway city guarding the approaches to the Ploesti oilfields.

Akkerman, German stronghold on the Dniester estuary, fell to troops of General Tolbukhin's 3d Ukrainian Army, who made their gigantic break-through on an 80-mile front yesterday. In one day alone, Tolbukhin's troops routed two German and two Rumanian infantry divisions. Bender was also taken by assault.

Coordinated with the double land drive on Galatz and the Danube Valley was an aerial attack on the Rumanian Black Sea port of Costanza for the second night running. On Monday night, harbor shipping and naval craft were destroyed or damaged, and an oil refinery was destroyed. A strong cover of aircraft supported the Russian advances in Rumania, and maintained full Russian air supremacy.

Malinovsky and Tolbukhin used massed tank and artillery forces to deal steady and relentless blows against the retreating enemy, on the hammer and anvil principle. The Russian approach on Jassy was so swift, Radio Moscow said today, that a railway train with 147 coaches was captured intact and fully loaded.

Cernauti Nazis Encircled

United Press said that the seizure of Vaslui, combined with the capture of Akkerman, virtually sealed the fate of the Germans in the fortified area of Chisinau (Cernauti), capital of Bessarabia. Their last escape line is now within field-gun range of the advancing Soviets of the 2d and 3d Ukrainian armies and the Germans are threatened with a great Russian encirclement operation.

Meanwhile, between the Baltic and the Carpathians, violent battles of armor raged at the approaches to Warsaw and west of Riga. In their furious effort to force the Russians to withdraw from Tukum, 35 miles west of Riga, the Germans are reported to have thrown in more than 400 tanks and powerful forces of infantry in an attack continued all day. Soviet troops repulsed 10 or more assaults before they were ordered to fall back to more favorable defensive positions. The enemy's losses were extremely high.

The fiercest fighting continued north and southwest of Shavli (Siauliai), where the Germans tried to drive a wedge behind the Soviets operating in the area of Mitgava. Panzer forces concentrated for a drive against the Russian rear are now being battered and worn down in [illegible] fighting in the Russian forward positions.

SWISS SEVER RELATIONS WITH VICHY

GENEVA, August 23 — The Swiss radio announced today that the Swiss Government had decided to sever relations with the Vichy government and recall their Minister to Vichy.

The announcement stated: The Swiss Federal Government took note of the declaration of Marshal Petain that he was compelled by violence to leave Vichy, and that he was therefore no longer in a position effectively to wield his powers as Chief of the State of France.

The presence in Vichy of a Swiss diplomatic mission has become superfluous. Henceforth, the Swiss Embassy in Berlin is entrusted with looking after Swiss interests in those parts of France occupied by the German troops.

The Vichy Ambassador to Switzerland informed the Swiss Foreign Office that all communications with Marshal Petain and Laval have been interrupted, and that he therefore considers his functions as ended.

The fiercest fighting continued north and southwest of Shavli (Siauliai), where the Germans tried to drive a wedge behind the Soviets operating in the area of Mitgava. Panzer forces concentrated for a drive against the Russian rear are now being battered and worn down in heavy, protracted fighting in the Russian forward positions. The desperate German counter-attacks here and elsewhere are costing the German Army two tanks and several hundred men every hour, stated a National Broadcasting commentator in Moscow. The fighting at Shavli is expected to become one of the greatest clashes of the war since Stalingrad.

Another violent tank battle is raging at the approaches to Warsaw on the flat ground between the Vistula and the last few miles of the course of the Bug. During Monday and Tuesday, the Russians overcame strenuous German thrusts and made notable gains in their drive towards the Vistula northwest of Warsaw.

Red Army dispatches said that Marshal Rokossovsky's troops began this new drive westward from positions northeast of the Polish capital, with the apparent aim of outflanking Warsaw by crossing the Vistula near its junction with the Bug.

In ruined but liberated Kiev, 37,000 German prisoners marched for five hours through the streets en route to camps. They were part of a number captured by the Soviet 1st Ukrainian Army. (Reuter – OWI)

FIFTH ARMY FRONT QUIET

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 23 — Patrol activity and artillery fire characterised the action on the relatively quiet 5th Army front yesterday. Fifth Army maintained fire on targets of opportunity and scored hits on enemy elements, today's communique reported.

A number of enemy patrols attempting to cross the Arno River were dispersed by mortar fire.

The outstanding advances of the day were scored in the 8th Army Adriatic sector, despite strong enemy resistance along the entire front. Polish and Italian troops forced the Germans to withdraw from many of their hill positions before the Metauro River. In this sector, Italian troops patrolling north of Cantiano reached a point three miles north of the town. Other patrols advanced to points north of the Cagli-Pergola road. Assault troops penetrated to hill features two to three miles north and northeast of Cupe.

The town of Monte Maggiore, which dominates the upper Metauro, was taken by 8th Army troops yesterday morning. Allied patrols are now operating up to the Metauro along the entire stretch along the Montemaggiore to the Adriatic. (PRO)

NAZIS CONTINUE SHELLING FLORENCE

FLORENCE, August 23 — Heavy civilian casualties were caused, and further extensive damage was done to ancient monuments in this old city last night, as the Germans continued their long-range shelling of inhabited areas in the center of town.

Allied Military Government authorities have had 500 hospital beds rushed from Siena to care for the constantly-rising number of men, women and children wounded by Nazi explosives.

AMG said the botanical gardens have been turned into a graveyard because of the shortage of cemetery space, and that 200 bodies are already buried. Twelve first aid stations are now functioning for civilians throughout the city. Bicycle messengers are used to direct ambulances and litter-bearers to places where they may be urgently needed.

An Allied correspondent said the famous campanile Purgiotto was struck by a German shell last night. The old bell tower, dating back to 1336, received a direct hit. Large pieces of it crashed to the ground.

The dispatch added that bitter Florentines gathered in the cathedral piazza early this morning and roundly cursed the Germans for their undiscriminating attacks on civilian sections of the city. (UNN)

HEAVIES ATTACK IN VIENNA AREA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 23 — Heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF today attacked military installations in the Vienna area for the second day and also struck at enemy communications in the Po Valley.

Both Mustang and Lightning long-range fighters provided a continuous protective cover for the formations which crossed the Alps into Austria. Early reports indicated that a considerable number of enemy fighters were encountered over the Markersdorf airdrome and the other targets in the Vienna area.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Airforce penetrated a record distance into southern France to bomb rail bridge as far as 190 miles northwest of Marseilles. Among the targets attacked was a rail bridge at the southeastern outskirts of Lyons. Other medium bombers struck road bridges at Avignon and a rail bridge near Montelimar, both along the Rhone Valley. Fighter-bombers carried out bombing and strafing missions against rail and road targets. (PRO)

CHURCHILL VISITS CANADIAN TROOPS IN ITALY

WITH 8TH ARMY IN ITALY, August 23 — Continuing his tour of the Allied front in Italy, Prime Minister Churchill yesterday visited the 1st Canadian Armored Brigade.

Addressing the Dominion's troops, Churchill said that, if the battle of France continues to go as well as it has up to now there are great hopes that our efforts will soon be rewarded with victory.

Mr Churchill added: «I dare not go so far as to predict an early conclusion of the war, but I would not guarantee that the war will not end sooner than we have until now allowed ourselves to hope».

Referring to the evident signs of decay and disintegration within Germany, the Prime Minister remarked: «When a general goes to Berlin he doesn't know whether he has been called there to be promoted or to be hanged». (PWB)

ITALIAN ARMY PRAISED BY A.C.C. OFFICERS

ROME, August 23 — Major General L. Browning, head of the Army Sub-Commission, Allied Control Commission, yesterday declared that both the Allies and the Italian civil populace need to be better informed about the remarkable rebirth and performance of the Italian Army since Italy became a co-belligerent.

«The value of the regular army of Italy to the Allied cause has not been stressed» said General Browning. «I think the Patriots have more or less stolen the picture.

«The Italian Army has been reorganized out of chaos. The Italian Liberation Corps has fought well and effectively. It has suffered notable casualties, including that of the only son of the Minister of War. The Italian Army has cooperated loyally with us, wherever its forces have been used — and with practically no fuss about doing the job.

«I want the Italian Army to get its just meed of praise, not only in the press of Italy but also in the minds of the Allies.»

Air Vice Marshal W.A.B. Bowen-Buscarlet, head of the Air Sub-Commission, likewise praised the work of the fliers and ground personnel of the Italian Air Force who have labored, he said, against considerable shortcomings of equipment.

«The Italian Air Force has considerable results to its credit,» added the Air Marshal, «and its significant contributions to the Allied war effort should never be forgotten.»

Marshal Bowen-Buscarlet referred to operations carried out by Italian air forces outside of Italy in zones where a forced landing and capture means certain death at the hands of the enemy.

«The Italian Air Force has used all of its resources,» continued the Air Marshal, «and it has shown great ingenuity, as well as great bravery, in using every type of aircraft.

«The Air Minister, General Precentini, is himself a great example of courage and perseverance, and has exercised a fine personal influence over the entire force.» (UNN)

ITALIAN NAVY ESCORTS 5,000 SHIPS

ROME, August 23 — The Italian Navy has done an enormous amount to aid the Allied war effort since the armistice signed last September, Real Admiral C. E. Morgan, head of the Naval Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission, reported yesterday to the monthly ACC conference here.

Admiral Morgan detailed the deployment and operations of the Italian fleet, during which he announced that 14 officers and men have been awarded high British awards for bravery and intrepidity. He accounted for the battleships, cruisers, destroyers, torpedo boats, corvettes, submarines MS, MAS, and small torpedo boats, all of which are being gainfully employed with their own officers and crews in the total war effort.

During the past nine months, units of the Italian Navy have escorted over 5,000 ships, he added. He termed the use being made of Italian submarines as «extremely helpful».

Regarding special operations of the Italian Navy during the same period, Admiral Morgan said that units so engaged have been employed «in extremely dangerous work». He said that 151 such operations have been carried out in the past year, 132 of which have been successful.

«The other 19 special operations were not successful, but their failure was due in no instance to a lack of determination, drive, or bravery on the part of the men and officers of the Italian fleet,» he explained. «In most cases, the failures were due to weather.»

Admiral Morgan said that he had recently inspected the Italian fleet personnel, and added that «I never saw a healthier or better fed group of men.» (UNN)

A.C.C. OFFICIAL PRAISES ITALIAN PATRIOTS

ROME, August 23 — The Allied Forces are determined that genuine Patriots aiding in the fight against the Nazi-Fascists shall be looked after and cared for, once their task is completed, Colonel C. D. McCarthy, head of the Patriots' Branch, told the Allied Control Commission here yesterday.

«Many of these bands are large and highly organised bodies which have been created in various centres of German-occupied territory in Italy,» he explained, «and they have received considerable encouragement and active help and instructions from the Allied Command. One of our chief tasks is to look after the individual members of these bands when their fighting is over.» (UNN)

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE LEBANI STRONGHOLD

LONDON, August 23 — Lebani, heavily fortified German stronghold 25 miles south of the Nis railroad junction on the Belgrade-Sofia line, has been captured by Marshal Tito's Partisans, today's communique from his headquarters stated.

The communique added that the Germans suffered huge losses in men and material, including 100 ferries.

Fierce battles have been raging on the Nis-Pirot line northwest of Sofia for the past several days against Bulgarian and Chetnik forces. The communique said that two corps of Chetniks have surrendered with their commanders. (Reuter)

FIRST ALLIED DAYLIGHT BOMBING IN PHILIPPINES

ADVANCE ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 23 — The first daylight attack by Allied air patrols in the Philippines area was made Monday when heavy planes bombed an 8,000-ton Japanese ship in the Gulf of Davao, a EBC correspondent reported today.

General MacArthur's southwest Pacific communique today announced that Allied heavy and medium bombers Tuesday struck Halmahera, Japanese base in the Dutch East Indies, its heaviest blow. About 135 tons were dropped. Eight parked planes were damaged or destroyed.

In mopping up operations on Biak Island, off Dutch New Guinea, 253 more Japanese were killed, and 30 captured, the communique said. Japanese casualties there now total 3,041, Reuter correspondents estimated.

Radio Tokio in its Japanese Empire broadcast reviewed the last four Allied air attacks on the Japanese mainland, and noted «an increase in the number of the attacking enemy planes while the sphere of their attacks also has been extended,» adding:

«At the same time, we must particulary note the shortening of the interval between attacks.

«Particularly in view of the fact that the enemy daringly carried out his fifth raid in the early morning of Sunday, immediately following the evening raid on Saturday, we must be cognizant of the fact that we are facing an adversary with a fighting spirit of no mean degree.» (OWI - Reuter - EBC)

ROME GAS SERVICE TO BE RESUMED

ROME, August 23 — Emergency action by Allied officers in having a railroad spur diverted and a blown-out bridge repaired in the record-breaking time of 12 days will result in a new and steady flow of 450 tons of coal a day to Rome by August 26, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

This will enable gas service to be resumed in the capital on or about September 1.

The new coal comes from lignite mines in Grosseto Province and, according to officials, will achieve the double result of guaranteeing a steady supply of coal for power production to the city's two steam plants and of allowing the diversion of imported coal for use by gas works.

Appreciation and praise for the cooperation of Brigadier General Carl Gray, Director of the Military Railway Service, was expressed by Brigadier General William O'Dwyer, Vice President of ACC Economic Section, which coordinates economic requirements. General O'Dwyer also officially commended Lieut. Col. C. W. Oxley, coal expert, and Major A. H. Street, engineer, two British officers of the Transportation Sub-Commission, and Lieut. Col. C. L. Birchett, TCU Chief of Region IV ACC, who is an American, for their efforts in initiating and carrying through the project.

Armed with lists of mines, ACC officers visited scores of coal mines north of Rome, trying to find some near a working railway. One was finally found, in Grosseto Province, with a stockpile of nearly 100,000 tons to boot, and a monthly production of 25,000 tons. The 80-foot steel railroad bridge over a river on the spur to the minehead had been destroyed by German demolitions. A 30-foot concrete bridge on the highway that ran by the railway had also been destroyed. With the cooperation of the Military Railway Service and with three shifts a day (at night under floodlights), the work of shifting the railroad tracks nearly half a mile began on August 14. This was to lay them over the concrete bridge and to repair that bridge because of its smaller size.

In the meantime, clearances were made with rail traffic officials and permission was obtained to use empty cars returning from their supply runs to the front lines. Thirty-five of these empties are at this moment standing by, loaded, to be moved as soon as the remainder of the trucks are laid over the new bridge.

The saving thus made of rail space will enable the ACC to bring in more imported coal of the type needed for operation of the gas works in Rome. (UNN)

FLORENCE, August 23 — The Florence Medical Society, one of the oldest in the world, has banned Pro-Fascists from practicing, a UNN correspondent reported today.

The correspondent also stated that Florence was slowly man stronghold 25 miles south of the Nis railroad junction on the Belgrade-Sofia line, has been captured by Marshal Tito's Partisans, today's communique from his headquarters stated.

The communique added that the Germans suffered huge losses in men and material, including 100 horses.

Fierce battles have been raging on the Nis-Pirot line northwest of Sofia for the past several days against Bulgarian and Chetnik forces. The communique said that two corps of Chetniks have surrendered with their commanders. (Reuter)

FIRST ALLIED DAYLIGHT BOMBING IN PHILIPPINES

ADVANCE ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 23 — The first daylight attack by Allied air patrols in the Philippines area was made Monday when heavy planes bombed an 8,000-ton Japanese ship in the Gulf of Davao, a BBC correspondent reported today.

General MacArthur's southwest Pacific communique today announced that Allied heavy and medium bombers Tuesday struck Halmahera, Japanese base in the Dutch East Indies, its heaviest blow. About 135 tons were dropped. Eight parked planes were damaged or destroyed.

In mopping up operations on Biak Island, off Dutch New Guinea, 253 more Japanese were killed, and 30 captured, the communique said. Japanese casualties there now total 5,041, Reuter correspondents estimated.

Radio Tokio in its Japanese Empire broadcast reviewed the last four Allied air attacks on the Japanese mainland, and noted «an increase in the number of the attacking enemy planes while the sphere of their attacks also has been extended,» adding:

«At the same time, we must particularly note the shortening of the interval between attacks.

JAPS STILL RETREATING DOWN TIDDIM ROAD

KANDY, CEYLON, August 23 — Japanese forces were retreating so rapidly down the Tiddim Road in Northern Burma that Allied forces were unable to make contact with the enemy, today's communique from the Southeast Asia Command headquarters stated.

Bombers of the Eastern Air Command scored direct hits on five river steamers and many small craft during a series of sorties over the Chindwin and Irrawaddy area, the communique added.

The Chinese High Command reported that fighting was continuing on the outer defenses of Hengyang, with Mustangs and Warhawks of the 14th USAAF bombing bridges south and southwest of the town.

It was revealed at headquarters here that General Joseph Stilwell, before laying siege to Myitkyina, had increased the strength of his Chinese Army in North Burma from two to five divisions by flying additional men from China into India and then into northern Burma. The movement required only 12 hours for any one soldier.

The U. S. War Department announced today that the Chinese Government had awarded a certificate of merit to the India-China Division of the U. S. Air Transport Service for keeping open China's lifeline to the outside world. The announcement added that U. S. transport planes now cross the towering Himalayas at the rate of one every 10 minutes. The flow of air cargo over this route has for many months exceeded the load that passed over the Burma Road during its traffic peak. (OWI) announced today.

This will enable gas service to be resumed in the capital on or about September 1.

The new coal comes from lignite mines in Grosseto Province and, according to officials, will achieve the double result of guaranteeing a steady supply of coal for power production to the city's two steam plants and of allowing the diversion of imported coal for use by gas works.

Appreciation and praise for the cooperation of Brigadier General Carl Gray, Director of the Military Railway Service, was expressed by Brigadier General William O'Dwyer, Vice President of ACC Economic Section, which coordinates economic requirements. General O'Dwyer also officially commended Lieut. Col. C. W. Oxley, coal expert, and Major A. H. Street, engineer, two British officers of the Transportation Sub-Commission, and Lieut. Col. C. L. Birchett, TCU Chief of Region IV ACC, who is an American, for their efforts in initiating and carrying through the project.

Armed with lists of mines, ACC officers visited scores of coal mines north of Rome, trying to find some near a working railway. One was finally found, in Grosseto Province, with a stockpile of nearly 100,000 tons to boot, and a monthly production of 25,000 tons. The 80-foot steel railroad bridge over a river on the spur to the minehead had been destroyed by German demolitions. A 30-foot concrete bridge on the highway that ran by the railway had also been destroyed. With the cooperation of the Military Railway Service and with three shifts a day, 1st night under floodlights, the work of shifting the railroad tracks nearly half a mile began on August 14. This was to lay them over the concrete bridge and to repair that bridge because of its smaller size.

In the meantime, clearances were made with rail traffic officials and permission was obtained to use empty cars returning from their supply runs to the front lines. Thirty-five of these empties are at this moment standing by, loaded, to be moved as soon as the remainder of the tracks are laid over the new bridge.

The saving thus made of rail space will enable the ACC to bring in more imported coal of the type needed for operation of the gas works in Rome. (UNN)

MEDICAL SOCIETY BANS PRO-FASCIST PHYSICIANS

FLORENCE, August 23 — The Florence Medical Society, one of the oldest in the world, has banned Pro-Fascists from practicing, a UNN correspondent reported today.

The correspondent also stated that Florence was slowly returning to normal. Italian committees have undertaken the task of cleaning up the mines in the city's streets. Curfew hours have been shortened two hours, and are now 2100 to 0500, instead of 2000 to 0600 hours. (UNN)

FLORENTINE FOOD SITUATION SATISFACTORY

FLORENCE, August 23 — The food situation in Florence is more than satisfactory, it was announced by the Allied Military Government yesterday.

Bread rations are now 200 grams per person daily, and, in addition, there is to be a supplementary supply of essentials to each person to last until the end of the month.

Supplementary rations include 100 grams of sugar, 30 grams of laundry soap, 50 grams of concentrated soup, and 250 grams of powdered milk to be issued to expectant mothers, children under three months, and invalids. A further 1,000 kilograms of dried beans are to be distributed.

The work of supplying an unrestricted water supply to the people of Florence has been going on feverishly for some days, and it was announced that there is to be water in the taps for a two-hour test of the mains. If the test is satisfactory, Florence will have water in all houses for specified hours until all pipes are repaired.

AMG authorities have arranged to import plentiful supply of fruit, vegetables, and firewood into Florence. A fruit and vegetable market is being set up where fixed prices will apply, thereby combatting inflation and exhorbitant prices.

AMG will carry out an experiment which has not been tried in other liberated cities. The Allied officials will fix the prices of food, but a committee of local commercial men and merchants will be formed to advise and recommend fixed prices. It is felt that they are in the best position to administer the functions to prevent black market operations.

The Allied authorities are hoping to speed up the reintroduction of industries. Plant owners and manufacturers have been asked to make an urgent report on plant machinery requirements which will be supplied or ordered by AMG with the view to the earliest possible resumption of industrial work. ITALIAN COMBAT TEAMS READY TO ADVANCE

ROME, August 23 — Combat teams of Italian Government officials have been formed, and are ready now to advance into newly liberated territory behind the Allied armies, it was disclosed yesterday at the conference of Allied Control Commission officials.

The Italian Government, in cooperation with ACC, has picked groups of officials in each branch of local government, and they are now being trained to assume responsibilities in the parts of northern Italy which the Allies intend to liberate from the Germans in the coming months.

These combat teams of Italian officials include experts on medicine, police, questura, cultural treasures, finance, agriculture, jurisprudence, and other phases of government work.

Colonel G. R. Upjohn, acting head of the administrative section of ACC, who reported this development, also outlined what he described as one of the gravest problems confronting Italian local officials: the problem of mine clearance.

Colonel Upjohn explained that the authorities are faced with the fact that liberated territories where battles have taken place are sown with various types of mines; specialists must be trained in the characteristics of each type, and additional mine detection equipment must be produced. The ACC and the Italian Government are tackling the problem jointly.

Italian courts have resumed such a great portion of their normal work, it was reported at the meeting, that in Italian Government territory in the last 30 days only four cases have been tried in Allied courts. The Court of Cassation will open sessions November 1.

Reporting on health conditions, Brigadier G. S. Parkinson, chief of the Public Health Sub-Commission, said that the tuberculosis rate in Italy is now one in 50, the lowest rate since 1940. Malaria could be expected in the areas flooded by the Germans, he stated, but ample supplies of mapacrine were on hand, and the region had been dusted with paris green by aeroplane. (UNN)

REPORTS TO A.C.C. ON STATE OF ITALY

ROME, August 23 — The Italian government has not been obliged to take any cash advances from the Allies for the past six months, but the country's industrial plants, and especially its electrical resources, are in a disastrous state, the Allied Control Commission was told yesterday.

Reports presented at a conference of top ACC officials showed that Italy's finest factories have been destroyed, civilian transport is woefully inadequate, and the supply of electricity is critically small.

In Central Italy, the Germans destroyed 95 per cent of the electrical plants, Lieut. Colonel L. A. Jenny, chief a total of 500,000,000 from the day the Allies landed until July 31.

It is proposed to reintroduce the points rationing system for clothing as soon as enough clothes are available. Five thousand two hundred uniforms, provided by British ordnance, have been distributed to Italian railworkers, and 50,000 pairs of reconditioned shoes have been made available by the Allies to special categories of workers.

The Italian Government has been urged to set up a price control office, but so far no action has been taken on this proposal, Colonel W. S. Evans, head of Commerce Sub-Commission, reported.

The transport problem is mainly one of carrying food from areas where surpluses are produced, to areas where there is a food deficiency. Military supplies take first priority, but in July 1944 Italian railways moved 170,000 tons of civilian supplies, compared with 13,000 tons in December, 1943. The commission was told there is a continual shortage of trucks necessary to carry food, though about 3,000 Italian civilian vehicles are now engaged in hauling supplies for civilians.

The Italian Government in setting up truck pools in each province, said Colonel D. S. Adams, of the Transportation Sub-Commission. Explaining some of the difficulties, he stated that in August there were only 60,000 tires available, compared with 200,000 needed. The coastal shipping fleet is also needed mainly for war purposes, but efforts are being made to secure at least a part for civilian needs. The demand for ships for military and civilian needs is much greater than the supply, the Commission was told.

Captain Ellery Stone, USN, Acting Chief Commissioner, who presided at the meeting, commenting on Italy's economic situation, said the task of ACC is to present to the highest Allied authorities the civilian needs of Italy. He said a sharp distinction must be made between military necessity and military convenience. Economic reconstruction of the country was absolutely essential, and progress in this direction is being made, Captain Stone declared.

Reporting on the financial situation, Colonel A. P. Godfrey-Smith, chief of the Finance Sub-Commission, said no advances had been made to the Italian Government for six months, and the government had been financing itself mainly through the Banca d'Italia. The financing of the Grassi del Popolo has been reorganized, he reported. The Ministry of the Treasury has issued instructions that arrears on loans to the Consorzio are to be reduced from 7 percent to 1-2 of one percent. The Finance Sub-Commission has also secured relaxation of the rule requiring an Allied officer to be present whenever a safe deposit box was opened. Now this is required only in the case of boxes belonging to known Fascists, enemy organizations, and the like. (UNN)

REPUBLICAN FASCIST SENTENCED

ROME, August 23 — Lorenzo Perrel, former secretary of the Republican Fascist Party of Scarlino, was sentenced in the courts of Grosseto to 18 years in the penitentiary and fined 15,000 lire for acts of violence against private citizens, for kidding people against their will, for threats, fraud, and public intimidation. He was the first Fascist to be tried and sentenced for crimes committed against the civilian population under Fascism. (UNN)

In Central Italy, the Germans destroyed 95 per cent of the electrical plants, Lieut. Colonel L. A. Jenny, chief of the Public Works and Utilities Sub-commission of ACC, reported. In northern Italy, the situation may be even worse, - if that is possible, - he said. Only the strictest rationing of electricity could assure enough for essential needs.

Discussing the broader phases of industrial reconstruction, Lieut. Colonel Jenny said that in the 12 months after the war, Italy will have to spend an estimated 3,000 million dollars for reconstruction of which at least 1,600 million would be for machinery alone.

Sardinian coal will have to be used where, formerly, manufacturers relied on German coal, stated Colonel J.S.F. Todd, of the Industry Sub-Commission. This officer stated that Italian industries that are operating are gradually coming into substantial production for civilian, as well as Allied use. The long-range Allied policy, he stated, is to ship raw materials to Italy rather than finished manufactured goods, to help create employment in Italian factories.

A national program for industrial reconstruction is now being prepared by the Italian Ministry of Labor, Industry, and Commerce, in cooperation with ACC, and will be presented to the highest Allied authorities. The aim of the program, said Colonel Todd, is to keep Italy alive industrially during and after the war.

Regarding commerce, the ACC meeting was told that Italy's exports for June-July were 136,000,000 lire, making he stated that in August there were only 60,000 tons available, compared with 260,000 needed. The coastal shipping fleet is also needed mainly for war purposes, but efforts are being made to secure at least a part for civilian needs. ROOSEVELT URGES CONTINUATION OF LEND-LEASE

WASHINGTON, August 23 — In his quarterly Lend-Lease report to Congress, President Roosevelt said that the lend-lease program should be continued on whatever scale is necessary to make the combined striking power of all the United Nations as overwhelming and as effective as possible, it was announced here today.

«We know,» the President said, «that by combining our power we can speed the day of certain victory. We also know that only by continuing our unity can we secure a just and durable peace.»

The President's report placed the value of lend-lease services for the quarter ending June 30 at $4,045,000,000. (Reuter)

CHURCHILL MEETS GREEK PRIME MINISTER

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 23 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill met the Greek Prime Minister, M. Papandreou, to review «every aspect» of the Greek situation on Monday, it was announced here late tonight.

The two prime ministers found «themselves in complete agreement,» and Mr. Churchill expressed the satisfaction of His Majesty's Government at the progress made in achieving Greek national unity, it was said.

Prime Minister Churchill discussed with Mr Papandreou the means by which Greece's military contribution toward the defeat of the enemy might be made «most effective.» (UNN)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 23 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy — Continuing their operations to follow up the enemy in the Adriatic sector, Polish and Italian troops of the 8th Army encountered strong enemy rearguard resistance on the high ground just south of the River Metauro, between Cerasa and Monte Maggiore. However, this resistance has now weakened, and our patrols have reached the south bank of the river in many places, up to 12 miles from the sea.

In the more mountainous country southeast of San Giorgio di Pesaro, our troops have advanced some three miles in many places. Heavy artillery fire is now being encountered from the enemy on the north bank of the river.

In the mountains on both sides of the upper Arno Valley, many of our strong fighting patrols have gained ground and have found the enemy established in new positions slightly farther north.

East of Florence, north of the River Arno, Indian troops of the 8th Army staged a successful ambush and took a number of prisoners.

Elsewhere, active patrolling has covered our front without any major change in our dispositions.

Seventh Army. — American troops of the 7th Army in a swift advance northward of some 140 airline miles from their points of landing in Southern France have entered the town of Grenoble. They had the effective cooperation of French Forces of the Interior in their drive, which started in the early stages of the campaign.

Towns taken en route included Digne, Sisteron, Aspres, Gap, St. Bonnet, and L'Argentiere.

French troops have cleared and occupied Hyeres after heavy fighting and have closed in on Toulon from the east. Within Toulon, where heavy fighting continues, the French have improved their positions and advanced farther toward the port area.

The encirclement of Marseilles is continuing on a broad front. French forward elements have penetrated to within three miles of the eastern outskirts of the city, while, to the northwest, American columns are a similar distance from the Etang de Berre. Further advances also have been made in the Durance River Valley.

More than 17,000 prisoners have been taken.

MAAF — Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked installations in German Silesia and Austria.

In support of ground forces in Southern France, tactical aircraft attacked enemy communications and troop concentrations. Other tactical aircraft carried our attacks against road and rail objectives, as well as other targets, in Northern Italy and Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked military objectives at Miskolc, in Hungary.

In these operations 57 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 45 of ours are missing. Three of our aircraft are missing from night operations on August 21/22.

MAAF flew approximately 2,300 sorties.

Naval — Although there is little definite naval news from the operational area off the south of France, it is learned that the task of landing reinforcements and stores for the advancing army continues satisfactorily.

Naval aircraft working from the carrier forces continue to give valuable service.

The report from the naval commander says that on August 20, apart from spotting for the gunfire of the force bombarding Toulon, naval aircraft successfully attacked locomotives and motor transport.

Air: Allied fighter-bombers and fighters continued to pound the enemy at the Seine crossings, destroying more than 200 vehicles, 15 boats and barges and six tanks. These attacks were made through rain and thick clouds, and were often delivered at 200 feet, despite heavy anti-aircraft fire and strong air opposition.

More than 150 railway cars were destroyed or damaged by other formations operating to the east and southeast of Paris. Marshalling yards at Dijon and Chagny were attacked with good results. At least 31 enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air, and six on the ground. Preliminary reports show that two of ours are missing.

Sea: During a gun action fought on Monday morning south of Cap Dantifer between light coastal forces of the Royal Navy and an enemy patrol of armed trawlers and R-boats, one trawler was severely damaged and one R-boat destroyed. Two other R-boats received serious damage.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 23 — Today's communique:

Land: Allied forces have liberated Sens, on the eastern bank of the River Yonne. Pithiviers and Etampes are also in our hands. North of Dreux, other units are moving northwestward between the rivers Seine and Eure. In the drive northward, between Dreux and Vernouil, the Allies have liberated Nonancourt, and the advance has been carried to a point north of St. Andre de Leure.

To the west, considerable advances have been made along the whole Allied front between Laigle and the Seine. In the center of this wide sweep, our forces are fighting in Lisieux. North of the town our forces have surged forward all along the line and captured Cuboury, Houlgate, Villers-sur-Mer, and Deauville and have reached Trouville, Pontleveque, and the line of the River Touques further south.

South of Lisieux, our troops have established a broad bridgehead extending for several miles further east across the Orbec River. Other troops have advanced across the River Vie through Vimoutiers, and have crossed the River Touques further south.

The Falaise pocket has been eliminated.

Hons of Reula, Uhty, and Lellis.

On all other sectors on the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 22, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 174 German tanks, in aerial combat and by anti-aircraft fire 94 enemy planes were shot down.

The air arm of the "Black Sea Fleet" carried out raids on the Rumanian Ports of Constanta, Sulina, and Vinkok. In the port of Constanta, our fliers sunk an auxiliary launch, a transport of 1,000 tons, and an escort launch. In the port of Sulina, one transport of 1,000 tons, two barges, and one launch were sunk. In the port of Vinkok, one motor barge was sunk. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 23 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Here is a complete account of the most important actions carried out by the Spartaco Lavignini Brigade, which is the Garibaldi Assault Brigade:

The nucleus of the Brigade came from the Monte Cuoio sector, in the Province of Siena. During the first months, their activities were directed against Nazi-Fascist police patrols, for the purpose of seizing arms for themselves. Patriots killed about 30 militiamen and disarmed many other Nazi-Fascists.

In the locality of La Bela, and later at Monte Cuoio, the brigade lost 20 men in one encounter, and 17 in another.

When it had reorganized, the Patriots undertook large-scale operations. They occupied the town of Montieri, destroying the pyrite mines at Boccheggiano. They intensified their attacks against Nazi-Fascist patrols, attacked an observation post at Poggio Ragnolo and destroyed the Republican Fascist headquarters of a few towns.

Following the official recognition of the brigade by the Committee of National Liberation, and the formation of several different units, it succeeded in taking over control of several towns in the Senese, including the six towns of Monte Amiata. During this phase, Patriots killed 86 Nazi-Fascists. Hundreds of quintals of grain seized from the Germans were distributed to the local population.

One of the most daring acts carried out by Patriots was the attack on Cacciano di Murlo, aimed at freeing Patriots who had been made prisoners by the Germans. The carabinieri, militiamen, and local Fascists were overwhelmed. Those who resisted were either killed or taken prisoners. Patriots attacked and disarmed many Fascist barracks, including those at Santa Fiora, Frosini, Montieziano, Chiusdino, Arcidosso, Castelnuovo, Abbadia and San Salvatore.

Patriots disrupted communications on the following highways: the Grosseto-Siena highway in five places; the Cerreto-San Rocco highway in three places; the Nazionale-Aretina highway in 15 places; the Santa-Casciano highway in three places; the Massi highway in four places; and the Monte Amiata crossroads.

They destroyed the bridges at Petrollo, Ornate, Macereto, and others on the Cerreto, Pornatilla, Frosini, Montieziano, Sternatilla, Trailito, Casciano; and Pescino highways.

They executed 60 Fascists who were members of German organizations, and guilty of sanctioning German plundering and wanton destruction.

At Montieziano, after having distributed 400 quintals of grain to the population, the Patriots attacked a vehicle carrying Germans, who were either killed or taken prisoners. German troops sent as reinforcements were met by Patriots in spite of enemy superiority in numbers. During a battle of several hours, Patriots killed 25 Germans and wounded 17.

In an encounter, at Poscini, 39 Germans were killed.

A group of Patriots attacked the Germans controlling the radio station at Monte Amiata, killing 22, wounding others, and putting the remainder to flight. Patriots destroyed the radio station, the offices, and many enemy vehicles.

Patriots annihilated 200 Germans encamped on Piancolla Contessa.

The Patriots attacked German pioneer troops who were about to blow up an aqueduct, killing 14. They attacked German troops at Iesa and Borniella, killing 50. Other encounters against German motorized columns resulted in many vehicles being captured by the Patriots.

Patriot units are cooperating with Allied troops in mopping up operations. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 23 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

West of the lower reaches of the Seine, the enemy is pressing hard on the heels of our troops, who withdrew to the Touquet sector, on both sides of Lisieux. West of Evreux and at Evreux itself, as well as between the Eure and the Seine, our divisions oppose grim resistance to the enemy, who attacks with strong forces in a northerly direction. He succeeded in gaining a little ground, and suffered heavy losses. North of Mantes, our counter-attack on the enemy bridgehead repelled the enemy farther toward the river. South of Paris, the enemy attacked our advanced positions with strong forces and threw our troops back toward the Seine. Farther south, fighting developed at the lines at several points, were stopped by German and Rumanian units. Northwest of Baranov, our troops, supported most effectively by artillery and mortars, smashed strong Soviet forces. Southeast of Warka and northeast of Warsaw, new Soviet attempts at breaking through were frustrated. One tank division alone destroyed 52 enemy tanks in the course of the fighting. Between Bug and Narev, the Soviets, supported by strong tank and bomber forces, resumed their attacks. The enemy was stopped in the rear lines in grim fighting.

West of the Lake of Pskov, numerous enemy attacks were frustrated.

Bomber and fighter-bomber formations participated effectively in the ground fighting at the focal points, and destroyed numerous enemy tanks, guns and some hundred vehicles in low-level attacks. On the eastern front, yesterday, the Soviets lost 62 planes by fighters and the action of antiaircraft batteries.

Seven bombers out of a force of British planes which attacked a base in northern Norway were brought down by patrol vessels. One vessel alone scored four successes.

In the Arctic Sea, a German submarine attacked a cruiser of the Dido Class. The cruiser, having been hit by thee torpedoes, broke apart and sank.

USAAF bombers attacked the Vienna area and some localities in upper Silesia. German and Hungarian air defense forces brought down 57 planes, 51 of which were four-engined bombers. In the night, three other enemy planes were shot down over western Hungary. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

German Air Force Innovation: The German Air Force has just now put into service a four-engined bomber used for attacks on tanks. It is a Henkel-177, called «Griffin» (Greif) by the soldiers. American Losses: The United States «Ranger» troops have suffered 85 per cent losses on the Italian front. The few survivors of the 1st, 3d, and 4th Ranger battalions have returned to New York. They were composed of the most powerfully built American soldiers. Only 100 men out of 1,500 men, composing the three battalions, survived. New Landing in France: A late German despatch announced a new Allied landing at Saint Jean de Luz, near the Franco-Spanish frontier. German coastal batteries frustrated attempts to reinforce the troops landed.

Northern France: The military commentator Dr. Krull reports the conclusion of the battle near Argentan, where German troops succeeded in getting rid of the threat of encirclement. The German 7th Army can again operate freely. Meanwhile, it is said that the Allies may be planning to by-pass Paris from the south.

Southern France: The commentator Sertorius reports that the American attack against the eastern front of the Toulon fortress is making slow progress. Meanwhile, Gaullist formations are carrying the fight into the outer districts of the city, where the German troops are offering stubborn resistance. The unusually large use of long-range naval artillery by the Allies is mentioned as an important factor in the fight for Toulon.

South of the Durance, our divisions, according to orders received, withdrew farther westward. At the pass roads of the French-Italian frontier, several terrorist groups were repulsed with heavy losses and mostly wiped out. Fighters and bombers attacked the enemy shuttle-service over the Seine, north of Mantes, with good success. Several pontoon bridges and fully loaded ferryboats were destroyed.

In the waters north of Le Havre, minesweepers and submarines sank three British motor assault boats and damaged three others. The naval batteries of the Island of Cezembre, which lies off St. Malo, opposed a stubborn resistance to the attack of an enemy destroyer squadron and repulsed its attack. The situation at the Vistula bridgehead, northeast of Warsaw, changed little. In the northern sector, the situation is stiffening in favor of the German forces.

FASCIST RADIO

The fighting in France is so fluid as to prevent any exact delineation of the front. The Germans in counter-attacks wiped the Allied bridgehead across the Seine, and frustrated all Allied attempts at encirclements of the German armies.

In Italy, the main center of the fighting has shifted to the zone between San Giorgio and Sant'Angelo, west of Monteifo. Fighting is going on around several enemy infiltrations into the German lines, but the Poles were so exhausted by their fruitless attacks that this morning they restricted themselves to patrol activities only.

It is not believed that the Pope will deviate from his policy of not appointing new Cardinals in times of war, and the successor of Cardinal Maglione will probably be selected from among the present Cardinals or high Prelates.

PATTON LAUNCHES NEW DRIVE TO CHANNEL CANADIANS ADVANCE TOWARD THE SEINE

SHAEF, August 22 — General George Patton has launched a new drive along the Seine River toward the English Channel in an operation designed to cut off the survivors of the Nazi rout in Normandy, it was announced here tonight.

Meanwhile, the Canadian 1st Army drove toward the Seine on a broad front between the sea and Argentan in an effort to encircle rearguard units of the German 7th Army by joining General Patton's forces moving northward. When these two converging armies meet, a trap, much greater than at Falaise, will have been sprung.

Belgian troops with the Canadian Army made a sudden dash tonight along the Channel coast and have reached Deauville, according to a press report.

They are meeting stiff resistance from German rearguards. This afternoon, Belgian forces captured Cabourg-les-Bains, while Netherlands forces reached and were fighting in the outskirts of Houlgate. Press dispatches state that the entire German front from the Channel to Chambois is crumbling.

The Allied troops which captured Divers-sur-Mere have pushed on to the area of Gonneville and further south other columns have reached Annebault and Bonnebosq.

is fighting in the area of Rambouillet. (The German News Agency tonight stated that Etampes and Malesherbes, to the southeast, had been evacuated.)

German units are desperately trying to form a protective screen on the southern boundary of General Patton's line in a sector north of Dreux, in order to guard Von Kluge's attempts to salvage the remains of his shattered army. American units have contacted the Germans in the area of the River Avre, between Verneuil and Dreux, who seem to have been pulled together to make a stand. Several units, some reinforcements from the German 15th Army in Pas de Calais, have been identified.

Nazis Shell Orleans

At Orleans, which was taken last Wednesday, the Germans have massed considerable artillery on the southern banks of the Loire River and are shelling the town heavily.

German units in the Argentan-Chambois-Trun pocket have been «liquidated,» and the general Allied advance is continuing «without much resistance,» a British 2d Army spokesman announced tonight.

The number of prisoners taken is so great that it is difficult to find transport for them. A Canadian Army spokesman said that during the past 48 hours Canadian and American troops have taken 30,000 prisoners, and this figure was steadily increasing. The officer said that the Germans are surrendering by platoons, usually without their officers, who appear to have deserted their troops. It is estimated that 100,000 German prisoners will be taken from the pocket.

A BBC correspondent, describing the chaos of the Falaise pocket, declared: «Stretching out before us and reaching back out of sight was an enormous column of prisoners, such as I've not seen since the last days in North Africa. The prisoners came from 15 divisions — infantry, panzer, and SS.

«Prisoners report that the wounded have had no attention for a week. Bulldozers are being used on the roads from Argentan to clear away the German transport devastated by Allied bombing.

Prisoners said that the trapped panzer columns were so short of fuel that they were burning their own tanks. Von Kluge's 11th hour attempt to relieve the fuel famine by air boomeranged when the parachute-borne supplies of badly needed Diesel oil landed behind British lines.

Lieut. General Fahmbacher, SS general commanding a German Army corps, and his staff have been seized.

PATTON LAUNCHES NEW DRIVE TO CHANNEL CANADIANS ADVANCE TOWARD THE SEINE

SHAEF, August 22 — General George Patton has launched a new drive along the Seine River toward the English Channel in an operation designed to cut off the survivors of the Nazi root in Normandy, it was announced here tonight.

British Enter Lisieux

The important communications center of Lisieux was entered today by British forces and fighting is continuing in the city, especially along the River Touques which runs through Lisieux. On all sides there is evidence of a hasty German withdrawal of major units and unopened cases of ammunition and mines have been found.

To the south east of Lisieux, an Allied armored column reached the River Orbec, while British forces, in a 10-miles advance, seized Gace, 15 miles east of Argentan.

The American drive to the Channel coast developed after the 3d Army crossed the Seine in two places. Heavy fighting was reported at Mantes Gassicourt, where Allied units are facing troops of the German 15th Army — «the last great enemy force still in France.» The destruction of this army, guardian of the Flying Bomb Coast, is the next order of business on the Allied agenda, an Associated Press correspondent said.

The other crossing of the Seine, as yet unconfirmed, was made near Fontainebleau, 35 miles southwest of Paris. Along this front, German resistance was almost negligible, press dispatches reported.

Supreme headquarters reported that there was heavy enemy resistance at Etampes, southwest of Paris, and there

Pas de Calais, have been identified.

VON KLUGE TO BE REPLACED

LONDON, August 22 — Field Marshal von Kluge, commander-in-chief of the German Armies in the West, is about to be replaced by Field Marshal Model, now commander of the central sector on the Russian front, it was stated by the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish paper Stockholms Tidningen. (OWI)

the fourth general to be captured this week. He was the successor of Colonel General Dietrich, whom Hitler considered too valuable to leave in the trap. Dietrich was decorated by Hitler early this month, presumably at some distance from the battlefield.

A headquarters announcement recapitulated German tank losses in Normandy, stating that Allied forces have destroyed or damaged 1,200 tanks since D-Day — the equivalent of six divisions. This does not take into account the number of tanks forward of the battle lines which have been destroyed by Allied planes.

RAINS AID ROUTED GERMANS

LONDON, August 22 — Telegraphing from near Lisieux last night, Alan Moorehead of the London Daily Express said that the rain was worth a couple of fresh divisions to the enemy.

«Not for a second has it stopped raining all day,» he wrote.

«No fighter has been able to take off. The mud gets an inch or two deeper every hour. Yet still the infantry, wearing gas capes, plod on.

«Von Kluge's broken army has been hunted into an area of about 900 square miles between the Seine and the sea, an area which is being reduced at the rate of well over 100 square miles daily. Their losses of vehicles and guns of all kinds begin to compare with the collapse in Tunisia.»

MOSQUITOES DAMAGE TWO MINESWEEPERS

LONDON, August 22 — Mosquitoes of RAF Coastal Command last night swept down the Gironde at low level, and set on fire and severely damaged two M-class minesweepers and a trawler anchored off Le Verdon. Explosions were seen amidship on both minesweepers, said the British Air Ministry today.

The United States Military Mission in Moscow announced today that since the beginning of shuttle-bombing between bases in Britain, Italy, and Russia, 110 enemy aircraft have been destroyed in operations ending at American bases in the Soviet Union.

In addition, 10 locomotives, 25 trucks, and other vehicles have been destroyed in eight operations which terminated in Russia.

The German blind bombing attack against southern England and the London area with flying bombs was intensified during the 24-hour period ending this morning. Many civilians were killed or injured during the attacks, and damage was caused to apartments and stores. Heavy casualties were feared from a hit on a workers' dwelling, although within a few minutes after the explosion rescue parties were aiding trapped victims to escape.

Flying bomb victims will soon be supplied with glass substitute for their shattered windows. Forty thousand square yards of this material which will not shatter if bombs strike nearby — are to be shipped from the U. S. as soon as possible.

BREMEN SUFFERED FATE OF HAMBURG

LONDON, August 22 — Bremen, Germany's second largest port, has suffered the fate of Hamburg, the British Air Ministry reported yesterday.

Air photographs show that damage done in RAF bomber attacks on Friday night was as severe a blow to any inflicted on a major German industrial city, and that the area from the docks to the center of the city and the railway lines for more than two miles along the bank of the Weser River were devastated.

Damage to factories and warehouses was extremely heavy, the announcement said.

At this point, a Frenchman reported the location of a German vehicle, so MacAllister proceeded to the spot, where he found a German armored car, two smaller cars, and from 70 to 80 Germans. He ordered the Germans to surrender, and all immediately laid down their arms. (OWI)

TOULON SEALED OFF, MARSEILLES APPROACHED INLAND FORCES WITHIN 30 MILES OF AVIGNON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 22 — As French forces battered their way into the surrounded fortress city of Toulon, advance forces of the Allied 7th Army raced west and north tonight to within three miles of Marseilles and 30 miles of Avignon, key road and rail center of the lower Rhone Valley.

Reconnaissance elements, pushing ahead of the main forces, bypassed the town of Aubagne to reach a point along Highway 8 three miles east of the Mediterranean's greatest port and within six miles of its inner harbor.

Due north, an American column, advancing westward from Aix, was nearing the village of Ventabren, 14 miles to the north of Marseilles, and a third American force was maintaining the same rapid pace in a thrust which was nearing St. Saturat, 10 miles northwest of Aix and 35 miles due north of Marseilles.

Streaking out from this massive advance moving westward between the Durance River and the Mediterranean, reconnaissance elements were reported to have reached the outskirts of Apt, the Coulon River, a second tributary of the Rhone, and within 30 miles along a main highway of Avignon, key to the lower Rhone Valley. Another advance formation was approaching Cereste on the same highway, but 20 miles east of Apt.

In the Durance River Valley, Allied forces were reported to be in the vicinity of St. Esteve, and near Villelaure, four miles west of Pertuis, on the north bank of the river.

With the Allied forces which are pushing north of Marseilles on a 35-mile wide front already eight miles west of Marseilles near Ventabren, this great port city is hemmed in with the exception of a five-mile corridor between Ventabren and the shallow marshes of the Etang de Berre, northwest of the city, and a coastal road skirting the southern edges of the marshlands to cross their outlet at Martigues, 20 miles to the west.

The envelopment of Marseilles has followed almost the same pattern as the brilliant encirclement movement which isolated the German defenders of Toulon.

At latest reports tonight, the besieged German garrison in Toulon was being slowly forced back toward the sea as the French improved their positions in its western and northern suburbs. Already the two great mountain masses north of the big naval base had fallen, and the huge naval guns of the fortress of Toulon, four miles from the city's outskirts, were silenced.

Nowhere was the Provence front more volatile than in the Durance River Valley, main tributary of the Rhone, and forking entryway into this great traffic artery for southern France and into Dauphine and the industrial region east of Lyons.

In Full Retreat

Apparently fanning out from the three main foci of Aix, Pertuis, and Tragugnan far to the east, Allied forces yesterday and today spread with the speed of quicksilver over a 25-mile stretch of this broad, sandy stream and streaked out to within reach of the Coulon River to the north and the smaller streams of the Verdon and the Asse to the east.

So swift has been the Allied movement in this crucial sector that enemy forces, «perplexed and stunned,» have now broken into full retreat, it was announced this morning. American troops in the van of this advance are now 60 miles inland and nearing the borders of Dauphine.

BREMEN SUFFERED FATE OF HAMBURG

LONDON, August 22 — Bremen, Germany's second largest port, has suffered the fate of Hamburg, the British Air Ministry reported yesterday.

Air photographs show that damage done in RAF bomber attacks on Friday night was as severe a blow as any inflicted on a major German industrial city, and that the area from the docks to the center of the city and the railway lines for more than two miles along the bank of the Weser River were devastated.

Damage to factories and warehouses was extremely heavy, the announcement said.

Stettin, vital supply point for German troops in the Baltic Republics, was also heavily damaged on the night of August 16, the statement added. One area of complete devastation measures approximately 900 by 700 yards, and many blocks have been completely gutted by fire.

CANADIAN SOLDIER CAPTURES 200 GERMANS

LONDON, August 22 — In the fierce battle of the Falaise gap, a single Canadian soldier captured nearly 200 Germans, it is reported by a British United Press correspondent.

The Canadian private, Earl MacAllister of Hamilton, Ontario, was driving a captured German car to bring in wounded Germans when six Germans attempted to cross the road ahead of him. He fired at them and they surrendered immediately.

Members of the FFI reported to MacAllister that German troops were hiding in the woods nearby. MacAllister went into the woods and fired over the heads of the Germans, whereupon 25 of them surrendered and were sent to the rear escorted by unarmed Frenchmen.

Continuing his search, the Canadian soon found 80 more fully-armed Germans, who surrendered as soon as he opened fire.

Streaking out from this massive advance moving westward between the Durance River and the Mediterranean, reconnaissance elements were reported to have reached the outskirts of Apt, the Coulon River, a second tributary of the Rhone, and within 20 miles along a main highway of Avignon, key to the lower Rhone Valley. Another advance formation was approaching Cereste on the same highway, but 26 miles east of Apt.

In the Durance River Valley, Allied forces were reported to be in the vicinity of St. Estave, and near Villelaure, four miles west of Pertuis, on the north bank of the river.

With the Allied forces which are pushing north of Marseilles on a 35-mile wide front already eight miles west of Marseilles near Ventabren, this great port city is hemmed in with the exception of a five-mile corridor between Ventabren and the shallow marshes of the Etang de Berre, northwest of the city, and a coastal road skirting the southern edges of the marshlands to cross their outlet at Martigues, 20 miles to the west.

The envelopment of Marseilles has followed almost the same pattern as the brilliant encirclement movement which isolated the German defenders of Toulon.

At latest reports tonight, the besieged German garrison in Toulon was being slowly forced back toward the sea as the French improved their positions in its western and northern suburbs. Already the two great mountain masses north of the big naval base had fallen, and the huge naval guns of the fortress of Toulon, four miles from the city's outskirts, were silenced.

Nowhere was the Provence front more volatile than in the Durance River Valley, main tributary of the Rhone, and forking entryway into this great traffic artery for southern France and into Dauphine and the industrial region east of Lyons.

In Full Retreat

Apparently fanning out from the three main foci of Aix, Pertuis, and Draguignan far to the east, Allied forces yesterday and today spread with the speed of quicksilver over a 25-mile stretch of this broad, sandy stream and streaked out to within reach of the Coulon River to the north and the smaller streams of the Verdon and the Asse to the east.

So swift has been the Allied movement in this crucial sector that enemy forces, «perplexed and stunned,» have now broken into full retreat, it was announced this morning. American troops in the van of this advance are now 60 miles inland and nearing the borders of Dauphine.

Major General Alexander Patch, commander of the Allied forces in southern France, yesterday issued an order of the day in which he pronounced the Allied operation in Provence «a great initial victory,» which had «perplexed and stunned» the German forces.

French forces have swarmed into the northern and western suburbs of Toulon, and have penetrated to within half a mile of the water-front in bitter fighting, in which the Germans have massed mobile guns in the streets, and brought the fortress city's anti-aircraft guns to bear on the advancing French troops.

At latest reports, the French forces were still being held north of the railway tracks which cut across the northeastern edge of the naval port. The formidable inland fortress of Coudon, part of the ring of massive defences surrounding the home base of the French Mediterranean Fleet, and some four miles northeast of the city's outskirts, was stormed and captured by French forces yesterday.

Further east, other French forces were meeting fierce resistance around Hyeres (the resort town on the coast, 12 miles from Toulon,) which has held out as an island of resistance for over a week, while the Allies flooded inland past it.

French forces, following the tactical pattern laid down by Lieutenant General Jacob Devers, Deputy Supreme

Allied Commander, Mediterranean Theater, avoided these main foci of enemy resistance in their rapid envelopment of Toulon, and swept westward and then southward to throw a ring of steel about the great naval fortresses.

After pushing to Le Beausset, five miles northeast of Toulon, yesterday, French forces struck southward to the coast in a lightning move which sealed off the naval base and its embattled German garrison. The point at which General de Lattre de Tassigny's hard-fighting French forces reached the sea was Bandol, eight miles west of Toulon, and on the winding headland road which was the last escape route open from the city.

Still farther westward, and only eight miles from Marseilles, American forces occupied Aix and pushed two miles farther westward toward the Mediterranean's greatest port city.

The American thrust toward Marseilles is the westernmost spearhead of a 35-mile-wide front which has been flooding westward along the valleys leading into the Rhone.

But so fluid has been this inland sector of the Allied bridgehead, that at any moment the main thrust might shift and bring its crushing weight to bear in either a northern or a northeastern direction.

Seventh Army troops yesterday were reported near Le Puy, nine miles north of Aix, and progressing steadily along the south bank of the Durance River, along the axis of Highway 561, leading to the Rhone River at Avignon, only 37 miles away. « Some enemy contact » was reported by these troops yesterday morning.

Across the Durance River, the main southern tributary of the Rhone, « forward elements » of the 7th Army yesterday reached Grambois and Manosque, six and 17 miles, respectively, northeast of Pertuis.

Earlier reports indicated that the highway between Pertuis, occupied Sunday after French Forces of the Interior had surrounded its German garrison, and Manosque, had been cut at several places. More than 40 miles to the east, American 7th Army forces were reported to have occupied St Julien, on the Verdon River, and Barreme, on the Asse River, in a thrust which penetrated 60 miles inland.

Key to Rhone Valley

In the case of all those advances, the route and composition of the Allied forces involved is carefully veiled. For it is in this crucial area, at the northward bend of the Durance River Valley, that lies the key to the Rhone Valley farther west.

The Rhone Valley, the main traffic artery of southern France, linking the port of Marseilles with the industrial center of Lyons, is flanked on the east by the high bluffs of the Dauphine Alps, which would enable determined enemy forces to slow any frontal Allied advance.

But to the east of the Rhone, and paralleling it for the long stretch in which it flows beneath the height of the Dauphine Mountains, is the upper Durance River, leading to within 50 miles of Grenoble.

It is in this area that 7th Army forces have made their deepest penetration of 60 miles, and in which the enemy's disintegration has compelled his full retreat.

General Patch, in his order of the day yesterday, called for « uninterrupted continuation » of this Allied advance, so that the enemy might not « have time to recover. »

The Allied bridgehead in Provence now exceeds 2,000 square miles, and has freed more than two score southern French towns from the German occupation, which began there 22 months ago. (PRO)

F.F.I. USING LIGHT ARTILLERY IN PARIS

LONDON, August 22 — French Forces of the Interior have rolled light artillery into the battle inside Paris and towns which were over-run by Patriots. One group, armed with heavy machine guns and grenades, marched across the frontier. They were watched by crowds of civilians who sang the Marseillaise. Swiss dispatches reported that the French flag is now flying over many frontier posts.

There is a standing order to Allied troops in southern France that captured guns and ammunition are to be put at the disposal of the Maquis, it was announced today. (OWI)

F.F.I. TAKE OVER HENDAYE FRONTIER POST

MADRID, August 22 — The Free French flag was hoisted last night at the Franco-Spanish frontier post of Hendaye, said a Reuter dispatch today. The Customs and Control Post has been taken over by French officials who arrived secretly from Algiers after their appointment by the French Committee of National Liberation.

Units of the FFI took control of the French end of the International Bridge at Hendaye yesterday in the name of the FCNL. (Reuter)

RED ARMY ADVANCES INTO RUMANIA IN TWO PRONGED DRIVE

MOSCOW, August 22 — The Red Army has launched a powerful two-pronged offensive against Rumania at the southern end of the eastern front, pushing deep into Bessarabia, which once belonged to Russia, and into Rumania proper with the capture of Jassy (Iasi), it was announced tonight in two orders of the day by Marshal Joseph Stalin.

The two offensives began three days ago with huge Soviet artillery blows followed by pitched infantry, tank, and air battles before the Russian forces broke through. The Soviet soldiers took Jassy, Rumania's fourth largest city, and then advanced 27 miles to the west taking 200 populated places and the town of Targu-Frumos. The advance in this sector totalled 38 miles on a 75-mile front.

In their successful battle for Jassy, which lies 10 miles west of the River Pruth, the Soviets killed 13,000 Germans and took 7,000 Germans and Rumanians prisoner, tonight's communique stated.

During the drive south of Benders (Tighina), Bessarabia, a city on the lower Dniester 70 miles northwest of the Black Sea, Russian forces fought for three days to smash forward for 43 miles on an 80 mile front. Benders lies 90 miles southeast of Jassy.

More than 150 inhabited localities were taken by the Red Army in this drive, including a town 15 miles south of Benders, and about 60 miles north of the important Black sea port of Odessa.

F.F.I. USING LIGHT ARTILLERY IN PARIS

LONDON, August 22 — French Forces of the Interior have rolled light artillery into the battle inside Paris and have attacked the Germans in the Place de la Republique, a communique from Lieutenant General Pierre Koenig's headquarters stated tonight.

German troops are camping in the Place de la Concorde, and strong points have been established in such hotels as the Scribe, Majestic, and the Crillon. The Gestapo have fortified their main offices; their branch offices have been reinforced by the Wehrmacht.

General Koenig's communique listed 14 departments in south-central France which are under the control of the French Forces and they range from the Spanish frontier to Chateauroux. In all of those departments, the mopping up of the last islands of enemy resistance is now proceeding.

Maquis, armed with mortars and 77-millimeter guns seized from the Germans in other sectors, have captured the strongly fortified village of Bellegarde, in Haute Savoie. The situation in the department is now quiet. Some collaborationists were arrested but none have been executed. The Liberation Committee is trying each case separately.

About 250 SS men and 40 German customs guards have been captured by French Patriots at Fort de la Chase after bitter fighting.

Swiss newspaper reports state that SS troops and Gestapo men have crossed into Switzerland from Haute Savoie from undisclosed destination. The Swiss report did not state by whom the Marshal had been arrested. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 22 — The Red Army has launched a powerful two-pronged offensive against Rumania at the southern end of the eastern front, pushing deep into Bessarabia, which once belonged to Russia, and into Rumania proper with the capture of Jassy (last), it was announced tonight in two orders of the day by Marshal Joseph Stalin.

Jassy itself was abandoned because it had been by-passed on both sides by Soviet thrusts. All war installations were first destroyed.»)

Tonight's communique reported that Red Army troops cut the Tartu-Valga railroad line in the Baltic sector. To the east, where the Germans are bottled up in the Baltic area, German tank and infantry counter-attacks were repulsed, the communique added. A Reuter correspondent said that «one of the greatest clashes of the war since Stalingrad» loomed on the Baltic front. He said that a total German force, including a relief expedition totalling approximately 250,000 men, are being thrown into the battle straight from trains.

The Reuter correspondent added that the German command was concentrating a maximum of forces in the Baltic in a desperate effort to attain at least a temporary turning point in the campaign.

Farther south, Reuter reported, two Soviet armies were advancing from opposite ends of the vital Warsaw-Bialystok railway. They are Marshal Rokossovsky's and General Zakharov's armies, which were within approximately 33 miles of joining up with each other and were completely clearing up the line of German troops.

LONDON, August 22 — Russia has received 3,750,000 tons of war material through the Persia-Iraq Command, it was announced here today. It was officially estimated that nearly 50 per cent of the total aid to Russia by the United States, Britain, and Canada has gone through this command. (Reuter)

FLORENCE COMPLETELY LIBERATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 22 — Eighth Army troops have completed the liberation of Florence, which is now «firmly» in Allied hands, it was announced here today. Patrols are now pushing out beyond the confines of the city.

An official statement on the liberation of this historic city said:

«The liberation of Florence has taken time, and has caused considerable anxiety lest she should become a battleground and the historic monuments be destroyed.

«Had the troops of the 8th Army forced their way into the city before the enemy had been compelled to withdraw by our continual pressure on his flanks, street fighting would inevitably have broken out. By skill and patience, the city has fallen into our hands and extensive damage — apart from the demolitions effected by the enemy — has been avoided. Unless the enemy decides to engage the city with long-range artillery fire, Florence will quickly return to normal, and full assistance will be brought to the inhabitants by the Allied Military Government.»

Active patrolling was maintained by the enemy throughout the day on the 5th Army front. Enemy artillery was active on the coastal sector. Near Caserta, Allied artillery fired with good effect on machine-gun and mortar positions. Twice during the night of August 20 small enemy groups attempted to make boat crossings of the Arno, but all attempts were repulsed and six boats were destroyed.

On the 8th Army Adriatic front, troops of the Italian Corps of Liberation scored another success with the capture of S. Maria Carpineta, three miles west of Pergola, on the lateral road to Frontone. Polish elements attacked S. Andrea di Suasa, but enemy resistance was strong, and the Poles withdrew. Farther to the northeast, reconnaissance elements captured Orciano. In this same sector, Mount Grigioni and Cerasa were also taken. In fierce fighting in the Mount Rosario area, northeast of Cerasa, the enemy lost heavily in men and material. One hundred prisoners were taken in this sector alone.

There has been no change of position in the Apennines. (PRO)

GERMANS SHELL FLORENCE

FLORENCE, August 22 — An unestimated number of civilians, including women and children, were killed and many injured, on Sunday morning when German guns shelled streets of Florence crowded with people returning from mass, it was stated in a dispatch received today from a UNN correspondent who witnessed the occurrence. There were further civilian casualties and damage to buildings during spasmodic shelling which continued all day, and was intensified at night.

The most severe casualties were caused in a narrow, 40-yard-long street, the Via Borgo la Noce, only a few yards from the church of San Lorenzo, out of which hundreds of people were moving in procession. The UNN correspondent, who was at the scene a few minutes after two shells had dropped squarely in the street, blowing in the side of one house and wrecking another, said that the way was choked with dead or wounded men, women, and children, among whom dazed survivors were rushing wildly seeking relatives and friends. In another street, Via Dignori, where shells also fell among church-goers, it was unofficially estimated that 40 people, including women and children, were killed and many more injured. There were

750 HEAVIES HIT VIENNA, SILESIA REFINERIES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY - August 22. Strong forces of Italy-based bombers, striking at synthetic and natural oil refineries in Silesia and near Vienna today, encountered the largest number of enemy fighter interceptors for over three weeks.

The formations of up to 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators were engaged in heavy aerial battles all through Vienna-Budapest fighter defense belts. Gunners of the bombers and escorting long-range fighters scored a number of victories.

The targets attacked were the Odertal synthetic refinery, 80 miles southwest of Breslau; underground oil storage tanks at Lobau, seven miles southeast of Vienna; and a natural oil refinery at Korneuburg, five miles north of Vienna.

Delayed action high explosive bombs were used to destroy the vast underground tanks at Lobau, which have a capacity of over 250,000 tons. The two refineries attacked have a normal combined capacity of 160,000 tons per year.

No reports have yet been compiled of Allied victories or losses. (PRO)

CHURCHILL VISITS 8TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 22 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill continued his tour of the Allied armies in Italy yesterday with a one-day visit to the 5th Army.

The Prime Minister greeted British, Indian, Canadian, and New Zealand troops, who lined the roads and cheered him as he passed.

Mr. Churchill was entertained at luncheon by Lieut.-General Kirkman, commander of 13th Corps, the oldest of the 8th Army. General Kirkman conducted the Prime Minister to a vantage point from which Florence and the country beyond could be clearly seen. (PRO)

ITALIAN OFFICER CITED FOR BRITISH DECORATION

ROME, August 22 — Rear Admiral C. E. Morgan, head of the Naval Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission, today recommended an Italian naval officer for one of Britain's highest decorations for bravery.

«This same officer blew me up in Alexandria Harbor while our two countries were still at war», Admiral Morgan told the ACC monthly conference here. «Since the armistice, we have become good friends. Not long since, this officer led a daring and successful mission against a heavily-fortified enemy position, and it has been my pleasure recently to recommend him for the heroism displayed in that enterprise».

Admiral Morgan had only words of praise for the fine performance of the Italian Navy since it has been fighting on the United Nations' side.

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE JEZERO STRONGHOLD

ALGIERS, August 22 — Yugoslaw Patriots have followed up their recent victory at Mrkonjegrad with the capture of another enemy stronghold at Jezero, on the road to the famous city of Jajce, Marshal Tito's communique announced today. Yugoslav units are now engaged in mopping up the forces of occupation in this sector.

Yugoslav forces are interrupting German railway traffic in widely separated parts of the country, but particularly in Serbia and Slavonia. Offensive operations are being maintained.

In Eastern Serbia, the Paracin-Zajecar railway line has

There were further casualties and damage in Viale De Mille and Via de Macci.

Within the shortest possible time after the beginning of the attack, ambulances, vans, wagons, pushcarts, and stretchers were rushed to the areas and victims taken to hospital. Members of the ancient Misericordia Society, in their black gowns and hoods, were very active, and the correspondent saw many injured treated at one of the Society's first-aid posts.

The correspondent described how, after the first shells, people rushed into the church of San Lorenzo for refuge. «Stark with terror, he stated, «they could not be persuaded to return to their homes. Children and women with babies clinging to them sat huddled together.»

The church of San Lorenzo was injured during the bombardment. The rector showed the correspondent severe damage to the cupola, caused by a shell, and deep scars from the explosion of two other shells near an outer wall. This church, which dates back beyond the year 393, is Florence's oldest place of Christian worship, enshrines much Italian history, and is a monument of the highest artistic and cultural value. The rector said that over 1,500 people had been at the High Mass which ended just before the shelling began. Other famous buildings hit were the Palazzo Strozzi and the Uffizi Galleries.

On the Dubrovnik-Mostar railway line, a train was blown up, and one locomotive and three cars were destroyed. Another enemy train was derailed on the Brod-Vinkovci railway line in Slavonia.

Fighting continues in Macedonia, in the Sandjak, Montenegro, and Herzegovina. On the Gacko-Bileca sector, all enemy attacks were repulsed. In Eastern Bosnia, an enemy column of the 13th SS Division was broken up in the Kladanj sector.

In Croatia, after three days of fighting in the Lika district, the enemy was thrown to the Vrhovina-Otocap line. In the Zagorje district, Yugoslav units took the enemy stronghold at Sveti Ivan Zelina. (PWB)

WIDESPREAD ALLIED ATTACKS IN PACIFIC

PEARL HARBOR, August 22 — The naval communique issued Sunday stated that United States Army and Navy aircraft struck Japanese-held islands in the Pacific over a wide area on August 17 and 18. Among other targets, Nauru Island in the Gilberts, Rota and Pagan islands in the

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 759021

Marianas, and Mille and Wetje islands in the Marshalls group, were bombed. All Allied planes returned from these missions.

The communique added that the U. S. destroyer Maury has been awarded a Presidential unit citation. The warship is credited with sinking or helping to sink three light Japanese cruisers, 10 destroyers, and one patrol vessel, as well as shooting down 10 enemy planes.

A Washington message quoted a Navy Department announcement that the Japanese lost 14,087 dead on Guam and 25,144 on Saipan. Japanese dead on Tinian Island number 5,545. Only 100 Japanese prisoners were taken by the Americans on recapturing Guam.

The many attacks against Japanese bases continued with a heavy attack on Paramushiro Island, in the northern Kuriles, on August 19. Airfields were bombed and strafed. Three Japanese fighters took to the air, but the Navy said they made no attempt to attack the U. S. bombers.

A communique issued at Allied Headquarters, Southwest Pacific, said that on August 22, Halmahera, a Japanese base less than 300 miles from the Philippines, and Boeroe Island, west of New Guinea, were bombed.

The raid on Halmahera was the heaviest made there to date; no Japanese interceptor planes were encountered. The communique reported that the Japanese had withdrawn their fighter craft from the island. Warehouses were demolished and many fires were started.

On Boeroe, eight grounded Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged. In other sweeps, bombers destroyed two small freighters near Celebes, set fire to a small freighter near the Talaud Islands, between Halmahera and Mindanao, and bombed another freighter off Mindanao.

CHINESE WITHDRAW FROM LEIYANG

CHUNGKING, August 22. — The Chinese communique last night announced the fall of Leiyang, a highway town 21 miles southeast of Hengyang, on the Canton-Hankow railway. After engaging the Japanese in street fighting, the Chinese garrison withdrew to the suburbs, where they joined other Chinese units.

The Chinese are continuing their attacks in western Hupeh along the north and south banks of the Yangtse River. Fighting in the vicinity of Ichang, 170 miles west of Hankow, continues. Ichang is the most important Yangtse port north of Hankow.

On the Yunnan front, Chinese attacks on the Tengchung walls have progressed. The entire wall with the exception of one gap, is now in Chinese hands.

The Allied Command in Southeast Asia said in a communique yesterday that, on the Tiddim Road, after heavy fighting, the enemy has withdrawn from the neighborhood of the frontier and contact was broken with the enemy. Fourteenth Army troops have occupied Khuavum, 1½ miles inside Burma, and two miles west of the Tiddim Road.

The communique also told of extensive patrol activity in the Kaza area, south of Myitkyina, in north Burma, and reported no change north of Pinbaw, along the Coganng-Mandalay railway.

Aircraft of the Eastern Air Command on Sunday successfully attacked railway bridges on the Mandalay-Yeu line. Heavy rain limited operations in general, although two enemy aircraft were shot down. No Allied planes were missing.

GENERAL WILSON ADDRESSES A.C.C. CONFERENCE

ROME, August 22 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in the Mediterranean Theater of War, cautioned Allied Control Commission heads here today that they have heavy tasks [illegible] of Italy.

[illegible] ution. [illegible]t a rectification can and will be made. I hope that you will give that your attention.»

General Wilson gave the officials some pointers in their administrative set-ups, and emphasized the keen responsibilities upon the ACC. He said that the prestige of the two great English-speaking peoples is bound up in their work. He said he knew the officers and men of the ACC will meet their responsibilities in true Anglo-Saxon manner.

