RESUMPTION OF FISHING OFF NORMANDY

SHAEF, August 10 — The resumption of fishing in the waters off the liberated coastline of Normandy was given approval here today.

The spokesman for General Eisenhower said that the fishermen must first obtain permission from Allied authorities.

At the same time, a warning to fishermen along the enemy-occupied portions of the coastline from the Frisian Islands to the port of Bayonne near the Spanish frontier was issued, saying that they can fish in prohibited areas at their own risk. (OWI)

ALLIES HAVE AIR SUPREMACY IN FRANCE

LONDON, August 10 — Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory, Allied Air Commander-in-Chief, in a comprehensive report on the Allied air offensive in France broadcast by the BBC today, said:

The Allies not only have air superiority, but also air supremacy.

The deterioration of the Luftwaffe has now reached a stage which makes it impossible for it to make a comeback.

In the six weeks before June 6, the Luftwaffe made only 129 reconnaissance flights, and only 11 penetrated to the English coast. If one German plane had come up, the

"The U-boat fleet is still of impressive size, but nevertheless it remains the hunted, rather than the hunter. It has been attacked from the Arctic to the Indian Ocean.

"This pressure will be maintained until all chances of the revival of the U-boat campaign are killed, whatever may be the new devices and methods developed by the enemy." (OWI)

ALLIES THWART NEW GERMAN SUBMARINE DRIVE

LONDON, August 10 — An 11th hour desperate German bid to stage an offensive with new submarines has been frustrated by advances of the Allied armies toward cutting off U-boat bases in western France, A. J. MacWhinnie, British naval correspondent, pointed out today.

Only a few days ago, Prime Minister Churchill warned Parliament that a new underwater offensive might be attempted by Germany with faster U-boats. A German comment described their latest submarine development as "startling."

Six out of eight U-boat flotillas were using the three imperilled ports of Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire. For four years the Germans have been building them up as the strongest submarine bases in the world. At each base they had great concrete pens, heavily protected repair shops, and supply sheds. Each base bristled with anti-aircraft guns.

It is now clear, MacWhinnie wrote, that the first decision made by Berlin, when faced with the crisis brought about by Allied armies, was to order as many submarines and shore-based technicians as possible to make for their two remaining French bases, La Pallice and Bordeaux, farther south.

But the British Navy and Allied aircraft had set a closely meshed net. Every German move to cope with the new developments had been anticipated.

Seven German ships, probably carrying key technicians, formed themselves into a convoy and tried to steam from threatened St. Nazaire to a safer sanctuary. The famous British and Canadian tribal-class destroyers, Ashanti, Tartar, Haida and Iroquois, led by the new British cruiser, Bellona, located the convoy and opened fire. Every one of the German ships was sunk.

But any decision to try to get all the Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire U-boats into the two remaining bases could only be like trying to pour a quart into a pint bottle. Anyway, it can be only a question of time before La Pallice and Bordeaux cease to be held by the Germans.

Atlantic Battle Won

There may be many new U-boat killings as they try to reach the only haven left—Norway. They may try to get through the Strait of Gibraltar to Marseilles or Toulon, or through the Strait of Dover to find refuge in the Baltic, where Hitler's remaining surface navy also hides.

In the past, German U-boats have penetrated the narrow jaws of Gibraltar. But Britain's 1944 submarine-detection devices are greater by far than in the early days of the war.

The battle of the Atlantic is virtually over. It has been won by the Allies at a time when lanes to widely separated theaters of war are of paramount importance to them.

Admiral Von Scheer in his book, High Seas Fleet, describing German anxiety about the last stages of the 1914-1918 War, said that the only course open to them then was to launch a new underwater offensive with every means at their disposal, in order to achieve their goal — a tolerable peace.

Today, the Germans have not the means at their disposal. The British Navy in Europe now is merely left with mopping-up operations. A few U-boats, a few E-boats, and possibly a few freak weapons like human torpedoes will be all that will remain to challenge Allied shipping. They will amount to nothing more than tiny pockets of resistance. (MOI)

CAPTAIN IVES KILLED IN AMBUSH

LONDON, August 10 — Captain Norman S. Ives, commander of the port of Cherbourg, was killed in a German ambush while en route in a vehicle convoy to study the damage to waterfront installations at St. Malo, the U. S. Navy said tonight.

The convoy was halted by two German soldiers who pretended to surrender, and concealed Germans in the surrounding woods opened fire on the convoy. (PWB)

ENEMY CITES ALLIED MATERIAL SUPERIORITY

LONDON, August 10 — The plight of the Germans in France has been described in a document recently captured by the Allies in Normandy and broadcast over the BBC yesterday.

The document is a report of a month's fighting by the 2nd Panzer Division, and was written by the division commander, General von Ludwitz. General von Ludwitz commanded the German 20th Division in Russia before coming to Normandy.

In the report, the Junker general spoke of the incredibly heavy artillery and mortar fire of the Allies.

«The Allies,» he said, «have complete mastery of the air, and they attack every movement, even by individuals and single vehicles. The German Air Force is conspicuous by its absence.

«Our own operations by day have little chance of succeeding. The assembly of troops is spotted immediately by enemy reconnaissance, and is smashed by bombers, fighter-bombers, and artillery directed by aircraft.

«But these attacks make only slight progress. German soldiers enter the battle in low spirits at the thought of the enemy's enormous material superiority. They are always asking: 'Where is the Luftwaffe.'»

The supply of ammunition, the General wrote, is insufficient. It would be out of the question to engage enemy artillery. (BBC)

RED ARMY THREATENS GERMANS IN EAST PRUSSIA

MOSCOW, August 10 — Faced with the threat of encirclement in East Prussia and complete isolation from Germany proper by the Red Army's wedge driven into the German left flank northeast of Warsaw, the Germans tonight are desperately trying to stave off what may develop into one of the major disasters of the war.

The Germans are hurling their biggest tanks and tiring reserves into the battle. The Soviet drive was made 70 miles south of the East Prussian border and in a northerly direction through the valley of the River Liwiece, a tributary of the Bug. Over 150 villages were captured in the drive, which may envelope their East Prussian armies just as their battle forces are being pushed with their backs to the sea.

The German radio admitted today that more than 1,800 miles of trenches have been dug and thousands of pillboxes constructed in East Prussia during the last 10 days. Neutral reports stated that any German in East Prussia capable of holding a shovel has been put to work digging these trenches under a dig-or-be-shot order.

Advance on Riga

Tonight's communique told of more gains made by the Red Army northwest of Bereksne in the direction of Riga. They are developing also a new drive toward the important officers and men were killed in the day's fighting in this sector. One German infantry division, the 81st, was almost decimated.

The third main drive in the Baltic was made southwest of Mitau, where the Russians advanced more than 12 miles in some regions and captured 200 localities. The two main towns taken in this advance were Bene and Vegerini, near the Latvian border. On this sector, 1,900 Germans were killed.

In the south, Marshal Rokossovsky's troops west of Sandomir have smashed German counter-attacks and have extended their bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula.

Still farther south, on the Carpathian front, Soviet Ukranian armies made fresh advances. Towns captured in the fighting included Stary Sambor, southwest of Sumber, and Skole, 20 miles southwest of Stryj. Eighty other localities were liberated in this sector.

In the last five days of fighting on all sectors of the eastern front, the Russians have destroyed more than 500 German tanks.

Travellers arriving in Stockholm after a trip across the Baltic say they counted 135 empty German merchantmen heading for the Latvian-Estonian coast, which suggests that the Germans are evacuating troops and material from Ventspils and Libau, says the Stockholm Tidningen correspondent. NAZIS WILL LOSE HEAVILY IN WEST POLAND

WASHINGTON, August 10 — Germany, having already lost the greater part of the Polish oil and valuable agricultural regions, will lose even more heavily in the western part of Poland still held by the Germans but threatened by the Russians, Leo T. Crowley, Foreign Economic Administrator, said yesterday.

Crowley, making public a statement prepared by the Special Areas Branch of the Foreign Economic Administration, lists the importance of the threatened areas for Germany as follows:

Coal in the Polish Silesia, Dabrowa, and Cracow area: peacetime output, 38 million tons; present output, 50 million tons.

Zinc: Polish Silesia produces about one-fifth of the total production in German Europe. The chief zinc mines are the Beischarley mines, nine miles north of Katowice, and the Bregovicite mine.

The Bernhard: electric zinc plant, built in 1938 with a capacity of 28,000 tons, is the second largest such mine in Europe.

Iron and steel: The pig iron capacity of 900,000 tons and crude steel of 1,300,000 tons before the war remained substantially the same. The steel industry is located chiefly in Polish Silesia, where production is about 10 per cent of that of the Ruhr.

Oil: Poland's oil fields are located in the southern part of Galicia. They have been reported producing about half a million tons of crude oil, of which three-fifths are from the Drohobycz-Borislave region, already in Russian hands. This region was also responsible for refining oil of Austrian or Hungarian origin. Although Polish oil amounts only to a small part of total German oil supplies, the Reich's oil position has become so critical that loss of these fields is a

Tonight's communique told of more gains made by the Red Army northwest of Rezekne in the direction of Riga. They are developing also a new drive toward the important port of Libau. The Germans resisted desperately to loosen the string which the Red Army drew tighter and tighter on the Baltic «sack» where the German 16th and 18th Armies are being slowly decimated. When the Red Army completes the liquidation of the German forces in the «sack», there will be about 350,000 less Germans fighting the Allied armies.

The Red Air Force attacked German concentrations in the sector and smashed at German communications leading to their greatly reinforced forces on the East Prussian frontier.

From Warsaw, the commander-in-chief of the Polish Underground Army reported that the Germans are using armored trains against the Patriots. German planes dropped an ultimatum on Warsaw today calling on the inhabitants to leave Warsaw, obviously an effort by the Germans to stop the Patriot resistance which is causing them no end of trouble. The Patriots said in their communique that although the Germans supposedly hold the city, they are shelling streets in the center and west end with cannon fire.

Elsewhere along the front, the Red Army continued its westward sweep and smashed German counter-attacks mounted in desperation to dam the Soviet tide.

North and northeast of Birzai, the Russians made advances of up to 10 miles and drove the Germans from 250 inhabited places in a sweep that brought them to Biregale, 30 miles southeast of Riga. One thousand German

GERMANS LOSE ARNO BRIDGEHEAD EAST OF FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 10 — As a result of the capture by British infantry and hill-climbing tanks of the key enemy position of Monastery Hill southeast of Florence, German forces have been forced to withdraw from their last main positions south of the Arno River, it was announced here today.

The main bodies of the enemy troops evacuated their mountain defenses south of Pontassieve and the Arno's southward bend yesterday, and 8th Army forces now hold all the high ground south of the river in this region, some eight miles southeast of Florence.

In Florence itself, it was announced today, 250 Italian Partisans aided Canadian troops in rounding up approximately 150 armed Fascist Republicans lurking in the triangle formed by the two main streets leading through the southern section of the city to the Arno. The armed Fascists, who included women, were arrested and their arms and grenades were confiscated.

In another action, in which Partisan forces were aiding 8th Army troops in mopping up Fascist snipers, the Italian General Polente, commander of the Partisan Garibaldi Brigade, was killed and a British liaison officer was wounded, it was announced today. The skirmish, which took place Monday, occurred south of Florence. Funeral rites for General Polente were to be held today, it was said.

How Churchill tanks charged up the slopes of Monastery Hill, German strongpoint 10 miles east of southern Florence, and forced the enemy withdrawal from this entire sector, was told for the first time today. The tanks, by reaching the upper levels of the height, were able to lend their fire-power to fend off two strong enemy counter-attacks which attempted to dislodge infantrymen battling for the position. The feature, including the monastery, which the Germans had turned into a blockhouse, was finally taken in nine hours of hard fighting on Tuesday.

In the mountain valley north of Arezzo, strong German artillery and mortar fire, coupled with infantry opposition, yesterday slowed the Indian advance along the upper Arno.

Reports that the mountain village of Giuliano, just northeast of Subbiano, had been burned in reprisal by the Germans were officially confirmed here today. The German military authorities had ordered the houses of the village saturated with gasoline and then put to the torch, to avenge the shooting of two German soldiers, allegedly by Partisans. Actually, it was said here, the two German soldiers were wounded by members of an Allied patrol force.

On the Adriatic sector, Italian and Polish forces opened up a new local attack yesterday, and Polish forces were reported to have reached and captured their first objective, the village of Francavilla, four miles west of Senigallia and a mile south of the Cesano River.

On the remainder of the front, there was little to report.

Leghorn Harbour Opened

Leghorn harbour has been swept clear of mines and opened up for the use of Allied shipping, it was announced by the headquarters of the Royal Navy here today.

The announcement, which paid tribute to the difficult and arduous work accomplished by minesweeper and trawler flotillas of the Royal Navy, said that Ancona harbour, captured by the Poles in recent weeks, had also been opened to shipping.

Ploesti Bombed Again

Up to 500 Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked military installations in the Ploesti area for the 12th time. The Liberators and Flying Fortresses bombed the targets by use of special instruments to counter the enemy's attempts to screen the targets by smoke.

Fires were observed in the target area. Only a few enemy aircraft were encountered. Anti-aircraft fire was intense.

Another formation of Liberators bombed an oil installation 19 miles northwest of Ploesti.

Bergamo Airbase Hit

Fighter-bombers and medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday combined in one of the most perfectly coordinated attacks ever staged in the Mediterranean theatre, to blast the main German air base at Bergamo, 30 miles northwest of Milan, it was announced here today.

GERMANS DEMOLISHING PARTS OF FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, ITALY, August 10 — Facts intermingle with rumor in south Florence this morning. Everywhere people can be seen in groups discussing what the enemy's immediate intentions are in regard to north Florence.

Since the Allies entered the city on August 4, south Florence was subjected to its lightest period of shelling last night. Official information stated that only two people were wounded during the hours of darkness.

At 2200 hours a great flash took place in Florence proper, followed by heavy fires with a deep rumble similar to the noise of falling masonry. These were traced to the area between the Ponte Vecchio and the Cathedral—the very heart of Florence.

One interpretation is that these demolitions would make effective roadblocks. The German pretense of keeping Florence an open city is scorned by the leading south Florence citizens. They point out that all of their hopes that the Germans would carry out their promises were shattered when the enemy blew up five of the six famous bridges, and demolished age-old shops on the Ponte Vecchio.

Further, it is definitely known that mortars have been used in the city itself, and tanks and armored cars patrolled through the city streets. It is also pointed out that houses and buildings on both sides of the River Arno have been demolished, and German snipers are using houses as cover for sniping activities. The fear has been expressed that further damage has been done to the city in last night's explosion and fires. (UNN)

AMG IMPORTING FOOD INTO SOUTH FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, August 10 — Although they are divided only by the River Arno the two Florences, South, liberated by the Allies five days ago, and the North, still in enemy hands, have living conditions poles apart as far as the civilian population is concerned.

Five days ago, the Germans left over 80,000 people practically starving and almost destitute, but today these people have come to know the meaning of the word liberation.

Allied authorities are sparing no effort, under the greatest difficulties, to provide these unfortunates with means of health and welfare. Over 180 tons of food and supplies have already been brought into South Florence by the Allied Military Government, and the import rate is now 60 tons daily. Of the 180 tons so far imported, 120 were of flour, 30 were sugar, and the balance was made up of soap, dry vegetables, and milk. In addition, three tons of medical and surgical supplies have been brought in.

Transportation of all these supplies has been carried out with the greatest danger to vehicle drivers, as they have been continually shelled and their way passes through many mined sectors.

Arrangements have now been made for the equitable distribution of foodstuffs with the formation of a committee for economic affairs. This committee has undertaken the distribution of food to the various shops, and civilians know that they can take their rationing problems and difficulties to the committee. (UNN)

The fighter-bombers, in addition to bombing the field, strafed and silenced "every one" of the 60 light and heavy anti-aircraft guns centered about the target, it was reported. When the medium bombers came over the field, they made their bomb run without interference from flak, and were able to score devastating hits on hangars, planes, and trains at sidings along the field.

In other attacks yesterday, medium bombers shifted their assault from southern France, subjected to a week's pounding, and struck again at the big Ventimiglia bridge, on the Italian coast railway 16 miles east of Monaco. Fighter-bombers slashed at trackage and bridges in the Alessandria and Genoa areas of northwestern Italy. Other fighter-bombers attacked gun positions, four bridges, roads, and motor transport just north of the battle line across Italy.

In 1,700 sorties, 13 Allied planes were reported missing. One enemy aircraft was destroyed.

A Marauder group completed its 300th mission, and brought its total of enemy aircraft destroyed to 358, in the coordinated attacks on Bergamo airfield north of Milan, it was announced here.

ALLIED NEWSPAPERS IN SOUTHERN FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, August 10 — The first official Allied newspapers were published in southern Florence today and have replaced the clandestine and underground press.

The Corriere Alleato and the Eighth Army News were both published and for sale on the streets. A full news service is available to both papers, and they were snapped up by news-hungry people.

For the last two days, copies of the Corriere Alleato were distributed in the city, but they were not published in the city itself.

It was disclosed today that copies of the Corriere Alleato have been delivered to the people of north Florence, which is under the control of the enemy. In the future, they will be able to read papers on the day of publication. (UNN)

YUGOSLAVS ENGAGED TWO BULGARIAN BATTALIONS

LONDON, August 10 — Yugoslav forces engaged two Bulgarian battalions in fierce fighting in the Randan Mountain sector, it was announced in Marshal Tito's communique broadcast over the Free Yugoslav Radio today. Fighting is in progress in the town of Jablonica, west of Leskovac. South of Kraljevo, Yugoslav units broke up strong formations of German and Bulgarian troops.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

In Montenegro, offensive operations by Yugoslav units in the direction of Pec continued, and a German stronghold was captured. In an attempt to ensure the security of their already-endangered garrison in Danilovgrad, the enemy carried out an attack in the direction of Podgorica with a force of approximately 700 soldiers.

In Herzegovina, enemy forces totalling 2,300 troops executed a combined attack in the vicinity of Grahovo, Trebenje, and Bilece, and violent fighting is still in progress.

In eastern Bosnia, fighting continues against an enemy division which is trying to break through from Tuzla in a southerly direction. West of Sarajevo, Yugoslav units engaged a German division. One armored train and one passenger train were destroyed.

In western Bosnia, enemy attempts to break through from Drvar were frustrated, and at the same time an attack was carried out against the enemy garrison at Petrovac. A Yugoslav force attacked an enemy column from the garrison of Breznica, and forced them back to Zlobin. The Germans lost 104 men.