«Let the key words for your entire organization be initiative, impartiality, and integrity,» concluded General Wilson.

A.C.C. Objectives

Captain Ellery W. Stone, United States Navy, Acting Head of the Allied Control Commission, today defined the present task of the control body.

«We are now in the second phase, with most of liberated territory turned back to the Italian government for its direct administration,» said Captain Stone. «Our job is to help the Italian government overcome the many difficulties which confront it. This is our part in aiding the war effort in Italy. The job ahead is no less arduous.»

Captain Stone welcomed the regional commissioners, senior civil affairs officers with the armies, and sub-commission heads who gathered for their first monthly conference since headquarters were transferred to Rome. It was also the first meeting held since the May conference in Naples.

In a brief summary, Captain Stone traced history of the Allied Control Commission since its initial phase in Brindisi last September.

Deep regret over the recent serious illness of Lt.-General Sir Noel Mason MacFarlane, head of the Allied Control Commission until shortly after the liberation of Rome, was voiced by Captain Stone.

«General MacFarlane has suffered a serious and painful illness, but after a serius relapse he is now, I am happy to be able to report, out of danger. I know I express the sentiment of this group in extending to him our wishes for his speedy and complete recovery.»

A.C.C. Supports Bonomi

The Allied Control Commission fully supports the government of Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi, Captain Ellery Stone declared today.

Addressing a meeting of all A.C. commissioners, Captain Stone said the ACC supports the Bonomi government in the same spirit as shown by the Italian Ministers Without Portfolio who recently renewed their pledge of support to the Prime Minister.

Poletti Addresses A.C.C.

Colonel Charles Poletti, Allied Control Commissioner for Region IV and former Rome Regional Commissioner, today said that the Allies since liberation have brought freedom from fear, freedom of the press, and freedom of religion to the citizens of Rome.

«Up to now, the Allies have not given Rome complete freedom from want,» added Colonel Poletti. He was reporting to the monthly conference of the Allied Control Commission, which met during the day at its headquarters in the Ministry of Corporations Building.

Colonel Poletti drew up a quick balance sheet of gains effected by the Allies since June 5. He paid tribute to the work of his predecessors as Rome civil affairs heads, General Edgar Erskine Hume and Colonel Fiske, as well as the cooperation of the Rome Area Allied Command and ACC headquarters. Among the achievements in Rome of the Allied Military Government he listed the following:

A new structure of local self-government set up, headed by Mayor Filippo Doria and a board of aldermen «new faces in public places.»

A hard-hitting purge committee which has ousted thousands of Fascists and brought about the arrest of their fighter craft from the island. Warehouses were demolished and many fires were started.

On Boeroe, eight grounded Japanese planes were destroyed or damaged. In other sweeps, bombers destroyed two small freighters near Celebes, set fire to a small freighter near the Talaud Islands, between Halmahera and Mindanao and bombed another freighter off Mindanao.

CHINESE WITHDRAW FROM LEIYANG

CHUNGKING, August 22 — The Chinese communique last night announced the fall of Leiyang, a highway town 31 miles southeast of Hengyang, on the Canton-Hankow railway. After engaging the Japanese in street fighting, the Chinese garrison withdrew to the suburbs, where they joined other Chinese units.

The Chinese are continuing their attacks in western Hupeh along the north and south banks of the Yangtse River. Fighting in the vicinity of Ichang, 170 miles west of Hankow, continues. Ichang is the most important Yangtse port north of Hankow.

On the Yunnan front, Chinese attacks on the Tengchung walls have progressed. The entire wall, with the exception of one gap, is now in Chinese hands.

GENERAL WILSON ADDRESSES A.C.C. CONFERENCE

ROME, August 22 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in the Mediterranean Theater of War, cautioned Allied Control Commission heads here today that they have heavy tasks ahead in the further liberation of Italy.

«I have heard a great deal of your work since the initial landings in Sicily last year,» the Supreme Commander told the monthly conference of regional commissioners, senior civil affairs officers with the armies, and subcommission heads. «I fully appreciate what you have done. You have had great difficulties to overcome, and you have done so in a fine way.

«The advance of the armies in somewhat spasmodic fashion does not ease matters for you. Naturally, you have been very much hampered in restoring conditions among the civil population by the very great destruction carried out by the enemy to installations of all kinds.

«So far, however, we have contacted only about one-half of the population of Italy. What lies ahead may prove the most troublous and difficult. It will call for all of your abilities, resources, and valor.

«Two major problems face the Allied Control Commission at the moment. They are food and unemployment. On successful solution of these two much of the reestablishment of the country depends. I realize that you are trying in every way possible to solve these problems.

«There are people in Italy today who are not up to a subsistence level. That is probably due to faulty distribution since headquarters were transferred to Rome. It was also the first meeting held since the May conference in Naples.

In a brief summary, Captain Stone traced history of the Allied Control Commission since its initial phase in Brindisi last September.

Deep regret over the recent serious illness of Lt.-General Sir Noel Mason MacFarlane, head of the Allied Control Commission until shortly after the liberation of Rome, was voiced by Captain Stone.

«General MacFarlane has suffered a serious and painful illness, but after a serious relapse he is now, I am happy to be able to report, out of danger. I know I express the sentiment of this group in extending to him our wishes for his speedy and complete recovery.»

A hard-hitting purge committee which has ousted thousands of Fascists and brought about the arrest of hundreds.

A new era of liberty for Rome, after the long Fascist blight and the frightful German occupation.

Regarding the food and public services situation, Colonel Poletti said that Rome has not received the amount of food that other liberated cities have received, but he pointed out the difficulties resulting from the distances over which food had to be transported and the fact that war exigencies take priority over civil needs. He mentioned the fact, however, that pasta is now being distributed.

Colonel Poletti said that the food supply organization has been revitalized, and that hidden trucks have been brought out into the open and placed in three large transport pools. He said that, while the utility situation remains difficult, due chiefly to German destruction of installations and the difficulty of transporting fuel, progress toward restoration has been made. He referred to the fact that a charcoal market has been created, and this fuel is being distributed.

The great part played by the Vatican in feeding and caring for citizens and refugees was cited by Colonel Poletti as a «tremendous help» to the work of the Allied Military Government.

Food Situation Improving

Allied Control Commission officials, responsible for feeding Liberated Italy, today gave the following picture of the food situation:

1. Import and distribution of food in Italy are being carried out under severe restrictions caused by the dominant needs of the Allied forces still fighting on Italian soil, by destruction of vital communications facilities, and by German pillaging.

2. Through August 12, a total of 340,000 tons of wheat have been turned into Granai del Popolo in Liberated territory, compared with 800,000 tons of grain amassed from all of Italy in 1942, the most successful year of the Fascist ammasso system.

3. Italy itself is supplying 100,000 tons of food a month of her total requirements of 145,000 tons a month. The remainder is being imported by the Allies.

4. The food situation in Rome, in the words of Brig Gen. William O'Dwyer, Vice-President of the ACC, is bad. Rome requires a minimum of 1,400 tons of food a day. A special ACC committee to improve the food supply for Rome has been formed, and imports into Rome will be increased to 50,000 tons a month.

5. The food situation of the liberated areas as a whole is improving, and will continue to show gradual improvement.

This was the picture of the food situation given today by officers who spoke at the meeting of regional commissioners and chiefs of sub-commissions of the Allied Control Commission.

Lt Colonel W. A. Hartmann, reporting for the Agriculture Sub-Commission, said complete plans for the crop year 1944-45 have already been drawn up and are being circulated to responsible officials throughout liberated territory. He pointed out that normal harvesting had been delayed this year at least one month by weather and by the interruptions of war. Colonel Hartmann also criticized what he termed a "lack of a spirit of patriotism" on the part of certain Italian farmers and minor officials who, he declared, hide a full year's food supply in their own cellars before parting with a quintal to feed their neighbors.

Colonel W. J. Legg, chairman of the Food Sub-Commission, reported that there have been no food riots in Italy for several months. Supplies are being brought into Rome, he stated, on a scale commensurate with other parts of liberated territory. He explained the shortage of olive oil by the complete breakdown of the Fascist ammasso system. Special officers, he said, were sent to the olive producing areas, and they succeeded in finding 6,000 to 8,000 tons specially for large cities like Naples and Rome. Careful rationing of current stocks, he stated, would enable the liberated areas to get through until the next olive crop.

Colonel Legg also reported that the Allies are supplying food for soup kitchens that are supplying one low-cost meal a day to 180,000 people. These communal feeding centers are administered by Italian charitable institutions.

Large quantities of illegal ration cards have complicated the situation. In Region II (Apulia and Lucania), 800,500 illegal cards were confiscated.

There are 18 million ration cards now in Liberated Italy, said Colonel Legg, representing 73 per cent of the population of Sicily, Sardinia, and the mainland south of the Goth Line.

Summing up the food situation, Brig Gen. O'Dwyer told the ACC meeting: "The war is not over. Men are still dying in battle in Italy, men on the front still need food and ammunition, and that must get the number one priority."

Regional Offices Fuse

The three Allied Control Commission regions in the

but reserves are being built up and measures now taken are expected to stave off any serious difficulties.

Brigadier Carr said that the Granai del Popolo has thus far proved fairly successful on the island. Approximately 30 per cent of the quota has been turned in thus far. Even with a hundred per cent turn-in of grain, however, the island's grain supply must be augmented next winter by an import of at least 50,000 tons.

Report on Sicily

Failure of the Sicilians to carry out successfully the Granaries of the People harvesting plan seriously jeopardizes the feeding of its citizens in the coming months, Colonel A. N. Hancock, until recently Regional Commissioner, reported here today to the monthly conference of the Allied Control Commission.

The Allied official quoted High Commissioner Aldisio as saying that not even two-thirds of the quantity needed to feed the population until next year's crop will be collected this year. As a result, it has been necessary to introduce special police measures which empower the Carabinieri and other police forces to requisition any kind of transport, from mules and bicycles to trucks, in the search for wheat.

Colonel Hancock praised the response of island police forces to the emergency. As a result, 23,337 quintals of grain have been confiscated and 8,549 persons have been denounced and arrested to date for violations of the wheat harvesting laws. The courts, however, are unable to cope with the situation, although in the limited number of cases they have been able to try they have been inflicting maximum penalties.

"It is disappointing that the Granai del Popolo campaign by press, radio, cinema, poster, and sound van has not encountered a better response," added Colonel Hancock. "It is doubtful whether there has ever been such an intense program put over in Sicily before. The Psychological Warfare Branch and the Public Relations Branch have been most keen in their collaboration, and have been untiring in their efforts.

"But the conflict with cupidity and corruption is likely to prove too unequal, and it is well to be prepared for a more serious situation.

"The facts are known to the Italian government as a result of tours by officials headed by the Minister of Agriculture and reports from the High Commissioner."

The speaker said that the political situation on the island continues rather nebulous and confused, and will be further compromised by the food problem, which is likely to become acute in the autumn.

The former regional control officer reported that the labor situation generally on the island is good; that a large public works program costing 733,913,850 lire has been carried out since the Allied landings, and that the island's railway system will be completely reactivated by the end of September.

The value of imports since the landings has been 850 million lire, including 1,214,272 quintals of wheat and flour. A bright spot is the fact that only 3,143 quintals of wheat and flour have been lost, or only one-fourth of one per cent. The export situation is tending toward the day, he said, when a balance of trade may be achieved.

"In summing up," concluded Colonel Hancock, "I consider that the only real anxiety is the wheat problem, around which many dangers lurk. The next five or six weeks will provide the answer. In all other directions there are clear signs of revival, which will gain impetus wherever war restrictions can be relaxed." (UNN)

PAPAL SECRETARY OF STATE DIES

Regional Offices Fuse

The three Allied Control Commission regions in the southernmost part of the Italian Peninsula will fuse their administrative organizations into one large region on August 28.

The move is being made in order to free ACC officers for forward areas, declared Brig. General M. S. Lush, executive commissioner, in announcing the change today.

Progress in Sardinia

General improvement in the condition of the populace in Sardinia during the past three months was reported here today by Brigadier M. Carr, until recently Allied Control Commissioner on the island.

Health conditions are excellent, the people have food at prices considerably lower than previously, local government has been reorganized with new prefects in each province, and the courts have been reactivated, the Allied officer reported.

The two major food crops of olives and grapes are attracting attention at the moment. The olive harvest promises to be good, but the grape crop has been seriously damaged by the lack of insecticides this season. There is also some water shortage on the island, notably in Cagliari.

Colonel Hancock praised the response of Italian police forces to the emergency. As a result, 23,337 quintals of grain have been confiscated and 8,849 persons have been denounced and arrested to date for violations of the wheat harvesting laws. The courts, however, are unable to cope with the situation; although in the limited number of cases they have been able to try they have been inflicting maximum penalties.

PAPAL SECRETARY OF STATE DIES

ROME, August 22 — Luigi Cardinal Maglione, the Papal Secretary of State, died at 0400 hours this morning at his house at Caserta, near Naples, after a heart attack. He was 67. The Cardinal has been ill for several weeks, but as it was thought that his condition had improved recently his death was unexpected.

The funeral will take place at Caserta under the direction of the Prefect of Apostolic Ceremonies. The Cardinal will be buried in his family tomb. Requiem Mass will be celebrated in St. Peter's on Thursday by Gennaro Granito Cardinal Pignatelli di Bel Monte.

News of Cardinal Maglione's death was immediately communicated to all the Apostolic Nuncios by telegram to enable them to inform the governments with which they are serving. Many diplomats and notables were at the Secretary of State's Office this morning to present their condolences. Among them was the Italian Charge d'Affaires, Baluscio Rizzo, representing the Lieutenant General of Italy, Prince Umberto.

It is thought that the Pope will appoint a new Secretary in about 15 days. In the meantime, the work of the Office is being carried out by the Prefect of the Congregation of External Affairs, Mgr. Domenico Tardini, and Mgr. Giovanni Montini, the Deputy Secretary of State, whose appointments are equal in status. The choice of a new Secretary will not be easy for owing to the fact that no new Cardinals have been elected since December 1937, the existing ones are elderly men and unusually few in number. (UNN)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 22 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

It can now be said that the city of Florence has been liberated by the troops of 5th army and is firmly in our hands. Our patrols are now pushed out beyond the confines of the city.

In the Adriatic sector, Polish and Italian troops of 8th army continue to drive the enemy from the high ground between the Cesano and the Metauro rivers.

In the coastal sector, the enemy has been driven north of the Metauro River. Cerasa, Orciano, and Poggio have been occupied. Elsewhere, our patrols have continued harassing the enemy, and in some cases have penetrated deep into the enemy lines.

Seventh Army:

French forces have completed the encirclement of Toulon and have entered the northern suburbs of the city, while the steady advance of American troops further north continued.

Enemy resistance has been stubborn in Toulon and in the vicinity of Hyeres, further east along the coast.

American troops have occupied Aix-en-Provence. Further north, forward elements have reached Grambois and Mainesque in their advance beyond the Durance River.

Extending the southern France bridgehead some 60 miles inland, other American forces have occupied a number of towns north of Draguignan.

The area under our control has now been expanded to more than 2,000 square miles.

MAAF:

Escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked airfields at Nis, in Yugoslavia, and at Hajdu Boszormeny, in Hungary. Fighter aircraft also attacked the airfield at Hajdu Boszormeny.

Tactical aircraft attacked bridges and road rail transport in northern Italy, and enemy targets in the Italian battle area. Others carried out offensive sweeps in southern France and Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked oil installations at Gyor, in Hungary.

In these operations one enemy aircraft was destroyed and four of ours are missing.

Six of our aircraft are missing from night operations on August 20-21.

MAAF Flew more than 1,600 sorties.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 22 — Today's communique:

Good progress has been made between Lisieux and the sea, where Allied troops have captured Dozule and Dives-sur-Mer, and have advanced to Annebault and Bonneboscq.

West of Lisieux, we have taken Camperner, while an advance north of St. Martin-de-la-Lieue has brought our troops within one mile of Lisieux itself. Fighting is going on in the vicinity of Vimoutiers.

Further south an advance has been made east of Cham-

North east of Praga, our troops in fighting cleared of the enemy the south bank of the Western Bug on a front of 85 kilometers, from the locality of Olehnyi to Sloh, and occupied over 40 populated localities, including Sabolye, Echegendy, Gortany, Kamenchek, Lyatozhek, Veskarov, Sloh, and Dombruskaya.

Troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front launching their offensive with support of massive blows of artillery and aviation, broke through the strong and deeply-echeloned enemy defenses to the southwest of Jassy, and in three days of fighting advanced up to 90 kilometers and expanded the break-through up to 130 kilometers in frontage. In the course of the offensive, troops of the front by storm captured the mighty strongholds of the enemy defenses, the cities of Jassy, Perdehromov, and Unghen, and also occupied in fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Yencenki, Krusya, Dorushkanye, Voineshti, Mihacheshki, Sokola, and Meronitya, and the railway stations of Unghen, Poputenye, Vodu-Iolayi, Syrka, Surbugrumov, Shauri, and Virnova. According to the preliminary data, in three days of fighting from August 20 to 22, troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front have inflicted on the enemy the following losses, destroyed: 89 tanks and self-propelled guns, 225 guns of various caliber, 215 mortars, 600 machine-guns, 880 automobiles, 20 tow-cars, and seven locomotives. The enemy lost in killed over 13,000 officers and men. At the same time, the troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front have captured the following trophies: 17 tanks and self-propelled guns, 195 guns of various caliber, 593 mortars, 801 machine-guns, 13,387 rifles two trains with supplies, 147 railway cars, and 26 warehouses with armaments, ammunition, and supplies. Captured: 7,000 German and Rumanian officers and men.

Troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, launching their offensive with the support of massive blows of artillery and aviation, broke through strongly-fortified and deeply developed enemy defense to the south of Renderi, and in three days of fighting advanced up to 70 kilometers and expanded the break-through up to 130 kilometers in frontage. In the course of the offensive, troops of the front have liberated over 100 populated localities, including the following centers of the Moldavian S.S.R.: Kaushany, Iniushiye, and Volentirovka; district centers of Izmail Region: Manzi and Orlimo, and the populated localities of Irkaiiski, Gurtseye, Zain, Tarakhe, Turcen, Lesik, Zhelezina, Krasna, Faraon, Slobodye, and Purgai, and the railway stations of Kirkayeshki, Kaugan, Zayin, and Berezina. Our troops have cut the railway line of Bessarabskaye-Belgorod Dnestrovsky (Akerman). According to preliminary data, in three days of fighting, from 20 to 22 August, the troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front have inflicted the following losses on the enemy: destroyed, 60 tanks and self-propelled guns, 262 guns of all caliber, 130 mortars, 560 machine-guns, 1,900 automobiles, and 1,000 carts. Good progress has been made between Lisieux and the sea, where Allied troops have captured Dozule and Dives-sur-Mer, and have advanced to Annebault and Bonnebosq.

West of Lisieux, we have taken Cambremer, while an advance north of St. Martin-de-la-Lieu has brought our troops within one mile of Lisieux itself. Fighting is going on in the vicinity of Vimoutiers.

Farther south, an advance has been made east of Chambois, and Gace is in our hands. Determined enemy efforts to break out of encirclement were again checked effectively. Mopping up continues.

There is nothing further to report from the remainder of the front. Weather severely restricted air operations yesterday, but during the evening coastal aircraft attacked enemy shipping near the mouth of the Gironde River.

MOSCOW, August 22 — Tuesday night's communique:

During August 22, south of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting 30 populated localities, including Visnaku, Alute, Vupramiye, Polto, Muhila, Vanna-Opite, and the railway station of Tendu. Our troops have cut the railway line and highway of Tartu-Valga.

West and south west of Jelgava, (Metava), our troops repelled strong enemy tank and infantry attacks.

South east of Lomza, our troops, surmounting enemy resistance captured the large highway junction, the town of Zambrov, and also occupied in fighting over 40 other populated localities, including Koj, Orvye, Korito-Jablon, Ludobuzh, Hozheli, Zhimke, and Kolembo-Iasnivo.

enemy lost in killed over 12,000 officers and men. At the same time, the troops of the 2d Ukrainian Front have captured the following trophies: 17 tanks and self-propelled guns, 195 guns of various caliber, 503 mortars, 301 machine-guns, 11,387 rifles, two trains with supplies, 147 railway cars, and 26 warehouses with armaments, ammunition, and supplies. Captured: 7,000 German and Rumanian officers and men.

Troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front, launching their offensive with the support of massive blows of artillery and aviation, broke through strongly-fortified and deeply developed enemy defense to the south of Bender, and in three days of fighting advanced up to 70 kilometers and expanded the break-through up to 130 kilometers in frontage. In the course of the offensive, troops of the front have liberated over 140 populated localities, including the following centers of the Moldavian S.S.R.: Kaushany, Imlahiye, and Volontirovka; district centers of Izmail Region: Manzi and Orutino, and the populated localities of Irkeishki, Gurfaoye, Zaun, Taraklie, Turzen, Lesk, Zheleznn, Krasna, Faraon, Slobodye, and Ihurat, and the railway stations of Kirgayeshki, Kaugan, Zavin, and Berezina. Our troops have cut the railway line of Bessarabskaye-Belgorod Dnestrovsky (Akerman). According to preliminary data, in three days of fighting, from 20 to 22 August, the troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front have inflicted the following losses on the enemy: destroyed, 60 tanks and self-propelled guns, 252 guns of all caliber, 139 mortars, 560 machine-guns, 1,560 automobiles, and 1,000 carts. The enemy lost in killed over 12,000 officers and men. During the same time, troops of the 3d Ukrainian Front have captured the following trophies: 15 tanks and self-propelled guns, 214 guns of various caliber, 153 mortars, 537 machine-guns, 4,869 rifles, three armored transports, 178 automobiles, 280 horses, and 17 warehouses with armaments, ammunition, and supplies. Captured: 5,665 German and Rumanian officers and men.

On all other sectors of the front, scout patrols and fighting of local importance took place.

During August 21, our troops dumaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 179 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 61 enemy planes were shot down.

Naval: The cutters of the «North Fleet» have sunk 14 enemy vessels. The Soviet Information Bureau on August 20 announced the attack by the torpedo cutters of the «North Fleet» on the enemy convoy. Today, we have received the full details of these successful operations. Air reconnaissance of the «North Fleet» discovered at Varangdrt-Iorge an enemy convoy, consisting of three transports, two landing barges, three destroyers, eight escort vessels, three minesweepers, and 12 escort launches. During the night, our torpedo cutters, under the cover of a smoke screen, neared the enemy convoy and from a short distance attacked. The torpedo cutter, under the command of Senior Lieutenant Jernakov, torpedoed and sunk the German destroyer; the torpedo cutter of Lieutenant Chernevsky sunk the other enemy destroyer. Three more transports were torpedoed, two of which sank, and the third suffered heavy damage. Other torpedo cutters attacked the escorting vessels, launches, and minesweepers of the enemy. As a result of this daring attack, the Soviet torpedo cutters in this battle have sunk two transports, two destroyers, six escort vessels, three minesweepers, and one escort launch.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 22 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriot formations, who made a noteworthy contribution to the liberation of Florence, continue to cooperate with the Allies along the Mugnone and behind enemy lines. Patriot units have thrown a bridge over the Arno.

All groups of Patriots operating in the Florence sector are under the orders of the Tuscan Committee of Liberation.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

A military sub-committee was responsible for the organization of the Garibaldi Brigade in Tuscany. The Garibaldi Brigade has operated within the walls of Florence. Allied officers were well impressed by the discipline and spirit of initiative shown by Tuscan Patriots.

In the Pistoia sector, behind German lines, large units of Patriots, with the support of Allied planes, engaged the enemy in battle, inflicting notable losses on the enemy. Patriot activity disrupted German communication lines and prevented the flow of supplies from the north.

In Piedmont and Liguria the territory controlled by Patriots has been extended recently. On the Alpine border, German detachments surrendered to combined Franco-Italian units.

Mussolini's private secretary, Osvaldo Sebastiani, who had been made President of the Exchequer of the Republican Fascist Government, was captured by patriots at Passirano, in Brescia Province.

Patriots in Trieste threw a bomb into the Officers' club, killing five officers and wounding others. In reprisal the Germans took hostages. In spite of this, patriots in Trieste continue their acts of sabotage against the Germans.

FRENCH FORCES ENTER TOULON SWEEP WESTWARD NINE MILES FROM MARSEILLES

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — French Forces of the 7th Army have entered the fortress city of Toulon, chief French Mediterranean naval base, and have swept westward to within nine miles of Marseilles, it was announced here tonight.

The French entered the besieged coastal citadel through its northern and western suburbs after a brilliant encircling movement inland had captured the 24-foot-high ridge of Mont Coume, dominating the seafront, and the low, seven-mile wide escape corridor which still connected its defenders with Marseilles to the west.

First troops entered the western and northern section of the city last night, it was announced. Entry was made through the suburbs of Les Quatres Chemins, Les Routes, and Valbourdin.

Less than a mile from the extreme western edge of the city is the huge French naval arsenal, comprising nearly a square mile of workshops, forges, warehouses, munition [illegible] docks, and drydocks, which was once the home base naval base. Toulon was ringed with heavy defensive works, and great coastal guns defended its vital naval installations. Bombardment from air and from the sea, covering the entire area with tons of projectiles and high explosive bombs, have slowly reduced the number of guns firing from the city's outer edges. One of the principal targets was the crippled French battleship Strasbourg, which the Germans had converted into a stationary coastal battery.

Battleships, cruisers, and swarms of medium bombers have day after day pounded this crippled ship, causing great fires and explosions, and finally silencing the big 15-inch guns which had hurled ton-weight projectiles on advancing Allied troops.

Farther east along the coast, further progress was made in the reduction of the island of German resistance around Hyeres, where a stubborn enemy force has clung despite the flood of Allied troops sweeping past them inland.

Naval forces aided French troops pushing toward Hyeres, and captured the Golf Hotel, situated on a golf course outside the resort town, which the Germans had converted into a stronghold. Mont Redon, a high feature 3 1/2 miles north of Hyeres, was also taken after strong enemy resistance.

More than 50 miles inland, north of Toulon, American forces of the 7th Army swung northeast along the Durance River Valley to occupy the town of Valensole, near the juncture of the Durnee and the Asse rivers, and 20 miles north of Barjols.

Reconnaissance elements were already operating in the Asse River Valley, along which a network of roads leads to Daupaine.

The surprise thrust of the American forces placed them 28 miles northeast of positions announced earlier in the day, around Pertuis, 12 miles north of Aix and north of the Durance River.

It was announced this evening that Pertuis had been liberated, and was now firmly in Allied hands. No information was given as to the fate of the German garrison surrounded since yesterday by French Forces of the Interior.

It was announced this morning that French troops were closing in on the great naval base of Toulon, and in fierce fighting, had pushed down from the hills northwest of the port to threaten the northernmost of the two escape routes then open to the beleaguered German garrison.

Further inland, forward elements of American forces had crossed the Durance River to reinforce French Forces of the Interior battling a surrounded German formation in the town of Pertuis. By mid-afternoon yesterday, fast moving columns were on both sides of Pertuis, and other 7th army forces were 15 miles west of Brans, occupied Saturday. Other formations in this vicinity, a gateway to the Rhone Valley and Avignon, the main road and rail center northwest of Marseilles, were reported to be pushing ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — French Forces of the 7th Army have entered the fortress city of Toulon, chief French Mediterranean naval base, and have swept westward to within nine miles of Marseilles, it was announced here tonight.

Less than a mile from the extreme western edge of the city is the huge French naval arsenal, comprising nearly a square mile of workshops, forges, warehouses, munition depots, quais, and drydocks, which was once the home base of the French Mediterranean fleet.

French seamen scuttled and destroyed the bulk of this fleet shortly after 7 November 1942, when American forces landed in North Africa, and the Germans moved into the previously unoccupied south of France. When the Germans finally forced their way into the city, only smoking hulks and ruins remained of the proud fleet they had hoped to seize.

Route 8 Cut

Northwest of Toulon, enveloping Allied forces have already cut in two places Route Number 8, leading out of Toulon to Aubagne and Marseilles, and are outside Aubagne itself, only eight miles east of France's greatest port, Marseilles.

Le Beausset, five miles northwest of Toulon, and Cuges-Les-Pins, 10 miles northwest of the naval base, and both on this highway, have been occupied.

Only the highway rounding the coastal headlands, subject to naval bombardment from Allied warships offshore, is now open to the German defenders to make their escape.

The official reports tonight gave no indication as to whether the Germans were continuing to fight within the [illegible] guns which had hurled ton-weight projectiles on [illegible] Allied troops.

Further east along the coast, further progress was made in the reduction of the island of German resistance around Hyeres, where a stubborn enemy force has clung despite the flood of Allied troops sweeping past them inland.

ALLIES EAST OF SEINE MEET LITTLE OPPOSITION

SHAEF, August 21 — Allied forces on the east bank of the Seine have driven forwad without opposition, it was reported late tonight. Reinforcements today crossed the river to join those units which had previously made the crossing under cover of darkness.

It was expected that the Germans, who had been streaming across the river from the escape pocket, would put up stiff resistance from prepared positions on the east bank, but the whole German defense seems to have collapsed.

The first American forces crossed the river in assault boats, and later units crossed on pontoon bridges.

northeast of Aix, as well as into the outskirts of this picturesque city itself.

Midway between the forces flooding into the Durance River Valley and the French troops pressing around Toulon, another 7th Army force has thrust southwest from St. Maximin in an eight-mile advance along Highway 560 to near St. Zacharie, only 10 miles northeast of Aubagne, key point in the inland road net leading from besieged Toulon. This little village, in the midst of extensive forests, is only six miles from the junction of Highway No. 660 and the Toulon-Aix road.

From official reports it is not possible to trace precisely the movement or the composition of the 7th Army forces pouring westward along a 35-mile-wide pathway inland from the great seaports of the Riviera.

In the Durance River Valley, of enormous strategic importance because it is the gateway to the Rhone, the main traffic artery of southern France, only the scantiest particulars are given of the rapid allied movement, which has bewildered and disorganized enemy resistance in this crucial sector.

At their nearest approach to Toulon, French forces were only 2½ miles to the north at the village of Le-Revest-Les-Eaux, nestled among a group of high hills, the westward of which, Monte Chaume, has also been occupied. Monte Faron, a 1500-foot-high ridge, lies between Le-Revest-Les-Eaux and the port to the south, but a number of secondary roads reach the coast city through the gap which separates the two mountains. From Monte Chaume, 2400 feet high, French forces completely dominate the low seven-mile coastal corridor which is the sole escape from Toulon.

Third General Captured

A third German commander, Major General Hans Schurberth, chief of the district liaison staff, and an ardent Nazi sent into Provence presumably to crush the local French Resistance Movement, has been captured, along with his entire staff of six officers and 30 men, it was announced today.

General Schuberth, short and slender, with an eye injury from the last war, gained a reputation for extreme cruelty as chief administrative officer for southwest France when he was stationed at Toulouse, up until June. Unlikative and apparently uninformed of the progress of the war, the general professed no knowledge of the situation on the Russian front, it was said.

The right flank of the Allied beachhead remained stable for the second day, with no change reported in the Allied lines drawn from Antheor on the coast around Cannes to near Grasse and thence through Le Bastide to Castellane, 32 miles inland.

Prisoners taken in the six-day campaign in Provence now number approximately 13,000, and nearly 30 towns have been liberated. (PRO)

ALLIED WARSHIPS BOMBARD TOULON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — A strong Allied naval force of two battleships and six cruisers yesterday bombarded the French naval port of Toulon, already under attack by land from three sides by French ground forces.

The bombardment began at 1100 hours yesterday, and 1,400 rounds of high caliber shells were fired against the beleaguered German garrison. There was some retaliatory fire from the shore, and after dark yesterday, a force of German E-boats attempted to attack the Allied bombardment force. The E-boat formation was driven off with at least one sunk and another driven ashore on fire.

The French battleship Lorraine and cruiser Emile Bertin and Le Fantasque were among the Allied warships.

A U.S. Navy force composed of a cruiser and two destroyers carried out bombardment of enemy coastal artillery north of Cannes last Friday, and secured direct hits on the enemy batteries, silencing them. More than 100 rounds were fired at these targets, and another coastal battery sent plies and reinforcements is proceeding steadily. Planes from aircraft carriers with the Allied fleet are continuing their operations, it was said. (FUO)

FRENCH ARMY TWO DAYS AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY NEAR TOULON, August 21 — Knowing that the Germans were preparing demolition of the great naval base at Toulon, French Army forces under command of General De Tassigny moved their attack two days ahead of schedule, without waiting for the fall of Hyeres, the resort town, a UNN special correspondent wrote today.

Advance French elements struck swiftly north of Toulon before their own artillery was ready, and caught the enemy unprepared. General De Tassigny said Sunday that the results proved the wisdom of the venture. The artillery caught up with the advancing French on Sunday, and added its roaring support.

Partisans slipping out of Toulon reported today that the German garrison includes German marines and some fanatical, die-hard Nazi troops.

The Partisans attacked a battery of four heavy guns known as the «three-forties» based on the peninsula at Mordrier, off the harbor, and knocked out two of them. The remaining two were under heavy Allied air attack Sunday.

De Tassigny's elation over the success of the French troops' rapid advance was shared by the population. People lining the roads are cheering the columns of French soldiers nearing Toulon. (UNN)

RIVIERA COAST SOWN WITH EXTENSIVE MINEFIELDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — The Germans had sown the offshore waters of the Riviera coast with minefields of every type, including antisweeping obstructions which required the biggest concentrations of minesweepers ever used in the Mediterranean, it was announced today.

The minefields extended from as close as 200 yards from the shore to miles at sea, and were protected by heavy coastal guns, it was said.

Yet Allied minesweepers pushed in ahead of the main fleet and cleared a safe path for assault vessels. Every type of minesweeping device was called into play. (PRO)

CANADIANS CROSS TORQUES RIVER
AMERICANS FORCE SEINE NORTH, SOUTH OF PARIS

SHAEF, August 21 — Allied gains on the Channel coast flank of the fleeing German 7th Army in western France continued today with the Canadian 1st Army driving across the River Torques two miles south of Lisieux.

Mopping up of German remnants continues in the Falaise-Argentan pocket, and the enemy has been cleared from the Bois du Feuillet Forest, five miles north of Argentan. The encircled Germans have now been pushed into a pocket which has been reduced to six by ten miles with the capture of Goulet, Sentilly, Le Bourg St. Leonard, and Occagnes in the Argentan area.

Elements of five panzer divisions made a desperate, unsuccessful attempt to break out of the pocket yesterday near St. Lambert-sur-Dives, northeast of Argentan. The attack was made on a front one mile wide. The Germans scraped together all the infantry troops and tanks they could, and rushed against strong opposition thrown around them by the Canadian and Polish troops. German tanks, attacking from outside the pocket, were attacked by planes and were unable to effect a break through. Heavy losses were inflicted on both sides.

10,000 Men Trapped

The American 1st Army headquarters announced that elements of at least 14 German divisions, numbering at least 10,000 men, are trapped in the pocket. The total enemy forces killed and captured in that area probably will equal

From Monte Chauve, 2400 feet high, French forces completely dominate the low seven-mile coastal corridor which is the sole escape from Toulon.

Third General Captured

A third German commander, Major General Hans Schurberth, chief of the district liaison staff, and an ardent Nazi sent into Provence presumably to crush the local French Resistance Movement, has been captured, along with his entire staff of six officers and 30 men, it was announced today.

General Schuberth, short and slender, with an eye injury from the last war, gained a reputation for extreme cruelty as chief administrative officer for southwest France when he was stationed at Toulouse, up until June. Unталkative and apparently uninformed of the progress of the war, the general professed no knowledge of the situation on the Russian front, it was said.

The right flank of the Allied beachhead remained stable for the second day, with no change reported in the Allied lines drawn from Antheor on the coast around Cannes to near Grasse and thence through Le Bastide to Castellane, 32 miles inland.

Prisoners taken in the six-day campaign in Provence now number approximately 15,000, and nearly 30 towns have been liberated. (PRO)

ALLIED WARSHIPS BOMBARD TOULON

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — A strong Allied naval force of two battleships and six cruisers yesterday bombarded the French naval port of Toulon, already under attack by land from three sides by French ground forces.

The bombardment began at 1000 hours yesterday, and 1,400 rounds of high caliber shells were fired against the beleaguered German garrison. There was some retaliatory fire from the shore, and after dark yesterday, a force of German E-boats attempted to attack the Allied bombardment force. The E-boat formation was driven off with at least one sunk and another driven ashore on fire.

The French battleship Lorraine and cruiser Emile Bertin and La Fantasque were among the Allied warships.

A U.S. Navy force composed of a cruiser and two destroyers carried out bombardment of enemy coastal artillery north of Cannes last Friday, and secured direct hits on the enemy batteries, silencing them. More than 100 rounds were fired at these targets, and another coastal battery near Vigneron, on the Gulf of Napoules.

German coastal guns on the eastern shores of the Gulf of Napoules and on the islands of Saint Honorat and Sainte Marguerite have held up Allied troops advancing toward Cannes.

American heavy cruisers and a battleship, along with the French battleship Lorraine, screened by destroyers, scored direct hits on the ex-French battleship Strasbourg in the Toulon harbor on Friday, it was announced today.

In the past several days, Allied naval units have hit hard at enemy defenses around Toulon. On august 18, the Lorraine and the Emile Bertin bombarded the island of Porquerolles, off the entrance to the Bay of Hyeres, to the northern shores of which the enemy has clung stubbornly despite the Allied sweep inland. An American cruiser was aided by the Gloire in pounding targets between Toulon and Hyeres, where 7th Army troops are advancing down the Gapeau Valley toward Toulon.

An American force of a cruiser and destroyers entered Napoule Gulf, where 7th Army forces are within three miles of Cannes, to pound the defense guns in this sector.

There has been some enemy air activity over the assault area, the Navy announced today. But the landing of supplies remaining two were under heavy Allied air attack Sunday.

De Tassigny's elation over the success of the French troops' rapid advance was shared by the population. People lining the roads are cheering the columns of French soldiers nearing Toulon. (UNN)

RIVIERA COAST SOWN WITH EXTENSIVE MINEFIELDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — The Germans had sown the offshore waters of the Riviera coast with minefields of every type, including antisweeping obstructions which required the biggest concentrations of minesweepers ever used in the Mediterranean, it was announced today.

The minefield, extended from as close as 200 yards from the shore to miles at sea, and were protected by heavy coastal guns, it was said.

Yet Allied minesweepers pushed in ahead of the main fleet and cleared a safe path for assault vessels. Every type of minesweeping device was called into play. (PRO)

CANADIANS CROSS TORQUES RIVER

SHAEF, August 21 — Allied gains on the Channel coast flank of the fleeing German 7th Army in western France continued today with the Canadian 1st Army driving across the River Torques two miles south of Lisieux.

Mopping up of German remnants continues in the Falaise-Argentan pocket, and the enemy has been cleared from the Bois du Feuillet Forest, five miles north of Argentan. The encircled Germans have now been pushed into a pocket which has been reduced to six by ten miles with the capture of Goulet, Sentilly, Le Bourg St. Leonard, and Occagnes in the Argentan area.

Elements of five panzer divisions made a desperate, unsuccessful attempt to break out of the pocket yesterday near St. Lambert-sur-Dives, northeast of Argentan. The attack was made on a front one mile wide. The Germans scraped together all the infantry troops and tanks they could, and rushed against strong opposition thrown around them by the Canadian and Polish troops. German tanks, attacking from outside the pocket, were attacked by planes and were unable to effect a break through. Heavy losses were inflicted on both sides.

10,000 Men Trapped

The American 1st Army headquarters announced that elements of at least 14 German divisions, numbering at least 10,000 men are trapped in the packet. The total enemy forces killed and captured in that area probably will equal the number captured in the liberation of the Cotentin Peninsula, where the total was 26,000. Prisoners taken by Allied troops are spiritless members of the regular German Army, and included Poles, Czechoslovaks, Russians, and a few Mongols. More than 7,500 prisoners were taken yesterday.

Three German generals were taken by British forces, a United Press dispatch reported. They were Lieut. General Badinski, commanding the 276th Division; General Elfeldt, commanding the 84th Corps; and Lieut. General Menni, commanding the 84th Division.

Operational silence still cloaks the movements of General George Patton's 3d Army, but press dispatches today reported that American forces had crossed the Seine at Manles-Gassicourt, 25 miles northwest of Paris. Numerous small German counter-thrusts have been smashed back. The bridge at Manles, successfully attacked by Allied bombers two weeks ago, may have been repaired by the Germans, but it is not known whether the Americans crossed it or used pontoon bridges.

A late report tonight from 3d Army headquarters stated that the Americans have also crossed the Seine at Fontainebleau, 35 miles southeast of Paris.

Disorganized German troops attempting to cross the Seine are under continual air attacks. The Germans are nowhere forming for battle. In the general direction of Rouen, they are making vague efforts to regroup. In one sector, our forward columns are forbidden to use artillery or mortars lest they hit armed reconnaissance columns racing back and forth, cutting up the German lines of retreat.

Press dispatches stated that General Paton's men have inflicted 100,575 casualties on the enemy since August 1st in his dash across Brittany and northern France to the Seine.

American armored columns were reported early today to be within 10 miles of Paris. Meanwhile, Radio Paris announced an armed uprising in the French capital. The German broadcast said: «This is Paris. Elements in the city have taken up arms against the occupation authorities. This revolt will be rigorously suppressed, and, if necessary, without any consideration.»

Field reports stated that American patrols were at Corbeil and Melun, 15 and 25 miles respectively from Paris, and another force is nearing Montargis.

An Associated Press dispatch from the Spanish-French frontier reported that light Allied cruisers began shelling German defenses in the area of Bayonne, on the west coast of France. Another report from the same source said that an American motorized column had passed through Angouleme, 130 miles south of Nantes, and were meeting no resistance. The last official report about two weeks ago on American units on the west coast of France, placed these forces 10 miles south of Nantes. (UP-Reuter-AP)

MONTGOMERY THANKS TROOPS FOR VICTORY

WITH H M FORCES NORMANDY, August 21 — In a special message of thanks to all troops in northern France today, General Montgomery declared: «The victory (in Normandy) has been definite, complete and decisive. The end of the war is in sight: let us finish off the business in record time.

«On August 11, I spoke to officers and men of the Allied armies in northwest France. I said we must "write off" the powerful German force that was causing us so much trouble; we must finish with it once and for all; and so hasten the end of the war.

«And today, days later, it has been done. German armies in northwest France have suffered a decisive defeat; the destruction of enemy personnel and equipment in and about the so called "Normandy Pocket" has been terrific, and it is still going on. Any enemy unit that managed to get away will not be in a fit condition to fight again for months; there are still many surprises in store for the fleeing remnants.»

In a tribute to the air force's part in the campaign Montgomery said:

«I doubt if ever in the history of war, air forces have had such opportunities or have taken such good advantage of them. The brave and brilliant work of pilots has aroused our greatest admiration. Without their support, we soldiers could have achieved no success. Where all have done so well, it is difficult to single out any for special praise.

«As British general, I can speak for all soldiers of the Empire and I can express our high admiration for the brave fighting qualities of the American armies in the opening stages of the "break in" battle of July 25 and the following days. And we followed with tremendous enthusiasm their great achievements during the wheel of the right flank almost to the gates of Paris.

«We never want to fight alongside better soldiers. As Allied Commander and overall commander of the land forces under General Eisenhower, I can praise the fighting qualities and tenacity in battle of the British, Canadian, and Polish troops on the eastern flank. They fought the enemy relentlessly, and took a heavy toll of him during the whole of this great battle.

«But surely it matters little who did this or that. All that matters is that it was well and truly done by the whole Allied team. The proper motto for the Allies should be "one for all, and all for one". That is our motto.

DE GAULLE, KOENIG CONFER WITH EISENHOWER

LONDON, August 21 — General Charles de Gaulle and General Joseph-Pierre Koenig, commander of the French Forces of the Interior, conferred yesterday with General Eisenhower at Eisenhower's headquarters in France. The conference, which lasted only 30 minutes, was held in Eisenhower's tent. No news was given out regarding the subjects discussed.

Radio Cherbourg announced earlier the arrival in Cherbourg of General Alphonse-Pierre Juin, Chief of the General Staff in charge of the French Army, Navy, and Air Force with General de Gaulle and General Koenig. (OWI)

PARISIANS FIRE ON GERMANS

PARIS, August 21 — Inside Paris, German patrols and patriots have been firing on each other in fierce short actions, said a Reuter correspondent in the outskirts of the French capital. A Frenchman cycled out of the city with the news that fierce fighting had broken out in the capital, and that large fires were burning in several parts of the city.

The fighting began yesterday morning, when there were scores of armed clashes as students and partisans began to fire on the Germans. In retaliation, the Germans were reported to be using machine guns in an effort to stem the fighting.

According to this Parisian, the Germans had offered to withdraw from the city if there was no interference with their transport. French students, however, did not believe the Nazi pledge to respect the city.

Except for rearguard patrols, the Germans were reported to have left the city where the people were awaiting the Allies with a great welcome, the dispatch said. In some areas, streets are said to be flying the Tricolor, the Union Jack, and the Stars and Stripes. In Montmartre, crowds are stated to be parading the streets with linked arms, singing the Marseillaise and other patriotic songs. (Reuter)

F. F. I. TAKE TOULOUSE

ALGIERS, August 21 — The French Commissariat of Information said today that French Partisan forces yesterday liberated Toulouse.

The city lies about midway across France, about 65 miles from the Spanish border and far from any Allied base of operations. (PWB)

12,000 GERMAN DEAD IN SANDOMIERZ POCKET

MOSCOW, August 21 — The Germans left 12,000 dead, lost 1,350 taken prisoners, and vast amounts of war material in the trap north of Sandomierz which the Red Army announced in tonight's communique as completely liquidated.

In annihilating the three German divisions, the Russians also captured 20 tanks and self-propelled guns, 72 guns of various calibres, 81 mortars, 120 machine guns, and over 500 infantry guns and rifles. They destroyed 58 tanks and self-propelled guns, 18 armored carriers, 142 guns of various sizes, over 100 mortars, over 100 lorries, and 35 tractors.

While the liquidation was proceeding, other Red Army units fought heavy battles to enlarge their bridgehead on the Vistula's left bank, the communique also stated.

Marshal Rokossovsky's forces northeast of Warsaw are beginning a new drive in a northwesterly direction, which, a late dispatch from Reuter last night said, may have far-reaching results. Far to the south, Marshal Konev's army group was pressing forward in a distant outflanking threat to Warsaw.

Baltic Front

NAZI WOUNDED GET SWISS SAFE CONDUCT

LONDON, August 21 — The Swiss Government revealed today that it had granted safe conduct to German medical personnel and seriously wounded troops being evacuated from southern France.

12,000 GERMAN DEAD IN SANDOMIERZ POCKET

MOSCOW, August 21 — The Germans left 12,000 dead, lost 1,550 taken prisoners, and vast amounts of war material in the trap north of Sandomierz which the Red Army announced in tonight's communique as completely liquidated.

In annihilating the three German divisions, the Russians also captured 20 tanks and self-propelled guns, 72 guns of various calibres, 83 mortars, 120 machine guns, and over 500 tommy guns and rifles. They destroyed 88 tanks and self-propelled guns, 18 armored carriers, 142 guns of various sizes, over 100 mortars, over 100 lorries, and 35 tractors.

While the liquidation was proceeding, other Red Army units fought heavy battles to enlarge their bridgehead on the Vistula's left bank, the communique also stated.

Marshal Rokossovsky's forces northeast of Warsaw are beginning a new drive in a northwesterly direction, which, a late dispatch from Reuter last night said, may have far-reaching results. Far to the south, Marshal Konev's army group was pressing forward in a distant outflanking threat to Warsaw.

Baltic Front

By far the hardest fighting was on the Baltic front. Tonight's communique stated that west of Mitau, major forces of enemy infantry and tanks were being repulsed by the Red Army. The Red Army announced that it had withdrawn to more favorable positions from Tukums, the Latvian town east of Riga and near the Gulf of Riga. The two German armies trapped in the Baltic bag were among these desperate Nazi troops attempting to break out of the trap in which they have been held for nearly three weeks.

Front line dispatches said today that German forces in the Baltic area south of the Gulf of Riga have launched up to 20 counter-attacks in one day, using as many as 70 tanks in a single assault. But for the Germans, this frantic fighting is but a fight for time, for two other Russian columns are driving toward the Baltic coast both above and below the corridor.

The town of Tukum is a rail junction 35 miles west of Riga and 30 miles northwest of Mitau. It lies about 10 miles from the Gulf of Riga. It was in this sector that the Russians reached the sea, thus closing the trap on the German divisions in north Latvia and Estonia.

In the far south, below the lower hills of the Carpathians, the Russians have launched a major offensive against the Rumanian city of Jassy, according to German radio reports last night. A Nazi commentator said Soviet forces were attacking north and south of the northern

Rumanian city, and had made gains of up to two kilometers in the initial stages of the assault.

Around Warsaw, where the Russians have overrun several fortified German positions in late counter-offensive action, the Nazis were reported today to have laid waste large sections in an effort to stamp out the Polish Partisan offensive within the city. An Associated Press dispatch said today that the famous 15th-century cathedral in the Polish capital has been almost pulverized by the steady bombing and shellfire put down by German forces. A communique from the Underground said that Polish Partisans had been forced to retire from a section of the Old City which has been in their hands for a week. A late dispatch said the Patriots control the telephone system.

Russian dispatches tell of destroying as many as 84 tanks and killing as many as 2,000 men in hurling back German counter-attacks in the Gulf of Riga area. Several strong points once held by the Russians have been recaptured. But Moscow added that German losses in the action were extremely heavy. (BBC - Reuter - AP)

GERMANS TRY TO CRUSH WARSAW UNDERGROUND

LONDON, August 21 — The Germans have opened a drive to crush the Underground army which has been fighting the «inside battle of Warsaw» for more than two weeks, it was stated in a communique issued yesterday by Underground Army headquarters.

The communique said that while infantry and tanks began attacking the Stare Miasto (The Old City), heavy artillery has been destroying it with heavy artillery fire and incendiaries. The Polish fighters announced the destruction of four Tiger tanks in the Leszno and Nalweki districts, and another three destroyed at the Nalewski barricade.

There has been increased enemy pressure in the district of Kozymowa and Chopi streets, while heavy fighting continues around Knockmalna street. German units are isolated in the University building and the former residence of the Prime Minister, and are being supplied by air.

The fighting is so intense that holding of any point is important to either side. The Polish undergrounders reported they are holding «rabbit houses» in Lazinski Park.

In the meantime, the Luftwaffe was active and bombed those sections of the city held by the Underground Army.

The Polish Telegraph Agency said the Germans have seized 70,000 Poles in Warsaw in the last few days and herded them into a concentration camp in an effort to break the revolt. The Underground radio reported that the Germans were «systematically burning down the city. Street after street has been set afire.»

The dispatch also said that the concentration camps are full of women and children who are dying from hunger and disease. (OWI)

POLES OF 8TH ARMY SWEEP FORWARD

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 21 — Although there is no significant change along most of the Italian front, Polish forces of the 8th Army swept forward yesterday along a 12-mile front on the Adriatic coast to approach the Metauro River and to within 12 miles of the Adriatic port of Pesaro.

Attacking in strength, and supported by tanks, Polish forces have occupied the high ground south of the Metauro dominating the coastal plain between this stream and the Cesano River to the southeast and have forced the enemy to withdraw rapidly northward. Patrols pressing on to the banks of the Metauro met with no opposition.

The principal gain along the coast was the capture of the high ground at San Costanzo, six miles south of Fano, an Adriatic port below Pesaro. This town was captured after strong infantry and tank forces occupied the village of Il Vicinato and, despite a German counter-attack, pushed on to the hilltop town.

Another attack, further inland, reached the village of Cerasa, only two miles from the Metauro River at a point [illegible] northernmost point on

TAF ATTACKS IN NORTH [illegible]LY

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 21 — Tactical Air Force bombers today switched their attacks from southern France to northern Italy, dealing heavy suprise blows at German supply lines leading into the Italian battle area.

Several waves of fighter-bombers swept down on rail yards at Alessandria, where scores of rail cars were destroyed, building were hit and tracks were blown into tangled wreckage. Other fighter-bombers strafed motor traffic along highways, particularly around Turin, while medium bombers attacked a rail bridge at Borgo San Lorenzo, 15 miles northeast of Florence, and struck at two Po Valley rail bridges on the Bologna-Ferrara-Padua line.

Strategic bombers today attacked two air fields at Nis, Yugoslavia, and at Hajdu Boszormeny in Hungary.

Some fighters and fighter-bombers continued patrols in the Rhone Valley and destroyed a number of enemy motor vehicles. Night-flying light bombers carried out armed reconnaissance missions along the Riviera and in the Po Valley last night. Among their targets were an undisclosed objective at Remoulins, northwest of Marseilles, and another, also unidentified, south of Avignon. At both places, large fires and explosions were caused. (PRO)

GERMAN FIGHTER OPPOSITION LOWER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 21 — German fighter opposition sank to a new low, and Allied losses were the lowest ever recorded for a deep-penetration mission, when Italy-based bombers yesterday attacked three oil refineries within a 70-mile radius of Cracow, Poland, it was announced here today.

Only 20 enemy fighters were encountered in an area usually heavily defended, it was said. The three refineries, with a total production capacity of 227,500 tons per year, were swept by fires and violent explosions.

RAF Halifaxes, Liberators, and Wellingtons last night crossed the Alps into Austria to attack a tank and armored car factory at St. Valentin, near Steyr. Large fires were reported.

For the fourth successive day, Marauders of the Tactical Air Force attacked gun positions around Toulon, now besieged by French forces within 2 1/2 miles of the port. Fifteen of the big coastal gun emplacements ringing the naval base were reported struck.

Flak over Toulon and its defenses was intense. The first planes over these targets today were French-flown medium bombers.

Mitchell bombers attacked Valence, La Tressorerie airdrome, and three bridges in southern France, including a rail and road bridge north of Avignon, and a road bridge near Cannes.

Balkan Air Forces bombed objectives at Podgorica, Yugoslavia, and harried communications and transport. (PRO)

CHURCHILL VISITS 5TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 21 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill visited the 5th Army Saturday, to review the U. S. 34th Division, elements of the Brazilian expeditionary corps, Wacs, nurses and Negro troops, and to give three speeches to officers and men, it was announced here this morning.

The Prime Minister, who was accompanied by General Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief, Allied Armies in Italy, conferred with General Mark Clark, 5th Army commander, and predicted «greater ventures and greater achievements» for this veteran Allied unit.

The Prime Minister told the Allied troops that they «will be playing an absolutely vital part in the long, hard struggle for whose speedy end we all strive.»

From Cerasa, northernmost point occupied, the big coastal port of Rimini, terminus of the highway cutting diagonally across Italy along the Po Valley, is distant only 31 miles.

Still further inland, other Polish forces seized the dominating heights of Monte Cuco and Monte Bonello, eight and nine miles, respectively, inland from the mouth of the Cesano River. At the inland end of the 12-mile-wide front, patrol forces found San Lorenzo unoccupied, and crossed the road from this town to the coast only to encounter heavy shellfire at a point two miles northwest of Castelleone di Suasa.

In the Polish advance, the villages of Mondavio, Serafine, and Palermo were reported occupied. These villages are along the 12-mile front of advance which also took San Costanza, Cerasa, and Il Vicinato.

On the western flank of the 8th Army, a patrol of an Indian division pushed two miles northwest of Pontassieve, east of Florence, to report a German machine-gun post.

Conditions in Florence were reported quieter, with provision of supplies continuing.

On the 5th Army front, only minor patrol clashes and artillery fire were reported. (PRO)

CHURCHILL VISITS 5TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 21 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill visited the 5th Army Saturday, to review the U. S. 34th Division, elements of the Brazilian expeditionary corps, wacs, nurses and Negro troops, and to give three speeches to officers and men, it was announced here this morning.

The Prime Minister, who was accompanied by General Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief, Allied Armies in Italy, conferred with General Mark Clark, 5th Army commander, and predicted «greater ventures and greater achievements» for this veteran Allied unit.

The Prime Minister told the Allied troops that they «will be playing an absolutely vital part in the long, hard struggle for whose speedy end we all strive.»

In addition to his two formal talks, he delivered an impromptu address to members of an RAF unit, and frequently jumped from his jeep during the tour of the battlefront to chat with tankmen, nurses, and others.

At 34th Division headquarters, where the Prime Minister was received by Major General Charles Bolte, commander, a four-year-old Italian girl who could identify herself only as «Marta», presented the Prime Minister with a bouquet of oleanders. Surrounding soldiers cheered when the Prime Minister kissed the child on the cheek.

Mr. Churchill was also presented to a young Italian boy, a mascot of the 34th Division, who was dressed in a regulation uniform of the United States Army with the stripes of a master sergeant. Italian civilians everywhere along the Prime Minister's route, crowded windows and doorways and out into the streets to cheer his passing.

The Prime Minister was dressed in the trousers and tunic of a Lord Warden of The Cinque Ports, the crown and two pips of a colonel, three rows of bright decorations and service ribbons, and a pith sun helmet. At Leghorn, he stood up in his jeep to wave his helmet to crowds of soldiers and to make his famous «V for Victory» sign.

General Mark Clark presented to the Prime Minister the British flag which was flown over Rome on the night of its liberation, June 5.

At the front Mr. Churchill fired a big army gun, only to have the projectile fall [illegible] yards short of its objective, two medium enemy guns north of Pisa. After correcting the range, the gun's crew was able to hit the target in the next two shots.

In his only reference to the peace, Prime Minister Churchill promised 5th Army soldiers that the «sources» from which the Nazi tyranny derived its power would be «so obliterated and blasted that for many hundreds of years none will dare to do the like again.» (PRO)

FORRESTAL VISITS EUROPEAN WAR FRONTS

GENERAL EISENHOWER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 21 — The U. S. Navy Secretary, James Forrestal, today told a news conference in northwest France that Allied war plans are ahead of schedule, praised General Eisenhower and Admiral Nimitz for fostering a high spirit of cooperation among the Allies, and declared that the pressure against the enemy in the Pacific is comparable to that in Europe. He cautioned against over-optimism on the Japanese campaign should Germany collapse suddenly.

The Navy Secretary went to Northwest France to confer with General Eisenhower after witnessing the landings in southern France. This morning, he paid a visit to Cherbourg.

It is now revealed that, on a recent visit to Italy, Forrestal toured the forward positions of the 5th Army and made an inspection of the ruined port of Leghorn. He also reviewed troops of an infantry battalion made up of American soldiers of Japanese descent.

Forrestal stated today that the landing craft building program is now proceeding satisfactorily, but that «we can always use more LSTs.» He observed that the landings in southern France involved 1,000 vessels, exclusive of small landing craft carried on some of the larger ships, and said this was an apt example of the fact that «you can't win a war with air power, but you can't win one without it.» (PRO - OWI)

GREEKS IN ITALY

CAIRO, August 21 — Greek Prime Minister Papandreou announced late last night that Greek troops have been moved from the Middle East to the Italian front. They are the forces of the Greek Expeditionary Corps, the first Greek soldiers to fight beside Allied troops in Italy. (PRO)

GERMANS EMPTIED FLORENCE PRISONS

FLORENCE, August 21 — When Allied authorities entered Florence they found that that three prisons, including one penitentiary, had been emptied of prisoners.

It has also been ascertained that in one of these prisons, 1,200 Yugoslav prisoners had been kept locked up by the Fascists and were taken away by the Germans. There is no trace of their present whereabouts.

It is also reported that, before Florence was liberated, the Germans took 300 political and other prisoners from the prisons to be used for clearing up minefields. Their whereabouts is also unknown. (UNN)

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE MRKONJICGRAD

LONDON, August 21 — The town of Mrkonjicgrad, an important enemy communications centre in Western Bosnia, has been liberated by Yugoslav units, said Marshal Tito's communique today. In the same area, other Yugoslav units are fighting in the approaches to the town of Banja Luka, 90 miles southeast of Zagreb. Heavy losses were inflicted on the Germans in Dalmatia and Serbia. WASHINGTON, August 21 — It was officially announced here today that American Super-Fortresses made a second air attack on Japan yesterday.

19 JAP SHIPS SUNK BY U. S. SUBMARINES

WASHINGTON, August 21 — American submarines have sunk 19 more Japanese ships in the Pacific, the U. S. Navy Department announced today. The latest sinkings include a light cruiser and escort vessel.

An Associated Press dispatch said that the total number of combat ships now sunk is 56, with 11 probably sunk and 14 damaged; 858 Japanese vessels of all kinds have been sunk, probably sunk, or damaged by American submarines since Pearl Harbor. (Reuter - AP)

BOMBERS SINK JAP CRUISER IN SOUTH CHINA SEA

CHUNGKING, August 21 — B-24 bombers of the 14th USAAF sank a 14,200-ton Japanese cruiser on August 19, General Joseph Stilwell announced today.

The cruiser was sighted in the South China Sea, about 100 miles east of Hong-Kong, by planes on petrol activity between Indo-China and Formosa. The bombers made four running attacks on the vessel. On the fourth, they scored a direct hit, and the ship was seen to sink.

Chinese troops have reached the immediate outskirts of Leiyang, 35 miles southeast of Hengyang, on the Canton-Hankow railway, and are engaging the Japanese garrison there, the Chinese communique said last night.

In their river drive on the Yangtse port of Ichang, 170 miles west of Hankow, three more strategic points on the north and south banks of the river have been taken by Chinese troops.

Mitchell bombers of General Chennault's Air Force sank a 5,600-ton Japanese freighter in the China Sea, and strafed and bombed a steamer and barges near Haipong, in French Indo-China. Seven American planes were missing from these operations.

Today's Southeast Asia Command communique said that the enemy holding positions along the Tiddim Road, is withdrawing from the neighborhood of the Burma frontier. Fourteenth Army troops have occupied Kyusirum, one mile inside Burma and two miles west of the Tiddim Road. (Reuter)

JAP WAR INDUSTRIES HIT TWICE SUNDAY

WASHINGTON, August 21 — It was officially announced here today that American Super-Fortresses made a second air attack on Japan yesterday.

Here is the text of the communique.

«Two forces of Super-Fortresses struck at vital war industries in the Yawata-Cyu area by coordinated day and night attacks yesterday.

«The initial attack was the first daylight operation against Japan since that of General Doolittle. The second Sunday assault was made by a smaller force at night.

«On the first attack, bombing results were good. Relatively strong fighter opposition was encountered, and anti-aircraft fire was moderate to intense. Four planes were lost by enemy action; 15 enemy fighters were destroyed, 13 probably destroyed, and 12 damaged.

Radio Tokio admitted the attacks in an announcement stating that American bombers raided the Kyushu and western Chugoku district yesterday at midnight, Japanese time, for the second time in seven hours.

The B-29 attack rained many tons of high explosives on the industrial center producing 21 per cent of Japan's steel. The bomb load was the heaviest hurled against a single target in the China-Burma-India Theater of war.

A.C.C. TO HOLD MONTHLY MEETING

ROME, August 21 — An over-all report of conditions in liberated Italy will be made Tuesday at the monthly conference of regional commissioners, senior civil affairs officers with the advancing armies, and directors of the various sub-commissions.

The conference, open to the press, will start at 0930 hours. Both morning and afternoon sessions will be held in the Ministry of Corporations Building.

This will be the first conference held in Rome. Previous sessions were in Naples, where the ACC was located from February until its transfer to the capital of Italy.

Reports expected to be made Tuesday will deal with the many problems arising from the liberation of the provinces of central Italy. The major contributions of the Allied Forces toward the rehabilitation of civilian life will also be brought out.

The work of the ACC ranges from emergency feeding and medication in towns and cities just freed from Nazi-Fascist forces to matters of high policy involving the relationships of the United Nations to the Italian Government. Since the last open conference, the present Italian Government has been formed and important parts of Italian territory, including the City of Rome, have been returned to the administration of the Italian Government.

The war effort of co-belligerent Italy has also been markedly stepped up since the last meeting. Allied recognition of the growing activities of patriot groups, as well as the contribution of the Italian Liberation Corps, has attested to this. Further reports of the part being played by Italian combatants will probably be made. (UNNI)

UNITED NATIONS

HULL OPENS POST-WAR SECURITY TALKS

WASHINGTON, August 21 — Opening the informal international conversations on post-war security, Cordell Hull, U. S. Secretary of State, today prescribed «unity for common action toward common good and against common peril» as the sole effective method of maintaining peace.

Delegates from Great Britain, Russia, and the United States are taking part in these discussions. The second series will follow here immediately among delegates from China, Great Britain, and the United States. The delegates are largely experts in international problems.

Heading the British delegation is Alexander Cadogan, Britain's permanent Under secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Also in the British group are Gladwyn Jebb, head of the British Foreign Office's reconstruction department, and Professor Charles Webster, noted British historian.

Andrei Gromyko, the Russian Ambassador to the United States, an economist, leads the Russian delegation. A. A. Sobolev, formerly Charge d'Affaires at the Soviet Embassy in London, is also in the Russian group.

The United States delegation is headed by Edward Stettinius, Under Secretary of State. Aiding him is Leo Pasvolsky, head of the State Department's post-war planning committee, a native of Russia.

Rear Admiral Harold C. Train, who took part in the London naval conference in 1930, Major General George V. Strong, who attended the Paris peace conference after the last war, and Dr. Isaiah Bowman, historian, are also in the United States delegation.

Welcoming the delegates on behalf of President Roosevelt, Mr. Hull described the conversations as another step toward establishing «a lasting system of organized and peaceful relations among nations».

«Enduring Peace»

Pointing out that now when «the war is moving toward an overwhelming triumph for the forces of freedom,» Secretary Hull said that its «very character» must prompt people «to search for an enduring peace — a peace founded upon justice and fair dealing for individuals and for nations.»

«We have witnessed, and are witnessing today,» he said, the sweep of forces of savagery and barbarism of the kind that civilized men hoped and believed would not arise again.

«[illegible] the weapons of modern science and among nations, and a determination to live together as good neighbors in a world of good neighbors.

«Peace requires acceptance of the idea that its maintenance is a common interest so precious and so overwhelmingly important that all difference and controversies among nations can and must be resolved by resort to pacific means.»

Asserting that peace requires institutions through which «the will to peace can be translated into action», he said that the devising of such institutions is «a challenge to the wisdom and ingenuity of men and women everywhere,» and that was why the United Nations in the midst of «relentless prosecution of the war» were working together toward such institutions.

Such institutional foundations must support arrangements «for joint use of force, if necessary, to prevent or suppress threats to peace, or breaches of the peace.»

«They must also support arrangements for promoting by cooperative effort the development of conditions of stability and well-being necessary for peaceful and friendly relations among nations.»

With these «basic problems of international organization,» substantial progress had already been achieved through the food and agriculture conference, the conference on relief and rehabilitation, and the financial and monetary conference, he said, adding:

«These, and other similar steps, are indicative of the profound desire of the United Nations to act together for advancing the well-being of their peoples. They have been achieved by the united effort of more than 40 nations, large and small.» (OWI)

YUGOSLAV COMMON POLICY ANNOUNCED

LONDON, August 21 — Declarations of policy by the Royal Yugoslav Government and Marshal Tito's Committee of National Liberation in Yugoslavia were published tonight, and concur in accepting the Subasic-Tito agreement of June 16, published on July 18, as the foundation of their common policy. The declarations convey a unity of purpose looking to national unity and prosperity after liberation.

The two main aims of their common policy are the winning of the war, and reconstruction on a democratic, federal basis.

The Government recognized Tito's provisional administration pending the formation of a «single administration of the country», while it is agreed that the question of King and monarchy as part of the final solution of the organization of the state shall be decided by the people after complete liberation.

The government calls for a united fighting front under the command of Tito, and «considers that all other problems of internal policy should be set aside».

The National Liberation Committee's declaration, in outspoken language contrasting with the diplomatic phrasing of the Government's declaration, declares its readiness to collaborate with «a government abroad which would truly set itself the task of helping the struggle of the entire nation against the occupier.»

The Committee defined the Government's main task as rendering all possible aid to the National Liberation Army and to all others henceforth fighting against the occupier; the ensuring of supplies to the Yugoslav population; and the coordination of diplomatic representation abroad. (Reuter)

« We have witnessed, and are witnessing today, » he said, the sweep of forces of savagery and barbarism of the kind that civilized men hoped and believed would not arise again.

« Armed with the weapons of modern science and technology, and with equally powerful weapons of coercion and deceit, those forces almost succeeded in enslaving mankind because the peace-loving nations were disunited. »

Pointing out that the peace-loving nations lacked both unity and strength because they lacked « a vigilant realization of the perils which loomed before them, » he added that, likewise, the forces of evil now face utter defeat because, at long last, their intended victims attained « unity and armed power.

« The lessons of disunity and weakness should be stamped indelibly upon the minds and hearts of this generation and of generations to come. So should the lessons of unity, and its resultant strength, achieved by the United Nations in this war. »

In the face of what modern war means to the physical and moral being of man, he declared « the maintenance of such unity is a matter of the highest and most enlightened self-interest » and that, « in the final analysis, it is first and foremost a thing of the spirit.

« Peace, like liberty, requires constant devotion and ceaseless vigilance. It requires willingness to take positive steps toward its preservation. It requires constant cooperation.

« These, and other similar steps, are indicative of the profound desire of the United Nations to act together for advancing the well-being of their peoples. They have been achieved by the united effort of more than 40 nations, large and small. »

BULGARIA RELAXES ANTI-JEWISH LAWS

ISTANBUL, August 21 — The Bagrianoff Government has agreed to the re-establishment of the Jewish Consistorium, the Central Council of Jewish communities in Bulgaria, which was dissolved under anti-Jewish laws in 1941.

Other anti-Semitic measures are also reported to have been relaxed in Bulgaria. The Government has permitted Jews to return to Sofia, from which they were banished under the same laws three years ago, and has raised the ban preventing Rumanian Jewish refugees from passing through Bulgaria on their way to Turkey.

Travellers from Bulgaria report that many Bulgarian Jews are refusing to avail themselves of the recent government permission to discard their distinctive yellow star.

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 21 — Today's communique:

Land: Polish troops of the 8th army, by their quick advance beyond the Cesano River on 19 August, interfered with the enemy's apparent intention to withdraw towards the Metauro River and pinned enemy troops to the ground. As a result, stiff fighting ensued in the area of San Costanzo and on the high ground to the southwest.

Enemy resistance in the area was overcome in the late afternoon of 19 August, and during 20 August our troops following up the enemy approached the River Metauro in the coastal sector. The towns of Mondavio, Serafini, and Palermo (which is about 2,000 yards north of S. Lorenzo) have been occupied.

In the high ground between the upper Arno and the Tiber rivers, 8th Army patrols have been particularly active, penetrating deep into no-man's-land.

On the 5th army front, west of Florence, there is no change in the situation.

Troops of the 7th army are maintaining the rapid pace of their advance in southern France, and are now in the Durance River valley and are fighting in the approaches to Toulon against stiff opposition.

French troops have reached a point three miles north of the naval port, and are also well to the north west, approaching Highway No. 8. American forward elements, after crossing the Durance — a tributary of the Rhone River — reinforced French forces of the interior which had surrounded an enemy force in the town of Pertuis.

Other elements reached the outskirts of Aix-en-Provence. In some areas, pockets of enemy resistance have been by-passed.

A number of additional towns and villages have been liberated. Prisoners taken now number approximately 14,000.

Air: Oil refineries in Poland and Czechoslovakia yesterday were attacked by medium forces of escorted heavy bombers. Other formations of heavy bombers attacked rail yards and an airdrome in Hungary.

Enemy communications, concentrations, and gun positions in southern France and northern Italy were attacked by tactical aircraft. Offensive sweeps also were carried out over Yugoslavia. Last night, our bombers attacked a tank works near Steyr, Austria.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed, and six of ours are missing. One of our aircraft is missing from night operations on August 19-20.

MAAF, flew more than 1,900 sorties.

Sea: Considerable naval activity continues off the beachhead in the south of France.

It is learned that before the Island of Port Cros surrendered soon after midday on August 17, enemy strongpoints were bombarded by the British battleship, the Ramillies, and an American heavy cruiser, before the white flag was hoisted.