Offensive operations continued on the Dalmatian islands of Mljet and Peljesac. German losses included 116 killed, 173 wounded, and 275 prisoners. The enemy was driven from the island of Zirje. (Free Yugoslav Radio)

ROOSEVELT MET MACARTHUR, NIMITZ IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU, August 10 — President Roosevelt spent three days in Honolulu, where he conferred with leaders of the armed forces on coming phases of the Pacific war.

The cable disclosing his visit was dated July 29, but was delayed for purposes of security.

Attending the meeting were General MacArthur and Admirals Nimitz, Halsey, and Leahy. President Roosevelt did not divulge to correspondents the result of the discussion, but said it concerned new offensive plans. He did not indicate how soon these plans might be realized.

Rumors that Prime Minister Churchill was to attend failed to materialize, and Mr. Roosevelt said that any talk at present of their meeting in the Pacific might be called premature, and a question for the future.

He reaffirmed to correspondents that the unconditional-surrender policy laid down by Mr. Churchill and himself applied with the same unrelenting vigor against Japan, as against Germany.

The President inspected military and naval installations here. (Reuter)

OCCUPATION OF GUAM VIRTUALLY COMPLETED

PEARL HARBOR, August 10 — American forces have virtually completed the occupation of Guam Island in the Mariana group, a communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz' headquarters said last night.

Baker Island, about 375 miles southeast of the Marshall Islands, has been in American hands since last November, the Navy Department disclosed Wednesday in Washington. U. S. forces had withdrawn from it early in 1942.

In northern New Guinea, all organized Japanese resistance on the Aitape battlefront has collapsed. Correspondents at Allied headquarters said that 7,000 Japanese troops have been killed in the bitter struggle, begun a month ago.

On Guam, the remaining pockets of enemy resistance are surrounded and under heavy American pressure. Since the

ALLIES CAPTURE TAUNGNI IN NORTH BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, August 10 — Allied troops in northern Burma have captured Taungni, 10 miles southwest of Mogaung, after over-running Sahmaw.

Sahmaw, about halfway between Taungni and Mogaung on the Mogaung-Mandalay railroad, fell to troops of the 36 Indian Division, who found many Japanese dead and much abandoned equipment in the village.

In northern India, meanwhile, Indian infantry, supported by tanks and artillery was reported attacking the rearguard of retreating Japanese forces 12 miles north of the Burma border on the Imphal-Tiddim Road.

A Chinese communique issued at Chungking today said American anti-aircraft guns, manned by the first American units to take part in ground fighting in China, have gone into action in support of Chinese troops attempting to blast the Japanese out of their last positions on the Singshan Mountain in western Yunan Province.

Japanese defenses in Tengchu in western China were again attacked yesterday by bombers of the U. S. 14th Air Force.

Following a three-day tour of areas recently captured-including Imphal and Kohima—Lord Wavell, Viceroy of India, told all participating troops: «You have hit the enemy a terrific crack. You have not only inflicted a tremendous defeat on them, but even more, you have dealt a tremendous blow to their morale.» (OWI)

«CONTE VERDE» WAS SCUTTLED BY CREW

WASHINGTON, August 10 — The Italian liner Conte Verde, which was hit by United States Liberator bombers in Shanghai harbor on August 7, was taken over by the Japanese when the Italian-Allied armistice was signed.

The Japanese asked the Italian crew to stand by the ship, but the crew scuttled her, American nationals who left Shanghai in November, 1943, said they had seen the Conte Verde lying on the bottom of the harbor.

General Stilwell's headquarters announced that the Conte Verde was undergoing repairs when she received a direct hit from the Liberators. (OWI)

U. S. GENERALS INSPECT CHINA AIR BASES

WASHINGTON, August 10 — A group of American generals headed by Lieut. General Barney Giles completed a three-day tour of air bases in China on July 31, the War Department announced today.

General Giles is chief of the air staff under General Henry Arnold, commander of the United States Army Air Forces.

The group studied requirements of this 14th USAAF theater. General Giles said that air transport of supplies over the «hump» from India is now near the saturation point, but that some increase in flow could be expected soon with the present rate of progress of the campaign in North Burma. (OWI)

SWISS GOVERNMENT PROTESTS GERMAN BOMBING

BERNE, August 10 — The Swiss radio reported today that the Swiss Government had protested to the German Government regarding German air attacks on the Swiss frontier village of Morgins, and has claimed damages, Reuter reported today.

A German bomber attacked Morgins, in the Canton de Valais, injuring 20 persons, including women. The village adjoins the French territory of Savoie. Fighter-planes machine-gunned the streets following the bomber attack.

ROOSEVELT MET MACARTHUR, NIMITZ IN HONOLULU

HONOLULU, August 10 — President Roosevelt spent three days in Honolulu, where he conferred with leaders of the armed forces on coming phases of the Pacific war.

The cable disclosing his visit was dated July 29, but was delayed for purposes of security.

Attending the meeting were General MacArthur and Admirals Nimitz, Halsey, and Leahy. President Roosevelt did not divulge to correspondents the result of the discussion, but said it concerned new offensive plans. He did not indicate how soon these plans might be realized.

Rumors that Prime Minister Churchill was to attend failed to materialize, and Mr. Roosevelt said that any talk at present of their meeting in the Pacific might be called premature, and a question for the future.

He reaffirmed to correspondents that the unconditional-surrender policy laid down by Mr. Churchill and himself applied with the same unrelenting vigor against Japan, as against Germany.

The President inspected military and naval installations here. (Reuter)

OCCUPATION OF GUAM VIRTUALLY COMPLETED

PEARL HARBOR, August 10 — American forces have virtually completed the occupation of Guam Island in the Mariana group, a communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz' headquarters said last night.

Baker Island, about 375 miles southeast of the Marshall Islands, has been in American hands since last November, the Navy Department disclosed Wednesday in Washington. U. S. forces had withdrawn from it early in 1942.

In northern New Guinea, all organized Japanese resistance on the Aitape battlefront has collapsed. Correspondents at Allied headquarters said that 7,000 Japanese troops have been killed in the bitter struggle, begun a month ago.

On Guam, the remaining pockets of enemy resistance are surrounded and under heavy American pressure. Since the landing, 10,000 Japanese have been killed, the communique said. Those who remain have little chance of escape.

At Aitape, the trapped Japanese army, since it started its attempt to break through the American lines a month ago, has been broken by extensive use of artillery and by support of American and Australian aircraft that bombed the enemy lines continuously, BBC said Thursday.

Japanese survivors are wandering in the jungle, shell-shocked and starving. For days, their only food has been grass and roots. They have abandoned their rifles and machine guns, being too weak to carry them. More and more of these wandering groups are being rounded up.

About 20,000 Japanese are still trapped between Aitape and Wewak, BBC estimated Thursday.

American troops have encircled the Japanese front lines on the Driniumor River, a communique from Advanced Allied Headquarters in New Guinea reported.

A single Liberator bombed a Japanese 2,000-ton freighter off Davao Mindanao in the southern Philippines, this communique added.

Admiral Nimitz also announced widespread American air attacks on Wake Island, on Truk and Ponape in the Carolines, on Nauru Island in the Gilberts, and on the remaining enemy positions in the Marshalls. (Reuter-BBC)

DOGS USED TO DETECT WOODEN MINES

LONDON, August 10 — The use of dogs to smell out buried wooden German mines undetectable by ordinary methods is the latest development of modern warfare, saving many lives on the battlefield, a dispatch from Reuter said today.

Risk of injury to the dog is negligible. All kinds of medium-sized dogs, loaned by private owners, are being trained as living mine detectors.

Success of the method is due to the dog's highly sensitive and selective understanding of smells. When the dog finds a mine he acts much as a pointer does when he marks a bird. (Reuter)

GOEBBELS' DECREES FOR TOTAL MOBILIZATION

LONDON, August 10 — A number of new decrees have been issued by Goebbels today. All men and women, who in the past have been dragged from German cities to work on farms and domestic service, are to be transferred to the arms industries. They will take the place of male armament workers, who have been called up for service with Germany's armed forces. All men are to be withdrawn from the German railways, postal services, and other organizations, for service in the army.

Directives already issued include drafting all domestic helpers into armament industries, cancelling whole age-groups of exempted persons badly wanted at the front, putting to work on production those circles of the population which hitherto had little opportunity of taking part in the common war effort, and sending the younger generation of film and theater actors to the war industry. Public life must conform to the requirements of total war.

A great number of newspapers are expected to disappear under Goebbel's management, including the Berliner Boersen Zeitung, while the Berliner Lokalanzeiger and the Berliner Morgenpost will merge. (Reuter)

NAZI OFFICIAL IN POLAND COMMITS SUICIDE

MOSCOW, August 10 — Walter Mutz, one of the highest Nazi officials in occupied Poland, committed suicide, Radio Moscow reported last night.

POLISH PREMIER RECEIVED BY STALIN

MOSCOW, August 10 — The Polish Prime Minister, Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, was received by Marshal Stalin for 1½ hours Wednesday evening on the eve of his departure for London.

After the interview, Mikolajczyk said a continuation of his conversations with representatives of the Polish Committee of National Liberation is anticipated. He told the press that proposals put forward in those conversations will be considered in London after his return.

The Polish Premier said that the meetings with the delegates of the Polish Committee of National Liberation had taken place in a friendly atmosphere, and he expected that they would meet again.

In describing his interview with Marshal Stalin, he said that he had been assured that the Soviet Government desired a strong, independent, and democratic Poland. He added:

«Our discussions concerned the future of Poland and relations with Russia, but not only these. They concerned most of the test cases in Europe for future peace and for future collaboration between nations. For such a big thing, a way must be found.»

BULGARIA'S RELATIONS WITH RUSSIA

LONDON, August 10 — Reports from Bulgaria and Ankara suggest that the Bulgarian Government may be trying to improve its relations with Soviet Russia, said the BBC this afternoon. It is difficult to sort out facts from rumour, however.

The reports range from Bulgarian attempts to arrange an armistice with the Allies, to the measures taken by the Bulgarian Prime Minister. Among the measures the Prime Minister has taken, or is contemplating, are said to be the dismissal of German-influenced police officers, the curbing of Nazi propaganda activity, and the suspension of the foremost Nazis in Sofia.

The Prime Minister is reported also to have decided to free political prisoners and to grant to them, and to partisans and their relatives who were held as hostages, an amnesty.

No official statement has yet been issued by the Government or the Bulgarian Foreign Office. (BBC)

ANTI-GERMAN REVOLT IN SLOVAKIA

LONDON, August 10 — A pitched battle between Czechoslovak Patriots and German Waffen SS, described as one of the heaviest clashes of its kind so far reported, has been fought at Hanusovce on the River Topla, northeastern Slovakia, reports to the Czechoslovak Government here stated. The Germans lost heavily in men and equipment during the battle.

The reports said that the Patriots attacked on the night of August 1 as the Germans were leaving a troop train. The Germans had been transferred to this area as part of a panzer division from Hungary. Because they were taken by surprise, the Germans suffered heavy casualties. The patriots withdrew before dawn with captured equipment and their own casualties.

Swiss sources reported the anti-German revolt is spreading throughout Slovakia, where hundreds of civil servants and public men have been arrested and are held as hostages. (Reuter) attacked in the afternoon, and last night heavy attacks were made on two more fuel depots at Chatellerault, some 45 miles south of Tours, and in the Foret Dangles near Lille. None of our heavy bombers is missing.

Rail bridges in the valley of the Oise and at Epernon, Liale, Adam and Chauny were attacked by medium and light bombers as was the rail junction at Epone Mesieres. An ammunition dump in the Foret de Lyons, military buildings at Tonneins en Garonne, a radio installation in the Argentan area and two freighters in Brest Harbor were also bombed.

Tanks, gun positions and rolling stock, as well as barges on the Seine, were attacked by fighter-bombers. Fighters provided escort for bombing missions. Barges on the Seine were also attacked last night by light bombers. PT-boats on offensive patrols off the Island of Jersey intercepted a southbound enemy convoy off Comiere in low visibility early yesterday morning. One enemy vessel was hit by a torpedo, and one other damaged by gunfire before the convoy escaped.

Shortly after daylight, with visibility still further reduced by fog, other PT boats entered the roadstead of Saint Helier and attacked two M-class minesweepers with gunfire. Many hits on the enemy were observed before our forces withdrew. Off the port of Le Havre, light coastal forces intercepted an enemy vessel under escort of six R-boats. The enemy vessel was sunk. One of the escorts was also hit by a torpedo, and its destruction is considered probable.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 10 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The patriots in Florence, operating in small, isolated groups in the enemy-occupied sections of the city, are attacking German snipers who are firing on the civilian population from their hiding places in houses. Both sides have suffered losses. The contribution of the patriots to the liberation of Florence increases hourly. Many German snipers have been killed; others have been taken prisoner.

In Val di Taro, large-scale fighting is taking place between patriot units and Nazi-Fascist troops. The Germans have lost more than 300 men and considerable war material, including transport vehicles and reserve supplies of food.

In the Belluno sector, the Germans were forced to retire after bitter hand-to-hand fighting.

Patriots attacked and scattered a battalion of Nazi-Fascist troops in the Valle delle Staffora. Enemy losses totaled 200 dead and many wounded.

At Arneno, on Lake Orta, a strong group of patriots entered into the experimental laboratories of the Alfa Romeo automobile works, which is collaborating with the Germans, destroying valuable precision machinery.

At Reggio Emilia, the squadrist Giacomo Lori, who was responsible for carrying out numerous murders at the orders of the Fascist political authorities, has been executed, as has the secretary of the Fascist Party in Fabbrico. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 10 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

South of Caen, the enemy continued his strong attacks and extended his infiltration south and southeastward. Our counter-attacks, stemmed and halted the enemy attacks. From August 7 to August 9, the enemy lost 278 tanks south of Caen and west of the Orne. On the remaining parts of the front, the enemy continued his strong attacks at the previous focal points, but gained ground only south of Lohiessis and south of Vire. In Brittany, in the sectors of St. Nazaire, Lorient, and Brest, U. S. attacks supported by tanks were frustrated, and many tanks were destroyed. The gallant defenders of St. Malo are engaged in grim fighting with the enemy, who attacks from all sides.

One hundred and twenty eight terrorists were killed in action in the French rear.

A big enemy destroyer was seriously damaged by bomb hits in the waters of Brest. The enemy, by special devices of the Navy, again lost six fully-loaded supply vessels totalling 25,000 tons, one destroyer, and one escort vessel, off the Seine Estuary. South of Jersey escort vessels of a German convoy sank two American motor assault boats, one of which was rammed in fighting at close quarters. London is being held under fierce harassing fire.

In Italy, on the Adriatic coast, the enemy resumed his attacks with strong forces. They were smashed with heavy losses for the enemy.

In the East, at Sanok and Mielec, grim fighting is in progress with enemy forces who had penetrated our lines. Northwest of Baranov, repeated enemy attacks were smashed and the Soviets were repelled in a counter-attack. One hundred and eight enemy tanks were destroyed in the course of the fierce fighting lasting from August 6 to August 9. Southeast of Warka, the counter-attack of our tank formations gains ground against stubborn enemy resistance. West of the upper reaches of the Narew, repeated Bolshevik attacks were frustrated or halted. At Vilkovishken, German counter-attacks are in progress. North of the Memel, in the Raseinen sector, Soviet attempts at breaking through were frustrated with heavy losses for the enemy; 52 enemy tanks were destroyed. In Latvia, between Mitau and the Lake of Pskov, many enemy thrusts remained unsuccessful.

Bomber formations attacked Soviet troop and tank concentrations, particularly in the big Vistula bend and west of Kovno, with good effect. Northwest of Baranov and southeast of Warka, enemy troop concentrations were attacked by our bombers and night bombers in the course of the night. Yesterday, the enemy lost 41 planes.

Enemy bombers, in daylight attacks, dropped bombs on the Budapest sector. In the night, a small enemy bomber formation attacked the Ploesti region and lost 14 planes. In west and southwestern Germany, particularly Saarbruecken, Karlsruhe, Pirmasens, and Luxembourg were attacked. Air defense forces destroyed 33 planes, 31 of which were four-engined bombers. NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

Transocean and DNB: On the invasion front, General Eisenhower, favored by good weather and supported by the air force, is launching fresh divisions into the attack, regardless of heavy losses. Canadian tank formations have advanced between the Orne and Dives rivers, taking advantage of German strategic withdrawal movements. The battle now rages on a 300-kilometre front between the Orne and the Loire, with the employment of some 1,500,000 soldiers. The German defenders are holding their own against powerful Allied break-through attempts, except at the Avranches sector. British troops on the Adriatic coast have launched an attack against German lines, but have made only a slight advance west of Monterado at the cost of heavy losses. In Rome, according to a Swedish correspondent, conditions are deteriorating rapidly, both politically and economically. Estrangement due to food conditions is apparent between the Allies and the Italian authorities. Stalin has asked the Polish Premier Mikolajczyk to renounce the British-Polish guarantee and alliance treaty, it is reported from Wilhelmstrasse. For the first time, reports from Germany mention an attempt by Polish Partisans to create a revolt in Warsaw. When this was unsuccessful, the Partisans appealed to Moscow for assistance, but without success. London newspapers assert that British attempts to cope with the flying-bomb campaign are so far unavailing.

German Overseas Station: On the western front, British and Canadian forces resumed attacks south of Caen. A British attempt to extend the offensive to the eastern banks of the Orne was frustrated. The situation in Brittany remains unchanged. German resistance continues to hold Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire. Eisenhower is bringing up fresh reserves to support his advances into Brittany. German naval and air forces successfully attacked Allied lines of communications. No major fighting is reported from the Italian front. The British continue to shell the northwestern part of Florence and the town of Pisa. Two hundred Fascist officers who refused to break their allegiance to Mussolini have been arrested by the Allies. Socialists and Communists in occupied Italy have united under Bolshevik auspices. The Polish Prime Minister is to report on the proposals made to him in Moscow, upon his return to London. No agreement has yet been reached. A statement by the Union of Polish rebels behind the Soviet lines in Kovel, to the effect that the rebels have been disarmed by the Soviets, was received by the Polish Radio Station in Bari.

Fascist Radio: British attacks north of Arezzo have been checked. From the Florence sector, only Allied patrol activity is reported. After preliminary barrage fire, the British launched a large-scale attack this morning in the Adriatic sector. The Allies gained only a few kilometres of ground, for the loss of 53 tanks and 13 planes. It is reported that Allied Force Headquarters has been moved to Italy.

AMERICANS LIBERATE LE MANS; DRIVE CONTINUES

SHAEF, August 9 — American Forces have liberated the vital communications center of Le Mans, a little over 90 miles from Paris, and are now fighting in Angers, another road and rail center 45 miles west of Nantes, dispatches from the front reported tonight. The capture of Le Mans means an advance of 45 miles since the Americans were last reported crossing the Mayenne River at Laval.

Angers is 24 miles south of Chateau Gontier, another point where the Americans crossed the Mayenne, which area north of Morlaix, being steadily blasted by Allied artillery and planes.

At St. Malo, the Germans seemed to be determined to fight to the last man, and on the outskirts of Brest there was also stiff resistance. The Germans seemed to be clinging to the ports in the hope that they may escape by sea, and giving up inland towns because they know they cannot hold them.

The German Army is evacuating southwestern France and streaming north in disorganized fashion, being continually harassed by the French Forces of the Interior, dispatches from Spain reported today. The FFI have also announced that they have taken Quimper, a port 35 miles southeast of Brest.

Allied Air Forces had a big day yesterday, flying more than 3,200 sorties to hit airfields, fuel dumps, more than a dozen bridges, and other targets. Heavies attacked air fields and fuel dumps northeast of Paris. (Reuter)

HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK STUTTGART

LONDON, August 9 — A strong force of Flying Fortresses, estimated at 750, escorted by powerful formations of Mustangs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings, today attacked military objectives in Stuttgart and southern Germany, despite unfavorable weather and poor visibility.

Today's assault followed up a heavy blow delivered last night by Royal Air Force heavy bombers against three fuel dumps in northern France. The dumps were located in Pas de Calais, Foret de Lucheux, and Atvid in the Foret de Chantilly, north of Paris. A separate force of Halifaxes and Lancasters hit each target, leaving them in flames, with huge clouds of black smoke billowing above each fuel dump.

A total of 64 German planes were destroyed today in the attack on Stuttgart, 33 of these by American planes in the air and 31 on the ground. Today's opposition by the Luftwaffe was the first serious threat sent up by the German Air Force in many days. A USAAF announcement tonight said that 18 American heavy bombers and two fighters failed to return from the attacks today on Stuttgart, Saarbruecken, and southern Germany.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported that British medium bombers exploded an ammunition dump in the Lyons Forest during the early afternoon.

The RAF also announced that Allied heavy bombers today were flying in constant support of the ground action southeast of Caen, attacking German positions and airfields.

AMERICANS LIBERATE LE MANS: DRIVE CONTINUES

SHAEF, August 9 — American Forces have liberated the vital communications center of Le Mans, a little over 90 miles from Paris, and are now fighting in Angers, another road and rail center 49 miles west of Nantes, dispatches from the front reported tonight. The capture of Le Mans means an advance of 45 miles since the Americans were last reported crossing the Mayenne River at Laval.

Angers is 24 miles south of Chateau Gontier, another point where the Americans crossed the Mayenne, which is now firmly in American hands. Having crossed the river, armored columns are thrusting toward Paris like fleets at sea. They are maneuvering across large-tract country like cruisers and destroyers, and do not want the Germans to know where they are or what they are doing. For this reason, events in that sector are ahead of the news, but things are going along very nicely.

At the same time, south of Caen, Canadian and British forces have now pushed forward nearly six miles through the strong German defenses, and have captured the villages of La Hogue, Hautmesnil, Cintheaux, St. Aignan, and the town of Bretteville-sur-Laize. These advances now place the Allied forces 11 miles from the vital German communications base of Falaise, to the south. Canadian Forces have taken between 800 and 1,000 prisoners since their offensive opened yesterday.

According to a Canadian Army spokesman, the Germans have started withdrawing from the salient between the Orne and Laize rivers, where for the last three days they held a wedge between the 2nd British and 1st Canadian Armies.

At Gathemo, four miles west of St. Pois, where the Germans attempted another of their suicide counter-attacks of tanks and infantry without armor, their formations were literally blown apart by Allied troops, artillery, and aircraft. American troops now hold Gathemo, and the remnants of the enemy forces are milling around in the countryside harassed by the French Forces of the Interior, dispatches from Spain reported today. The FFI have also announced that they have taken Quimper, a port 35 miles southeast of Brest.

HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK STUTTGART

LONDON, August 9 — A strong force of Flying Fortresses, estimated at 750, escorted by powerful formations of Mustangs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings, today attacked military objectives in Stuttgart and southern Germany, despite unfavorable weather and poor visibility.

Today's assault followed up a heavy blow delivered last night by Royal Air Force heavy bombers against three fuel dumps in northern France. The dumps were located in Pas de Calais, Foret de Lucheux, and Alvid in the Foret de Chantilly, north of Paris. A separate force of Halifaxes and Lancasters hit each target, leaving them in flames, with huge clouds of black smoke billowing above each fuel dump.

A total of 64 German planes were destroyed today in the attack on Stuttgart, 33 of these by American planes in the air and 31 on the ground. EISENHOWER MOVES HQ TO FRANCE

LONDON, August 9 — General Eisenhower has removed his headquarters from Great Britain to France, a Reuter report announced tonight.

General Eisenhower's headquarters are reported to be situated in an orchard, near an airport. (Reuter)

CANADIAN TROOPS WIDEN WEDGE

SHAEF, August 9 — South of Caen, Canadian troops have considerably widened the wedge driven into the German lines to the east, and have captured Conteville, Poussy la Campagne, St. Sylvain, and Cauvicourt. The infantry have reached Soignolles, and tanks have reached Esrees la Campagne, it was stated here tonight.

The advances made by the Canadians were [illegible] without heavy fighting and the number of prisoners taken since the assault started rose tonight to 2,000.

The Germans have recaptured Mortain, but its recapture is not at the moment regarded as serious.

The Germans appear to be marshalling their armor for a stand north of Falaise, rather than falling back into the town. (Reuter)

The announcement said that fighter planes swept the same area south and east of the battle line, taking a heavy toll of enemy transport and attacking gun positions.

It was pointed out here today that the German Army oil supply is becoming acute, and that the Wehrmacht is having to collect oil and petrol from remote parts of France. But the distances are becoming so great, that the strain of transporting the oil and gas by truck is causing a serious strain on the Nazi petrol situation.

Mosquito bombers of the RAF last night dropped 4,000-pound bombs on the industrial city of Cologne. Another successful night attack was carried out by the 2nd TAF last night when they bombed the rail yards at Ignville, lying to the south of Rouen. A large amount of German equipment was reported to have been assembled in this area.

The 9th USAAF made its deepest penetration of the war yesterday when it demolished the Jovigny Bridge over the Yonne River, 70 miles southeast of Paris. No enemy interceptors were encountered but the intense flak over the target area brought down one Marauder and two Havocs.

Colossal Damage

Eighth USAAF Thunderbolts, Lightnings, and Mustangs dealt their heaviest blow of the war yesterday in concerted attacks against railway yards. In all, more than 1,000 railway cars, 60 locomotives, and 58 motor trucks, as well as oil trucks, staff cars, flak positions, and river boats and barges, were destroyed and damaged. Five enemy planes also were destroyed on the ground.

Heavy bombers operating in the Caen sector met with heavy flak and some enemy fighter opposition. Thirteen Allied bombers and 13 fighters are missing. The bombers dropped more than 20,000 fragmentation bombs and 100-pounders in an area only 10 miles square.

Flying bombs were over southern England again last night, including the London area. They were met with strong anti-aircraft fire. Some damage and casualties were caused.

Royal Air Force rocket-carrying Beaufighters yesterday attacked a German convoy about three miles off the south-east of Norway, the Air Ministry announced today. The convoy consisted of six merchant vessels, each estimated at between 2,000 and 3,000 tons, plus eight escort ships.

Three merchantmen were hit by torpedoes and left burning. Six of the escorting ships were reported damaged. Three Beaufighters failed to return.

Because of the heavy damage inflicted by USAAF heavy bombers Monday in their attack on Berlin, the Berlin telephone service is unable to contact the Doennoff exchange, which is located in the area that was heavily attacked. The Doennoff exchange embraces an important section of the German government buildings, including the Wilhelm-strasse, newspaper plants, and important stores and export firms. (Reuter)

AIR FORCES' NEW ROLE

SHAEF, August 9 — «If we break the German Army, we have in the Air Forces an instrument which would turn any retreat into complete rout, and result in the Army's complete destruction.» Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory said today.

Leigh-Mallory said that he took full responsibility for the idea of using heavy bombers in a tactical role in direct support of the battle — a very important development. He continued: «By no other method is it possible to put down such a concentration of firepower in so short a time. It would take artillery, for instance, a week to do it, and then it would not be effective. Even in this front, modern warfare, fronts tend to get sealed up. At Caen we had a number of unsuccessful attacks before heavy bombers made their attacks on July 18.»

Bavarians told correspondents that they sheltered in a trench until the attack was over.

One Bavarian said, «Well, there is only one answer to this.»

The other Bavarian said, «What is that?»

The first Bavarian said, «The V-5!»

The second Bavarian said, «What is the V-5?»

The first Bavarian said, «The V-5 is this very large white flag, on this very large long pole.» (BBC)

GERMANS RAZE ANOTHER FRENCH VILLAGE

WASHINGTON, August 9 — A Swiss dispatch received here yesterday from Lausanne stated that the Nazis had shot 43 persons, razed 60 houses, and left the French village of Bouges in Haute Savoie in ruins following a clash between the FFI and German troops. This is the third French village the Nazis have destroyed. (OWI)

RED ARMY POISED ON EAST PRUSSIAN FRONTIER

MOSCOW, August 9 — The Red Army was poised tonight for a major assault on East Prussia, as preparations for the invasion of German territory were completed by General Chernyakovsky.

The BBC said this afternoon that as the first step in this major assault the Russians, backed by massed artillery, tanks, and aircraft, have broken into the German defense system on the East Prussian frontier. A front-line reporter said the Germans had put up from three to four lines of trenches all the way from the River Niemen to the town of Suwalki. These defenses were studded with machine-gun nests, pillboxes, and anti-tank guns, but they are reported to be giving way in the heavy fighting.

The Germans have thrown 15 more divisions into the East Prussian front during the last three weeks. One of the divisions came from Italy, one each from Yugoslavia and Norway, five from Poland, and eight from Germany itself.

John Evans, Reuter correspondent, said tonight that nothing is being left to chance in the Red Army's forthcoming assault on East Prussia. He added that tank unit commanders have been given as many as five or six alternative plans of attack. The Red Army's main forces, he stated, are being shifted a few miles from the German border.

Battle For Warsaw

Meanwhile, the battle for Warsaw continued from the inside and outside. The Polish Patriot forces reported yesterday in a radio message from inside the Polish capital that the enemy pressure was increasing. General Bor, commander-in-chief of the Polish Underground Army said.

Further instances are noted of German Army columns in danger of using civilians as screens in Warsaw.

The Underground Army's communique stated today that German artillery emplacements in the Warsaw suburb of Praga on the Vistula's eastern bank, are heavily shelling the river's western bank.

He added that 60,000 tons of bombs were dropped on 80 centers of railway activity during preparations for D-day. Allied aircraft destroyed over 400 tanks and heavy armored vehicles in July alone.

The fighter-bomber is a splendid weapon, he said, and could be used to the utmost in exploiting victory.

Speaking of the flying bomb, Leigh-Mallory said that it was a «frightfully important development,» but not likely to affect the air war. It is only a new kind of artillery. (Reuter)

The Underground Army's communique stated today that German artillery emplacements in the Warsaw suburb of Praga, on the Vistula's eastern bank, are heavily shelling the river's western bank.

Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, said that the Red Army was driving fresh wedges into Hitler's battered Baltic armies. Every German attempt to counter-attack was met by a wall of steel and flame. The Luftwaffe, he added, is now limping back with clipped wings after very heavy battles over the Baltic battle front.

The Reuter correspondent said that these planes were trying to blast through an escape corridor for the trapped Germans while light German warships and naval aircraft attempted to rescue the armies by sea.

Tonight's Soviet communique said that the Red Army was pulling tighter the trap on the German armies, moving northwest of Rzeckne in the Latvian S.S.R. and occupying more than 30 localities, adding further to the threat of cutting off the German 3d Army group.

On the extreme southern sector of the front, the Russians are fighting to the crest of the Carpathians. A correspondent said of this drive: «Stalin's soldiers are proving themselves just as much at home in the hills, as on the Russian plains.» (Reuter)

NEW FINNISH GOVERNMENT FORMED

STOCKHOLM, August 9 — It was officially announced in Helsinki yesterday that a new Finnish government has been formed with Antti Hackell as Premier and Carl Enckell as Foreign Minister.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Other members of the government were Gen. Rudolf Walden, Minister of Defense and Vice Premier; Carl-Henrik Hilliar, Minister of the Interior; Baron Ernest von Born, Justice Minister; Onni Hiltonen, Minister of Finance; Alceste Altonen, Minister for Social Affairs; Emil Luukka, Assistant Minister of Interior; and Martti Paloenno, Assistant Minister of Finance.

Other government posts were unchanged. (GW)

GERMANS MOBILIZE TO BUILD FORTIFICATIONS

LONDON, August 9 — General mobilization has been decreed in Germany for building fortifications in Posen and the adjoining area, and in Danzig, according to an announcement today by the German Overseas News Agency.

The border of Posen Province lies 100 miles west of Warsaw, and the town of Posen, which is in the heart of the province, is 150 miles east of Berlin. (Reuter)

8TH ARMY FORCES BATTLE EAST OF FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 9 — Momentarily halted along nearly half the Italian front by the barrier of the Arno, Allied forces have begun to thrust in strength through the hills north of Arezzo, in a drive aimed along Highway 71 into the heart of the enemy's Goth Line.

The advance of 8th Army troops northward along the edges of the uppermost stretches of the Arno River, where it flows between the Pratomagno Mountains and the Alpe di Catenaia, is being fiercely contested, with enemy forces launching as many as five counter-attacks in efforts to retake lost ground. Monte Grillo, high point in the Pratomagno range, was captured Monday, and troops of an Indian division pushed on northwest to reach positions overlooking the Arno Valley. These gains were made in the face of heavy resistance, and Monte Grillo itself was held only after five counter-attacks had been repulsed yesterday.

In this drive through the gorges of the upper Arno, 8th Army forces are now roughly nine miles north of Arezzo, and nearly midway to Bibbiena, where Highway 71 forks off to Bagno di Romagna and the towering mountain pass leading through the Germans' formidable defensive line strung out along the Apennines crests. Across the Alpe di Catenaia, 14 miles to the east, where another mountain pass leads to Borgo Pace, one of the key points in the Goth defenses, 8th Army forces met heavy shellfire at San Sepolcro along Highway 73, also leading from Arezzo.

Although active patrolling was being carried out across the Arno in the Florence sector, the communique left no doubt that a major attempt to cross the river at this point would not be made. "The major activity on the Italian front has been transferred from Florence," it said.

Enemy Bridgehead

German forces still hold a considerable bridgehead southeast of Florence, in the hills south of Pontassieve at the Arno's southward bend. British troops were fighting in the Monte Pilli area, five miles southeast of Florence, and stormed Hill 557, where the enemy were strongly emplaced in a monastery building. The hill feature was occupied and held despite an immediate enemy effort to retake it.

German forces also occupied up to yesterday the ground lying between the Florence-Pisa highway and the Arno in the four miles stretch between Empoli and Montelupo, at the mouth of the Pesa River 11 miles west of Tuscany's chief city. Montelupo is now in 8th Army hands, as apparently is the region of the Goofolina Gorges, northeast of this town. Empoli, it was stated, remains a no-man's land.

Increasingly aggressive patrolling both by enemy forces and American troops characterized the 5th Army sector yesterday.

Fifth Army patrols and the enemy both crossed the snipers cunningly concealed in houses, organised their own effort to purge the Arno River area of the pests. They instituted a house-to-house search and succeeded in clearing many sections, but not without cost to themselves. The snipers fought desperately to escape from the net, and called on mortar support from the German-held part of the city, which caused many casualties among the Partisans. But, with rare courage, the Partisans succeeded in clearing many sections. Many snipers were shot, and a number of prisoners were taken.

The Allies are reluctant to take action which might involve damage to the historic city, and the action of the Partisans is aiding in the complete liberation of Florence.

A later dispatch from the UNN reporter said that yesterday the intensity of the German fire into the city streets increased as the day advanced, and by noon the population had all taken cover. One spell of German shelling resulted in 85 casualties among the civilians, including several killed, among whom was an Italian Red Cross civilian. Other deaths and many more casualties are reported. 500 ITALY-BASED BOMBERS HIT HUNGARY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 9 — Up to 500 Italy-based bombers today attacked an oil refinery, an aircraft factory, and two airdromes in Hungary, it was announced here this evening.

Other heavy bombers struck at railyards and rail lines in Yugoslavia.

The Hungarian targets attacked were the oil refineries at Almas and Fiume on the Danube 30 miles west of Budapest; the Messerschmidt assembly plant and aircraft components works at Gyor, between Vienna and Budapest, and the airdromes at Veszes and Tokol, near Budapest.

Good results were recorded over the targets. No enemy aircraft were encountered.

Bridges Attacked

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked 18 road and rail bridges in northwestern Italy and in the Rhone and Var valleys in southern France, yesterday, in slashing assaults which have left only remnants of German communications in the vital northwestern corner of Italy, linking southern Germany with France.

Among the bridges struck were two Alessandria spans on the main line linking Turin and Milan with the Riviera route into France. French-flown Marauders bombed a rail bridge between Piacenza and Alessandria, while others attacked a highway bridge near Asti, midway between Alessandria and Turin. Six other road and rail bridges southwest of Alessandria were also successfully attacked, along with a causeway between Mantua and Verona. Mitchell bombers attacked two rail bridges in the Avignon area, and a bridge over the Var near Nice.

In other attacks yesterday, Coastal Air Force Wellingtons and Beaufighters scored hits on a 1,500-ton merchant vessel and four smaller vessels off Porto Etso in the Adriatic, and attacked nine barges in sweeps over the Scarri Lesina Bay.

Fighter-bombers of the Balkan Air Force attacked oil storage tanks at Lipso, just south of Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia.

Heavy bombers of the 15th AAF did not operate yesterday.

Canal Blocked

Fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force have bombed the lock gates of the Adige River Canal, south of Venice, to block supplies going by water to the enemy's unfinished Goth Line, it was announced here today.

Increasingly aggressive patrolling both by enemy forces and American troops characterized the 5th Army sector yesterday.

Fifth Army patrols and the enemy both crossed the Arno River to probe each other's positions along the banks or further inland. A 5th Army mine laying detail southwest of Pisa was engaged by an enemy patrol and a fierce engagement followed, in which German artillery fire was brought down on the American formation. But when American tanks arrived on the scene, the enemy troops withdrew. Hostile tanks were apparently concentrating southeast of Pisa, and in one group taken under American shellfire one tank was crippled by a direct hit.