On the same day, in another area, the British cruiser Ajax, with the destroyers Tetrarchore and Termagond covered minesweepers against shore batteries. Good progress has been made in clearing mine fields throughout the assault area.

On the same day, near Cannes, enemy batteries were silenced by cruisers and destroyers.

Two British anti-aircraft cruisers, HMS Delhi and Colombo, cooperated with the American naval forces on the eastern flank.

On August 18, the French battleship Lorraine and the cruiser Emile Bertin bombarded the island of Porquerolles. An American cruiser, with the French cruiser Gloire, also strenuous attempts by enemy armor to break out were frustrated. Argentan is in our hands.

Enemy forces caught in the trap, including elements of at least 14 divisions, are being subjected to heavy artillery fire.

Allied troops occupying Chambois have held enemy counter-attacks toward the town from the northwest.

Allied units are on the Seine in the vicinity of Mantes-Gassicourt. To the south, our forces in the Dreux area are mopping up pockets of resistance. Elimination of isolated German units around Orleans has been completed.

Air: Heavy rainstorms and low clouds limited our air operations. Nevertheless, Normandy-based fighters and fighter-bombers continued to harass the enemy withdrawal in the Bernay area. There was some enemy air reaction, and we shot down 13 enemy aircraft.

Concentrations of troops waiting to cross the Seine near Rouen were attacked by our medium bombers. Last night, Seine ferry crossings at four points between Elbeuf and the coast were attacked by our light bombers. Several barges were hit. Considerable damage was done to road transport in the Bernay area, where bombing by flares was carried out.

Sea: On Saturday and Sunday, enemy batteries at Houlgate and Benerville, which had been interfering with our advance on the northern flank, were engaged and neutralized by the ship Erebus.

Early Sunday morning, a coastal patrol of six R-boats was intercepted by light coastal forces. The enemy was brought to action under cover of his shore defenses off Le Havre, and considerable damage was inflicted upon his craft before our patrols withdrew seaward. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 21 — Monday night's communique:

During August 21, southeast and south of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting over 30 populated localities, including Vibste, Jeamo, Lutika, Nerutt, and Taule.

East of Riga, our troops, surmounting enemy resistance, captured the town of Kusteni (Koknese), and occupied several other populated localities.

Northwest and west of Jelgava (Metava), our troops repelled large enemy tank and infantry attacks. By the order of the Command, our troops abandoned the town of Tokuma, and fell back to more advantageous positions.

North and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops repelled tank and infantry attacks of the enemy.

Northeast of Praga, our troops successfuly repulsed enemy tank and infantry attacks, and as a result of our counter-attacks, our troops occupied over 30 populated localities, including Kroslin, Zeleneu, Lesevilse, Jarulevka, Lesneurle, Jado, Vezgrotik, Troyani, and Klussh, and the railway stations of Lehus, Urlye, Shohnitse, and Klussh.

North of Sandomir, our troops were fighting for the expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula, and improved their positions.

In liquidation of the encircled groups to the north of Sandomir, our troops have inflicted the following losses upon the enemy in manpower and material destroyed—80 tanks and self—propelling guns, 18 armoured transport, 142 guns of various caliber, over 100 mortars, over 180 automobiles, and 35 tow-cars. The enemy left on the battlefield nearly 12,000 corpses of their officers and men. In this area, our troops captured the following trophies: 20 tanks and self-propelling guns, 72 guns of various caliber, 83 mortars, 120 machine guns, over 3,000 rifles and automatics; 1,550 German officers and men were taken prisoners.

On all other sectors of the front, scout operations and in several places fighting of local importance took place.

During August 20, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 206 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 55 enemy planes were shot down.

In another area an American cruiser, with HMS Ajax and with the Gloire supported the advance of the Army with their gunfire.

An American cruiser and destroyer entered Napoule Gulf to draw out the fire of enemy batteries, while American destroyers engaged enemy positions in the Cannes area.

There has been some enemy air activity over the assault area, but the task of landing reinforcements and stores continues steadily. In a report received yesterday from the naval commander, it is stated that the naval aircraft from the carrier forces had continued to give good service. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 21 — Today's communique:

Land: Further progress in the Allied drive toward Lisieux has been made. The thrust northeast of Grandchamp brought us to within five miles of the town.

Gains were made on the right bank of the River Vie against determined opposition. The town of Livarot was taken, and a successful attack was made south of Dozule.

Mopping-up continued south of Falaise, where several

On Saturday and Sunday, enemy batteries at Houlgate and Benerville, which had been interfering with our advance on the northern flank, were engaged and neutralized by the ship Erebus.

Early Sunday morning, a coastal patrol of six R-boats was intercepted by light coastal forces. The enemy was brought to action under cover of his shore defenses off Le Havre, and considerable damage was inflicted upon his craft before our patrols withdrew seaward. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 21 — Monday night's communique:

During August 21, southeast and south of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting over 30 populated localities, including Vibste, Jenmu, Lutika, Neruti, and Taule.

East of Riga, our troops, surmounting enemy resistance, captured the town of Kosteni (Koknese), and occupied several other populated localities.

Northwest and west of Jelgava (Mitava), our troops repelled large enemy tank and infantry attacks. By the order of the Command, our troops abandoned the town of Tokums, and fell back to more advantageous positions.

North and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops repelled tank and infantry attacks of the enemy.

Northeast of Praga, our troops successfully repulsed enemy tank and infantry attacks, and as a result of our counter-attacks, our troops occupied over 50 populated localities, including Kremlin, Zeleiets, Lesevitse, Jarutevka, Lesneurle, Jado, Vergrotik, Troyani, and Klussh, and the railway stations of Lohus, Urlye, Shehnitse, and Klussh.

North of Sandomir, our troops were fighting for the expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula, and improved their positions.

In liquidation of the encircled groups to the north of Sandomir, our troops have inflicted the following losses upon the enemy in manpower and material: destroyed—88 tanks and self—propelling guns, 15 armoured transport, 142 guns of various caliber, over 100 mortars, over 100 automobiles, and 35 tow-cars. The enemy left on the battlefield nearly 12,000 corpses of their officers and men. In this area, our troops captured the following trophies: 20 tanks and self-propelling guns, 72 guns of various caliber, 83 mortars, 120 machine guns, over 5,000 rifles and automatics; 1,550 German officers and men were taken prisoners.

On all other sectors of the front, scout operations and in several places fighting of local importance took place.

During August 20, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 206 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 88 enemy planes were shot down.

The military flight of the «Red Banner Baltic Fleet» has sunk four German destroyers, of 1,200 tons each in the Narva Bay.

The crew of the destroyers perished or were captured. The Soviet vessels picked up 107 German officers and sailors. Commander of the 6th German Flotilla, Captain Kopenhagen, was among the captured. The sunk destroyers were built in 1942-43, and belong to the modern German vessels of this type; the speed of the destroyers is 34 knots, over 60 kilometers an hour. Each of them had the following armament: four 105-m/m guns, two automatic 37-m/m guns, three 20-m/m guns, and 6 torpedo apparatus. The crew consisted of 190 men. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 21 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots operating in Ravenna, Forli, and Bologna provinces in one month have inflicted serious losses on the enemy. They have blown up five bridges, cut 16 railways, destroyed four tanks and 43 motor vehicles, and damaged 60 more. The patriots have also set fire to two trainloads of petroleum, destroyed one electric generating station, and damaged seven others. They have killed 212 German soldiers, 10 Fascist militiamen, and disarmed 165 Fascists. The patriots' booty includes 15 machine guns, 279 shotguns, over 3,500 pounds of foodstuff, 53 pistols, and hand grenades.

In other zones patriots have actively sabotaged German communications. In Milan, they have damaged a locomotive, in Feltre an electric establishment was knocked out for a month, and, in Tolmezzo, patriots damaged a hotel in which the Germans had their billets.

At the beginning of July, elements of the patriot groups attacked the airfield of Cinisello, near Milan, destroying one German plane and damaging two.

The Garibaldi Assault Brigade, has been active in the Province of Siena. The results of its activity are: 313 Germans and 206 Fascists killed, 200 Nazi-Fascists wounded. The brigade lost 42 dead, 33 wounded, and 142 missing; 15 enemy motor transports were destroyed and 10 more damaged. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 21 — The Supreme Command of the Wermacht announces:

In Normandy, north of Argentan, our divisions broke in grim fighting through the enemy bolt positions in a northeasterly direction and linked up with tank formations which had come to their rescue. At Dives and in the Vire sector, strong enemy attacks on our defensive front were smashed. In some sectors, German counter-attacks are in progress.

Between the Eure and the Seine, the enemy exerts pressure in a northerly direction. In this sector, at Pacy-Vernon, enemy spearheads were smashed. East and northeast of Chartres, the enemy continues to exert pressure on the central reaches of the Seine, but did not succeed in making further progress.

In the mountain area north of Toulon, the enemy attacks with strong forces in a westerly and northwesterly direction. Grim fighting is in progress.

Coastal batteries of the Navy set one enemy battleship and one cruiser on fire off Toulon. One destroyer and two torpedo boats were damaged.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire throughout the day and the night.

In Italy, in the Adriatic sector, yesterday, the enemy continued to attack throughout the whole day. High ground around Carasa, which had been temporarily lost, was recaptured in a counter-attack.

In the East, the Soviets extended their major attacks to the southern sector. South of Tiraspol and northwest of Jassy, the Soviets attacked, supported by strong bomber formations. In both sectors, grim fighting is in progress.

In the foothills of the Carpathians, southwest of Mielec, at the Vistula bridgeheads west of Baranow, west of Lublin and southeast of Warka, Bolshevist attacks were warded off or stopped in fierce fighting.

Northeast of Warsaw, Soviet attacks aiming at breaking through toward the Bug, were checked in our deeply echeloned positions. South of Vilkovishken and at Shuken, stubborn defensive fighting is in progress.

In Latvia, German tank formations, proceeding from Tuckum, reestablished the communications, temporarily cut off with units of the Army fighting in Kurland. A German naval formation supported the ground fighting. All Soviet attempts at widening their infiltrations west of Modohn and the Lake of Peipy were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our divisions.

Many enemy tanks were destroyed. The Luftwaffe, by its effective participation in the ground fighting, at the focal points inflicted high losses in men and material on the Bolshevists. On the Eastern Front, yesterday, the enemy lost 41 planes in dog fights and the action of anti-aircraft batteries.

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

Statement by Ambassador de Brinon: Paris: "In France the Nationalists have the firm conviction that harmony between France and Germany is of the greatest importance for the fate of Europe. The destiny of the Continent cannot be shaped by extra-Continental powers; we believe that Europe will rise and that France will live."

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Southern France: The German correspondent Franz Schiller reports that the port of La Ciotat, between Toulon and Marseilles, was heavily shelled by Anglo-American naval forces, at the same time undergoing a heavy air raid. German coastal batteries replied effectively. This attack indicates that the Anglo-Americans may try to land there in order to tie down forces of the German defence. Only after this has been done, may a fresh attack on Toulon be expected. After the thrusts of the enemy in the northeastern advance area of Toulon had failed, his operations in that territory have slowed down in the past 24 hours. Local attacks east of Toulon at Hyeres were unsuccessful. The Allies are still trying to expand their bridgehead in southern France to the north and west. Meanwhile, the Anglo-Americans are also advancing to the west in the direction of Aix en Provence. They succeeded in making progress in very heavy fighting.

Northern France: No major fighting is noted in Brittany. In the Argentan area, according to the correspondent Walter Plato, grim fighting continues. German troops are linking up with the general disengagement movement towards the east. On the other hand, Canadians and Americans are trying to contract the front line and to strengthen their position but have made no essential progress. North of Trun up to the mouth of the Dives River, the Canadians attacked in several places in order to disturb the German disengaging movement. There were some local penetrations, but these had no effect as they were automatically counterbalanced by the German movements toward the east. A zone of from two to seven kilometers in depth was turned over to the Canadians.

The second centre of fighting in northern France is on the Seine, below Paris. American bridgeheads have been sealed off by immediate German counter-measures. The 3d American Army brought up reinforcements from Dreux. From Vernon, the Americans moved down the Seine to Mards Guillon and from Mantes up the Seine.

Eastern Front: Fighting along the entire German eastern front has intensified considerably from the lower Dniester up to the Gulf of Finland. Fighting in the south developed from reconnaissance skirmishes into serious clashes along the entire region between Tiraspol and northwest of Jassy. A hard struggle is also underway in the Carpathian foothills north of Krosno and Mielec, and also along the entire Vistula bend between Sandomier and Warsaw.

FASCIST RADIO

The Allies are reported to have crossed the Seine River in the vicinity of Vernon and established a bridgehead beyond the river bank. Allied naval and air superiority in southern France is openly admitted.

BRITISH MAKE NEW ADVANCE

SHAEF, August 20 — Remnants of the German 7th Army are now completely surrounded in the Falaise-Putanges-Argentan area and Allied troops are systematically mopping up and destroying the enemy's manpower and equipment.

The pocket is being reduced rapidly on the northern side, while to the south artillery is blasting enemy troop concentrations in the entire area.

The enemy is in a state of confusion, although there is no wide-scale surrender. As British, American and Canadian forces continue to contract the pocket, the Germans are «no longer a target for Allied planes,» due to the proximity of Allied troops.

An official spokesman stated tonight that it was not possible authoritatively to estimate how many German troops were caught in the pocket, since there was no way of knowing how greatly the divisions had been reduced by casualties. However, a senior staff officer at the headquarters of the British 2nd Army said that from three to three and a half German panzer divisions had been destroyed. There were originally seven panzer divisions and a good proportion of these are still inside the pocket «on the waiting list.»

British reconnaissance units have reached Gace, about eight miles east of Chambois on the main road from Alencon to Rouen, and are driving on toward the Seine at great speed. Everywhere the front is folding up against powerful armored thrusts which seem to be rolling along almost unchecked.

Canadian and American forces are interlocking in many places from the north and south. Elements of 14 German divisions and a part of four other divisions are being slashed to pieces.

Leading forces of the 3rd U.S. Army, moving north and southeast from Dreux, have reached a point 18 miles beyond the city, to the vicinity of Nantes-Gassicourt. Small enemy pockets of resistance near Dreux are being mopped up and isolated German groups north of Orleans have now been eliminated.

Allied military leaders continued their silence as to the movements of troops and armor in the Paris area. The position of General Patton's forces east of Chartres and Orleans also has not been revealed. The German news agency stated today that American formations have been engaged roughly along the line of Houdan-Rambouillet-Arpajon-Etrechy. Another German report stated that the Allies had dropped parachutists east of the Seine and had landed other airborne troops.

There is still no official word of the fighting around Brest and Lorient. The first national broadcasting station to operate in liberated France began transmitting last night relaying American and British broadcasts in addition to programs of local interest. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

AIR ATTACK OF NAZI TRAFFIC JAM

LONDON, August 20 — The skies over Normandy were overcast this morning, with a ceiling of 1000 feet over the battle area.

The principal Allied air activity today has been the harrying of the running enemy. A traffic jam of German vehicles which may was pounded to pieces by air as well as ground action.

Details of air operations on Friday and Saturday indicated that 9th USAAF aircraft destroyed 57 barges and damaged 21 others which were lying hidden in the River Seine waiting to transport the Germans to the the other side, probably by night. In addition to thousands of vehicles and hundreds of tanks trying to escape from the Falaise pocket.

Path of Retreat Blocked

Allied troops are pursuing those elements which managed to escape temporarily to the northeast of the pocket. Their path of retreat beyond the Seine is blocked by blown-up bridges and Allied armor. Their transport is being destroyed by Allied planes. Rain is hastening the end of the enemy and their remaining vehicles are becoming bogged down in mud.

Between the Falaise-Argentan line and the Seine, Allied aircraft yesterday destroyed over 800 vehicles and damaged 600 others. Numerous barges hastily mustered on the Seine to aid in their escape have been destroyed or damaged by air attacks. Press reports stated that the Germans are swarming across the Seine in pontoons and anything they can get. Some are even swimming across the river.

Allied troops on the coastal flank in northern France have crossed the Dives and Vie rivers in three new places, making six crossings in all from Dives sur Mere to Livarot. A late dispatch tonight stated that advance columns are within five miles of Lisieux, after capturing Le Mesnil Simon.

Leading forces of the 3rd U.S. Army, moving north and southeast from Dreux, have reached a point 18 miles beyond the city, to the vicinity of Manles-Gassicourt. Small enemy pockets of resistance near Dreux are being mopped up and isolated German groups north of Orleans have now been eliminated.

ALLIED PINCERS GRIP PARIS

LONDON, August 20 — In a great pincer drive on Paris, late Reuter reports tonight stated, American troops are near Versailles while other units are in the vicinity of Corbeil, 15 miles south of Paris, Melun, 21 miles southeast of Paris, and Fontainebleau, 40 miles southeast of the city. American troops have reached the Seine, northwest of Paris, to form the northern arm of the pincer movement.

Another American patrol is stated to be driving on Montargis from Orleans.

In Normandy, the Falaise pocket has been liquidated. It was announced from Allied headquarters late tonight that all German resistance had ceased west of the Falaise-Argentan road. The only German groups still resisting are compressed into a small area south of Trun.

Thunderbolts, which are now equipped to fire rocket projectiles, have made effective use of their new equipment in smashing enemy tanks and motor transports. The rocket projectile is described as having the power of a navy shell, and is capable of piercing armour and splitting the best German tanks in half. Air reconnaissance photographs over Bremen show that Germany's second largest port has suffered the fate of Hamburg. Damage in Friday's RAF attack represented as severe a blow in proportion to the size of the place as any previously inflicted on a major industrial city in Germany, said the British Air Ministry today. The main area of devastation extends from the dock's to the center of the town and the main railway station, for more than two miles. In several places the wrecked area is over a mile wide.

The Germans sent more flying bombs over southern England, including the London area, before dark yesterday evening and during the night. Damage and casualties have been reported. (OWI - Reuter)

7TH ARMY REACHES OUTSKIRTS OF AIX

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 20 — American 7th Army troops, advancing more than 10 miles today, have pushed westward to the outskirts of Aix, 15 miles north of Marseilles, in a spectacular envelopment which has cut off all but three of the escape routes leading from Marseilles and Toulon.

As Allied forces crossed the Durance River at several points, French Forces of the Interior were battling a surrounded German formation in the town of Pertuis, 12 miles north of Aix.

With Allied forces now 35 miles to the northwest of them, the enveloped German defenders of the great naval base of Toulon were fighting bitterly to hold off French forces closing in on the port. A heavy naval and air bombardment preceded the French push toward the city, which the Germans had ringed with huge naval guns.

Seventh Army forces are now within 34 miles of the Rhone, main traffic artery of southern France, and only 40 miles from Arles, one of the main junction points on the rail lines from Paris and Lyons to the Mediterranean. With forward elements in the outskirts of Aix one of the three main roads open to the Germans in the coastal cities is only five miles away, and within range of mobile artillery.

Marseilles

Marseilles, with a population of over 500,000, is the Mediterranean's sheltered roadstead and flanked on the east by the St. Cyr Mountains and on the west by the broad, shallow marshes known as Etang de Berre. Marseilles is connected with Aries by three main roads, one on the seaward side of the Marshes, and two circling them to the north. No indication was given in official reports of the composition or route of the 7th Army forces which have thrust inland to near Aix and to cross the Durance River, 10 miles north of Aix at this point. Combined forces composed of French armor and American infantrymen were reported this morning to be at St Maximin and Rians. Rians is six miles from the Durance River, and seven miles from one of the main bridges across the shallow stream normally fordable in dry weather. St Maximin is connected with Aix by a 17-mile strip of excellent highway, which leads Pushing forward more than 30 miles from their landing beaches, this combined French and American force rolled along highway 561 to liberate the small tannery towns of Barjols and Rians, only six miles from the Durance River and along a direct route along this river valley leading to Avignon, 45 miles inland along the River Rhone, main traffic artery of southern France. On the opposite flank of the mushrooming bridgehead, American forces yesterday penetrated 32 Miles inland northwest of their beaches at Frejus to free Castellane, and cut the main highway leading from Cannes to the northwest.

In addition to the Allied spearheads stabbing through the hills north of Toulon, this great French naval base is now threatened from directly east, where French forces, streaming out from their beachhead at rocky Cap Benat, yesterday fought their way past the great salt flats on the northern edge of the Gulf of Hyeres to approach to within two miles of the resort town of Hyeres.

This pleasant river town, two miles in from the deep roadsteads which bear its name, has remained an island of German resistance on the coast, blocking direct approach to Toulon.

The Allied forces nearest Toulon are apparently the column which moved down the Gapeau Valley from Cuers and yesterday was reported at Solliès Pont, six miles northeast of Toulon. Last reports indicated that these troops were encountering considerable enemy resistance, although the heavy guns of the crippled French battleship Strasbourg, which was shelling their approach, have been silenced by Allied air bombardment.

Speeding up Advance

Allied tactics are now to bypass enemy strongpoints in order to avoid delays and speed up the pace of the advance, a senior Allied staff officer stated last night. In line with this conception of the Allied campaign, French and American forces have skirted around the main areas of enemy opposition, at Toulon and Cannes on either end of the bridgehead.

Moving rapidly westward inland around Toulon, and with advance units pinpointed at the advance points of Rians, and St. Maximin, and well into the St Baume mountains west of la Roquebrussanne, French and American forces are now within little over 25 miles of Marseilles. The French and American forces at Rians reached this town, 34 miles northwest of Toulon, in what was described as the "greatest westward advance" of the campaign to date. Further south, French and American forces with armor yesterday entered St. Maximin, at the forks of two main highways leading down to the sea at Marseilles and just to the west.

Brignoles, 10 miles southeast of St. Maximin, was taken on Friday after strong enemy resistance. No further news was available today of progress of the forces which were said to have penetrated well into the St. Baume mountains at a point only 14 miles north of Toulon to-day.

12,000 Prisoners Taken

More than 12,000 prisoners have now been taken in the five days since the Allied landings on the French Riviera. French and American forces have now liberated well over 1000 square miles of Provence, and at least 25 towns. Allied casualties continue to be light despite the speed of the advance.

German withdrawal has been so rapid that demolitions have proved impossible, and minefields also must have proved difficult to lay in their hasty retreat. On the right flank of the Allied bridgehead, where heavy resistance, partly from coastal guns on the Islands off the mouth of the Gulf of Napoule, have slowed Allied forces at Antheor, three miles from Cannes, the advance has also moved inland.

American elements yesterday reached Castellane,

Marseilles is connected with Arles by three main roads, one on the seaward side of the Marshes, and two circling them to the north. No indication was given in official reports of the composition or route of the 7th Army forces which have thrust inland to near Aix and to cross the Durance River, 10 miles north of Aix at this point. Combined forces composed of French armor and American infantrymen were reported this morning to be at St Maximin and Rians. Rians is six miles from the Durance River, and seven miles from one of the main bridges across the shallow stream, normally fordable in dry weather. St Maximin is connected with Aix by a 17-mile strip of excellent highway, which leads westward to the Rhone River at Arles. Allied forces were reported to have advanced several miles southwest of St Maximin.

Pertuis, where French Forces of the Interior have surrounded German troops garrisoned in the town, is also on a road leading to the Rhone, at the road and rail center of Avignon.

It was announced today that Lieut. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Deputy Supreme Commander, Mediterranean Theater, has made a survey of operations in southern France, and was the author of yesterday's report which indicated that 7th Army forces were «on their way» in a rapid advance. General Devers was accompanied by Lieut. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces, and Maj. Gen. Joseph Cannon, commander of the Tactical Air Force.

Castellane Freed

Today's sensational advances westward followed the announcement this morning that American infantrymen, spearheaded by French armored forces, had swept forward to the edge of the Durance River valley and formed another Allied prong around Toulon and toward Marseilles.

and yesterday was reported at Solliès Pont, six miles northeast of Toulon. Last reports indicated that these troops were encountering considerable enemy resistance, although the heavy guns of the crippled French battleship Strasbourg, which was shelling their approach, have been silenced by Allied air bombardment.

Speeding up Advance

Allied tactics are now to bypass enemy strongpoints in order to avoid delays and speed up the pace of the advance, a senior Allied staff officer stated last night. In line with this conception of the Allied campaign, French and American forces have skirted around the main areas of enemy opposition, at Toulon and Cannes on either end of the bridgehead.

Moving rapidly westward inland around Toulon, and with advance units pinpointed at the advance points of Rians, and St. Maximin, and well into the St Baume mountains west of la Roquebrussanne, French and American forces are now within little over 25 miles of Marseilles. The French and American forces at Rians reached this town, 34 miles northwest of Toulon, in what was described as the «greatest westward advance» of the campaign to date. Further south, French and American forces with armor yesterday entered St. Maximin, at the forks of two main highways leading down to the sea at Marseilles and just to the west.

Brignoles, 10 miles southeast of St. Maximin, was taken on Friday after strong enemy resistance. No further news was available today of progress of the forces which were said to have penetrated well into the St. Baume mountains at a point only 14 miles north of Toulon to-day.

12,000 Prisoners Taken

More than 12,000 prisoners have now been taken in the five days since the Allied landings on the French Riviera. French and American forces have now liberated well over 1000 square miles of Provence, and at least 25 towns. Allied casualties continue to be light despite the speed of the advance.

German withdrawal has been so rapid that demolitions have proved impossible, and minefields also must have proved difficult to lay in their hasty retreat. On the right flank of the Allied bridgehead, where heavy resistance, partly from coastal guns on the islands off the mouth of the Gulf of Napoule, have slowed Allied forces at Anthoor, three miles from Cannes, the advance has also moved inland.

American elements yesterday reached Castellane, mountain village of 237 feet elevation, and on the main road from Cannes and Grasse.

The town of Le Bastide, 10 miles to the southeast in this upland country, was also reached by the American troops. The thrusts in this sector put the Americans across the highway in several places, it was said.

No further advance toward Cannes on the coast was reported. (PRO)

NEW LANDING EXPECTED BY NAZIS

NEW YORK, August 20 — The Germans in the south of France knew that the landing was coming, according to a captured German general, who said that a convoy was spotted coming from Corsica.

Herbert Matthews, representing the combined Allied Press with the 7th Army in the south of France, states that the general—Lieut. General Ferdinand Neuling, 60-year-old commander of the 62nd Reserve German Corps, who was also in command of the area—told American officers that he had not eaten for two days so they gave him a good breakfast.

Neuling, said the correspondent, said that his information about the northern campaign was very meagre.

although sometimes he was able to get the BBC programs.

«What happened to your Luftwaffe?» the General was asked.

«That's what I would like to know,» he replied.

The Americans also captured Major General Ludwig Bieringer, who was Nesling's civil affairs Officer.

Matthews said that the German generals were not displaying any more fighting spirit than their troops. They had not tried to escape and had literally obeyed orders to hold. They said they had had «enough.» Besides the generals the Americans netted a German corps chief of staff, a signal officer and other staff officers.

Bieringer told Allied officials that he feels Germany is headed for a tragic end. Bieringer said his opinion, though shared by many Germans, would have little effect in shortening the struggle, since Himmler was in complete control of the army, and his SS troops masters of the German civil population.

He admitted that his only channel of information about the outside world was the official German Army newspaper, and expressed amazement at the news of Allied advances in Normandy, and on the eastern front.

Bieringer was chief of the German War Department's civil administration in southern France. He said no food or other civilian supplies had been brought in by the Germans; that the French were dependent upon French production alone, and that some food supplies were critically short. (PWB)

MAAF BOMBERS RANGE DURANCE VALLEY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — Tactical Air Force bombers yesterday struck at road and rail bridges in the Durance and Rhone River valleys and pounded heavy gun positions in the Toulon area.

The bridges hit in the Durance River valley were near Embrun, 75 miles north of Draguignan. Along the Rhone bombers ranged from Montelimar and Chamborigaud, 90 and 100 miles northwest of Marseilles, down to Avignon and Orange.

Several formations of German planes were encountered yesterday in the battle areas and inland. In one such flight of 12 Messerschmitts, two were shot down and the rest put to flight. Another formation of Thunderbolts, strafing targets along the Rhone, met three Me-109's and sent one crashing to earth in the dogfight which ensued.

Marauder and Mitchell medium bombers carried out the attacks on coastal gun positions at Toulon. Good coverage was reported.

Fighter-bombers, ranging over southern France, took a toll of more than 100 enemy motor vehicles, and tore up railroads and rolling stock. Night bombers of the Desert Air Force, normally working with the Allied Armies in Italy, struck at landing fields and scattered transport in southern France.

Balkan Air Force planes encountered bad thunderstorms in missions over Yugoslavia. Tumultuous storm clouds billowed from 2,000 to 30,000 feet in their paths, but the planes kept on to their targets, — oil storage tanks at Lipki, Dalmatia, — setting one of them on fire. Other Balkan Air Force planes bombed a Bulgarian troop headquarters at Kursumlig, Serbia. (PRO)

LULL CONTINUES ON ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — As the long lull on main sectors of the Italian Front continued, Italian and Polish patrol forces yesterday thrust across the Cesano [illegible] to take Germans near San Costanzo.

In other air assaults during the day, rail yards and airdromes at Szolnok, Hungary, 55 miles southwest of Budapest, and gun positions in the Toulon area were the targets. Both medium and fighter-bombers carried out the attack on German guns defending Toulon and other gun positions in this coastal sector. (PRO)

ENEMY SHIPPING ATTACKED

LONDON, August 20 — British light naval forces have sunk an enemy auxiliary vessel, damaged a minesweeper and set an enemy E-boat afire in two short engagements yesterday off Cap d'Antifer, France, 15 miles north of Le Havre, the Admiralty announced today. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS OCCUPY 210 TOWNS IN BALTIC

MOSCOW, August 20 — While Red Army units in the Baltic States have fought their way forward into over 210 towns and villages against a stream of German panzers and mobile guns, Russian troops in southern Poland have completed the liquidation of the encircled enemy groups west of Sandomierz, and have annihilated the larger part of the trapped Germans who refused to surrender.

East and northeast of the Warsaw suburb of Praga, Soviet forces not only beat back all enemy tank and infantry attacks, but in several sectors made successful counter-attacks and improved their positions.

Tonight's Soviet communique announcing these successes also reported that 250 German tanks were damaged or destroyed yesterday in tank battles on all fronts.

The situation at Warsaw is that while Russian forces threaten Warsaw from the east, Polish Underground fighters are struggling to seal off serious German tank and infantry penetrations into their lines in the «old city» section.

The Polish Patriot communique today said that German bombers, artillery and mortars pounded Patriot strongpoints in the western section of the city for 12 hours yesterday in the heaviest bombardment since the Polish uprising on August 1. The infantry attacks were repulsed, but German tank spearheads finally pierced the Partisans' lines. «We still hold our positions without change,» the communique stated, adding that the Germans had moved fresh troops of the 608th Infantry Regiment into the northern residential area of the city.

Part of Warsaw Burning

The southwestern part of Warsaw is in flames, said the Polish government delegate in Warsaw, quoted by the Polish Telegraph Agency. The Germans set fire systematically to house after house and street after street. People caught trying to put out fires were shot. About 70,000 men, women and children have been interned in a huge concentration camp at Pruszkow, about 10 miles west of Warsaw. As no food is given them, they are dying in thousands, and roads leading to the camp are littered with corpses.

Some 100 mile south of Warsaw, Marshal Koniev's forces have destroyed piecemeal German divisions previously estimated at 15,000 men, and the Russians have captured more towns and villages in an advance towards the southern defence posts of Radom. Moscow radio reports heavy fighting in progress as the Red Army seeks to enlarge its bridgehead. German divebombers are trying to smash the Soviet Vistula crossings but they are being shot out of the sky, and new bridges are appearing and more Soviet motor ferries are arriving on the banks of the Vistula to [illegible] day and night crossings.

LULL CONTINUES ON ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — As the long lull on main sectors of the Italian Front continued, Italian and Polish patrol forces yesterday thrust across the Cesano River to contact withdrawing Germans near San Costanzo, six miles southeast of the Adriatic port town of Fano.

Despite the continuance of bad weather, the strong Polish patrol forces pushed forward nearly three miles northwest of the Cesano River, on a 3,000 to 4,000 yard-front to reach Gabrielli, a half mile inland, and the town of Mondolfo, two and a half miles in from the coast and the same distance north of the river. Despite an enemy counter-attack, the Polish forward elements held their ground, while, further inland, Italian troops also maintained contact with enemy forces.

On the remainder of the front the situation remained generally unchanged, with only patrol skirmishes and light artillery fire being reported. (PRO)

POLISH OIL TARGETS HIT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — Up to 500 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked oil refineries in Polish Silesia and Slovakia, it was officially stated.

Liberator bombers struck the Vacuum Oil Company's refineries at Czechowice in Poland, 45 miles west of Cracow. Fortresses bombed the I. G. Farbenindustrie synthetic oil and rubber plant at Oswiecim, 30 miles west of Cracow. A refinery at Dubova, in Slovakia, 115 miles north of Budapest, was also attacked.

All three oil targets were attacked today for the first time.

German soldiers captured here report that they have been ordered to stem the Russian advance at any price, said Moscow radio.

The Germans have also suffered heavy losses in Latvia and Lithuania, where they have been launching strong tank and infantry attacks east of Riga, west and northwest of Jelgava (Mitava) and west of Siaulai (Shavli). In Esthonia, the Russians liberated over 150 places east and south of Dorpat.

German tanks were left without fuel at the decisive moment in the batle northwest of Mariampol, said a fronta-line despatch quoted by Moscow radio. The Germans had to abandon their attacks, dig in and go over to the defensive. (Reuter)

JAP SUBS INEFFECTIVE

WASHINGTON, August 20 — Elmer Davis, director of the United States Office of War Information, on his return from a trip to the Pacific, said yesterday that one of the great mysteries of the war is the ineffectiveness of the Japanese submarine fleet.

«Little effort has been made to use Japanese submarines against our cargo ships,» said Davis, «and as far as I know they never did get an American warship that was not already crippled.» (OWI)

RUSSIANS RULE EAST SKIES

MOSCOW, August 20 — In an order of the day issued today on its anniversary, Marshal Stalin said the Red Air Force has complete air superiority over the enemy air force.

He paid tribute to the Russian air and ground staffs in their great struggle against the Germans, and said the work done by the men and women workers and the aeronautical designers and engineers had enabled Russia to overcome the numerical superiority of the German air force. (OWI)

FRENCH KNOCK OUT STRONGPOINTS

WITH FRENCH FORCES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, August 20 — A group of 60 French Commandos was credited today with knocking out five concrete German blockhouses.

Led by a French captain, this group struck at the German strongpoints from the rear, scaled the walls and dropped explosives down the ventilators.

They killed 60 of the enemy, including a colonel, captured another 100 men and four 40 mm. guns. Other German forces counterattacked after the positions had been overwhelmed, but American tanks and infantrymen relieved the besieged Commandos, three of whom were killed, and 25 wounded. (UNN)

NAZIS SEEK SAFETY IN SWITZERLAND

LONDON, August 20 — A cable from Zurich, Switzerland, to the London Daily Telegraph, said today that German units, one after another, are crossing the French-Swiss frontier, and demanding to be interned.

Among such units, the dispatch mentions elements of the German garrison of Annemasse, recently routed by the French Forces of the Interior.

A plea that German war criminals should not be given asylum in Switzerland was made in an editorial in the Swiss paper Basler Arbeiterzeitung yesterday. The paper said: «Those who have broken international law cannot claim any protection under international law. They should not and must not be enabled to avoid proper punishment.

«On the other hand,» the editorial added, «Swiss people do not object to the internment of German soldiers who cross the Swiss frontiers, thus gaining refuge under international law.» (OWI)

GERMANS FACING WORST DEFEAT

LONDON, August 20 — German reverses in northern France may prove to be their worst defeat of the war and may decisively affect subsequent operations in western Europe, said the London Sunday Times editorial today.

Combined with the new Allied landings in southern France, the Sunday Times said, the ultimate result of these operations will be the liberation of the greater part of French territory, which for four years the Germans have exploited and despoiled.

After expressing the view that the Germans lack adequate forces to mount a stand anywhere on French soil except perhaps in the northeast, from Switzerland to the sea, the editorial said: «Already between the Loire and the Seine there is no enemy force that is not on the run or waiting to be. American advance guards are barring the way to Paris, and the Patriots, who know their hour has come, are rising up in every part of France.» (PWE)

The Hamburger Fremdenblatt recently said that while factory managers go into military service «the gaps must be filled from Belgium and with newcomers». Gauleiter Lauterbacher, of Hanover announced, «quota of people to be mobilized must be taken from everywhere, even if we occasionally go too far.»

The Nazi paper Das Schwarze Korps said: «If German doctors would show no mercy and ruthlessly refuse certificates of exemption to the partially unfit, 50,000 more men could be sent to the various fronts».

Meanwhile Nazi party officials are faced with another problem: the silencing of the growing peace movement within the army. Himmler, chief of the German Home Army, has already «dismissed or sent to the front more than 500 officers of the German Home Army,» said a dispatch from Berne today.

The German Home Radio yesterday broadcast the text of the weekly article by Joseph Goebbels, Reich Plenipotentiary for Total War, in which he admitted that the peace movement «Leads us near the edge of the abyss.» (OWI-CBC-Reuter)

GERMANS GIVE UP TO PRISONERS

LONDON, August 20 — An American pilot who had been held prisoner by the Germans for 27 hours, convinced his captors that they were surrounded and brought them over to the Allied lines to surrender.

The pilot was shot down and captured on August 12 northwest of Domfront. He was taken to German headquarters in a farmhouse which was burning when he arrived. Allied air attacks continued all night and the Germans started to get away next morning. The pilot, with four other Americans and an RAF pilot, escaped.

While sheltering from an Allied artillery barrage in a haystack they were joined by six frightened German soldiers. The Germans offered to give up and led them past the SS guards. On the way to the Allied lines they picked up 21 more Germans who joined the procession. (OWI)

LAVAL FLEES

LONDON, August 20 — Pierre Laval and other members of the Vichy Government were reported to have fled from southern France, out of the path of advancing Allied armies.

Reuter said today that Laval was supposed to have gone to Belfort, close to the German border. Marsal Petain was believed still to be in Vichy. (Reuter)

SURGERY MIRACLES AT FRONT

WASHINGTON, August 20 — Ninety-six per cent of the men wounded in action have recovered as a result of modern mobile surgery and reconditioning treatment, and about two-thirds of these have returned to duty, said a War Department announcement today.

FRENCH AIR FORCE FIGHTS

ADVANCED AFHQ, August 20 — The 31st Bomb Group of the French Air Force is participating in the aerial operations over southern France, it was announced today.

The only French medium bombardment group with the United Nations, the unit has flown many missions over the south of France since D-day, pounding bridges, strong points, gun emplacements and supply dumps.

Commanded by Colonel Max Gelee, the group is composed largely of French regular army officers and enlisted men.

GERMANY'S MOBILIZATION TROUBLES

LONDON, August 20 — How total mobilization measures in Germany are bleeding the German home front in order to fill the firing lines was revealed in recent reports from the foreign Press representatives in Berlin.

The latest source of manpower to be tapped for the German army is the foreign worker element now in German factories.

Invalids and «partially unfit» are being combed out for service in the army or in factories.

In Belgium an order has been issued for the SS Bologna Brigade to be transformed into a division into which 10,000 foreign workers now in Germany will be incorporated.

With skilled workers and Todt workers being drafted to the front, the Germans are faced with the problem of manning factories and building defenses with depleted numbers.

Gauleiter Koch, of East Prussia, recently described the difficulty of fortifying that province: army troops were not available, Todt workers were only to be had in small numbers. Therefore he had to fall back on the population itself.

CHINESE ARMY'S SUCCESS

KANDY, CEYLON, August 20 — Enemy positions astride the Tiddim road, a mile north of the Burma frontier, which is under heavy assault, have been by-passed by 14th Army troops. In a wide outflanking maneuver, British and Indian regiments have crossed the border and are now a mile inside Burma.

Drives to the Chindwin area are now developing from the Kalaw valley. On the Taungu-Sittaung track the Japanese were driven from positions 20 miles east of Taungu. Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked the retreating Japanese forces in the regions of the Tiddim road and the Kalaw valley.

Chinese troops have stormed and carried Laotungpo, a strongly fortified hill position southeast of Lungling on the Burma road, with the aid of planes of the 14th USAAF.

Chinese forces are attacking north and south of the Yangtze River in an attempt to prevent the enemy's reinforcing his strength in the Hunan province. Chinese troops drove against the Yangtze River port of Ichang, westernmost point of the Japanese penetration in central China.

From the east, west and northwest, Chinese columns are advancing against the important highway town of Tangyang, 27 miles northeast of Ichang and a connecting link for the Japanese overland supply route from Hankow.

South of the Canton-Hankow rail center of Hengyang, Chinese forces are attempting to recapture Leiyang and stem the Japanese drive down the railway toward Kwantung province.

NAZI DECORATION FOR MANNERHEIM

LONDON, August 20 — The German overseas news agency, in an announcement from Hitler's headquarters, stated that Hitler awarded the Oak Leaves to the Knight's Insignia of the Iron Cross to Marshal Mannerheim, Finnish commander-in-chief. The Knight's Insignia was also awarded to General Axel Heinrichs, Finnish chief-of-staff.

The awards were made by Field Marshal Keitel during his recent visit to Finland.

NAZIS FIND GOERDELER

LONDON, August 20 — The German news agency announced Sunday that Dr. Karl Goerdeler, former lord mayor of Leipzig, has been arrested in western Prussia, where he has been in hiding since the attempt on Hitler's life a month ago.

A price of 1,000,000 marks had been placed on his head. Baron von Palombini, who had hidden Goerdeler on his estate in Saxony, has also been arrested.

The Stockholm Tidningen, reported that arrests of prominent persons accused of belonging to the peace movement are continuing unabated, and added: «The Berlin police majors, Lenertov and Wismar, have been arrested for sheltering opponents of the Nazi government.

«A rift in the Nazi party is now apparent, since the number of 'disappearing' or 'wanted' SS men is steadily growing. SS Colonels Kaufmann and Lantz, and SS Major Schultz, all of the Paris command, have disappeared.»

Chinese troops have stormed and carried Tantungpo, a strongly fortified hill position southeast of Lungling on the Burma road, with the aid of planes of the 14th USAAF.

Chinese forces are attacking north and south of the Yangtze River in an attempt to prevent the enemy's reinforcing his strength in the Hunan province. Chinese troops drove against the Yangtze River port of Ichang, westernmost point of the Japanese penetration in central China.

From the east, west and northwest, Chinese columns are advancing against the important highway town of Tangyang, 27 miles northeast of Ichang and a connecting link for the Japanese overland supply route from Hankow.

South of the Canton-Hankow rail center of Hengyang, Chinese forces are attempting to recapture Leiyang and stem the Japanese drive down the railway toward Kwantung province. (OWI)

RUSSIAN AIR ACE

MOSCOW, August 20 — Colonel Alexander Pokryshkin is the first Soviet airman to win the Soviet Union Award for the third time. He has fought 137 air battles.

Pokryshkin has brought down 52 enemy planes, which is reported to be the United Nations record. He was once forced down behind enemy lines, but escaped after three days.

A bronze bust will be erected here of the Colonel, who is known in Russia as the «Lord of the Air.» OWI

«HITLERITES NEAR ABYSS» — GOEBBELS

LONDON, August 20 — «The peace movement led us so near the brink of the abyss that it represented the gravest threat to the Hitler regime since the Nazi seizure of power,» said Goebbels in his weekly article in «Das Reich,» quoted by the Berlin Radio.

Goebbels said some of the leaders of the anti-Hitler movement within Germany hold key positions in the political and military circles of the Nazi hierarchy, and added: «These leaders always had opportunities for sabotaging our government and our people's war effort, and for paralyzing it to a considerable extent by silent contradictions and unvoiced representation.» (OWI)

RUSSIANS READY TO ROLL

LONDON, August 20 — The BBC said today that the Russian armies were about to recommence their westward advance.

The German High Command is again in a helpless position, said the radio, and added: «It is now only a matter of waiting until the Russian High Command decides to make its final attack.» (BBC)

FRENCH TOLD: NO HASTY JUSTICE

LONDON, August 20 — The French Provisional Government last night appealed to the French people to maintain discipline, and not to take justice into their own hands.

The appeal, made through the BBC referred to the time between the withdrawal of Germans and the arrival of Allied authorities, and added: «Any lack of discipline may have grave consequences on the battlefield. We have learned that certain Resistance groups in France intend to take over all authority immediately after the enemy takes flight.

«We fully understand these good intentions, but we must, however, declare in the most formal manner against

«It seems that when the Nazis started the exterminations by hanging some of Germany's best officers, the SS thought that its great time had come, and the national leader of the SS, Himmler, is not unwilling to grab the chance, and take all the power for himself,» the Swiss paper added.

A dispatch from Stockholm said that while pursuing its annihilation policy against the army leadership, the Gestapo «has also intensified its persecution of opposition groups among German workers, particularly in cities in northern Germany.»

JAP PACIFIC BASES ATTACKED

PEARL HARBOR, August 20 — Army, Navy and Marine planes in the Central Pacific carried out new attacks against enemy air bases in the Marianas Carolines and Marshall Islands on Thursday and Friday, it was announced tonight.

Rota and Pagan Islands in the Marianas were bombed and strafed by fighters. Moderate anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

In the Marshall Islands, targets on Mille and Wotje were attacked by dive bombers and fighters.

From these operations all Allied planes returned. (OWI)

4th INDIAN DIVISION IN ITALY

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — The 4th Indian Division is fighting in Italy, it was announced today.

Forced by security rules to take an anonymous role, this division, whose men captured General von Arnim, has not been mentioned for 10 months. The division came to Italy last December, held the Adriatic sector a few weeks, and then fought gallantly in an unsuccessful assault at Cassino.

The division was then switched back to the Adriatic sector and opened General Alexander's drive to the east coast with the capture of the port and city of Pescara, the largest town to fall to any Indian division in Italy.

PATRIOTS CONTROL ONE THIRD OF FRANCE

ALGIERS, August 20 — French Forces of the Interior now cover nearly a third of France, it was announced in today communique from French headquarters. In operations between August 12 and 19, eight French departments have been liberated in Brittany, the Alps, the Pyrenees and the Massif Central.

In this period, French forces have taken 2,285 German prisoners and have killed or wounded 2,236. They have wrecked 38 bridges and one viaduct in addition to carrying out numerous acts of sabotage.

A German garrison of 200 men at Chamonix has surrendered, it was reported from Switzerland. French forces have completely surrounded Annecy, where the Germans are not expected to maintain their resistance for long.

Fierce fighting is reported from Grenoble, where the German garrison of 4,200 men is being attacked by 17,000 Partisans, who have blocked the Alpine road by destroying 300 German vehicles.

FFI LAUNCH NEW BLOWS AT NAZIS

ALGIERS, August 20 — French Forces of the Interior, co-ordinating their operations with the Allied drives in the north and south of France, have struck new blows against the Germans from the Seine to the Mediterranean, it was announced from General Koenig's headquarters Friday night.

In an official broadcast by General Cochet, the FFI in all the southeastern departments of France were told to go into immediate and total action against the enemy.

General Koenig's communique says that with several thousand FFI troops concentrated in the Chartres and Orleans sectors, new blows were launched against the Germans retreating towards Paris. They also hurled several attacks against pockets of German resistance which had been by-passed by the American columns.

Large-scale operations were also carried out by the FFI in the Loire and in the departments which cover the southern approaches to Paris. West of the Rhone, units of the FFI wiped out the last German center of resistance in the Correze Department by capturing Eglelons after a four days' siege. In the neighbouring department of Cantal, the FFI forced the Germans to evacuate the important garrison of Aurillac.

Near the Franco-Swiss frontier, thousands of FFI troops from the Upper Savoy, heartened by the unconditional surrender on Friday morning of the German garrison at Annemasse, closed in on Friday afternoon for an attack on the German garrison at Annecy. Truckloads of Patriots converged on Annecy from all points and the latest Maquis successes have virtually isolated the German garrison there. The FFI are stated to dominate practically the entire department of Upper Savoy.

On Friday, at Saint Tropez, General Patch, commanding the Allied 7th Army, congratulated the men of the FFI for what he termed their "magnificent work" in helping the southern France landings.

The BBC broadcast to Europe this morning quoted a statement by General Koenig announcing that the French

FLORENTINE ART TREASURES

FLORENCE, August 20 — The Allied Monuments and Fine Arts Committee announced that in an initial survey of Florence, they found that apart from occasional breakages to windows and minor damage to roofs, the fine arts treasures of Florence suffered little.

The famous Ponte de Parte Guelfa has suffered severe interior damage from a blast, apparently a mine, but the outside walls seem sound.

However, two nights ago the Germans dropped shells on either side of the Arno and seriously damaged some old palaces across the Ponte Alle Grazie and the Lungarno Serristori. A palace at the corner of Via dei Venci was damaged and the fine church of Santa Croce wa damaged on the left side. SUPPLIES FOR SOUTH FRANCE

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, August 20 — Allied civil administration forces, working with General Gabriel Cochet, French military delegate in southern France, will have supplies of food, drugs, clothing and other commodities stored up in the French Colonial Empire to draw upon in feeding and caring for civilians in newly liberated areas, it was reported here today.

Allied tactical forces are carrying with them into the foremost battle lines emergency supplies of first-aid applications, drugs, and instruments to turn over to liberated communities, a spokesman for the civil administration section of Maj. Gen. Alexander M. Patch's headquarters stated at a conference here today.

First aid for industrial installations, such as water, sewage and electric light plants, is also being carried along by the advancing Allied troops, it was said.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Allied civil administration in southern France will follow the pattern set in Tunisia, Normandy and Brittany, it was said. Although there will be a civil administration section of General Patch's staff, and an operational civil affairs setup, these military officials will act only through the office of the military delegate representing the government of General De Gaulle.

The British and American civil affairs authorities have carried out a series of conferences with General Coches, and have made preliminary arrangements for the smooth working of supply and other problems. Matters of local government will be entirely in the hands of the French.

The principal problems which are expected to confront the civil administration officials in southern France are the supplying of food, clothing and fuel; public health, long undermined by undernourishment; refugees driven from their homes by battle, and public works, the spokesman said. (PRO)

FIRST SECURITY TALKS

WASHINGTON, August 20 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull tomorrow will deliver the opening address at the first of two series of post-war security conversations between representatives of the United States, Britain, Russia and China, it was announced here today.

This first series of the conferences, which will be held in Washington, will not include the Chinese delegation. The second series will include the Chinese but not the Soviet delegation, an arrangement made necessary because the Soviet Union is not at war with Japan.

Outlines of views on post-war peace and security organization have already been exchanged by nations participating in these exploratory conversations.

Secretary Hull said he hopes the talks will develop a basic understanding which will make possible a world-wide conference for an organized peace later this year. (OWI)

INTERNATIONAL LABOR

WASHINGTON, August 20 — United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull reiterated the necessity for international collaboration today in a statement commemorating the 10th anniversary of United States membership in the International Labor Organization.

Said Hull: «There must be effective international collaboration if we are to accomplish the purposes for which we fight. The peoples of the world have come closer to realizing this elemental truth and its implications than ever before.

«The International Labor Organization, which provides representation of employers and workers as well as governments,» Hull continued, «has greatly assisted in that process of enlightenment and understanding.» (US State Dept.)

They provided close support for our advancing columns. Roads in the escape corridor in the vicinity of Orbec are strewn with knocked-out vehicles, often making it difficult for our pilots to select active targets.

More than 300 motor trucks were destroyed and 600 damaged yesterday from the Falaise-Argentan line northeastward to the Seine, in addition to 40 tanks destroyed and many others damaged.

Twenty-six large river barges on the Seine were sunk by fighter-bombers during the day. Fifty-nine were destroyed on the previous day.

Direct hits were registered during an attack by coastal aircraft on small groups of enemy E-boats in the eastern Channel early yesterday.

A small force of heavy bombers attacked La Pallice oil storage depot yesterday morning. Other operations by aircraft based in England were curtailed by the weather.

A force of enemy E and R-boats was intercepted off Cap de la Heve by light coastal forces early yesterday. After short engagement, during which damage was inflicted on the enemy, our force withdrew, leaving the enemy craft firing upon each other in some confusion.

An armed trawler and an M-class minesweeper were also attacked by light coastal craft off the entrance to the harbor at Le Havre, despite fire of the shore batteries, which prevented observation of the results. (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 20 — Today's communique:

Allied Forces in Southern France: Troops of the 7th Army in a swift thrust in the northwest sector of the Southern France bridgehead have advanced as much as 20 miles. With American infantry and French armoured forces operating together in this area, the towns of St. Maximin, Rians and Barjols were liberated. Other French forces have advanced to within two miles of Hyeres on the western coastal flank. Between Draguignan and the sea on the eastern flank, American elements have reached Castellane and Labastide, cutting the main highway running northwest from Cannes. Prisoners taken now number more than 12,000. Our casualties continue light.

Allied Armies in Italy: Polish and Italian forces of the 8th Army were quick to take advantage of a lessening enemy resistance in the Adriatic sector. Polish troops are now in contact with the enemy in the high ground about San Costanzo.

Further inland Italian troops have advanced to maintain contact with the enemy along the Upper reaches of the Cesano river.

Pergola is cleared of the enemy and occupied by us.

In the Pratomagno mountains, on the west bank of the Upper Tiber valley, several deep patrols have been successfully executed.

On both sides of Florence there is no change in the situation.

Farther west, on the 5th Army front, active patrolling has been maintained.

MAAF HQ ITALY: Heavy bombers yesterday attacked military objectives in the Ploesti area. Escorting fighter aircraft conducted an offensive sweep over the target area. Other heavy bombers attacked rail facilities near Cuprija, Yugoslavia.

Tactical aircraft ranged over a wide area, continuing to provide close support for the ground forces in the south of France, and attacking enemy installations in northern Italy, Yugoslavia, Albania and Greece.

In these operations two enemy aircraft were destroyed and 11 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew more than 1,000 sorties.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 20 — Today's communique:

Land: Allied forces have advanced to the vicinity of the Seine and have closed the enemy escape corridor south of Falaise. Leading elements moving north and southeast from Dreux have reached a point 18 miles beyond the city to the vicinity of Mentes-Gossicourt.

Allied forces from the north and south have met in Chambois, sealing the exit south of Falaise. The area of the enemy pocket has again been reduced substantially by advances from all directions, particularly southward towards Montabard and north to Ecouche, where heavy fighting has taken place. West of Argentan, in the area southwest of Putanges, we have completed the mopping-up of enemy groups behind the southern edge of the pocket.

Farther north, in the area east of St. Pierre-sur-Dives, our troops have continued to thrust eastward and have established three bridgeheads over the river Vie at Livaret Coupesarte, and Grandchamp. No changes are reported in the area of Chartres and Orleans or in the Brittany Peninsula.

Air: Our Normandy-based planes continued their heavy attacks on tanks and motor vehicles of all types retreating eastward and against river barges on the Seine. The harbor at Le Havre, despite fire of the shore batteries, which prevented observation of the results. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ AAI, August 20 — Today's Italian resistance front communique:

Italian and French patriots are particularly active on the eastern flank of the German positions in southern France, from Lake Geneva to the Gulf of Genoa. They are blocking enemy movements between northern Italy and southeastern France, inflicting severe losses on the Germans.

On the Ligurian coast, the patriots have taken possession of several localities. Fierce fights have taken place against German units. The patriots have captured supplies, arms and munitions. In some zones, after having seized food depots destined for the German army, the patriots distributed the food to the public.

In an encounter near Farini d'Olmo, in Piacenza province, the patriots killed 22 German soldiers and took much booty in arms and ammunition. Patrols were carried out on the Emilia road, especially in the zone of Firenzuola.

Near Cirie, in Torino province, patriots cut an electric line feeding war industries working for the Germans. The Turin-Modane railway was damaged for a great distance near Collegno. The interruption lasted several days. Also near Tortona acts of sabotage were carried out against the railway line and several road bridges were damaged. Other attacks against enemy lines of communication took place at Narzole, in Piedmont. Important factories which were working for the Germans at Sestri Levante and at Riva Trigoso were put out of action when the G.A.P. damaged the electrical installations.

On the northern edge of Florence patriots helped eliminate nazi-fascist snipers. A group of German soldiers and Fascist militia carrying automatic weapons was wiped out in the Piazza Dalmazia. (UNN)

Normandy Front: The German correspondent Walter Plato says that the fighting near Falaise which is now gradually shifting with eastward moving German forces to the very hilly terrain of Trun and Chambois is being continued at present with the greatest horceness. He also says that the Allies are employing far superior tank forces but the German tank defence has obviously stood the test well for nearly all Allied tank attacks were repulsed. Furthermore, Allied thrusts out of the areas of Chartres and Dreux in a north-easterly and easterly direction have now checked on a line running roughly through Houdan-Rambouillet-Arpajon-Etampes-Pithiviers. Between Vernon and Nantes, the fighting bears an absolutely fluctuating character. German reports record the shooting down of fifty-three Allied planes over the entire French area.

Southern France: On the coast of southern France, German nests of resistance hold their own in the face of heavy Allied air attacks and shelling of the front. Invasion forces continued their attacks against Toulon from the north-east and east. While to the north-east the Allies succeeded in making slight gains, their thrusts from the east were repulsed everywhere, suffering considerable losses in manpower and material.

Eastern Front: The Bolshevists gained only little ground despite the employment of freshly brought up forces. Fierce fighting continues on either side of Vilkaviskis as well as south of Schaken. On the Latvian front, there is fierce fighting west of Mitau against Soviet forces which have broken in. In Estonia, strong Soviet pressure continued west of Lake Pskov without the enemy succeeding in achieving major territorial gains. Another report says that the Soviets have launched major attacks supported by tanks and battle planes to extend their bridgehead across the Virtulo, however, all enemy attacks were unsuccessful.

Italian front: Competent German military quarters indicate that the British launched large-scale attacks chiefly with the aid of auxiliary forces, Saturday night, in the area between the Adriatic coast and Alfonsine. British succeeded in penetrating German lines in Mondolfo and Costanza, but paid heavily for this success losing about forty per cent of their tanks. At one place German lines were withdrawn about two kilometers. On the other parts of Italian front, there is no fighting of importance.

Heroic defenders of St. Malo rescued. — Colonel von Aulock, the heroic defender of St. Malo and his men, following the evacuation of the completely destroyed citadel, fought their way through the enemy troops and withdrew to the island of Cezembre. The fighting continues.

Unbelievable conditions in Allied-occupied Italy pave way for Bolshevism. — The Rome correspondent of the London Times declares that the unbelievable conditions prevailing in the Allied-occupied parts of Italy offer the Bolshevists the desired opportunity to infiltrate and to prepare the reap of Bolshevism from the seeds of the Western Powers.

food depots destined for the German army, the patriots distributed the food to the public.

In an encounter near Farini d'Olmo, in Piacenza province, the patriots killed 22 German soldiers and took much booty in arms and ammunition. Patrols were carried out on the Emilia road, especially in the zone of Firenzuola.

Near Cirie, in Torino province, patriots cut an electric line feeding war industries working for the Germans. The Turin-Modane railway was damaged for a great distance near Collegno. The interruption lasted several days. Also near Tortona acts of sabotage were carried out against the railway line and several road bridges were damaged. Other attacks against enemy lines of communication took place at Narzole, in Piedmont. Important factories which were working for the Germans at Sestri Levante and at Riva Trigoso were put out of action when the G.A.P. damaged the electrical installations.

GERMANS SCUTTLE SHIPS IN BAY OF BISCAY

NEW YORK, August 19 — German naval and mercantile fleets in the Bay of Biscay and the Channel of Gironde have been scuttled, according to an Associated Press dispatch late tonight from Irun, on the Spanish-French frontier.

The fleet consisted of a number of torpedo-boats, submarine auxiliary ships, light submarines, trawlers, and many coastal freighters, according to the report.

The freighters could be seen from the Spanish shore today, the Associated Press correspondent said. He also said that they put out for a few miles from Bayonne and next to Toulon and Cannes in size. It is capital of the department of Alpes Maritimes.

The American column circling inland north of Toulon is being paced by a French armored force, which has thrust 10 miles northwest of Brignoles to liberate the village of St. Maximin, at the fork of two main highways leading down two broad valleys to the coast at Marseilles and just to the west of this largest Mediterranean port.

More than 10,000 prisoners have now been taken, in a quickening advance against German forces now virtually without reserves anywhere in France.

An Allied senior staff officer declared that the troops of the 7th Army had «their tails up» and were «on their way» in southern France, exploiting a landing which he described as «probably the most successful ever made.» The Allied officer praised the French Forces of the Interior, who have given great help. He declared that German forces are pulling out of France so fast that there have been no such demolitions as in Italy, where the enemy destroyed practically every communications facility they left behind them. Stiffer resistance may be expected as the Allies push farther north, however, the officer advised.

The Allied staff spokesman expressed the highest admiration for the swift progress of French armored forces, outfitted with American-made tanks.

It was revealed tonight that the German General captured at Draguignan, when he was suprised with his entire operational staff, is General Ferdinand Neuling, commander of the 62d Reserve Corps. He was completely cut off from his troops by the rapid advance of American forces in the early stages of the operation.

Allies Driving Hard

Although Allied troops were naturally tiring, from the fast march inland through occasionally stiff enemy resistance, the Allied staff spokesman said that a first-hand survey had convinced him that Generals Patch and Truscott «were driving hard,» and that their determined agressive spirit was reflected in their men.

Heavy German guns, mounted on the rocky buttresses of Ile Ste. Marguerite and Ile St. Honorat, lying off Cannes, are firing across the Gulf of Napoule to hold back the Allied forces who are now within three miles of the great Riviera resort town.

The American forces inland, roughly 14 miles north of Toulon, are only a little over 20 miles northeast of France's great port of Marseilles, lying at the far end of the high sentinel ridge of the St. Baume Mountains.

The town of La Roquebrussanne, six miles southwest of Brignoles, has been captured, and American forces were reported to have pushed westward well into the 18-mile-long mountain chain. Main highways run both north and south around these mountain peaks toward the great seaport, and numerous smaller roads connect with the coast route between Marseilles and Toulon.

Allied troops have pushed along the northernmost of these two main highways two miles beyond Brignoles, and are within 31 airline miles of Marseilles, by this route.

ALLIES BEGIN SWEEPS AROUND TOULON AND CANNES IN SPEED UP OF ADVANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, Italy, August 19 — Allied forces in southern France, quickening the speed of their advance and bypassing German strongpoints of resistance, yesterday thrust out twin prongs to the west and east of their expanding bridgehead.

On the left flank, American troops swept inland through the St. Baume Mountains in a move to outflank the strong German defenses which had slowed an American column advancing down the fertile Gapeau Valley at a point six miles from the big naval base.

On the right flank of the bridgehead, which now comprises more than 1,000 square miles of the French Riviera, and extends inland 28 miles at points, Allied forces have pushed eastward 24 miles from Draguignan to near the town of Grasse, nine miles northwest of Cannes. Grasse, with a population of 15,000, is one of the largest communities in the immediate area of the bridgehead, ranking without reserves anywhere in France.

An Allied senior staff officer declared that the troops of the 7th Army had «their tails up» and were «on their way» in southern France, exploiting a landing which he described as «probably the most successful ever made.» The Allied officer praised the French Forces of the Interior, who have given great help. The swiftest Allied advance has been made west of Draguignan, where gains of 14 miles have been made since the capture of this town, 18 miles in from the Gulf of Frejus. Parachute troops aided in the capture of Draguignan, and speeded the rapid advance in this area.

The small industrial town of Salernes, 28 miles northwest of the Gulf of Frejus, was occupied yesterday, and forward elements were approaching the village of Carces, 6½ miles southwest of the Argens River.

To the east of Draguignan, the forward edge of the Allied bridgehead has moved little from the positions taken up soon after the start of operations. The heavy coastal guns on the islands at the mouth of the Gulf of Napoule have slowed progress toward Cannes on the coast.

Official reports still contain no mention of fighting for or near the town of Hyeres, east of Toulon, on the coast. Allied forces were reported to be at Cite des Bormettes, six miles farther east along the coast from Hyeres, but no details were given of their movement or disposition.

Elements of one more German division were reported identified today. They form part of the 338th German Infantry Division, and were identified on the northwest sector of the bridgehead, roughly in the area where American forces are fighting around Toulon.

It was also announced today that special service forces, consisting of highly-trained American and Canadian troops, were employed in the initial assaults on the Riviera, and captured both the islands of Port Gros and Levant, guarding the entrances to the Bay of Hyeres.

French troops, fighting in the Cap Benat area, just north of these islands, have overcome the last enemy opposition in this contested coastal sector.

The number of liberated French towns now exceeds a score. Those announced as occupied yesterday included Solies-Pont, six miles northeast of Toulon in the Gapeau Valley; La Roquebrussanne, 14½ miles north of Toulon; Brignoles, 19 miles northeast of the naval base; Vins, 24 miles northeast, and Salernes, 31 miles to the northeast of Toulon. 'STRASBOURG' LEFT SINKING BY AIR ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 19 — Mitchell bombers which attacked the crippled French battleship Strasbourg, used as a formidable coastal defense battery by the Germans defending the French naval base, left the 26,500-ton dreadnaught sinking, as well as a cruiser, and a destroyer and a submarine in the harbor were sunk, according to reconnaissance photos taken yesterday.

The guns of the big battleship, which had been hurling ton-weight shells at American soldiers advancing down the Gapeau Valley toward Toulon, are now silenced, as are the fortress guns guarding the entrance to France's great naval base, it was announced today.

Direct hits were made on the forward deck of the Strasbourg, and started three huge fires, which soon had the 700-foot warship listing badly. The Strasbourg was one of France's newest warships, completed in 1938. She was torpedoed by a plane of the Fleet Air Arm on 3 July 1940, but managed to reach Toulon. Later, the Germans made repairs and removed the superstructure of the big war vessel, to convert her into a heavy coastal defense battery.

The German harbor defenses put up one of the most concentrated anti-aircraft defenses ever encountered, one of the pilots of the Mitchell bombers declared.

Although bad weather handicapped operations, Tactical Air Force bombers attacked enemy gun positions in the battle area and bridges in the Rhone Valley. Fighters and fighter-bombers harried enemy transport along the inland roads and railways.

U.S. SILVER STAR AWARDED TO F.F.I. OFFICER

WITH 7TH ARMY, SOUTHERN FRANCE, August 19 — The American Silver Star medal for gallantry in action was awarded yesterday to Marc Rainaut, chief of the French Forces of the Interior of the Maures region, by Major General Alexander Patch, 7th Army commander. The presentation was made in a ceremony in the public square of Saint Tropez.

General Patch also personally commended four other FFI soldiers for their aid to the Allied cause. They are Jean Sabathier, Jean Cante, Augustin Foleo, and Roland Rainaut. Participating in the ceremony were a number of high Allied Army and Navy officers, a formation of French regular army troops, and a large number of FFI forces. (UNN)

BATTLE OF NORMANDY ALMOST AT AN END

SHAEF, August 19 — The battle of Normandy is virtually at an end. Allied superiority in manpower and equipment has won a great tactical victory, and the German 7th Army, battered and decimated, is in flight to the northeast.

The Allies, in the second phase of the Normandy campaign, are hurling troops, armor, and planes and artillery against the disorganized enemy in a battle of annihilation.

Escape bridges to the east and northeast have been blasted. Allied airmen are attacking German transport by day and by night, in a merciless campaign to reduce the German 7th Army. Thousands of prisoners have been taken in the Argentan-Falaise-Trun pocket, and this salient is now virtually a death trap for the remnants of several German divisions, including infantry and some SS units.

It is known that the SS divisions were given direct orders from Hitler to get away at all costs, and to leave the infantry to cover their retreat. Resentment and dissension are spreading among the retreating German Army because of this favoritism. The will to self-sacrifice for the Fuehrer's sake is weakening in the ranks of the Army.

Annihilation and Pursuit

An official Allied spokesman stated here that General Dwight Eisenhower's forces have «definitely reached the last stage of their campaign» to knock out the German 7th Army. The only phase remaining in the battle is «annihilation and pursuit.»

It was announced here tonight that American armored columns are less than five miles from the Seine River at Mantes-Gassicourt. These columns are in a good position to cut off the Germans who have escaped from the Falaise pocket.

The battle of pursuit to the east and northeast continues, but Allied officials are maintaining silence on details at this time in order to prevent the enemy from knowing where Allied armor is operating or where it may strike next.

General Eisenhower is carefully avoiding the pitfall of allowing the glamor of Paris to blind him to the necessity of crushing the German 7th Army, an Associated Press dispatch reported.

On the northern flank of the Allied front, British troops have continued to advance and have crossed the Dives and the Mue [illegible] near Notre Dame d'Estrees. In addition to

NAVAL FORCES SINK FOUR GERMAN E-BOATS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 19 — United States Navy destroyers repulsed an attempted midnight attack by German E-Boats on anchorages off the Riviera beaches yesterday, and sank four of the swift torpedo craft, the Allied naval communique announced today.

The force of enemy boats tried to penetrate the outer screen of Allied warships to deliver their deadly torpedoes against Allied ships landing supplies and stores, it was said. A spirited engagement ensued, and the enemy craft were turned back. Some survivors were rescued from the four enemy boats sunk.

The task of unloading supplies and stores from newly-arrived convoys is proceeding smoothly, the naval communique said.

Vice Admiral H. Kent, USN, commanding the naval forces, reported that British and American planes, operating

General Eisenhower is carefully avoiding the pitfall of allowing the glamor of Paris to blind him to the necessity of crushing the German 7th Army, an Associated Press dispatch reported.

On the northern flank of the Allied front, British troops have continued to advance and have crossed the Dives and the Vie rivers near Notre Dame d'Estrees. In addition to reaching the outskirts of Cabourg, attacking units have advanced to Dozule and the outskirts of Dives-sur-Mere.

Allied units are only 13 miles from Deauville, at the southern end of the Seine Estuary, eight miles south of Le Havre.

On the south of this flank, Allied units have captured the village of Monte Vieta, and have driven into Livarot.

Other of General George Patton's units in the Argentan region of the Falaise pocket have advanced one mile north and northeast against «moderately strong» resistance.

The Canadian 1st Army is said to have captured a German divisional commander and his staff south of Trun. Meanwhile, German troops were surrendering today in batches of 30 to 40 to Polish troops moving south of Trun.

South of Falaise, British troops on high ground east and west of the town are watching the extermination of Hitler's panzer units. The Allied troops have moved away so that hundreds of guns could pour unending and intense fire into the trapped Germans whose tanks and transport are loaded with men and supplies. One British unit thrust down the Argentan road to reach Pierre.

The chaotic state of German forces south of the Seine came from field reports that elements of 18 divisions had been captured in one sector, while troops from 14 divisions were made prisoner in another, both in the Falaise pocket. Demoralization in the enemy ranks is increasing by the hour as German commanders inside and outside of the pocket flounder desperately with no clear idea of where to find safety.

In the biggest air attack of the war, Allied planes damaged or destroyed 3,800 of General von Kluge's urgently-needed trucks up to midnight last night. Huge concentrations of fleeing transports jammed the roads leading northeast from the narrowing pocket to the Seine. British and American planes struck continuous blows at these perfect targets, and left the roads lined with blazing vehicles. German road discipline is gone, and trucks are dashing all over the fields anywhere they see a chance to slip through the Allied lines.

In the Brittany Peninsula, the last enemy resistance on the north coast has been overcome, it was announced here tonight. At Brest and Lorient, however, there was no report on the situation of the besieged garrisons.

In a BBC broadcast it was stated that American troops are below the Loire River, and are making good progress.

ALLIED AIR FORCES DESTROY ENEMY TRANSPORT

LONDON, August 19 — Allied fighters and bombers rose from the Normandy airfields this morning to continue for the second consecutive day the methodical annihilation of enemy transport jammed on the German escape route past Trun. American and British planes smashed oil and manufacturing plants, flying bomb installations, rail lines, highways, and port installations. Bremen, the large German seaport, was hit by RAF bombers last night and huge fires were started. Ninth USAAF rocket-firing American Thunderbolts have been secretly participating in recent attacks on retreating German armored columns, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

After yesterday's record blasting of German columns, in which Allied planes accounted for 3,800 vehicles and 200 tanks in less than 12 hours, reconnaissance planes early today reported a concentration of about 1,000 enemy vehicles beyond Trun. Soon afterwards Allied aircraft embarked upon the destruction of the long column. German light cars fled in all directions across the open fields, but the pilots paid no attention to them as they moved up and down the column with guns wide open.

Thus began an Allied air attack that increased in intensity all day. It accompanied like an umbrella the steady forward movement of Allied columns thrusting in to seal off the Argentan-Falaise escape gap.

Typhoon pilots attacking the Germans in the pocket yesterday operated so close to their own forward troops that they hit Allied vehicles in error. The Canadian commander in chief, Lt. General Crerar, issued a statement stressing the particular difficulties to the Allied Air Forces caused by the convergence of United States, British, and Canadian armies on a common objective with air action against the enemy. « It is impossible to employ that terrific air force in such a confined area without somebody's getting hurt besides the enemy, » the General said. « And we must use the air force in circumstances like these. »

150,000 Incendiaries

An Air Ministry communique announced tonight that only four out of more than 1,000 aircraft which took part in last night's attack against Bremen, and other enemy targets in Germany and Belgium, failed to return from their missions. The Air Ministry added that the extremely small percentage of loss indicated that the German air defenses were unable to cope with the attack, despite the fact that the weather favored the night-fighters. More than 150,000 incendiaries were dropped on Bremen during the reports of the surprise attack by fighter-bombers on the German headquarters indicate that all four buildings were destroyed.

The longest lull in flying bomb attacks on Southern England and London ended after 20 hours with fresh salvoes launched last night.

FFI FORM ADVANCE GUARD OF ALLIES

LONDON, August 19 — French Forces of the Interior have liberated 70 villages near Troyes, 85 miles southeast of Paris. In the Saone and Loire departments, all the gendarmes have joined the FFI. At Thonon, Evian le Fayet, and Chamonix, the German garrisons are now negotiating terms of surrender. In Brittany, French Patriots three days ago took Plounez and Paimpol by assault, captured 200 prisoners, and handed them over to the Americans. These are the highlights of FFI activities reported in today's communique from General Koenig's headquarters. They are but a fraction of the exploits of French Patriots, which are closely coordinated with the Allied drives in the north and south of France.

In northwestern France, detachments of FFI troops were the first to enter Nantes, and they now occupy the town. Supported by American troops, they took Treguier and captured several hundred prisoners. The attacks launched by the Americans on the town of Brest are being supported by units of FFI. In the Loire Department, the 666th Battalion of Engineers particularly distinguished themselves in the attack carried out on Blois by the FFI.

A young French Underground leader told a press conference today that Paris, anticipating deliverance, has the biggest and best-knit force of all the Resistance groups in France. For security reasons it was not possible to disclose what the shadow army was going to do when the Americans reached Paris. Meanwhile, several thousand of General Koenig's troops, concentrated in the Chartres and Orleans sectors, launched new blows against the Germans retreating toward Paris, and hurled heavy attacks against pockets of Nazi resistance which had been by-passed by the onrushing American columns.

Train Jammed in Tunnel

South of the Loire, during a thrust toward Poitiers by the FFI, a hundred or more Germans were killed, and an ammunition-train has been jammed in the Blossac-Poitiers tunnel.

Other units of the FFI are fighting for control of the Bayonne-Toulouse highway at the foot of the Pyrenees. Orthez and St. Palais have been occupied, while the Germans in Pau and Mauleon are hard pressed.

Puppet Militiamen attempting to leave Limoges for Vichy were attacked by the FFI and forced to turn back.

At St. Jean de Gonville, a battalion of FFI troops, under an Italian officer who took refuge in the Maquis a year ago, assaulted the German positions and caused a state of complete panic in the enemy ranks. A number of the enemy fled to Switzerland.

Important telephone and telegraph lines in France are being cut so consistently by the Maquis forces that Germans have finally given up all efforts at restoring communications, according to reports reaching London from Switzerland. The communication lines now out of order include those between Lyons and St. Etienne, Lyons and Paris, Vichy and Paris, Bordeaux and Limoges, and Limoges and Clermont Ferrand.

The FFI now numbers 80,000 men in Brittany alone, according to the Independent French Agency. Colonel Jean Drumont, of the FFI, who passed through London recently, said that if all the men enrolled in the resistance movement in France were gathered together irrespective of category, it could be said without exaggeration that they totalled more than half the strength of the French peacetime army. ALLIED AIR FORCES DESTROY ENEMY TRANSPORT

LONDON, August 19 — Allied fighters and bombers rose from the Normandy airfields this morning to continue for the second consecutive day the methodical annihilation of enemy transport jammed on the German escape route past Trun. American and British planes smashed oil and manufacturing plants, flying bomb installations, rail lines, highways, and port installations. Bremen, the large German seaport, was hit by RAF bombers last night and huge fires were started. Ninth USAAF rocket-firing American Thunderbolts have been secretly participating in recent attacks on retreating German armored columns, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

After yesterday's record blasting of German columns, in which Allied planes accounted for 3,000 vehicles and 200 tanks in less than 12 hours, reconnaissance planes early today reported a concentration of about 1,000 enemy vehicles beyond Trun. Soon afterwards Allied aircraft embarked upon the destruction of the long column. German light cars fled in all directions across the open fields, but the pilots paid no attention to them as they moved up and down the column with guns wide open.

Thus began an Allied air attack that increased in intensity all day. It accompanied like an umbrella the steady forward movement of Allied columns thrusting in to seal off the Argentan-Falaise escape gap.

Typhoon pilots attacking the Germans in the pocket yesterday operated so close to their own forward troops that they hit Allied vehicles in error. The Canadian commander in chief, Lt. General Crerar, issued a statement stressing the particular difficulties to the Allied Air Forces caused by the convergence of United States, British, and Canadian armies on a common objective with air action against the enemy. « It is impossible to employ that terrific air force in such a confined area without somebody's getting hurt besides the enemy, » the General said. « And we must use the air force in circumstances like these. »

150,000 Incendiaries

An Air Ministry communique announced tonight that only four out of more than 1,000 aircraft which took part in last night's attack against Bremen, and other enemy targets in Germany and Belgium, failed to return from their missions. The Air Ministry added that the extremely small per centage of loss indicated that the German air defenses were unable to cope with the attack, despite the fact that the weather favored the night-fighters. More than 150,000 incendiaries were dropped on Bremen during the attack, and reconnaissance photographs today showed smoke blowing to a distance of 60 miles.

During an attack on a synthetic oil plant at Sterkrade, about five miles north of Duisburg, there was a big explosion soon after the bombing started. The RAF put this oil plant out of action not long ago, but the Germans need oil so desperately that they had been forced to repair badly-damaged plants in the Ruhr even though they know that there is every chance of their being bombed again as soon as they start production. The Air Ministry also announced the bombing of oil storage tanks and oil plants at Rheims, and pointed out that this depot is now near enough to the battle front to be of importance to the German Army.

Allied bombers last night also attacked the French coast between Boulogne and Calais for the second time within a few hours, a United Press dispatch reported today. Other targets yesterday were the heavily-defended cliffs at Ile d'Adam, in the caves of which flying bombs were stored; a 210 m/m gun of the Big Berths class that had been shelling Allied shipping off the beaches from a point near Le Havre; and a big German headquarters hidden in the forest south of Orleans.

The big gun was housed in a long tunnel, and Typhoons scored direct hits with 1,000-pound bombs at each end causing a large part of the tunnel to collapse. Preliminary

CHERBOURG NOW USED BY ALLIED SHIPS

WASHINGTON, August 19 — Rear Admiral Allen G. Kirk, a U. S. naval officer who commanded a task force in the Normandy landings, said yesterday that the port of Cherbourg is now « serving our forces satisfactorily. »

Admiral Kirk praised the excellent teamwork displayed by the British, French and Dutch naval commanders who participated in the Normandy operations. (GWB)

ORLEANS CELEBRATES LIBERATION

NEW YORK, August 19 — In a broadcast from France, Charles Collingwood, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, described the enthusiastic celebration held by the city of Orleans upon its liberation by Allied forces.

Despite some shelling from the Germans on the other side of the River Loire, great celebrations have been going on all day, stated the correspondent.

Thousands of people assembled at the statute of Joan of Arc, Maid of Orleans, while an American general and all the dignitaries gave thanks. The leader of the resistance movement, the Prefect, the Mayor and the Cardinal of Orleans all attended.

The magnificent cathedral still stands, although it suffered some damage from German artillery. The rest of Orleans is in good shape, and the people are overwhelmingly grateful. (OWI)

GERMANS EVACUATE SPANISH FRONTIER TOWN

BARCELONA, August 19 — The Germans this morning blew up the supply dump at the Pyrenees frontier town of Cerbere, and then evacuated the post, said a dispatch to Reuter today.

An unconfirmed dispatch to Reuter from San Sebastian, said the German garrison at Sanfranc, also on the French side of the Pyrenees, had received orders to prepare for evacuation. (Reuter)

FIERCE BATTLES RAGE AS RED ARMY ADVANCES

MOSCOW, August 19 — Fierce fighting was going on at many points along the 1,000-mile Russian front. The Red Army, advancing in the north toward Tartu has liquidated three German divisions trapped north of Sandomierz, tonight's Soviet communique stated. The Soviets also have launched a new offensive west and southwest of Bialystok, and repelled violent enemy counter-attacks improving their positions east of Praga, Warsaw suburb.

While these gains were being made, other Soviet forces were still poised for the main thrust into East Prussia. They were within a mile of the German town of Schirwindt, which the Germans have already burned to prevent its use by the Russians.

The heaviest fighting was reported from Praga, where Red Army soldiers were fighting hand-to-hand battles with the counter-attacking Germans. Frontline dispatches describing the outside battle of Warsaw said:

«The earth trembles under the concussion of bombs and shells. Villages are changing hands repeatedly, and the air is full of whining mortar splinters.»

The «inside» battle for Warsaw brought this unhappy report from a German frontline correspondent:

«Shots pour from houses where insurrents fire upon our advancing troops. From the upper floors they lob incendiary bottles at us, and throw grenades from the cellars. It's a bitter, vile battle that goes on every hour of the day and night.»

From inside Warsaw came a radio message from the Polish Underground Army, stating that the Patriots had been strengthened by the arms and ammunition dropped to them by Italy-based RAF planes which flew 1,750 miles a round-trip on several occasions to assist the fighting Poles.

The Germans were fighting desperately to break out of the Sandomierz pocket, throwing in tanks and infantry in the vain attempt. At the same time, other German forces were trying to break into the trap to rescue their colleagues.

In the drive on Tartu, which began when forces crossing the straits of Lake Pskov met with other units advancing north on the west bank of the lake, the Red Army has liberated an additional 30 localities. They were driving

The crews encountered dense clouds of smoke over the city. They flew at rooftop level with landing flaps lowered to slow down the planes so that their stores should fall in the right localities for the patriots battling German police and soldiers.

German gunners sent up streams of bullets from weapons of all types as the planes skimmed over the house tops. The supplies flown in consisted of various types of guns, ammunition, and other weapons suitable for close-quarter fighting, it was reported. (PEO)

GERMANS CAN'T MOVE FORTIFICATION MATERIAL

WASHINGTON, August 19 — The impossibility of transporting materials for building fortifications in East Prussia was admitted in a German news agency dispatch quoting the German Army newspaper Front and Heimat. The report stated that civilians, conscripted to build the fortifications, would «have to find their materials in the district itself» without counting on supplies from the German interior.

German transportation had not been capable of transporting such supplies from Lithuania, the report stated, adding that only a limited amount of supplies had been «taken from Lithuania across the frontier.

The German news agency said that the conscripted fortification builders faced additional difficulties provided by «low-level bombing attacks» carried out by Soviet aircraft. (OWI)

RAINS ON ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 19 — Heavy rains all along the Italian battlefront snuffed activity to routine patrolling and sporadic artillery fire yesterday.

The main action reported was a clash in which a five-man patrol from an Indian division surprised and captured 26 Germans in a house near Montedegli, on the upper Tiber.

In northern Florence, sniping from Fascist Republican forces has diminished, and Allied Military Government authorities are getting more and more food, water, and medical supplies into this stricken area. (PRO)

PLOESTI HIT FOR THIRD TIME

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 19 — Italy-based Flying Fortresses today attacked targets in the Ploesti area, carrying into the third day the attacks upon the Rumanian oil and rail center.

HEAVY FIGHTING IN SERBIA

LONDON, August 19 — Heavy fighting is taking place in Yugoslavia, particulary in eastern and southern Serbia and in the Sandjak and Montenegro areas, it was announced today in Marshal Tito's communique broadcast by the Free Yugoslavia Radio.

In eastern Serbia, after a 36-hour battle, liberation forces defeated the enemy and liberated a large territory between the Rimok and Morava rivers. Enemy columns at the town of Paracin were defeated, and the enemy suffered losses of 300 dead or wounded soldiers.

In Sandjak and Montenegro, violent fighting continued against six German divisions. After hard fighting, the enemy captured the town of Kolasin, but enemy attacks in the direction of Savnik were repulsed.

In western Bosnia, two trains were destroyed and the Novi railway line was damaged at several points.

Enemy columns were broken up in the Lika district of Croatia, in the Srem district of Slavonia, and in the Styria district of Slovenia. Fighting is continuing against enemy

AMBOINA, CERAM ISLANDS ATTACKED IN FORCE

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 19 — Widespread air attacks covering many active fighting points in the Pacific were reported in General MacArthur's communique today.

Heavy U. S. bombers in force were over Japanese airfields on Amboina and Ceram islands, west of New Guinea, and destroyed an unspecified number of grounded Japanese planes in raids reported to have taken place Thursday. U. S. fighters escorting the heavies shot down nine enemy interceptors and sank a surfaced seaplane.

Both Amboina and Ceram have been hit frequently, but this is the first announcement in months of a raid in force.

Today's communique added that Liberators and Mitchells bombed the Namlea airfield on Boeroe Island on Thursday, and destroyed four parked planes.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 759021

Japanese remnants on Biak Island are being mopped up by Allied forces which landed on the Island Thursday. Enemy dead on Biak since the first landings now total 4,403; 280 prisoners have been taken.

Mopping-up operations continued also on Noemfoor Island, off the northern coast of New Guinea, with total Japanese casualties announced at 1,457 dead and 633 prisoners. Captives liberated by Allied forces were set at 405.

An enemy merchantman in Davao Gulf, in the Philippines, was reported damaged by Allied bombers.

A Navy announcement said yesterday that the «Black Cat» squadron of Catalina flying-boats roving the South Pacific has killed thousands of Japanese soldiers and has sunk untold tons of badly-needed enemy supplies during the past eight months. The raiders, operating in cooperation with PT-boats and, at times, with destroyers, made contact with a great number of enemy craft and kept them spotted by lighting flares till PT-boats and destroyers closed in for the kill. ALLIED BURMA DRIVE ADVANCING MILE A DAY

KANDY, CEYLON, August 19 — Despite the worst monsoon weather yet encountered by Allied forces, they are advancing a mile a day to the southwest against the Japanese along the Mogaung-Mandalay railway, it was announced here today.

In the meantime, Japanese rearguard actions along the Tiddim Road near the Burma frontier are losing their vigor as Japanese forces are thinning out considerably from Allied fire. There were even signs of disorganization as the Jap southward retreating movement during the last few days has increased in volume and speed.

Late dispatches from the Burma frontier stated that the 36th Division has consolidated positions north of Pinlaw.

An Allied military commentator stated that the expulsion of the last Japanese rearguards from the Henglam Hills on the Indian border north of Tiddim marks the end of the Manipur campaign, «as hard-fought and as long drawn out a struggle as any in the annals of the British and Indian armies.» The commentator pointed out that the Allies never deviated one iota from their plan of opposing the Japs in northern Burma, and were rewarded with outstanding success. GERMAN NAVAL PERSONNEL ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, August 19 — A number of German naval personnel have been arrested after acts of sabotage at the Aker Shipyards in Oslo, Norway, the Royal Norwegian Information Service said today. The reported sabotage consisted of blocking a lubricating oil feedpipe with sand, the service stated, adding:

«It appears that German crews are prepared to go to any lengths, rather than put to sea again. The morale of the German troops in Norway has sunk still lower as a result of recent events, and the Germans are no longer careful to avoid open criticism of Hitler and the other Nazi leaders. Secretary of State Hull for non-partisan consultation on post-war security problems. Governor Dewey named John Foster Dulles, a New York lawyer, as his representative. (OWI)

AUSTRALIANS VOTE ON GOVERNMENTAL POWERS

LONDON, August 19 — Australians will vote today on the proposal to increase the powers of the Australian Commonwealth Government, it was reported in an Exchange Telegraph dispatch.

All members of the Australian fighting forces serving outside Australia will participate in the voting, irrespective of age, or whether their names appear on electoral rolls. (OWI)

U. S. BOMBER PRODUCTION CUT

WASHINGTON, August 19 — America's losses in heavy bombers have been so much less than had been anticipated, that production is being cut back gradually, it was stated by Major General Echols, Assistant Chief of the Air Staff, today.

Echols said that at the Willow Run bomber plant, near Detroit, a reduction of 50 per cent will be effective by December. (OWI)

BULGARIA REPORTED MAKING PEACE OVERTURES

LONDON, August 19 — Bulgaria tonight was reported to be making a peace gesture to the Allies after Premier Ivan Bagrianov said in his first speech in office that his government "fully accepts the will of the people's.

However, no statement that his government intends to cut loose from Germany was followed immediately by reports that the Germans are now taking back tanks and other war material supplied to Bulgaria.

bankment at Daugaard, near the railway junction of Vejle, in central Jutland. This feat was described as "the most effective sabotage to date" against Nazi railway communications in Denmark.

Nazi difficulties with transportation were admitted by the Nazi-controlled Danish newspaper Jydske Tidende at Kolding (Jutland), which reported Wednesday that elaborate precautions for protection of Nazi railway personnel in Denmark were being taken. This newspaper added:

"Steel shields capable of resisting 11-m/m armor-piercing projectiles have been installed on the drivers' cabins of 80 locomotives on the state railways in Jutland, and will be provided for all locomotives on all Danish railway lines." (OWI)

DANES SEIZE 20,000 IDENTIFICATION CARDS

WASHINGTON, August 19 — The latest anti-German exploit reported from Denmark is the seizure of about 20,000 Billeder identification cards which the German occupation authorities had decreed must be carried by every Dane over the age of 15. The German-controlled Danish home radio said yesterday that a group of unidentified men had held up the Office of Statistics in Copenhagen yesterday afternoon and escaped with the cards. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 19 — Today's communiqué:

Allied Forces in Southern France: Continuing their rapid advance against relatively light opposition, troops of the 7th Army have enlarged their bridgehead in southern France to more than 1,000 square miles, and have progressed to within six miles of Toulon (9666).

Advances of several miles have been made by American units in the western and northwestern sectors on both sides of the Argens River valley. Towns occupied include Solliès-Pont (0125), La Roquebrussanne (0522), St. Gurcenit (0020), Brignoles (0120), Vins (0833), and Salernes (1447).

French troops have overcome the last enemy opposition in the Cap Benat area.

Allied Armies in Italy: Heavy rain fell on the front of the Allied Armies in Italy during 18 August. In Florence, troops of the 8th Army have virtually cleared the central portion of the town of snipers. On both sides of the upper Arno Valley, and in the Adriatic sector, British, Indian, and Polish troops have sent forward deep recce patrols. West of the Florence sector, the 5th Army and enemy patrols have been active.

Naval: At about midnight of August 17-18, a force of German motor torpedo-boats attempted to attack ships landing troops and stores in the south of France. The attack was repulsed by destroyers of the U. S. Navy, and after a spirited engagement four of the enemy craft were sunk. Some survivors were rescued.

A message from the Naval Commander, Vice Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, USN, sent late in the evening of 17 August, reports the success of the British and American naval aircraft flown from a force of seven British and two U. S. aircraft carriers operating off the beachhead under the command of Rear Admiral Thomas Troubridge with his flag in H. M. S. Royalist.

In the course of their mission, 16 trucks were destroyed on the ground and 35 damaged, together with two locomotives, 12 tank cars, and 20 freight cars. Enemy communications were also heavily attacked, railways being disrupted and roads blocked. There was considerable anti-aircraft fire, but no opposition from the air.

Minesweepers continued in good service off the beachhead, and the naval commander reports that the naval task of disembarking reinforcements and unloading stores from

VICHY GOVERNMENT REPORTED MOVING

WASHINGTON, August 19 — Petain's Vichy government is moving from Vichy to an unidentified new capital, Radio Berlin said today.

Evidence that the Germans do not feel any safer than their Vichy puppets is the German Overseas News agency report that Otto Abetz, German ambassador in Paris, and his embassy staff, have left the French capital for Germany.

Adding to the scare among the enemy was the announcement by Radio Tokyo yesterday that all Japanese have left Paris, ostensibly for Germany, where they think it might be safer. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 19 — To-day's communique:

Lead: The net around the German forces in Normandy was drawn tighter yesterday. American and British troops established contact near Briouze. From the west, an advance was made to approximately the line of the River Orne. Advances were also made toward the escape route of German troops streaming eastward in an attempt to avoid complete encirclement.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Forces moving to the south made progress east and west of Argentan against enemy opposition. The thrust down the Argentan road from the north took us to Pierre-Fitte. Our hold on Trun and the area near Chambois was extended eastward to Champeaux.

Further north, the advance was continued, and our troops have crossed both the River Dives and a river near Notre Dame D'Estrees. St. Julien le Faucon has been taken, and in the coastal area we have reached Dorule and the outskirts of Cabourg and Dives sur Mer. In the Dreux area, our troops have widened their bridgehead across the River Eure north and south of the city. Further south, Vendome has been freed.

The last enemy resistance on the north coast of Brittany has been overcome with the elimination of the German pocket in Lannion-Paimpol.

Air: Around-the-clock attacks by Allied air craft against enemy troops and transport, airfield, communication systems, and supply centers have been maintained from Thursday at midnight. The first attacks began with medium and light bombers harassing enemy movements on both sides of the upper Seine.

From first light on Friday, fighter-bombers and fighters repeatedly swept the area from the immediate battle front to east of the Seine and deep into Belgium and Holland. They destroyed or damaged many hundreds of railway cars and motor vehicles, especially at the mouth of the Normandy pocket.

A convoy of 500 vehicles was successfully attacked by rocket-firing fighters northeast of Trun, and a large number were destroyed or damaged. On the Seine, two river steamers and many barges were sunk.

At least 51 enemy aircraft were destroyed in combat or on the ground by fighters which had escorted heavy bombers to attack five key airfields at Metz, Nancy-Essey, Roye-Amy, St. Dizier, and Romilly sur Seine. Sixteen other enemy planes were shot down in single engagements near Beauvais.

Other heavy bombers struck at ships and oil storage tanks at Bordeaux, submarine shelters at La Pallice, fuel dumps at Ghent and Nancy sur Armancon, the railway center of Commentre, and bridges over the Meuse River at Maastricht, Namur, and Huy.

Heavy and medium bombers made three coordinated attacks on an important ammunition dump in the forest of L'Isle Adam, north of Paris. Rail embankments at Verberie, Goumay, and Rivecourt, and a fuel dump at Valenton, were attacked by other medium and light bombers.

Last night, bombers and fighters, working in close support of our troops, dropped flares on enemy forces retreating eastward from the Falaise area, and continued to harry them.

From all these operations, 39 of our aircraft are missing. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 19 — Saturday night's communique:

During August 18, southeast of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting an important highway junction, the town and railway station of Telushkiye, and also occupied over 30 other populated localities, including Manitsye, Taurita, Sultany, Bamuri, Sikun, and Kodi.

North of Kruspils, on the western Dvina, our troops, surmounting enemy resistance, occupied in fighting over 50 populated localities, including Dauste, Pramenti, Ivani, Terzaune, Turne, Vathonstuva, Rumchiki, Jankani, and Jantuslava, and the railway stations of Jaunstava and Jaunslava.

During August 18, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 208 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 48 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 19 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On July 2, one of the Garibaldi Brigades captured a German train near Cirie, in the Province of Turin, and seized seven 75 m/m and three 100 m/m cannons with a small expenditure of ammunition. Elements of the same brigade ambushed an enemy column the next day on the Milan-Turin highway. Patriots killed 40 German soldiers, and destroyed an armored car in the fighting that followed. Patriots of two other Garibaldi Brigades, who were attacked by a strong enemy unit, fought bravely, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy. Patriots attacked the Nazi-Fascist garrisons of Vestme, Lange, and Airali, and seized arms and munitions depots.

During the first half of July, Patriots of the Val Camonica disarmed the garrisons of Ceve, and occupied Isola, inflicting losses on the enemy. When Patriots were menaced by the return of heavy enemy forces, they dispersed in small groups in the Cedegolo sector.

During this same period, Patriots destroyed the Fascist offices in the Pavia sector, and those situated at Copiano, San Zenone, Torre Vecchia, Bornasco, Marsano, Filighera, Cura, and Roncaro.

Italian and French Patriots control the Alpine passes Piccolo San Bernardo, Col dell'Arco, and Monginevra. Patriots garrison several towns in the Genoa sector, including the port of Diano Marina.

During the first two weeks of August, approximately 800 Patriots fell in fighting. Nazi-Fascist forces suffered serious losses. Desertions from Nazi-Fascist forces are becoming more common each day.

During a clash which took place in the Bergamo sector, Del Bello, head of a group of Patriots, was killed. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 19 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, the planned disengagement movements across the Orne and the Dives towards the east had to be carried out in fighting with the enemy, who pushed from the north into the area of Trun. Heavy tank battles took place there yesterday. In the area northeast of Chartres, enemy thrusts were halted to the north of the town, our security forces along the Seine, are engaged in fighting with the foremost American reconnaissance troops at Mantes and Vernon.

In southern France, the enemy reinforced his beachhead, several enemy attacks supported by tanks on the land front at Toulon were smashed. Yesterday the enemy lost 22 planes in dogfights over Normandy and the occupied western territory. In the waters off the beachhead in southern France, an enemy transport of 6,000 tons was seriously damaged by bombers.

The retaliation fire on London is being continued.

In Italy, fighting activities flared up yesterday, particularly in the sector of the Adriatic coast; several enemy thrusts with tank support were warded off there.

On the Lower Dniester, several renewed Soviet attempts at crossing the river were frustrated. In the Carpathian foothills, Hungarian troops took dominating heights to the southwest of Delatyn.

In the Vistula bridgehead, to the west of Baranow,

North, west, and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops successfully repulsed strong enemy tank and infantry attacks, and inflicted on the enemy heavy losses in men and material.

West and southwest of Bialystok, our troops continued to advance, and occupied over 80 populated localities, including Poikye, Nanzbeine, Kolomeya, Shahikulaki, Zvertsevo, Zalyesye, Chizhev, and Shmelevo, and the railway stations of Charnovo-Unde, Polaki, and Chizhev.

East and northeast of Praga, our troops repelled enemy tank and infantry attacks, and in the course of fighting improved their positions.

North of Sandomir, our troops were carring out successful operations of annihilation of the encircled enemy groups. In tightening the ring, they occupied the following populated localities: Kamurno, Penchiny, Punkovitse, Velchitse, Dulgovitse, Frahluv, and Kamen. At the same time, our troops repulsed tank and infantry attacks of the enemy, who was trying to break-through the encirclement from the north to relieve the trapped Germans. In the course of fighting, the enemy suffered heavy losses in men and material.

On all other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

In the Vistula bridgehead, to the west of Baranow, enemy resistance against our attacking troops has increased considerably. To the northeast of Warsaw, the enemy opened an attack on a broad front, supported by tanks and battle planes, but achieved only slight successes as a result of our stubborn defense and the counter-attacks which set in immediately. To both sides of Vilkovishkis, the Soviets continued their breakthrough attacks with strong infantry and tank forces; these attacks were also frustrated, and the enemy suffered high losses; a few dents were sealed up. Heavy enemy attacks on the Latvian front in the Modohn sector collapsed; counter-attacks against some penetrations are in progress. In Estonia, the heavy, fluctuating fighting to the west of Lake Pskov is continuing. Soviet groups of forces which had broken through were annihilated in the course of counter-attacks. Escort vessels of a German convoy sank two Soviet E-boats and heavily damaged a third in north Norwegian waters.

American bombers again attacked Ploesti; four enemy planes were brought down.

Yesterday, a weaker enemy bomber formation attacked the town area of Metz. Bremen was the target of a British terror attack in the night. Damage was caused and casualties were inflicted. A minor aircraft formation dropped bombs on the Rhenish - Westphalian territory and on the Reichscapital. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

Southern France: Commenting on the situation on the coast of southern France, competent German quarters make the following claims: In the mountains and on the coast, grim fighting is in progress for strongpoints. The Allies tried to broaden their beachhead by fresh landing operations on both sides of Toulon and by attacks launched from Cannes in a northerly direction. Strong airborne forces were dropped on the valley north of the Monts des Maures. German reserves advance toward the beachhead on a broad front. The first encounters resulted in fierce fighting, which is in full swing.

French Bolshevist Militia: From Algiers it is learned, according to the German Radio, that a Bolshevist militia of 100,000 men is being formed in France, anticipating a future Bolshevist army. Gaullist officers participated for months in training courses held in Moscow.

Bonomi Takes Over Three Provinces: When the Italian provinces of Rome, Frosinone, and Littoria, up to now under Allied administration, were taken over by the Bonomi Government, a high official declared: « We are fed up; let people look for their own food. »

Russian Terror: Refugees crossing the German-Lithuanian frontier from Russian-occupied territory are quoted as to the « terror regime » there. All food stores are looted and all men fit for work are deported. All who fail to surrender their property to the Red soldiers are shot, according to these reports.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Luftwaffe in Normandy: Formations of German battle planes on Saturday continued their attacks on Allied troops and columns in the Falaise-Argentan area.

The Allies suffered losses in men and material, especially in low-level attacks against British-Canadian vehicle columns, and also gun emplacements. Allied planes shot down Friday over the invasion area and west of France total 44.

The Drive on Paris: The German correspondent Walter Ploetz reports that formations of the American 3d Army have launched a new south to north thrust from the Dreux area. But he says that they are not moving any nearer to Paris for the time being. However, he also says that the Americans have sent forward tank reconnaissance formations from the area of Etampes eastward toward the Seine. These were held up by German bolt formations.

Eastern Front: The correspondent Karl Bluecher says: « The battle for Warsaw has been resumed by the Russians with a new large-scale attack. Fighting has become livelier along the whole eastern front, from the lower Dniester up to the Esthonian lakes. » The three focal battles rage around: Warsaw, the East Prussian frontier, and Latvia-Esthonia.

FASCIST RADIO

Violent encounters are reported from the Pontassieve region and artillery activity along the lower reaches of the Arno. Allied thrusts, carried out with armor support in the Adriatic sector, were neutralized by the German defence. In Florence, « Black Brigade » units are still fighting in the outskirts of the town.

WAR FRONTS

- BATTLE OF NORMANDY IS WON - GERMANY'S POWER TO RESIST IS ENDED

SHAEF, August 18 — Late tonight, as American armored columns approached Paris, a senior staff officer at General Montgomery's headquarters made this announcement:

The battle of Normandy is won. The power of the enemy actually to resist is gone. From now on, the Germans will be unable to conduct anything but strong rearguard actions, and there will now be a phase of pursuit battles.

American conduct of battle has been extremely far-sighted. General Omar Bradley has refused to be diverted from his primary objective and has insisted on fighting the main battle instead of concentrating his efforts in Brittany.

The Germans no longer have an army north of the Seine. They have drawn upon the 15th Army to such an extent, in an effort to reinforce the 7th Army, that there are estimated to be only 10 divisions beyond the river. There are bicycling. The Germans are herding French civilians into the roads along which they are retreating, in an effort to prevent strafing by Allied planes.

Of all the divisions which Rommel committed to the Normandy front, the Allies have contacted about 40 divisions, at least half of which have lost their identity or have been almost entirely wiped out. There has been no indication of German troops being sent south to stem the Allied advance in the Riviera.

Canadian and Polish troops have further tightened their grip on the northern edge of the escape gap, and are now on high ground south of Trun. Belgian and Dutch contingents are now in action along side the Canadian 1st Army. Polish troops pushing on beyond Trun to the north and east have captured Les Champeaux. Other forces driving southeast of Trun were reported to be half-way to Chamboix.

Canadian and American positions on opposite sides of the Falaise-Argentan escape corridor were so close that air attacks on the retreating German columns were hampered. The bomb line was so precise that there was great danger of Allied planes' hitting Allied troops.

More Enemy Planes

Press dispatches reported that the Germans are sending up fighters in larger numbers. More than 60 were encountered by a Polish squadron near Beauvais, directly north of Paris, and strong formations were also beaten off at Bernay, Evreux, Lisieux, and Falaise, while trying to cover the retreat of the German 7th Army. Sixteen enemy planes were shot down.

North of Mezidon, the Allies have reached a line on the Dives River as far north as Bures. In this area, Bavent, Barron, and Norrey en Auge have been liberated. A general advance of four to six miles has been made along a 30-mile front from Mezidon to the sea. Varaville, two miles from the English Channel, was reached. Other columns have pushed on to cross the River Vie.

The German coastal salient between the Orne and the Dives Rivers is now untenable.

Today's communique announced that the city of Vendome, southwest of Orleans, had been liberated. There was no late news concerning the position of the American 3d Army around Orleans, Chartres, or Dreux. (German news agency reports stated that American forces had reached Rambouillet, less than 24 miles from Paris, and Epernon, on the Chartres-Versailles highway.)

Allied troops advancing from Flers in the central Normandy front have moved northeast to take the important road junction of Athis, and have driven farther east to cross the River Rouvre, east of La Carneille. East of the Orne River, British forces have pushed southward to Bapilly.

Fighter-bombers yesterday swept the whole area from the pocket to the Seine, shooting up German transport. Only American conduct of battle has been extremely far-sighted. General Omar Bradley has refused to be diverted from his primary objective, and has insisted on fighting the main battle instead of concentrating his efforts in Brittany.

The Germans no longer have an army north of the Seine. They have drawn upon the 15th Army to such an extent, in an effort to reinforce the 7th Army, that there are estimated to be only 10 divisions beyond the river. There are no signs of German preparations to hold the Seine, nor have the Germans the manpower to do so.

Germany's power of effective resistance in France has gone. (BBC)

S.S. UNITS IN NORMANDY TRAP ORDERED TO ESCAPE «AT ALL COSTS»

SHAEF, August 18 — SS units fighting in Normandy have been ordered to get out of the Allied trap «at all costs.» It was reported late tonight that this order is creating a serious breach between the Wehrmacht and SS. The SS formations are doing everything possible to keep intact and get away, leaving ordinary troops to fight as rear guard units and fend for themselves as best they can against the steel ring closing in around them.

The German retreat from the Argentan-Trun escape gap was described here as a «chaotic withdrawal» northeastward to Rouen. The remnants of the German 7th Army which are filtering through the gap are being pounded with shells and bombs. As many as 500 hastily-mustered barges are said to be waiting to ferry them across to the northern bank of the Seine, where the German 15th Army is deployed from Le Havre to Paris to defend the flying bomb sites.

Withdrawing troops are traveling in every available French or German vehicle, but they are mainly walking or on high ground south of Trun. Belgian and Dutch contingents are now in action along side the Canadian 1st Army. Polish troops pushing on beyond Trun to the north and east have captured Les Champeaux. Other forces driving southeast of Trun were reported to be half-way to Chambois.

Canadian and American positions on opposite sides of the Falaise-Argentan escape corridor were so close that air attacks on the retreating German columns were hampered. The bomb line was so precise that there was great danger of Allied planes hitting Allied troops.

More Enemy Planes

Press dispatches reported that the Germans are sending up fighters in larger numbers. More than 60 were encountered by a Polish squadron near Beauvais, directly north of Paris, and strong formations were also seen off at Bernay, Evreux, Lisieux, and Falaise, while trying to cover the retreat of the German 7th Army. Sixteen enemy planes were shot down.

North of Mezidon, the Allies have reached a line on the Dives River as far north as Hiers. In this area, Bavent, Berrou, and Norrey en Auge have been liberated. A general advance of four to six miles has been made along a 30-mile front from Mezidon to the sea. Varaville, two miles from the English Channel, was reached. Other columns have pushed on to cross the River Vie.

The German coastal salient between the Orne and the Dives Rivers is now untenable.

Today's communique announced that the city of Vendome, southwest of Orleans, had been liberated. There was no late news concerning the position of the American 3d Army around Orleans, Chartres, or Dreux. (German news agency reports stated that American forces had reached Rambouillet, less than 24 miles from Paris, and Epernon, on the Chartres-Versailles highway.)

Allied troops advancing from Flers in the central Normandy front have moved northeast to take the important road junction of Athis, and have driven farther east to cross the River Rouore, east of La Carneille. East of the Orne River, British forces have pushed southward to Rapilly.

Fighter-bombers yesterday swept the whole area from the pocket to the Seine, shooting up German transport. Only

A BBC correspondent reported that more than 1,800 German transports were destroyed, 70 German tanks were completely destroyed, and 80 seriously damaged. The broadcast described this as the biggest blow delivered in one day to a mechanized army.

On the Brittany Peninsula, all enemy resistance in the town of St. Malo has ceased. There are no reports concerning the activity at Brest or Lorient.

QUEEN WILHELMINA'S MESSAGE TO DUTCH TROOPS

LONDON, August 18 — Queen Wilhelmina, in a message to Dutch troops tonight, on the eve of their entry into action in Normandy, said:

For four years you have longed for this moment.

May God bless you and your arms. (Reuter)

ALLIED AIR FLEETS BOMB RETREATING GERMANS

LONDON, August 18 — Allied war planes harried German troops both west and east of the Seine escape barrier today, and smashed a comeback attempt of the German Air Force by shooting down 23 enemy planes in a series of air battles.

Heavy bombers attacked five air bases in France, and fuel storage depots in the Paris area. RAF bombers bombed Mannheim last night, and today attacked a flying bomb depot at L'Isle d'Adam, 16 miles north of Paris.

Between 1,500 and 2,000 German vehicles were destroyed near Troarn today in one of the greatest tactical air blows in history. Rocket-firing Typhoons and Spitfires and Mustangs over the Canadian Army front flew a shuttle service from their airfields to the narrow mouth of the Normandy pocket, where the Germans had in broad daylight packed thousands of vehicles on the roads leading east. The attacks were still proceeding this evening.

Correspondents said the Germans were violating all military rules about vehicle spacing, and transport of all kinds was wheel-to-wheel trying to withdraw through the still unclosed Argentan-Falaise gap along three secondary roads. They were apparently taking a chance that the low cloud ceiling would protect them from American armed reconnaissance planes. They were spotted, however, by a squadron of the 9th AAF, which dropped through the clouds late in the afternoon and reported the biggest road movement in the German army they had ever seen, including the St. Lo and Avranches withdrawals. The three German columns were subjected to a merciless strafing after pilots had bombed the columns at head and at the end. There was no sign of the Luftwaffe during all the strafing, and the German columns were unable to unlimber more than a few pieces of light anti-aack against the attackers.

Meanwhile, a force of 8th USAAF Liberators went for one enemy air field 65 miles north of Paris, followed by a second force of several hundred Flying Fortresses and Liberators which attacked four more: Metz, Nancy-Essy, Saint Dizier, and Romilly sur Seine. Other targets in the day's operations were at Pocy-sur-Armançon and Lameurville.

during the previous two years, 8,500 were destroyed in the air, and 1,150 on the ground. Against this, 2,900 Allied bombers and 2,000 fighters have been lost, and about 31,000 8th USAAF airmen are officially listed as killed or missing in the past two years. In 301,000 sorties, nearly 300,000 tons of bombs were dropped on enemy targets in Europe.

SHERMANS IN FRANCE HAVE 105-MM. HOWITZERS

WASHINGTON, August 18 — A new version of the American Sherman tank, carrying a 105-millimeter howitzer, is now in action in France.

The United States War Department said today that the 105 is the biggest gun ever mounted on a medium tank, and that the combination of howitzer and Sherman has proved to be master of any German tank now in the field. (OWI)

AMERICAN BRIGADIER KILLED

WASHINGTON, August 18 — Brigadier General James E. Wharton was killed in action in France on August 12, the War Department announced last night. His assignment had not been announced.

General Wharton was assistant commander of the 18th Infantry Division at Camp Forrest, Tennessee, before he was sent overseas last October. He was the seventh American general to be killed in action in the present war. (OWI)

7TH ARMY, SIX MILES FROM TOULON, MAKES GENERAL ADVANCES OF UP TO FIVE MILES

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 18 — Seventh Army troops have thrust to within six miles of the great French naval base of Toulon, as Tactical Air Force bombers swarmed over the harbor to silence the great guns of the crippled French battleship Strasbourg, hurling ton-weight projectiles at American troops making their way down the fertile Gapeau Valley.

The American forces, pushing down toward the coast after a wide inland sweep around the resort town of Hyeres, have reached the vicinity of Sollies Pont, a small town situated on the rolling hills overlooking the waters of the Bay of Garonne.

To stave off the capture of the threatened port, the Germans have converted the partly dismantled former French battleship Strasbourg into a formidable coastal defense battery, pointed up this tiny valley descending to the sea.

Mitchell bombers have subjected the huge 702-foot dreadnought to a heavy air bombardment, in which direct hits set off great explosions and columns of fire. The French cruiser La Galissonnerie, and a submarine in the harbor of Toulon were also bombed.

Further north, but also on the western edge of the bridgehead, American forces have advanced five miles to the Brignoles area, and to within 33 miles of France's largest port, Marseilles. The town of Brignoles, which has a population of 4,700, is 22½ miles inland, and is seven miles northwest of Besse, captured yesterday, along a winding road through the St. Baume Mountains.

Other advances were made on the northeastern end of the bridgehead, where Allied troops made gains of three miles both west and southwest of Draguignan.

German General Captured

A second German general has been captured, taken prisoner as he cowered in a foxhole for protection against American shelling. The German commander professed to know little or nothing of the disastrous turn of the war against Germany, and expressed amazement when told of Allied advances in Normandy and Brittany, and the Russian invasion of East Prussia. This is the second German general captured in the past two days in southern France.

Other targets in the day's operations were at Pacy-sur-Armacon and Laneuveville.

Continuous strafing and bombing by Allied air forces of the roads leading west to the Seine was reported by SHAEF and front-line dispatches. Allied air reports this morning said that only one bridge was in operation over the Seine west of Paris, and pontoon bridges are under constant air assault.

Luftwaffe in Strength

The Germans are reported to be massing 500 barges and ferries in the stream to remove their forces. Allied airmen kept a close watch to break up any such attempts, said an Associated Press dispatch. In a vain effort to stop the Allied air attacks on the German 7th Army's retreat towards the Seine, the Germans threw several hundred fighters into the air. It was the first time for weeks that the carefully hoarded Luftwaffe came up in strength, and they tried to strafe Allied armor and infantry.

American fighters met 20 or more around Paris and Beauvais and shot down seven, while a Polish Mustang squadron of the RAF downed 16 from a flight of 60 Focke Wulfs.

German flying bombs were sent over southern England and the London area for a short period last night.

German General Captured

A second German general has been captured, taken prisoner as he cowered in a foxhole for protection against American shelling. The German commander professed to know little or nothing of the disastrous turn of the war against Germany, and expressed amazement when told of Allied advances in Normandy and Brittany, and the Russian invasion of East Prussia. This is the second German general captured in the past two days in southern France.

More than 7,000 prisoners have already been taken. Allied casualties in killed and missing were less than 300 up to noon yesterday, it was reported.

The Allied beachhead, which has spread over more than 500 square miles and liberated at least 14 French towns in the course of three swiftly-paced days, was described officially as the largest created in any combined operation in a comparable period in this war.

The last pocket of enemy resistance along the coastal strip of more than 50 miles in Allied hands was crushed yesterday when an Allied battleship shattered the massive mediaeval fortress on the island of Port Cros, guarding the main channel into the Bay of Hyeres.

Allied naval craft fired a total of 15,000 shells of 5-inch calibre and larger in the preliminary half-hour naval bombardment of the beach defences and subsequent support action, it was announced today. Of this number, about 12,500 shells of major calibre — 12-inch or over, and up to a ton in weight — were fired by heavy units of the combined British, American, French, and Canadian navies which supported the landings.

Allied naval forces have sunk a total of seven enemy craft in waters around the beachhead, according to latest figures. Allied forces yesterday overtook and sank two enemy corvettes off [redacted] Crossette, southeast of Marseilles, and it is now reported that Allied minesweepers, clearing a way for the initial assault forces, sank three enemy E-boats on D-day.

With Allied reinforcements pouring over the beaches in an uninterrupted stream, and with three battle-tried American divisions spearheading the advance on land, the German defenders of the immediate Toulon-Cannes area, identified as the German 242d and 148th infantry divisions, seem faced with hopeless odds. Allied air bombardments of roads, railway lines, bridges, and depots have effectively cut those hard-pressed enemy troops from reinforcements or supplies.

Three Veteran U.S. Divisions

Three American divisions which fought through the North African, Sicilian, and Italian campaigns are leading the battle front in southern France. They are the 45th, the 36th, and the 3d — classified as among the finest in the American Army.

The 3d Division fought in France during the last war, and gained from Marshal Phillipe Joffre the title of «Rock of the Marne» for its rôle in the great battle which turned back the German push toward Paris.

All three of these divisions took part in the liberation of Rome.

American airborne forces under command of Major General Robert F. Frederick, which also took part in the Rome battle, are also engaged in the Riviera fight.

Enemy Aerodromes Neutralized

Wellington bombers, assisted by British and South African Halifaxes and Liberators, attacked the main Nod aerodromes at Valence just before the Allies' landings in southern France, and allowed not a single one of the Heinkels, JU-88's and Dorniers based there to attack the massive Allied armada, it was announced here today.

The successful attack, it was said, was one of the biggest air jobs in the Mediterranean war.

MAAF Accuracy Praised

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean Theatre, and Major General Alexander Patch, commanding the 7th Army, have sent a message to Lieut. General Ira Eaker, commander of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, commending the «superb accuracy» of the air attacks supporting the beachhead operations on the Riviera.

FRENCH NAVY ASSISTED IN LANDINGS

ALGIERS, August 18 — An important French naval force under the command of Rear Admiral Lemonnier is assisting Vice Admiral Hewitt, commander of the Allied naval landing forces in southern France, it was announced here late yesterday.

This naval force is comprised of a battleship, a number of cruisers, light cruisers, and numerous auxiliary ships, all manned by 17,000 French sailors.

Following the success of the initial landings, U.S. Navy Secretary James Forrestal sent congratulations to the French Navy Commissioner, Louis Jacquinot, hailing «the memorable day of August 15, which brought the French and American navies together for the liberation of France.» Jacquinot, in reply, expressed the warm thanks of the French Navy.

I [redacted]sure you will prove yourselves worthy of all that awaits you.»

The roadstead into which the troopship entered was crowded with other troopships, landing craft, naval ships, and merchantmen. The unloading proceeded busily, swiftly, and quietly. The only enemy attempt to interfere with the landings was an unsuccessful attack by six aircraft which dropped bombs near some ships, but few casualties were reported.

The crossing was uneventful, with perfect weather. There was no sign of enemy or aircraft except for the attack at the roadstead.

The French troops, on going ashore from their landing craft, marched six miles before they reached their first bivouac area on French soil.

Describing his journey over a narrow mountainous road beyond the coastal strip, the UNN correspondent pointed out how the Germans had utterly failed to take advantage of the fine natural defense offered among deep valleys, hillsides forested with oak, cork, and pine trees, and along roads that sometimes skirted sheer precipices.

«The Allied breaching of the German defenses of southern France,» wrote the correspondent, «exploded whatever remained of the repeated Nazi myth of 'Fortress Europe' ringed with 'impregnable defense works.' It showed Germany unable to deploy enough men and guns to use the excellent natural obstacles to invasion which nature had placed lavishly at her disposal.» Good positions, he added, are in profusion throughout the 500 square miles of territory now firmly in Allied control only two days after the first wave of liberating troops were beached.

F.F.I. CAPTURE ANNEMASSE GARRISON

GENEVA, August 18 — The entire German garrison at Annemasse, near the Franco-Swiss border, capitulated to the Maquis today, announced the Journal de Geneve. The Germans had planned to hold up the clearing of the border by the FFI by sending about 1,000 Germans — the last organized German group in the Saleve district — to take up positions in Annemasse. They had converted an Annemasse hotel into a stronghold, and were preparing to make a desperate stand.

A detachment of about 5,000 men of the FFI took the heights dominating Annemasse and surrounded the hotel. The FFI told the Germans that reinforcements could not reach them. Late this morning, some 450 members of the German Army and Elite Guards forming the garrison capitulated, and the French flag was hoisted over the hotel. The last German stronghold in an area of 120 square miles had fallen.

After 36 hours of coordinated operations in the Haute Savoie, the FFI have driven the Germans from a rough triangle some 50 miles long at its base and 25 miles deep. French Patriots now hold the entire Franco-Swiss border from Veyrier to Saint Julien, said the Tribune de Geneve. An Associated Press dispatch reported that the 39-man German garrison at St. Gingolph, on the Swiss border 30 miles northeast of Annemasse, surrendered to the FFI at 1000 hours this morning.

Control Toulouse Area

In widespread operations in southern France, the FFI have occupied the Pyrenees towns of Oloron and Orthez, southeast and east of Bayonne, and are in control of the area surrounding Toulouse. Mauleon, 24 miles southeast of Bayonne, which was taken by the French Patriots, was later reconquered by the Germans. The Maquis have now almost encircled the German relief column, however.

MEN AND SUPPLIES POUR ASHORE IN RIVIERA

WITH FRENCH FORCES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE, August 18 — American and French reinforcements, equipment, and supplies continued to pour into southern France yesterday, a United Nations News correspondent reported. The waterfront in the landing zone was teeming with activity. Columns of marching men, armored trucks, as well as staff cars and jeeps, were rapidly moving inland over dusty roads as the Allied advance continued to build up and drive on.

French forces sweeping into their homeland were eager to expel the Nazis and were confident of success. The French commander, General de Lattre de Tassigny, expressed satisfaction with the effectiveness of the operations which developed methodically and rapidly according to plan.

Addressing the French officers and men aboard a troopship before they debarked, General de Tassigny said: «The hour our hearts have turned to for so long has come. Our hearts and souls must make us worthy of France, which awaits us with so much fervor and so much love.

Germany unable to deploy enough men and guns to use the excellent natural obstacles to invasion which nature had placed lavishly at her disposal.» Good positions, he added, are in profusion throughout the 500 square miles of territory now firmly in Allied control only two days after the first wave of liberating troops were beached. Road and rail traffic in the Basses Alpes has been stopped by sabotage, according to a report from General Koenig's headquarters. French Resistance Forces took Egleton, in Correz, by assault. The Germans have evacuated the garrisons of Aurillac in Cantal, and Privas in Ardeche, after several days' fighting. As reprisals they destroyed two villages by aerial bombing in the department of Drome. Maquis activity is such that the enemy cannot enter its borders. In the Vichy area, the patriots have almost complete control.

As a result of these activities, the German High Command in France has ordered the German garrisons to withdraw from small towns, and to concentrate in the larger towns and cities, holding open communications between important centers at all costs.

A correspondent with the Maquis forces near Nantes described the Maquis forces as a first class army. «They have almost perfect discipline,» he said. «Their officers include young men who were still at famous French military and air academies when France fell in 1940. Their communications are astounding. Basically, they use radio sets dropped by parachutes many months ago. The sets are completely mobile, and after transmitting for some minutes, the operators pack up, and move miles before continuing their messages.

«Maquis operations are almost always carried out at night,» said the correspondent. «The commander of one

Maquis battalion does not know where the attack will come from. It is enough to say that they are masterful. No foolish or impossible operations are undertaken. The Maquis go in good force. They attack vital spots. They always seem to know which bridge, if blown up, will most embarrass the Germans. For the Germans it is a battle within a battle." (Reuter - OWI)

CHURCHILL WANTED TO LAND

ABOARD INVASION FLAGSHIP, SOUTHERN FRANCE, August 18 — A delayed dispatch from a Reuter correspondent stated that Prime Minister Churchill, who watched the landings in the South of France, was very anxious to land on one of the beachheads on D-day, but it was deemed unwise to let him go ashore at that stage of the invasion. ALLIED FOOD FOR SOUTH OF FRANCE

ADVANCED AFHQ, August 18 — The 7th Army headquarters have organised a civil affairs bureau which, in co-operation with the French local authorities, has taken initial steps to bring in food and supplies to the liberated areas in the south of France, it was stated here.

Following the pattern established in treating with French officials on the spot, Bureau chiefs have taken initial steps to provide an average daily ration of 2,000 calories for each person, largely from local stocks at hand.

These stocks will be inadequate, it was said today, and must be augmented by supplies from the United States and from North Africa. The bread ration under the last days of the German administration was said to have fallen to 100 grams. (PRO)

UNITED NATIONS RADIO SPEAKS TO GERMAN TROOPS

ALGIERS, August 18 — The United Nations radio broadcasting from here has called on the Germans to surrender as the only sane course of action open to them.

"Lay down your arms now," the radio said. "You are being outwitted and outfought. Your opponents are better equipped and more numerous, and landings in southern France are still going on." The message concluded with:

"Italian Patriots are cutting off your supplies from Italy, and French Maquis are now operating at your rear." (GWB)

RED ARMY CAPTURES SANDOMIERZ, ADVANCES TOWARD CRACOW AND SILESIA

MOSCOW, August 18 — The Red Army has captured Sandomierz, German stronghold on the Vistula, along the Russian 1st Ukrainian Front, enlarged their bridgehead across the river to 75 miles and tonight advanced 27 miles toward Cracow and German Silesia. The taking of Sandomierz was announced in an order of the day to Marshal Konlev by Marshal Joseph Stalin tonight.

In the East Prussian sector the half-circle shaped border tonight was ringed by fires of burning German towns, set by the Germans to prevent their being used by the Red Army. The Soviet forces poised for the smash at East Prussia are already shooting and killing Germans on German soil as Russian snipers fire across the border and the Red Air Force continue their attacks on German defenses.

A Reuter correspondent said that the Germans are fighting fanatically for every inch of soil before the full tide of the Soviet offensive against the German territory begins. The River Sesuppe was swollen with dead German bodies, the NBC correspondent stated.

ENEMY WORRIED BY ALLIED THRUST ACROSS ARNO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 18 — German forces are becoming increasingly apprehensive of 5th Army action all along the seaward stretches of the Arno River, and are resorting to heavy artillery fire to bolster their defenses of this water barrier to the Goth Line, it was announced here today.

In return fire, 5th Army guns and mortars have knocked out one of the enemy's self-propelled guns, and have destroyed four enemy boats being readied along the north banks of the winding Arno River.

On the 8th Army front, patrols yesterday probed defenses around the road and rail center of Pontassieve, eight miles east of Florence at the Arno's great southern bend, and penetrated 2½ miles northeast of the town without encountering enemy forces. Troops of an Indian division entered the village of Ugnano, 1½ miles southeast of Pontassieve, without finding any indication of enemy forces.

North of Arezzo, at Talla, slight enemy shellfire was encountered yesterday, although troops of an Indian division were able to occupy nearby high ground without any difficulty in this sector, roughly 10 miles north of the key Arno Valley town. Other Indian patrols farther east found the villages of Calle and San Pol, on the Singerna River, a tributary of the upper Tiber, unoccupied. Still other 8th Army patrols reached the village of Pianello, on a tributary of the Metauro River, and 11 miles north of Gubbio, also without making contact with enemy forces.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish patrol forces continue their forays north of the Cesano River. (PRO)

EMERGENCY BRIDGES BEING BUILT IN FLORENCE

FLORENCE, August 18 — Where the famous old Ponte Santa Trinita formerly spanned the Arno River, one of Florence's six magnificent old bridges, there is now only a Bailey bridge to allow traffic transport into the city.

When the Allies arrived on the southern bank of the city on August 4, they found that the Germans had demolished five bridges and rendered the Ponte Vecchio useless. Allied engineers, however, with a great deal of zeal and determination, planned the construction of an emergency bridge to be erected as soon as the area had been cleared of enemy fire.

Three days ago, work as it started, and without working nights the engineers completed the task at 1800 hours yesterday. The task entailed spanning the river for a distance of 350 feet from bank to bank. As the work progressed, thousands of Florentines stood by to watch, and at the climax last evening a huge crowd cheered as the colonel in charge of operations crossed the bridge in a jeep, cutting the ribbon in traditional ceremonial style, while making a trial run.

This bridge was erected on two of the old arches of the Santa Trinita, and engineers told the UNN correspondent that the work had been very difficult as the surface arches had worked into an almost steel-like durability after 500 years of traffic. It was impratical to blast the tops of the arches for fear of irreparably damaging arches already several shaken by the demolitions by the enemy.

"Trinity," is the name given to the new bridge.

Work on other bridges is already in progress, and operations are progressing without much difficulties and danger.

As evening fell last night enemy snipers were already busy and stern steps are necessary to eliminate this nuisance. In addition, just before the first bridge was built, a nearby areas in the south of France, it was stated here.

Following the pattern established in treating with French officials on the spot, Bureau chiefs have taken initial steps to provide an average daily ration of 2,000 calories for each person, largely from local stocks at hand.

These stocks will be inadequate, it was said today, and must be augmented by supplies from the United States and from North Africa. The bread ration under the last days of the German administration was said to have fallen to 100 grams. (PRO)

UNITED NATIONS RADIO SPEAKS TO GERMAN TROOPS

ALGIERS, August 18 — The United Nations radio broadcasting from here has called on the Germans to surrender as the only sane course of action open to them.

«Lay down your arms now,» the radio said. «You are being outwitted and outfought. Your opponents are better equipped and more numerous, and landings in southern France are still going on.» The message concluded with:

«Italian Patriots are cutting off your supplies from Italy, and French Maquis are now operating at your rear.» (JWB)

RED ARMY CAPTURES SANDOMIERZ, ADVANCES TOWARD CRACOW AND SILESIA

MOSCOW, August 18 — The Red Army has captured Sandomierz, German stronghold on the Vistula along the Russian 1st Ukrainian Front, enlarged their bridehead across the river to 75 miles, and tonight advanced 32 miles toward Cracow and German Silesia. The taking of Sandomierz was announced in an order of the day to Marshal Koniev by Marshal Joseph Stalin tonight.

In the East Prussian sector the half-circle shaped border tonight was ringed by fires of burning German towns, set by the Germans to prevent their being used by the Red Army. The Soviet forces poised for the smash at East Prussia are already shooting and killing Germans on German soil as Russian snipers fire across the border and the Red Air Force continue their attacks on German defenses.

A Reuter correspondent said that the Germans are fighting fanatically for every inch of soil before the full tide of the Soviet offensive against the German territory begins. The River Sesupe was swollen with dead German bodies, the NBC correspondent stated.

Advance in North

Tonight's Soviet communique reported further Russian successes to the north, where Red Army forces forced the channel connecting Lakes Chudskoye and Pskov between the villages of Pnyevo on the east bank and Mehikoorma on the west bank. These forces immediately joined the Soviet formations advancing along the western shore of Lake Pskov from Petseri.

The two forces are now moving north and west toward Dorpat (Tartu) in the direction of the Gulf of Finland. Eighty inhabited localities were liberated by the Russians in this drive.

In the «inside-outside» battle of Warsaw, the Germans were forced to withdraw from the area of the old town yesterday, leaving behind them numerous driverless tanks, the Polish Telegraph Agency reported.

German panzer and grenadier units were said to be streaming out of the Polish capital in a futile drive to break through the Russian front. Moscow said the wedge driven into Russian lines was being narrowed steadily.

More than 100 miles south of Warsaw, Russian troops have taken more than 20 localities westward of Sandomierz, where the battle continued bitterly in the cellars and the houses of the Vistula River town. (Reuter - TASS)

North of Arezzo, at Talla, slight enemy shellfire was encountered yesterday, although troops of an Indian division were able to occupy nearby high ground without any difficulty in this sector, roughly 10 miles north of the key Arno Valley town. Other Indian patrols further east found the villages of Colle and San Pol, on the Singerna River, a tributary of the upper Tiber, unoccupied. Still other 8th Army patrols reached the village of Biagello, on a tributary of the Metauro River, and 11 miles north of Gubbio, also without making contact with enemy forces.

Florence Returning to Normal

A UNN correspondent reported tonight that the part of Florence free from the enemy is rapidly returning to normal. Allied Military Government officers are working at top speed to feed the populace and restore public health services such as water, sanitation, and hospitals.

AMG has announced that two water points had been set up for public use. Three days ago there was practically no water for citizens of Florence. Now there are 2½ gallons available per person daily. Allied engineers were concentrating on restoration of the water mains destroyed by the Germans, and within a very short time unlimited water will be available for the populace.

The correspondent noted that shops in the city were removing their shutters, and it is expected that when the religious period ends August 20, a majority of the commercial houses will be reopened. Sufficient currency is available for the city's normal business until the banks reopen.

All municipal departments are working normally, and the cleaning of the debris left by the Germans is proceeding rapidly. In the city outskirts, priests have organized voluntary helpers. It is expected that within a few days, Florence will again be a city of beauty and cleanliness, the UNN correspondent said.

For transport, authorities are using battery-driven trams. Hidden medical supplies have also been found, and these are being used for the needy sick and wounded. The need for hospitals is acute to care for civilians wounded by German snipers, mines, and shelling. In addition, many persons who collapsed during the Nazi occupation from hunger and starvation are also being hospitalized. Many of these treated are children who suffered from malnutrition while the Nazis held the city. Allied authorities have rushed in milk and other necessities.

The Florence dead are being taken to cemeteries on handcarts because the Germans, in addition to stealing most of the area's transport, also took the city's hearses. (UNN)

HEAVIES ATTACK RUMANIAN OIL FIELDS AGAIN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 18 — Up to 750 Liberators and Flying Fortresses today attacked oil installations at Ploesti and nearby Campina, Rumania. This was the third attack in 36 hours on the major German fuel source.

Italy-based Liberator bombers also attacked Alibunar Airdrome in Yugoslavia, near the Rumanian border.

Although few enemy aircraft were sighted, intense flak and heavy smoke-screens guarded the Rumanian targets.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force heavy bombers subjected the Nazis' chief remaining oil sources at Ploesti to a day and night attack yesterday.

Heavy flak protected the target areas, as the Germans sought to stave off the latest of the long series of destructive air assaults, and 17 Liberator bombers were reported missing after the daylight missions.

Light bombers attacked German barracks northeast of Florence, near the massive Goth Line across the end of the Appennines, and fighter-bombers slashed at enemy communications along the battle line.

Warsaw Patriots Aided

RAF and South African Italy-based night bombers have flown « several » 1,750-mile round trips, totaling 100 sorties, through the heart of Nazi-occupied central Europe, to supply Polish Patriots fighting the « inside Battle of Warsaw » with weapons and ammunition, it was officially announced tonight.

Grateful acknowledgements of this aid came in a radio message yesterday from General Bor, commander of the Polish Underground Army, which has been fighting the Nazis inside Warsaw while the Red Army fought the Germans just outside the Polish capital's gates.

More than 100 Liberators and Halifaxes have been sent out on these perilous night missions to Warsaw since the beginning of the month. To reach their objective and drop the supplies to the Patriots, the heavy night bombers had to fly at slow speed and low altitude over an area strongly defended by German night fighters. Twenty heavy bombers have been lost on these missions, the announcement said.

A headquarters spokesman said that the courage and endurance of these bomber crews « will rank with the outstanding acts of heroism in this war. » (PRO)

SIX DIVISIONS FIGHTING AGAINST YUGOSLAVS

LONDON, August 18 — Six German divisions are taking part against Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Army of Liberation in fierce fighting in Montenegro, Herzegovina and the Sandjak, stated today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio.

EAST INDIES SEA LANES CLEAR OF HEAVY JAP SHIPS

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 18 — General Douglas MacArthur said today that Allied aircraft have driven heavy Japanese shipping from the sea lanes of the central East Indies, and that continued bombing is drastically reducing Jap strength in the Moluccas group, of which the Island of Halmahera is the largest — and the most frequently attacked.

Halmahera, which lies midway between New Guinea and the Philippines, was attacked again yesterday in the steady aerial campaign to reduce one of the strongest Jap bases in the Indies area.

As a result of widespread air assaults, said MacArthur, the Japanese are now forced to depend upon makeshift sea transport to supply their forces in the areas of the Banda and Arafura seas, on the direct northerly line from Australia to the Japanese mainland.

In this territory, within protective range of the Halmahera base, lie the oil-rich islands of Borneo and Sumatra. Just around the base lie the islands of Celebes and Ceram. Not far to the northeast is Singapore, and directly north, the Island of Mindanao, southernmost of the Philippines.

Attack on Halmahera

Heavy and medium United States bombers carried out the latest attack on Halmahera, destroying or severely damaging 23 Japanese planes on the ground, and leaving large fires. Beside the main airfield, coastal installations and shipping were also hit.

Other American aircraft, meanwhile, ranged farther north to strike again at the Mindanao harbor of Davao, and at Jap installations on the Tanimbar Islands. Still other heavies struck again at Truk, one-time huge Japanese air and sea base, now made practically untenable for any large Japanese forces. Nearly 60 tons of explosives were dropped on Truk, and one plane of a group which tried to intercept the attack was shot down. All the Allied craft returned.

And on the by-passed Japanese base at Rabaul, on New Britain, Allied aircraft yesterday dropped 30 tons of bombs. General MacArthur said that approximately 40,000 Jap troops are trapped there, with little or no chance of obtaining supplies by sea.

Meanwhile, United States aircraft attacked the Jap seaplane base and nearby installations on the Island of Chichi Jima, in the Bonin group, about 700 miles from the Japanese mainland. A communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor said that Japanese flak protection of the island was intense. The communique added that other planes attacked Paramushiro at the northern end of the Kuriles, northward of Japan. (OWI)

LIBERATORS STRIKE JAP SUBS IN INDIAN OCEAN

KANDY, CEYLON, August 18 — Allied Liberators are now striking at Japanese submarines in the Indian Ocean, it was announced here today at the headquarters of the Southeast Asia Command. The recent attack on Port Blair in the Andaman Islands was carried out by India-based Liberators which made the 1,375-mile journey in Monsoon weather.

In a five-mile stretch of the Taddim Road, where the enemy recently fought a determined delaying action, 3,000 dead Japs were counted. The communique added that the enemy had abandoned his positions covering the Sittaung track east of Tamu and had fallen back on his defenses. In north Burma, units of the 36th Indian Division captured Thaiwagon and advanced farther towards Pinbaw.

A communique issued from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters at Chungking today said planes of the 14th USAAF destroyed warehouses, seven enemy airplanes, and transportation facilities, in widespread attacks Wednesday and Thursday in the Hengyang-Tungting lake sector, the

LONDON, August 18 — Six German divisions are taking part against Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Army of Liberation in fierce fighting in Montenegro, Herzegovia, and the Sanjak, stated today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio.

They are the SS Prince Eugen Division, 1st German Alpine Division, the 181st and 369th Grenadiers, the SS Skanderbeg Division, and the 4th Brandenburg Division, in addition to many Ustashi and militia troops.

Marshal Tito's Patriot army has inflicted a heavy defeat on the Bulgarian 120th Regiment in an action in Serbia, today's Yugoslav communique stated. The Bulgarians lost heavily in men and material.

The communique added that 140 more Bulgarians were killed and another 180 taken prisoner along the Yugoslav-Greek frontier. A battalion commander was one of those captured.

In Western Bosnia, Marshal Tito's soldiers routed a German column and killed 40 Germans. Near Livno, they routed another enemy column which was pillaging harvests from peasants. (OWI-Reuter)

GREEK SUB SINKS GERMAN DESTROYER

LONDON, August 18 — A Greek communique announced tonight that while operating with the British Navy, the Greek submarine Pipinos torpedoed and sank a German destroyer of the Cartatone class off Samos.

A small supply ship was hit by a torpedo and two barges were damaged in the same area. (Reuter)

Mitchells with fighter escort destroyed a ferry terminus south of Siantan and wrecked warehouses, while Warhawks of General Chennault's Chinese-American wing bombed compounds east of Changsha, killing enemy troops and destroying trucks. (OWI)

JAPANESE FALLING BACK IN NORTH BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, August 18 — The Southeast Asia communique said today that the Japanese are abandoning their positions covering the Sittaung Trail, 18 miles east of Tamu, and are falling back to prepared defences.

On the Tiddim Road, Allied forces are continuing their advance, the communique added while in north Burma units of the 36th Indian Division have captured Thaikwagon and are pressing forward in the direction of Pinbaw.

A Chinese Army spokesman said today that Japanese forces, numbering about 200,000 men, are striking from the north and south in a determined effort to cut off Chinese troops which have been attacking Hengyang from the southwest. The Chinese are fighting back and trying to prevent the Japanese from penetrating further into Hunan Province. Four Japanese night attacks off Mangshih were repulsed.

A United Press dispatch said today that Chinese soldiers were trying to eliminate Japanese fortified positions outside the walls of Tengchung East and south of Lungling, two fortified hills forming the last enemy-held positions before that city were being subjected to continued Chinese attacks.

It was officially announced here today that Liberators operating from Ceylon are taking part in the battle of the Indian Ocean. India-based Liberators made a 1,466-mile journey recently to attack Port Blair, in the Andaman Islands, the announcement said. (Reuter-AP)

HIMMLER SETS UP NEW SECRET SERVICE IN GERMANY

WASHINGTON, August 18 — Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief and Reich plenipotentiary for total mobilization, has set up a new secret service charged with the task of making daily reports on all important German civil officials, the Associated Press said yesterday in a despatch from the German Frontier.

The new police organization, which in Berlin alone is said to have 2,000 operatives, was formed as the result of the distrust and suspicion now rampant in Germany, the dispatch said.

Meanwhile, the information blackout confronting the German people was intensified yesterday with the announcement by the German News Agency that more newspapers are to go out of existence. In addition, only two illustrated papers are to be permitted in the Reich, and some Sunday papers are to be banned altogether. Drastic cuts are also planned for periodicals and dailies. (OWI)

500 MORE OFFICERS PURGED

ZURICH, August 18 — Heinrich Himmler's purge of the Wehrmacht continued today with the dismissal of another 500 German officers from their posts.

Reports filtering into Switzerland said that large numbers of officers have been sent into front-line duty, and that their positions in the reserves were being filled with chosen SS men and Storm Troopers.

Stockholm sources revealed that Himmler's purge activity has reached down to the enlisted ranks of the German Army. An order issued to reserve troops going to the front demanded that they fight to the finish. In this order Himmler said:

« Do not disgrace yourself by flight or surrender. Punitive organizations will find everyone who does not perform his duty conscientiously. » (TASS)

AMG FEEDS 36 COMMUNES IN COMBAT AREA

WITH THE 5TH ARMY, August 18 — In the first 15 days of this month, the Allied Military Government supplied food, fuel, and medical supplies for 750,600 Italian civilians in the 36 communes and the refugee camps and civilian hospitals of the 5th Army's combat area.

Allied officials said today that this operation, which involved the distribution of more than 826 tons of food, was nothing more than a normal operation for the AMG organization assigned to look after immediate civilian needs in battle zones.

Military Government authorities take the responsibility of feeding all Italian civilians in newly-liberated areas, and also take over administrative functions of local government. As the armies move on, the job is turned over to the Allied Control Commission.

To feed the towns in its combat areas, the 5th Army

MORE GRAIN LAW VIOLATORS ARRESTED

ROME, August 18 — Italian Police authorities in Naples yesterday arrested five persons for failure to deliver grain to the Granaries of the People. Many quintals of grain were confiscated and sent to the granaries, it was stated here.

From Taranto, it was reported that Leonardo Semeraro was sentenced to one year in jail and was fined 167,940 lire for violation of the laws concerning grain deliveries.

From Enna and Caltanissetta, it was reported that Alessi Concetto was sentenced to six years in jail and fined 800,000 lire, and Arnaldo Filippo to two years in jail and fined 616,000 lire, for similar violations. (UNN)

ROME WATER SUPPLY TO BE CURTAILED FOR REPAIRS

ROME, August 18 — The water supply for the city of Rome will be curtailed at least 50 per cent beginning at midnight on Tuesday, August 22, while certain main aqueducts serving the city's water supply are repaired.