It was revealed today the 5th Army frontline dispositions now follow Highway 67, connecting Florence and Pisa, rather than the Arno River, for at least 20 miles, between San Benedetto, 6½ miles southeast of Pisa, to Empoli, between the Elsa and the Pesa tributaries of the Arno. West of San Benedetto to the sea, American forces are actually on the south banks of the river, the detailed reports stated.

PARTISANS KILL NAZI SNIPERS IN FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, August 9 — With Florence still being subjected to shelling and mortar fire by the Germans, civilian casualties and damage to buildings continue to occur said a UNN reporter. By day and night, shattering explosions shake the residential districts.

Italian Partisans, enraged beyond endurance by the killing of civilian men, women, and children by German Fighter-bombers of the Balkan Air Force attacked oil storage tanks at Lapco, just south of Dubrovnik in Yugoslavia.

Heavy bombers of the 15th AAF did not operate yesterday.

Canal Blocked

Fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force have bombed the lock gates of the Adige River Canal, south of Venice, to block supplies going by water to the enemy's unfinished Goth Line, it was announced here today.

In attacks on two successive days, the lock gates at Cavanella were so badly damaged as to make the canal, the main waterway from the Venice Lagoon, virtually impassable, it was said.

The Mustang fighter-bombers hit the six double sets of lock gates in low-level attacks in which half-ton bombs were used.

Enemy Ships Sunk

An Anglo-American force of light naval craft has sunk eight enemy vessels and damaged at least 11 others in operations during the month of July in the Gulf of Genoa, it was announced here today.

Included among the enemy vessels damaged or sunk were a corvette, 10 F-s lighters, and two merchant vessels.

The Allied naval craft, although working close inshore where they were under fire from shore batteries, suffered no serious damage to any craft during the month and lost in casualties only two killed and five wounded.

Commandos Off Dalmatia

A group of American soldiers, landed on a Dalmatian island by rubber boats, have sunk three German vessels by fire from bazookas and machine guns hidden along shore,

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Stoyan Pribichevich, Anglo-American press representative, said in an article released here today.

The island, located 120 miles off Vis, was first reconnoitered by the American forces, which placed their guns in a favorable spot to command the ship channel along the Dalmatian Coast. Although several German vessels passed too far off to be in range of the Americans hidden on the shore, they finally made direct hits on two escort vessels and a large cargo vessel, the correspondent said.

The correspondent said that the American forces, under command of Major John W. Urban, an American of Slovak descent, were the «most popular guys on the island» of Vis, where they are stationed.

Troop Carriers Decorated

Major General John K. Cannon today presented to members of the 64th Troop Carrier Group, veterans of action in the Mediterranean, as well as in the Burma-China-India theatre, one of the largest mass awards yet made in the Mediterranean area.

The commanding general of the Tactical Air Force awarded 224 Distinguished Flying Crosses and 278 Air Medals and Oak Leaf Clusters to individual crewmen of the unit, more than two years in overseas service. The majority of the Distinguished Flying Crosses were awarded for participation in operational flights totalling from 200 to 500 hours in unarmed, heavily laden transport planes, often under enemy attack.

Part of the 64th Troop Carrier Group was ordered to the China-Burma-India theatre this past winter to meet the need for increased aerial supply to the Allied forces operating in the Imphal Valley and the Upper Burma sector. During this period, the crews of this group flew nearly 7,000 sorties, totalling in excess of 21,000 hours of flying time, and carried to advanced posts troops, food, equipment, medical supplies, arms, and ammunition. Even mules were included in their varied cargoes.

The planes frequently landed under Japanese machine gun or sniper fire about the advanced airfields. They were also attacked by Zero fighters, and one incident is recorded in which a transport plane, diving low to escape a Japanese pursuit ship, lost its rudder in collision with the Zero. The transport flew on, however, and the Zero, too low to come out of its dive, crashed into the ground. This is one of the few instances of an unarmed plane's being credited with the destruction of a highly armed enemy fighter.

RAF's Three Functions

The recently-organized Balkan Air Force has three main functions to perform in aid of the Partisans, it was announced here today.

These functions of the new Air Force, composed of RAF, Yugoslav, Greek, and Italian personnel were defined as carrying out independent air operations against the enemy in the area; close support to Allied and Partisan land and naval forces; and the transportation of supplies.

The force is composed of heavy bombers, such as Halifaxes, and light bombers and fighter-bombers, and in three months of operation has a record of over 100 vessels destroyed, nearly 900 motor transport destroyed and 1,160 damaged; 75 locomotives destroyed and 30 damaged; 250 freight waggons destroyed and 700 damaged; and 122 enemy aircraft destroyed and 37 damaged.

In addition to these tasks, the Balkan Air Force has carried thousands of evacuees and wounded from Yugoslavia to save them from the German practice of killing wounded Partisans.

AFHQ in Italy

Allied Force Headquarters, the top Allied command [illegible] has been moved from from a visit to one of their hide-outs in a mountain village somewhere on the Italian front.

Italian anti-fascists from all political parties and all walks of life are helping the Allied Armies in their task of expelling the German invader and liberating Italy and her people from the yoke of Fascism.

We have heard much of these Patriots living in the hills and their exploits. Today I lunched with a partisan band in a tiny mountain village within sight and range of the enemy's guns.

Guided by an officer, I entered what might have been any American command and observation post. The same situation maps were stretched across desks and «duty officers» were alert to all going on around them. Tommy guns hung in racks near the door. At the base of the rack an empty C-ration case held Italian and American hand grenades. Another box held an assorted mixture of ammunition. «Except for the American stuff, it's all been captured by the Patriots,» the officer explained.

This was a filtering point — what might have been called a personnel center — from which Partisans coming back through the lines to join forces with units here and carry liaison back are screened.

There were six of these stalwart patriots awaiting assignments. I can't use their names, because they all have families beyond the German lines, but this butcher, seaman, bricklayer, architect, barber, fishmonger, and airplane factory worker were typical of the men and women of Italy who have left their homes to fight the enemy. RAILWAYS HEAVILY HIT BY YUGOSLAVS

LONDON, August 9 — The Kraljevo-Skoplje railway line has been heavily damaged, three railway stations burned down, four bridges demolished and a locomotive and 103 coaches destroyed, Marshal Tito announced in today's communique.

As the result of heavy fighting in this area, the Germans lost 388 men killed, 512 wounded, and 117 taken prisoner.

In Macedonia, in cooperation with Greek units, Yugoslav Partisans crossed the Greek-Yugoslav border, raided a town of 20,000, and damaged enemy communications between Salonika and Bitolj.

Mopping-up operations against approximately 2,000 Axis troops, who were previously broken up at the town of Podgorica, Macedonia, have been continued, with the enemy being chased toward the town of Danilovgrad.

ALBANIAN PATRIOTS DEFEAT GERMANS

LONDON, August 9 — A brigade of Albanian Patriots successfully attacked on July 18, the German-held town of Lazarat, 30 miles from the Greek frontier, delayed reports reaching here revealed today.

Four days earlier, other Albanian Patriot forces inflicted about 100 casualties in an attack on the Germans at Homesh, in Central Albania, northwest of Ceramice. They also took some German prisoners. The Patriots overcame the Germans' artillery and tank support.

Between July 25 and 27, Patriots wiped out the entire German garrison of Vajza, 20 miles northwest of Tepelenë.

Successful attacks on German communications were reported today from various other Albanian districts.

AFHQ in Italy

Allied Force Headquarters, the top Allied command group in the Mediterranean theatre, has been moved from North Africa to Italy, in «one of the largest movements of an Army headquarters in all military history,» it was announced here today.

The move also involved the transfer of Royal Navy and U. S. Navy headquarters; Mediterranean Allied Air Force headquarters; North African Theatre of Operations, U. S. Army, headquarters.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of supplies and equipment and numerous personnel made the transfer of the headquarters like the movement of a good-sized city, it was said. British, French, and American ships effected the transfer, as well as planes, which carried between eight and ten per cent of the key-position officers to the new location by air.

The transfer began on June 30, and by July 19 a complete operating staff had been established in Italy, so that at midnight that day the headquarters in North Africa could be shut down, with the new organization in Italy taking over without a moment's interruption. (PRO)

CHUNGKING, August 9 — After 45 days of siege — longest of the seven year old Sino-Japanese war — Hengyang, important junction on the Hankow-Canton railway, has fallen with its defenders «killed to the last man,» the Chinese High Command announced Tuesday.

A heavy artillery and aerial bombardment preceded the final Japanese assault.

Hengyang is 375 miles southeast of Chungking, and is the junction of the Hankow to Canton and the Kwangsi to Hunan railways.

Its fall opens the way for a southward Japanese drive to close the 170-mile gap with other Japanese columns driving up from Canton. Control of the entire Canton to Hankow railway would give the Japanese an overland supply route from Manchuria to Indochina and Malaya.

ALLIES BOMB HALMAHERA ISLAND

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, August 9 — In an attack on Halmahera Island, between New Guinea and the Philippines, 13 parked Japanese planes were destroyed Monday by Allied planes, General MacArthur's communique reported today.

Liberators pounded Galela and Lolobata on Halmahera with 48 tons of bombs. They also damaged a merchant ship of 3,000 tons.

Allied bombers supporting ground operations in the Aitape-Wewak area of New Guinea dropped 81 tons of explosives on trapped Japanese units.

Allied forces have split these 45,000 Japanese into three parts, and have inflicted on them at least 1,000 casualties. The communiqué added that the Japanese « position is becoming difficult, » and they are rushing reinforcements from Wewak to the Driniumor Valley front about 20 miles east of Aitape.

Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, announced today in his communique issued at Pearl Harbor that American forces have driven the Japanese into the northeast corner of Guam, after capturing Mount Santa Rosa, highest point in northern Guam. Since the landing on Guam, U. S. forces have counted more than 10,000 Japanese dead.

Widespread Allied bombing attacks continued on enemy positions — from the Kurile Islands, lying northeast of the Japanese mainland, all the way to Bougainville in the Solomons, and including Wake Island, the Marshalls, Nauru in the Carolines, and Nauru Island. (Reuter)

MERRILL TO HEAD C-B-I LIAISON

KANDY, CEYLON, August 9 — Brigadier General Frank D. Merrill, until recently commander of the famous « Marauder » detachment in Burma, has been named head of the liaison group for the China-Burma-India theatre at Allied Headquarters.

General Joseph Stilwell, in a message from his headquarters in India, commended General Merrill for his services in the field, adding that he had been relieved of his command solely because of ill health. It was General Merrill who led his famed « Marauders » on a 700-mile trek through the jungle to capture the Myitkyina airfield.

JAPS ADMIT INCREASING SHIP LOSSES

WASHINGTON, August 9 — Recent Japanese reports reveal that Japan, faced with increasing ship losses and fearing severance of her sea supply lines, is attempting to divert her freight shipments to overland routes.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, said Monday that the American Air Force in China, not content with attacking Japan proper, was aiming at « cutting off our sea supply routes. » A few days earlier, the news service said « the American Navy, with Saipan as a base, will assiduously seek to disrupt our sea supply lines. Therefore, a strong demand has arisen for the thorough conversion of marine transport to land transportation. »

The news service added that in Japan and in China, freight will be carried by land transportation to the greatest extent allowed by rail facilities. Bottlenecks to such a plan are the limited capacity of the Korean railway and the ferry between China and Japan. This would affect movement of goods from China, Manchuria, and Korea.

An Associated Press dispatch Monday from Chungking said that the Japanese have been forced sharply to curtail passenger and freight transportation on railways in north-central China because of fuel shortages and the pressure of military traffic. Chinese Patriot sabotage was also effectively interfering with the movement of rail transport. (OWI)

HITLER SUMMONS MUSSOLINI

ZURICH, August 9 — Mussolini has received another [illegible] to Rastenburg, the Swiss pleaded with the court to be executed by a firing squad, but this was refused.

Apart from Von Witzleben, the officers hanged were Colonel General Hoeppner, Major General Stieff, Lieut. General von Hase, Captain Friedrich Karl Klausing, Lieutenant Count York von Wartenburg, Lieut. Bernardis, and Lieut. von Hagen.

The official German news sources have put out a number of highly-coloured and dramatic accounts of what happened at the trial and about the revolt against Hitler, evidently in an effort to distract public attention within Germany from the disaster which has overtaken German arms on the fighting fronts.

The German agency said the defendants at the trial disclosed that several plots against Hitler and others had been hatched by Von Witzleben in February, 1943, just one month after the German defeat at Stalingrad. He had discussed with the former chief of the German General Staff, Ludwig Beck, the possibilities of removing Hitler.

Former Plot

Major General Stieff, according to the German agency, confessed to a proposed plan to induce Hitler to inspect three German soldiers wearing a new type of equipment. A time bomb was to be placed in the haversack of one of them, unknown to the wearer. The final plan was laid for July 20 because Himmler was expected to be present to share Hitler's fate.

The news agency added that the success of the plot would have resulted in the immediate control of the German Army by Von Witzleben, who would have become commander-in-chief. Hoeppner was to have become chief of the Home Army, and Ludwig Beck, chief of the German State.

Dr. Karl Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipzig, was to become German Chancellor. Goerdeler, on whose head a price of 1,000,000 marks has been placed by the Gestapo, is still at large. German papers on Thursday last carried his picture and an official notice renewing the reward and threatening all who harbor or assist Goerdeler with severe punishment.

The young Count von Wartenburg, descendant of the German general who led the Prussian revolt against Napoleon, was to have been vice chancellor, and, said the agency, confessed at the trial that he planned to establish immediate contact with the Allies both in the East and The West.

After the plot failed, Ludwig Beck, the agency said was shot by Colonel General Fromm, then commander-in-chief of the German Home Army, after having tried to commit suicide three times. Fromm was subsequently replaced by Himmler.

In addition to the eight officers already executed, five more German officers have been expelled from the Wehrmacht, and will have to stand trial on a charge of conspiracy in the anti-Hitler revolt. They include two generals, one of whom is General Felgiebel, a communications expert, two staff officers, and the aristocratic reserve lieutenant, Count von der Schulenburg. (OWI - BBC)

GERMAN CREWS MUTINY

Late that day a destroyer arrived in Sonderborg as a guard ship for the port. Some of the crew of this ship also

INSIDE GERMANY

MORE GERMAN GENERALS TO HANG

LONDON, August 9 — After the hanging last night, of eight high German officers accused of planning the overthrow of the State and the attacks on Hitler's life, the German News Agency announced later in the evening that more trials of German officers are to be held before the Nazi People's Court in Berlin. These include two more generals.

Among the eight German officers hanged yesterday was Field Marshal Erwin von Witzleben, a typical Prussian Junker officer; it was the first time in the history of the German Army that a field marshal had been hanged.

According to one report, five of the officers hanged [illegible] German soldiers wearing a new [illegible] bomb was to be placed in the haversack of one of them, unknown to the wearer. The final plan was laid for July 20, because Himmler was expected to be present to share Hitler's fate.

The news agency added that the success of the plot would have resulted in the immediate control of the German Army by Von Witzleben, who would have become commander-in-chief. Hoeppner was to have become chief of the Home Army, and Ludwig Beck, chief of the German State.

Dr. Karl Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipzig, was to become German Chancellor. Goerdeler, on whose head a price of 1,000,000 marks has been placed by the Gestapo, is still at large. German papers on Thursday last carried his picture and an official notice renewing the reward and threatening all who harbor or assist Goerdeler with severe punishment.

The young Count von Wartenburg, descendant of the German general who led the Prussian revolt against Napoleon, was to have been vice chancellor, and, said the agency, confessed at the trial that he planned to establish immediate contact with the Allies both in the East and The West.

After the plot failed, Ludwig Beck, the agency said was shot by Colonel General Fromm, then commander-in-chief of the German Home Army, after having tried to commit suicide three times. Fromm was subsequently replaced by Himmler.

In addition to the eight officers already executed, five more German officers have been expelled from the Wehrmacht, and will have to stand trial on a charge of conspiracy in the anti-Hitler revolt. They include two generals, one of whom is General Felgiebel, a communications expert; two staff officers; and the aristocratic reserve lieutenant, Count von der Schulenberg. (OWI - BBC)

GERMAN CREWS MUTINY

LONDON, August 9 — The crews of three small German warships lying in the harbor of Sonderborg, on the Danish frontier, mutinied on the night of July 21 when news reached them of the attempt on Hitler's life, according to the Stockholm correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

Troops sent to the harbor quickly smothered the revolt. The next morning the ships steamed out to sea, and have not returned since.

Late that day, a destroyer arrived in Sonderborg as a guard ship for the port. Some of the crew of this ship also mutinied, but were subdued by troops.

The German port commander arrested the ringleaders and put them ashore. (Reuter)

PEACE LEAFLET CIRCULATED IN GERMANY

LONDON, August 9 — Indicative of the extent of the peace movement among the Germans is a leaflet secretly circulated after the attack on Hitler.

«Your leaders are still at work,» said the leaflet.

«The war will soon be ended by the overthrow of the régime. You will be called upon to act when the time comes, and as a reward for the patriotic attitude you will be asked to show, you will be able to return to a free and happy Germany.»

It was stated that German officers, many of whom have acquired stocks and money in France, are now withdrawing these investments and converting them into valuable objects or into real estate in Austria and Hungary.

A Washington message said that recent reports from France and Sweden indicated that the Allied military advances, coupled with the new Nazi measures to combat the peace movement, are rapidly breaking down German military morale.

An Associated Press dispatch yesterday said that Field Marshal von Rundstedt's removal from the command of the western front was a sharp blow to German officers in France, and that the removal of other high officials since the attack on Hitler had caused a considerable feeling of depression.

The dispatch added: «Some officers in a northern city in France have packed suitcases in the belief that they will be leaving shortly, either as part of the evacuation of the German Army, or the end of the war. Tension between the SS and other army units has increased notably.» (PWB)

SOLDIERS COURT-MARTIALED FOR DEFEATISM

CAIRO, August 9 — A German officer and four soldiers, returning to Athens from home leave, gave such a black description of the situation at home that they were arrested and court-martialed for defeatism, said a report reaching here today.

They were all executed at the Haidai prison.

Other reports spoke of the drastic decline of German and Bulgarian morale as the truth about German defeats on all fronts reached beleaguered garrisons in Greece and the Aegean.

Morale is worst on the islands.

The second-in-command of the German garrison of Cephalonia took 40 days' leave and never returned to his post.

A German military police officer in Florina was quoted as saying: «We no longer trust anyone here. The Gestapo will be in complete charge from now on.»

In northern Greece, Bulgarian troops are already sending their families home. (Reuter)

UNAUTHORIZED ELECTRICITY USERS WARNED

ROME, August 9 — Unauthorized consumers of more electricity than their rationed turn allows will be disconnected from power lines and their meters will be sealed for not less than 60 days.

Instructions to this effect were given today to the two local electric light and power companies by the Transportation, Communications, and Utilities Section of Region IV, the power regulatory body, under authority from Regional ACC Commissioner Poletti.

The penalty stems from Colonel Poletti's Regional Order No. 19, issued August 1, which makes it illegal for any consumer to use electric current except during the designated turn, or period, for the area in which he is located.

The Società Romana Elettrica and the Azienda Communale Elettrica ed Acqua were ordered to make the disconnections and report violators daily. The AMG will also make inspections to enforce the order.

Violations are occurring, it was said, because many consumers are on 24-hour preferential military and civilian circles and manage to get more than their rationed share of electricity.

Any Allied Force consumer not entitled to preferential consumption and making use of more than the rationed share of current will be answerable directly to the TCU Division. (UNN)

CIVILIAN MOTORISTS MUST GET PERMITS

ROME, August 9 — Citizens of Rome contemplating a motor trip southward in the areas now open to free circulation of civilians were reminded today that they must get permits for their vehicles before setting out.

Captain A. F. Baker, head of the Allied Military Government's transport section, said that only animal-powered transport would be allowed for the present. Operators of motor vehicles used for this importation, however, must get permits issued by the Transport Office. (UNN)

BRITISH AND AMERICANS SIGN OIL AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, August 9 — Representatives of the British and American governments last night signed an agreement designed to make the world's petroleum supplies available to all peaceful countries at fair prices and on a non-discriminatory basis.

The agreement, which lays down broad principles for international trade in petroleum, was signed for the United States by Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, and for the British Government by Lord Beaverbrook, head of the British delegation.

It is designed to distribute petroleum supplies, subject to existing collective security arrangements, equitably to encourage the development of petroleum resources with a view to sound economic advancement of producing countries; to secure recognition of the principle of equal opportunity in the acquisition of concessions; to obtain respect for valid concessions and contracts; and to free the production and distribution of petroleum from unnecessary restrictions.

The agreement provides for the establishment of a petroleum commission, composed of the representatives of the two governments, which will estimate the world demand for petroleum and recommend the manner in which this demand may best be satisfied. It will also investigate Anglo-American problems relating to the efficient operation of the international industry.

Upon notification by the two governments, the agreement becomes effective, and is terminable on three months' notice by either government.

It is a preliminary to the negotiation of a multilateral agreement on petroleum to which producing governments and the consuming countries will, it is hoped, become signatories.

The two countries agree to seek the collaboration of other interested countries in carrying out the agreed principles. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 9 — Today's communique:

LAND: The major activity on the Italian front has been transferred from the Florence sector to the sector due north of Arezzo, where our troops took Monte Grillo, an important hill feature on the west of the upper Arno Valley leading to Bibbiena. The importance which the enemy attaches to this feature, is shown by the fact that he launched five counter-attacks to retake it during the day, all of which were broken up by our artillery fire.

Other enemy counter-attacks were launched against our positions in the hills east of the upper Arno Valley. These were also successfully repulsed.

Another hill feature south of the Arno west of Pontassieve was taken during the day and a counter-attack driven off.

On the remainder of the front, patrol activity by both sides continues.

AIR: Tactical aircraft continued their attacks yesterday on enemy supply lines and communications in northern Italy, the battle area, and in southern France. Targets included railyards, bridges, rail lines, transport, and other military objectives. Other aircraft attacked objectives in Yugoslavia, as well as shipping in the Adriatic.

Heavy bombers of the 8th Air Force, flying from Russian bases, attacked airdromes at Buzau and Zilistea in the Ploesti area of Rumania, landing in Italy. Heavy bombers of the 15th Air Force did not operate.

In these operations, four enemy aircraft were destroyed, and six of ours are missing. Four of our aircraft are missing [illegible] operations of August 7/8.

objectives were secured by first light, and a number of pockets of enemy which had been by-passed in this first advance were cleaned up during the day. The advance continued at midday in face of determined enemy resistance supported by armor. The Villages of La Hogue, Haute Mesnil, Chitheaux, and Saint Aignan, and the town of Bretteville sur Laize, are in our hands. The bridgehead over the river Orne has been extended, and local advances were made to improve our positions east of Mont Pincon.

Long-range and short-range fighters in considerable numbers swept the area south and east of the battle zone throughout the day, taking heavy toll of enemy transport and attacking gun positions. Three enemy mine sweepers in the Bay of Biscay were attacked by rocket-firing coastal aircraft and were left ablaze. During the night, fires were started among oil tanks south of Fontainebleau and Crane. Dijon was also set afire by light bombers. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 9 — Today's communique:

Allied forces in Brittany are closing in on the ports of Saint Malo, Brest, and Lorient. Converging columns have pushed to within five miles of Lorient, and other forces have engaged the enemy four miles from Brest. Fighting is now in progress on the outskirts of Saint Malo. Large fires are burning in both Saint Malo and Lorient, indicating destruction by Germans of their supplies in both ports.

Confused fighting is in progress around Mortain, on the Normandy front. To the northwest of Mortain, a German counter-attack with tanks and infantry was broken at Gethamo, which has been freed. The drive penetrated about one mile into our line, but heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy by Allied troops assisted by planes and artillery. The front line in this area now extends generally along the road between Gethamo and Vire.

In the vicinity of Vire, the enemy is offering stubborn resistance south and southwest of the town. The Allied drive south of Caen progressed some 7,000 yards yesterday. After heavy and accurate preliminary bombing, the first

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 9 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

About 6,000 members of a Garibaldi Brigade and several other groups operating in the Montefiorino sector have engaged German forces superior in numbers and arms.

The Germans, surprised by the sudden and rapid maneuver of the Patriots, yielded ground during the initial stages of the battle. The Germans had 16 armored cars and several mortars at their disposal. When the enemy recovered sufficiently to take advantage of his greater forces, the Patriots still continued fighting for two days.

A detachment of 40 Patriots captured three mortar batteries from the enemy. In spite of their inferiority in numbers, the Patriots inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

Clashes continued in the Abetone sector, where the Patriots are resisting and impeding traffic on important highways. The Resistance movement has recently increased in strength in this sector.

In the Padua sector fighting took place between Patriot groups and the 18th Fascist Black Brigade, which suffered heavy losses in the localities of Santo Campario, Conselvo, and Montera. Many Fascist militiamen took advantage of the resulting confusion to desert. They did this in spite of the watchfulness of the Germans.

In the Province of Como, the Patriots fought a successful engagement against the 2nd Fascist Black Brigade.

At Orio, in the Pavia sector, Nazi-Fascists attempting to carry out widespread destruction were met by Patriots, who forced the enemy to scatter. The enemy lost 10 dead and many wounded. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 9 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

On the whole Normandy Front, reaching from the region south of Caen up to the area east of Avranches, extremely grim fighting is in progress. The enemy, who uses extremely large amounts of material, again and again attacked our front supported by numerous tanks and strong air forces. Only south of Caen and south of Vire, did he succeed in punching a gap into our lines. The enemy spearheads were stopped in the deeply-echelloned positions.

In the other front sectors, the attacking enemy troops broke down before our main lines and suffered heavy losses. Yesterday, in the Le Mans sector, the enemy succeeded, in grim fighting, in penetrating the town.

In Brittany, the American units which had advanced toward Brest and Lorient were repelled, and many enemy tanks were destroyed. Grim fighting for S. Malo is in progress. Bombers attacked the enemy supply centers of Avranches and Dreux with good effect.

On the night of August 7, an enemy freighter of 10,000 tons was sunk by direct bomb hits off Avranches. The enemy lost 20 planes over Normandy and the occupied western territories.

Sixty-nine terrorists were killed in action in the French rear.

Greater London is being kept under fierce retaliatory fire with « V-1 ».

In Italy, south of Florence and north of Arezzo, the enemy launched local attacks which remained unsuccessful. Patrol vessels of the Navy sank two British motor assault boats off the Dalmatian coast. Two German vessels were lost.

In the East, in the Baranov sector, strong Soviet attacks supported by tanks were frustrated or sealed off, and 47 tanks were destroyed. Southeast of Warka, tank formations counter-attacked and penetrated into the enemy positions which were stubbornly defended. Southwest of Bialystok, the Bolsheviks resumed their attacks, after intense artillery preparations, with strong tank and bomber formations. Grim fighting is in progress at some points of infiltration. North of Memel yesterday all Soviet attempts at breaking through were frustrated. The enemy who, at Rassinen, had driven a wedge into our lines was sealed off in a counter-attack and 76 enemy tanks were destroyed.

On the Latvian Front, numerous enemy attacks were smashed in grim fighting. Bombers repeatedly participated in the final fighting by low-level attacks. Bombers and night-fighters successfully attacked Soviet communications and strong points. Several pontoon bridges over the Vistula were destroyed.

Escort vessels of a German convoy and the anti-aircraft guns of the ships shot down eight British planes off the southern Norwegian coast. Last night, enemy nuisance raiders dropped bombs on western Germany and East Prussia. In Cologne, damage was caused to buildings.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

German Overseas Stations: On the western front, the Allies have launched their expected major attack east of the Orne. The Canadians have succeeded in making only minor penetrations into our lines. East of Avranches, the Americans made unsuccessful attempts at breaking through. The British Admiralty and American Navy Department have not disclosed the destruction by Germans of 91,000 tons of Allied shipping in the Seine Bay on the night of August 2. From the Italian front, only patrol and reconnaissance activities are reported. German Panzer grenadiers are holding the enemy southeast of Florence, and German artillery is shelling enemy tank and scout car concentrations. The Polish Prime Minister, according to the Basler Nationalzeitung, had no official reception from the Soviet Government. He was informed that he must consider the Communist Committee the temporary Government of Poland. On the eastern front, the Soviet advance in the Carpathians and the Finnish Isthmus has been halted. Fighting is limited to the bridgeheads in the Vistula bend, to the area southeast of Bialystok, and to the north of the Niemen.

German Home Service: Members of the Supreme Soviet Council have arrived in Lvov to discuss the setting-up of a Bolshevik régime in Soviet-held Polish territory.

DNB and Transocean: Martin Hellensleber reports increasing German activity in the east and west. German attacks have been launched against the Americans in Brittany. General Dempsey has attacked in the direction of Falaise, thus shifting the centre of gravity eastward. Artillery fire and air support of these attacks have been extremely heavy. Fresh landings are expected on the Italian front. The 5th Army has turned over further sections to the British 8th Army, and this is regarded as a preparation for American landings on the Ligurian coast. No major fighting is reported in Italy, but concentrations of strong enemy forces in the area of Florence have been noted. On the eastern front, the German Commander-in-Chief has announced the arrival of new troops and war material as a result of intensified efforts on the home front. The Soviets hope to extend the bridgehead of Baranova south of the Vistula bend, and to push forward between the Vistula and Niemen towards the East Prussian border. Commenting on the trial of conspirators against the Fuehrer, the Berlin press points out that this is the first example of such treachery in the history of the Prussian Army.

Fascist Radio: The Allies are regrouping their forces south of the Arno, and reinforcements are being brought up. Allied thrusts in the Florence sector and north of Arezzo have been frustrated. Two British motor torpedo-boats have been sunk off the Dalmatian coast.

Radio Tevere: It is reported that Mussolini is once more in Germany.

The enemy who, at Rassinen, had driven a wedge into our lines was sealed off in a counter-attack and 76 enemy tanks were destroyed.

On the Latvian Front, numerous enemy attacks were smashed in grim fighting. Bombers repeatedly participated in the final fighting by low-level attacks. Bombers and night-fighters successfully attacked Soviet communications and strong points. Several pontoon bridges over the Vistula were destroyed.

Escort vessels of a German convoy and the anti-aircraft guns of the ships shot down eight British planes off the southern Norwegian coast. Last night, enemy nuisance raiders dropped bombs on western Germany and East Prussia. In Cologne, damage was caused to buildings.

Council have arrived in Lvov to discuss the setting-up of a Bolshevik régime in Soviet-held Polish territory.

DNB and Transocean: Martin Hellensleber reports increasing German activity in the east and west. German attacks have been launched against the Americans in Brittany. General Dempsey has attacked in the direction of Falaise, thus shifting the centre of gravity eastward. Artillery fire and air support of these attacks have been extremely heavy. Fresh landings are expected on the Italian front. The 5th Army has turned over further sections to the British 8th Army, and this is regarded as a preparation for American landings on the Ligurian coast. No major fighting is reported in Italy, but concentrations of strong enemy forces in the area of Florence have been noted. On the eastern front, the German Commander-in-Chief has announced the arrival of new troops and war material as a result of intensified efforts on the home front. The Soviets hope to extend the bridgehead of Baranova south of the Vistula bend, and to push forward between the Vistula and Niemen towards the East Prussian border. Commenting on the trial of conspirators against the Fuehrer, the Berlin press points out that this is the first example of such treachery in the history of the Prussian Army.

Fascist Radio: The Allies are regrouping their forces south of the Arno, and reinforcements are being brought up. Allied thrusts in the Florence sector and north of Arezzo have been frustrated. Two British motor torpedo-boats have been sunk off the Dalmatian coast.

Radio Tevere: It is reported that Mussolini is once more in Germany.

PENINSULAR BASE SECTION NUMBER 301-WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 9,1944

AMERICAN ADVANCE ROLLS TOWARD PARIS: SHAEF, August 8--Allied troops have smashed their way to within 100 miles of Paris, according to a dispatch received here late last night from William Steen, Reuters correspondent. They are moving east of Mayenne River so swiftly that the Germans do not appear to know the exact position of the spearheads. In face of this great surge, the German counter-thrust in Mortain sector loses its significance. Strong forces of Eighth Airforce heavy bombers again saturated the German lines south of Caen in support of an offensive by the Canadian and British troops. This attack, under Canadian General Crerar, has carried five miles into the German defenses. Striking due south of Verrieres, the main thrust has driven through the wooded area of Saint -ignan de Carmsnil, eight miles south of Caen. Allied casualties are not heavy so far. Verrieres, starting point of the major drive, has been the pivot of the Canadian lines for a fortnight. The Allied forces are reported to be using "revolutionary" methods of warfare. Men rode into battle in heavily armored troop-carriers, specially modified for the operation. With tank support, these vehicles formed the initial assault wave which rolled more than three miles through heavy defenses in the first hour of assault. Since then, the infantry has been consolidating the new positions. At the limit of the drive, heavy German opposition was encountered, including twenty Panther tanks. Points captured include May-sur-Orne, which fell after bitter fighting, Tilly la Campagne, Saint Aignan de Carmsnil, Caillouet, Cintheaux, and Gaussnil. There is still a small pocket of German resistance in Fontenay le Marmion, some five miles south of Caen. The German hinge at this point has been badly shaken, and a break through now would carry the battle into what has been termed "ideal" tank country south of Caen. Caught between the rapidly advancing American columns, and the Canadian offensive, it is now questionable whether the German Seventh Army can retire as quickly across the Dive, the Trouve, and the Seine, as Americans can advance on the road leading to the French capital. This twin-attack is reacting already on the southern French front, and may at any moment affect that in Italy, according to Jon Kimche, Reuters military correspondent. He said "The offensive has killed any hope Hitler may have had of saving the troops in France for a final all-out stand on Germany's eastern border.

Meanwhile, reports were coming in of apparent evacuation of various sectors of France. An unconfirmed report from Vichy stated that on Tuesday the German Army evacuated the west coast port of Bordeaux, leaving only small SS detachments as rearguard. Strong detachments of SS and militia have arrived in Vichy, which according to "Gazette de Lausanne" means that "central and southern France are likely to be abandoned without delay."

SOVIET FORCES SEIZE KRUSTPILS: Moscow, August 8--Moscow reported tonight that Red Army troops continued their offensive west and northwest of Rezekne and captured the town and railway station of Krustpils, as well as over fifty inhabited localities. In the area of the town of Birzai, the Germans a few days ago launched repeated counterattacks with tanks and infantry, against the Russians advancing in this sector. In heavy fighting, the German forces were repulsed, and the Soviets advanced to take eighty inhabited localities. In the three-day battle, the Germans lost 6000 killed, 1350 captured, 89 tanks destroyed and 16 captured. Krustpils is an important Latvian railway junction on the main line to Riga, only seventy-five miles from the Latvian captial. Other towns announced as captured by the Russians are Chyrow, sixteen miles west, and Dobromil, eighteen miles northwest of Sambor, these capture was announced yesterday. Dublany, also captured, lies eleven miles northwest of the oil-center of Drohobycz.

Hundreds of fires were blazing today on the German side of the East Prussian border, started by Soviet aircraft ranging ahead of the Red Army. The Russians are now advancing on the East Prussian border in three powerful forces. Moscow is momentarily uncommunicative on the situation in this sector, as often when an important battle is being fought.

LITTLE CHANGE ON ITALIAN FRONT: Allied Headquarters, Italy, August 8--Savage fighting was reported from the rain-drenched Florence sector, but little progress was claimed by either side. Along the southbank of the Arno, to east and west of Florence, Germans still cling stubbornly to their narrowing foothold, in the face of intense British attacks. Northeast of Montelupo, about ten miles west of Florence and south of Signa, somewhat nearer the city, the Germans are holding on to areas south of the river. The Arno River, following the heavy thunderstorms yesterday, has risen between its steep, stonefaced embankments, and swollen from a sluggish stream to a swiftly-flowing river. The Eighth Army troops east of Florence are still clearing the Arno bend where Germans are strongly holding onto their dominant positions on the northern bastions of the ridge southwest of Pontassieve. Inside Florence, in spite of machine-gun bullets zipping across the river into the heart of the city and German shells dropping into the area south of the river, civilian life goes on almost as usual. Markets are thronged with housewives apparently oblivious to the battle going on about them. Artillery duels marked the entire front. Meanhile, medium forces of escorted heavy bombers attacked synthetic oilplants at Blechhamer in Silesia. Other heavy bombers attacked oil installations and airfields in Yugoslavia. Tactical aircraft attacked enemy communications and other military objectives in northern Italy and southern France. During these operations 29 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 22 of ours are missing.