During this period, which is expected to be 72 hours, citizens are urged to conserve their water resources until the necessary repairs have been made. (UNN)

UNDERSTANDING REACHED ON GERMAN OCCUPATION

WASHINGTON, August 18 — The United States, Great Britain, and Russia have reached a general understanding regarding the occupation of Germany, President Roosevelt said today at his press and radio conference.

He added that the understanding was arrived at regardless of how or at what date Germany capitulated. The three powers, he said, had entered into discussions and everything was proceeding satisfactorily. A general understanding on details had not yet been reached. He included in the details yet to be settled, what sections of Germany were to be occupied by whom.

The President said it would be just as easy to reach an understanding with China regarding the occupation of Japan.

Another Roosevelt-Churchill Meeting

President Roosevelt announced that he was going to confer with Prime Minister Churchill soon.

The meeting between Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill will be the 10th during the war. The result of their first meeting in August 1941, on board the battleship Prince of Wales was the Atlantic Charter. In December 1941, and June 1942, they met in Washington, and in January 1943 the historic conference at Casablanca took place. Another meeting in Washington in May was followed by the Quebec Conference in August.

Cairo was the setting for the Churchill, Roosevelt, and Chiang Kai-Shek talks in November 1943. President Roosevelt and Churchill went from there to Teheran to confer with Marshal Stalin, and returned to Cairo to meet President Inonu of Turkey. (Reuter)

ROOSEVELT SUGGESTS MILITARY TRAINING

WASHINGTON, August 18 — President Roosevelt today urged the American public to give serious thought to the need for post-war military and civilian training for American men from the ages of 17 to 23.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The President added that he did not necessarily mean compulsory military training. He said that it would be a good thing for the nation to have and it would teach young men to get along with others. There were plenty of facilities for such a training program in and outside the U. S., including Alaska and the Aleutians, he stated, pointing out that the present training facilities are good for at least 25 years. He declared that about 1,000,000 young men could be trained each year. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 18 — Today's communique:

Naval: Navy operations off the south coast of France are proceeding smoothly. The reinforcement and supply of the army continue.

In addition to the two small enemy vessels reported as sunk in the communique of August 16, it is now learned that three E-boats were destroyed by minesweepers which preceded assault craft during the initial approach to the beaches. Yesterday morning, 17 August, our forces sank two enemy corvettes off Cape Croisette, southeast of Marseilles.

Further reports from the naval commander say that British and U. S. naval aircraft operating from a force of aircraft carriers off the assault area gave valuable service in supporting the bombarding ships, as well as in bombing and ground strafing enemy positions. They also provided air cover.

During the preliminary naval bombardment and subsequent gunfire support, 15,900 shells of five-inch calibre and above were expended by the ships of the Allied navy. About 12,500 of these shells were of major calibre — 12-inch or above. The results of the naval bombardment were reported as most effective in neutralizing enemy artillery, and thus assisting the landing.

Allied Armies in Italy: The situation in Florence is generally quieter and the distribution of supplies continues.

In the upper Tiber Valley east and west of the river, advantageous positions have been occupied.

Activity on the remainder of the front of both the 5th and 8th armies has been confined to active patrolling, with no appreciable change in the situation.

Allied Forces in Southern France: Troops of the 7th Army have further enlarged their bridgehead in southern France, methodically advancing in nearly all sectors against crumbling resistance. Reinforcements continue to arrive steadily.

The last pocket of resistance has been overcome on the Island of Port Cros after an Allied battleship had fired on an enemy strongpoint there. The neighbouring Island of Levant was cleared earlier.

On the mainland, forward elements are less than 10 miles from Toulon and six miles from Cannes, and in the central sector the advance has been extended to as far as 25 miles from the landing points. Thus far, our casualties have been extremely light.

Prisoners taken are estimated at 7,000, although the count is not complete. The captured include a German general and his staff.

MAAF HQ, Italy: Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked oil refineries in the Ploesti area. Other heavy bombers carried out attacks on an enemy airdrome at Nis, Yugoslavia.

Tactical aircraft continued to give close support to the ground forces in southern France, and also attacked enemy objectives in northern Italy and Yugoslavia.

Last night our bombers again attacked oil refineries in the Ploesti area. In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 24 of ours are missing.

of the town, while to the southeast they advanced down the railway from Damblainville to take Fresne le Mere. After capturing Barbou and Norrey, our forces drove on to the area of Trun and Chambois.

St. Pierre sur Dives and Mezidon are in our hands, and we are pushing eastward along the whole of our northern sector. North of Mezidon, our troops have reached the line of the Dives as far as Bures, and we have taken Trouern and Bavent.

In Brittany the citadel of St. Malo has fallen. At Dinard, which has now been liberated, the German commander and his staff were captured.

Air: Heavy bombers attacked shipping at Brest yesterday afternoon. Sixteen bridges spanning the River Risle from Pont-Audemer, near its mouth, to La Ferriere au Risle, 35 miles upstream, were attacked by medium and light bombers in two operations during the day.

A fuel dump near La Mailleray sur Seine was the target for other medium bombers. Rail lines from Belgium to France were systematically patrolled by fighters as far as the Seine. They successfully attacked locomotives, tunnels, bridges, and a large number of railway cars. Enemy road transport, particularly in eastern Normandy, was heavily attacked by fighters, which also hit tanks, strong points, troop concentrations, and barges on the Seine.

During the night, light bombers attacked transportation targets in Normandy and southwest of Paris. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 18 — Friday night's communique:

During August 18, southeast of Tartu, our troops occupied in fighting over 40 populated localities, including Tamistu, Rosina, Achia, Vauginova, Krotusi, and Tartse. Our troops forced the strait between Chudskoe and Pskov lakes, captured a bridgehead on the western bank of the strait, and made contact with the units advancing along the western bank of the Pskov Lake, in the course of which they captured several populated localities, including Lanie, Menekere, Mechekurma, Zhabaneza, Rakhtonova, Zhuravu, Tsuga, Mektiuk, Tikukurma, and Kuksnekoda.

North of Kruspils, on the western Dvina, our troops occupied in fighting over 30 populated localities, including Ikull, Klanchani, Tramak, Remi, Marziena, Rudin, and Altmushi, and the railway stations of Sheetvani and Marziena.

West of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops were engaging advancing strong enemy tank and infantry units. With heavy losses in men and material, the enemy made an insignificant wedge into our battle formations.

East of Praga, our troops successfully beat back enemy tank and infantry attacks, and in several sectors made counter-attacks.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front, August 18, by storm captured the important strong-point of the German defence, on the left bank of the Vistula, the City of Sandomir, and, continuing their operations for expansion of the bridgehead, occupied the populated localities of Mikhnany, Lenechise, Glazov, Klechinets Dobroschitse, Shezhiry, Iaskava, Tichiry, Gilkovy, Shipinici, Klupchin, Yimiary, Gorbas, Roman-Kovova, Jimovize, Shabbovize, and Tiglastios, and the railway stations Gilkovy and Gury-Vysokie.

North of Sandomir, our troops completed encirclement of enemy groups in the strength of three divisions, and continued successful liquidation operations.

On other sectors of the front, fighting of local importance took place.

During August 17, our troops on all sectors of the front damaged or destroyed a total of 295 German tanks. In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 86 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 18 — Today's communique:

Land: Allied forces, driving east, have liberated Dreux, Chartres, Chateaudun, and Orleans. East of Chartres, the Aunay River has been crossed, and at Dreux, a bridgehead has been established over the Eure.

St. Calais and Authon, both in the path of the eastward drive, have also been liberated. In the Normandy pocket, heavy opposition is being encountered north of Rames. Fromentel, northwest of Rames, has been freed.

Our troops north of La Ferte Mace have advanced 3,000 yards against light and scattered resistance. American patrols have made contact with British forces along the line north and northwest of Domfront.

Allied troops, advancing from the Elers area, have taken Athis and crossed the River Rouvre east of La Carnille. East of the Orne, our forces pushing to Raphily and to the vicinity of St. Philbert have further compressed the area still occupied by the enemy.

Falaise was cleared of the enemy yesterday morning, and our troops are established on the high ground south [illegible] troop concentrations and barges on the Seine.

During the night, light bombers attacked transportation targets in Normandy and southwest of Paris. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 18 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On August 11, south of the Arno, Patriots lost seven men in one encounter with the enemy. The same day, Patriots succeeded in crossing the river, but 40 of them were killed and 165 wounded in the fighting that took place. In the northern suburbs of Florence, Nazi-Fascist soldiers attacked the civilian population with armored cars, causing many casualties.

In Piedmont, the important Breuil-Chatillon highway is now in the hands of Patriot forces. In this sector, large groups of Patriots have been placed under a single command to intensify and coordinate operations against the enemy. In spite of the scarcity of arms and equipment, Patriots have complete control of the situation, since the greater part of the enemy troops, composed of Czech elements, are unwilling to serve Nazi-Fascist interests.

In Val d'Aosta, Patriots carried out acts of sabotage against electric lines and captured or destroyed large quantities of enemy supplies. Patriots used Commando tactics in attacking local garrisons, executing several Fascist traitors.

At Ivrea, on July 26, Patriots of the Garibaldi Brigade attacked Nazi-Fascist troops, capturing arms and munition depots. In the fighting that followed, enemy losses totalled 10 killed and 25 wounded. On July 29, after occupying the village of Cunavese, Patriots took 100 prisoners and large quantities of booty, among which were eight 160-mm. mortars and many machine guns. On July 30, clashes took lace at Noretta, Cavour, Piserolo, Villafranca, and Barge, in which three Germans were killed. Near Staffarda, Patriots attacked a motor column killing 30 Germans.

During the month of July, Patriots occupied several towns in the Val Moese and Val Susaera sectors. The local textile industry is now working for the Patriots. (DNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 18. — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, the front bulge which protruded far westward beyond the Orne was taken back behind the river. East and northeast of Falaise, the enemy tried with strong forces to hamper this movement from a northerly direction, but was stopped in grim fighting. In the Argentan sector, enemy troops who tried to encircle the German forces were smashed in counter-attacks. The corridor between Falaise and Argentan was widened by these operations. Grim fighting is in progress for Chartres. In Orleans, fierce street fighting with American troops was in progress throughout the whole day. The Americans finally succeeded in capturing the town. The garrison of St. Malo has been overwhelmed by the superior enemy forces. Being heavily shelled without interruption, and having lost all heavy arms, the garrison finally resisted only with light arms. Soldiers of all parts of the Army, under the command of Colonel von Aulock, during nearly three weeks of heroic fighting, resisted the onslaught of extremely strong enemy forces and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Their fight will be commemorated in history.

In southern France, the enemy broadened and reinforced his beachhead between Toulon and Cannes. Our security formations repulsed enemy reconnaissance armour which drove northward. West of Toulon, some enemy attempts at landing troops were frustrated.

Two enemy destroyers, and four freighters totalling 25,000 tons were sunk by the Navy off the Seine Estuary. A big freighter of 15,000 to 20,000 tons, and eight other ships totalling 45,000 tons were torpedoed. Their loss may be reckoned with, since heavy explosions were observed. A coastal battery of the Navy sank two enemy minesweepers and destroyed one destroyer off the coast of southern France.

London is being kept under heavy retaliatory fire with «V-1» throughout the day and the night.

In Italy, several enemy attempts at crossing the Arno, and numerous reconnaissance thrusts, were repelled.

In the East, Rumanian troops frustrated enemy attempts at crossing the lower Dniester. In the foothills of the Carpathians west of Sanok and northwest of Krosno, fierce fighting is in progress. At the Baranov Vistula bridgehead, repeated Bolshevist attacks failed. Tanks and tank grenadiers broke stubborn enemy resistance and repelled the Soviets in counter-attacks. Many enemy tanks were destroyed. On both sides of Vilkovishken, the Soviets supported by numerous bombers, continued to attack with 14 rifle divisions and several tank brigades. Vilkovishken was again lost. At Rasciten, repeated enemy attacks were repulsed. The Bolsheviks suffered high losses from effective attacks of our bomber squadrons. In this sector 50 enemy planes were brought down in dog-fights alone.

On the Latvian front, north of Birsen and at Madona, enemy attempts at breaking through were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our divisions.

In Estonia, numerous enemy attacks were repulsed or stopped. In the isthmus between the Lake of Peipus and Lake Peipus, grim fighting developed with the Soviets, who had reached the western banks.

Our air defense destroyed 40 enemy planes out of a Yesterday, a total of 110 enemy planes was destroyed on the Eastern Front. German-Rumanian air defense forces brought down 18 four-engined bombers when enemy planes attacked the Ploesti area.

In the night, isolated British planes dropped bombs on Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, and the Rhenish-Westphalian area. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

Highest German Decoration to Model: Field Marshal General Model was awarded the Diamond to the Oak Leaf of the Knight's Cross. He is — after Field Marshal General Rommel and Field Marshal General Kesselring — the third of this rank to receive the highest German decoration.

«Comradeship in Arms» with Finland: The Finnish paper Ajann Suunta writes: «Finland is exclusively indebted to Germany for being able to carry on its economic life despite the war. Since Germany is Finland's most important trade partner, it may be seen what the comradeship in arms and Germany's friendship means to the Finnish people.

TRANSOCEAN AND DNB

Southern France: On the southern French coast, the Anglo-Americans reinforced their beachheads from sea and from the air. Embittered fighting is going on round the Monts des Maures between St. Raphael and Hyeres. On the southern fringes of the Maures Mountains, the German shore batteries smashed new enemy landing attempts at several points. In the valley north of Monts des Maures, enemy paratroops, who had landed there, were thrown back by German reserves. To the east of the hotly-disputed mountain massif of Monts des Maures, the invaders endeavored to drive northward from Cannes in an effort to establish contact with the paratroops cut off there. This enemy attack was frustrated. So were all Allied attempts to land troops on both sides of Toulon. Several Anglo-American landing craft and escorting warships were hit by heavy artillery.

Northern France: West and east of Argentan, the German counter-thrust of August 17 gained more ground. East of the city, German panzers succeeded in mopping up the Forest of Gouffern, and in taking several towns, among them Silly. The open space between Argentan and Falaise was widened on August 17 as compared with the previous day.

After their abortive attacks on Chartres, where the German garrison is still holding out, the Americans on August 17 drove eastward along the Chartres-Rambouillet road and neighboring roads also running eastward. At Rambouillet the German barrier formations fought a grim battle against the Americans, and annihilated big portions of their assault groups.

Russia Front: Fourteen Soviet rifle divisions and several tank brigades, supported by numerous battle planes, attacked in the area on both sides of Vilkovishken on August 17. Despite embittered German opposition, the Soviets were able to make dents. The battle swept over Vilkovishken. At Rasciten, several Soviet attacks failed. In Latvia, Bolsheviks operating north of Birsen and in the area of Modohn continued their vain efforts to break through with strong forces.

Rumanian Front: Several Bolshevik attempts to cross the lower Dniester were repelled by Rumanian troops on August 17.

NEWS SUMMARY

Public Relations Office

PENINSULAR BASE SECTION NUMBER 310-FRIDAY, AUGUST 18, 1944

INVASION II FOUR MILES FROM TOULON: Algiers, August 17--Radio France stated tonight that the Allied invasion forces have captured a promontory four miles from the great French naval base of Toulon. This is the most westerly point reported reached by the armies of Invasion II. Allied Headquarters in the Mediterranean announced this morning, August 18, that the towns of La Napoule and Draguignan have fallen to the invaders. Draguignan is an important communications center six teen miles inland from Frejus. With a prewar population of 12,000, Draguignan is the administrative center for the war Department. Invasion II was developing rapidly, meeting only light resistance. The towns of Vidauban, Le Luc, Roshle, and Cuers were taken. The heavy air-screen encountered little opposition, and landing operations were setting new records. The front, an arc, reaching to more than twenty miles in depth in some places, contains some 500 square miles of French territory, reaching from the outskirts of Toulon to Cannes, which Berlin reports said has been penetrated by Allied troops. In a period of the invasion given primarily to defending beachheads and high covering troops and supplying and reinforcing the early waves of landing forces, Invasion II was engulfing a considerable amount of territory.

General Eisenhower sent the following message to General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson: "All indications are that you have got off to a flying start. Every step of your progress will bring a wail of terror from the Hun and a cheer from all of us here. Congratulations to all of your commanders and troops. Best of luck." General Wilson replied: "Your message was deeply appreciated. We have been most gratified by our progress so far and are looking forward with the greatest confidence to the successful development of these operations. Without the material support which you have made available, this undertaking would be impossible, and we are fully conscious of and grateful for this support."

LATER: Algiers Radio announced that Cannes is in Allied hands.

GERMANS RETREAT IN WEST; ALLIES NEAR PARIS: Normandy, August 18--The mutter of Allied artillery was clearly audible in Paris this morning as three armored columns closed in on the city. They were last reported little more than twenty miles from the capital. The German Army meanwhile started another retreat, this one along a thirty mile front running from north of Falaise toward the channel coast. This retreat, which British and Canadian forces are making extremely costly by constant pressure on the enemy, may have started too late to save the German armies west of the Seine. The American forces are in an excellent position to Chartres and Dreux, to lock the German army in a huge new pocket between the Normandy front and the river. While American forces in the south sped through excellent tank country, sweeping into many important cities, the heavy concentration of German armor trapped in the Falaise--Argentan loop were almost helpless under a heavy barrage of Allied artillery and aircraft. The bottleneck through which they must escape has been further diminished to four miles across, and the batteries on both sides are exerting caution to keep from shelling each other.

Allied strategy has developed three possible manoeuvers, each of them designed to hasten the complete rout of the German armies in France. The Allies can outflank Paris from Orleans; they can march directly on the capital from Chartres; or they can sweep north to the Seine River from Dreux to trap Von Kluge in the west.

Allied air activity was largely curtailed yesterday by a heavy fog. Heavy bombers remained at their bases while fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over the south of the Falaise cup hemming in escaping German transport, and some 600 American fighters swept up and down the rail network radiating northeast from Paris, destroying many locomotives and nearly 1,000 railway wagons.

RED ARMY CAPTURES VYSU, RAPIN: Moscow, August 18--Soviet forces smashing their way along the bank of Iskov Lake north of Petseri have seized two important strongpoints Vysu and Rapin. General Moslennikov's advance, stretching two arms toward the Tallinn-Riga railway, is nearing the rail junction and provincial capital, Tartu, and threatening to trap thousands of German troops against the lake, aided by the Soviets who captured the strategic approaches to Valga three days ago. These are spreading in a north-easterly direction to link up with Moslennikov's right flank. The enemy is offering stubborn resistance, throwing in fresh reserves into the battle west of Petrosi. Breaking the enemy's furious resistance, Red Army forces captured a number of localities. Northwest and southwest of Shavli, Russian troops continued to repulse savage German counterattacks. A battalion of German motorized infantry was wiped out, and 35 tanks destroyed. Northwest of Mariampole the Russian advance continued to roll. Soviet troops have now reached the frontier of East Prussia, breaking down all enemy resistance. Dispersed enemy groups which were pressed back against the River Gesupe have been wiped out. Northwest of Sandomierz, the Red Army forged ahead, extending its bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula. Fierce fighting continues in the streets of Sandomierz where the Russians have resorted to clearing the town, house by house. There were no material changes on other sectors of the front.

CHINESE OPEN NEW DRIVE: Chungking, August 17--Chinese forces have launched a new offensive against Ichang, the most important Japanese base above Hankow, it was announced today. Developments of the thrust are expected soon. The Reuters Chungking correspondent had stated earlier that the entire Salween front had flared into activity. Chinese troops were launching large-scale attacks on the Japanese holding out in Tengchung and Lungling. This drive is aimed at opening the Ledo Road from India.

While the news circulated that the last Japanese fighting forces had been expelled from the Manipur state of India, further progress went on along the Tiddim Road into Burma. A Southeast Asia Command communique stated that Allied troops in the Taungni-Pinbaw area had consolidated their gains of the previous day, and the area from Thaikangen north to Taungni along the road and railway has now been cleared.

Air activity marked the Southwest Pacific campaign, with the island of Halmahera getting the major portion of Allied attention. A communique from General MacArthur's headquarters stated that air attacks on Halmahera have lately become a regular feature of operations.

REMARKS FROM TODAY'S NEWS--A German military correspondent wrote last night: "The Normandy front has been liquidated by the German High Command. German forces are withdrawing in an easterly direction. Cards are now being dealt for a new game." "Owing to outstanding successes in the South Pacific against Japanese shipping resulting in a reduction of targets, production of torpedoes is to be reduced, it was stated by the Navy Department. "Sixteen Italian spies employed by the Germans against the Allies in Italy have been executed at Rome. " The Twelfth Army Group took 9,754 prisoners in a forty-eight hour period ending midnight August 15. "With almost every bridge across the Seine River destroyed by Allied aircraft, the Germans are resorting to hundreds of barges and ferries massed in the Seine between Paris and Rouen to take their armor across the river. "The Canadian and Polish forces have launched a new offensive in the sector from Falaise to the sea. This drive is making the German "disengaging movement" an expensive manoeuver. "The enemy-held Japanese naval base at Truk was on the receiving end of 57 tons of bombs yesterday, dropped by Seventh Army Airforce Liberators. One of the nine Japs that rose to intercept was shot down, while all of the Liberators returned.

NORMANDY FRONT LIQUIDATED BY HIGH COMMAND

AMERICANS TAKE CHARTRES, NEAR ORLEANS; GERMAN 7th ARMY BROKEN

SHAEF, August 17 — General George Patton's 3d Army liberated Chartres today, and continued sowers to the town of Dreux, 40 miles from Paris. At the same time, dispatches reaching here said that an American column had reached Orleans, 70 miles to the south of Chartres. A bridgehead has been established across the Aunay River, east of Chartres. Chateaudun and St. Calais were also liberated in the lightning drive eastward.

These advances left milling thousands of Germans far behind the Allied lines in the Falaise pocket. There, the German 7th Army was said to have been broken up, with the remnants of 11 German divisions now disorganized in Front reporters estimate the casualties inflicted on the enemy by General Patton's 3d Army at nearly 100,000, comprising some 30,000 prisoners, 45,000 wounded, and 11,000 killed. The Canadians have taken 2,000 prisoners in the last three days. Thus, said Associated Press, the total estimated casualties suffered by the Germans in the Normandy campaign has been brought to between 230,000 and 300,000. The estimate on August 8 was 190,000.

Aerial photographs showed today that the Germans are accumulating masses of self-propelled barges along the banks of the Seine for what Allied sources say may be a coming attempt at a flight from the battle of Normandy.

Hidden Barges

The barges lie camouflaged under the banks and along the tributaries of the river, and many of them have been hauled ashore and hidden under trees. It was said that the Germans have been forced to use some of these barges to keep their troops in the Normandy and Brittany battle supplied, since Allied aircraft had smashed Seine bridges and made rail and highway routes unusable.

Some of these barges have been caught in the act of unloading supplies and troops along the western bank of the Seine, and have been attacked by bombers.

Canadian troops attacked today east of the Falaise-Trun line, advancing from one to six miles. Places captured during the attack include Moulon, much bombed road junction, and St. Pierre, farther to the south.

Canadian forces today joined with Polish armored formations to launch a two-pronged armored drive toward Trun, a road center 10 miles southeast of Falaise. Fighting is going on around Montreuil la Cambe, two miles north of Trun.

Allied forces made a 2½-mile advance in the Conde sector. Although the Germans still hold Argentan, American troops have already reached within a half mile north of the town.

The communique earlier today said that Canadian forces were engaged in clearing the last bits of German resistance from Falaise. Forward elements of these Canadians later reached the high ground 1,000 yards beyond the town.

At the same time, British and American troops have joined up at Flers, and advances have been made eastward of liberated Tinchebray. North of La Fert Mace and northeast of Domfront, gains of up to six miles had been made early today against moderate German resistance. The town of Les Monts de Breuse was reached.

It was said here that Allied tanks and motorized infantry units were roaming around within the Falaise pocket, shooting up everything and completely disrupting German efforts to organize a break-through. Reports com-

AMERICANS TAKE CHARTRES, NEAR ORLEANS; GERMAN 7th ARMY BROKEN

SHAEF, August 17 — General George Patton's 3d Army liberated Chartres today, and continued onward to the town of Dreux, 30 miles from Paris. At the same time, dispatches reaching here said that an American column had reached Orleans, 70 miles to the south of Chartres. A bridgehead has been established across the Aunay River, east of Chartres. Chateaudun and St. Calais were also liberated in the lightning drive eastward.

These advances left milling thousands of Germans far behind the Allied lines in the Falaise pocket. There, the German 7th Army was said to have been broken up, with the remnants of 11 German divisions now disorganized in almost unfirected guerrilla warfare, trying as best they can to escape from the ever-contracting jaws of the Allied trap.

Conde, Putanges Freed

In the British sector of the Falaise trap, the town of Conde has been liberated, and on the lower sector American troops took Putanges, thus closing off the last route, no wider than a wagon trail, that had still been open to whichever German cared to take a chance with road-strafing Allied aircraft. American units have entered Fromental, seven miles west of Argentan, and Ecouche, five miles west of the city.

The Falaise pocket was said today to have been squeezed into an area 20 miles long, and from seven to 15 miles in width. Across its narrow opening, Allied aircraft put down an overnight barrier of bombs and bullets, wrecking a German column seeking to escape across the Seine.

A few hours after a sharp American armored thrust led to the capture of Putanges, an official announcement said that the trapped divisions were the 271st, 277th, 326th, 276th, 277th, 89th, 85th, and 272d Infantry, and the 21st Panzer, and the 9th and 12th SS divisions.

At full strength these divisions would aggregate some 165,000 men, Associated Press said, but their number does not approach that now. It cannot be estimated yet, however, to what extent they have been reduced.

TROARN TAKEN WITH LITTLE OPPOSITION

SHAEF, August 17 — British troops have occupied Troarn, seven miles east of Caen, with little opposition from the retreating German troops on the Orne front, it was reported late tonight.

A senior staff officer said that «there is no doubt about it. The Germans are in a chaotic mess.» (Reuter)

GERMANS WITHDRAWING NORTHEAST OF FALAISE

SHAEF, August 17 — After closing up to the River Dives on a wide front and establishing bridgeheads, British and Canadian troops are now pushing east to pursue the Germans who are withdrawing from the area northeast of Falaise.

It has been confirmed that Orleans has been captured.

The 12th U.S. Army Group took 9,754 prisoners in 48 hours ending midnight August 15. (Reuter)

U.S. TORPEDO PRODUCTION CUT

WASHINGTON, August 17 — Production of torpedoes in the United States will be reduced, due to the outstanding successes in the South Pacific, the Navy Department announced tonight. (Reuter)

ing in from the front, however, said that thousands of Nazis and hundreds of their tanks had succeeded in getting away before the terrible Allied air assault was begun on the roads running east.

But even these escaped columns were said to be endangered now by the presence of Allied forces as far away as Chartres and Dreux. And Allied planes are giving them no rest. Delayed-fuse bombs have been dropped on roadways, and large concentrations of German traffic fleeing eastward have been smashed.

The largest German force within the trap is said to be caught between the converging American and British-Canadian armies.

In not-so-distant Paris, 150 civilians are said to have been shot by the Gestapo as the Nazis tighten up restrictions. Two German SS divisions are reported to have entered the city to defend German installations from sabotage.

In the Brittany Peninsula, the town of Dinard has been completely occupied by American troops. Resistance is still being encountered at St. Malo and the situation at Lorient and Brest remains unchanged. (AP-Reuter)

U. S. NORMANDY CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, August 17 — American casualties totaled 112,073 in the Normandy-Brittany sector of France between D-day on June 6 to August 6, it was announced today by Acting U. S. Secretary of War John McCloy.

The casualties include 16,434 killed, 76,535 wounded, and 19,704 missing.

American army casualties in all theaters as of July 29 total 244,775, Mr. McCloy said. These include 45,491 killed, 113,977 wounded, 42,102 missing, and 43,205 prisoners of war.

The Acting Secretary of War warned that there is serious fighting ahead for the Allies, adding that the enemy fights most bitterly at the points of greatest danger. He declared that the main elements of the French Army are now ashore on their native soil and fighting the enemy shoulder to shoulder with the other Allies.

The U. S. War Department, he said, definitely favors compulsory military training for the youth of America after the cessation of hostilities. (OWI)

RAF HITS STETTIN AND KIEL

LONDON, August 17 — RAF heavy bombers carried out saturation raids on the German cities of Stettin and Kiel last night, giving close strategic support to Russian forces battling to smash the German armies in the Baltic area.

At the same time, Mosquito-bombers dropped two-ton block-busters on Berlin for the third consecutive night. These night attacks followed closely on widespread raids over German and Nazi-controlled territory, carried out by more than 2,500 heavy and fighter planes of the USAAF.

Stettin is the chief Baltic Sea port used by the Germans to supply their troops in Finland, and lies on the upper flanks of the Russian front now stabbing into the Baltic states. The targets in the city were chemical plants and oil refineries. The attack on Kiel was aimed at the naval base and shipbuilding yards. The Air Ministry said nearly 1,300 aircraft took part in the night's operations; 16 failed to return.

Jet-Propelled ME-163's

Reports of yesterday's American operations over Europe disclosed that United States fighters shot down at least 32 Nazi fighter planes, including two jet-propelled Messerschmitt 163's, another of these jet-propelled craft was damaged, a fourth refused to battle it out.

They complained that the German Army had deliberately sacrificed them, assigning them to suicidal rearguard action in an effort to gain time for the withdrawal of more valuable troops of the Panzer, parateop, and SS units.

One 35-year-old German factory worker recently recruited into the army said there had been no food issued in his company for five days. He said that he and his fellows had milked cows and had eaten green vegetables picked up in the fields.

«Five times on a two-week march from Germany,» he said, they gave us soup, but no other hot food. Then we had to stay behind while SS troops going back left us nothing».

Another prisoner, who said he also had been a factory worker, told the correspondent that he had been given French prisoners, to teach them his job, and then was forced into the army.

«Before entering the army,» he said, «we had to work 12 hours a day in the factory. So we thought it would be good to get into the army. And we wanted to come over to you, because it could not be worse being captured than keeping on with such jobs.» (OWI)

GERMAN OFFICER DECRIES «USELESS SACRIFICE»

LONDON, August 17 — The BBC yesterday broadcast the statement of a captured German officer discussing the vulnerability of the Germans' Atlantic defense wall, and the inevitability of the dissolution of the German armies.

Addressing his comrades in the fortresses at Brest, Saint Nazaire, and Lorient, the German officer said:

The generals are sacrificing our divisions without any real success. The way the fighting has gone in Normandy and Brittany shows better than anyone can say the inevitable dissolution which is at work in our armies.

I cannot advise you to choose to undergo the same moral shock and collapse we had to go through. The responsibility is yours. Destiny has decided against Hitler and his will for power. It is your turn to make use of the opportunity of serving your people by avoiding the useless sacrifice of the blood of your men. (BBC)

F. F. I. INCREASE ATTACKS AGAINST GERMANS

LONDON, August 17 — The resistance forces in France tonight drove the Germans to the defensive particularly along the Swiss frontier, where the French flag already is flying over most of the Franco-Swiss customs offices.

While Allied forces are striking the Germans with success from the northeast and from the south, the French Forces of the Interior were carrying on a full-fledged war in the midst of the Germans, killing hundreds of the enemy at every opportunity. The resistance fire now threatens to engulf the Germans even before the Allied troops reach the frontier.

The FFI in the Haute Savoie launched large-scale operations against German troops at 0400 hours today, according to a Berne dispatch. Supported by artillery, the French units struck at German garrisons near the frontier and by 0800 hours had liberated the towns of St. Julien and Cruseilles. The whole Salève and Monte Vuache area in the Geneva neighborhood is entirely in FFI hands.

In St. Julien the Bellevue Hotel, German headquarters, has been demolished, and the Germans have taken refuge in the cellars, where they have been fighting among themselves.

At Thonon, the Resistance movement has held up the evacuation of German wounded from hotels, monasteries, convents, and schools, where the enemy wounded have been receiving hospital treatment. The Wehrmacht has been clearly informed that, because of the German treatment meted out to French prisoners, they are keeping the wounded

Reports of yesterday's American operations over Europe disclosed that United States fighters shot down at least 32 Nazi fighter planes, including two jet-propelled Messerschmitt 163's; another of these jet-propelled craft was damaged, a fourth refused to battle it out.

The 163's were spotted flying above a formation of American heavy bombers, one of which was straggling behind, obviously the Messerschmitt's target. An American fighter pilot gave chase, and later reported that the 163 climbs at a terrific rate of speed. The German craft was out-maneuvered, however, just as it started in for the kill, and was itself shot down.

German aerial activity continued with one of the heaviest flying-bomb raids on southern England thus far. The attack, carried out last night, was said to have been a series of waves that soared across the channel in quick succession. Added attacks on southern England and on London were delivered this morning.

The Air Ministry revealed that Buckingham Palace has been hit by one of these bombs. The announcement said fragments of the burst blew out windows and window frames of the King's official residence, and did some damage to the Palace grounds. (Reuter - OWI)

GERMAN PRISONERS COMPLAIN OF NAZI ABUSE

FRONT LINE TOWN, NORTHERN FRANCE, August 17 — German prisoners questioned by a newspaper correspondent declared today that they had been forced into the front line at the point of guns, and that they had arrived worn-out, hungry, and poorly equipped.

LONDON, August 17 — The BBC recorded the statement of a captured German officer discussing the vulnerability of the Germans' Atlantic defense wall, and the inevitability of the dissolution of the German armies.

Addressing his comrades in the fortresses of Brest, Saint Nazaire, and Lorient, the German officer said:

The Wehrmacht has been clearly informed that, because of the German treatment meted out to French prisoners, they are keeping the wounded as a reserve of hostages. The Resistance leaders guarantee to treat the enemy wounded in accordance with international law. German doctors and nurses may leave if they wish, and they will be replaced by French doctors.

The latest report from the FFI stated that the town of Annecy on the frontier is surrounded by 13,000 FFI troops.

Railwaymen of two large French railway networks — eastern and northern — are on strike, it was reported today. (Reuter-OWI)

CLASHES IN PARIS STREETS

LONDON, August 17 — Fighting broke out in the streets of Paris, yesterday, when collaborationists tried to break up demonstrations staged by citizens, the American Broadcasting Station in Europe announced today.

When Paris is quiet, the sound of approaching gunfire can be distinctly heard, according to reports from the frontier. At night, the sky is red with fires as RAF bombers start their work and the Germans blow up their own arms depots in the path of the advance. Throughout the hours of darkness there is sniping, and occasional bursts from tommy-guns — French patriots raiding some militia post.

Reprisals or attacks against the German military garrison have been suspended by the FFI, for the moment, so as not to involve Parisians in any measure which the Germans might try to initiate.

On the other hand, the Germans no longer interfere with FFI activities and allow them to fight it out with the militia, which is dissolving rapidly, either through shooting or through men going over to the Maquis.

By day, there are great fires in Paris courtyards, as the Wehrmacht and ministries burn their files to keep them from the Allies. There is little traffic on the streets, and most of that consists of German military lorries and staff cars heading East.

Only the Wehrmacht divisional headquarters are now left in advanced battle zones. The Corps headquarters of the 7th Army are ensconced in the west bank forests while the army headquarters are already on the west bank of the Seine. The Gestapo has been ordered to transfer 1,500 political prisoners from Paris to Metz. French Resistance forces have, in turn, been instructed to use every effort to prevent this.

The utmost disorder also reigns in Vichy. Telephone communications are still interrupted, but rare travellers from France reported here that the town is virtually in a state of siege. Heavily armed guards fill the streets and keep a watch on public services. It is believed that Pétain has left, though his destination is not known.

Doat is conducting a violent attack against Laval in Paris, accusing him of taking no steps for the evacuation of the population of Normandy. Doriot, who returned from the front bluffing that the Germans were going to pulverise the Allied armies, seems to have sunk into hiding. (PWB)

RIVIERA BEACHHEAD 50 MILES WIDE

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — French and American troops have pushed 21 miles inland in an arcing, swiftly advancing front more than 50 miles wide which has liberated at least 14 towns and spread over more than 500 square miles of the French Riviera.

Allied forces have approached to within three and a half miles of the resort town of Cannes, at the northeastern edge of the advancing front, and to within less than nine miles of the great naval base of Toulon at the southwestern extremity of the enlarging beachhead.

The sweeping drive of French and American forces has engulfed the key Riviera railroad and its parallel highway for more than 55 miles of its length, and cut off direct communications between the two great Mediterranean ports of Marseilles and Nice.

Enemy forces, stunned by the pace and power of the Allied blow, are in confusion, it was reported here just before midnight tonight.

Elements of two German divisions have so far been identified in the area of the bridgehead. Approximately 40 per cent of these forces, which included fortress engineers, marines, and other units were soldiers from Ost battalions, recruited in the eastlands conquered by the Reich in the early stages of the war. Most of them are Russian prisoners of war and Czechs and Poles, impressed into service against their countrymen. The Allied report stated: «Their combat efficiency and morale were not high.»

Patriot Intelligence Reports

The announcement also revealed that the original Allied landings had relied heavily upon intelligence reports from French Patriots, which enabled the original forces to strike along a 35-mile coastal sector defended by two German regiments and other units. The spearhead of the attack thrust through the border zone of the two separate divisions to which these regiments belonged, and this factor, plus a two-hour air bombardment and a half-hour naval bombardment, disrupted the enemy defenses.

The list of towns announced as captured in the initial assault phase includes Cannes, Antibes, Grasse, Vallauris, Mandelieu, Cannet, Golfe-Juan, Mougins, Le Rouret, Le Tignet, Callian, Montauroux, Fayence, Tanneron, Mons, Bagnols-en-Forêt, Le Muy, Les Arcs, Draguignan, Le Luc, Le Cannet des Maures, Cuers, Pierrefeu, Solliès-Pont, Solliès-Ville, La Farlède, La Valette, La Garde, Le Pradet, Carqueiranne, Hyères, Le Lavandou, Bormes-les-Mimosas, Cavalaire, La Croix-Valmer, Gassin, Ramatuelle, Cogolin, Grimaud, St. Tropez, Port-Grimaud, La Môle, Gassin, Ste. Maxime, Le Plan-de-la-Tour, Les Adrets, Roquebrune, Fréjus, St. Raphaël, Puget-sur-Argens, Vidauban, Le Muy, Les Arcs has left, though its destination is not known.

The spearhead of the attack thrust through the border zone of the two separate divisions to which these regiments belonged, and this factor, plus a two-hour air bombardment and a half-hour naval bombardment, disrupted the enemy defenses.

The list of towns announced as captured in the midnight report from AFHQ included the department capital of Draguignan, 18 miles northeast of the Gulf of Frejus and on a tributary of the Argens River. This town is along the main Riviera railway and its parallel motor highway.

La Napoule, easternmost point on the beachhead, is on the famed Corniche section of the road, where it skirts the Mediterranean in winding contours around the cliffs of the Cote d'Azur. La Napoule is just three miles across the Bay of Napoule from the larger resort of Cannes.

The fourth of the towns announced as captured tonight and along the main Riviera road is Cuers, on a hilltop overlooking the woods and plains northeast of Toulon. Cuers is less than nine miles from this great naval base. The fifth town along the road is Vidauban, 13 miles due north of the Gulf of Troper.

The one town captured today which is not on the Marseilles-Nice road is Flesse, where Allied troops have pushed four miles further north to occupy this community. It is roughly 18 miles inland from the Bay of Hyeres.

The town of Lorgues, 21 miles inland from Frejus, where one of the original landings was made, is the point of farthest Allied penetration. A picturesque town of 3,200

St. Tropez and St. Maxime, on the northern and southern edges of the Gulf of Grimaud, are small seaport and resort towns roughly 25 miles southwest of Cannes.

Collobrieres is eight miles inland from Lavandou, and about halfway between the coast and the railway and main highway running inland.

Hyeres Not Yet Taken

From official reports it is evident that the large resort town of Hyeres, roughly 11 miles east of Toulon, has not yet been taken by Allied forces. But if the distance of nine miles, given as the distance of leading Allied troops from the big French naval base, is measured along the inland road into the city, it would place Allied elements near the village of Guers, in the midst of the low woodlands and forests which mark this approach to the seaport.

If the same procedure is applied to the area west of Cannes, it is evident that Allied forces may be near the coastal village of Anthoor, and inland across the Domaniale de l'Esterel, past the village of Mines de Boson over the overland road.

The special communique issued this afternoon was the first direct official news coming from the Riviera Beachhead, as well as the first from Major General Alexander Patch's American 7th Army Headquarters. It was also announced for the first time that three veteran American Divisions spearhead the landing operations. The listing of specific towns captured and details on the extending of the bridgehead secured were also released officially for the first time.

It was announced earlier today that Allied troops had pushed 11 miles inland and had joined up with elements of parachute forces dropped behind the enemy coastal defenses. Armored units, both French and American, had been landed, and were ready to give their full impact to the Allied spearheads fanning out from beaches, it was reported. (PRO)

RIVIERA LANDING DAY AHEAD OF SCHEDULE

ALGIERS, August 17 — The Allied landings in southern France were one day ahead of schedule, John J. McCloy, Acting U. S. Secretary of War, said at a press conference today in Washington.

German resistance was mainly concentrated on the flanks of the Allied bridgehead, BBC commentator Vaughn Thomas reported tonight. There is so much material ashore now, that it is difficult to see how the enemy can achieve anything more than a delaying action for the time being. There has been no sign of any forces the enemy may have had in reserve for a quick counter-attack.

Shortly before he embarked for northern France, the commander of the French forces, General de Lattre de Tassigny, told a correspondent: "I am going to a region of France that I know well. I have an account to settle with the Germans, and with others too." General de Tassigny started a revolt in southern France when the Germans occupied the whole country in 1942. He was arrested by Vichy, and sent to prison, but he later escaped and joined General de Gaulle last December.

French troops were the first to land in the south of France, combined U. S. press correspondent Larry Newman said yesterday. The successful French attack cleared the way for the general furtherance of the entire operation. On one island, the French captured 240 Germans for the loss of two wounded and none killed.

In the village of St. Tropez, French police evacuated the population at three o'clock as the Germans were to blow up the harbor at four. An Exchange Telegraph correspondent said that the explosion reduced the quays and jetties to ruins. He also reported that in November, 1943, the enemy-controlled administration of the town nominated for mayor a man who for two years had been a leader of the Resistance Movement. (OWI)

DUMMY GUNS DEFENDED ISLE DU LEVANT

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — German troops relied upon four dummy 120-millimeter coastal guns, made of two stovepipes, a roll of heavy cardboard, and a log, to defend the strategic island of Levant, off Hyeres and only 24 miles east of the big naval base of Toulon, a young Canadian naval officer revealed today. The dummy guns, which were placed where they seemed to threaten the approach to Cap Negre and the Bay of Hyeres to the west, were among the first objectives taken by Allied Assault Forces, according to Sub-Lieutenant Scott Young, of the Royal Canadian Naval Reserve. The sub-lieutenant was aboard an assault craft which formed part of an entirely new landing technique employed to capture the island six hours before the first troop landings on the Riviera beaches. Shielded by the guns of American, Canadian, and British warships, the Commando forces were carried ashore in assault boats towing smaller rubber craft, and screened to within 15 yards of the high, bluff shore by American motor patrol boats. At 1,000 yards distance from the beach, the assault craft set free the rubber boats, which were then rowed ashore by their crews of Commandos.

To scale the steep cliffs at the waters edge was a task which tried all the Commandos' training, the Canadian naval officer said. But after they had got to the top, they fanned out inland, and quickly overwhelmed most of the island's defenders.

Only at the western end of the island did the enemy hold out for any length of time. Most of the island's garrison, equipped only with light weapons, surrendered immediately to avoid needless sacrifices. Only one gun, a two-centimetre anti-aircraft gun, was found on the whole of the strategic island, aside from the heap of rubbish used to simulate coastal defenses. Lieutenant Young said that some of the survivors of a small, 800-ton armed French vessel, set afire from end to end by an American destroyer's salvo, had told him that the Germans had sent out eight tiny ships to turn back the Allied invasion armada of 800 warships and assault craft. The German crews, convinced that they were embarking on a hopeless mission, took advantage of shore leave in Marseilles to send everything they had of value home to their families. (PRO)

EISENHOWER CONGRATULATES WILSON ON LANDINGS

SHAEF, August 17 — General Dwight Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, today congratulated General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of the Mediterranean Theater, on the success of the Allied landings in Southern France. General Eisenhower stated that the landings in the French Riviera had gotten off «to a flying start.»

General Eisenhower's message continued: «Every step of your progress will bring a wail of dismay from the Hun and a cheer from all of us here.»

In his reply to General Eisenhower, General Wilson said: «We have been very gratified by the progress so far, and are looking forward to a successful development of these operations.»

General Wilson added that without the material support made available by the Allied offensives in Brittany and Normandy, the undertaking in southern France would have been impossible. (PRO)

CHURCHILL GREETS R.A.F. CONTINGENT

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill cheered in a launch, the ship carrying a contingent of RAF personnel, the only British troops in the initial assault, as the Great Allied armada made its way to southern France, it was revealed today.

Supplies Dropped Again

Boston bombers again today dropped supplies and ammunition to American paratroopers in southern France.

Major Gene Vance, commander of the squadron, who landed supplies to isolated Allied troops near Cassino at the beginning of the year, again led the formation in the difficult mission.

Nice Harbor Aflame

Fires were burning in Nice Harbour early this morning, according to reports of night patrol bombers maintaining a dusk-to-dawn vigil over the Allied beachhead along the French Riviera.

The returning crewmen also reported enemy transport columns along roads from Genoa to Alessandria in Italy, and also in the vicinity of Turin and Savona.

Only slight movement was reported in the Cannes-Nice-Albenga area.

4,285 MAAF Sorties

Mediterranean Allied Air Force flew a total of 4,285 sorties on the initial day of the Allied landings along the French Riviera, it was announced here today. Flying Fortresses, Liberators, Mitchells, Marauders, Havocs, Thunderbolts, Mustangs, Lightnings, Dakotas, and Spitfires were among the heavy bombers, medium bombers, fighter-bombers, and fighters which swarmed over the landing areas to support the allied operations.

The new record far exceeds the previous high of 3,000 flights set on May 25, 27, and 29, when Tactical Air Force was harrying the German retreat south of Rome and strategic bombers were striking at enemy targets in southern France, Austria, and the Balkans.

An Air Force announcement yesterday contained the statement of a Liberator bombardier that he had seen Allied troops landing as his formation of heavy bombers struck at the beach road to Frejus, a town near the gulf of the same name, and some 16 miles west of Cannes. The Air Force announcement quoted the bombardier as saying that hundreds of landing craft were circling off the low sandy beaches around the Gulf of Frejus, and warships further offshore were shelling this town itself. The entire area of Frejus and Saint Raphael, a nearby waterside village, had been subjected to heavy air bombardment before D-day. In addition to the areas indicated, other sheltered beach areas where landings might have been made are located just west of Cannes, on the shores of the Gulf of Napoule. The beaches around the gulf of Saint Tropez, protected by the wooded promontory on which St. Tropez is located, and near Hyeres. Other smaller beaches dot the precipitous coastline, but nearly everywhere the cliffs rise sheer from the water's edge. A winding, spectacular motor highway rims this shoreline, which has become a famous vacation haven for all Europe.

Road Convoy Blasted

A convoy of German motor trucks, towing mobile guns toward the beaches in southern France, was blasted from the road yesterday by a formation of American-flown Thunderbolt fighter-bombers. In the bombing and strafing attack, 42 of the vehicles were set ablaze, and the others were badly damaged. The convoy was spotted several miles inland, and was apparently being rushed southward to try to stem the Allied push inland.

The Prime Minister passed through most of the long lanes of ships in a highspeed launch to greet the British and American troops, late Saturday afternoon. Troops cheered as the Prime Minister stood in the bow of the launch and waved his familiar khaki sun helmet. (PRO)

20 ENEMY AIRCRAFT MET SINCE LANDINGS

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — RAF Spitfires on a later afternoon patrol yesterday encountered three FW-190's, to bring to 20 the total enemy aircraft encountered since the Allies' amphibious assault on the Riviera coast of France. The FW-190's were headed for the beach areas when sighted, but fled when discovered.

One New Zealand pilot chased one of the enemy planes 50 miles inland before losing him.

In other late afternoon missions yesterday, medium and fighter-bombers attacked gun positions 150 miles north of Marseilles and strafed railroad cars at Cavaillon, 50 miles up the Rhone Valley. Supply dumps and rail yards were struck at Orange.

Marauders attacked the Tarascon road bridge and gun positions near Toulon, now threatened by Allied forces. Heavy flak was encountered over the French naval base.

Fortresses, Liberators, Mitchells, Marauders, Havocs, Thunderbolts, Mustangs, Lightnings, Dakotas, and Spitfires were among the heavy bombers, medium bombers, fighter-bombers, and fighters which swarmed over the landing areas to support the allied operations.

RED ARMY NEARS EAST PRUSSIA NEAR MARIAMPOL

MOSCOW, August 17 The Red Army has pushed the Germans back against the wall of East Prussia northwest of Mariampol on the River Shashuka, tonight's Soviet communique announced. The Russians occupied more than 30 inhabited localities in the vicinity.

The Soviet push in the East Prussian direction brings the red Army to within striking distance of the East Prussian border towns of Bilderweitschen and Schirwindt, both northwest of Mariampol.

East of Praga, where the Germans were fighting a last-ditch battle to keep the Red Army from Warsaw, the Soviet forces repelled enemy counter-attacks of infantry and tanks, the communique added. A Reuter correspondent said that earlier German counter-attacks had been absorbed by a thick line of anti-tank and field guns, adding that even with these counter-attacks, in which the enemy are recklessly expending men and material, « the Germans are in a worse plight than before. »

The enemy was battling stubbornly with large forces of tanks and infantry west and southwest of Shavli to keep Red Army forces from closing the Baltic trap. There were reports that the German forces caught there had recently been reinforced by sea.

The bridgehead across the Vistula south of Warsaw was further enlarged, and 20 more inhabitated places taken.

From inside Warsaw came news that fighting had subsided somewhat yesterday in the north part of the Polish capital. In a broadcast from Warsaw, the BBC reported, a British soldier, fighting with the Polish Underground Army after escaping from a prisoner of war camp, said that German soldiers trying to escape to the Polish lines were being shot by an SS officer. (Reuter)

RAF DROPS ARMS TO POLES IN WARSAW

LONDON, August 17 — RAF bombers on Sunday night dropped arms and ammunition on Warsaw to help the Polish Underground Army fighting the «inside battle of Warsaw,» according to reports reaching here today.

General Bor, commander of the Polish Home Army, sent a message from Warsaw to the airmen who took part in the daring operations. It said: «Fighting Warsaw sends to the heroic airmen words of thanks and gratitude. We bow our heads to those crews which lost their lives.»

The London Times said that the hazardous operation did much to raise the morale of the Warsaw population which, in addition to the nearly five years of Nazi occupation and slaughter, have been in the midst of a battlefield for more than two weeks. (UWI)

GERMAN TANKS IN FLORENCE FIRE ON CIVILIANS

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — Italian Patriots report a «reign of terror» in the German-controlled sections of Florence, where enemy forces have brought up tanks to enter the city and fire upon civilians and carabinieri, it was officially announced here today. Both civilians and carabinieri were killed in the tank onslaught, it was said. German tanks were reported yesterday to have ringed the city, but today's official statement is the first indication that they have actually entered Florence. Since their evacuation of the northern part of the city, the enemy has continued sniper and machine-gun fire along its outskirts, which has both interfered with the Allies' transport of food for the civilians and has prevented the care or evacuation of wounded. The food situation in these outlying parts of the city has been reported to be grave. Allied patrol forces were active yesterday from Arno to the sea. Sharp clashes were reported at Pornacette, Valtcelle, and Angelica on the 5th Army Front, while 8th Army scouting forces, supported by armoured cars entered the town of Ugnano, on the south bank of the river, only to find no enemy forces in the vicinity. Patrolling also took place along the Adriatic coast and in the Mountains east of Pontassieve. Enemy evacuation of some mountain positions in the upper Tiber Valley was reported, but no appreciable change in the disposition of Allied forces ensues.

Ploesti Hit Again

Up to 500 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked military installations at Ploesti, Rumania, and a German airframe at Nis, in south central Yugoslavia. The bombardment at Ploesti was carried out by instrument through a heavy smoke screen. Intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered over the Rumanian oil and rail center.

Today's missions mark the complete return of Strategic Air Force planes to their normal objectives after having been diverted to direct support bombardment against enemy communications and coastal defenses along the Riviera. (PRO)

KESSELRING COURT-MARTIALS TWO OFFICERS

BERNE, August 17 — Field Marshal Albert Von Kesselring recently court-martialled two German commanders for executing orders with unjustifiable indecision, it was reported here today. A summary of a circular issued by Kesselring stated:

light bombers dropped 25 tons of bombs on installations at Namatanai, New Ireland, Kili Bay, and on enemy positions to the northwest. Enemy emplacements in Rabaul area of New Britain were also strafed and bombed by medium bombers and fighters. Air patrols raided Kahili, in the Bougainville sector, and adjacent strongpoints.

From Pearl Harbor, Admiral Chester Nimitz' communique said today that 57 tons of bombs have been dropped on Truk Island by Liberators of the 7th Army Air Force in attacks carried out Sunday and Monday. All Liberators returned to their base, and one of the Japanese interceptors was shot down, the communique added.

A Radio Tokyo broadcast picked up in New York yesterday committed the Japanese Navy to fighting the «decisive» battle somewhere along the «unbroken line connecting the Philippines with Japan.»

The broadcast, implicitly admitting Japan's defensive position, said: «It is here that Japan will take decisive action against the United States.»

In the midst of the war in the Pacific the United States is delivering election ballots to its armed forces in that sector by plane, truck and landing boats. A New York Times correspondent said an estimated 30 tons of balloting material will be sent out to cover an area twice as large as the United States. (Reuter - OWI)

TWO U.S. FLEETS READY TO WAR AGAINST JAPAN

GUAM, August 17 — Two U.S. Fleets are ready in the Pacific to wage a non-stop war against Japan, with the Marianas as a strategic springboard, Admiral Chester Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet, said during his first visit to liberated Guam. The two fleets are the 3rd, under Admiral Raymond A. Spruance, and the 5th, under Admiral William F. Halsey.

Admiral Nimitz said: «Saipan, Tinian, and Guam furnish excellent bases to move in the various directions we have in mind.»

The favorable European situation, the Pacific commander-in-chief suggested, might permit reinforcements to be sent to the Pacific in the not too distant future. (OWI)

CHINESE LAUNCH TWO NEW OFFENSIVES

CHUNGKING, August 17 — Chiang Kai Shek's forces on the Yangtze River front in Central China have launched an offensive against the strongly fortified trading city of Ichang, key base guarding the western approaches to Hankow.

Simultaneously, other Chinese forces have surrounded the walled city of Tengchung, principal Japanese base in southern Yunnan Province, and were said to have gained footholds on the southwest and northwest sides of the city.

Farther south, still other Chinese forces have beaten into the eastern outskirts of the Burma Road city of Lungling. Jap troops defending the city were driven back when they attempted to secure a Nip force isolated on a peak of a hill commanding the southeast approaches to the city.

Japs Retreat into Burma

From Kandy, Ceylon, came the announcement that organized Jap fighting forces have at last been driven out of Manipur State, India, and that Allied forces have consolidated their gains around Tamu, in the battle to break the Japanese hold on the Burma Road.

A communique from the Southeast Asia command said later today that retreating Japanese forces have crossed the frontier into Burma, and are two miles across the border.

37 TONS OF BOMBS ON TRUK IN TWO DAYS

ADVANCE ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 17 — Allied air activity continued yesterday over Japanese positions in the Pacific.

Today's MacArthur communique said Allied heavy and medium bombers destroyed 11 Japanese grounded planes and blasted the Lolobata airdrome in attacks on Halmahera Island yesterday. Coastal fortifications were severely bombed, and a number of small ships were damaged.

The communique also announced the bombing of Davao, capital of Mindanao, by land-based planes on Sunday. The wharf area was reported badly battered south of Halmahera, a 3,000-ton Japanese freighter was badly damaged by a direct hit from a Liberator bomber, while other heavy bombers pounded the Babo airdrome on the northwestern tip of New Guinea. Both these operations were carried out with no enemy opposition.

Patrol planes bombed Saumlaki, on the Tanimbar Islands. Other planes attacked the Manokwari supply areas, and the Nabire, Ransiki, and Waren airfields. Medium and

Turner went out alone to attack a strong force of Japanese in Burma. On his sixth journey back to his lines to get hand grenades he was killed. The citation read: «That night will ever be remembered.» (Reuter)

DESERT AIR FORCE BREAKS ITS RECORD

LONDON, August 17 — A famous RAF fighter-bomber wing of the Desert Air Force, operating every day in July, surpassed all its previous records for the number of missions flown and weight of bombs dropped over enemy targets in a single month, the British Air Ministry announced today.

Over 500 missions were flown, most of them in close support of ground forces and against enemy gun positions, and nearly 1,000,000 miles were flown. The month's tally included the destruction of 52 railroad trucks, 20 barges, a Siebel ferry, five tanks, and a number of motor vehicles. (PWB)

ALLIES TO OCCUPY GERMANY, JAPAN ROOSEVELT SAYS

WASHINGTON, August 17 — Allied troops will drive in and occupy Germany and Japan even if resistance collapses short of the German border, said President Roosevelt on returning from his 15,000 mile Pacific trip. There is speculation in Washington about another meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt to plan another major war move.

President Roosevelt said he knew nothing of the internal troubles in Germany that can make us feel sure the German war machine will blow up early.

«There is an interesting psychology study, not only of the German people, but of their military command — a characteristic to throw in the sponge when their borders are menaced because they don't want Germany overrun. They quit before we got in the last time, but they won't be spared invasion this time.

«If we let them quit, then the next generation will be told that Germany won the war.»

Turning to Japan, President Roosevelt said that nation must be sealed off from the peace-loving world until she proves herself willing and able to live with peace-loving countries. He called the Pacific campaigns — with the exception of Burma — our major responsibility, because we are stronger than our Allies, such as Australia and New Zealand.

Amplifying the theme of his speech at the Bremerton Navy Yard last Saturday, Mr. Roosevelt said that permanent defenses must be spread the full Pacific length of the Americas, to checkmate any future aggression.

On the domestic front, Mr. Roosevelt said he planned to turn his attention to post-war unemployment compensation legislation now pending in Congress.

AAI WARNS CIVILIAN SPIES

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 17 — The Allied Armies in Italy today advised all Italians who have accepted service as German spies to surrender themselves immediately as their only means of escaping the almost-certain death penalty.

The warning issued today was based on a statement by the Allied Security Services that they have been able to intercept 95 per cent of the attempted espionage on the part of civilians undertaking such activities in liberated Italy.

Sixteen Italian spies employed by the Germans against the Allies in Italy have been sentenced to death. Among those who received the death penalty were Bartolini Silvio and Pizzi Lorenzo. Lorenzo had been left in Rome by the Germans with a transmitter set by which he was able to send information to the retreating enemy.

Since the beginning of June, over 100 agents have been arrested. There are now 28 persons in prison waiting trial as spies and saboteurs.

The warning said that German authorities, with cynical disregard for the lives of their victims, have sent large numbers of poorly-trained agents into liberated territory. Most of those arrested have talked freely, so that Allied security forces are able to pounce on new arrivals almost the moment they start work. The notice added:

«All Italians who have accepted such missions, take note. We probably have your name and description on our list. If you are already in liberated Italy, we are searching for you. If you are about to come, we are waiting for you.

«You are advised to give up at the first opportunity; those who have been executed did not give themselves up. All those who have given themselves up are still alive.» (UNN)

REFUGEES TO BE FURNISHED TRANSPORTATION

ROME, August 17 — Rail transport between Naples and Southern Italy will be used to return refugees to their homes, it was announced here today by the War Refugees Commission of the Italian Government.

ROOSEVELT SAYS

WASHINGTON, August 17 — Allied troops will drive in and occupy Germany and Japan even if resistance collapses short of the German border, said President Roosevelt on returning from his 15,000 mile Pacific trip. There is speculation in Washington about another meeting between Churchill and Roosevelt to plan another major war move.

President Roosevelt said he knew nothing of the internal troubles in Germany that can make us feel sure the German war machine will blow up early.

«There is an interesting psychology study, not only of the German people, but of their military command — a characteristic to throw in the sponge when their borders are menaced because they don't want Germany overrun. They quit before we got in the last time, but they won't be spared invasion this time.

«If we let them quit, then the next generation will be told that Germany won the war.»

Turning to Japan, President Roosevelt said that nation must be sealed off from the peace-loving world until she proves herself willing and able to live with peace-loving countries. He called the Pacific campaigns — with the exception of Burma — our major responsibility, because we are stronger than our Allies, such as Australia and New Zealand.

Amplifying the theme of his speech at the Bremerton Navy Yard last Saturday, Mr. Roosevelt said that permanent defenses must be spread the full Pacific length of the Americas, to checkmate any future aggression.

On the domestic front, Mr. Roosevelt said he planned to turn his attention to post-war unemployment compensation legislation now pending in Congress.

PLAN FOR FRENCH PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, August 17 — A tri-partite agreement for the establishment of a Provisional Government of France was said to be on its way to London today.

An International News Service correspondent revealed last night that officials of the United States, Great Britain, and the French Committee of National Liberation, had completed the draft of an agreement setting up the conditions under which the FCNL will function as the French civil government in liberated areas.

The document was said to be on its way to London for British signature. (OWI)

OCCUPIED AREAS

HUNGARY TO RELEASE JEWS

LONDON, August 17 — A joint declaration by the United Kingdom and the United States governments, accepting the offer of the Hungarian government to release Jews, was issued here tonight. The statement said:

The International Red Cross communicated to the governments of the United States and the United Kingdom the offer made by Hungary with regard to the emigration and treatment of Jews. Because of the desperate plight of Jews in Hungary and the overwhelming humanitarian considerations involved, the two governments are informing Hungary that, despite the heavy difficulties and responsibilities involved, they accepted the offer of the Hungarian government for the release of Jews.

The two governments will make arrangements for the care of such Jews leaving Hungary who reach neutral or United Nations territory, and also they will find temporary havens of refuge where such people may live in safety.

Notification of these assurances is being given to the governments of neutral countries who are being requested to permit the entry of Jews who reach their frontiers from Hungary.

The governments of the United Kingdom and the United States emphasize that, in accepting the offer which has been made, they do not in any way condone the action of the Hungarian government in forcing emigration of Jews as an alternative to persecution and death. (Reuter)

HUNGARIAN MINISTER ESCAPES FROM ATHENS

LONDON, August 17 — The Hungarian Minister to Greece has escaped from Athens and made his way to Cairo, according to a Cairo report quoted on the Turkish Radio. (FWB)

DANISH GENERAL STRIKE ENDS

LONDON, August 17 — The orderly 24-hour general strike in Copenhagen, ordered by the Danish Freedom Council in protest against the murder of 11 hostages by the Gestapo, came to an end yesterday with no disturbances, the Swedish radio reported last night.

In addition to the Burmeister and Wain shipbuilding works, many warehouses, docks, and municipal offices were involved. All theatres and other places of entertainment and many shops and offices took part in the strike, the report said. (OWI)

DANISH GIRL SWIMMER FOILS GESTAPO

STOCKHOLM, August 17 — How a Danish girl swimmer out-witted the Gestapo was described here by the Stockholm correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

Jennie Kammersgaard, a swimmer who broke the record for crossing the 4-mile distance between Denmark and Sweden before the war, continued her practice swims after the Germans occupied Denmark.

A few days ago, said the correspondent, she made her last trip, this time as a refugee from the Gestapo. She had been carrying messages across the strait for the Danish Underground movement until an informer betrayed her to the Gestapo. (Reuter)

BELGIAN PATRIOTS STRIKE AUXILIARY RAILWAYS

LONDON, August 17 — Belgian Patriots have made numerous attacks on the tramways that serve as an auxiliary railway system linking most towns and villages, the Independent Belgian News Agency in London said yesterday.

The important line from Tournai to Ath in the Hainault Province has been cut in several places, the report added. (OWI)

FRENCH AUTHORITIES WARN GESTAPO

LONDON, August 17 — The BBC said today that the French Provisional Government has issued a warning to the German military commander of Paris, to his staff, and to all German commandants of prison camps in which there are Frenchmen, that they will be held responsible for the massacre of political prisoners.

One hundred and fifty such prisoners have already been reported shot by the Gestapo. (BBC)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE APHQ, August 17 — Today's communique:

Allied Forces in Southern France: Our troops continue to advance. At some points, light elements are 11 miles inland. The assault forces that came in over the beach have contacted elements of the paratroopers who landed further inland.

continue to clear the city of enemy elements and snipers to enable supplies to be delivered to the local population.

Although there is no major change in our dispositions all along the front in the mountains east of the upper Tiber Valley, our advanced troops now occupy a number of high points until lately held by the enemy.

Our reconnaissance patrols have been active along the Arno from Florence to the sea. A number of clashes occurred.

Unescorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked four railroad bridges in the south of France. Others escorted by fighters attacked the Ober Raderach Chemical Works near Friedrichshafen.

Tactical aircraft attacked road and rail bridges, gun positions, transport and supply dumps in southern France, northern Italy, and the Italian battle area. Others attacked transport and other military targets in Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and five of ours are missing.

Incomplete reports show MAAF flew more than 1,300 sorties.

It is now known that on 16 August, MAAF flew 1,283 sorties. (PRO)

SPECIAL, 7th ARMY

7TH ARMY HQ, SOUTHERN FRANCE, August 17 — Special communique:

Swift advance of American and French troops inland continues, and numerous additional towns and villages have been taken. All elements of the beachhead forces have been joined to form a continuous front, arcing inland with anchor points over 50-airline miles apart. The beachhead itself now embraces some 500 square miles. Among the more important population centers now firmly in our hands are the coastal towns of St. Tropez, St. Maxime, St. Raphael, Frejus, and Le Lavandou, and the inland towns of Le Muy, Le Luc, Lorgue, and Collobrieres.

Junction with the strong airborne units dropped far behind the enemy lines before dawn on D-day has been effected. French and American reinforcements, including armor, are pouring ashore. Casualties continue exceptionally light.

Major General Alexander M. Patch, commanding the 7th Army, announces that the landings were spearheaded by three veteran American infantry divisions. Our troops are now within 16 miles of Toulon and 19 miles of Cannes. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 17 — Today's communique:

Allied troops have made further gains in the Normandy pocket. Our forces are clearing the last of the enemy from the town of Falaise. East of the town, heavy fighting continues. Most of the road from Falaise to Conde is in our hands, and the town of Conde has been captured.

Forward elements advancing from the west and northwest have reached Flers. To the east, enemy opposition was bitter, and the Allied advance was more difficult because of the enemy's largescale use of mines, booby traps, and demolitions.

Further west, advances have been made east of Tinchebray which has been freed, and east from Ger. Mopping up has been completed in the vicinity of Juvigny and in Foret de Andaine, east of Domfront.

North of La Fert Mauy, and northeast of Domfront, gains of up to six miles have been made against resistance which varies from light to moderate.

In Brittany, the port of Lorient has been completely occupied. The German garrison at Saint Malo is maintaining stubborn defense in the citadel. Bad weather limited Allied air efforts over northern France yesterday.

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 17 — Today's communique:

Allied Forces in Southern France: Our troops continue to advance. At some points, light elements are 17 miles inland. The assault forces that came in over the beach have connected elements of the paratroopers who landed further inland.

Unloadings have exceeded expectations. The assault formations are completely ashore with full tank and tank destroyer units and a well-balanced stock of ammunition and supplies.

All seacoast defences have been silenced through effective air and naval bombardment.

Although resistance has been light, it has not been as slight as at first thought. Our casualties have been moderate, while there is good evidence that enemy losses have been heavy.

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander Allied Forces Mediterranean Theatre, with Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, visited the assault area in a British destroyer on August 16.

The latest reports received from the Naval Commander off the south coast of France, Vice Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, USN, show that the disembarkation of troops over the various beaches is proceeding according to plan. Convoys with reinforcements continue to arrive, and the empty convoys to leave. All Allied minesweepers have given good service. Apart from their work during the original assault, mined areas offshore required for the use of ships unloading have almost completely been cleared.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 17 — Thursday night's communique:

During August 17, north and northwest of Pesari (Piechury), our troops occupied in fighting over 150 populated localities, including Visuv, Rapin, Chlaushi, Inmashi, Taika, Kravi and the railway stations of Iluza and Tullage.

Northwest, west, and southwest of Smulial (Shavli), our troops engaged the enemy in stiff fighting, after which the enemy launched a strong tank and infantry offensive. In the course of fighting, our troops inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in men and material.

Northwest of Mariampol, our troops in fighting approached the borders of East Prussia on the River Sheshuka, and occupied over 30 populated localities.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

East of Praga, our troops successfully repulsed enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks.

Northwest of Sandomir, our troops continued successful operations for expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the River Vistula, in the course of which they occupied over 20 populated localities.

Our troops continued street-fighting in the town of Sandomir.

On all other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 16, our troops damaged or destroyed on all sectors of the front a total of 200 German tanks. In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 53 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 17 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots continue to operate behind the new German defensive positions. In the northern suburbs of Florence isolated clashes took place between Patriots and Nazi-Fascist patrols, who withdrew after suffering heavy losses.

In Haute Savoie, patriots, together with the FFI, have begun large-scale operations against the German troops, who surrender in groups as they retire towards the Italian border. Italian and French Patriot units strengthened their positions in the Alpine passes to hinder German troop movements.

The «Vittorio Sinigaglia» Patriot Brigade carried on intense activity against the Nazi-Fascists. Enemy losses thus far known totalled 70 Germans and 85 Fascists killed. The final count has not yet been ascertained. Patriots occupied the town of San Martino, scattering large Nazi-Fascist forces. Patriots attacked the Carabinieri barracks of Policastro and Castelnuovo di Sabbioni, capturing arms and munitions. The town of Vecchio di Mugello was occupied by patriots, and much booty was captured. Patriots occupied the town of San Brigida and set fire to the Fascist offices. They also took San Paolo and Poggio alle Croci.

Patriot forces disrupted an important telegraph line in the vicinity of Antella and San Donato, and an electric line near Figline. At Badia Corbioni, patriots destroyed two German armored cars and two tanks containing 300,000 liters of gasoline. Near Poggerino and Capannuccia, German forces were attacked by patriots, who forced them to free 20 hostages. Patrol clashes took place at Monte Scalari. A detachment of the Sinigaglia Brigade engaged large units of the Hermann Goering Division, S. S. troops, and the Muti Battalion, uniting later with another group of patriots at Poggio alle Croci. On August 3, after a bitter engagement with German troops, who used flame-throwers, patriot units made contact with Allied troops. They acted as guides and supplied the Allies with valuable information.

Two patriots executed Pachetti, Fascist airplane manufacturer, who had been serving the Germans. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 17 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, in the Dives sector and on both sides of Falaise, the 1st Canadian Army continued its strong attacks throughout the whole day. Our divisions frustrated the enemy attempt at breaking through in fluctuating fighting with heavy losses on both sides. Grim fighting is still in progress. Our tank formations, in a counter-attack, engaged the Americans who attacked proceeding from the Argentan sector and threw them back in an easterly and south-easterly direction. Motorized enemy forces continue to drive eastward toward the central reaches of the Seine and the Loire. Grim fighting is in progress for Chartres.

No major operations are reported from the Italian Front.

In northern Italy, 884 terrorists were killed from August 11 to 15.

In the foothills of the Carpathians, northwest of Krosno, Soviet attacks were repulsed after temporary infiltrations, in fierce counter-attacks. In the big Vistula bend, yesterday, 67 enemy tanks were destroyed in the course of fierce defensive and offensive fighting. On both sides of Wirballen, the Soviets, supported by strong tank and bomber formations, continued their attempts at breaking through throughout the whole day. Fierce fighting is in full swing.

On the Latvian Front, north of Birsen, our grenadiers maintained their positions in face of strong Bolshevist attacks. Fourty-nine enemy tanks were destroyed.

In Estonia, west of the Lake of Pskov, our troops continue to be engaged in grim fighting with advancing Soviet forces. In this sector, bomber squadrons supported the ground forces and struck at the enemy shuttling traffic over Lake Peipus and the Lake of Pskov, with good success. Eleven fully-loaded ferry-boats were sunk. The Soviets lost 16 planes in dog fights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries. In the central sector of the Eastern Front, bomber squadrons and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force destroyed 889 enemy tanks and brought down 1217 planes in the course of the last six weeks' fierce fighting.

Enemy bomber formations attacked localities in central and southern Germany. Particularly serious damage was caused in Magdeburg and Dessau. In the night, British bombers launched terror raids on Stettin and Kiel. Considerable damage was caused in the old parts of Stettin. The population suffered losses. Isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin and western Germany. The Air Defence Forces destroyed 49 enemy planes. (Radio Berlin)

ALLIES LAND ON SOUTH COAST OF FRANCE TWO ISLANDS AND CAP NEGRE LIBERATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — Today, American, British, and French troops, strongly supported by Allied Air Forces, landed on the southern coast of France between Nice and Marseilles. American, British, and French fleets, second in size only to that which made the initial landings in Normandy, supported the landing.

It was reported late tonight that the islands of Port Cros and Levant in the Hyeres group, and Cap Negre on the mainland of France have been liberated by French and American troops. The Allied beachhead on the French Riviera was extended and widened during the day.

Enemy opposition was sporadic as Allied troops pushed inland to capture high ground back of the beaches. No enemy air attacks have yet been encountered.

It was reported late tonight that, by dark this evening, substantial numbers of Allied troops, together with guns, munitions, and supplies, had been landed across the beaches seized in the initial operations this morning. Convoys are [illegible] path through the coastal waters to within a short distance of the beaches. There was no interference from enemy E-boats, planes, or submarines.

Up to 500 Italy-based heavy bombers blasted at German coastal batteries, invasion obstacles, and other enemy installations along the French Riviera, one hour before the landings. As the early morning haze cleared toward H-hour, and the troops began moving ashore, the aerial onslaught was continued by light and fighter-bombers which attacked concentrations of enemy troops, gun positions, and communications further inland. When Allied troops had secured their positions on the beaches, the fighter-bombers were diverted to targets still further inland.

The first objectives of the Allied troops were said to have been reached in less than one hour. Late this afternoon, it was officially announced that the landings were proceeding successfully and according to schedule against only light enemy ground opposition. The communique also stated that the airborne operations, carried out in support of the amphibious assault, were also successfully executed.

Rhone Bridges Bombed

Heavy bombers, for the second time today, attacked five highway bridges across the Rhone River between Valence and Avignon. Fighter-escorted Liberators and Flying Fortresses also bombed German installations on the beachhead and the beach road leading to Frejus, near the mouth of the Argens River, in support of ground operations.

The Allied landing climaxed an air offensive of 11 days, in which medium bombers, fighter-bombers, fighters, and strategic heavy bombers combined in a carefully worked out assault against German communications and military installations in the entire Riviera area.

The air assault began on August 2, when bridges over the Var and Esteron rivers, northwest of Nice, were attacked. These attacks continued to August 9, when medium bombers turned their blows against German anti-aircraft gun batteries, coastal guns, defenses, and radio communications. In the past two days, heavy bombers added their enormous power to the attack, striking at communications, harbor installations, and other defensive works along the French and Italian Rivieras.

The Germans have ordered all «non-essential» civilians out of Marseilles, BBC reported this afternoon.

In an effort to get data on the assembly of the Allied landing fleet, the German high command stepped up the reconnaissance activities of the Luftwaffe, it was reported here today. Due to the vigilance of Allied fighters, however,

ALLIES LAND ON SOUTH COAST OF FRANCE TWO ISLANDS AND CAP NEGRE LIBERATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — Today, American, British, and French troops, strongly supported by Allied Air Forces, landed on the southern coast of France between Nice and Marseilles. American, British, and French fleets, second in size only to that which made the initial landings in Normandy, supported the landing.

It was reported late tonight that the islands of Port Gros and Levant in the Hyeres group, and Cap Negre on the mainland of France have been liberated by French and American troops. The Allied beachhead on the French Riviera was extended and widened during the day.

Enemy opposition was sporadic as Allied troops pushed inland to capture high ground back of the beaches. No enemy air attacks have yet been encountered.

It was reported late tonight that, by dark this evening, «substantial numbers of Allied troops, together with guns, munitions, and supplies, had been landed across the beaches seized in the initial operations this morning. Convoys are already leaving the assault area, and new convoys are arriving as the Navy pushes forward its task of landing troops and supplies without intermission.»

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater, in a special proclamation to the people of France, stated that the purpose of the landings is to join up with the Allied armies advancing from Normandy.

14,000 Airborne Forces

The full striking force of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces was thrown into the offensive to help blast a way inland for the invading troops. More than 14,000 airborne forces, equivalent to the line strength of two divisions, were parachuted behind the enemy coastal defenses in a pre-dawn flight one hour before the first infantry troops were landed.

Seven waves of infantry, with 2,000 men or more, were landed in France before 1000 hours. More than 800 ships of all types and flying the ensigns of the American, British, French, Canadian, Netherlands, Polish, Greek, and Belgian navies, took part in the landings.

Covered by the heavy guns of battleships, cruisers, and destroyers, the assault craft started in toward the coast before dawn in hazy weather. Minesweepers cleared a safe [illegible] communications further inland. When Allied troops had secured their positions on the beaches, the fighter-bombers were diverted to targets still further inland.

The first objectives of the Allied troops were said to have been reached in less than one hour. Late this afternoon, it was officially announced that the landings were proceeding successfully and according to schedule against only light enemy ground opposition. The communique also stated that the airborne operations, carried out in support of the amphibious assault, were also successfully executed.

Rhone Bridges Bombed

Heavy bombers, for the second time today, attacked five highway bridges across the Rhone River between Valence and Avignon. Fighter-escorted Liberators and Flying Fortresses also bombed German installations on the beachhead and the beach road leading to Frejus, near the mouth of the Argens River, in support of ground operations.

The Allied landing climaxed an air offensive of 11 days, in which medium bombers, fighter-bombers, fighters, and strategic heavy bombers combined in a carefully worked out assault against German communications and military installations in the entire Riviera area.

The air assault began on August 2, when bridges over the Var and Esteron rivers, northwest of Nice, were attacked. These attacks continued to August 9, when medium bombers turned their blows against German anti-aircraft gun batteries, coastal guns, defenses, and radio communications. In the past two days, heavy bombers added their enormous power to the attack, striking at communications, harbor installations, and other defensive works along the French and Italian Rivieras.

The Germans have ordered all «non-essential» civilians out of Marseilles, BBC reported this afternoon.

In an effort to get data on the assembly of the Allied landing fleet, the German high command stepped up the reconnaissance activities of the Luftwaffe, it was reported here today. Due to the vigilance of Allied fighters, however,

LATE BULLETINS

GERMANS ADMIT NAVAL FIRE OVER WIDE AREA

LONDON, August 16 (Wednesday) — The German overseas news agency said early today: «Allied naval fire now extends over the whole length of the coast from San Remo, Italy, in the east to Toulon, in the west. German coastal batteries are replying. The Allied landings now extend over about 200 kilometers (125 miles).» (Reuter)

NEWS OF RIVIERA LANDING SWEEPS NORMANDY

WITH ALLIED FORCES IN NORMANDY, August 15 — News of the landing in southern France swept through Normandy today like wildfire, it was reported in a dispatch by a Reuter correspondent. All along the front, wherever the reports had reached, the troops hailed the landings as the «beginning of the end.» (Reuter)

RED ARMY KILLS 140,000 GERMANS IN MONTH

MOSCOW, August 15 — A special Soviet announcement tonight said that 140,000 Germans were killed on Marshal Konlev's 1st Ukrainian Front in south Poland between July 13 and August 13. (Reuter)

they managed to get one single photograph. Although the enemy employed high-speed, stripped models of swift JU-88's, JU-188's, and ME-410's, and the most skillful pilots, night and day fighter patrols kept them from the closely guarded Mediterranean port.

The assault on southern France was led by specially-trained Allied troops, many of them veterans of previous invasions and campaigns in the Mediterranean theater. The invasion troops underwent several weeks of intensive training in amphibious operations.

Churchill at Embarkation

Prime Minister Winston Churchill came to Italy primarily to bid farewell to Allied troops embarking for the amphibious assault on the French Riveria, it was stated here today.

The Prime Minister was anxious, according to a spokesman, to associate himself as closely with the Allied troops landing in southern France as he had with those carrying out the Normandy operations, and spent several days among the troops as they embarked. Mr. Churchill was everywhere received with cheers, as he gave his characteristic « thumbs up »

General Wilson's Proclamation

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater, addressed the following proclamation to the people of France as the Allied troops landed in the south:

The armies of the United Nations have landed in the south of France. Their objective is to drive out the Germans and to join up with the Allied armies advancing from Normandy. French forces are participating in these operations side by side with their Allied comrades in arms by sea, land, and air.

The Army of France is in being again, fighting on its own soil for the liberation of its country with all its traditions of victory behind it — Remember 1918.

All Frenchmen, civilians as well as military, have their part to play in the campaign in the South. Your duty will be made clear to you. Listen to the Allied radio, read notices and leaflets, pass on all instructions from one man and woman to another.

Let us end the struggle as quickly as possible, so that all France may resume again her free life under conditions of peace and security. Victory is certain. Long live the spirit of France and all that it stands for!

Planning Since July, '43

Military and naval leaders have been working on plans for the landing in southern France since July, 1943, it was announced today.

It was during the time of the landing at Sicily, on 10 July 1943 — a little over a year ago, that planning forces were put to work for the day when Mediterranean forces could land in France and bring the war more directly to Germany, a naval announcement declared.

44 Tons of Leaflets

Bombers of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force are dropping a total of 44 tons of pamphlets, including the text of Supreme Allied Commander Sir Henry Maitland Wilson's proclamation to the people of France, in operations over southern France, Brigadier General Arthur McChrystal, chief of the Information and Censorship Section, AFHQ, declared today.

The pamplets, prepared by the Psychological Warfare Branch, were in French and German, some of them being directed to German soldiers and containing surrender troop movement into this sector. This was effected today, when the last of the bridges over the Rhone south of Valence, over 100 miles from the sea, were cut, and when all rail traffic along the Riviera coastal line from Italy had been brought to a standstill through rail blocks and bridge knockouts.

The transport of airborne forces, employed to neutralize enemy coastal guns and to disorganize the rear areas of the German defensive zones, was a third task.

The provision of air cover for shipping and for the assault parties going ashore, and close combat air support, formed the last two tasks of the Air Forces in the operations, it was said.

To protect shipping, Tactical and Coastal Air Forces combined in patrolling anchorages and offshore convoy routes.

Landing Strips in France

Glider formations, bringing airborne forces into southern France, met with no interference, and landed at strips already laid out in bright red cloth markings, an eye-witness of these operations declared here tonight. Air-borne jeeps have already been landed.

Coming in in solid waves, stretching to the horizon, the tow planes and their gliders crossed over wooded hills and cliffs of the Riviera to land in a marked field in an inland valley, Flight Lieutenant Ian Low, RAF Observer Officer, told correspondents this evening. They saw only a few British vessels offshore, the RAF officer declared, and little signs of combat, although woodlands near Cannes were covered with smoke, as if afire, or under bombardment from naval or assault guns.

The RAF officer said that inland, the green and soft browns of the landscape were dotted with the bright hues of parachutes, where airborne troops had landed, and that fields were marked with huge letters T and Roman numerals III, to guide in the glider squadrons. Roads seemed empty, the Flight Lieutenant said.

ROUND-THE-CLOCK ASSAULT ON RIVIERA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — The Allied air assault on German coastal defenses and communications on the Mediterranean coast of France reached its peak yesterday, as heavy bombers paced the clock in day and night bombardment.

Liberators and Flying Fortresses from Italy hurled over 1,400 tons of bombs yesterday in more than 50 separate attacks on German coastal batteries defending the Toulon-Marseilles sector, and the Nice and Cannes districts further to the northeast.

Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers and fighters flew approximately 1,000 sorties yesterday, to add their weight to the slashing onslaught against German gun batteries, radio communications, and other installations along the Mediterranean shores, renowned for their fashionable resort towns.

RAF heavy bombers last night carried into the early morning hours the air assault, the most concentrated and prolonged since the beginning of the Italian offensive this spring. Shipping and port installations at Marseilles were hit.

The daylight heavy bombers did not encounter a single enemy fighter, although long-range fighters, operating independently, clashed with small formations of Focke-Wulf interceptors.

Mitchell bombers concentrated their attacks on enemy coastal batteries near St. Raphael on the Gulf of Frejus, and roughly 16 miles west of Cannes. The large force of Mitchells flew in 12 waves over the four main gun batteries which were their targets. These batteries were located at

12,700 Preparatory Sorties

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force has flown a total of 12,700 sorties exclusive of troop-carrying operations, in a carefully planned series of air assaults in preparation for the landings along the French Riviera, it was announced here today.

Of this total, it was said, 2,700 sorties were flown today, in smashing air blows to open gaps in the enemy beach obstacles and defenses, and to stun the German defenders.

The air force, in operations against military installations and communications in southern France, had five distinct tasks to fulfil in connection with the Allied landings, it was declared.

The first of these was to neutralize the enemy air force — largely accomplished through the strategic bombing which has destroyed German aircraft factories and crippled its fighter forces.

A second task of the MAAF was to smash road and rail routes into the area to be attacked, in order to retard enemy

Mitchell bombers concentrated their attacks on enemy coastal batteries near St. Raphaël, on the Golf of Frejus, and roughly 16 miles west of Cannes. The large force of Mitchells flew in 12 waves over the four main gun batteries which were their targets. These batteries were located at St. Tropez, 12 miles southwest of St. Raphaël; at Cap Camarat, 15 miles southwest of this coastal village; and at points just east and west of Frejus. Smoke columns 2,500 feet high rose when the guns at Cap Camarat were hit by high explosives.

Marauders, including French-piloted planes, hit the guns around St. Tropez also. Guns on the offshore Isle du Levant, southeast of Toulon, were also struck.

Fighter bombers smashed a 250 feet-long concrete rail bridge between Nice and Briel, on the eastern end of the Cote d'Azur. Other Fighter-bombers slashed at radio installations from Nice west to the Rhone Valley.

MAAF flew 1,900 sorties yesterday, and 2,100 on Sunday, for a two-day high of 4,000 sorties. (PRO)

FRENCH WORKERS URGED TO CRIPPLE TRANSPORT

ALGIERS, August 15 — An appeal to members of the transport and communication services in France to cripple road, rail, and canal routes which the Germans might attempt to use, was made by the Supreme Allied Command, Mediterranean Theater, today. The message said:

Members of the Transport and Communication Service. You can play an important rôle in the battle against enemy lines of communication. At the present time there are no «secondary» railway lines or navigable routes from the enemy's point of view, all lines of communication are of vital importance. If the Germans try to turn their traffic onto the so-called «secondary routes,» it is up to you to insure that they will not get out of them.

Every mile of railroad, canal, or highway which can be used by the enemy has become vital. Allied air forces are pounding German lines and centers of communication. Help them in this mission. (PWB)

RIVIERA LANDING AND NORMANDY FRONT THREATEN ENTIRE GERMAN WESTERN ARMY

SHAEF, August 15 — All France is today gripped in the biggest pincer movement of the war. Allied armies stormed ashore on the Mediterranean coast to form the southern claw of the trap set exactly 70 days ago when General Eisenhower's armies landed in Normandy.

The vast strategic plan now unfolded dwarfs by comparison the trapping of the German 7th Army in the Falaise-Argentan pocket. This new move threatens to crush the whole German army in the west.

Late reports tonight state that there are no signs of large numbers of Germans withdrawing through the nine-mile-wide, bomb-cratered Falaise-Argentan escape route. Any slight movement there is perfectly orderly and not in panic «bumper-to-bumper» formations. So much pressure is being exerted from Allied aircraft and from artillery fire directed to the north from Argentan and to the south from Falaise, that General Von Kluge is unable to effect a mass withdrawal.

Press reports stated that as a result of lack of mobility, General von Kluge seems to have chosen, or has been ordered, to stand and fight in the manner of Stalingrad. Von Kluge may be planning to withdraw from the area around Mortain to place armor near the escape gap, and regroup his surrounded forces.

When the Falaise-Argentan gap is closed, it is possible that the Germans may try to break out to the south, as there is no closely integrated line. But the Americans are now astride all vital road networks — Mortain, Domfront, Argentan. This line has further been strengthened by the capture of La Ferte Mace, 12 mile east of Domfront, and Runes, 11 miles southwest of Argentan.

Escape Routes Blocked

Every main escape route is blocked to Von Kluge, but it is possible that small columns may penetrate between the main junctions. Constant air pressure makes it unlikely that he will be able to disengage his forces sufficiently to regroup for a determined attempt to break out. His present movements simply indicate an attempt to fall back to stronger positions from which to fight.

A British staff officer in the field declared that «enemy reinforcements are still arriving in the Normandy area, but they are 80 per cent foreign slave troops who probably will be left behind as sacrifice rearguards.»

On the Canadian-British sectors, useful advances have been made today. North of Falaise, the Canadians are now within one mile of the town, and dominate the high ground overlooking it.

Canadian troops now hold Hill 184 and the village of Epany, four miles northeast of Falaise. This may indicate an outflanking drive to cut the escape route east of Falaise.

South of Thury-Harcourt, which has now been cleared of the enemy, the town of Caumont was liberated. Other British forces, driving past Proussy toward Conde sur Noireau, have reached the village of St. Denis de Mere, cutting a vital lateral road used by the Germans between Conde and Falaise, and throwing the German bastion at Conde into complete jeopardy.

battled their way forward toward the port. There were no changes in the situation at Lorient or Brest.

A German battery on the Island of Alderney, off the northwest tip of the Cherbourg Peninsula, was shelled for 31 minutes Saturday by British battleship, HMS Rodney, it was reported today. (OWI-Reuter-EBC)

19 ENEMY AIR BASES BLASTED

LONDON, August 15 — At least 19 German air bases along the Rhine, in Belgium, Holland, and Germany, were attacked today by Allied air fleets. RAF and USAAF forces of heavy bombers dropped about 3,000 tons of bombs on their targets. While over 1,100 Lancasters and Halifaxes of RAF Bomber Command attacked five airfields in Holland and four in Belgium, USAAF Liberators and Fortresses, nearly 1,000 strong, escorted by as many fighters, slashed at three operational airdromes and at seven non-operational stations for the German Air Force. The non-operational stations, with their clusters of workshops and installations, are used for maintenance and repairs. Results, generally, were good to excellent. Two RAF bombers are missing. USAAF losses were not announced.

The targets included the following: The German Air Force base at Cologne-Ostheim, Wiesbaden-Erbenheim, Frankfort-Eschborn, Wittmund, Ardorf, Bad Zwischenheim, and Handorf, Enschede in Holland, and Florennes in Belgium. During last night, Mosquitoes of the RAF attacked Berlin.

Widespread night attacks were made on the Germans from France to Berlin by RAF Mosquitoes and 9th USAAF Marauders. While Mosquitoes raided Berlin, Marauders blew up an ammunition dump within 50 miles of Paris. Night patrol squadrons of Mosquitoes reported seeing large fires burning in the Falaise-Argentan gap along the battle area of Western France.

Escaping Troops Bombed

While Allied Bomber formations were concentrating on the enemy's air bases in Western Europe, other Allied airmen bombed the German troops attempting to escape from the pocket in the Argentan-Mortain-Vire-Falaise sector, carrying out Eisenhower's order of the day that the enemy be attacked unceasingly by day and by night, and be denied safety, either in fight or in flight. Allied aircraft continued their attacks on enemy troops and convoys attempting to withdraw through the narrowing escape corridor, and before noon today had flown hundreds of sorties, striking at anything moving on the roads in the area.

Maintaining their vigilance over enemy coastal traffic, Mosquitoes and Beaufighters of the RAF coastal command attacked enemy warships in the Gironde River basin yesterday. Mosquitoes attacked a destroyer, an escort vessel, and trawlers off Le Verdon with bombs, depth charges, and cannon, while Beaufighters struck at a depot ship and other trawlers off St. Vivien. An Air Ministry communique announcing this said that an explosion was seen on the destroyer and a fire started on the escort vessel, and many rocket projectiles were seen to strike the depot ship. Four allied aircraft are missing from these operations.

German flying bomb attacks on England are now causing fewer casualties, according to the British Minister of Health, Mr. H. U. Willink. He told a Birmingham audience yesterday that fatalities per flying bomb in England today are about one-third the number incurred during the first fortnight of the attacks, when they averaged about one per bomb.

«The full force of the flying bomb attacks, which enter their third month today, has been broken considerably by round-the-clock fighter patrols, anti-aircraft coastal barrages, and elaborate systems warning of of their approach,» the Minister declared. (Reuter)

North of Argenton, German resistance has increased appreciably, but American troops have now forced their way into the city itself and are fighting in the streets. Other units are reported north of the city.

Allied troops have pushed forward to within three miles of Vassy, while another column has advanced to within one mile of Tinchebray. The western end of the Normandy pocket has been pushed in further by the capture of Ger, eight miles east of Mortain.

On the southern boundary of the pocket, American tanks and infantry have reached Domfront, and are now operating well beyond the town.

The American 3d Army under General George Patton has gained ground so fast that the corps and army headquarters had to send artillery scout planes to check on locations of its units.

Allied aircraft are operating by the thousands in direct tactical support of the ground action. Beside hammering at the encircled Germans, fighters-bombers and heavy bombers ranged over the entire area of France, bombing and strafing roads, bridges, rails, fixed installations, and every type of vehicle that moved.

In Brittany, the remaining Germans in the St. Malo citadel continued to hold out. At Dinard, American troops Frankfort-Eschborn, Wittmund, Ardorf, Bad Zwischenheim, and Handorf, Enschede in Holland, and Florennes in Belgium. During last night, Mosquitoes of the RAF attacked Berlin.

900 LOCOMOTIVES BLASTED IN EIGHT DAYS

LONDON, August 15 — The 8th USAAF has been counting up the damage inflicted upon Nazi transport facilities in the eight days from August 7 to the 14, inclusive. The final counting was called the greatest record of transport destruction ever achieved by a single air group.

There were 900 enemy locomotives destroyed or damaged. Also destroyed or damaged were 9,000 railway cars, 800 oil tank cars, 187 ammunition cars, and 572 trucks. At the beginning of the period, this German rolling stock was trying to reach the front from the Pas de Calais, through Paris. None of it ever got there, and the remnants of trains were shunted back to Brussels. (Reuter)

EARLY END IS WISHFUL THINKING.

SHAEF, August 15 — General Eisenhower, at a press conference today, warned against expectations that the war would end in a matter of weeks.

As quoted by the Associated Press, General Eisenhower, summarizing conditions « in one of the war's most critical situations — for the Germans, » said:

« This week is marking a very definite climax in one phase of the operational plan that has been in effect since

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 799021

D-day. Just what will be the result in the sum total, no one can say.

«It is certain that the German forces congregated on our front are taking a sound beating.

«In the campaigns lying ahead, numbers of such tactical victories must be won because, even if we realize our fondest hopes in a situation such as this, we are still a long way from the Rhine.

«All of us are keyed up to keep on intensifying our efforts to the moment of final victory — no matter how long it may take.»

The Allied Supreme Commander again cited the co-ordination among the Army, Navy, and Air Force, and their supply services. In paying tribute to the RAF and the USAAF he said that the Allies now were realizing opportunities that they had expected to have all through the campaign because they had hoped for good weather.

He said, however, that a man who attempts to measure the remaining length of the war in terms of weeks is not trying to use any logic, but merely hunches and wishful thinking.

He added that Hitler has nothing to lose by fighting to the last man. Furthermore, he said, with people fighting under the heel of a despot and not in the «spontaneous co-operation of free people,» as the late President Wilson remarked, there is no reason to expect them to quit until the bitter end. GERMAN 7TH ARMY HAS VIRTUALLY LOST BATTLE

LONDON, August 15 — Operations on the western front reached a new pitch of intensity yesterday, as blow after blow was rained on the German 7th Army, which has virtually lost the battle of Normandy.

Hundreds of heavy and medium bombers of the RAF resumed the offensive against what remained of the enemy's hinge position at Falaise. Correspondents said that it is believed some of Rommel's armour escaped from the trap in time during the eastward movement observed over the week-end, but inside the seething cauldron of the Normandy salient into which the enemy so recklessly flung his reserves to check the American thrust at Mortain, there are many more panzer and infantry divisions than those that got away. Now, the dispatches from Normandy tell how these forces are being squeezed and mauled from almost every direction.

Montgomery's master plan is unfolding. The 2d British Army, which has hardly had a pause since its Caumont offensive, was launched into the hills 16 days ago and is pressing down remorselessly from the north towards Conde and through the woods south of Thury-Harcourt.

Far to the south and east, American infantry and armor have swung round with almost breathless speed and have gained command of the roads at such key points as Fougeres, Mayenne, Laval, Le Mans, Alencon, and Argentan.

Good Flying Weather

The weather has been uniformly good, correspondents report, as good as it was for the enemy in 1940, and out of a clear sky the Allied air forces are taking a mounting toll of enemy tanks and transport as they are increasingly compelled to use the roads by day.

Normandy's deep-cut lanes, said the London Times correspondent, are proving a mixed blessing for the enemy. Large columns of tanks have been found in the lanes, all of them destroyed and burned out at the head and tail of the column. There have been tanks bearing the unmistakable sign of attacks by Typhoons, but the others, trapped between the steep banks and cut off from advance or retreat, bear the marks of destruction by their crews—blown turrets and fuel set alight.

A considerable battle is almost certain to develop in the Argentan-Falaise area, with almost every conceivable

The American 12th Army Group comprises the 1st and 3rd Armies. Lieut. General Omar Bradley was formerly in command of the 1st Army, and is succeeded by Lieut. General Courtney H. Hodges.

The French 2d Armored Division is now fighting with Lieut. General George Patton's 3rd Army.

Until the formation of the 12th Army Group was announced today, General Montgomery had commanded all ground forces in Normandy and Brittany. Now the commands have been split. General Montgomery's 21st Army Group embodies the 3d British and 1st Canadian armies. (OWI - Reuter)

GERMAN VESSELS DAMAGED IN R.N. ATTACKS

LONDON, August 15 — Several German vessels were severely damaged early this morning during three naval engagements in the vicinity of the German-occupied naval base of La Rochelle, on the Bay of Biscay. Not a single casualty or damage was suffered by the British forces.

Led by the cruiser Mauritius, the British force first contacted the Germans during the hours of darkness, engaging a small convoy, escorted by one destroyer and a minesweeper, which was travelling south toward the entrance of the La Pallice roads.

In the course of the running fight which ended inside the northern entrance to the La Pallice roads, British ships scored repeated hits. One enemy supply vessel was driven ashore in flames, another was set on fire, and hits were also observed on a destroyer which escaped in the darkness.

During this action, German shore batteries opened fire, but without effect. Shortly before dawn, the British naval force engaged a small tanker in the same area, and this vessel was driven ashore in a badly damaged condition. A little later, British ships caught up with another small convoy consisting of two medium-sized supply vessels escorted by two minesweepers. These vessels also were driven ashore. (Reuter)

FRESH RED ARMY UNITS STORM RIVER DEFENSE LINE TOWARD EAST PRUSSIA BORDER

MOSCOW, August 15 — Fresh units of Marshal Zakharov's Red Army forces tonight were pushing forward over the last few miles before the East Prussian border, after storming the Rebza River.

Ahead of the Soviet armored spearheads moving over the boggy border land is the classic Masurian Lakes battlefield, scene of Hindenburg's Tannenburg triumph, which bids fair to be the scene of one of Germany's worst defeats.

In the northern flank drive to East Prussia, tonight's Soviet communique stated that Red Army troops made further advances, taking 80 inhabited localities northwest and west of Pelsari, a town west of Pskov.

The Germans, after weeks of bitter fighting above and below the Niemen line, are now faced by the fact that the big Soviet break-through represents the greatest threat to the German border since Soviet units first approached within artillery range of German soil.

The Germans are fighting stubbornly, reported a Reuter correspondent, who added that the enemy is trying to prepare mine fields and new firing points on patches of firm ground. But they are up against another of those mighty Russian concentrations of troops, tanks, and planes, which in the past eight weeks have carried all before them.

GERMAN 7TH ARMY HAS VIRTUALLY LOST BATTLE

LONDON, August 15 — Operations on the western front reached a new pitch of intensity yesterday, as blow after blow was rained on the German 7th Army, which has virtually lost the battle of Normandy.

Hundreds of heavy and medium bombers of the RAF resumed the offensive against what remained of the enemy's hinge position at Falaise. Correspondents said that it is believed some of Rommel's armour escaped from the trap in time during the eastward movement observed over the week-end, but inside the seething cauldron of the Normandy salient into which the enemy so recklessly flung his reserves to check the American thrust at Mortain, there are many more panzer and infantry divisions than those that got away. Now, the dispatches from Normandy tell how these forces are being squeezed and mauled from almost every direction.

Montgomery's master plan is unfolding. The 2d British Army, which has hardly had a pause since its Caumont offensive, was launched into the hills 16 days ago and is pressing down remorselessly from the north towards Conde and through the woods south of Thury-Harcourt.

Far to the south and east, American infantry and armor have swung round with almost breathless speed and have gained command of the roads at such key points as Fougeres, Mayenne, Laval, Le Mans, Alencon, and Argentan.

A considerable battle is almost certain to develop in the Argentan-Falaise area, with almost every conceivable advantage, moral and material on the side of the Allies. The Germans will have to fight in an inferior strategic position and with little hope of even partial success in easing the hydraheaded problems that confront them. They will have to fight with very limited resources of ammunition and fuel, since the Americans, in the last few days' sweep round the German rear and lines of communication, have made their advance guided by a cloud of smoke by day and a pillar of flame at night as the sorely-needed enemy supply dumps have gone up in flames in front of them.

Finally, the Germans will fight under a constant battering from the air, for Tedder's legions of bombers are passing almost continuously overhead during the hours of sunshine of these crucial days, and his fighters with increasing confidence and audacity swoop down upon the enemy, machine-gunning his clotted lines of retreat. FRESH RED ARMY UNITS STORM RIVER DEFENSE LINE TOWARD EAST PRUSSIA BORDER

MOSCOW, August 15 — Fresh units of Marshal Zakharov's Red Army forces tonight were pushing forward over the last few miles before the East Prussian border, after storming the Biebrza River.

Ahead of the Soviet armored spearheads moving over the boggy border land is the classic Masurian Lakes battlefield, scene of Hindenburg's Tannenberg triumph, which bids fair to be the scene of one of Germany's worst defeats.

In the northern flank drive to East Prussia, tonight's Soviet communique stated that Red Army troops made further advances, taking 80 inhabited localities northwest and west of Petsari, a town west of Pskov.

But they are up against another of those mighty Russian concentrations of troops, tanks, and planes, which in the past eight weeks have carried all before them.

"Victory Bridge"

Tonight's communique stated that the Russians have further enlarged their hold across the Vistula into the Sandomierz bridgehead a drive aimed at Cracow and German Silesia. Soviet reinforcements are crossing the new "Victory Bridge," a massive timber span capable of bearing the weight of the heaviest tanks. Already the bridge is well beyond the range of German guns.

To the north, the Soviet forces moved to prevent any reinforcements reaching the two trapped German armies which are being liquidated systematically.

Soviet submarine squadrons have left their bases to frustrate any attempts Germans may make to send reinforcements by sea to their forces in the Baltic trap. A Soviet naval newspaper said that General Scherner, the German commander, is believed to have asked for seaborne support as his only hope of holding out.

From inside Warsaw came word from the Polish Underground Army that the Germans have launched intermittent attacks within the city to eliminate resistance in the town. The Polish communique said: "We were forced to abandon one of the barricades in Lunacie Street. On other sectors of this area we have made counter-attacks and are holding our positions. The paradox of the war continues with the Germans shelling a city which they are supposed to be holding, the communique said.

LULL ALONG ITALIAN FRONT CONTINUES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — With the exception of minor patrol clashes, there was little to report on the Italian front, now momentarily static along most of the Line.

Brisk patrol clashes were reported at the village of La Rotta, on the south bank of the Arno, three miles southeast of Pontedera and 14 miles southeast of Pisa. Here a 5th Army platoon engaged an estimated three squads of Germans in sharp skirmish.

At Pontedera, an enemy patrol was surprised and wiped out or captured, with only a single man effecting an escape. Other hostile patrols were repelled by American outpost groups in the vicinity of Castello del Bosco, a mile north of La Rotta. It was not evident from reports available whether this action took place on the north or south bank of the Arno River, which flows through flat meadowland in this sector.

Elsewhere on the 5th Army front, American patrols entered the village of Roffia, five miles west of Empoli, to discover it heavily mined and booby-trapped by the enemy.

Along the 8th Army front, mopping-up operations continued in the Empoli area. Farther east, at Signa, Allied tanks and mortars laid down harassing fire on enemy troops north of the river. Explosions, probably caused by German demolitions, were observed in this area.

Allied Military Government officials have now succeeded in getting supplies into northern Florence, where, it was reported today, the situation is improving steadily.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish forces occupied Monte Vecchio, two miles east of Florence, taken Sunday. Routine patrols probed enemy positions in the Pratomagno and Apennines mountain sectors. (PRO)

FLORENCE: FRONT-LINE CITY

FLORENCE, August 15 — Life in Florence to-day could have come from the pages of an imaginative novel writes a UNN correspondent.

Thousands of people parade the streets, as if the war were hundreds of miles away. On the surface, it would seem that Florence has never felt the hardships of war, the pangs of hunger, the horror and terror of shelling, or the fear of appearing in the city streets.

But the fact is that the war is only from 400 to 500 yards from the center of Florence proper. On Via Cavour there is still an enemy machine gun nest, and the partisans are fighting gallantly to drive the enemy from the environs of the city.

It is now possible to reveal that the partisans suffered heavily in their task of ridding the city of the Germans. Over 100 of them were killed and 300 wounded in the past few days.

The UNN correspondent has seen some extraordinary sights in the last few days. He has seen detachments from various city hospitals doing a wonderful job recovering the wounded from under the very noses of snipers and machine-gunners in the city streets. They go forward into the most dangerous areas waving Red Cross flags, and approaching on foot with push-carts of stretchers, and sometimes horse-drawn carts.

The only time they were interferred with was yesterday, when the enemy refused to allow them to approach wounded

In the Oltrarno section of Florence, food supplies and medicines were looted by the German troops and there were no adequate hospital facilities, water, or electricity.

Toward the end 450 Fascist troops, hidden in houses, opened fire on women and children, wounding more than 300 in one locality. Another group of Fascist snipers used a monastery for cover. Patriots of the Arno Brigade captured 500 Fascist troops. (UNN)

MACEDONIAN SOBRANJE MEETS

LONDON, August 15 — The first meeting on liberated territory of Macedonia of the Sobranje (Parliament) of Macedonia was announced in today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, which also reported continued attacks against enemy strongholds and road and rail communications throughout Yugoslavia.

Ninety delegates from the National Liberation Movement of Macedonia formed the Sobranje, and at the first session voted "for the complete independence and autonomy of the Macedonian people within the framework of the Free and Federated Yugoslavia," said the communique. They also expressed the great confidence of the people of Macedonia in the leadership of Marshal Tito and the manner of the prosecution of the war by the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia and the Allies.

Telegrams signed by the President of the Sobranje, Mr. Antony Cenkov, were sent to Marshal Tito, to the President of the Soviet Union, to Mr. Churchill, and to Mr. Roosevelt. In their telegrams to Mr. Churchill and to Present Roosevelt, the Macedonia delegates promised an ever-greater struggle against the Fascist occupation forces.

In widespread attacks on railways and rolling stock, Yugoslav Partisans cut the Plevlje-Pripolje line in Montenegro at several points, destroyed a train, including a locomotive, in the city of Berkersk; blew up a train loaded with ammunition on the Zagreb-Belgrade railway line; and damaged the Trieste-Ljubljana railway line, and another leading from Trieste at several points, destroying three locomotives and 15 cars.

An enemy stronghold in northern Banat has been captured, together with guns and ammunition. In Slavonia, a Chetnik column was defeated at Mitrovica, in the Srem district, and 11 Chetniks killed and 18 taken prisoner. In Slovenia, fighting continues on all sectors, especially in the valley of the Soca River. Prisoners and equipment were taken after a battle in the vicinity of Tetovan against an enemy column. Another enemy column was defeated in the vicinity of Maribor, in the Carniola district. At one point, Yugoslav units liberated 60 French and several Russian prisoners from a prisoners of war camp. GERMANS DESTROY HISTORIC BUILDINGS

ROME, August 15 — The newspaper L'Italia Libera, in an account of the last days of German rule in Florence, reported that on July 30 the Germans ordered the inhabitants along the Arno to evacuate at once. 50,000 persons were immediately forced out of their homes and sought refuge in the famous Boboli Gardens.

There was a period of calm which lasted until the night of August 3, when the Germans blew up all the bridges of Florence except Ponte Vecchio. Many homes in the neighborhood of the Arno were destroyed by the explosion of enemy mines.

Before evacuating the city, the Germans demolished the Post Office, the National Library, and the historic Palace of the Guelf Party, the Orsanmichele, containing priceless art treasures, and all the hotels along the Arno.

Ninety delegates from the National Liberation Movement of Macedonia formed the Sobranje, and at the first session voted "for the complete independence and autonomy of the Macedonian people within the framework of the Free and Federated Yugoslavia," said the communique. ALLIES FIVE MILES FROM BURMA FRONTIER

KANDY, CEYLON, August 15 — Japanese rearguards on the Tiddim Road have again fallen back, under Allied pressure, and fighting is continuing within five miles of the Burma frontier, the Southeast Asia Command's communique reported today.

One Allied patrol has already reached the border, and has struck successfully at a Japanese camp there.

In China, heavy pressure is being brought by Allied forces toward recapturing Hengyang, which fell a week ago to the Japanese. Three columns of Chinese troops are moving in on the city from the northwest and southeast, the Chinese headquarters communique issued at Chungking today said.

Already these Chinese forces have retaken strategic points south of Hengyang, and captured Lienhwa, eight miles east of Hengyang. More than 600 Japanese soldiers were killed at Lienhwa. Several nearby enemy strongholds were taken also.

General Joseph Stilwell reported that Japanese units trapped in Tengchung on the Salween front are making desperate efforts to drive the Chinese troops from the city's walls.

The Chinese 20th Army, with support from the 14th USAAF bombers, is reducing Tengchung's defenses methodically. Six Japanese pillboxes have been taken. Bitter fighting continues on Sungshan Heights, but several important Japanese positions have been eliminated.

In the Taungni area, southwest of Mogaung, an Allied patrol has advanced five miles to the southwest, and the Mogaung-Myitkyina railway is now secure.

General Stilwell's headquarters announced today that heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF have bombed the docks at Takao, on the Japanese colonial island off Formosa, and have sunk three freighters in the straits between Formosa and the China coast.

Takao, on the southwestern coast of Formosa, is one of the island's chief ports and an important base for Japanese military movements in the China- Phillippine area. (Reuter)

ALEXANDER HAILS ROME TRANSFER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — General Sir Harold Alexander, commander-in-chief of the Allied Armies in Italy, speaking over Radio Rome tonight on the transfer of three more provinces to Italian jurisdiction, said:

The Allied Control Commission has announced today the return to the Italian Government of the Provinces of Rome, Frosinone, and Littoria.

The movement, which was begun on February 11 of this year with the return of Lucania, Calabria, Sicily, and the Provinces of Salerno and Potenza, and was continued on July 20 with the return of Foggia, Campobasso, Benevento, Avellino, and Naples Province, with the exception of the port of Naples, has now restored to the Italian people a region comprising nearly half of the area and the population of the Kingdom. And now, in addition, the capital of Italy has been restored, and the Italian Government is already installed there.

That this has been made possible is due, in the first place, to the continuous advance of the Allied Forces, who have steadily driven northwards through territory which presents considerable military difficulties and against a determined enemy.

As he was driven northwards, the enemy removed the livestock and grain. What he could not remove, he destroyed whenever time and circumstances allowed. In the early months of the liberation of Sicily and southern Italy, the Allies, despite the urgency of our war effort, brought thousands of tons of grain and medical supplies into Italy to save the population from starvation and disease. Those dangers no longer face us. Providence has blessed the land with a bountiful harvest, the best in many years. Its collection and equitable distribution is a responsibility which the Italian Government has shouldered with confidence and pride.

The Germans know already that they are beaten on the field of battle, but the war is not yet over. The tyrants who ruled them are fighting to the last because they know that defeat will bring for them an inexorable extermination and the war will not be over when the last shot has been fired. The fight against tyranny is one which must never be discontinued. The price of liberty is perpetual watchfulness. Guard it well. (PRO)

CHURCHILL MAY SEE POPE AND PRIME MINISTER

Mr MacMillan, speaking directly for the Prime Minister, stated firmly that the Prime Minister's visit to Italy was in no respect to be considered as concerning any peace talks, since the Prime Minister stood firm on his «unconditional surrender» terms for the Axis.

Should the military events in France take the favorable turn which more optimistic hopes indicated, the Prime Minister might return to London within a week to concern himself with the consequences of a German rout in France, the British diplomat declared. (PRO)

WORKS PROGRAM EMPLOYS 5,582 PERSONS

ROME, August 16 — In cooperation with the Italian Civil Engineering Corps, the Allied Military Government has been able to engage 5,582 persons for work at the present time on emergency repairs and maintenance of roads, bridges, aqueducts, sewers, power lines, and other public works.

A report on the program, which represents a sizeable attack on the problem of unemployment in the Rome area, has been filed by Lt. Col. Clarence Birchett, director of the Transportation, Communications, and Utilities Division.

Plans being worked out by the engineering corps in cooperation with technical experts of the AMG and Allied Control Commission call for a gradual increase in the number of jobs.

Measured in terms of the earning power of individuals, the public works program at the moment is providing over 1,300,000 man-hours of labor each month. A total of 21 major road projects along 306.5 kilometers of roadway provides much of this employment.

Eight of the historic highways of Rome are included among roads benefitted by this program. These are the Aurelia, Cassia, Flaminia, Salaria, Tiburtina, Casilina, Appia highways and Via del Mare.

Since the war passed beyond Rome, a number of principal highways have been almost completely resurfaced within the city province of Rome. (UNN)

That this has been made possible is due, in the first place, to the continuous advance of the Allied Forces, who have steadily driven northwards through territory which presents considerable military difficulties, and against a determined enemy.

It has been made possible, secondly, by the conduct of the Italian people and of their Government. It is a tribute to the Italian desire to see the defeat of the enemy that tranquility has been so readily established, and that a government representing all the political parties has been created and is functioning in so short a time.

A wanton wreckage and brutal destruction of property, the heartless dissolution of families, and the atrocious murders carried out by a beaten but revengeful enemy, have greatly increased the inevitable difficulty which met a government attempting to rebuild a country ravaged by mechanized war. But the measure of success with which the Italian Government has initiated its task is indicated by the confidence with which the Allies have restored fresh territory to it.

The exigencies of warfare have not permitted the Allies to do more than reestablish the most urgent public services, but even these have been tasks of great magnitude. Just as one example, the ruined port of Naples was restored and within a few weeks was ranking as first in the world in the tonnage handled. The work initiated by the Allies has been continued by the Italians, and today it is possible to send supplies by train from Naples to Reggio Calabria and across the Straits of Messina to Palermo, over territory which had felt the full fury of the withdrawing Goth.

A report on the program, which represents a sizeable attack on the problem of unemployment in the Rome area, has been filed by Lt. Col. Clarence Birchett, director of the Transportation, Communications, and Utilities Division.

Plans being worked out by the engineering corps in cooperation with technical experts of the AMG and Allied Control Commission call for a gradual increase in the number of jobs.

Measured in terms of the earning power of individuals, the public works program at the moment is providing over 1,300,000 man-hours of labor each month. A total of 21 major road projects along 306.5 kilometers of roadway provides much of this employment.

Eight of the historic highways of Rome are included among roads benefitted by this program. These are the Aurelia, Cassia, Flaminia, Salaria, Tiburtina, Casilina, Appia highways and Via del Mare.

Since the war passed beyond Rome, a number of principal highways have been almost completely resurfaced within the city province of Rome. (UNN)

MEDICINES DESTINED FOR BLACK MARKET SEIZED

GRANARIES OF PEOPLE CAMPAIGN SUCCESSFUL

ROME, August 15 — The Granaries of the People continues to hold the attention of the press of Liberated Italy, with most of the newspaper reporting growing success for the harvest plan.

The Risorgimento of Naples, in a recent issue, reports that the campaign is in full swing. Up to the present, more than one-third of the quantity of grain expected has been brought to the Granaries of the People.

The Giornale di Sicilia of August 2 stated that for 12 months following the Liberation of Sicily, the Allies imported 684,630 quintals of flour and 480,990 quintals of grain, which has been sufficient to meet the needs of the people, but this cannot be continued because of more pressing military necessities.

The Gazzetta del Mezzogiorno of August 3, in an article on the Granaries of the People affirmed that in Apulia, the campaign has been a success. By the end of the month, all the harvest will be stored, and the deposits of grain will constitute the principal source for supplying the Italian people. (UNN)

OCCUPIED AREAS

FRENCH QUISLING GOVERNMENT STILL IN VICHY

LONDON, August 15 — The French quisling government is in Vichy and, as far as is known, will remain there.

This information was given by a Wilhelmstrasse spokesman quoted by the German Transocean News Agency in answer to questions regarding the new Anglo-American landing on the French Mediterranean coast.

The spokesman said that the decision to remain in Vichy is of a political nature. He added that he was unaware what attitude the French Government at Vichy would take as a result of the military actions and the new situation. He hoped to be able, he said, to inform the press later.

The question of whether the Vichy Government had answered De Gaulle's proclamation to Frenchmen was answered in the negative. The spokesman added, however, that the Government was closely studying the matter, and will react in some form or another. (FWB)

ANTONESCU THWARTS REBELLION PREPARATION

GENEVA, August 15 — The German police attache in Rumania has been named Inspector General of the Rumanian Home Front Army, following charges that General Vasiliu, head of the Siguranza, or national security organization, had planned to set up an internal army in opposition to the Antonescu regime.

Reports from Bucharest said that Marshal Antonescu directed that Rumanian police and all so-called political organizations should be recruited in the ranks of the new home front defense system. All German SS troops stationed in Rumania were also to be included. (FASS)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — Today's communique:

LAND: In the city of Florence, AMG officials continue to deliver food, water, and medical supplies to the civilian population, despite interference from snipers.

On the fronts of the 5th and the 8th armies, there is no change in the situation, and active patrolling and artillery duels continue.

AIR: Strong forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked gun positions in southern France and along the northwest coast of Italy. Fighter aircraft attacked radio installations and other military targets in the same area.

Tactical aircraft attacked military objectives in southern France, northern Italy, Yugoslavia, and the battle area.

Last night, our bombers attacked shipping and port installations at Marseilles.

Warships of the Royal Canadian Navy are participating, and vessels flying the ensigns of the Netherlands, Poland, Greece, and Belgium are also present.

Assault craft started to move in toward the coast and landed exactly on time this morning in calm, clear weather. They were preceded close inshore by minesweepers, and the attack is supported by heavy covering gunfire from battleships, cruisers, destroyers, and other ships and craft of the Allied navy.

Aircraft of the Royal and U. S. navies are cooperating with the Allied air forces. Responsibility for landing and establishing the army on shore is naval, and the naval commander has ordered the assault pressed home with relentless force. Operations continue. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 15 — Today's communique:

LAND: Advances were made yesterday on both sides of the Falaise-Argentan gap. Allied troops attacking towards Falaise from the north quickly gained their first objectives and, having crossed the River Laison, are now firmly established within 7,000 yards of the town.

On the other side of the gap, the thrust northward from Le Mans and Alencon has reached the vicinity of Argentan. Pockets of resistance left behind in this advance are being mopped up near Alencon. Inside the Normandy pocket, advances were made.

Between the Laize and the Orne, an advance of some 5,000 yards brought our forward elements to the vicinity of the village of Bonnoeil.

In the Orne Valley, Thury-Harcourt was cleared of the enemy. North of Conde, the village of Proussy was taken, and our troops are approaching St. Wenis de Mere.

Further west, Allied troops advanced to within a mile of Vassy, and southeast of Vire an advance of a mile has brought us to a point about one mile from Tinchebray. Other units advancing south of Vire are moving along the Gothemo-Tinchebray road against moderate resistance. Troops pushing eastward from Mortain have reached Ger.

Along the southern boundary of the pocket, our columns moving from the Berenton area are approaching Domfront, and units which reached Rames are encountering increasing resistance.

In Brittany, fighting is still in progress at St. Malo, where the situation remains unchanged, and at Dinard, where we have made advances towards the port. At Brest and Lorient there is nothing new to report.

AIR: Throughout the third successive day of clear weather massive formations of all types of Allied aircraft hammered at German forces in the Normandy pocket and attacked airfields, bridges and communication targets from western Germany to Bordeaux, virtually without opposition.

Seven enemy strongpoints massing tanks, guns, and troops north of Falaise were attacked by more than 700 escorted heavy bombers in a concentrated bombardment preceding an advance by our ground forces. Three other strongpoints south of Mezidon were hit by medium bombers in a precision operation only 3,000 yards in advance of our troops.

Six highway bridges over the Touques River north and south of Lisieux were attacked by more than 250 medium bombers, which also pounded bridges and railway junctions at Nogent Le Roi, Les Foulons, Epone-Mezieres, Prevent, St. Martin and Pontoise.

Escorted heavy bombers struck shipping and harbour installations at Brest in two attacks, and others ranged from eastern France to the Bordeaux area, hitting three airfields near Dijon and Angouleme and at Saintes railway yards, with good results.

SPECIAL COMMUNIQUE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 15 — The special communique on the Allied operations in southern France:

LAND: Today, American, British, and French troops, strongly supported by Allied air forces, are being landed by American, British, and French fleets on the southern coast of France.

SEA: The various beaches over which the ships of the United States, British, and French navies are landing American and French troops in the south of France extend over a considerable part of the coast between Nice and Marseilles. More than 800 of our ships of all types, with many mixed vessels, are taking part in the operations, which are widespread.

Pockets of resistance left behind in this advance are being mopped up near Alençon. Inside the Normandy pocket, advances were made.

Between the Laize and the Orne, an advance of some 5,000 yards brought our forward elements to the vicinity of the village of Bonnoeil.

The day-by-day fighter-bomber and fighter onslaught against enemy communications entered its second week with widespread attacks on road and rail targets in the area on both sides of the Seine. At least 750 railway cars and hundreds of motor vehicles were destroyed and damaged at Falaise, Laigle, Domfront, Evreux, Chartres, St. Andre, and east of the Seine. Light bombers harried enemy movements during the night, causing large fires and explosions at several points near Falaise and south of Paris. Twenty-nine enemy aircraft were destroyed. Twenty-four of ours are missing.

A heavy battery on the Island of Alderney has been subjected to naval bombardment. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 15 — Tuesday night's communique:

During August 15, north and west of Pietsin (Piechiory), our troops occupied in fighting over 80 populated localities, including Neketonaye, Jarvika, Iritus, Varnakonola, Nishnie, Oshula, Urvaste, Tassi, and Magite, and the railway station of Inivetza, Oshula, Konrunie, Vugine, and Anne.

In the area of Jashineny, our troops repulsed enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in men and material.

West of Praga, our troops beat back strong enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 795021

Northwest and west of Sandomir, our troops continued their operations for expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the River Vistula, and occupied several populated localities.

West of Sanok, our troops repulsed enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks.

On all other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 14, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 114 german tanks. In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 29 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 15 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots have dislodged the last German snipers from their positions in northern sectors of Florence. In actions north of Florence, patriots have shown increased efficiency. They attack enemy columns on the highways and in mountain towns. The Germans, making use of parachute troops to ferret out patriots have failed to reduce the offensive power of the patriots.

Following agreements made between Allied and patriot leaders, the first coordinated, large-scale acts of sabotage have been carried out in the Verona sector. More than 43 attacks were made by patriots against German military communications. Patriots interrupted the railway lines running from Vicenza to Verona, Padua, Cittadella, Schio, and Recoaro, and from Castelfranco to Treviso, Cittadella Bassano, Grisignano and Oeligio. Damage along these lines hindered rail operations from eight to 30 hours.

The important powder factory of Roesano Veneto was blown up by patriots.

In the course of an attack against the station at Vicenza, two locomotives and a high tension electric line were destroyed. Patriots damaged railway bridges at Cittadella.

Patriots of the Comasco sector fired on an enemy motor boat reconnoitering on the lake.

In the Province of Padua, patriots attacked a municipality and destroyed the draft lists.

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 15 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Southeast and south of Caen, the enemy resumed his major attack supported by strong artillery and tank forces aiming at effecting a junction with the American units in the sector north of Parouge which, yesterday, were forced into the defensive owing to our counter-attacks. In some sectors, the enemy succeeded in penetrating our front after fierce fighting. In the Brest sector, local enemy attacks were repulsed and new troop concentrations were smashed by the concentrated fire of our artillery. The garrison of St. Malo and Dinard maintained their position against the enemy, who again attacked with superior forces.

In the evening, the Fort de la Verde, after a heroic resistance of the reduced garrison, was lost. The enemy who, in the course of the last few days, had substantially intensified his air attacks on defensive positions and communications in the coastal area of southern France, landed early this morning in the Toulon-Cannes sector. Our coastal defense is engaged by the enemy landing forces. Naval anti-aircraft batteries and escort vessels brought down 30 enemy planes over western and southern France.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

In Italy, the day went by without special events. Minor local fighting is reported.

Yesterday, only local fighting was reported from the foothills of the Carpathians. Yesterday, west of Buranov, Pskov, the Bolsheviks, despite the use of extremely strong forces, succeeded in gaining only a little ground in the face of the stubborn and fierce resistance of the German troops. Bomber squadrons, inflicting high losses in manpower and material, supported the defensive fighting.

Yesterday, damage was caused to Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, Trier, and Kaiserslautern by the attacks of enemy bomber squadrons. The population suffered losses. The Cathedral of Trier was seriously hit. In the night, enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin and Rhenish-Westfalian territory. Yesterday, the enemy lost 22 planes over the Reich territory and the occupied western territories.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATION

The New Landings: Early on the morning of August 15, Allied forces landed between St. Raphael and Cap de Drammont. This strip of coast is about 25 kilometers long, and is situated about half-way between Nice and Toulon. The foothills, which rise almost immediately behind the beach, are said to be strongly fortified. A 1730 broadcast says that the fighting of the first two hours demonstrated that the new landing of the enemy is by no means on the same scale as the invasion of Normandy on June 5. The strip of coast attacked is much narrower, and the number of Allied troops thrown into the battle is comparatively small. The German defenders immediately challenged the enemy, and hard fighting is now going on.

Preludes to the Landings: The German Radio mentions that, previous to the landing, the Allied air bombing of the coastal fortifications in southern France was very furious, and the American invasion fleet, which had been sighted near Corsica a few days ago, began to steam in the direction of the coast. Attempts were made by the Allies to mislead the defenders by dropping dummy paratroops over Marseilles.

Locations of Landings Named: The first forces to land went ashore east of Toulon, and were mostly wiped out. Shortly after dawn this morning, a force of about 100 Allied transport planes, pulling troop-carrying gliders behind them, was seen flying westward, rushing reinforcements to the landing corps at Bormes. Soon afterwards, Allied paratroops landed in battalion strength near St. Raphael. An additional Allied landing attempt northwest of Fort Drenmont failed. Heavy fighting is now going on at many points of the coast between Cannes and Nice.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Further Details on Landings: A coherent action on a wide front is thought to be out of the question. The Allies are said to aim, rather, at capturing first the Gulf of St. Tropez and the airfield near St. Raphael, in order to land and concentrate there some reinforcements by air and naval transports. Allied air-borne troops and paratroop units were landed in the estuary of the Argens River. Tank formations were landed in the Bay of St. Tropez.

S.S. over Wehrmacht: Upon the Fuehrer's order, the post of military commander in Belgium and northern France was combined in personal union with that of the highest chief of the S.S. and police. S.S. Group Leader Jungelius was appointed military commander.

American Air Raid: American bomber formations approaching Reich territory Tuesday morning were engaged in aerial combats by German fighter planes already over Zuider Sea. A number of American four-engined bombers were shot down.

Eastern Theatre: Dr. Krull, military correspondent of D.N.B., says that the Soviet have made no further progress on the Vistula bridgeheads. Nor did their attacks on East

Yesterday, only local fighting was reported from the foothills of the Carpathians. Yesterday, west of Baranov, 51 enemy tanks were destroyed in the area of one army corps alone.

Southeast of Warka, the Bolsheviks attacked with several rifle divisions. In this sector, fighting also is in full swing. In Latvia, at Rasenten, our grenadiers, supported by tanks and assault guns, cleared up a Bolshevik gap punched recently into our lines; 63 enemy tanks and 18 guns were destroyed.

In Estonia, at Modohn, repeated Soviet attacks were frustrated. At an infiltration, southwest of the Lake of Peipus, which rise almost immediately behind the beach, are said to be strongly fortified. In the Esthonian-Latvian theatre of war, the situation has meanwhile so improved that there is no longer any immediate danger to the German troops fighting there.

FASCIST RADIO

Only minor action is reported by the Fascist Radio today. Unlike the German Radio, it mentions the new Allied landings only very briefly and without details.

CANADIANS LAUNCH NEW DRIVE SOUTHWARD

SHAEF, August 14 — Canadian troops launched a major attack at noon today on the approaches to Falaise, and advanced two miles in the first three hours, a late dispatch from Reuter reported. They have already liberated the towns of Martinville, and have reached Bonneuil.

Mitchells and Bostons opened an air attack before the Canadian 1st Army began its offensive, and in the afternoon RAF heavy bombers supported the army with powerful and well-concentrated attacks. Medium bombers dropped fragmentation bombs on a main part of the German defense line through which Allied infantry and armor pushed revealed a continuation of yesterday's large-scale daylight withdrawal.

The German 7th Army retreat from the Vire and Mortain areas was described at Allied headquarters today as being «very near a rout.»

Fighters and fighter-bombers are attacking all enemy movements that are sighted along roads leading eastward out of the gap. German transport is repeatedly being brought to a standstill by leading vehicles piling up under the weight of Allied bombs. These congestions are causing the Germans to abandon transport and board whatever vehicles are still left intact after each raid.

One Thunderbolt squadron leader said that the Germans must be frantic. «If they move, we spot them from the air and in no time they are literally swamped. If they stop, our tanks catch them and finish them off.» Other pilots said that the Germans had reversed their tank turrets and were firing back at American tanks chasing them a quarter of a mile behind.

Fighter-bomber attacks were so concentrated that many Thunderbolts came back with their wings damaged by showers of exploded cartridge cases from planes immediately ahead of them.

Bulldozers Clear Path

In some places, German equipment is piled up so high on the roads that engineers have had to use bulldozers to clear a path for Allied tanks and trucks. The roads are massed with burning and smoking wrecks of German vehicles, and fires are blazing in woods where German mortar, troop, and tank concentrations have been reported.

Resistance in the Vire-Mortain area appears to be slackening, and the Allies are advancing along most of this front. The town of Ger, one of the two most important road networks in the entire area, was liberated today by American troops moving eastward. The other important road junction of Tinchebray, six miles northeast of Mortain, was also liberated.

Below Mortain, the Allies moving eastward have advanced beyond Barenton, and are reported to have crossed the Varenne River on the road leading to Domfront.

South of Vire, the Allies have made a new gain of one mile, and have reached the village of St. Martin de Chaulieu.

It was announced at headquarters tonight that American troops had taken 2,838 German prisoners on Saturday.

The London Times aeronautical correspondent said today that more than 70 enemy headquarters in France have been destroyed by air attacks since D-day. He said that the enemy's lack of information as to the exact location of their own and Allied formations in northern France, is due in part to the destruction of their divisional and corps headquarters.

In the Brittany Peninsula, American troops have made slight advances in the seige of Brest. A force of Lancaster bombers with fighter escort attacked shipping in the Brest harbor today.

SHAEF, August 14 — Canadian troops launched a major attack at noon today on the approaches to Falaise, and advanced two miles in the first three hours, a late dispatch from Reuter reported. They have already liberated the towns of Martinville, and have reached Bonnoeil.

Mitchells and Bostons opened an air attack before the Canadian 1st Army began its offensive, and in the afternoon RAF heavy bombers supported the army with powerful and well-concentrated attacks. Medium bombers dropped fragmentation bombs on a main part of the German defense line, through which Allied infantry and armor pushed forward rapidly on a 2½ mile front.

Canadian troops who crossed the west bank of the River Laize to aid the British in cleaning up the German salient, today fought their way back to the east bank several miles further down, and are now fighting their way through a vital sector five miles northwest of Falaise.

Bridges Captured Intact

The troops struck southward so rapidly from the area of the former enemy salient that they captured two bridges across the Laize River intact. The drive has liberated the towns of Clairizon, Tornebu and Le Mesnil. The town of Thury-Harcourt still remains in German hands, but their situation is precarious.

A regular and continuous flow eastward of retreating German armor and vehicles is still going on, as Allied forces are seriously threatening to cut off and destroy two embattled and broken German armies. More than 100,000 men, approximately 1,200 tanks, and nearly 400 huge German assault guns were retreating in an effort to escape destruction. Latest reports stated that the escape hatch from the Falaise area to Argentan is only 18 miles wide, and is constantly under shell-fire from the north and south.

It was stated at headquarters today that up to the present, air reconnaissance over the battle area has not

Germans to abandon transport and board whatever vehicles are still left intact after each raid.

One Thunderbolt squadron leader said that the Germans must be frantic. "If they move, we spot them from the air and in no time they are literally swamped. If they stop, our tanks catch them and finish them off." Other pilots said that the Germans had reversed their tank turrets and were firing back at American tanks chasing them a quarter of a mile behind.

Fighter-bomber attacks were so concentrated that many Thunderbolts came back with their wings damaged by showers of exploded cartridge cases from planes immediately ahead of them.

Bulldozers Clear Path

In some places, German equipment is piled up so high on the roads that engineers have had to use bulldozers to clear a path for Allied tanks and trucks. The roads are massed with burning and smoking wrecks of German vehicles, and fires are blazing in woods where German mortar, troop, and tank concentrations have been reported.

Resistance in the Vire-Mortain area appears to be slackening, and the Allies are advancing along most of this front. The town of Ger, one of the two most important road networks in the entire area, was liberated today by American troops moving eastward. The other important road junction of Tinchebray, six miles northeast of Mortain, was also liberated.

Below Mortain, the Allies moving eastward have advanced beyond Barenton, and are reported to have crossed the Varenne River on the road leading to Domfront.

South of Vire, the Allies have made a new gain of one mile, and have reached the village of St. Martin de Chaulieu.

It was announced at headquarters tonight that American troops had taken 2,823 German prisoners on Saturday.

The London Times aeronautical correspondent said today that more than 70 enemy headquarters in France have been destroyed by air attacks since D-day. He said that the enemy's lack of information as to the exact location of their own and Allied formations in northern France, is due in part to the destruction of their divisional and corps headquarters.

In the Brittany Peninsula, American troops have made slight advances in the seige of Brest. A force of Lancaster bombers with fighter escort attacked shipping in the Brest harbor today.

In St. Malo, Colonel von Aulock is still forcing the remnants of his troops to resist. At Dinard, enemy resistance continues. At Lorient, the situation remains unchanged, with the German garrison surrounded.

U. S. 3D ARMY NOW IN FRANCE

LONDON, August 14 — The 3rd U. S. Army is operating in France with the 1st U. S. Army, the latter under the command of Lieutenant General Courtney Hodges, the United Press said today. The official announcement of the 3rd Army did not reveal its commander. (UP)

EISENHOWER APPEALS FOR EXTRA EFFORT

LONDON, August 14 — General Dwight Eisenhower, in an order-of-the-day issued from an advance command post in Normandy yesterday, said that a great victory was possible this week, and called upon everyone to give every ounce of energy toward accomplishing it. His order said:

Allied soldiers, sailors, and airmen:

Through your combined skill, valor, and fortitude, you have created in France a definite opportunity for a major Allied victory — one whose realization will mean notable progress toward the final downfall of our enemy.

In the past, I have in moments of unusual significance made special appeals to the Allied forces which it has been my honor to command. Without exception, the response has been beyond my expectations.

Because the victory we can now achieve is infinitely greater than any it has so far been possible to accomplish in the West, and because this opportunity may be grasped only through the utmost in zeal, determination, and speedy action, I make my present appeal to you more urgent than ever before.

I request every airman to make it his direct responsibility that the enemy is blasted unceasingly by day and by night, and is denied safety both in fight and in flight.

I request every sailor to make sure that no part of the hostile forces can either escape or be reinforced by sea, and that our comrades on land want nothing that ships can bring to them.

I request every soldier to go forward to his assigned objective with the determination that the enemy can survive only through surrender. Let no foot of ground once gained be relinquished, no single German escape through a line once established.

With all of us resolutely performing our special tasks, we can make this week a momentous one in the history of this war — a brilliant and fruitful week for us, a fateful one for the ambitions of Nazi tyrants. (Reuter)

HEAVIES HIT INDUSTRIAL AND AIR FORCE TARGETS

LONDON, August 14 — German industrial and air force targets were attacked visually today by strong forces of escorted 8th USAAF Flying Fortresses. The objectives in southern Germany were the I. G. Farben Chemical plant at Ludwigshafen, an electrical equipment factory at Mannheim, and German Air Force stations at Sandhofen, near Mannheim, and Echterdingen, near Stuttgart.

On their way home, the escorting Mustangs and Thunderbolts strafed airfields and other targets in Germany and France.

tively that some pilots returned saying that they could find no more targets.

When an ammunition train of 40 railway cars was hit near Rouen, it blew up with such a blast that the attacking aircraft were rocked.

Sunday's great attacks were made after the most successful day in the history of the 8th Fighter Command, when more than 1,000 sorties were flown.

In the week ending Saturday, the RAF dropped well over 15,000 tons of bombs on German targets in the West, and Allied air forces attacked 21 different oil plants in enemy territory.

Fighters of the RAF 2d Tactical Air Force on Sunday called their work "a field day," as they covered the entire area from the northern coast of France to Chartres, Orleans and Chateauneuf without encountering enemy air opposition.

In addition to battering a strip 70 miles long and 50 miles wide on both sides of the Seine, the huge force of Fortresses and Liberators swarmed over the German Army's escape routes.

Every train that tried to move toward the German front, or away from it, every road convoy, even every lonely dispatch rider or staff car came under the guns of the vast RAF and American sky fleets, United Press said.

Tunnel Collapsed

A flight of Mustangs skipped bombs into the railway tunnel at Boissy, causing it to collapse.

In attempting to seal off the German 7th Army in an escape-proof vacuum, the thousands of American bombers met no opposition from the German Air Force, Walter Cronkite, United correspondent, reported.

The RAF met heavy and persistent fighter opposition over Germany, and lost 42 planes, Cronkite added.

No German interceptors were encountered over France by the U. S. Strategic Air Forces on Sunday, a communique said.

Saturday's and Sunday's bag included 525 railway locomotives, 675 motor trucks, and scores of other military vehicles, as well as 22 railroad yards, 14 bridges, three tunnels, and four roundhouses.

The USAAF in the first six months of 1944 dropped twice as many bombs as in the first two years of American participation in the war, the U. S. War Department announced.

Between January and June this year the bomb tonnage hurled by the USAAF in the European theater increased 500 per cent. (UP - Reuter)

9TH AIR FORCE MAKES 7,500 SORTIES IN WEEK

9TH USAAF HQ, August 14 — An indication of the intensity of aerial activity over the battle fronts of Normandy and Brittany was given today when the 9th USAAF revealed that its planes flew 7,500 sorties during one week of combat operations over France.

Flying missions in close support of ground forces, planes of the 9th Air Force — although they met little opposition in the air — destroyed 25 enemy planes in the air and 12 on the ground, and destroyed 178 tanks.

Nearly 2,000 German vehicles were shot up, along with 1,415 railway cars. During the week, 57 fighter-bombers were lost, most of them as a result of German flak, since Luftwaffe opposition was all but non-existent. (PWB)

A force of RAF Lancaster bombers with fighter escort attacked shipping in the harbor of Brest today.

RAF Mosquitoes attacked Hanover Sunday night; it was officially announced here today. Mines were laid in enemy waters.

Monday morning, Beaufighters of Coastal Command, attacked two heavily armed escort vessels off Royan in the mouth of the Gironde. One Coastal Command plane is missing.

5,000 Railway Cars Destroyed

Allied air forces this weekend climaxed one of their greatest weeks in the European theater with almost continuous bombardment of enemy targets from central Germany to France.

Countless waves of planes of all types swarmed over Europe, shattering German communications, bridges, railways, highways, vehicles, submarine shelters, oil plants, and war factories.

For example, 8th USAAF fighters alone knocked out more than 6,000 railway wagons Saturday and Sunday.

Everything military found moving on railways, highways, and waterways was attacked, and by Sunday evening the German transport system had been paralysed so effectively that not a single train, truck, barge, or even a dispatch rider or staff car came under the guns of the vast RAF and American sky fleets, United Press said.

LONDON, August 14 — A Reuter correspondent on the Franco-Spanish frontier said Saturday that reports of a general military evacuation of southwest France are not yet confirmed.

FCNL CALLS FOR UPRISING IN FRANCE

LONDON, August 14 — A call for a national uprising in France was issued tonight by the French Committee of National Liberation.

It was the Frenchmen's simple duty, said the call, to take part immediately in the supreme war effort of the country, adding that in the field, factory, workshop, office, or home, and in the street, each Frenchman « whether he be under arrest, deported, or a prisoner of war, » could harm Germans or prepare that which harmed them.

Everyone was urged to join resistance movements and follow their directions. The call concluded:

BLITZKRIEG TACTICS IMPROVED BY U. S.

U. S. 1ST. ARMY HQ IN FRANCE, August 14 — German blitzkrieg tactics have been greatly improved by the U. S. Army command, said Drew Middleton of the New York Times in commenting on the 1st Army's advance eastward toward Paris.

«I saw the German blitzkrieg of 1940,» he said, «and I have seen the American 1944 model. Allowing for the difference in size the Germans employed about twice as many troops in their assault as the Americans did, the 1st Army's operation has moved faster and deeper.»

Middleton added:

«Like the German blitzkrieg of 1940, the American drive of 1944 may be divided into three distinct phases: the initial break-through, its exploitation, and finally the struggle for forts. But the Americans added a fourth phase, which is still to reveal its full scope.

«General Bradley chose a comparatively small area as the springboard for his offensive. The main armored forces of two divisions were committed to battle on the second day. Hedgerows which had plagued the Americans since the opening day of the invasion were ripped open by specially-built tank-dozers and tanks.

«German divisions needed but one heavy blow to complete the rout begun by our infantry, tanks, and artillery in the second day of the attack. This was provided by (Allied) air forces, with considerable help from artillery.

«Whereas in 1940 the bulk of the German infantry divisions had only horse-drawn transport and lagged behind the panzer divisions, the American infantry divisions (1944) followed closely on the heels of the armor.» (OWI)

GENERAL LECLERC IS FIGHTING FRENCH HERO

LONDON, August 14 — Not until Germany is smashed and hostilities cease in Europe will the real name of General Jacques Philippe Leclerc, leader of the 2d French Armored Division, fighting in France, be revealed.

Announced earlier tonight as the first full French division to join in the Battle of France, the French armored division is now fighting with great effect alongside the Americans.

Although General Leclerc's real identity is concealed to assure the safety of his relatives and friends in Nazi-occupied France, his exploits are only too well known to the Germans. The enemy has felt his sting in North Africa where he led a spectacular 2,000-mile trans-desert march from Lake Chad to beat the Italians in Libya, and then smash at Rommel's southern flank in Tunisia.

Still in his early forties and the youngest of the French generals, General Leclerc was a military instructor at St. Cyr, from which he was also graduated. The general, although badly wounded in June 1940, escaped from the Germans in France and soon became governor of the Cameroons in French Equatorial Africa, where he published the first Free French newspaper and kindled in the French colonial world the spirit of a free France.

African Veterans

The 2d Armored Division, made up essentially of soldiers from Metropolitan France who fought with General Leclerc in Africa, was trained in England.