ARAB UNITY TO BE DISCUSSED: Jerusalem, August 8--Plans for a reunion of Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, and Transjordan into one state are understood to be down for discussion at the Pan-Arab Conference at Alexandria next month. The plans include an eight-point program drawn up by Shukri Kouatly, Syrian president, and General Nuri es Said, former premier of Iraq. They are also understood to provide that the people of such a combined state should decide their own form of government, and whether the regime should be a monarchy or a republic. The sponsors propose the formation of a league which Iraq and Syria would join immediately, and which other Arab states could join if they desired. This league would have a permanent council which member-states would nominate under a rotating chairmanship. The council would be responsible for administering territorial defense, foreign affairs, currency, communications, customs, and protection of minority rights. Under these plans Palestine Jewry would have semi-autonomy with its own rural urban district administration, including schools, health, and police, and would be subject to general supervision by the Syrian state under international guarantee. It is understood that both promoters of this great Syrian scheme and the Arabs generally accept the principles of the Palestine White Paper.

EXCERPTS FROM TODAY'S NEWS--Since the invasion, including the Britanny campaign, Americans have taken 85,534 prisoners. Free Yugoslav Radio reports that in Serbia, heavy losses have been inflicted on the enemy in the Ibar Valley, and that one of the most important lines of communication, Kr. Lpevo Skoplaje, has been cut. Yugoslav forces in Macedonia, in central Bosnia, in Croatia, and in the Dalmatian Islands, are carrying out offensive operations. American Flying Fortresses landed today in Italy, to complete the second leg of the England-Russia-Italy shuttle. RAF Beaufighters attacked a German convoy of fourteen ships north of the southwest coast of Norway. They torpedoes 3 merchant ships, set fire to 3, and damaged 6 more seriously.

CANADIAN OFFENSIVE ADVANCES FIVE MILES

SHAEF, August 8 — The new Canadian offensive under the command of General Crerar has advanced five miles into the German line. Striking due south of Verrieres, the main thrust has driven through the wooded area of St. Aignan-deora Carmeshil, eight miles south of Caen.

More than 1,000 RAF heavy bombers, operating in direct support of the Canadian forces, last night struck smashing blows at the hinge of the German line just south of Caen. They dropped thousands of tons of bombs in an area full of anti-aircraft and antitank guns, rocket and artillery batteries, and infantry positions.

The battle area was [illegible] heavily bombed by nine

Avranches, and at first had some success, taking Mortain which was lightly held. Fighter-bombers and Typhoon rocket-firing aircraft, however, swept in at low levels to attack German armor, knocking out 135 tanks and 90 armored cars.

Aimed at cutting the supply routes to the Americans now fanning out in Brittany, the German thrust failed, and the remnant of the armored forces are now fighting to extricate themselves.

105 Miles From Paris

Further south and to the east, American spearheads are approaching a line running north and south between Alençon and Le Mans, just over 105 miles from Paris. Fast armored columns are rolling across a wide area of the Mayenne River, encountering little German opposition. The Germans themselves seemed uncertain in their broadcasts of the news just where the American advance units are, and it is possible that later reports will reveal them at Le Mans.

In the Brittany Peninsula, American troops are fanning out and meeting with little opposition. Reports this morning said that Chateauneuf had been freed, and that fighting was in progress on the outskirts of St. Malo. Large fires have been observed on either side of the Brittany Peninsula, at St. Malo and Lorient.

Today's communique stated that St. Malo has been cut off and that St. Brieuc has been liberated, together with Chateaubriant. Sporadic fighting has taken place with small groups of Germans, bewildered at the rapidity of the Americans' advance. These small German garrisons can never be sure where the Americans will appear next. It is not even easy for the Allies' leaders to know at any given moment where these spearheads are, because some American columns are observing a radio silence.

This afternoon's BBC broadcast to Europe stated that American forces were in action within four miles of the Atlantic port of Brest, within five miles of Lorient, and on the outskirts of St. Malo, where German demolition squads have set big fires going.

Correspondents reported that several infantry and armored divisions of the German Army have had to be withdrawn from Poland, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, southwest France, and parts of the Mediterranean coast. It was also revealed that in Vercors alone, two German

SHAEF, August 8 — The new Canadian offensive under the command of General Crerar has advanced five miles into the German line. Striking due south of Verrieres, the main thrust has driven through the wooded area of St. Aignandeora Carmesnil, eight miles south of Caen.

More than 1,000 RAF heavy bombers, operating in direct support of the Canadian forces, last night struck smashing blows at the hinge of the German line just south of Caen. They dropped thousands of tons of bombs in an area full of anti-aircraft and antitank guns, rocket and artillery batteries, and infantry positions.

The battle area was again heavily bombed by planes of the 8th USAAF before early this afternoon. By late this afternoon, troops were moving so fast that the heavy bombers which had been allocated to support the offensive, were not called upon to join battle.

The towns of St. Aignandeora Mesnil, Carcelles, five miles southeast of Caen and Rocquencourt, six miles south of Caen, have been liberated by the Canadians.

The Allied forces used revolutionary methods of warfare. Men rode into battle in heavily armored troop carriers with tank support.

Orne Bridgehead Widens

While the Allies continued to push down from Caen, the new bridgehead across the Orne south of the Foret de Grimbosq continued to develop. The Allied hold on the eastern bank of the river has now been enlarged to 3,000 yards. It was reported late tonight that the town of Grimbosq had been liberated. May-sur-Orne fell today after bitter fighting and Tilly le Campagne, Caillouet, Cintheaux, and Haumesnil have been liberated. There is still one small pocket of German resistance in Fontenay le Marmion, five miles due south of Caen.

Further south, correspondents reported that armor clashes are continuing around Mortain, now firmly in Allied hands, and Cherence la Roussel, Juvigny, and St. Barthelmy. The Germans tried to break in between Mortain and LONDON, August 8 — The German Overseas News Agency stated that Allied glider troops have landed on the Loire Estuary.

The dispatch also stated that Allied tank spearheads have reached the Loire, and at certain points have reached the coast, which is bristling with fortifications. The report added that none of the German naval bases have so far been attacked. (Reuter)

CANADIANS GAIN 7,000 YARDS

SHAEF, August 8 — The Canadian offensive south of Caen has gained 7,000 yards. All vital objectives have been taken despite some of the heaviest fighting of the Normandy campaign.

The town of La Hogue, 1½ miles east of Tilly la Campagne, was freed.

CHURCHILL VISITS NORMANDY

SHAEF, August 8 — Prime Minister Churchill made a flying visit to Normandy on Monday to receive first-hand information of the recent advance from Generals Montgomery and Bradley, it was learned at headquarters late tonight.

It was Mr. Churchill's third visit to France since the landings were made. (Reuter) divisions had been tied down as a result of the activities of the Maquis.

Chateauneuf is seven miles southeast of St. Malo on Highway 137 to Rennes. St. Brieuc, on the north coast of Brittany, is 35 miles west of Dinan. Chateaubriant, road and railway center, is 35 miles north of Nantes, and 50 miles southeast of Rennes.

Early yesterday, strong forces of heavy bombers, operating in small groups, attacked fuel storage points, bridges, and rail targets in a wide arc northeast and east of Paris and southeast of Bordeaux.

Fighter-bombers swooping east and southeast of Paris destroyed 32 locomotives, 350 railway cars, and 80 military vehicles. Ammunition dumps at Livarot, La Sollepiere, Le Lude, and Bauches du Desert were attacked by medium and light bombers.

Other formations bombed shipping in Brest harbor and bridges at Nogest le Roi, Neavy sur Loire, and Corbie, east of Amiens. At least 20 enemy planes were destroyed in the air in encounters throughout the day and night.

From all these operations, 22 Allied aircraft are reported missing. (BBC - Reuter)

TAF CARRIES OUT STRONG NIGHT ATTACK

LONDON, August 8 — Allied air power gave the Germans in France no respite last night when Mosquito bombers of the 2nd TAF carried out a big program of harassing enemy patrols from points near the front lines to targets 100 miles to the east and southeast of Paris.

Twenty-four trains were bombed and strafed and four German aircraft were destroyed over France during the night by Mosquitoes. Three Allied planes are missing.

It was announced from the headquarters of the Eastern Bomber Command today that American heavy bombers, operating from Russian bases, had attacked the German synthetic oil refinery at Tresbinia, 20 miles west of Cracow, yesterday.

Three more of Germany's oil storage depots in France have been seriously damaged following attacks by planes of RAF Bomber Command, it was announced here today. The plants are located at Blaye and Pauillac, due north of Bordeaux, on opposite banks of the Gironde River.

Monday evening, Boston and Mitchell bombers of the RAF bombed ammunition dumps serving the enemy on the Caen front, said an Allied Expeditionary Air Force headquarters announcement. The dumps were within a short distance of each other one being at Follipere and the other at Livarot. The attacks were made without loss in the face of fairly heavy anti-aircraft fire, the announcement added.

6,000 Tons One Hour

Always in support of the fighting on the Caen front, 6,000 tons of bombs were dropped by 1,000 heavy bombers in one hour Saturday, said a Reuter correspondent in Normandy. The attack, the first made by heavy bombers in close tactical support of ground troops, necessitated use of new tactics to achieve success.

U. S. Strategic Air Force Headquarters in Europe yesterday announced the Sunday bombing, for the third successive day, of Germany's major war industries by bombers of the U. S. 8th Air Force. Reconnaissance photos taken the following day showed severe damage to the tank and engine plant in the Niederschonweide section of Berlin; three factories assembling tanks and making plane engines at Marienfelde, only one or two of whose buildings escaped direct hits; a Daimler Benz factory at Genshagen, also near Berlin, one of the largest aircraft engine plants in Europe; and four plants near Brandenburg making armored vehicles and the Heinkel-117 bomber. Oil refineries at Hamburg, Barburg, and Schulau, near Hamburg, services have already been ordered home. Some 80,000 women, practically the entire German feminine clerical staff, in France, has left the country in the past two weeks.

"In Paris, the whole of the "cultural section" of Goebbels propaganda ministry has departed from the Hotel de Sagon on the Rue de Grenelle.

"It is also reported that a large number of German technicians in France is now to return to the Reich. It includes members of the Todt organization, railwaymen, and other engineers and specialists." (Reuter)

PETAIN REPORTED REMOVED TO GERMANY

LONDON, August 8 — The BBC said today that a report reaching Swiss diplomatic quarters from Vichy stated that the Germans have removed Marshal Petain to Germany.

The same dispatch said that as the Allied troops drive on toward Paris, the Germans have moved all their administrative offices to the town of Nancy, near the German frontier. Almost the whole of the female German clerical staff in France has been sent home. Laval's Government, on Nazi orders, is also moving back to the German frontier. (BBC)

UNDERGROUND LEADER RETURNS TO FRANCE

LONDON, August 8 — When André le Troquer, the French Socialist Underground leader, returns to France shortly, his first task will be inspection of the machinery of civil administration, he declared today.

It will be his first trip to France since he left there a year ago with the Gestapo on his trail and he will return with the rank of the highest civil power in liberated France — Direct Representative of the French Committee in Algiers. Later, he is to move in with his staff, but there will be no general move from Algiers until Paris is freed. "I don't think that will be long," said le Troquer. (Reuter)

FORMER BREST MAYOR TO ADMINISTER RENNES

ALGIERS, August 8 — Former Mayor Le Gorgeu of Brest has been appointed Regional Commissioner of the Republic for recently liberated Rennes, the French Commissariat of the Interior announced today.

Le Gorgeu assumed his official functions on the day of the Allies' arrival in Rennes, today's announcement said, adding:

"In fact, he already has been occupying this post for several months as Underground administrator of the region." (PWB)

GESTAPO TORTURE INSTRUMENTS FOUND IN RENNES

LONDON, August 8 — Further evidence — if any were needed — of German Gestapo-practiced cruelty was reported by The Daily Express correspondent today from Rennes in France.

After inspecting the Gestapo headquarters, housed in the University of Rennes, the reporter wrote:

"It is a horrible and brutal story. Here, the Gestapo kept files, records, laboratories, sabotage weapons, and what it called interrogation instruments.

"I went down into the cellars — cellars used as interrogation rooms. Here and there had been thrown rubber truncheons, iron-cutters, leather thongs, and various types of lashes, some bound with wire.

"They (the Gestapo) left in panicky haste on Friday, when they learned that American tanks already had by-passed the town." (BBC)

The announcement also said that 8th Air Force fighters dive-bombed enemy transportation facilities in France, escorted heavy bombers and conducted patrols in search of German aircraft.

Thirty-two locomotives, more than 400 railroad cars, and other targets were destroyed. Marshalling yards were also bombed. The fighters concentrated on the Paris area, with Rouen, Amiens, and Rheims as boundary points.

GERMANS REPORTED EVACUATING BORDEAUX

ZURICH, August 8 — According to unconfirmed reports reaching here from Vichy today, the German Army has evacuated Bordeaux, taking with it all its material and leaving only SS detachments as a rearguard.

Strong detachments of SS and militia have arrived in Vichy, the report stated. The Gazette de Lausanne said that the report means «central and southern France are likely to be abandoned without delay.»

The Berne correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph wrote: «That the Wehrmacht now realizes it will have to evacuate the greater part of France before long, becomes more apparent daily. Part of the German administrative

NEW TYPE OF PEP TALK TO NAZI TROOPS

LONDON, August 8 — A German prisoner, described by the BBC today as a «pompous little oberleutnant from an infantry formation,» told his captors he had just finished giving his men a pep talk when taken. ALLIES ASSEMBLE TANKS IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, August 8 — Munitions plants for the Allies are at work among the orchards and grain fields of Normandy, the Associated Press said Monday night in a dispatch from the battlefront.

These plants are supplying troops with varied sorts of munitions — from pistol bullets to Sherman tanks. The latter are assembled from parts shipped from the United States and Britain.

Trucks for use in Normandy are no longer assembled in Britain, but are now rapidly put together in France.

A railroad is now operating south from Cherbourg, linking the new munitions centers with the docks and battlefront.

8TH USAAF GENERALS GIVEN NEW ASSIGNMENTS

SHAEF, August 8 — Major Generals James P. Hodges and Curtis E. Lemay, former commanders of the 8th USAAF bombardment divisions, have been given important assignments elsewhere, this headquarters announced.

Their bombardment divisions will now be led by Major Generals William E. Kepner and Earle E. Partridge. General Kepner has been heading the 8th USAAF Fighter Command for the last year. General Partridge has been deputy commander of the 8th USAAF.

The new head of the 8th Fighter Command is Brig. Gen. Francis E. Griswold, formerly its chief of staff.

Another announcement said that Brig. Gen. Orville A. Anderson, former assistant chief of staff for operations in the 8th USAAF, has been named deputy operations commander.

Brig. Gen. John A. Samford, former chief of staff in the 8th USAAF, has moved to the post of deputy commander for administration. (OWI)

USEFULNESS OF BRETON PORTS

WASHINGTON, August 8 — When the five major Breton ports are captured, repaired, and put into normal operation, they will speed into France about 23,000 tons of Allied fighting power daily military observers here said. This tonnage will probably be increased materially by additional facilities and improved communication lines installed by engineers.

Considerable repair work will be necessary to counteract the damage done not only by German demolition squads, but also by Allied action. St. Nazaire, Brest, Lorient, and Nantes have been subjected to heavy and repeated Allied bombing.

Brest has military advantages which make it the most important Breton harbour. Its huge land-locked bay can accomodate many ships of the largest size. The port can be used at any tide, and there are good off-loading berths, almost all of which can be reached by trucks.

St. Malo, on the other hand, is the least important of the Breton ports. If severely damaged, St. Malo will probably be unable for some time to handle any large tonnage.

Lorient has the smallest cargo capacity of the five ports, but because it is less vulnerable to deliberate damage, it will prove more valuable than St. Malo.

St. Nazaire can accomodate medium-sized ships and has been used by the Germans as a major submarine base. It has good rail connections.

Nantes is too small for fully-loaded Liberty ships, and the usefulness of the port depends upon dredging. (PWB)

FFI CLEARED VANNES FOR ALLIES

LONDON, August 8 — The city of Vannes, at the base of the Brest Peninsula, was cleared of Germans by the French Forces of the Interior, who handed it over Monday to the American armored columns when they arrived, an Associated Press war correspondent with the American forces said in a dispatch today.

The correspondent stated: «The American columns, racing to cut off the peninsula, found long stretches of their route paved for them by the FFI, which captured dozens of villages, neatly gathered up hundreds of German prisoners, and jailed collaborators.

«The Frenchmen strung grenades in their belts, dug up rifles and submachine guns which Allied planes had dropped by the thousands, and then, with careful organization, fell upon the retreating Germans. They seized bridges, destroyed ammunition dumps, and spread such confusion among the Germans that the enemy split into small pockets.»

(The Germans admitted they had their hands full with Polish Patriots in Warsaw. The German military commentator Colonel Ernest Von Hammer, said that the Germans «yesterday carried out a major operation to wipe out partisan bands which had tried to capture the city.»)

A Reuter correspondent said today that the Soviet Air Force pounded German positions on the East Prussian border in a «big softening up» operation, as the Red Army's triple drive towards the Reich frontier gained ground against stiffening opposition. Russian pilots returning from their sorties report huge fires all along the frontier as the Red Army moved on Germany from three directions: from the River Niemen northwest of Kaunas; from the northwest of Bialystok; and from southwest of Bialystok.

(Colonel Von Hammer admitted tonight that «German forces north of Niemen have been ordered to carry out a withdrawal movement.»)

Reuter reported that more and more Soviet troops were moving up to join in the battle for East Prussia. In a series of complicated maneuvers, Marshal Bagramyan's troops were breaking through towards the Siaulial-Tilsit highway, although the Germans are offering stubborn resistance.

Reuter added that Marshal Bagramyan's forces have already accomplished a mighty feat of forced marching and are ready for more. In a dash for the coast west of Riga, they did 50 miles in a matter of hours, and caught German panzer crews sleeping in tanks in or near villages. The Germans could not believe that it was Russian tanks coming in, and saluted the Soviet tank officers.

Panzer Crews Surprised

In the south, the battle against the Carpathian wall was going badly for the Germans. Clearing of the last German units in this sector will mean firm consolidation of the Soviet flank guarding the big push on Cracow.

The supplement to last night's communiqué said fierce battles were being fought in the Rezekne-Madona area, in Latvia, southwest of Pskov, and almost due west of Riga. More than 2,000 German officers and men were reported killed there during the day's fighting. On this front, Lubana was captured last night.

Northwest of Bialystok, said the communiqué, Soviet troops broke through the town and highway junction of Knyszyn, while southwest of Bialystok the River Narev was crossed and the railway town of Lapy was taken.

West of Sandomir, at a point west of where the Vistula joins the San River, Soviet troops routed German garrisons in a six-mile advance which carried them across the Kopszivenka River.

Following yesterday's capture of Borislav and Sambor, two important centers in southern Poland, Marshal Konlev's left flank and General Petrov's right flank were pressing on to the Carpathian passes.