The Division began arriving on the Normandy beaches late in July.

A member of the American command the Associated Press reported, praised the unit as «one of the finest fighting outfits ever put together under any flag.»

The press association noted that when the division arrived in France they were brilliant red ferage caps and tide American Sherman tanks, some of which had a likeness of General de Gaulle painted on the front. This painted picture brought roars from French civilians of «Vive de Gaulle» and «Vive la France.»

city of Lyck, it was announced tonight in a special order of the day by Marshal Stalin to the 2d White Russian Army.

A United Press correspondent said that «the Red Army is moving cautiously, trying to encircle East Prussia rather than expose its spearheads to the hazards of East Prussian terrain, which abounds in swamps, lakes, and forests.»

Tonight's Soviet communique reported the coordination of all Russian armies in the drive on East Prussia. Red Army forces moved to secure the northern flank on the East Prussian battlefront. The communique announced a continued offensive west and southwest of Pskov which resulted in the capture of Ansla and over 100 localities.

There was no report of a letup in the Soviet advance which has cost the Germans thousands of lives and countless pieces of equipment. The Red Army has advanced as much as 350 miles at some points in six weeks.

In the fight for Warsaw, the Polish Patriot Army reported from within the city that they began an offensive in the west end of the city which lasted all day. The Germans, they reported, were still attacking in the «old city» and were using multi-barrelled heavy mortars after losing many tanks and artillery equipment. They added that the Stawki region of the city, near the Danzig marshalling yards, which is in the hands of the enemy, is on fire.

The success of these two Russian drives in the Baltic means that the dismemberment of the trapped German armies has begun in earnest. The lines of the Baltic front now look like a series of dagger points, each thrusting through the German line towards the sea.

Radio Moscow announced last night that the 2d Baltic army has killed 60,000 Germans in the fighting between July 10 and August 10. In the same period, they took nearly 10,000 prisoners and destroyed 167 aircraft, 147 tanks and self-propelled guns, and more than 1,000 guns. They also captured 79 tanks and 820 guns.

The southern flank of the Russian armies, covered by the 2d White Russian Army, has made considerable advances northwest and west of Bialystok pushing along the Bialystok-Lyck railway to the southeast frontier of East Prussia.

Two Armies Linked

General Zakharov's advance has driven a wedge between the southern East Prussian front and the salient northeast of Warsaw. These two armies have now linked up and beaten out the German salient and present a solid, unbroken 100-mile front against the Germans.

Marshal Rokossovsky's right flank drive northwest of Siedlce gained the Russians 100 places, including Mostowka, about 12 miles northeast of Warsaw. This thrust opens up the possibility of a Soviet move to outflank the Polish capital from the north.

Southeast of the Polish capital, a fierce struggle is being waged on the Vistula, with land and air seething with battle day and night. The Germans are hurling all they have into counter-attacks to wipe out the Russian bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula. But they seem powerless to stem the Russian drive, and are suffering crippling losses in men, tanks, guns and planes.

For while the Soviet advanced elements battle forward across the low west bank of the river, Russian artillery and mortars sited along the high east bank command all the approaches to the German lines, making many German positions untenable. To the Germans, the east bank of the Vistula rises like a great wall behind which the Russians can secretly concentrate men and material to keep up the crossings to the west bank. In desperation, the Germans are flinging in squadrons of the Luftwaffe to bomb Russian positions, but their planes are sharing the fate of their tanks and infantry.

The military correspondent of the London Observer wrote: «German strategy, which formerly insisted that the western front was the most important and that the east front must manage as best it could, has now switched

«We return today as fighters, after having fought for four years behind General de Gaulle. We once again see the faces of our countrymen who greet us with enthusiasm amidst their ruins. We can guess what they have suffered.

«In the name of all my men... my first duty is to salute those Frenchmen who have never despaired, who have helped our Allies, and who aided victory. There is no doubt... we are reaching our goal because we have at last come to help them and to continue the struggle for liberation at their side. Long Live France!» (AP)

RED ARMY CAPTURES OSOWIEC IN ENCIRCLEMENT DRIVE ON EAST PRUSSIA

ITALIAN FRONT QUIET

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, August 14 — As activity all along the Italian front entered a new lull, Allied Military Government officials pressed their efforts to bring food and water to the civilian population of north Florence yesterday.

The indiscriminate firing of two days ago has quieted down, and Allied officials are able to get on with their mercy work with greater success, it was reported. The official report praised the AMG's "valuable work."

"Light and scattered" artillery fire, and occasional patrolling were reported from most of the 5th and 8th Army fronts, although on the Adriatic sector the town of Frontone, 28 miles southwest of the mouth of the Cesano River, was occupied. Frontone is located along a trunk line connecting with the main Adriatic coast railway.

American patrol forces entered the town of Isola, three miles west of Empoli, to find that the German troops which had held this pocket of resistance had withdrawn.

Eighth Army patrols were reported to be fanning out through the hilly area south of Pontassieve, recently evacuated by the enemy. Further east, enemy patrols were active in the mountain area north of Pietralunga at the eastern edge of the Tiber Valley.

Heavies Blast Riviera

Up to 750 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked military installations in southern France and along the coast of northwest Italy. The attacks, which came on the third successive day of assault by heavy bombers on German military installations along the French-Italian Riviera, were carried out without fighter escort.

Long-range Lightning and Mustang fighters strafed targets in the French and Italian Riviera in individual operations. Anti-aircraft fire encountered near the targets ranged from slight to intense.

Yesterday Italy-based heavy bombers joined Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers in combined air attacks on German gun batteries, radio communications, airfields, and bridges in southern France, which were described as the "main objectives" of Mediterranean air support forces.

Mitchell bombers concentrated on enemy gun positions in southern France, striking at 12 heavy batteries near Ciotat, between Marseilles and Toulon. The medium bombers flew in three "great waves of four sections each" to attack the German coastal defenses one after another.

Fighters and fighter-bombers shot up enemy airfields at Toulouse, Les Chanoines, Istres le Tube, and Salon de Provence, and one north of Marseilles. Spitfires for the third straight day strafed radio installations in the Toulon area. The Montelimar airfield, 95 miles north of Marseilles, was hit by a dive-bombing attack of Thunderbolts, protected by long-range Mustang fighters.

Key Bridges Struck

The Liberators and Flying Forts had as their principal targets four key bridges across the Rhone and its tributaries the Eygues and the Drome. Although the Avignon span across the Rhone was missed, all tracks across this important rail bridge were temporarily blocked by bomb hits. The St Esprit bridge, also across the Rhone, was knocked down for over half its length. Tracks were cut and damage inflicted on the two other bridges, at Orange, 16 miles north of Avignon, and at Crest, on the Drome River 50 miles north of Orange.

RAF night bombers hit port installations and shipping at Genoa last night, with good results.

The town of Aleksandrovac in Serbia has been taken by Tito's men, and in Dalmatia, Nazi units were forced to abandon the town of Podgorica, after Partisan forces smashed an armored column and took large quantities of German matériel.

Still another strong German column, numbering more than 4,000 men, was smashed by Patriots in Montenegro after six days of bitter fighting. The Nazis were said to have been pushed back to the town of Bilece, suffering heavy losses in men and equipment.

The Partisans have made further successful attacks on railway lines.

In central Serbia Partisans are advancing towards Krusevac, having destroyed a train on the Nis-Pirot railway line.

In the Demir-Japija sector of Macedonia, the railway station at Kusarez was burnt.

The enemy is sending reinforcements to the Lim Valley, in southwestern Montenegro, but Yugoslav units are preventing their concentration.

An ammunition train near Brod, in Croatia, was blown up. (Reuter)

JAPANESE SHIPPING ATTACKED

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 14 — The sinking by Allied bombers of a 3,000-ton Japanese freighter in Davao Gulf, in Philippine waters, and damage to two more Japanese freighters near Halmahera Island are reported in today's communique from General MacArthur.

A military spokesman stated that Allied losses in the Aitape area of New Guinea total 1,307 (including 285 dead, 23 missing, and 999 wounded) against the Japanese casualty total of 8,064.

The communique reported Allied air raids over a wide area, including the bombing of Langgoer aerodrome and township in the Kai Islands and the airstrip in the Vogelkop area of Dutch New Guinea. Naval patrols harassed coastal targets in the Wewak area, and shelled Japanese positions on the south coast of New Ireland and Japanese positions at Wide Bay, in New Britain.

Allied light bombers attacked targets in the Kaviena area and at Rabaul, New Britain. Fifty tons of bombs were dropped on enemy supply dumps at Butaval and Tobera and other scattered targets, the communique added.

A Pearl Harbor communique issued by Admiral Nimitz stated that American planes attacked two Japanese ships, as well as gun positions and other shore targets, in attacks Thursday and Friday which ranged from Paramushiro to the Marshall Islands. (Reuter- OWI)

ALLIED TROOPS ADVANCE IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

KANDY, Ceylon, August 14 — Allied troops drove ahead steadily Sunday against slight Japanese opposition on the Tiddim Road and the Kabaw Valley sector, Allied Southeast Asia Command headquarters announced today.

Meanwhile, in northern Burma, Chinese troops and Kachin levies consolidated their positions around fallen Kamu, and pushed patrols down the Mandalay railway to Mingon, five miles southwest of Taungni, the communique added.

From Chungking a communique said the Chinese troops are massing for a full-scale assault on the ancient valley city of Tengkiang.

Other Chinese forces are continuing their preparations to retake Lungling, Japanese stronghold astride the Burma Road. They are maintaining steady pressure also on the isolated garrison at Angshan, to the northeast.

On the Hunan front, the Chinese were apparently trying to recapture the strategic railway center of Hengyang. Heavy fighting costly to both sides was taking place around executed by the enemy. Further east, enemy patrols were active in the mountain area north of Pietralunga at the eastern edge of the Tiber Valley.

Heavies Blast Riviera

Up to 750 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked military installations in southern France and along the coast of northwest Italy. The attacks, which came on the third successive day of assault by heavy bombers on German military installations along the French-Italian Riviera, were carried out without fighter escort.

Long-range Lightning and Mustang fighters strafed targets in the French and Italian Riviera in individual operations. Anti-aircraft fire encountered near the targets ranged from slight to intense.

Yesterday Italy-based heavy bombers joined Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers in combined air attacks on German gun batteries, radio communications, airfields, and bridges in southern France, which were described as the «main objectives» of Mediterranean air support forces.

Mitchell bombers concentrated on enemy gun positions in southern France, striking at 12 heavy batteries near Ciotat, between Marseilles and Toulon. The medium bombers flew in three «great waves of four sections each» to attack the German coastal defenses one after another.

Fighters and fighter-bombers shot up enemy airfields at Toulouse, Les Chanoines, Istres le Tube, and Salon de Provence, and one north of Marseilles. Spitfires for the third straight day strafed radio installations in the Toulon area. The Montelibar airfield, 95 miles north of Marseilles, was hit by a dive-bombing attack of Thunderbolts, protected by long-range Mustang fighters.

Key Bridges Struck

The Liberators and Flying Forts had as their principal targets four key bridges across the Rhone and its tributaries, the Eygues and the Drome. Although the Avignon span across the Rhone was missed, all tracks across this important rail bridge were temporarily blocked by bomb hits. The St. Esprit bridge, also across the Rhone, was knocked down for over half its length. Tracks were cut and damage inflicted on the two other bridges, at Orange, 16 miles north of Avignon, and at Crest, on the Drome River 50 miles north of Orange.

RAF night bombers hit port installations and shipping at Genoa last night, with good results.

Balkan Air Force planes carried out missions along the Dalmatian coast.

During the past week, Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers dropped 3,621 tons of bombs in support of operations, during which 164 attacks were made upon enemy gun positions. Eleven bridges were destroyed by the TAF bombers and 43 others were damaged — most of them in southern France and northwestern Italy.

Over 60 road and rail blocks were created in attacks against German communications. The bombers destroyed or damaged six enemy ammunition dumps, sunk six ships, and damaged 18 others.

Bombers of the French Air Force participated in these attacks and carried out six air bombardments on gun positions. They dropped a bomb load of 275 tons. (PRO)

YOGOSLAV PATRIOTS TAKE NAZI STRONGHOLD

LONDON, August 14 — Yugoslav Patriots have captured an important German stronghold on the Istria Peninsula.

Defeat of the German garrison and the fall of several towns to Marshal Tito's forces were revealed in a communique issued here by Supreme Headquarters of the National Liberation Army of Yugoslavia.

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 14

The sinking by Allied bombers of a 3,000-ton Japanese freighter in Davao Gulf, in Philippine waters, and damage to two more Japanese freighters near Halmahera Island are reported in today's communique from General MacArthur.

A military spokesman stated that Allied losses in the Aitape area of New Guinea total 1,307 (including 285 dead, 23 missing, and 999 wounded) against the Japanese casualty total of 8,064.

The communique reported Allied air raids over a wide area, including the bombing of Langgoer aerodrome and township in the Kai Islands and the airstrip in the Vogelkop area of Dutch New Guinea. Naval patrols harassed coastal targets in the Wewak area, and shelled Japanese positions on the south coast of New Ireland and Japanese positions at Wide Bay, in New Britain.

Allied light bombers attacked targets in the Kavieng area and at Rabaul, New Britain. Fifty tons of bombs were dropped on enemy supply dumps at Ratavul and Tobera and other scattered targets, the communique added.

OCCUPY JAPAN TO WIN THE PEACE, SAYS NIMITZ

PEARL HARBOR, August 14 — Although it may prove unnecessary to invade Japan to win the war, it will be essential to occupy Japan afterward, Admiral Chester Nimitz, Pacific commander-in-chief, stated.

«I think it will be a combination of our whole military effort that will bring defeat to Japan — blockade, air bombardment, possibly surface bombardment, possibly invasion,» he said.

«I am not sure that invasion by assault will be necessary. But I do believe occupation of Japan will be necessary to insure that we win the peace.

«This war is a new experience for the Japanese. In recent times they have been on the winning side. We don't know how much they can take before they throw in the sponge.»

Nimitz, who had just returned from a Guam-Saipan inspection trip, said he wants to move his headquarters to the fighting area. (PWB)

LEMAY HEADS SUPER-FORTRESS OPERATIONS

WASHINGTON, August 14 — The War Department announced yesterday that Maj. General Curtis E. Lemay had been named commander of the 20th USAAF now operating in the Far East.

A veteran of many bombing missions over Europe, General Lemay takes command of the Super-Fortresses in the China-Burma-India theater. Until recently, he commanded the heavy bombardment division of the 8th USAAF in England.

He holds the DSC and the British DFC for leading the Flying Fortress attack on the Messerschmitt plant at Regensburg on 17 August 1943. (Reuter)

USAAF DROPS RECORD BOMB TOTAL

WASHINGTON, August 14 — The United States Army Air Forces have dropped 472,084 tons of bombs in the first six months of this year — twice as much as during the entire period from 7 December 1941, to the end of 1943, the War Department announced yesterday.

The War Department estimated that by the end of 1944, the USAAF will have dropped another 700,000 tons of high explosives.

Bomb tonnage dropped during the first six months of this year over the European theater alone increased by 500 per cent, it was stated, due to the dwindling German fighter opposition and the increased number of missions resulting from improved sighting devices to cover a wider range of weather conditions.

Of a total of 405,212 tons of bombs dropped in the European theater from January to 1 July 1944, the 8th and 9th USAAF dropped 243,402 tons, and the 12th and 15th USAAF in the Mediterranean theater dropped the balance. (OWI)

HALIFAX PRAISES LONDONERS AND U.S. SOLDIERS

WASHINGTON, August 14 — The British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, at a press conference yesterday on his return to Washington, paying tribute to the courage of the Londoners, said that the flying bombs did not have the slightest effect on the peoples' determination to wage war.

Halifax went on to praise the rescue work of American soldiers during the flying bomb attacks. «The moment a bomb strikes,» he said, «American soldiers appear as if from nowhere. Some come on foot, others in jeeps. They work fast and efficiently, rescuing the injured with total disregard for their personal safety. This has made a deep impression on the English people, and has brought the two nations close together in a common bond of sympathy. The American soldier has distinguished himself as much in England as he has at the front.» (PWB)

VIEWS DIFFER ONLY ON MANNER OF GERMAN DEFEAT

LONDON, August 14 — When will the war end? Notable people have given to the Sunday Express of London answers reflecting differences of opinion regarding the circumstances leading to Germany's defeat. Most of these, however, are agreed that the end of the war in Europe will come before the end of 1944.

Lord Strabolgi, former chief Labor whip in the House of Lords, prophesied the Red Army's entry in Berlin by the end of October. By that time, he said, the Allied armies in the west should have swept across the Low Countries and reached the Rhine. Under this combined pressure the Nazis will collapse.

«I give a month for their final liquidation,» he said.

Lord Vansittart, former chief diplomatic adviser to the Government, said:

«The collapse is coming and will come suddenly, like the end of the last war. It will come because the German nation in arms will have been completely defeated.»

INSIDE GERMANY

VON PAULUS URGES OVERTHROW OF HITLER

LONDON, August 14 — German Field Marshal Von Paulus, after a silence of 18 months, has appealed by radio to the German people to get rid of Hitler and end the war, which, he declared, Germany has already lost.

Field Marshal von Paulus was captured at Stalingrad shortly after being awarded the Oak Leaves for his defense of the city.

Despite Russian photographs of his surrender, the German High Command never admitted his capture, and let it be understood that he had committed suicide rather than accept surrender, BBC pointed out today.

The only German field marshal to be captured in this war, von Paulus has never associated himself with the German Committee in Moscow, nor did he endorse the appeal of the captured German generals to the German people to abandon the war.

Besides strong land armies, von Paulus said, the Allies are so much superior in the air and in the sea as to make Germany's position still more hopeless. «Germany has lost the war. She has lost it through the fault of Hitler's government and military leadership.

«The method employed in the treatment of the population of occupied territories cannot but awaken disgust in the heart of every real soldier, every good German, and bring down on our heads the most bitter reproaches. If the German people does not dissociate itself from crimes of this kind, it will have to bear the full responsibility. I therefore consider it my duty to declare to the whole German people, that Germany must get rid of Adolf Hitler and set up a new government which will end the war and create conditions which will guarantee the continued existence of our people.» (BBC)

20TH GENERAL CALLS FOR ARMY REVOLT

MOSCOW, August 14 — Another captured German general, Lieutenant General Fritz Franck, commander of the 73d Infantry Division, has appealed to the German Army for the overthrow of Hitler.

General Franck, who added his name to the list of 19 other captured generals, said in a statement broadcast today by Radio Moscow:

I, who am signing this declaration as the 20th general of the center army group, am convinced that only resolute fighting against Hitler and his regime can liberate the German nation and the European nations oppressed by Hitler, and will lead to the termination of the war.

Hitler tries in vain to continue the war, and thus he will only delay his own end for a short time. He already has sacrificed millions of Germans. As never before, he must make use of his SS gangs and his courts, in order to keep the army under his control.

This will not, however, intimidate either the German people or the generals and officers' corps, but only unite them as anti-Hitlerite champions. Many general officers and men from Austria and other European countries oppressed by Hitler are fighting in the German armed forces. While they are bleeding to death on the battlefields, the homeland is kept in check by the despotism of the SS and of the Gestapo.

Therefore, I am calling for decisive deeds. The fight against Hitler is the fight for the liberation of the German nation and of the European nations. (OWI)

Lord Vansittart, former chief diplomatic adviser to the Government, said:

«The collapse is coming and will come suddenly, like the end of the last war. It will come because the German nation in arms will have been completely defeated.»

A former Canadian Prime Minister, Lord Bennett, said it is reasonably apparent that Hitler will not surrender. In his view, the broken and defeated armies of Germany will speedily result in the removal of Hitler, the establishment of some form of government by the German people, and unconditional surrender.

Sir Reginald Bacon, founder of the British submarine service, believes the war will end the day Hitler commits suicide. He said that will come about not only because of military operations, but also because of psychological and economic factors.

He expressed the fear, however, that Hitler may not have the courage to commit suicide, and may flee to a neutral country, in which case «it would be impossible for the Allies to allow such an ulcer to eat into the peace of the world.»

Jan Masaryk was thus quoted:

«I share to the full the belief of the common people, here in the British Isles as well as in my own country, that the German Army is reeling to swift destruction. The revolt of the generals was an eleventh-hour attempt to bring an impossible state of affairs to an end. There was despair in 1918. There is despair now. For Germany, it is almost midnight.» (Reuter)

VON FALKENHAUSEN'S FATE A MYSTERY

LONDON, August 14 — The question of the fate of General Baron Alexander Von Falkenhausen was raised again tonight with the announcement over the Nazi-controlled Belgian radio that SS General Richard Jungklaus, personal friend of Himmler, has been appointed both SS leader and military commandant for Belgium and northern France. General Von Falkenhausen had held the latter post.

General Von Falkenhausen's «suicide» was reported by the German News Agency in December 1943, but later this report was denied and was followed by Nazi silence about the Belgian job. Now, with the appointment of Jungklaus, fanatical Nazi and Himmler worshipper, General Von Falkenhausen's disappearance remains unexplained.

The appointment of Jungklaus was the second major step by the Nazis to get a strangle control on the German Wehrmacht. The first was the appointment of Himmler, Gestapo chief, as commander-in-chief of the Army within Germany — a step in the direction of maintaining home «discipline» when Germany itself becomes the final battlefield of the war. ANOTHER STORY ON KESSELRING'S WOUND

LONDON, August 14 — Dispatches reaching England from Stockholm today said that Field Marshal Albert von Kesselring was wounded by one of his own officers in a dispute over the question of Kesselring's continued loyalty to Hitler.

This is the latest of several explanations of how the field marshal was temporarily put out of action on the Italian front.

The German radio said last month that he was hit while touring the front lines. But Stockholm said the shot was fired in his own headquarters after the marshal refused to send off a congratulatory message following the attempt on Hitler's life. (PWB)

ROME ADMINISTRATION PASSES TO GOVERNMENT

ROME, August 15 — Administration of the City of Rome, together with the Provinces of Littoria, Frosinone, and Rome, was transferred to the Italian Government today (Tuesday). This is in accordance with an agreement reached between the ACC and the Bonomi Government some time ago.

Prime Minister Bonomi late Monday issued a statement on the transfer of administration, in which he asked the people to expect no wonders from the Government in immediate solution of Rome's problems. He promised, however, that the full force of his Government would be employed toward constructive ends.

The transfer of administration cuts nearly in halves the territory which Region IV, Allied Military Government, has been administering since it was joined to the original Rome Region. The regional staff headed by Colonel Charles Poletti, will continue, however, to administer the three provinces of Rieti, Viterbo, and Terni to the north, as well as provide advisors and consultative aid in the Italian Government's administration of the additional territory now turned over to it.

Colonel Poletti will speak over Radio Rome Wednesday night on the effect of the transfer of Government. (UNN)

BRITAIN, U. S. AGREE ON POST-WAR PEACE PLAN

WASHINGTON, August 14 — The British are in full agreement with the American plan for a post-war peace organization, Sir Alexander Cadogan, British Permanent Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said here last night.

Cadogan, who heads the British delegation to the international conference on post-war security, which opens at Dumbarton Oaks, Washington, D.C., August 21, said the conference plans were now fully prepared.

He added that the British and United States plans had been given to the Soviet and Chinese governments for study, and that the Soviet plan had just been received. China has not, as yet, submitted a plan.

Cadogan disclosed that Britain, the United States, and Russia had exchanged ideas on the subject of an international air force, and said he thought there was general agreement that such a force should be available in some form to give effect to any future plan for world organization. (PWB)

U.S.-RUSSIANS AVIATION TALKS ANNOUNCED

MOSCOW, August 14 — Radio Moscow said today that negotiations concerning post-war civil aviation between the United States Government and the Soviet Government were conducted last month in Washington.

Radio Moscow added: «Negotiations were of a preliminary character, and were conducted in a cordial atmosphere. General understanding of mutual interests and points of view of both negotiating countries concerning tasks and the course of development of post-war international aviation was reached between the two delegations.

«In particular, it was established that it would be expedient to organize an international commission for civil aviation with advisory functions on technical matters, to facilitate aviation and enhance the safety of flights on international air routes.

Agreement was reached regarding exchange of views in the near future between technical experts of the United States and the Soviet Union on the coordination of technical measures in the domain of international air transport.»

HOLLANDERS SUBMIT POST-WAR PLAN

LONDON, August 14 — The people in German-occupied Holland are studying post-war reconstruction and have submitted to the Netherlands Government in London a 10,000-word document containing the ideas of the four leading political parties on Holland's program after the war. The political system of Holland and the country's economic organization were studied.

The Netherlands' largest pre-war party, the Catholic, wants abolition of the Upper Chamber, but it wants a Parliament which will be freed from the necessity of detailed work so that rapid legislation is possible. It also wants abolition of proportional representation. In the economic sphere, it hopes that production will be devoted to benefitting the nation, rather than for private profits.

The Catholic Party opposes complete state control of industry, and urges that a certain amount of freedom for competition should be permitted.

The second largest party, the Social Democratic, hopes for a strong government after the war with unchanged relations between the Royal House and the Parliament. In economic development, the Social Democratic party wants the government to control trade in the interest of the nation, and it shows a desire for a much more advanced social and economic legislation than that before the war. It also wants direct universal suffrage.

The Catholic and Social Democratic parties represented nearly 70 per cent of the Lower House before the war.

The four remaining parties are relatively small, but it is quite possible that they may play a bigger part in Holland's political life. These are the Communists, who had a very small following of Liberals, Historical Christians and anti-Revolutionists; the latter alone have a following of about 14 per cent.

One result of the war has been to strengthen the devotion of all classes and parties in Holland to the Royal House of Orange in consequence of the great unifying influence wielded by Queen Wilhelmina. (Reuter)

MAQUIS RAID GERMAN BARRACKS

LONDON, August 14 — A bold exploit was successfully carried out by the Maquis in Annecy, chief town of Haute Savoie, where the Germans have been forced to erect pillboxes and fortify their quarters in the town, according to the Zurich correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph.

Dressed in uniforms of Vichy French officers, and headed by a "general," the French forces drove through Annecy in a car and were saluted by German officers. The French Patriots proceeded to the Deseriz Barracks, where the Germans had stored war materials. Seventy thousand cartridges and other supplies were easily loaded onto trucks by the Maquis and driven away.

It was not until three hours later that German headquarters learned about the raid, the report said. (Reuter)

NAZIS BLAME DANISH KILLINGS ON POLITICS

LONDON, August 14 — A series of murders, described by the Nazi-controlled Danish radio as political in motive, has broken out in Denmark.

Gunnar Larsen, editor of a German-controlled newspaper, the Christian Daily, was shot Friday in his home. A German constable had been shot the night before, and yesterday a detective was found slain in the streets. (Reuter)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE, AFHQ, ITALY, August 14 — Today's communique:

LAND: In Florence, sniping is decreasing, and AMG officials are better able to get food, water, and medical supplies to the civilian population. On the remainder of the front, active patrolling continues.

AIR: Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked bridges and military installations in southern France and northwestern Italy. Escorting fighters strafed ground installations; other heavy bombers attacked enemy troop concentrations at Pec in Yugoslavia, while fighter-bombers attacked an airfield at Montelimar in the Rhone Valley.

Tactical aircraft continued their attacks against military objectives in the south of France and northern Italy. It is not yet known how many aircraft were destroyed, or what our losses were on these operations. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 14 — Today's communique:

Further progress was made east of the River Orne, where Allied troops entered Clair-Tizon and Donnay.

South of Saint Pierre la Vielle, the advance continued along high ground on each side of the road to Conde. Southwest of Vire, ground was gained in heavy fighting.

Further south, toward Mortain, our forces following up the German withdrawal encountered mines and long-range artillery fire.

In Brittany, the Allied attack on Dinard continues; to meet strong resistance and remnants of the German garrison of St. Malo still hold out in the citadel. Slight advances have been made by units in the vicinity of Brest. There has been no change in the situation at Lorient.

Highways and road junctions on both sides of the Seine from Paris to the sea and westward to Lisieux and Rugles were attacked by heavy and medium bombers. Medium bombers also attacked rail bridges at Peronne, Douilens, and Cherisy, rail facilities at Corbeil, and enemy gun positions in Falaise.

Bombers also attacked a railway bridge over the Seine, and an oil storage depot at Brest, as well as troop concentrations in the battle zone. Fighters also ranged over northeastern and central France, destroying locomotives, railway cars, motor transport, and canal barges, while other fighters provided escort for bombing missions. Light bombers last night continued their attack on transport barges behind the enemy lines. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 14 — Monday night's communique:

During August 14, west and southwest of Pskov, our troops in the course of their advance captured the town and railway station of Ansla, and also occupied over 100 other populated localities, including Veturitsa, Katstyny, Sergastu,

The proclamation, which was circulated in the form of a pamphlet, was found in the Subbiano area, north of Arezzo. It was dated mid-July. (PRO)

GERMANS TO CUT NORWEGIAN RATIONS

LONDON, August 14 — The Germans have ordered Norwegian rations to be cut during the next rationing period to cover the theft of a large quantity of ration cards, according to a Norwegian Telegraph Agency report.

The dispatch said that there will be no issue of tobacco or spirits for the next three months.

Quisling police have offered a reward of 200,000 Krone for information leading to the capture of two Norwegians, Hjalmar Engebretsen, controller in the Ministry of Supply, and Harnsinius Nordland, printer, who are alleged to be implicated in the theft. (Reuter)

PARISIANS AWAIT THE ALLIES

LONDON, August 14 — So great is the French people's confidence in the Allies' ability to liberate Paris, that Underground newspapers are now read in public and radios blare away with broadcasts from London through the open windows, wrote Harold Cardozzo, Madrid correspondent of the London Daily Mail.

In front of shops, diagrams have been posted which show day by day, the British and American advances. Parisians openly discuss in the streets the approaching arrival of the Allies in Paris.

The correspondent said that railway sidings in some areas are crammed with loaded wagons full of war material which the Germans are trying to get away. Discipline among the German troops has grown steadily worse since news of the anti-Hitler revolt, and many soldiers are talking openly of desertion. (OWI)

«LOOS HEROINE» IN BRITAIN

LONDON, August 14 — Emilienne Moreau, a Frenchwoman who, during the last war, became famous as the «Loos heroine,» and received the British Military Medal, the Red Cross Medal, the Croix de Guerre, and the Legion of Honor, has escaped from occupied France.

MOSCOW, August 14 — Monday night's communique:

During August 14, west and southwest of Pskov, our troops in the course of their advance captured the town and railway station of Arsla, and also occupied over 100 other populated localities, including Veturitsa, Kalatvuy, Sergostu, Finorpali, Salina, Muraki, Krini, Eantye, and Shauli, and the railway stations of Vagula and Finorpali.

In the area of Rashnyai (Rasshreny), our troops repulsed strong enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks.

Troops of the 2d White Russian Front, continuing their offensive, August 14, by direct assault captured the strongly fortified area of the Germans on the River Bobr, the City and Fortress of Osloviets.

Northwest and west of Sandomir, our troops repulsed enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks, and continued operations of expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the River Vistula.

On all other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 13, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 79 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 22 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 14 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Near Arta, in the province of Udine, German motor columns were attacked by patriots. Three German soldiers were killed, three wounded, and several trucks were either destroyed or damaged.

The same patriot group later attacked another enemy supply convoy near Esemon in the North-western Alps. Three Germans were killed, prisoners were taken and five motor cars were taken from the enemy. In that zone, the patriots have frequently and effectively sabotaged German communications.

An important railroad line was cut twice within a short time.

Another group of patriots stopped a train near Manago, in Udine Province and destroyed all the cars, liberating a number of Italian workers who were being deported to Germany. The workers fled to the mountains and reached patriot formations.

Two Fascist Divisions, which had been trained and equipped in Germany, were returned to Italy toward the end of June. As soon as the train had crossed the Italian border, the soldiers of the two divisions forced the train to stop and killed all the officers. Most of the soldiers joined the patriots.

It is learned that one of these divisions is operating in Piedmont and the other in Lombardy, were they contribute to keep the Canonica, Tromina, and Sabbia valleys under patriot control.

Three Garibaldi Brigades, operating north of the Arno River between Florence and the sea, have distinguished themselves in recent actions. Another powerful patriot formation has been active in the Garfagnana zone (north-of Leghorn.)

Another and more numerous group has operated north of that zone.

In the northern sector of the Tuscan Appennines, enemy communications have been interrupted by patriots.

In an encounter near Pratomagno, the Germans have lost 21 men. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 14 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

On the Normandy Front, the enemy continued to exert strong pressure without being able to achieve noteworthy successes. North of Alençon, tank units engaged the enemy who advanced supported by strong air forces. Grim fighting is still in progress. Anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force shot down 12 four-engined bombers. Yesterday, the defenders of St Malo also repulsed all enemy attacks. South of the Island of Guernsey, mine sweepers damaged an enemy destroyer by numerous artillery hits.

One hundred and twenty-two terrorists were killed in action in France.

London and its outskirts continue to be kept under fierce retaliatory fire.

No major operations are reported from Italy.

From the foothills of the Carpathians up to the Vistula, local Soviet attacks were smashed, partly by counter-attacks. At the Vistula bridgeheads, west of Baranov and southeast of Warka, grim fighting is in progress. Northeast of Warsaw and southwest of Bialystok, numerous enemy attacks and infiltrations were sealed off. Northwest of Bialystok, the Bolsheviks, supported by numerous tanks and bombers, pushed back our troops some kilometers westward in fierce fighting. On the Latvian Front, enemy attempts at breaking through made with superior forces were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our troops. At the infiltration south-west of the Lake of Peipus, grim fighting with Soviet forces, which had continued to advance, goes on.

In the night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Hanover. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

St. Malo: « The news about the fighting for St. Malo gives a thrilling picture of the German garrison's heroic battle... » The garrison is said to be inflicting heavy tank losses on the Americans. Much credit is given to Colonel von Aulock, the defender. « On Saturday, August 12, an enemy tank attack near Paramé was repulsed, and late in the afternoon the enemy was obliged to return to his earlier positions, owing to strong counter-attacks. »

Items on Italy: Pavolini was wounded fighting Piedmont partisans. Mussolini has gone to the Italian front. « A crisis is pending » in the Bonomi Government.

Goebbels: Speech by Gobbels to German peasants: « Everything must be done to end this war rapidly and with a victory. » He urges greater efforts by the rural population.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Future Allied Landings Predicted: George Schroeder, chief Transocean editor: « Churchill arrived in Rome a few days after a Berlin report mentioned possibility of new Anglo-American landings in the Mediterranean area. The connexion between these facts suggests itself. For a number of days, the British have been concentrating considerable tonnage in the Mediterranean. » Speculation follows as to whether landings will be in southern France or northern Italy or both, and also as to the purpose of the Tito-Churchill meeting. « Military operations against Aegean islands » are also indicated. « This is perhaps why Bulgaria at present is the object of the Anglo-American war of nerves. »

Western Front: The headquarters of Field Marshal von Kluge reports: « Violent fighting between the Orne and Loire continues unabated. The 3d American Army, employing over 1,000 airplanes and at least as many tanks, continued its efforts to encircle the 7th and 5th German armies. These efforts were opposed by energetic, unbroken resistance. During the past 24 hours, the German troops repelled a heavy American tank attack on the town of Argentan, again inflicting upon the enemy big losses in men and material. Along the Caen-Falaise road, German troops during the past 24 hours have scored a full defensive success. »

« Biggest Air Activity Ever Witnessed »: A late Transocean dispatch says: « The biggest air activity ever witnessed, since the beginning of the invasion, took place over the western front Sunday. The Anglo-Americans sent over everything they had in incessant sorties, storming German positions. »

Eastern Front: Karl Bluecher reports: « Fighting activity on the eastern front in the past 24 hours intensified further. Also, northeast of Warsaw, the Soviets resumed their attacks and continued them at the focal points of the last few days; namely, northeast of Bialystok in the Lithuanian East Prussian frontier region, in Latvia in the Mitau area, and in the breaches southeast of Lake Pskov. »

Southern Front: D.N.B. says: « Prior to their occupation, the Americans with their heavy artillery shelled this historic town » (Florence).

FASCIST RADIO

Southern Front: Patrol encounters are reported along the Arno. German counter-attacks resulted in the recapture of important localities north of Florence. There was increased artillery fire in the Adriatic sector where an Anglo-Polish company was annihilated. The Allies continue to concentrate troops in the central sector for a major drive.

100,000 GERMANS THREATENED BY ENCIRCLEMENT SOUTH OF VIRE

SHAEF, August 13 — American tanks and infantry began a general advance this morning from positions south of Vire against possibly 100,000 Germans caught in a giant pincers formed by British and Canadian forces pushing down toward Falaise and the American troops driving eastward from Le Mans.

Hundreds of American Marauders and Havocs today laid a 30-mile wide bomb curtain along the main escape routes leading from the battle area south of Caen to the Seine. Escorted by RAF Spitfires, the 9th USAAF bombers in 18 waves smashed at road junctions stretching from Lisieux, 27 miles east of Caen on the main Paris highway, southward to Ruglès, just north of Laigle on the Argentan Paris road. Backing up those attacks, 1,250 heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF today hit at road junctions on both sides of the Seine from its mouth southeast to Paris.

British forces have advanced steadily south of Caen. On the west bank of the Laize River, Allied troops are within 1,500 yards of Clairizon. On the east side of the river, they are seven miles from Falaise. German resistance all along this line is heavy.

The Germans on the west bank of the Orne are now in a salient completely commanded by the Allies on surrounding high ground. A United Press report stated that the Germans are throwing cooks, clerks and truck drivers into the path of a relentless British advance from their bridgehead beyond the Orne in an effort to stop the thrust which will tear loose the anchor of their positions.

American Tanks

The Canadians have thrust through Barbery to reach the village of Moulines, while the British have advanced southward to take the village of Bois Halbout. These two forces are beating off desperate German counter-attacks and are consolidating their gains. The Foret de Cinglais has now been cleared. The position around Thury-Harcourt is still very fluid and last reports indicate the town is still in enemy hands.

Between Vire and Mortain, American tanks and infantry, coming in from the west, today liberated the town of Sourdeval after a two-mile advance in less than two hours. American units struck hard blows at the Germans following the first sign of a withdrawal from this area. The advance was made against elements of several German armored and infantry divisions.

Supreme Headquarters is silent about the progress of the American armored force driving beyond Le Mans. The fall of Le Mans was effected by an American motorized force which left pockets of German troops 34 miles behind them in an advance so swift that the task of mopping up was left to other troops far to the rear.

The BBC radio today quoted German reports that there is heavy fighting in the Sarthe valley and that the Americans have entered Alencon. The German report also

100,000 GERMANS THREATENED BY ENCIRCLEMENT SOUTH OF VIRE

SHAEF, August 13 — American tanks and infantry began a general advance this morning from positions south of Vire against possibly 100,000 Germans caught in a giant pincers formed by British and Canadian forces pushing down toward Falaise and the American troops driving eastward from Le Mans.

The broken German 7th Army is retreating toward the Seine River along a 30-mile front west of the Orne River. Caught between American and British fire on both flanks, German troop transports and tanks were jamming eastward roads in daylight as the urgency of the crisis heightened hourly.

General von Kluge's retreat began at 1400 hours. To protect the mass withdrawal the Germans are leaving screens of artillery and panzer troops as sort of a super rearguard force. Confusion has been increased by a two-way movement on the congested roads. While his army is withdrawing, the German commander is trying to feed replacements and supplies to the force which is staying behind.

A United Press report stated that German divisions coming across the Seine in an attempt to permit the orderly withdrawal of Von Kluge's army through the narrowing escape hatch south of Falaise, were travelling by bicycle.

Horses draw many guns. The Germans are acutely short of transport, fuel and oil, so the stampede has more than a chance of total annihilation from the air.

Battered from the Air

The withdrawal is being battered savagely. All day today every plane that could fly was cascading bombs on enemy columns jamming the roads.

sides of the Seine from its mouth southeast to Paris.

British forces have advanced steadily south of Caen. On the west bank of the Laize River, Allied troops are within 1,500 yards of Clairtizon. On the east side of the river, they are seven miles from Falaise. German resistance all along this line is heavy.

NORMANDY NAZIS RINGED

SHAEF, August 13 — The Germans' last main road of retreat toward Paris was severed today by American forces storming into Argentan, and the entire escape hatch for the fleeing enemy 7th Army was brought within artillery range from the north and south, an Associated Press dispatch reported late tonight. German traffic is reported to be choking roads as far east as Paris, as the Germans evacuate their Mortain-Vire line. (AP)

BRITISH DESTROYERS LOST

LONDON, August 13 — The British Admiralty tonight announced the following losses suffered during the Allied operations off the coast of Normandy: the destroyers ISIS and QUORN; the minesweepers MAGIC CARPET and PYLADES; the trawler GANILLY, and the auxiliary trawler LORD WAKEFIELD. (Reuter)

GERMAN TRANSPORTS SIGHTED

STOCKHOLM, August 13 — Several German troop transports have been sighted off the Aaland Islands (located between Finland and Sweden) steaming south in the direction of Germany, according to a correspondent for the Swedish newspaper Nya Dagligt Allehanda. The correspondent said that he had learned from reliable sources that German troops had embarked at the Finnish port of Turku. (Reuter) stated that some units of the American force have fought past Alencon.

German General Killed

An official spokesman said tonight that in the American advances on all fronts, 5,700 prisoners were taken, bringing the U. S. total since D Day to 99,093 and the total captured by all Allied troops to more than 130,000.

It was also disclosed at headquarters that a German staff officer, Major General Ritter Edler von Dawans, had been killed in one of 70 aerial attacks made on German headquarters since the start of the campaign. A number of his staff were also killed, including two majors, two captains and 14 other officers.

In an all-out assault on German communications, evidently designed to paralyze enemy movement at the critical stage of the Normandy battle, Allied fighters and fighter-bombers, operating in perfect weather, had by noon today destroyed or damaged over 200 locomotives and 820 railway wagons, as well as nearly 300 trucks. This impressive total follows yesterday's effort when 365 locomotives and over 3,000 wagons were hit.

In the Brittany Peninsula, the Americans sent a carload of medical supplies to the beleaguered German garrison at St. Malo in response to an appeal for aid. American prisoners who were released in return said, « There is no doubt that everyone in the fortress, except von Aulock, wants to give up. German losses are frightful. Wounded lie everywhere. »

Heavy fighting continues in Dinard across from St. Malo.

In the Brest area, a local enemy counter-attack was repulsed north of the city. At Lorient, the situation remains unchanged.

Mopping-up operations are proceeding in Angers, which is firmly in Allied hands.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Secretary for Air, yesterday visited the Normandy front, it was reported today.

1,200 HEAVIES STRAFE RETREATING NAZIS

LONDON, August 13 — The picture at SHAEF tonight following the all-out aerial attack today against General von Kluge's armor and infantry retreating from the Le Mans-Falaise sector, where the Allied armies are fast closing the trap on the Nazi forces in this sector, was described by a high-ranking officer on General Montgomery's staff as « really terrible. »

It was officially announced at a late hour here tonight that Allied aircraft of every type, including 1,200 heavy United States bombers, had encountered no German air opposition today in carrying out their tactical bombing and strafing missions against the German troops pulling out of the escape gap in the besieged sector.

The German dilemma, which was heightened by the need for two-way movement on all roads, created a confused traffic situation. While Nazi troops and equipment moved eastward other reinforcements pushed westward as supporting elements for the strong rearguard which General von Kluge had left as an intended check against the surging Allies.

Splendid Target

All this presented a splendid target for the Allied air might as United Nations planes attacked military objectives, communications, transport of all types and every thing that moved, from dawn until after dusk. The weather was reported as ideal.

Heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF today attacked all the main and secondary roads along the Seine River. Fighters and fighter-bombers gave a helping hand when they dropped their bomb load on other targets and, in addition, ranged south to Chartres, Orleans and Chateau-the target areas. RAF losses for the night's operations, which included raids on Frankfurt and Kiel, were 49 heavy planes.

Airmen said practically all German transport was kept at a standstill throughout the period. They hit 20 marshalling yards in the vital Paris area feeding the Normandy and Brittany fronts. They smashed seven bridges and wrecked or blocked four railway tunnels. One group of fighter planes blew up an ammunition train of 65 cars. In addition, six German aircraft were shot down, and 13 were destroyed on the ground. More than 500 fighter-bombers took part in these operations.

Yesterday afternoon, RAF heavy bombers hit the remaining U-Boot pens at Bordeaux and La Pallice on the Atlantic coast for the third time in 48 hours. And at the same time, American Marauders broke the Oissel rail bridge which is eight kilometers from Rouen. This was the last remaining span over the Seine west of Paris.

Other Marauders last night joined with Havocs to bomb roads and road junctions in the area west of Argentan, which lies in the path of advancing American forces on their way to Paris. Allied authorities believed that enemy forces were attempting to withdraw from the Argentan area.

Earlier in the day a large American force of heavy bombers returned to their bases in Britain after another three-way operation from bases in Russia and Italy. Formations of fighters which escorted the heavies throughout the triangular trip reported that fewer than 60 German planes appeared, of which four were shot down. None of our fighters was lost.

EISENHOWER WARNS FRENCH CIVILIANS

SHAEF, August 13 — A warning from the Supreme Commander to the French population behind the German lines was broadcast by Allied headquarters.

The message began: « The Liberating armies are pouring across France and the enemy is changing the disposition of his troops and armaments each hour. It is necessary to destroy the enemy wherever he is found, to demolish his weapons and to paralyse the routes of his supplies and retreat. »

The statement warned that all areas may be bombed whether there are German troops there or not, and issued this instruction: « If you see Allied planes, take cover. They may be forced to strike near where you live. Avoid the routes of heavy travel. Do not linger near bridges. The Allies have destroyed so much German transport that the enemy is now moving troops on back roads.

« Do not travel on your bicycles in groups. Get off your bicycles and take cover when you see Allied planes even though you may be bicycling alone. The Germans are now using farm transports. You may be mistaken for an enemy convoy if you travel in close company with other farm vehicles.

« If you stay in town, take shelter. If no good shelter is available, stay under stairways. Do not take shelter in farmhouses or abandoned German dugouts. The enemy have mined them and they will often be attacked.

« When Allied columns are approaching, battle may be near. Take shelter. Keep an emergency supply of food at home. Tie labels around the necks of your children with their names, your name and your address.

« When you see the liberating troops, stay under cover until you know the Allies have control and the firing has ceased. The Germans have been shooting citizens who shared the success too soon.

« The work of rooting out our common enemy brings death to many fighting men and some civilians. It is impossible to give a warning in advance of each attack. »

Heavy fighting continues in Dinard across from St. Malo.

In the Brest area, a local enemy counter-attack was repulsed north of the city. At Lorient, the situation remains unchanged.

Mopping-up operations are proceeding in Angers, which is firmly in Allied hands.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, British Secretary for Air, yesterday visited the Normandy front, it was reported today.

1,200 HEAVIES STRAFE RETREATING NAZIS

LONDON, August 13 — The picture at SHAEF tonight following the all-out aerial attack today against General von Kluge's armor and infantry retreating from the Le Mans-Falaise sector, where the Allied armies are fast closing the trap on the Nazi forces in this sector, was described by a high-ranking officer on General Montgomery's staff as «really terrible.»

It was officially announced at a late hour here tonight that Allied aircraft of every type, including 1,200 heavy United States bombers, had encountered no German air opposition today in carrying out their tactical bombing and strafing missions against the German troops pulling out of the escape gap in the besieged sector.

The German dilemma, which was heightened by the need for two-way movement on all roads, created a confused traffic situation. While Nazi troops and equipment moved eastward other reinforcements pushed westward as supporting elements for the strong rearguard which General von Kluge had left as an intended check against the surging Allies.

Splendid target

All this presented a splendid target for the Allied air might as United Nations planes attacked military objectives, communications, transport of all types and every thing that moved, from dawn until after dusk. The weather was reported as ideal.

Heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF today attacked all the main and secondary roads along the Seine River. Fighters and fighter-bombers gave a helping hand when they dropped their bomb load on other targets and, in addition, ranged south to Chartres, Orleans and Chateauneuf to disrupt enemy communications. Other Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked German gun positions in the Saint Malo area.

Aircraft of the 2nd TAF concentrated their attacks on the Falaise gap. Bad weather slowed up air operations over this area in the morning but when the weather cleared, Allied aircraft swarmed down on the equipment-clogged roads and had a field day against the withdrawing German forces.

A Squadron Leader described one of the scenes thus: «We attacked everything. We strafed the roads all the time and everything seemed to be on fire.»

Allied aircraft, heavies, mediums and fighters, ranged far and wide over the European battlefront yesterday for what was described as the greatest destructive day since the opening of the new front in Normandy.

Strategic assaults by RAF heavy bombers were made in great strength on the aircraft and armaments works at Brunswick, and on the aircraft plants and motor works at Ruesselsheim in southwest Germany.

Large Fires

Correspondents in England estimated that these night attacks were carried out by more than 750 aircraft. Returning pilots said their bombs left large fires in the hearts of bombers returned to their [illegible] three-way operation from bases in Russia and Italy. Formations of fighters which escorted the heavies throughout the triangular trip reported that fewer than 80 German planes appeared, of which four were shot down. None of our fighters was lost.

NAZIS ASK FOR MEDICAL SUPPLIES

LONDON, August 13 — In response to an appeal from the beleaguered German garrison of St. Malo the Americans have sent in a carload of medical supplies for the German wounded there, the BBC said yesterday.

American prisoners, released in return said: «There is no doubt that everyone in the fortress except von Aulock, the commander, wants to give up.

«The German losses are frightful. Wounded lie everywhere. We did not see von Aulock, but we were told by a German non-commissioned officer that he is quite mad and has spent the last four days drinking.»

The Americans also sent a captured chaplain to try to bring the German commander to reason, but the mission was unsuccessful.

LAVAL TO MAKE «STAND IN PARIS»

NEW YORK, August 13 — Pierre Laval has decided to make his last stand in Paris, a dispatch to the Times from Berne, Switzerland, stated yesterday.

The report quoted Laval as announcing that it was his duty in the present circumstances to remain among the Parisian population, and added that he probably realized months ago that the game was up both politically and militarily.

The same Times story said that the French resistance movement, which has become very strong in Paris since General Koenig was appointed to coordinate action, stands opposite Laval.

Several French generals arrested a long time ago by the Vichy government have been freed and are fretting for action, according to the dispatch. One of these liberated generals is reported to have led a raid on an enemy ammunition dump at Annecy in Savoie and captured 70,000 rounds of ammunition and several hundred tommy guns.

FIVE GERMAN SHIPS SUNK

LONDON, August 13 — British, Canadian and Dutch warships in three separate actions off the French coast yesterday sank five German vessels and damaged another, without loss or damage to themselves, the Admiralty announced tonight.

Canadian destroyers sank three armed trawlers and a supply ship off Point de Penmarch, Finistere. British MTB's on patrol off Le Havre encountered an enemy auxiliary vessel escorted by eight E-boats. Despite heavy enemy fire, the MTB's pressed home their attack and scored torpedo hits on the vessel. The enemy ship can be considered sunk, the Admiralty said.

Yesterday morning a British force attacked a medium-sized armed merchantship west of La Rochelle, in the Bay of Biscay. The merchantship was set on fire by shell fire and was finally sunk by a torpedo. (OWI - Reuter)

NEW YORK, August 13 — Rommel's former headquarters is now behind the American lines, wrote an Associated Press correspondent.

The chateau was used by General Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Force, in the last war, and was the location for British HQ early in this war.

The chateau was also headquarters for Colonel General Dollman, commander of German forces in western France, who was found dead in Le Mans in mysterious circumstances.

The German prisoner said that the morale in his regiment had been « considerably bolstered » by Hitler's proclamation and is now high.

RESURRECTION OF FRANCE

NEW YORK, August 13 — The New York Times, in an editorial to-day says that more than a battle is taking place in France, that, out of the dust and darkness and defeat, despair and death, a nation is being reborn.

The editorial titled « Resurrection » adds: « Regeneration comes up out of the soul of a nation and cannot be imported into France from Britain or North America. The regeneration of France began in 1940, when some regiments, deprived of tanks, of artillery, of air support, nevertheless stood their ground and died; when the powers of hell failed to break the spirit of a handful headed by de Gaulle.

« Out of torture and death the nameless thousands of the resistance south of the Arno River. With the occupation of Empoli, the German forces which yesterday were reported to be resisting fiercely both east and west of the town are now isolated from one another. Official reports did not indicate whether they have been withdrawn across the Arno, or still continue their bitter battle to hold the south banks of the stream.

Farther east, an 8th Army patrol reported the villages of Lastra and Sigma clear of the enemy, who had withdrawn to a point two miles northeast of highway 67 at this place. It was in this sector that 8th Army forces yesterday were reported to have withdrawn a half mile southwest of the village of San Colombano, under heavy enemy artillery fire. San Colombano is a mile northeast of Lastra and Sigma.

No-man's Land

German forces have resisted stubbornly in this area to the west of Florence, and for two weeks have maintained several small but powerful pockets of resistance south of the Arno River. Troops of an Indian division were reported to have reached the outskirts of Empoli on July 30, and subsequently patrols penetrated into the town. But German resistance was such that the important river, rail and road-side town remained a no-man's land.

In northern Florence, evacuated yesterday by the main German garrison forces, Allied Military Government officials, operating in the fore-front of the battle, are making every effort to take food, water and medical supplies to the civilian population north of the river.

But due to sniping in the heart of the great Renaissance city, the task of reconstruction in Florence, said AMG officials, is the most difficult yet encountered in the Italian campaign.

It was officially stated here that « attempts have been made to restrain this indiscriminate firing of Patriots and Fascists, » and that it was hoped that « reasonable administration of the civilian population » might be possible before long. No information was vouchsafed on just what form these attempts to restore public order are taking.

5th Army Front

In the difficult mountainous country of the Pratomagno range, which forces the Arno River into a looping detour to the south and to the east of Florence, 8th Army forces yesterday moved northward along the river to occupy Monte Massalta, seven and a half miles southeast of Pontassieve and Monte Pianale, 17 miles southeast across the range, and nine miles north of Arezzo.

On the 5th Army front along the coastal stretches of the Arno, enemy patrols were active in several areas, but were driven back across the stream. One of these enemy patrols crossed the Arno near Angelica, ten miles west of Empoli, but was dispersed by heavy machine gun, mortar and small arms fire.

On the Adriatic coast Polish forces were reported to be consolidating their gains along the Cesano River, and exploiting their bridgehead on the north banks of this stream.

In the Tiber Valley and in the Appenines the situation was said to be unchanged.

NAZI FRIGHTFULNESS IN FLORENCE

FLORENCE, August 13 — Stories of German frightfulness were poured out to a special UNN reporter yesterday on his second day in Florence. Fifteen days ago, he wrote, in a despatch dated yesterday, the Germans took away the city ambulances and transport and the people were unable to bury their dead. The cemetery was under shell-fire and the bodies were left lying in the houses.

The sick had to be trundled to ill-equipped hospitals and no medical or surgical supplies were available.

A flower-seller, whose stand was at the entrance to the Ponte Vecchio, was unwilling to move when ordered away, so the Germans shot him and left his body lying where it fell for two days as an «example to the people.»

«I walked through the streets,» wrote the correspondent, «and inspected the damage done by the Germans in their

looting of shops. Windows were broken, shutters smashed in and shop fittings and stocks strewn on the floor. Nothing of any value was left behind. It is too early yet to ascertain whether Florence's celebrated works of art are intact but civilians are of the opinion that they are unharmed.»

The correspondent said that up to yesterday only patrols consisting entirely of Italian Partisans had entered the town. It was they who shot out the snipers left behind by the Germans and reassured the population. They collected full information about mined areas and reported on the general conditions in the city. The Partisans appreciated the role assigned to them, and although the liberation of Florence was a great day for both them and the inhabitants of Florence, they carried out their duties with the stern realisation that the war was going on.

Landmarks Demolished

«When I entered the city,» continues the correspondent, «I received an urgent message from the leader of the Partisans that contact had been maintained with the Germans to the north of the city. I relayed the message to headquarters. The latest information is that the enemy is still resisting behind the canal area to the north and fighting a vigorous withdrawal action.»

The Partisans will to-day (Sunday) do honor to their fallen leader, Potente, who will be buried with military honors. For this ceremony the Allied authorities are placing all facilities at the disposal of the Partisans. Potente's name will always remain a shining example of heroic leadership and an inspiration to Partisan determination to free Italy entirely of the enemy.

The portion of Florence through which runs the Por Santa Maria, near the river area, has been blown up by the Germans. It contained many historic old buildings of Florence. Of particular tragedy is the destruction of the centuries old fortified houses belonging at one time to the Guelphs and Ghibellines, between which families there was a bitter feud. This family rivalry was the foundation for Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.»

Florentines Shed Tears

The Florentines shed tears openly at the sight of their wrecked bridges, which lie a broken tangle of masonry and shattered spans — monuments to German lack of all feeling toward ancient, historic landmarks.

On the river front none of the former gaily-coloured windows withstood the blast of explosions and only gaping holes spare the walls.

The sight of hundreds of citizens crossing and re-crossing the Arno by the weir is curious. In parts they have to wade deep through the swiftly-running water, and the first people to cross did so at considerable risk, as there were indications of mines. On the north bank there is a high ladder which has to be climbed and it is thus that the river is at present negotiated.

Prince Umberto, Lieutenant General of Italy, was in Florence yesterday. He drove in a military vehicle escorted by Carabinieri on motorcycles. After an interview with a member of the Committee of Liberation, he climbed to the roof of the Pitti Palace, on the Arno river, and viewed south Florence from there.

The Allied instructions to the Partisans are as follows: «Follow previous directives. Look out for and destroy enemy agents or snipers. Do not expose yourselves on roof tops, thus risking being mistaken for enemy agents while the position is fluid. Mark mines and booby traps with notices. Keep order and do not loot. Your leaders are fully informed, so obey their orders.» (UNS)

JAPS UNABLE TO REPLACE LOST SHIPS

STOCKHOLM, August 13 — The Swedish newspaper, Ocrsundposten, commenting recently on Japanese defeats in the Pacific, said: «The war at sea has become for Japan a frightening spectacle approaching the homeland.»

CHINESE STILL FIGHT NEAR HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, August 13 — Despite the loss of Hengyang, which was captured by the Japanese on Tuesday after a siege of 42 days, Chinese forces are still fighting in the outer ring of the city, yesterday's Chinese army communique stated.

The communique said: «Japanese counter-attacks in the southern suburbs of the city were repulsed. Vigorous fighting is proceeding in the suburbs of Leiyang, on the Canton-Hankow railway about 35 miles south of Hengyang. Chinese forces are attacking the suburbs of Liling, 70 miles northeast of Hengyang.»

The communique also stated that fighting at Yiyang, 60 miles northwest of Changsa was proceeding. The eastern section of Changsa was attacked by American bombers on Friday in a heavy attack that caused large explosions.

An Associated Press correspondent cabled yesterday that the Super-Fortresses operating from a base in Southeast Asia can hammer at Japan's production centers on the home and war fronts which were previously safe from attack.

Referring to the attack by Super-Fortresses on Palembang on Thursday, in which the B-29's used the new base, the correspondent said: «The extension of the range of the B-29's in a southeasterly arc from the new base endangers the most vital of Japan's production reservoirs at a time when the enemy can least afford their elimination.

New Air Targets

«Throughout the two years since their occupation, the enemy has been busily employed exploiting Thailand, Indo-China, Malaya and the Netherlands Indies, and has rebuilt and expanded production facilities on which they have depended to maintain the supply of both the home and war fronts.

«The location of these production facilities in the hinterland eased the strain on shipping which has been decimated by the American submarine campaign. Allied naval actions have hit the coastal installations but have been unable to reach the inland factories. Now, however, these factories can be reached and destroyed.»

A message from Kandy, Ceylon states that messages have been exchanged between Chiang Kai-shek and Admiral Mountbatten and were released yesterday. Chiang Kai-shek, in a message of «warmest congratulations» to Mountbatten on the «reduction and occupation of Myitkyina,» said: «This masterly and glorious victory, which was won by the close co-operation of British, American and Chinese forces, represents one of the finest achievements of the Allied armies in the Southeast Asia Command.»

Lord Mountbatten said in reply: «First honors for the capture of Myitkyina must go to the gallant Chinese, American and British forces under the leadership of General

RUSSIANS NEAR GULF OF RIGA

MOSCOW, August 13 — Russian forces driving to shut the trap on German divisions in the northern Baltic area have pushed to within 20 miles of the Gulf of Riga, according to British dispatches.

The Germans are said to be fighting desperately in an effort to halt the Russian thrust across the waist of Estonia.

The remaining strength of 20 German divisions is said to have been thrown into repeated counter-attacks. Dispatches add that their hope of survival, or of not being completely shattered when the Russians break them into two isolated groups, is very dim.

Meanwhile, farther to the south, Marshal Rokossovsky's forces have crossed the river Bug north of Siedlice, and have joined up with the elements of General Zakharov's army advancing from Bialystok.

The effect of this juncture, said Reuter reports, is the elimination of the German salient eastward of Warsaw. The joining of the two Soviet forces now forms a solid 100-mile front facing the southern defenses of East Prussia.

Furious fighting continued all day yesterday in the center of Warsaw, General Bor, commander of the Polish Home Army, reported in a communique. 41 JAP AIRCRAFT DAMAGED

ADVANCE AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, August 13 — In the fourth large attack on the island of Halmahera, strategic Jap base in the eastern reaches of the Celebes Sea below the Philippines, General MacArthur's bombers destroyed or damaged 41 Jap aircraft, sank a supply ship and damaged five coastal vessels and 28 barges.

News of this raid came with the Navy Department's statement of the record of the Navy's Air Group 10 during six months of operation in the Pacific.

The group, now back in the United States on leave, lost 12 pilots and seven crewmen during its tour of duty aboard carriers attached to Task Force 58.

Its pilots sank 16 Jap ships, including two destroyers, and damaged 61 others, including two aircraft carriers, two destroyers and a cruiser. They destroyed 291 enemy aircraft, 98 of which were shot down in combat. (OWI)

YUGOSLAV PARTISANS ATTACK RAILWAYS

LONDON, August 13 — The attack against German communications in Yugoslavia is continuing with Partisan forces pressing against rail lines and troop concentrations, Marshal Tito's communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav radio, reported today.

In Dalmatia, the enemy stronghold of Oklanj, south of Knin, has been captured. At the same time, Yugoslav units are fighting on the islands of Mljet and Peljesac where 150 enemy troops were killed. Two radio stations and other material were captured. The enemy has been driven from the island of Zirje.

In Croatia, Patriot forces attacked an enemy unit on the Sunja-Kostajnica rail line and killed 25 Germans and took 14 prisoners. Other units again cut the Zagreb-Sisak and Zagreb-Karlovac rail lines and captured 45 enemy trucks, while killing 23 Germans and liberating a number of Patriot soldiers.

In eastern Bosnia, Patriot units attacked isolated parts of the retreating 13th SS division and forced them to retreat. In central Bosnia, Yugoslav units captured the town of Prijavor and began clearing up operations in and around the towns of Kresevo and Visoko, west of Sarajevo.

FINNISH CABINET CHANGES

WASHINGTON, August 13 — The Swedish and Finnish press have seen in the Finnish cabinet changes indications that there is a strong feeling in Finland that she must get out of the war. The recent Finnish cabinet change made Antti Hackzell, an expert on Russia, premier.

On August 9 the Swedish newspaper Aftonbladet said: «The fact cannot be gainsaid that the establishment of the new Government was directly connected with the Finnish desire to conclude peace with Russia.» On the same day the Swedish newspaper, Aftontidningen, said that «the Finnish people only want peace.»

The Finnish newspaper, Suomen Sosialidemokraatti said yesterday in speaking of the Cabinet changes: «We hope it (the Cabinet) will, in co-operation with the Diet, guide the ship of state from the storm to quieter waters.»

The Swedish newspaper, Svenska Dagbladet, said August 9 that Hackzell possessed qualifications for «the investigation of possibilities of an armistice with Russia.»

The fact that so many experts on Russia are present in the new Finnish Cabinet was pointed to by the Swedish newspaper, Kuriren, published in Eskilstuna, that «Finland is fully prepared to conclude an agreement based on good neighborly relations. The paper added, «The Finnish people fasten their hopes in Mannerheim in the firm condition that he is prepared to discuss a peace settlement.»

The paper says that there are desertions from the Finnish army, something unheard of in that army, while an unusually large number of women, mostly wives of Finnish soldiers have fled to Sweden. (OWI)

GERMANS THIN OUT NORWEGIAN DEFENSES

LONDON, August 13 — The Germans in Norway have lately thinned out their defenses by dismounting many guns of the coastal batteries and shipping them to Germany, reports from the Stockholm correspondent of the Times stated.

STOCKHOLM, August 13 — About 700 dock workers in Frederikshaven, Denmark, went on strike when two German ammunition ships entered that harbor, the Swedish newspaper, Arbetet reported on August 8. They refused to resume work until the ships left, the report added.

Recent successes of the Danish Resistance movement have forced the Germans to secrecy in their reprisal shootings, in order to avoid giving warning to the Patriots, Stockholm dispatches said today.

Stockholm Radio announced that Dr. Werner Best, German Minister to Denmark, recently received orders that killings of Patriots were to be carried out secretly so that «they are noticed as little as possible, and receive no publicity.» In accordance with this policy, the Nazis murdered 11 Danish Patriots on August 8 in the cellars of the Copenhagen Gestapo headquarters, the Associated Press reported.

RADIO FRANCE WARNS GESTAPO

ALGIERS, August 13 — Radio France broadcast a warning here yesterday to members of the Gestapo and policemen in charge of the proposed transfer of 1,500 political prisoners from Paris.

After stating that the French authorities had reliable information that the Gestapo were making preparations for the transfer, the warning concluded: «It is probable that these gallant Patriots will never reach their destination. We

GERMANS PANIC IN POLAND

LONDON, August 13 — The Germans in occupied countries are showing panic in the face of defeat, according to reports reaching London.

After receiving numerous letters regarding the mass flight of Germans with their loot from German-occupied Poland, Gauleiter Greiser, visited the railway unexpectedly in Lodz and found a situation that «was not at all satisfactory» according to a Nazi paper published in Poland.

As a result of Greiser's visit, all men between 16 and 65 will be forbidden to leave Lodz, the paper added.

The Stockholm paper, Aftonbladet, said on Friday that the German authorities in Denmark found that 12 German airmen were planning to escape from the Kastrup airport to Sweden and, as a result, all German aircraft have been grounded.

The police in Norway have taken over four modern buildings in Tromsoe. (OWI)

RUMANIANS REPORTED FORMING NEW GOVERNMENT

NEW YORK, August 13 — Rumanian leaders under Iuliu Maniu have formed a provisional peace government, the Associated Press reported, quoting information obtained from a source in close contact with Bucharest. The peace movement was said to be solidifying with the full knowledge of Marshal Ion Antonescu, Premier of Rumania.

A BBC broadcast yesterday stated that Antonescu had handed his resignation to Prince Michael but this report was not confirmed by other sources.

The Associated Press dispatch stated: «The political heads, meeting regularly in Bucharest, are in contact with former Rumanian Ministers to Moscow and Berlin who are to get posts in the new government. They are Grigorie Gafencu, former Foreign Minister and last Minister to Moscow, and Raoul Bossy, until last year Minister to Germany.

«Four parties were reported represented. The Communist party, which is represented by Bodie Constantinescu, who in the past was imprisoned for political reasons, and Victor Potrascanu, of a Rumanian literary family.

«The Socialist party, which is represented by Til Petrescu, a lawyer who is a former Minister of Justice, and another lawyer, Siano. The Liberal party, which is represented by 70-year old Dinu Bratianu and his nephew George Bratianu. Members of the Peasant parties are also included.

«The party leaders are «trying to arrive now at a form of succession to the present government.» The unidentified source stated that Antonescu would be asked to resign as Premier and take the job as army chief of staff.»

LEOPOLD'S MESSAGE

LONDON, August 13 — King Leopold of the Belgians, before being deported to Germany, on June 12, issued a message to the Belgian people urging them to be courageous and united, the Independent Belgian News Agency said yesterday.

The message, published in an Underground newspaper, said the King would have liked to share to the end the trials and anxieties of the Belgian people and expressed faith in the future of Belgium.

of yards from the banks, as the Germans demolished the buildings.

On handcarts, on bicycles, on their backs, — on any and every sort of conveyance, — the refugees trundled a few belongings back, not knowing in what ruins they would find their homes.

Florentines Homeless

«This is all I have in the world,» an old woman told a UNN correspondent as she pushed a bundle of bedclothes along the road in a dilapidated baby carriage.

«Not only did they steal wherever they went, but they left hundreds upon hundreds in Florence homeless,» she pointed out with a sweep of her hand.

The other morning when the population awoke to find that they were no longer dominated by the Germans, church bells began to peal, Italian flags flew from out of the windows, and people waved from their houses to the Partisans on the south bank, signalling that the Germans had almost vanished in the night.

Partisans at once started wading across the dam in long lines, amid cheers from the south bank, which was crowded to capacity with excited civilians.

Published in the first 24 hours after the Germans stole away, La Nazione, the newspaper of the Tuscan Committee of National Liberation, wrote loudly in praise of the efforts of deliverance by the Allied troops and Partisans.

«Wounded to the heart, but undominated, Florence salutes the victorious Allies for their bravery and for her return to normal life,» the newspaper headline read.

In an open letter to the citizens, the TCNL announced that the provisional administration of the city had passed into the hands of the united representatives of the people and delegates of the democratic Government of liberated Italy.

«The forces of the TCNL have occupied the city for its defense. All citizens are called upon to help the forces of liberation,» the TCNL letter read. (UNN)

POTENTE BURIED WITH MILITARY HONORS

FLORENCE, ITALY, August 13 — Amid emotional scenes, military honors were paid Saturday morning at the funeral of Potente, Patriot hero of Florence, a UNN special correspondent reported.

Potente was the battle name of Lieut. Aligi Barducci, who died a few days ago from mortal shell wounds received while leading the Partisans against the enemy.

Guards of honor were formed of Allied troops and Partisans, though few of the latter could be spared from action.

The coffin was draped in an Italian flag on which a painting of the head of Garibaldi replaced the coat of arms of Savoy. On top of the coffin was Potente's famous red shirt, which he bequeathed to his comrades as a symbol of freedom, to be carried into the center of Florence on the day of its complete liberation.

Potente was a Florentine who joined Allied fighting units with his brigade north of Arezzo to aid in freeing his home city. On arriving in South Florence, he took over command of the Arno Division of Partisans. He died on the eve of the city's liberation. His body was brought back from a Canadian hospital to be buried in Florence.

Huge wreaths were carried by Partisans in the funeral procession. Banners contained messages from his fighting comrades, from the Partisans' Arno Division troops, from Partisans in many parts of Italy (north and south of Florence) and from the women's section of the Partisan movement.

Among the big gathering of Allied officers and troops, and Partisans' families, Potente's mother and father walked first.

FOOD FLOWS INTO FLORENCE

FLORENCE, August 13 — The people of Florence, left starving by the retreating enemy, already have received more than 450 tons of foodstuffs from the Allied Military Government officers.

Allied authorities also supplied anti-typhus serum.

An Allied army water-carrier is pumping much-needed water across the Arno River.

Distribution of food in the liberated city is being handled by the Tuscan Committee of National Liberation.

The most primitive methods were called into play to get the food across the river, as five of the city's six famous bridges were demolished, and the other, Ponte Vecchio, is blocked by debris that has been rained.

Tons of food were carried on the backs of Partisans wading across the weir of the river.

Pathetic scenes were enacted on both the south and north banks of the river as refugees returned to their homes. They had been forced to evacuate some hundreds.

Published in the first 24 hours after the Germans stole away, La Nazione, the newspaper of the Tuscan Committee of National Liberation, wrote loudly in praise of the efforts of deliverance by the Allied troops and Partisans.

In a brief address at the grave, Potente's oldest comrade, whose battle name is Dodi, and who is political officer for the Arno Division, voiced a heartfelt tribute to his friend's character, leadership and patriotism. He predicted that Potente's name would go down in history as one of Italy's national heroes, an immortal example of a true Italian.

The funeral was delayed slightly while the body of another dead comrade was prepared for burial with him. This was Tinti, who received fatal wounds at the same time as Potente. (UNN)

MALARIA FIGHT IN PONTINE MARSHES

ROME, August 13 — The Pontine Marshes south of Rome are being sprayed weekly by planes to kill breeding grounds for mosquitoes, while 5,000 civilians are working in areas both north and south of the city in a malaria-control program, the Public Health Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission announced today.

Officials warned all residents in affected areas that the German sabotage and flooding of the marshes had aggravated the normal malaria peril. Allied forces in the field must use mosquito netting and insect repellant and take atabrine regularly.

More than 6,000,000 atabrine tablets have been distributed to Italian authorities for civilians, while an equal number are in warehouses to supply further demands. Allied forces have also found four and a half tons of quinine north of Rome estimated to be enough to supply Italy for years.

As the malaria season approaches its peak, ACC officials are supervising the laying of Paris green by hand, in addition to the plane dustings, and are speeding the clearing of drainage canals and repair of pumps not wholly destroyed by the Germans. Flooding of the Pontine Marshes, according to Colonel Russell, head of the ACC malaria control section, and Rockefeller Foundation authority, placed the condition of that area back to 1830 from a public health standpoint. « OUTPOSTS NOT IMPERIALISM » - ROOSEVELT

BREMERTON, WASHINGTON, August 13 — President Roosevelt in a broadcast on Saturday night discounted any implication that protective outposts now installed beyond the coasts of the United States would mean imperialism.

Broadcasting from the destroyer in which he arrived from the Aleutian Islands, the President said that outposts were important, in addition to protection, for commercial purposes, as they led to Australia, New Zealand and other developing nations. But, concerning such outposts, he said: « We do not want to own them. »

He thought that Britain and France would be glad to join in agreements that would protect islands in their possession.

Central and South America also must be made « as safe against attack from the South Pacific as United States is from the North Pacific, » he pointed out.

With the end of the Japanese threat, there would be hope again for a permanent peace, said the President. With establishment of this peace would come opportunity for economic development, and for furtherance of enlarged trade with China and the Pacific zone.

The United States must always be on its guard against the threat of Japanese agression, he said, adding: « The word and honor of Japan cannot be trusted. »

Surveying his trip, Mr. Roosevelt said that the war against Japan was well in hand. Mentioning his conference at Pearl Harbor with « my old friend, General MacArthur, » he said that his talks there with MacArthur, Admiral Nimitz and other commanders « developed complete accord » in understanding problems « confronting the Allies in the Pacific. »

« More than 1,000,000 of our troops are today overseas in the Pacific, » he added. He could not predict when the war would be over either in the Far East or Europe.

Stressing the importance of neighborly relations between the United States and Canada, he said that the Alcan Highway From the United States through Canada to Alaska was now almost completed. (OWI - Reuter)

NAZI PURGE CONTINUES

LONDON, August 13 — Between 3,000 and 4,000 anti-Hitler Germans, both military and civil, are said to have been shot in the continuing purge which Stockholm dispatches describe as an even more terrible Nazi blood bath than the Party clean-out of June, 1934.

The BBC, quoting reports reaching Sweden, said today that thousands of arrests and hundreds of executions were being carried out in secret in what were said to be « circles wholly unconnected with the German Army officer corps. »

Confirmation of the extent of continued struggles within the Reich came from Swiss sources which said that open fighting between the Wehrmacht and the headhunters of the Waffen SS broke out in Vienna last weekend. Zurich dispatches said this internal conflict in the Reich War machine is adding more and more officers to the list of those arrested and shot. Wehrmacht officials are said to be increasingly rebellious because of constant spying on their every movement by the Hitler purge squads.

At the same time, the Hamburger Fremdenblatt reported that no more newspapers were to be sent to German troops in the line. The newspaper said that the labor required for such news distribution was more urgently needed elsewhere, but BBC pointed out that the stop on newspapers to the front very effectively suppresses full accounts of the continuing purge trials being carried out at home.

Fromm Suspected

Although no further news has leaked out about the five army officers awaiting trial in Berlin, it was learned that the Nazis are investigating the activities of Colonel General Fritz von Fromm, former commander of the German home

ARGENTINE ATTITUDE

WASHINGTON, August 13 — A recent survey of Latin-American opinion as announced here yesterday reflected widespread belief that Argentina's present policy of non-cooperation is directed against the Latin-American republics also and not solely against the United States.

The Santiago, Chile, El Mercurio, stated in a recent editorial: « We cannot hide the interest and pre-occupation which recent declarations of high Argentine officials have awakened throughout the Americas, particularly their assertions in respect to Argentina's defense plans. The Argentine activities to which we have reference are, to say the least, most inopportune. » (OWI)

NAZI PURGE CONTINUES

LONDON, August 13 — Between 3,000 and 4,000 anti-Hitler Germans, both military and civil, are said to have been shot in the continuing purge which Stockholm dispatches describe as an even more terrible Nazi blood bath than the Party clean-out of June, 1934.

The BBC, quoting reports reaching Sweden, said today that thousands of arrests and hundreds of executions were being carried out in secret in what were said to be « circles wholly unconnected with the German Army officer corps. »

Confirmation of the extent of continued struggles within the Reich came from Swiss sources which said that open fighting between the Wehrmacht and the headhunters of the Waffen SS broke out in Vienna last weekend. Zurich dispatches said this internal conflict in the Reich war machine is adding more and more officers to the list of those arrested and shot. Wehrmacht officials are said to be increasingly rebellious because of constant spying on their every movement by the Hitler purge squads.

At the same time, the Hamburger Fremdenblatt reported that no more newspapers were to be sent to German troops in the line. The newspaper said that the labor required for such news distribution was more urgently needed elsewhere; but BBC pointed out that the stop on newspapers to the front very effectively suppresses full accounts of the continuing purge trials being carried out at home.

Fromm Suspected

Although no further news has leaked out about the five army officers awaiting trial in Berlin, it was learned that the Nazis are investigating the activities of Colonel General Fritz von Fromm, former commander of the German home army. BBC suggested that efforts almost certinly would have been made to pull him into the plot against Hitler, since von Fromm was in an ideal position to know what reserves in both material and manpower the German forces had at hand.

Stockholm adds that a long list of officers who were in any manner associated with those already purged from among the top ranks had been compiled by Himmler and that 300 have already been shipped off to a special confinement camp in the Oranienburg area. (BBC)

Italy, while fighter aircraft were active against targets in the same areas.

Tactical aircraft carried out attacks over a wide area; striking at military objectives in northern Italy, the battle area, southern France and Yugoslavia.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 28 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew about 2,000 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 13 — Today's communique:

LAND: South of Caen contact has been made by Allied forces converging between the rivers Orne and Laize. A thrust from Bretteville sur Laize through Barbery reached Moulines, while another advance from the Orne bridgehead had captured Bois Halbout.

Fighting continued all day in the Saint Silvain area where a number of counter-attacks were beaten off and local advances were made.

West of the Orne, fighting continued around Hill 229, which remains in our hands. The Allied advance down the Conde road made some progress beyond St. Pierre la Vielle.

East of the Vire, an advance of nearly two kilometers was made in the face of heavy resistance.

Progress has been made to positions east of Maisoncelles la Jourdan, along the Gathemo-Tinchebray road east of Vengeons.

Patrols have penetrated as far as Sourdeval in the sector between Vire and Mortain. Mortain has been reoccupied by our troops, but the enemy is still offering strong resistance in the vicinity of the town.

In Brittany our forces are attacking the citadel of St. Malo where the remnants of the enemy garrison are still resisting.

Heavy fighting continues in Dinard.

The situation at Lorient remains unchanged.

In the Loire Valley, mopping up is proceeding in Angers, which is now in our hands.

A large area north, east and south of Paris was covered continuously yesterday by our long range fighters which reported great destruction of enemy rolling stock, ammunition trains, lorries, barges, marshalling yards and bridges.

There was some air opposition and six enemy planes were shot down.

Shelters at Brest, La Pallice and Bordeaux, and a petrol dump at Foret de Montrichard, railway yards at Metz, and nine airfields, were attacked by heavy bombers.

At Oissel, the only usable Seine bridge south of Paris was successfully attacked by our medium bombers, which also operated against road junctions and other targets near Argentan.

Normandy-based aircraft operated throughout the day, giving immediate support to ground forces.

Enemy shipping off the west coast of France was attacked by coastal aircraft which reported setting fire to a medium-sized vessel and blowing up a minesweeper.

Last night enemy troop concentrations in the Falaise area were attacked by our heavy bombers. (PWB)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 13 — Today's communique:

During August 13, west of Pskov, our troops continued their offensive and captured Veru, the district center of Estonian S.S.R., and also occupied 60 other populated localities.

Northwest of Rezekne our troops surmounted enemy resistance and captured the district center of the Latvian S.S.R., the town and railway junction of Madiona, and also occupied over 20 other populated localities.

Northwest and west of Bialystok, our troops in the course of their advance occupied over 80 populated places, including the town of Gomerz.

North and northwest of Siedlce, our troops continued to advance and occupied over 100 inhabited localities.

West of Sandomir, our troops on the left bank of the Vistula repulsed enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks.

On all other sectors of the front, there were no essential changes.

During August 12, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 75 German tanks.

In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 66 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

GERMAN WAR COMMUNIQUE

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 13 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

On the front on both sides of the Orne and to the south of Vire the enemy carried out numerous single attacks which led to embittered battles and which were repelled in their majority. Fighting is still raging for numerous dents. The battle in the area of Alencon has shifted further to the north and has increased in extent and intensity. After strong air attacks the Americans launched again an attack against St. Malo. They were repelled after fierce fighting, suffering bloody losses, our coastal and anti-aircraft artillery participated with effect in that action. The enemy who had penetrated into the town, was driven out in the course of a counterthrust; prisoners were taken.

Escort vessels of the Navy sank in the waters to the west of Le Havre an enemy speedboat and damaged another heavily.

Naval anti-aircraft artillery and escort vessels shot down 15 enemy bombers over the coast of western and southern France.

102 terrorists were annihilated in the French rear areas.

The retaliation fire continues against London.

In Italy no major actions took place.

In the east various attacks of the Soviets were repelled between the source of the Pruth and the great Vistula Bend, numerous tanks were knocked out. Battle plane formations carried out effective attacks to the west of Baranov against Soviet tanks and vehicle columns. To the northwest of Bialystok further breakthrough attempts of more than ten Bolshevik rifle divisions were halted in the course of hard fighting. On the Latvia, front the enemy attacked yesterday again in vain at several points. Only to the southwest of Lake Peipus he was able to enlarge his penetration area; Heavy fighting continues here.

After a daylight attack on the city of Metz by American bombers, minor British air formations dropped bombs at night on Braunschweig, Hildesheim, Ruesselsheim and Kiel. Night fighters and anti aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe shot down 58 terror bombers.

WAR FRONTS

DECISIVE BATTLE LOOMS IN LE MANS SECTOR AS ALLIED DRIVE CONTINUES

SHAEF, August 11 — The American armored column driving well beyond Le Mans may soon exert powerful pressure on the Germans fighting tenaciously further north. The Germans, in an effort to prevent a possible junction of this force with the Canadian and British units which suddenly plunged southward from Caen, are reported to have thrown into battle about 200 tanks against the American column. There are indications that the enemy may attempt to seek a decision by a desperate all-out battle somewhere in central Normandy.

London commentators believe that the key to the part in the raid on Dieppe nearly two years ago. It was also stated that a Polish armored division is operating with the Canadians in the Caen sector.

Moving south from Le Plessis Grimault near Mont Pincon, British armor and infantry have taken Cauville, and are approaching St. Pierre la Vielle on the road to Conde sur Noireau.

Heavy fighting continues in the Vire-Mortain area and there is no sign of German resistance slackening. South of Vire, American troops have advanced from 3,000 to 4,000 yards, and are in the vicinity of the Gathemo-La Roche road, which runs from Avranches to Tinchebray. Gathemo is firmly in Allied hands, and a German counter-attack was repulsed.

There has been no confirmation here of American spearheads in Chartres, Chateaudun, 30 miles southeast of Chartres, or Alencon, 35 miles northeast of Mayenne. An official spokesman said that it was assumed that the American spearheads were going forward in all sectors. There also has been no indication of the strength of these armored units.

Allied troops now firmly hold Nantes and Angers, and are reported to have anchored their right flank along the north bank of the Loire River between the two cities, a stretch of about 50 miles.

Brest Garrison Resists

In the Brittany Peninsula, an American ultimatum to the Brest garrison to surrender was rejected and heavy fighting is in progress. Thousands of German naval personnel, paratroops, and other soldiers were reported to have withdrawn into the port section of the city. Elements of three German divisions are in the city. American forces on the outskirts have been joined by another force which advanced along the north coast road.

In the port of St. Malo, the Germans are still holding out with remnants of the garrison in the one remaining strongpoint the citadel. The citadel is commanded by a Nazi fanatic, Colonel Paul von Aulock, who is known as the "madman of St. Malo." There are believed to be about 600 Germans defending their position. Von Aulock refused three requests to surrender, including one from the Mayor of the town.

The London Daily Express correspondent stated that the infantry fought street by street to the waterfront. Many of the men captured were over 50 years old, the dispatch stated, adding that the Germans were surrendering despite warnings from their officers of reprisals upon their return to Germany.

Lorient, on the south side of the peninsula, is surrounded by American troops on the land side, but the German garrison is still holding out. It was reported tonight that Allied warships have appeared off Lorient.

Up to Wednesday, the Allies took 4,300 prisoners, mainly in Brittany, and it was announced that the French Forces of the Interior routed 2,000 Germans when they liberated Quimper. (GWI - Reuter - BBC)

DECISIVE BATTLE LOOMS IN LE MANS SECTOR AS ALLIED DRIVE CONTINUES

SHAEF, August 11 — The American armored column driving well beyond Le Mans may soon exert powerful pressure on the Germans fighting tenaciously further north. The Germans, in an effort to prevent a possible junction of this force with the Canadian and British units which suddenly plunged southward from Caen, are reported to have thrown into battle about 200 tanks against the American column. There are indications that the enemy may attempt to seek a decision by a desperate all-out battle somewhere in central Normandy.

London commentators believe that the key to the German resistance is the knowledge that once they are forced to retreat, their lack of petrol and vehicles will make them an easy target for Allied aircraft. These German forces may have been ordered to sacrifice themselves in a delaying action, to permit reinforcements to reach some proposed line further east.

In the northern flank of the Allied front, the 2nd British Army made another crossing of the Orne River and have entered the town of Thury-Harcourt, key German strongpoint east of the river. Leading elements are reported to have reached Esson, more than three miles to the southeast.

German resistance to the Canadian advance toward Falaise has stiffened considerably. In the whole area between Vimont and the Orne bridgehead, the Germans are drawing every available tank and gun into the battle, to keep open the avenues of withdrawals for the battered divisions between Vire and Mortain. Screens of anti-tank guns have slowed the British at Vimont, where savage fighting is raging.

Heavy fighting is also going on north of Falaise, in the areas of Fontaine, Le Pine, Quesnay, Estrese la Campagne, and Siogholles, where the Canadians are battering against strongly defended German positions.

It was disclosed today that the 2nd Canadian Infantry Division has been fighting in Normandy. This division took Vire. American troops have advanced from [illegible] to [illegible] yards, and are in the vicinity of the Guthemo-La Roche road, which runs from Avranches to Tinchebray. Guthemo is firmly in Allied hands, and a German counter-attack was repulsed.

MONTGOMERY SAYS COMPLETE VICTORY IS CERTAIN

21ST ARMY GROUP HQ, NORMANDY, August 11 — General Sir Bernard Montgomery told the Allied forces under his command today that complete victory lies ahead of them, provided — he said — « we do not relax. »

In a message addressed to all Allied Ground Forces, the Supreme Commander of the armies in France declared that the Germans in northwest Europe are in a bad way. He said, in part:

« At this time of great opportunity, I feel I want to speak to the officers and men of the Allied armies in France. We are a great team — Americans, British, Canadians, and also soldiers of Fighting France and Poland — all knit together into one fighting machine, and all working for one plan.

« Today all is well, » said the general. « Our armies are moving relentlessly and swiftly into France. Many hundreds of towns and villages have been liberated, and well over 100,000 prisoners and great quantities of equipment have been captured. Best of all, the great bulk of German forces in northwest Europe are in a bad way. We are around behind them in many places, and some of them will not get away. But let everyone make an effort to wipe off this powerful German force, and so hasten the end of the war.

« In hot August days, amidst dust of battlefields, » said Montgomery, « it is not always so easy to keep up the pressure. But these are momentous days, and complete victory lies ahead, and this quickly, so long as we do not relent. Let us, therefore, continue to battle with renewed and ever increasing energy.

« Good luck to you all. » (Reuter)

HEAVIES STRIKE INSTALLATIONS NEAR PARIS
U-BOAT OIL DEPOTS BLASTED

LONDON, August 11 — Nazi fuel dumps and air fields near Paris were hit this morning by heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF based in England. Reuter said the raids, carried out in bad weather, were extended to railyards in the Alsace Lorraine area.

RAF Lancaster and Halifax heavy bombers on Thursday night attacked oil storage depots at Bordeaux and La Pallice, where the only U-boat bases not under siege by the Allies on the French Atlantic Coast are located.

They also struck at the railway junction at Dijon, in eastern France, and an oil storage depot at Dugny, adjoining the Paris airfield at Le Bourget. From the latter target, all bombers returned.

At the same time, Mosquitoes of RAF Bomber Command, carrying 4,000-pound bombs, pounded military targets in Berlin.

Railway Junction Hit

Marauders of the U. S. 9th Air Force Thursday evening attacked the junction of two important double-track railway lines at Epone Mezieres, 20 miles northwest of Paris, and the railway embankment with two small bridges at Epernon, 15 miles northeast of Chartres, over which German reinforcements and supplies had moved.

The junction was hit with good results, and left with many craters. Direct hits were scored on the embankment. Only scattered flak was encountered, and no enemy fighters were seen. All the bombers and escorting fighters returned safely.

More than 1,500 American and British bombers and useless to the Germans, said the Air Ministry today. As a result, Bordeaux and La Pallice have to supply and refit a force of U-boats too large for them, and at a time when previous attacks on the oil storage depots in France, and the breakdown of communications by road and rail, have made it almost impossible for the Germans to bring up supplies to this district. DARING MINE-LAYING FEAT BY RAF

LONDON, August 11 — Flying at a height of only 50 feet, bombers of the RAF last night mined the heavily defended Dortmund-Ems Canal, one of the most important of Germany's inland waterways.

The operation, described as one of the most daring and important mine-laying feats of the war, was preceded by an attack on the ground defences by Mosquito bombers. The Mosquitoes swept through the anti-aircraft defences that make the canal one of the most densely protected areas in Europe, to silence the flak batteries which were unable to check the mine-layers which arrived a few minutes later.

A month before D-day, Mosquitos carried out a similar operation when they mined parts of the Kiel Canal, closing it for seven days. (Reuter-BBC)

GERMAN CONVOY BLITZED OFF HELIGOLAND

LONDON, August 11 — RAF Beaufighters tore into a German convoy of five merchant ships and 10 escort vessels yesterday evening off Heligoland, and sank or damaged at least six of the craft, the Air Ministry reported today.

One of the merchantmen was torpedoed and left burning fiercely, while another was believed hit and set afire. Of the escort ships, one was blown up when hit with rocket projectiles, and four others went up in flames. Four Allied planes were lost in the battle. (PWB)

CORRESPONDENT DESCRIBES FRENCH FRONT

LONDON, August 11 — Extraordinary changes are taking place along the front, said Alan Moorehead, London Daily Express correspondent.

« It has lost all shape and cannot stay where it is, » he wrote. « The Americans are under-cutting the whole German position. Between the British and Americans is a long, thick pocket of Germans reaching from Falaise to Mortain, and they are hitting out in all directions. Along the whole of this confused, broken, bitter front, the Germans are being squeezed with an unbearable weight of guns and armor.

« Everything now seems to hang on the answer Von Kluge gives to this question: 'Do I close out now with my mobile SS divisions, and leave the horse-drawn infantry to fall back as best they can to the Seine, or do I pitch everything in here now, and fight it out to the death?' »

« The most astonishing situation of all is in the Mortain sector, » wrote Alexander Clifford, the London Daily Mail correspondent. « It seems that Rommel has not given up the mad, spectacular attempt to get back to the sea at Avranches. He collected what tanks were left to him after the Typhoons had finished with them. He has bullied the Luftwaffe into giving him strong fighter cover, and he is still trying to dig his way deeper into the bag between the Anglo-American armies. It is a real death-or-glory drive. »

GERMAN MAJOR SHOT FOR RETREATING

More than 1,500 American and British bombers and fighters Thursday attacked German communications, oil depots, and airdromes ringing Paris, Walter Cronkite, United Press correspondent, wrote.

Eighth U. S. Air Force fighters Thursday destroyed 26 German planes — eight in the air, and 18 on the ground. Not a single Nazi interceptor was encountered throughout the day.

The British Air Ministry announced that fighter planes of the ADGB (Air Defense of Great Britain), as well as anti-aircraft and balloon defenses, scored successes Thursday against German flying bombs. But the flying bombs sent over southern England and London area Thursday night caused damage and casualties.

RAF Lancasters Thursday afternoon continued their bombing offensive against the flying-bomb launching ramps in Northern France. (OWI)–Reuter–BBC)

U-BOAT TROUBLE

LONDON, August 11 — The German U-boat war received yet another blow last night with the bombing of oil storage depots at Bordeaux and La Pallise. These ports are now the only bases for all the submarines which once fought the battle of the Atlantic from the Biscay coast.

Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire are now so closely threatened by the American Army that they are almost it for seven days. (Reuter–BBC)

LONDON, August 11 — Extraordinary changes are taking place along the front, said Alan Moorehead, London Daily Express correspondent.

«It has lost all shape and cannot stay where it is,» he wrote. «The Americans are under-cutting the whole German position. Between the British and Americans is a long, thick pocket of Germans reaching from Falaise to Mortain, and they are hitting out in all directions. Along the whole of this confused, broken, bitter front, the Germans are being squeezed with an unbearable weight of guns and armor.

«Everything now seems to hang on the answer Von Kluge gives to this question: 'Do I clear out now with my mobile SS divisions, and leave the horse-drawn infantry to fall back as best they can to the Seine, or do I pitch everything in here now, and fight it out to the death?'»

«The most astonishing situation of all is in the Mortain sector,» wrote Alexander Clifford, the London Daily Mail correspondent. «It seems that Rommel has not given up the mad, spectacular attempt to get back to the sea at Avranches. He collected what tanks were left to him after the Typhoons had finished with them. He has bullied the Luftwaffe into giving him strong fighter cover, and he is still trying to dig his way deeper into the bag between the Anglo-American armies. It is a real death-or-glory drive.» (Reuter)

GERMAN MAJOR SHOT FOR RETREATING

WASHINGTON, August 11 — A German major, commanding 380 men at Juvron, between Mayenne and Alencon, was shot as a traitor by an SS detachment when he was found retreating toward Alencon without an order for withdrawal, the Swiss Tribune de Geneve said today.

The newspaper said: «The Nazi major had decided to withdraw when, after losing contact with the general staff, he learned that American tanks were approaching. His soldiers were armed only with rifles.»

Many small German garrisons in France, and even guardposts occupying strategic positions, were often out of touch with the command because French Patriots had cut their telephone line. To offset that, the Gestapo was ordered to control the isolated units with motorized squads. (PWB)

SHAEF MOVED BY AIR

SHAEF, August 11 — The Supreme Command Headquarters was moved as a unit by air during the past few days, said a report from France. Officers and enlisted men, including the Women's Army Corps, are now living in tents in a camouflaged area which is under constant patrol by heavily-armed military police.

From his new headquarters, General Eisenhower makes daily trips for personal conferences with General Montgomery and General Bradley. On August 8, he saw his British and American field commanders, both of whom were able to give highly favorable reports on the progress of the recent drive from Caen, and the advance of the tanks on the western and southern ends of the far-flung Allied fronts.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The London Times said the transfer of General Eisenhower's headquarters across the Channel clearly implies not only that the Allied grip on French soil is secure, but that, within liberated territory, there is room to stand back from the battlefield and survey the course of operations with all the comprehensiveness and detachment essential for the supreme commander. U. S. - FRANCE TELEGRAPH SERVICE RESUMED

NEW YORK, August 11 — Commercial radio telegraph communications have been resumed between the United States and liberated France. The Mackay Radio and Telegraph Company said today that its equipment was set up within sound range of Allied cannon on the Normandy front about one month ago.

For the present, said the company, service will be limited to press and government messages, and will be open for transmission from 0800 hours to 2100 hours. About 30,000 words a day are now being sent to the United States. The company added that larger equipment will be set up as additional territory is liberated. (OWI)

WHIRLPOOL OF MILLING GUNS AND ARMOR IN BATTLE FOR EAST PRUSSIA

MOSCOW, August 11 — Tried and tested Soviet tactics of massed artillery fired at short range are smashing frenzied German attacks in the battle for East Prussia tonight.

The Germans lost 100 tanks and mobile guns in a nine-hour battle on a single sector of about six miles without achieving anything. Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, said that the fight on the East Prussian frontier was a «whirlpool of milling guns and armor comparable with any decisive tank battles of the war.»

In desperation, the Germans threw in their best and toughest troops, new tanks from the testing grounds, and a Luftwaffe striking force built up from the best available units, in a final, all-out effort to save East Prussia from a Red Army invasion. But the Germans were steadily driven back and suffered huge losses in the process.

Hooper said: «The alarm call now dinning into the ear of every German along the East Prussian frontier is having its first results in a holocaust of troops and armor northwest of Mariampole. This is really the main battle for East Prussia, but on its issue also depends to a very great extent the fate of 30 German divisions in the Baltic. The time is now approaching for the Red Army's recoil, in which the Germans will have the task of mustering their shattered and exhausted forces to stem the flood across the frontier of Soviet tanks and guns which at present is being held in readiness in the rear.»

Some of the German divisions fighting fought with their backs to the East Prussian frontier include crack SS and Grenadier divisions recently arrived from Norway, Italy, and Germany.

Fighting Inside Warsaw

These units are losing men faster than reserves can replace them, losing in a single day's fighting 1,700 dead.

Fighting continued inside Warsaw, the patriots inflicting heavy casualties on German infantry which had made a strong attack in the northwestern suburbs of Warsaw. The Patriot communique sent from inside Warsaw stated that the situation in the center of the city was unchanged, with German tank units still holding three main thoroughfares running at right angles to the Vistula.

In the extreme southern sector, Red Army mountain troops, who won the battle of the Caucasus, along with Czechoslovak troops trained in Russia, were poised for early attack across the forested crests of the Carpathians as the rapid mop-up of the foothills was near completion.

REPORTS SAY MANNERHEIN WILL CONCLUDE PEACE

LONDON, August 11 — According to reports from Finland, Marshal Carl von Mannerheim has informed the German General Staff that the new Finnish cabinet is to be regarded as a peace cabinet, and that an armistice with the Soviet Union may be expected.

The Germans are withdrawing their troops from Finland, according to information reaching the New York Times from Washington. Some German troops are being taken out across the Baltic, and the remainder from the north into Norway.

In Denmark during the past 24 hours, 12 German troop trains passed through Jutland heading south, the Free Danish News Service reported tonight.

RUSSIANS CAPTURE MOUNTAIN OF SHOES

LONDON, August 11 — «A million pairs of shoes, perhaps more,» said the Red Star's correspondent Simonov, describing in his journal part of the German loot captured in Lublin. «In one part of the German barracks, the walls had collapsed under the weight of the mountain of footwear.»

Simonov said there were tens of thousands of pairs of children's shoes, and that the Germans had made a habit of collecting the footwear of their victims for raw material. (Reuter)

AMNESTY TO POLES IN RUSSIA

MOSCOW, August 11 — Radio Moscow announced early today that an amnesty has been granted to all Polish citizens sentenced, or under trial, for crimes committed on Soviet territory. The amnesty was announced as a mark of the victorious entry of the Red Army and units of the Polish Army into the territory of Poland, and is applicable to all except those who have committed grave crimes. POLISH, ITALIAN TROOPS OPEN ATTACK ON ADRIATIC SECTOR

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 11 — Polish and Italian forces of the 8th Army, attacking on a six-mile-wide front, have made initial gains of up to two miles along the Adriatic coast, it was announced here today.

The Allied attack was opened by Polish troops, supported by tanks, on Wednesday morning, and has succeeded in driving the enemy from the high ground south of the Cesano River and in capturing the towns of Scarpezzano, Monterado, and Corinaldo, all between the Misa and the Cesano Rivers. At the point of furthest progress, the Polish forces are within 18 miles of the next important Adriatic port, Pesaro.

Only minor pockets of German resistance now remain south of the Cesano River to a point 12 miles inland from its mouth, according to the communique, and patrols have already crossed this stream midway between Ancona and Pesaro. Polish forces gained their primary objective, the village of La Croce, six miles in from the coast, within one half hour of the launching of the main attack, it was said. Heavy rainstorms delayed the speed of the advance, and hindered Allied air support, but its weight was such that the enemy forces had to relinquish their positions despite five counter-attacks which were launched to stem the new Allied thrust. German losses in men and material were heavy. Polish troops captured 300 prisoners in the opening phases of the drive.

There was little activity to report along the remainder of the Italian front. Enemy snipers were active in the Florence sector, and intermittent shelling from enemy batteries was still reported in southern Florence. Radio Moscow said tonight that shootings occurred today in East Prussia, West Prussia, and the Danzig area, when Nazi SS Elite Guardsmen attempted to arrest German Army officers.

The fate of the Reich also was being decided on the west bank of the Vistula, northeast of Crakow, where German prisoners told the correspondent of the Russian Newspaper, Pravda, that Hitler had ordered Nazi armies «to fight to the last soldier because, Germany being immediately behind your back, if you retreat you only open the door of your home to the enemy.»

Russian troops have by-passed the town of Sandomierz from the south and west, and are now fighting on the approaches to this strongly fortified point.

Marshal Konev's army is still advancing into the Carpathian foothills from the oil center of Drohobycz. Russian troops in this area have inflicted a heavy defeat on Hungarian troops, many of whom have surrendered.

In three days of fighting by the Narew River, southwest of Bialystok, 4,400 Germans were killed.

FLORENCE DESTRUCTION STARTED BY SUBORDINATE

LONDON, August 11 — Kesselring's pledge to treat Florence as an open city was violated by a fanatical subordinate officer who took matters into his own hands, according to a striking despatch from the Daily Mail correspondent in Florence.

«There is good reason to believe,» he said, «that it was a result of the attempt on Hitler's life that the Germans decided no longer to treat Florence as an open city, but to blow up its lovely bridges and to oppose the 8th Army's entry.»

The story of dramatic events behind the scenes at Kesselring's headquarters after the bomb plot takes shape as details are pieced together from various reliable sources.

Many weeks ago, Kesselring gave his solemn, widely-publicized promise to Cardinal Della Costa, Archbishop of

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Florence, that the German Army would respect everything the city stood for, and would not make it a battleground.

Then came the attempt to kill Hitler. Kesselring did not immediately send a message expressing continued loyalty to his leader. Members of his staff began to suspect he was in some way implicated in the anti-Hitler plot, and one night they had matters out with him at headquarters.

Belatedly, and under pressure from his staff, Kesselring sent the requisite message to Hitler. But he had lost some measure of control during the squabble, and a certain Colonel Fochs, a violent Nazi and powerful officer in Heydrich's paratroops, decided to take the situation of Florence into his own hands.

Sweeping aside Kesselring's earlier pledge, he ordered the blowing up of bridges and the transformation of the city into a fortress. As his excuse to Florentines, he issued proclamations stating that the Germans had certain knowledge that the 8th Army was not going to respect their city, and defensive action was therefore justified. TWO BRITISH SOLDIERS WIN VICTORIA CROSSES

LONDON, August 11 — Sergeant Maurice Wyndham Rogers, of the Wiltshire Regiment, and Private George Allan Mitchell, of the Gordon Highlanders, both of London, have been awarded the Victoria Cross posthumously, it was announced in last night's London Gazette.

Both won the awards for singlehanded attacks on German strongpoints in Italy. Sergeant Rogers advanced alone with a tommy gun through enemy wire and minefields to destroy two machine gun posts which had been holding up his platoon. While attempting to silence a third, the sergeant was wounded in the leg by a grenade, but ran toward the post still firing the tommy gun. He was killed at point-blank range.

Private Mitchell, singlehanded, silenced three German machine-gun nests with rifle and bayonet as his only weapons. After leading the final assault which captured a hill position, Private Mitchell was shot through the head by a German who had surrendered. (Reuter)

WEATHER CURTAILS TACTICAL OPERATIONS IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 11 — Although heavy bombers ranged over Rumania, equally weather yesterday restricted operations of Tactical Air Force planes which have been pounding communications in northwestern Italy and southern France.

Light and fighter-bombers attacked oil storage tanks, trains, barracks, workshops, and buildings in sweeps over Yugoslavia and Albania, and destroyed 11 locomotives and damaged 13 others. Fighter-bombers also attacked enemy gun positions in the battle areas, and carried out sweeps over northern Italy, despite heavy rain squalls.

RAF heavy and medium bombers attacked the Kraljevo rail yards, 120 miles northeast of Dubrovnik, Yugoslavia, in last night's mission.

In the daylight attacks by heavy bombers on oil installations in the Ploesti area, six enemy planes were destroyed.

Bomb Destroys Fighter

A bomb released by a Flying Fortress over Gyor, Hungary, struck a Nazi fighter plane and smashed it to bits before plummeting on to hit its target, it was announced here today.

The unusual incident occurred during Wednesday's attack on the aircraft components factory at Gyor, and the bombardier of the Fortress has been credited with a victory over a Nazi craft.

BRITISH SUB SINKS FIVE SHIPS

LONDON, August 11 — Within a period of four days, during a recent patrol in the Mediterranean, a British submarine sank a total of five enemy ships — a 5,000-ton supply ship, a salvage vessel of 1,000 tons, a lighter, a minesweeper, and an R-boat. (OWI)

28 CITATIONS TO BARI HEROES

WASHINGTON, August 11 — The Navy Department awarded citations Wednesday to 28 heroes of the merchant ship S.S. John Harvey, which went down during an attack by German planes on the Bari, Italy, harbor on the night of 2 December 1943.

Of the 28 receiving the citations, 10 were fatally wounded. Their commanding officer, Ensign Kay Kvesole, a Polish-born lawyer in the United States Naval Reserve, was among the dead.

The citation told how the ship's armed guard fought through fire, explosions, and water to get others to safety. (OWI)

GERMANS IN YUGOSLAVIA MUTINY

LONDON, August 11 — Marshal Tito's communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslavia Radio, said today that a German battalion in the town of Zemun, across the Danube from Belgrade, mutinied after being ordered to the Russian front.

Rioting broke out in the town as the soldiers destroyed their own guns, the communique added. Thirty of them were shot down, and more are under arrest. Others escaped to the woods, and a score joined Tito's forces.

In Dalmatia, Yugoslav units have taken the stronghold of Kistanje. Fighting is in progress for the German stronghold of Ostrai.

In western Bosnia, an enemy column which tried to penetrate liberated territory to seize the harvest was thrown back.

Heavy fighting is going on in Croatia between Tito's men and the Germans. (PWB)

JAPS MOBILIZE HOME DEFENSES AS U. S. FORCES CLOSE IN

WASHINGTON, August 11 — Coincidentally with the establishment of United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters on the captured Japanese island of Saipan, the Japanese news agency, Domei, revealed today that a special meeting of Premier Kuniaki Koiso's war cabinet will be held on August 19, in an effort to gather its forces for defense of the Japanese homeland.

Transfer of Vice Admiral Richard Kelly Turner's base of operations from Pearl Harbor to Saipan puts the Pacific Fleet headquarters 1,262 miles from Yokohama, Japanese home naval base, and seaport for the city of Tokyo. Admiral Turner was in command of the amphibious operations in the Gilbert Islands last year, and conducted the attacks against the Marshalls several months ago.

It was the fall of Saipan which brought about the resignation of Premier Hideki Tojo and all of his cabinet.

WASHINGTON, August 11 — Coincidentally with the establishment of United States Pacific Fleet Headquarters on the captured Japanese island of Saipan, the Japanese news agency, Domei, revealed today that a special meeting of Premier Kuniaki Koiso's war cabinet will be held on August 15, in an effort to gather its forces for defense of the Japanese homeland.

Transfer of Vice Admiral Richard Kelly Turner's base of operations from Pearl Harbor to Saipan puts the Pacific Fleet headquarters 1,262 miles from Yokohama, Japanese home naval base, and seaport for the city of Tokyo. Admiral Turner was in command of the amphibious operations in the Gilbert Islands last year, and conducted the attacks against the Marshalls several months ago.

It was the fall of Saipan which brought about the resignation of Premier Hideki Tojo and all of his cabinet last month. And now, combining with American naval advances, it is the success of American Super-Fortress raids on Japan itself that has roused the new cabinet of Premier Koiso to call for a national movement of total armament, and for new systems of defense against inevitable American assaults.

Japan Bombed Again

A formation of the powerful B-29's attacked the Japanese mainland at an unidentified place again today, following the far-flung operations of yesterday when they raided Nagasaki, on the southern Jap island of Kyushu, and Japanese-held oil refineries near Palembang, on the Dutch Island of Sumatra, south of Singapore.

Meanwhile, other United States planes, attached to General MacArthur's forces in the Southwest Pacific, struck at Japanese airfields near the Philippine harbor of Davao on the island of Mindanao for the third successive night. A MacArthur communique said also, that all organized resistance of Japanese forces along the Driniumor River line in British New Guinea had been wiped out.

Organized Japanese resistance on the island of Guam has also ceased, according to a communique from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor. The Navy said that mopping up operations were continuing, and it revealed that Japanese losses during the eight weeks of the Marianas campaign were more than 40,000 dead, against American losses of 4,453. These figures include the losses on Guam.

Also from Hawaii, President Roosevelt declared that he, General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz, are confident that the Japanese will be crushed into unconditional surrender. The President, who has completed a three-day conference with his Pacific war leaders, added that the plans of future operations against Japan are mapped out, and that he is now more confident than ever about the outcome of the war.

From the raids on Sumatra and Japan yesterday, three of the Super-Fortresses failed to return. Still another was forced down, but in friendly territory. Results of the overall operations, said the War Department, were good.

Dispatches sent from «a secret B-29 base near the Equator,» said that the Super-Fortress raid on Jap-held oil installations on Sumatra was the longest aerial mission of the war; that the huge planes made a roundtrip flight of 3,600 miles.

The Palembang refinery is the largest oil producing unit in Japanese-conquered territory, and is estimated to have turned out 78 per cent of all aviation gasoline for the Japanese air forces. The plant is said to have produced about 29 per cent of fuel oils used by the Japanese navy and merchant marine. According to first reports, flak was light over the target, and there was no fighter opposition. American bombs left huge fires. (PWB)

GENERAL STILWELL DRIVES TOWARD MANDALAY

KANDY, CEYLON, August 11 — Allied forces of American, Chinese, and British troops, under General Joseph Stilwell, made further gains today in the fight to drive the Japs backward from their planned invasion of India.

The heaviest drive was pushing toward the town of Bhamo, which ranks next in importance to Mandalay as a road and communications center vital to operations in Burma and China.

The important rail town of Taungni, on the route into southern Burma, was taken by Allied troops on Wednesday. In other areas of the Burma front, continued gains have been made despite strong Jap resistance.

Extensive aerial operations continued without letup. Allied planes yesterday attacked Japanese rolling stock and river craft in central and southern Burma, destroying Jap supply convoys, and inflicting heavy casualties on enemy troop concentrations.

Delayed dispatches said today that American aircraft destroyed 65 Japanese trucks near Hengying several days ago. At the same time, other American fighter planes attacked a Japanese pilot-training center in China, and destroyed 26 Jap planes and damaged another 24. All Allied airmen returned safely.

Other groups of American fighter pilots attacked Jap supply lines along the roads and rivers of French Indo-China. (OWI)

GERMANS ARE NOW SHY 75 GENERALS

LONDON, August 11 — The German High Command is now shy 75 generals, an Allied press correspondent estimated tonight. The capture of Lieutenant General Karl Sjang by U. S. forces just outside of Brest was the most recent addition to the list of German generals killed, wounded, or captured in action, or killed by Hitler's order.

This poses a staggering problem to the Germans, and will be no more easily solved than the replacement of over a million fighting soldiers dead, wounded, and captured in three months of war on all major fronts. (PWB)

SURRENDER TERMS: ROOSEVELT'S STATEMENT

PEARL HARBOUR, August 11 — President Roosevelt, at a press conference here, gave some explanation of the terms of unconditional surrender which the Allies will demand from Germany. He said that enemy war machines will be given no terms which will make it possible for them to prepare for another war.

The President was asked whether the United Nations would hold Japan to the same terms as Germany. He replied that no differentiation was made at the Casablanca conference. The goal with Japan was unconditional surrender, as it was for Germany.

The President added that the victorious United Nations have no intention of starving the people of Germany and Japan after the surrender, and that the peaceful populations of the two nations need not fear for their lives after their defeat. (OWI)

PURGED GERMAN OFFICERS' FAMILIES EXECUTED

LONDON, August 11 — A despatch from Berne said Wednesday that, according to reports from Spain, the entire families of the eight high German officers hanged for complicity in the attempt on Hitler's life were executed last Tuesday.

The report said that those executed included the wives, children, and parents of the purged officers, and in some cases even cousins and intimate friends. It also said that numerous trials of German civilians involved in the peace movement are now under way.

Dispatches from Allied and neutral capitals yesterday indicated that the counter-measures taken by the Nazis to quell the peace movement inside Germany, such as the hanging of the eight army officers, are not having the effect the Nazis hoped they would have. In fact, the revolutionary spirit is not only deep-rooted, but widespread, and is not restricted to army circles alone.

That civilians were assigned by the plotters to certain tasks is proved by the fact that Kurl Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipzig, is hunted by the Gestapo, which is offering one million marks for his capture. (OWI)

GENERAL STILWELL DRIVES TOWARD MANDALAY

KANDY, CEYLON, August 11 — Allied forces of American, Chinese, and British troops, under General Joseph Stilwell, made further gains today in the fight to drive the Japs backward from their planned invasion of India.

The heaviest drive was pushing toward the town of Bhamo, which ranks next in importance to Mandalay as a road and communications center vital to operations in Burma and China.

The important rail town of Taunggni, on the route into southern Burma, was taken by Allied troops on Wednesday. In other areas of the Burma front, continued gains have been made despite strong Jap resistance.

Extensive aerial operations continued without letup. Allied planes yesterday attacked Japanese rolling stock and river craft in central and southern Burma, destroying Jap supply convoys, and inflicting heavy casualties on enemy troop concentrations.

Delayed dispatches said today that American aircraft destroyed 65 Japanese trucks near Hengyang several days ago. At the same time, other American fighter planes attacked a Japanese pilot-training center in China, and destroyed 20 Jap planes and damaged another 24. All Allied airmen returned safely.

Other groups of American fighter pilots attacked Jap supply lines along the roads and rivers of French Indo-China. (OWI)

NEW DELHI, August 11 — The Viceroy of India, Viscount Wavell, recently visited Indian territories liberated from the Japanese by Allied troops, among these being Imphal and Kohima, said the Exchange Telegraph yesterday. (OWI)

BRAZILIAN NAVY STRENGTHENED

BRAZIL, August 11 — The Brazilian Navy will be considerably strengthened within a short time, said Admiral Soares Guira, commander of the Brazilian naval forces, on Wednesday. In addition to four destroyers recently transferred to Brazil from the United States, at least 15 more will shortly be acquired from various sources.

Meanwhile, an Associated Press report from Miami, Florida, said that two destroyer escorts would be transferred from the United States Navy to Brazil about August 15, and would be similar to the two craft received by the Brazilians on August 1 and which are now in service against Germany. (OWI)

TWO U. S. N. SHIPS LOST IN EUROPEAN WATERS

WASHINGTON, August 11 — The Navy Department announced yesterday the loss of two American naval vessels, the minesweeper Osprey and the submarine chaser PC 1261. The ships were lost in European waters, but no details were given as to how the losses occurred.

These losses bring to 133 the number of American naval craft lost since the war began. In addition, 32 are listed as overdue and presumed lost, while nine naval craft were destroyed to prevent their capture. (OWI)

VON NEURATH, SCHACHT ARRESTED

MOSCOW, August 11 — Radio Moscow, in a special broadcast to the Red Army newspaper today, stated that Baron von Neurath, former German Foreign Minister, and Dr. Schacht, the German financial expert, have both been arrested. (Reuter)

PURGED GERMAN OFFICERS' FAMILIES EXECUTED

LONDON, August 11 — A despatch from Berne said Wednesday that, according to reports from Spain, the entire families of the eight high German officers hanged for complicity in the attempt on Hitler's life were executed last Tuesday.

The report said that those executed included the wives, children, and parents of the purged officers, and in some cases even cousins and intimate friends. It also said that numerous trials of German civilians involved in the peace movement are now under way.

Dispatches from Allied and neutral capitals yesterday indicated that the counter-measures taken by the Nazis to quell the peace movement inside Germany, such as the hanging of the eight army officers, are not having the effect the Nazis hoped they would have. In fact, the revolutionary spirit is not only deep-rooted, but widespread, and is not restricted to army circles alone.

That civilians were assigned by the plotters to certain tasks is proved by the fact that Karl Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipsig, is hunted by the Gestapo, which is offering one million marks for his capture. (OWI)

U.S. ORDERS INCREASE IN B-29 PRODUCTION

WASHINGTON, August 12 — The United States War Department said tonight that the production of B-29 Super-Fortresses, and the even greater B-32, would be stepped up in several of the nation's largest war plants.

The Department said that production of the smaller Fortresses and Liberators would be cut down to make way for the other and longer-range bombers, since bases on the European front have been lighter than were expected.

The increase of B-29 and B-32 production indicated the growing emphasis on the Japanese battle, since these powerful new planes have been used chiefly in the south-west Pacific. The B-32 has not yet been released for combat duty. (OWI)

PHILIPPINE GOVERNMENT REORGANIZED

WASHINGTON, August 11 — Reorganization of the Philippine Commonwealth War Cabinet and the appointment of new cabinet members and a resident commissioner to the United States, were announced yesterday by President Sergio Osmena. President Osmena became president after the recent death of President Manuel Quezon.

The new cabinet members and their portfolios are: Jaime Hernandez, Secretary of Finance; Major General Basilio J. Valdes, Secretary of National Defense; Colonel Carlos P. Romulo, Secretary of Information and Public Relations; Colonel Manuel Nieto, Secretary of Agriculture and Industry; Doctor Arturo B. Rotor, Secretary to the President; Lieutenant Colonel Mariano A. Erana, judge advocate detailed to the Department of Justice, secretary of Labor and Welfare.

The new resident commissioner will be Colonel Romulo, who retains his portfolio as Secretary of Information and Public Relations. Colonel Romulo, who was aide to General Douglas MacArthur on Corregidor, holds the Silver Star and Purple Heart. Before the war, he was editor and publisher of a chain of newspapers in the Philippines.

President Osmena, yesterday told members of the cabinet that he was confident the United States would do everything in its power to assure the liberation and rehabilitation of the islands.

He said he was wholeheartedly in accord with plans being made for the establishment of United States military bases in the Philippines after the war. (OWI – Reuter)

DUTCH UNDERGROUND HARASSES GERMANS

LONDON, August 11 — The Allied advance in France and the active cooperation of the Maquis is making the Germans increasingly nervous of a stab in the back from the Dutch Underground movement, said Vrij Nederland, the Dutch newspaper printed here.

A new German decree in Holland prohibits the Dutch police from carrying arms. The Germans, despite their acute manpower shortage, have imported 2,400 German railway officials to replace the Dutchmen, whom they no longer trust, on the trains.

The number of guards on all official buildings has been doubled.

It is reported by the Dutch Underground press that Mussert, the Dutch quisling, has ordered 72,000 dollars worth of bullet-proof shutters for the windows of his villa in Baarden, near Amsterdam.

The activity of the Dutch Underground movement continues to increase, and despite guards, raids on distribution offices continue. This is explained by the fact that there are now 350,000 Dutchmen in hiding, and a constant supply of ration cards is needed for them.

The Germans even control funerals now, and it is forbidden in Holland to transport a corpse in a motor vehicle without permission. The reason for this is, that the Underground used hearses to transport airmen who were in hiding.

In preparation for their D-day, the Dutch are carrying out a purge of Nazis who managed to obtain information concerning the patriots. In the last week of July alone, three were executed.

The Netherlands suggest that Dutch troops should be used to help occupy Germany. After living so close to the Germans for four years, men in Holland are well qualified for this work, and understand the German mentality.

TURKEY RELEASES SOVIET PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, August 11 — The Turkish Government in Ankara on Wednesday released from prison two Soviet citizens employed by the Soviet consulate in Istanbul, who were sentenced to 16 years and eight months imprisonment in 1942 after a bomb attempt on the life of Franz von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey.

The employees, George Pavlov and Leonid Kornilov, were met at the prison gates by Soviet Embassy officials and their wives carrying flowers, and were escorted to the Russian Embassy. They had served two years and five months of their sentence.

Their release followed the passage by the Turkish Assembly last week of an amnesty bill for political offenses committed on Turkish territory in the past few years by nationals of the United Nations.

GERMANS RELUCTANT TO QUIT TURKEY

WASHINGTON, August 11 — Reports from Turkey describe the dread with which the Germans in Turkey anticipate their return to Germany, and tell of new measures taken by the Turkish Government against German economic interests there.

A despatch from Istanbul yesterday said: "The Germans in Turkey who are being repatriated to their Fatherland are convinced that their country has lost the war. Almost all of them expect Germany to be out of the war within a short time. Many, for example, have been paying rent six months in advance, so that their apartments will be held for them when they return to Turkey.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked oil refineries in the Ploesti area, Rumania.

Although operations by Tactical aircraft were restricted by adverse weather, military objectives in Northern Italy were attacked. Other aircraft attacked oil storage tanks and military targets in Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked rail yards at Kraljevo in Yugoslavia.

In these operations, six enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 17 of ours are missing. Eleven of our aircraft are missing from night operations of August 9/10.

MAAF flew approximately 1,300 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 11 — To-day's communique:

LAND: Allied troops have entered the cities of Nantes and Angers. Enemy resistance was slight at Nantes, but there is extensive enemy mining in the areas of both cities.

In Brittany Peninsula, mopping up is proceeding in the area of Hennebont, Auray, and Quiberon, on the southcoast. Lorient has been completely surrounded by American troops on the land side.

The enemy is maintaining strong resistance at Brest, where elements of three German divisions are located. Our forces outside the city have been joined by another force which proceeded along the north coastal road of the peninsula. Enemy resistance at St. Malo has been reduced mainly to a single strongpoint which is still offering stubborn resistance.

A total of 3,000 prisoners has been taken thus far in the port. Dinard, in the St. Malo area, is being strongly defended by the Germans.

Hard fighting continues in the Mortain-Vire area of Normandy. Stubborn enemy resistance is being encountered north and south of Mortain, particularly in the vicinity of St. Barthelemy. Gains of one to one and a half miles were made in a southerly direction by Allied forces in the area of Vire, and other units are attacking toward Gathemo against strong German resistance. Enemy resistance to the Allied thrust towards Falaise increased considerably yesterday.

A strong screen of Anti-tank guns and heavily defended positions in the areas of Fontaine le Pins, Quesnay, Estrees la Campagne, St. Silvain, and Vimont slowed the advance, and heavy fighting resulted. Estrees la Campagne was captured. Soignolles changed hands several times, and fighting in and around Vimont continued all day.

Allied forces have enlarged the bridgehead over the Orne with an advance of 4,000 yards, capturing Espins, on the fringe of Cinglais, and the villages of Croisilles and Forge a Cambio. Driving down from Les Plesses Grimboult, Allied armor and infantry have captured a number of villages, including Conville and Lemault, and have reached the vicinity of St. Pierre la Vieille.

AIR: Despite variable weather and unusually intense anti-aircraft fire in many sectors, Allied aircraft continued their close support of our armies, especially near Le Mans, where 15 tanks were destroyed. Throughout the day, our planes ranged from Belgium to Bordeaux, to attack supply centers and road and rail targets.

Eight enemy aircraft were shot down and 26 others were destroyed or damaged on the ground by our fighters, after they had escorted heavy bombers to attack several bridges in the Paris area and an oil storage center at Dugny, near the metropolitan airport of Le Bourget.

It is estimated that 150 locomotives, about 1,000 railway cars, and scores of vehicles were shot up by other strong forces of fighter-bombers and fighters, which also hit numerous rail centers, bridges, and barges on the Seine, and two ammunition trains.

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 11 — Today's communique:

LAND: An attack by Polish and Italian troops of the 5th Army in the Adriatic sector has driven the enemy from the high ground between the Misa and Cesano rivers, and they have taken the towns of Scapezzano, Monterado, and Corinaldo. There are now only minor pockets of enemy resistance south of the River Cesano up to 12 miles inland, and reconnaissance patrols are already across the river.

There is no important change in dispositions along the remainder of the front, where patrol activity continues.

The enemy is maintaining strong resistance at Brest, where elements of three German divisions are located. Our forces outside the city have been joined by another force which proceeded along the north coastal road of the peninsula. Good results were reported from medium bomber attacks designed to destroy or halt repairs on rail bridges and embankments at Nogent sur Seine, Arlizy, Le Chateau, Feroune, Epernon, and Mercy.

Submarine oil storage depots at Bordeaux and La Palisse and Dijon rail center were hit by heavy bombers in a series of midnight attacks. Enemy rail movements westward from Antwerp, Brussels, Metz, Strasbourg, Lille, Sedan, and other points east of the Seine, were attacked incessantly by fighter-bombers.

During the evening, five enemy aircraft were shot down over the battle area. Twenty-two Allied aircraft are missing.

West of Krustpils, on the West Dvina, our troops continued to advance and occupied in fighting over 50 populated localities, including Rozhi, Riaktuni, Varndropa, Blinki, Gravandari, and Vartunyi, and the railway stations of Sinakstve and Sviie.

Northwest and west of Bielystok, our troops in the course of their advance occupied over 150 populated localities, including Jablovo, Zabelye, Zhogovo, Nikitum, Protsin, Shlyahta, Lupity, Gudki, Bagushovo, Likhniki, Zheshirni, and Chaiki, and the railway station of Knishin.

North and northwest of Siedlice, our troops in fighting continued to advance, and occupied over 100 populated localities, including Kosaki, Lomna, Dzhilyati, Zhilevy, Koshis-Russky, Vrotku, Mezhima, Huzheva, Starovey, Koritnitsa, Knezhnik, Dobre, Rakovets, and Rudzenko, and the railway station of Koshis-Russky.

West of Sandomir, our troops, repulsing enemy tank and infantry counter-attacks, continued their operations for expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula.

On all other sectors of the front, there are no essential changes.

During August 10, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 50 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 29 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 11 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

South of Florence, the mopping up of Germans continued. A group of 250 patriots, collaborating with Canadian troops, captured 150 Fascist soldiers who had taken up positions in the triangle formed by the main roads leading to the Arno through the southern portions of Florence.

In the course of operations carried out by the patriots in Northern Italy, The 236th German anti-tank Regiment suffered heavy losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners. The 3rd Battalion of this regiment lost 80 dead in four months, of whom 45 were killed in a single encounter. The severest fighting took place during June. This German Regiment was reduced to 500 men by the activities of patriot forces early in July.

General Potente, Commander of one of the Garibaldi Brigades, was killed while collaborating with units of the 8th Army. The patriots under his command were seeking out Fascist snipers. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 11 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Southeast of Caen, the enemy infiltration was sealed off and the front was again closed. Since the early hours of this morning, the enemy artillery fire grew almost to the strength of a real barrage. Yesterday, on both sides of the Orne, the enemy launched only locally limited attacks, which remained unsuccessful. South of Vire, the fighting was particularly grim. The enemy, owing to our counter-attacks, did not succeed in pushing forward his lines in this sector. In the Le Mans sector, grim fighting with the enemy, who attacked supported by strong bomber formations in a northerly direction, is in progress. The defenders of St. Nazaire, Lorient, and Brest, who belong to all three parts of the Wehrmacht, repelled all enemy attacks supported by tanks, with bloody losses for the enemy. Northeast of Brest alone, 40 enemy tanks were destroyed in the course of these last few days. Yesterday, the garrison of St. Malo held the town against repeated their attacks with strong forces in several sectors after a lull which had lasted several days. East of Warsaw, all attacks were repulsed. Northwest of Bialystok, the enemy succeeded in penetrating our positions, but was halted by counter-attack. In this sector, the enemy lost 69 tanks and assault guns, as well as 61 guns in the course of the last few days. North of Memel, the Soviets, owing to the high losses suffered on the previous days, renounced resuming their attacks. In the six-day battle at Rasselnen, our troops achieved a complete success. The Soviets suffered high losses, and lost the armoured equipment of two tank corps from August 4 to 9.

On the Latvian front, the Bolsheviks attacked with numerous units on a broad front. Most of the attacks were repulsed in immediate counter-attacks. Southwest of the Lake of Pskov, the enemy attacked with 10 rifle divisions supported by tank and bomber formations, and penetrated our positions. Grim fighting is in progress. Yesterday, enemy bombers attacked the area of Ploesti. German, Bulgarian, and Rumanian air defense forces brought down 13 enemy planes.

In the course of the night, enemy nuisance raiders flew over southern Hungarian territory. Two planes were shot down.

Enemy fighter squadrons penetrated the air space of southeastern and western Germany. A hospital train marked distinctly with the red cross was machine-gunned in the Munich sector. In the night, enemy bombers bombed Berlin and Bremen. (Radio Berlin)

German Overseas Stations: On the eastern front, the Germans have intensified their counter-attacks, while the Soviets are regrouping their forces. At Beronov and Varka, the Russians are meeting stiff resistance. On the Baltic front, there is fluctuating fighting on the lower reaches of the Memel and south-west of Bialystok. Moscow reports that the Soviets are recruiting regiments of Polish women for use on the front. The Polish emgres have been forced by Bolshevik dictation to replace the candidate for the Presidency, General Sosnowsky, by the left-wing politician Arciszevki. On the western front, the Canadians continued their thrusts towards Falaise, but gained little ground. British-Canadian troops are reported to have lost 278 tanks in three days. South of the Vire, the Americans are trying to break up the wedge which Kluge had driven into the American eastern flank of Cotentin. They scored a success in Brittany by entering the St. Malo area. Eisenhower is continually bringing up fresh reserves. The German Navy, within the past eight days, has destroyed more than 261,000 tons of Allied shipping. An agreement has been reached between Hitler and Mussolini regarding the transfer of Italian war internees to Germany. These Italians will enjoy the privileges of German workers.

Transocean and DNB: After a lull of several days, the Soviets resumed their attacks with strong forces on the eastern front. They succeeded in penetrating at a few points northwest of Bialystok but were halted by the German forces. North of Memel, fighting was discontinued after a battle lasting six days, when the Germans scored a decisive success, destroying all the tanks of two Soviet tank divisions. Heavy fighting continues on the invasion front. Polish troops have arrived to reinforce infantry and tank formations of the Canadian Army. The Canadians advanced five kilometres, to the forest of Seigneliles, where they were halted. Allied tank formations east of the Orne have suffered enormous losses. On the Adriatic front, the attacking British formations have had to withdraw, with heavy losses. In the northern section of Florence, heavy fire from British howitzer batteries is causing much damage. During August 10, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 50 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 29 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 11 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

South of Florence, the mopping up of Germans continued. A group of 250 patriots, collaborating with Canadian troops, captured 150 Fascist soldiers who had taken up positions in the triangle formed by the main roads leading to the Arno through the southern portions of Florence.

In the course of operations carried out by the patriots in Northern Italy, The 236th German anti-tank Regiment suffered heavy losses in killed, wounded, and prisoners. The 3rd Battalion of this regiment lost 80 dead in four months, of whom 45 were killed in a single encounter. The severest fighting took place during June. This German Regiment was reduced to 300 men by the activities of patriot forces early in July.

General Petenie, Commander of one of the Garibaldi Brigades, was killed while collaborating with units of the 8th Army. The patriots under his command were seeking out Fascist snipers. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 11 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Southeast of Caen, the enemy infiltration was sealed off and the front was again closed. Since the early hours of this morning, the enemy artillery fire grew almost to the strength of a real barrage. Yesterday, on both sides of the Orne, the enemy launched only locally limited attacks, which remained unsuccessful. South of Vire, the fighting was particularly grim. The enemy, owing to our counter-attacks, did not succeed in pushing forward his lines in this sector. In the Le Mans sector, grim fighting with the enemy, who attacked supported by strong bomber formations in a northerly direction, is in progress. The defenders of St. Nazaire, Lorient, and Brest, who belong to all three parts of the Wehrmacht, repelled all enemy attacks, supported by tanks, with bloody losses for the enemy. Northeast of Brest alone, 40 enemy tanks were destroyed in the course of these last few days. Yesterday, the garrison of St. Malo held the town against repeated fierce U. S. attacks. North of Le Mans, bombers attacked enemy truck columns with good effect. A freighter of 4,000 tons was set on fire, and another big ship, as well as one destroyer, were seriously damaged by attacks of heavy bombers off the Norman coast. Escort vessels of the Navy and anti-aircraft batteries of the Navy brought down 11 enemy planes off the coast of the occupied western territories.

271 terrorists were killed in action in the French rear. London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

Yesterday, no operations of importance were reported from the Italian Front.

In the East, between Stryj and the Vistula, numerous Bolshevik attacks were smashed in grim fighting, and bloody losses were inflicted on the enemy. Northwest of Baranov, our troops continued to attack, and captured high ground. Enemy counter-attacks remained unsuccessful. Bomber and fighter-bomber squadrons attacked the Soviet ferry and supply service on the Vistula with good success. Between Warsaw and Augustov, the Bolsheviks resumed shot down.

Enemy fighter squadrons penetrated the air space of southeastern and western Germany. A hospital train marked distinctly with the red cross was machine-gunned in the Munich sector. In the night, enemy bombers bombed Berlin and Bremen. (Radio Berlin)

WAR FRONTS

CANADIANS LAUNCH NEW OFFENSIVE TOWARD VIMONT

SHAEF, August 10 — Canadian troops under the command of General Crerar have launched a new offensive south of Caen toward Vimont, it was announced tonight. Vimont lies on the shortest direct main highway from the Normandy battlefront to Paris and controls a series of other roads covering alternative routes to Paris, as well as the Paris-Caen railway. Late reports tonight stated that there is fierce fighting around Vimont itself.

Other Canadian forces driving toward Falaise have now reached Potigny five miles north of the city which is the key point of the German defenses in this area.

It is of major importance, as it is the focal point of road and rail communications linking Paris with the Atlantic coast. Inland near Nantes, the Germans have major aircraft and armament factories.

The city is also being outflanked by the American envelopment at Angers, some miles further up the Loire River. As at Nantes, the approaches to Angers were heavily mined, and will have to be cleared before the city itself can be liberated.

There is no news of the progress being made by American troops beyond Le Mans, due to security reasons.

French Forces of the Interior have increased their activity on the Brest Peninsula and have taken the town of Meriadec, 30 miles northeast of Brest.

German resistance in St. Malo has been smashed, except for one strongpoint in the town. Over 3,000 prisoners were taken. At Brest, the German garrison, thought to include elements of three German divisions, is still fighting stubbornly after rejecting an ultimatum to surrender. Lorient has been surrounded, and the Allies are mopping up pockets of resistance east and west of the city.

German naval vessels and transports are reported to have entered the harbours of Brest and Lorient, presumably in a last-minute attempt to evacuate the garrisons. If this evacuation is attempted, it must run the gauntlet of hundreds of Allied aircraft, as well as the guns of Allied naval forces.

Off Jersey Island, Allied PT boats on patrol intercepted a southbound enemy convoy yesterday morning. They hit one vessel with a torpedo, and damaged another by gunfire before the convoy escaped. Later in the day, PT boats entered the roadstead of St. Helier and attacked two M-class minesweepers with gunfire. Many hits were made before the Allied vessels withdrew.

Off the port of Le Havre, light Allied coastal forces intercepted an enemy ship escorted by six R-boats. The ship was sunk, and one of the escorting R-boats was hit by a torpedo and probably sunk. (GWI-Reuter-BBC)

500 ALLIED PLANES ATTACK IN PARIS AREA

LONDON, August 10 — A fleet of 500 planes of the 8th USAAF, Liberators and Mustangs, attacked the Paris area today, dropping their bombs on an oil storage depot. This was the 20th oil storage depot attacked this month by British-based Allied planes.

Other Canadian forces driving toward Falaise have now reached Potigny five miles north of the city which is the key point of the German defenses in this area.

The Canadians have taken more than 2,000 prisoners south of Caen since the offensive began, and in the past four days more than 320 enemy tanks have been destroyed.

The German salient between the Orne and La Laize River faces disaster as the British have gone over to the offensive from their bridgehead across the Orne and are attacking with tanks along the Thury-Harcourt-Caen road. The Allied bridgehead has been enlarged, and advances have been made up to 4,000 yards. There are indications that the Germans are continuing to withdraw from this salient, which is threatened by the bridgehead and the Canadian drive.

Further to the west, the British have gained more ground south of Mont Pincon and now hold most of the high ground in the area west of the Orne. Between Estry and Vire, the British pushed forward across the Vire-Conde road and captured the village of Roullours.

The bulk of the German forces are in the Vire-Mortain area. Today's communique stated that the Germans still hold Mortain, and that heavy fighting is going on north and west of the town. A German counter-attack at Gathamo was repulsed, and 25 enemy tanks were destroyed.

American forces this afternoon reached the big river port of Nantes, and late reports said that they are already in the city. Although there was little enemy opposition, all the approaches to the city were heavily mined.

Nantes is the largest city Allied forces have yet reached, with a peacetime population of over 187,000. Strategically,

PEARL HARBOR, August 10 — Japanese resistance on Guam ceased yesterday afternoon, the headquarters of Admiral Nimitz, commander-in-chief of the Pacific, announced tonight. (OWI)

JAPAN BOMBED AGAIN

WASHINGTON, August 10 — Super-Fortresses have bombed the Japanese home island of Kyushu, southwest of Tokyo, it was announced here tonight.

The announcement said the industrial city of Nagasake on the Japanese mainland was hit in medium strength by planes based in China.

An oil refinery at Palembang on the island of Sumatra was also bombed. Planes taking part in this attack were from bases under the Southeast Asia Command. (Reuter)

ALLIED TROOPS REACH NANTES AND ANGERS

SHAEF, August 10 — Allied troops are in the cities of Nantes and Angers, it was learned here tonight.

According to reports which are unconfirmed here, American armored columns have reached the city of Chartres. A Reuter report stated that the armored columns probably are on the direct road running east from Le Mans to Paris.

Heavy anti-tank defenses have impeded the Canadian advance on Falaise but have not stopped the advance. (Reuter) last night. Attacks were also made on the enemy supply depot at Foret De Nippe.

The Ministry of Home Security today revealed that some of the flying bombs fired at southern England in the past few days have scattered a score of small incendiary bombs in all directions when they exploded.

Railway targets in the Paris area were smashed for a second time yesterday by Havocs of the 9th USAAF, while Typhoons of the 2d Tactical Air Force strafed an enemy convoy at Falaise. Eight rocket-firing Typhoons of the 2d TAF attacked an enemy convoy of 30 tanks moving in Falaise, leaving one tank in flames and two others damaged. The same Typhoons also attacked a convoy of 20 transports.

Last night, Marauders and Havocs of the 9th USAAF with fighter escort attacked railway targets in the Paris area for the second time during the day, hitting bridges and junction lines to the city. Another Marauder force struck at two ships in Brest harbor which were damaged in a previous attack. Four Marauders are missing from these operations.

An announcement from USAAF headquarters said recent attacks on L'Isle Adam, 16 miles north of Paris, severely damaged storage facilities there. L'Isle Adam is a German flying bomb supply depot. Reconnaissance photos revealed that all that was left of a suspected German headquarters near Bordeaux is a small piece of wall and heaps of rubble. The building was bombed by Mosquitoes. (PWB)

AIRBORNE TROOPS FORM FULL ARMY

SHAEF, August 10 — The combined airborne forces in Normandy have been consolidated into one command approximating the size of a full army, it was announced here today.

Lieutenant General Lewis Brereton, former commander of the 9th USAAF, commands the new organization and Lieutenant General Frederick A. M. Browning of the British Army has been appointed deputy commander.

The object of the new organization is to integrate and make more effective large airborne forces at the disposal of General Eisenhower. The command combines both combat troops and the planes and gliders which transport them.

A United Press dispatch stated that it was the first entirely airborne army in military history. (Reuter)

ROYCE DEPUTY COMMANDER OF AIR FORCE

SHAEF, August 10 — Major General Ralph Royce was appointed deputy commander in chief of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, it was announced by General Eisenhower today.

It was also announced that Major General Hoyt Vandenberg, formerly commander in chief of the American Expeditionary Air Force, assumed command of the 9th USAAF, succeeding Lieutenant General Lewis H. Brereton.

General Royce served as commander of U. S. Army forces in the Middle East, and earlier in the war was chief of staff of the Allied forces in the Southwest Pacific, and commander of the 1st USAAF.

General Vandenberg served as deputy chief of the U. S. Air Force and was chief of staff of the Northwest African Strategic Air Force in 1942. He was the senior member of the U. S. Military Mission to Russia in 1943. (Reuter)

RESUMPTION OF FISHING OFF NORMANDY

SHAEF, August 10 — The resumption of fishing in the German High Command would have known what was happening, but not a single German plane appeared.

Every bridge has been razed in the area between the Seine and the Loire, and the area is isolated from the outside. The battle has become more fluid in the last week or two, leaving magnificent opportunities for the Allied fighter-bombers, a splendid weapon for exploiting a victory.

We intend to give the enemy no rest, and to make sure that he finds it as difficult to withdraw troops from the battlefront as it was to get them there. (BBC)

500 U-BOATS SUNK SINCE BEGINNING OF WAR

LONDON, August 10 — Five hundred German U-boats have been sunk since the start of the war, while 17 alone were sunk attempting to interfere with the flow of Allied supplies to France, it was announced in the monthly joint statement on U-boat warfare issued today by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

The text of the statement said:

"U-boat efforts during July have been ineffective. The number of U-boats destroyed has been substantially greater than the number of merchantmen sunk.

"The U-boat fleet is still of impressive size, but nevertheless it remains the hunted, rather than the hunter. It has been attacked from the Arctic to the Indian Ocean.

"This pressure will be maintained until all chances of the revival of the U-boat campaign are killed, whatever may be the new devices and methods developed by the enemy." (OWI)

ALLIES THWART NEW GERMAN SUBMARINE DRIVE

LONDON, August 10 — An 11th hour desperate German bid to stage an offensive with new submarines has been frustrated by advances of the Allied armies toward cutting off U-boat bases in western France, A. J. MacWhinnie, British naval correspondent, pointed out today.

Only a few days ago, Prime Minister Churchill warned Parliament that a new underwater offensive might be attempted by Germany with faster U-boats. A German comment described their latest submarine development as "startling."

Six out of eight U-boat flotillas were using the three imperilled ports of Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire. For four years the Germans have been building them up as the strongest submarine bases in the world. At each base they had great concrete pens, heavily protected repair shops, and supply sheds. Each base bristled with anti-aircraft guns.

It is now clear, MacWhinnie wrote, that the first decision made by Berlin, when faced with the crisis brought about by Allied armies, was to order as many submarines and shore-based technicians as possible to make for their two remaining French bases, La Pallice and Bordeaux, farther south.

But the British Navy and Allied aircraft had set a closely meshed net. Every German move to cope with the new developments had been anticipated.

Seven German ships, probably carrying key technicians, formed themselves into a convoy and tried to steam from threatened St. Nazaire to a safer sanctuary. The famous British and Canadian tribal-class destroyers, Ashanti, Tartar, Haida and Iroquois, led by the new British cruiser, Bellona, located the convoy and opened fire. Every one of the German ships was sunk.

But any decision to try to get all the Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire U-boats into the two remaining bases could only be like trying to pour a quart into a pint bottle. Anyway, it can be only a question of time before La Pallice and Bordeaux cease to be held by the Germans.