The storming of Sambor, important road and rail junction on the approaches to the Carpathians, placed Marshal Koniev's troops firmly in control of the gateway to Uzok, the traditional pass route to the Danube Valley.»

Breton ports are captured, repaired, and put into normal operation, they will speed into France about 23,000 tons of Allied fighting power daily military observers here said. This tonnage will probably be increased materially by additional facilities and improved communication lines installed by engineers.

Considerable repair work will be necessary to counteract the damage done not only by German demolition squads, but also by Allied action. St. Nazaire, Brest, Lorient, and Nantes have been subjected to heavy and repeated Allied bombing.

Brest has military advantages which make it the most important Breton harbour. Its huge land-locked bay can accomodate many ships of the largest size. The port can be used at any tide, and there are good off-loading berths, almost all of which can be reached by trucks.

St. Malo, on the other hand, is the least important of the Breton ports. If severely damaged, St. Malo will probably be unable for some time to handle any large tonnage.

The London Daily Telegraph correspondent reported that French resistance fighters in Rennes foiled a German attempt to blow up the water works and began jailing collaborationist officials two days before the entry of the American troops. He added that when the Americans arrived, they found practically the entire civil administration of the city in the hands of the Resistance movement. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS FIGHTING IN WARSAW'S OUTSKIRTS

MOSCOW, August 8 — The Red Army was fighting on the outskirts of Warsaw tonight, battering their way into the Polish capital, which apparently is held more by the Polish Patriots than by the Germans. The Germans, who ostensibly hold Warsaw, and undoubtedly have many troops within the city, have been bombing the city three times a day to supress patriot activity, a communiqué from the Polish Patriots stated.

The patriot communiqué added that heavy fighting continued within the city between patriots and German troops, adding that the fighting would continue for several days. The patriots reported also that the Germans had made some progress in fighting for the thoroughfare leading to the Kierbiedz Bridge, and occupied several streets in the former ghetto.

CAPTURED GENERALS URGE BALTIC ARMY TO QUIT

MOSCOW, August 8 — Radio Moscow said that a group of captured German generals in Russia appealed Monday night to the encircled German Baltic Army to surrender. The generals were quoted as saying:

« To break out through East Prussia is impossible. A ring of Russian forces some 90 miles in depth is hemming you in.

« Your only honorable course, therefore, is to surrender and avoid useless slaughter of hundreds of thousands of men whom Germany will need to rebuild its country. Not a single man must sacrifice his life uselessly for Hitler's lost cause. » (Reuter)

GERMAN SOLDIERS ON EAST FRONT TIRED

LONDON, August 8 — Lieut. Joachim Fischer, a German military commentator, in a broadcast over the German radio, admitted that the Wehrmacht was inferior «in numbers» on the Eastern Front, and that tens of thousands of German soldiers were «overtired.»

He said there was such a thing as «utter fatigue, when one can no longer think,» and that for weeks the German soldiers had struggled against this.

«It is the knowledge of inferiority in numbers which depresses our soldiers. During the day, they must fight to ward off determined Soviet attempts at penetration. During the night, they disengage to dig new positions and await the new Russian attacks. Then, once again, another day dawns when they have to face the enemy.

«Thus, the German soldier expects reserves promised by Dr. Goebbels. He relies on assurances by Heinrich Himmler that new divisions will be shaped from the training army, and the German soldier places himself under a command which knows what is best for him.»

The broadcast also described Soviet military tactics making use of «superiority of men and material for deeply penetrating wedges,» adding, «This means that the German Army is invariably fighting against the possibility of being outflanked and withdrawing to new positions. These disengagements could also be advantageous to the enemy.»

Another picture of the fighting was given today over the German-controlled Radio Paris by a German soldier, who said: «The Russian tidal wave surges forward with a regularity that appears invincible. In Italy, the Allies are continually advancing. In Normandy, our counter-attacks have failed. This is the picture we have seen during June and July. These are the truths that should be told our soldiers.» (OWI)

PATROLLING, ARTILLERY ENGAGEMENTS IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 8 — Except for skirmishing by light forces in the mountain area north of Arezzo, there was little to report on the Italian front yesterday.

For the first time since the sweeping Allied offensive got under way along the line of the Garigliano and the Rapido rivers south of Rome nearly three months ago, the communique from the Allied Armies in Italy stated that «activity on the whole front has been confined to active patrolling and artillery exchanges.»

In the mountains which lie in the Arno's wide southern bend and extend eastward to the Tiber, Gurkhas and Sikhs yesterday engaged in fierce local fighting for the dominating features athwart Highway 71, which runs northward along the Arno's upper stretches through the mountain fastnesses of the enemy's Goth Line. An enemy counter-attack Sunday resulted in the Germans' retaking Monte Grillo, a peak three miles west of Subbiano, and 8 1/2 miles north of Arezzo. Heavy casualties were suffered by both sides in this engagement. Gurkha and Sikh mountain troops, however, captured the feature of Pontenano, roughly 12 miles northwest of Arezzo.

Along the 5th Army front, enemy forces attempted small infiltration actions near San Miniato at the confluence of the Arno and the Elsa rivers, west of Florence. These were repulsed with considerable enemy losses.

About Florence, the situation remained unchanged, with the enemy still holding fiercely to the high ground south of the river in the vicinity of Pontassieve. (PRO)

GERMANS STILL HOLD FLORENCE

WITH THE 8th ARMY, August 8 — Ponte Vecchio is now the only one of Florence's six famous bridges across the clatter of Nazi automatic fire and the scream of occasional shells. Yesterday morning, a priest reported that several civilians had been wounded by enemy action in streets near the river.

An enemy trick was discovered and circumvented. Every salvo fired by an Allied battery on targets north of the city was followed by a burst of machine gun fire with tracer bullets in that direction from the enemy-held portion of the city, clearly for the purpose of directing enemy artillery. Successful steps were taken to stop this nuisance. (UNN)

BRIDGES IN SOUTHERN FRANCE BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 8 — Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers flew along the Rhone Valley deep into France yesterday, to carry into the first day their slashing attacks on German communication and supply arteries to the south of the deepening Allied bridgehead in Normandy and Brittany.

The attacks on southern France ranged from the coast, where Nice harbour was bombed, to 110 miles north of Marseilles, where more than half the 1,000-foot length of an important rail bridge was knocked down by accurate and heavy hits. Another rail span, 105 miles north of Marseilles, was also demolished. A bridge at Avignon, 55 miles north of France's great Mediterranean port, and a center of traffic from east and west, as well as from the north, was also hit and its center span tumbled into the Rhone River. The fourth rail structure hit, 75 miles north of Marseilles on the River, also received direct bursts.

An American veteran of the first bombing attack on Tokyo, Lt.-Col. James H. Macia, led a formation of Marauders which bombed Les Cerises road bridge, between Paget Theniers and Nice. In other attacks on rail lines from Italy into southern France, the east Ventimiglia rail bridge, just east of the Franco-Italian frontier, was bombed, as well as Imperia harbour, and the Albenga and Alessandria rail yards.

Reconnaissance photographs taken after the attack on the Blechhammer synthetic oil refinery, in German Silesia, show that at least 16 buildings were demolished, and the power station severely damaged, out of the complex cluster of structures comprising this third largest operating refinery in Axis Europe.

Spitfires of the Balkan Air Force yesterday attacked the Haumac monastery, now used by the Germans for a divisional headquarters in Dalmatia, and carried out offensive sweeps over eastern Greece, where railway locomotives were attacked. (PRO)

ITALIAN CAMPAIGN IS UNITED NATIONS OPERATION

LONDON, August 8 — The Italian campaign has been perhaps the most completely United Nations operation yet, said Ministry of Information circular issued here today.

«General Alexander's Allied Armies in Italy comprise the 8th Army under Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese, the 5th Army under Lieutenant General Mark Clark, and certain other formations.

«Although a complete analysis cannot be made of Allied armies, recent releases have mentioned eight U. S. divisions; one French corps, including two African divisions; and six United Kingdom divisions, together with two Indian divisions; one New Zealand division, one South African division, the Canadian Corps, and the Polish Corps.

«The 8th Army at present is operating on about four-fifths of the total front. It is a perfectly coordinated all-Empire force comprising, apart from the Polish Corps, approximately half United Kingdom troops and half Empire troops. Regiments mentioned in releases have included 104 United Kingdom regiments, 32 Canadian, one Newfoundland, and 22 Indian regiments.

GERMANS STILL HOLD FLORENCE

WITH THE 8th ARMY, August 8 — Ponte Vecchio is now the only one of Florence's six famous bridges across the Arno which has not been destroyed by the Germans. This is now the only span between South Florence, liberated by the Allies three days ago, and Florence proper, to which the Germans are tenaciously clinging.

From end to end the bridge is only some 75 yards long, and an extraordinary position has been created. Allied troops on the south bank are not firing across the river, but the Germans with fixed machine guns, are covering all approaches and unleashing bursts of fire at any movement on the Allied side.

A UNN correspondent approached the bridge with care, skirting the piles of rubble of buildings demolished by the Germans to block the bridge approaches. Near the bridge he glimpsed the green shuttered houses in which German snipers are ensconsed. The shops on either side of the bridge have been scattered, and the bridge itself covered by automatic fire. The Germans shoot at the slightest movement.

Just before the correspondent arrived at the bridge entrance, a small child unthinkingly ran out into the road and was shot down. The mother and father, who ran to rescue the child, were also, in turn, butchered. «The whole situation,» said the correspondent, «is dreamlike.»

South Florence civilians had a more peaceful night on Sunday night, for German long-range shelling was less persistent. Nevertheless, it was a wakeful night filled with miles north of France's great Mediterranean port, and a center of traffic from east and west, as well as from the north, was also hit and its center span tumbled into the Rhone River. The fourth rail structure hit, 75 miles north of Marseilles on the River, also received direct bursts.

«Italy is the only major front where Allied manpower is limited. The Russians have a superiority of three or four to one, and in Normandy the Allies must ultimately dispose of considerable superiority, but the Italian campaign is restricted by the needs of build-up for the Western Front during the last 12 months. Even when the break-through was achieved in May against immensely strong natural positions, the attacking force barely was equal in numbers to the defenders.

«The numerical superiority now achieved is due solely to the fact that General Alexander has annihilated considerable German forces, which cannot be replaced to any appreciable extent.

«In view of these facts, and despite the difficulties of the terrain, a series of mountain gaps and valleys ideal for delaying and defensive action, Alexander's offensive carried Allied troops 75 miles from Cassino to Rome and 145 miles form Rome to Florence.» (OWI)

US PRESS ON NAZI VANDALISM IN FLORENCE

WASHINGTON, August 8 — The New York World Telegram, in an editorial Monday, on Florence said that if the worlds greatest art center escapes destruction, it will be despite the German vandals.

« Though the streets of the city are of minor military importance to the Germans, they are needlessly shelling and destroying as they retreat. »

A United Press front dispatch said the Germans were firing their biggest guns into the very heart of the Museum area. « It is not that the Germans are ignorant of art values. On the contrary, they steal masterpieces wherever they can. But that which they cannot cart off as booty, they want to destroy. » (OWI)

YUGOSLAV, GREEK PARTISANS CAPTURE TOWN

LONDON, August 8 — Yugoslav Partisans, in cooperation with Greek units, have crossed the Yugoslav-Greek frontier and have taken Edessa, an industrial town of about 20,000 inhabitants lying northwest of Salonika, it was reported in Marshal Tito's communique broadcast from his headquarters.

In Dalmatia, fierce fighting is going on in all sectors.

In Slavonia, an enemy force was thrown back, while a freight train carrying war material was destroyed on the Belgrade-Novi line. In all, one locomotive and eight cars were destroyed.

In Slovenia, partisans have occupied a town and captured its German garrison commander.

In Serbia, heavy losses have been inflicted on enemy forces in the Ibar Valley, and one of the most important communication lines — the Kraljevo-Skoplje road and rail line — was cut.

In Central Bosnia, Yugoslav units captured the town of Prnjavor, and in Croatia partisans continue attacks on German communications. (OWI)

RN AND RAF HARASS NAZIS IN BALKANS

LONDON, August 8 — British air and naval forces operating in the Dalmatian Islands are making it increasingly hard for the Germans to maintain their communications and supply routes along the Yugoslavia coast, a Reuter correspondent said in a dispatch today from Adriatic waters.

He wrote: « Every day or night, RAF fighter-bombers or units of the Royal Navy are out combing these island waters for enemy shipping. Targets have become steadily scarcer through the summer months, partly because the German garrisons in the Adriatic do not need so much maintenance during the crop-bearing periods as in the wintertime, but, more significantly, because a large toll has been taken of the Germans in the Adriatic, and what now moves does so mostly under the cover of darkness.

« In one flotilla of light naval forces in Dalmatian waters, one skipper has not come in contact with any German vessels on his last six trips, while another's boat has been in action only three times this year, although out very frequently. It can be assumed that German activity would be considerably more if these patrols were not regularly maintained. » (Reuter)

« GREAT DANGERS SURMOUNTED » IN FAR EAST

NEW DELHI, August 8 — Prime Minister Churchill, in a message to Viscount Wavell, Viceroy of India, said with reference to the Far Eastern war, « The fight will still be hard, but great dangers have been surmounted. »

Churchill's message was in reply to Viscount Wavell's message of congratulations on Allied victories in Normandy and Italy.

Referring to the accomplishments of Indian troops, Churchill said: « We are determined to keep the horrors of a Japanese invasion from India. » (PWB)

ALLIES RESUME ADVANCE IN NEW GUINEA

PEARL HARBOR, August 8 — Japanese forces cornered on Guam Island are being subjected to continuous pressure by United States Marines.

A communiqué from Admiral Nimitz' headquarters said today that one-third of the Japanese-held northern tip of the island has been brought under American control by an advance of nearly three miles on the central sector of the island front. The American line is now anchored near Haputo Point, on the west coast, and at Umuna Point, on the east.

General MacArthur's communiqué from Advanced Allied Headquarters in New Guinea said that American troops renewed their advance against Japanese forces trapped east of Aitape, in British New Guinea, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Previous reports from this sector spoke of repeated Japanese attempts to break through the trap drawn around them by American and Australian forces. Today's communiqué implied that these attacks failed, and that Allied forces are now closing in on the Japanese cut off from reinforcements and supplies.

General MacArthur's communiqué also announced the dropping of 30 tons of bombs on Yap Island. The communiqué said: « The Yap Island air base appears to have been neutralized by our continuous attacks. »

FIRES RAGE IN TENGCHUNG

CHUNGKING, August 8 — Chinese troops are preparing for the final assault to liquidate Japanese remnants in Tengchung, key to the completion of the new Ledo-Burma Road, while fires from seven Allied air attacks rage in the heart of the city, today's communique said.

Chinese forces inside the southwest wall repulsed Japanese counter-attacks, and other Chinese units consolidated their positions at the northeast wall.

Three more Chinese divisions, American trained and equipped, have arrived at the Yunnan front, making five Chinese divisions in all.

North of Taungni, the Allies captured another village, Nampadaung, Tuesday's communique announced. In the Kabaw Valley, patrols from Tamu have reached eastwards across the Yu Yu River without finding any Japanese battle formation.

With the capture of Myitkyina, the Allies now have a long, secure front well into North Burma. From this, General Stilwell can work south, and southwest toward central Burma.

The only sizeable forces now ahead of General Stilwell are at Bhamo, and along the railway and south of Taungni. Myitkyina already has been developed into an important forward Allied air base, where fighter planes have been centered for more than a month.

Reviewing the successes of Chinese troops in Burma, General Chang Tung Kuo, their deputy commander, said

JAP NAVY WILL FIGHT ONLY IN HOME WATERS

WASHINGTON, August 8 — In one of the most defensive statements it has ever made, Radio Tokio told the Japanese people Friday that the Japanese Navy will not fight except to defend the homeland and the Japanese inner sea supply line.

The broadcast said:

« Why does Japan not make an all-out attack against the present operations? The Japanese naval theory is, that the Japanese combined fleet, which is the protection of the very life of Japan, will enter into a naval battle only in waters comparatively close to the mainland. »

In a broadcast picked up in London on « Imperial Day » the Japanese Prime Minister, General Kuniaki Koiso, said:

« Our empire has come to be confronted by national difficulties of unprecedented seriousness. In the two years and nine months since the outbreak of war, the enemy, by pressing internal and external developments, have encroached upon the Marianas in an attempt to obtain a quick decision in the war, and to present the appearance as if they were to strike at our homeland in a single blow. »

After his broadcast, General Koiso, accompanied by various ministers of the army and navy, visited shrines « to pay homage and reaffirm their determination to bring the war to a victorious end. » (OWI)

General MacArthur's communiqué also announced the dropping of 30 tons of bombs on Yap Island. The communiqué said: « The Yap Island air base appears to have been neutralized by our continuous attacks. »

FIRES RAGE IN TENGCHUNG

CHUNGKING, August 8 — Chinese troops are preparing for the final assault to liquidate Japanese remnants in Tengchung, key to the completion of the new Ledo-Burma Road, while fires from seven Allied air attacks rage in the heart of the city, today's communique said.

Chinese forces inside the southwest wall repulsed Japanese counter-attacks, and other Chinese units consolidated their positions at the northeast wall.

Three more Chinese divisions, American trained and equipped, have arrived at the Yunnan front, making five Chinese divisions in all.

North of Taungni, the Allies captured another village, Nampadaung, Tuesday's communique announced. In the Kabaw Valley, patrols from Tamu have reached eastwards across the Yu Yu River without finding any Japanese battle formation.

With the capture of Myitkyina, the Allies now have a long, secure front well into North Burma. From this, General Stilwell can work south, and southwest toward central Burma.

The only sizeable forces now ahead of General Stilwell are at Bhamo, and along the railway and south of Taungni. Myitkyina already has been developed into an important forward Allied air base, where fighter planes have been centered for more than a month.

Reviewing the successes of Chinese troops in Burma, General Cheng Tung Kuo, their deputy commander, said they had advanced more than 160 miles, taken more than 4,000 square miles of territory, and inflicted more than 30,00 casualties upon the Japanese. The crack Japanese 18th Division had been annihilated after having been reinforced 12 times. (OWI - BBC)

AIR MARSHAL BOYD DEAD

LONDON, August 8— The sudden death on August 5 of Air Marshal Owen Tudor Boyd, one of the high British officers who escaped an Italian prison camp when Italy surrendered to the Allies, was announced today by his family, stated a United Press message.

Boyd, together with General Sir Richard O'Connor and Lieut. General Philip Neame, made the escape from Italy after he had been captured when his plane was forced down in Sicily while he was on his way to a new command in the Middle East. The cause of his death and the nature of his duties since returning to England were not announced. (UP)

GENERALS SENTENCED IN ANTI-HITLER PLOT

LONDON, August 8 — The German News Agency announced today that the people's court of Heinrich Himmler, after a two-day trial, passed sentences on eight army officers, including Field Marshal von Witzleben and three generals.

The chief Reich prosecutor Pautz demanded the death penalty for all of the accused. The German dispatch stated that the sentences had already been carried out, and that the accused had been hanged.

Goebbels' news service for the troops, Front und Heimat, threatens similar treatment to members of the Free German committee in Moscow. Previously, there was a ban on any mention of the Free German committee and the league of German officers in Moscow.

The German dispatch said that the trial took place in the Berlin Supreme Court before the first session of the people's court. Eight of the accused were led into court by police officials. They wore no uniforms. The dispatch said:

«Field Marshal von Witzleben was the first to enter the dock. Colonel General Hoeppner, who was expelled from the army for cowardice in the field in 1942, sat next to him. Major General Stieff was nervously fingering his collar, while the other accused officers stared in front of them.

«The proceedings began with a statement by the president as to the chief Reich prosecutor's charges on former Field Marshal von Witzleben, Colonel General Hoeppner, Major General Stieff, Lieutenant von Hagen, Lieutenant General von Hase, and Lieutenant Colonel Bernardis. Also in the dock were former Captain Klausing and former Lieutenant Count von Wartenburg.

«When the president called von Witzleben, he was about to raise his arm to give a German salute when the president sharply reprimanded him. Stating the case, the chief Reich prosecutor said that in the summer of 1944, the accused formed a part of a minor group of conspirators with the object of treacherously assassinating the Fuehrer in order, subsequently, to foment internal revolution and to take over the Army and the State and then capitulate shamefully to the enemy.»

Earlier Attempt

The German News Agency said that the conspirators had planned an earlier attempt on Hitler's life some time ago, but the attempt was frustrated. A new plot was arranged in which Count Staffenburg was to carry the bomb into Hitler's room in a briefcase.

One of the defendents admitted that on two occasions before the actual attempt took place, Count Staffenburg took the explosive into Hitler's presence. The judge asked why it had not been detonated, and the answer was «because Himmler was not present and he was to have been blown up too.»

It was announced tonight by the German News Agency that five further persons to be expelled from the German Army are to be tried by the people's court. They are: Intelligence General Felgiebel; Major General von Tresckow; general staff Colonel Hensen; general staff Major Hayessen; Lieutenant Count von der Schulenburg. (Reuter)

CIVILIANS NOT TO RIDE IN ARMY VEHICLES

ROME, August 8 — Allied military authorities today appealed to the civilian population not to ask for transportation in passing army vehicles.

The appeal to civilians is based on the fact that army drivers are under strict orders from the War Department not to pick up persons other than members of the armed forces. Such drivers are subject to discipline and penalties for violation of this order.

Major Dan McMillan, Provost Marshal of the Rome Area Allied Command, said that the order is being enforced with ever-increasing vigor. Military police have been instructed to be extra vigilant, particularly on highways, to enforce the order. Unauthorized civilian passengers are summarily put out of the vehicles, and the driver's superiors are informed of the breach of regulations.

Authorities also reminded the general public that circulation of civilians north of Rome into the forward army areas is prohibited by army orders. Civilians traveling without proper authorization in such zones are subject to penalties themselves. The authorities warned that no one should set out for areas north of Rome without a permit. An extremely limited number of persons are authorized from time to time to travel in that direction, but they must first visit the AMG travel control office in the Questura Building. (UNN)

MINISTERS STUDY FARMING AND FOOD PROBLEMS

ROME, August 8 — With Prime Minister Bonomi presiding, the inter-ministerial committee on farm, cattle, and food problems met for the first time today here in Rome to begin its work. Minister of Agriculture Fausto Gullo reported on plans being worked out with the help of the Allies for the revival of Italian agriculture.

Meanwhile, reports from the country indicate growing success of the Granaries of the People, and intensification of penalties against those grain producers who fail to enter into this nation-wide harvesting plan.

From Naples it was reported that more than one-third of the grain expected by the Granaries of the People has now been turned in.

First reports from Sardinia in the wheat gathering are now coming in.

At Cagliari, the courts have levied heavy fines upon four growers who withheld portions of their grain crops from the Granai del Popolo.

In Sicily, the new film on the Granai del Popolo has had its first showing in Palermo.

BRITISH LIBERALS OUTLINE THEIR PEACE POLICY

LONDON, August 8 — Cardinal principles and proposals for dealing with Germany after the war were outlined today in a report issued by the British Liberal Party Committee, headed by the Earl of Perth, former Secretary General of the League of Nations.

The first proposal is that Germany must not be allowed to establish such military force as will permit her to make further aggression, and the second is that she must not be treated worse than other nations as regards finance, economic, social, and labor questions.

The Liberals' plan includes total occupation of the whole of Germany for a time, with total disarmament and control of war potentials as necessary preliminaries. But it attaches deep significance to the problem of effecting a change of heart and mind in the German people, and curing their mental illness of the past 12 years.

This mental rehabilitation would be guided by a specially-appointed commissioner for education, who would have close acquaintance with the pro-Nazi German mentality, as well as high educational skill. The report calls for trials of all war criminals within six months of the Armistice, and the restitution of loot pillaged from occupied countries. (Reuter)

AGREEMENT ON POST-WAR SHIPPING POLICY

LONDON, August 8 — Eight Allied nations have agreed on a policy regarding shipping in the immediate post-war period, it was announced tonight by the Foreign Office. The nations signing the agreement are the United States, the United Kingdom, Belgium, Canada, Greece, the Netherlands, Norway, and Poland. Observers represented Denmark and the French Committee of National Liberation.

The Foreign Office announcement stated that 'the eight governments ' have declared as a common responsibility the provision of shipping for all military and other tasks necessary for and arising out of the completion of the war in Europe and the Far East, and for supplying all liberated areas, as well as the United Nations generally and territories. Existing machinery to control ships and employment is to be adjusted to implement the declaration. Arrangements will not extend beyond six months after general suspension of hostilities in Europe or the Far East. » (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 8 — Today's communique:

LAND: Activity on the whole front of the Allied Armies in Italy during the past 24 hours has been confined to active patrolling and artillery engagements.

AIR: Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked synthetic oil plants at Blechhammer in Silesia. Other heavy bombers attacked oil installations and an airfield in Yugoslavia.

Tactical aircraft attacked enemy communications and other military objectives in Northern Italy, the battle area, Yugoslavia, and southern France.

In these operations, 29 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 22 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 2,000 sorties.

Last night, heavy and medium bombers attacked the Szombathely airdrome near Budapest. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 8 — Today's communiqué:

LAND: The largest attack against the western sector since D-Day was launched by the enemy on Sunday night on a front extending from Mortain to Sourdeval. At least four German armored divisions were employed in the drive. Mortain has now changed hands for the third time and is now held by Allied troops.

The enemy penetrated some five kilometers in the area of Cherence le Roussel, where a tank battle is in progress. Armor on both sides is involved.

Another enemy penetration has been made to Saint Barthelemy.

More than 100 tanks and 90 vehicles were destroyed in a series of attacks in the Mortain area by our fighter-bombers and rocket-firing aircraft. Other tanks and trucks were damaged.

In the Brittany Peninsula, Allied troops have freed Chateauneuf, and fighting is in progress outside Saint Malo, which is now cut off.

Saint Brieuc has been taken, and the advance is continuing beyond the town.

No changes are reported in the areas of Brest and Lorient.

Chateaubriant has been freed.

Sporadic fighting continues over the peninsula.

In Normandy, the Allies have taken Vire.

Across the river one bridgehead was established yesterday in the neighborhood of Grimbosq. Counter-attacks against this bridgehead and further west were repulsed.

In the Mount Pincon area, mopping-up of ground won is nearly completed.

Allied troops are attacking south of Caen.

AIR: Heavy bombers in very great strength attacked the hinge of the enemy's defense line just south of Caen before midnight last night. The attack was in clear weather, and a great weight of bombs was dropped on targets indicated by our ground forces.

Early in the day, strong forces of heavy bombers operating in small units attacked fuel storage points, bridges, and rail targets in a wide area northeast and east of Paris, and southeast of Bordeaux.

Fighter-bombers operating east and southeast of Paris destroyed 32 locomotives, 350 railway cars, and 80 military vehicles.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ.AAI, August 8 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communiqué:

The Garibaldi Brigade in the Friuli sector has carried out a succession of battles with large Nazi-Fascist forces. The campaign, particularly furious in some stages, lasted 10 days. The same unit destroyed important installations on a high tension transmission line in the vicinity of Pontebba. The enemy suffered losses totalling 179 killed and 300 wounded.

The Resistance movement in Liguria has increased in strength. Leaders of the clandestine struggle, instead of having to urge the patriots on, are often compelled to restrain them to avoid untimely or rash acts.

On August 2, during a false air raid alarm in Genoa, patriots destroyed three million machine gun bullets.

Patriots have clashed with the enemy in the Province of Modena.

A number of enemy vehicles were destroyed by patriots in the provinces of Cuneo and Como.

Several operations in Val Sesia and in Val Anzasca have been successfully carried out. Patriot units, which suffered losses, are now regrouping. The civilian population has been subjected to brutal treatment by the Nazi-Fascists. Many women, children and old men have been massacred and numerous villages pillaged.

In the Guardistillo sector, German troops have suffered losses through patriot activity. Being unable to avenge themselves, the Germans executed 74 civilians.

At Massa Marittima, 26 hostages were taken after the patriots harassed enemy movements. Such retaliatory action has only served to increase the hostility of the population and the courage of the patriots. Many relatives of the victims are hastening to swell the ranks of the patriots vowing to vindicate the dead.

second line, with high losses inflicted upon them. Farther to the south, armoured divisions of the Army and the Waffen SS threw back the enemy to the west on both sides of Mortain, despite stubborn resistance; enemy counter-attacks failed.

In the area to the east of Laval, enemy pressure increased.

In Brittany, our security troops smashed enemy spearheads and then disengaged themselves, in accordance to orders, in the sectors of Brest and Lorient. There is fierce fighting for St. Malo.

During the night preceding August 7, an enemy destroyer in the Seine Bay was heavily damaged by German torpedo hits.

Nineteen planes were shot down in aerial combats over the Normandy and the occupied western territory.

In the French area, 80 terrorists were wiped out in action.

The heavy fire of the V-1 continues to be directed against London and its outskirts.

In Italy, there was no fighting activity of importance yesterday.

In the East, repeated Soviet attacks to the northwest of Mielec failed. Northwest of Baranov, strong enemy forces penetrated into our positions; reserves immediately began a counter-attack; heavy fighting is in progress.

In Lithuania, renewed Soviet breakthrough attempts north of the Niemen were smashed, and 60 enemy tanks were destroyed. North of Birsen and north of the Dvina, a defensive battle of our troops against the Soviet forces which effected a penetration is still in progress. On the rest of the front to Lake Pskov, all Bolshevik attacks failed with sanguinary losses for them.

Yesterday, North-american bombers attacked a few localities in Upper Silesia.

Last night, enemy nuisance planes flew over southeastern Germany.

German and Hungarian aerial defense forces shot down 28 enemy aircraft. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

German Overseas Stations: In Brittany, American forces have been joined by units of General Patton's 3d Army. Their advance is in three directions — along the coast southeast of St. Malo, toward the upper reaches of the Loire, and from Avranches in a southeasterly direction. The British front is comparatively quiet. The Luftwaffe attacked the American assembly area for the sectors of Avranches, Lessay, and St. Hiver. Up to the present, Allied tank losses on different sectors have amounted to 3,000. On the Italian front, American artillery continued to shell the town of Pisa, destroying residential districts and historic buildings. Enemy thrusts were repulsed southeast of Florence. Lively reconnaissance and shock troop activity took place in other sectors of this front. Dismissals of officers and civil servants of pro-Fascist sympathies continue in Southern Italy. Reports from North Africa state that the De Gaullists are meeting with resistance on the part of nationally-minded Frenchmen.

Transocean and DNB: Fighting on the invasion front increased in violence. The British 2d Army has launched the expected large-scale attack near Caen. The Canadian 1st Army crossed the Orne towards the east, supported by the heaviest air bombardment of the campaign. The American 3d Army attempted, without success, to capture the four main German bases in Brittany. The important naval bases are still in German hands. Since the beginning of the campaign, the Allies have lost 34 destroyers in the Seine Bay, and 30 others have been severely damaged. Re-

A number of enemy vehicles were destroyed by patriots in the provinces of Cuneo and Como.

Several operations in Val Sesia and in Val Anzasca have been successfully carried out. Patriot units, which suffered losses, are now regrouping. The civilian population has been subjected to brutal treatment by the Nazi-Fascists. Many women, children and old men have been massacred and numerous villages pillaged.

In the Guardistillo sector, German troops have suffered losses through patriot activity. Being unable to avenge themselves, the Germans executed 74 civilians.

At Massa Marittima, 26 hostages were taken after the patriots harassed enemy movements. Such retaliatory action has only served to increase the hostility of the population and the courage of the patriots. Many relatives of the victims are hastening to swell the ranks of the patriots vowing to vindicate the dead.

The attempt on the part of German soldiers to force miners to work in Germany has induced many miners to join the patriot underground movement. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 8 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

After an artillery barrage lasting several hours, the enemy this morning again began his attack south and southeast of Caen: fierce fighting is in progress. West of the Orne, the enemy launched strong local attacks which were crushed. Southwest of Vire, and to the east of Avranches, the North-Americans continued their breakthrough attempts on a wide front with large quantities of material and strong aerial support. In heavy fighting, which lasted until the evening hours, they were repelled in front of our of Mielec failed. Northwest of Baranov, strong enemy forces penetrated into our positions; reserves immediately began a counter-attack; heavy fighting is in progress.

In Lithuania, renewed Soviet breakthrough attempts north of the Niemen were smashed, and 60 enemy tanks were destroyed. North of Birsen and north of the Dvina, a defensive battle of our troops against the Soviet forces which effected a penetration is still in progress. On the rest of the front to Lake Pskov, all Bolshevik attacks failed with sanguinary losses for them.

Yesterday, North-american bombers attacked a few localities in Upper Silesia.

Last night, enemy nuisance planes flew over southeastern Germany.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

German Overseas Stations: In Brittany, American forces have been joined by units of General Patton's 3d Army. Their advance is in three directions — along the coast southeast of St. Malo, toward the upper reaches of the Loire, and from Avranches in a southeasterly direction. The British front is comparatively quiet. The Luftwaffe attacked the American assembly area for the sectors of Avranches, Lessay, and St. Hiver. Up to the present, Allied tank losses on different sectors have amounted to 3,000. On the Italian front, American artillery continued to shell the town of Pisa, destroying residential districts and historic buildings. Enemy thrusts were repulsed southeast of Florence. Lively reconnaissance and shock troop activity took place in other sectors of this front. Dismissals of officers and civil servants of pro-Fascist sympathies continue in Southern Italy. Reports from North Africa state that the De Gaullists are meeting with resistance on the part of nationally-minded Frenchmen.

Transocean and DNB: Fighting on the invasion front increased in violence. The British 2d Army has launched the expected large-scale attack near Caen. The Canadian 1st Army crossed the Orne towards the east, supported by the heaviest air bombardment of the campaign. The American 3d Army attempted, without success, to capture the four main German bases in Brittany. The important naval bases are still in German hands. Since the beginning of the campaign, the Allies have lost 34 destroyers in the Seine Bay, and 30 others have been severely damaged. Reports from the invasion front emphasise the disappointment of the Allies at their unfriendly reception by the inhabitants. The centre of fighting in the East continues to be around the Vistula crossings. In the battle area of Mielec-Baranov, both sides have brought up reinforcements. The postponement of the Allied Conference in Washington, upon Soviet request, is looked upon in German circles as evidence that the Soviets hope to strengthen their case by gaining time.

Facist Radio: Allied attempts to cross the Arno in the Rovetano area have been repulsed. They have made slight progress in Valdarno towards Pontassieve. Patrol clashes have occurred near Città di Castello and San Sepolcro, and in the coastal sectors.

U S. FORCES CROSS MAYENNE RIVER

SHAEF, August 7 — The fate of the German 7th Army is today in the balance as five American spearheads have thrust eastward across the Mayenne River toward Paris. With the loss of this naturally strong north-south line, the Germans have little hope of establishing a front anywhere west of Alençon and Le Mans.

The latest crossing of the Mayenne River is at Domfront, on the Varenne tributary of the Mayenne River. Patrols have reached the city of Domfront, and have crossed the river just west of it, putting the Allied forces 135 miles from Paris.

Slightly to the northwest of Domfront, the Germans began a large-scale counter-offensive on a 7½ mile front, and have recaptured Mortain, according to a Reuter and gathered more than 6,000 French Patriots has been awarded the Croix de la Liberation on the recommendation by General de Gaulle.

In the port city of Lorient, it was reported earlier today that the German garrison sent a message to the American force asking it to accept their surrender. However, no official announcement of the capture of Lorient has yet been given.

A number of new airfields, many of them with all-metal runways, have already fallen, or shortly will fall into Allied hands in Brittany. Some of them were the great air bases once used by the giant FU-200 commerce raiders on their long flights over the Atlantic.

In other parts of Brittany, Reuter reported, German garrisons are surrendering. They have been demoralized by the rapid advance which has isolated them in the peninsula. Some 13,300 prisoners have already been taken, and a BBC report stated that the Germans risk losing about 75,000 men who make up coastal, communication, and anti-aircraft battalions. Half-hearted attempts to evacuate troops by sea have been smashed by Allied naval squadrons patrolling the coastal areas.

On the northern sector of the Allied front, the British have launched a large-scale offensive and have crossed the River Orne on a two-mile front above Thury-Harcourt. Late dispatches tonight stated that the bridgehead east of the river is now firmly established, and that two German counter-attacks have been repulsed.

British Cross Orne

British troops which forced the river threaten the whole hinge of the German line, but the Germans have strong prepared defenses in depth, and these must have been reorganized and strengthened when it became obvious that the Allies, advancing down the western bank, were poised for a flanking move.

The crossing, supported by a large number of anti-tank guns, was made five miles behind Rommel's May-sur-Orne to Reccquaincourt line which faces the Canadians. The push has already engulfed La Bagotier and La Moissonnier, and has cut the Faubourg de Vaucelles-Thury-Harcourt road.

British forces also attacked the Mont Pinson feature, four miles south of Aunay. They advanced behind a curtain of rockets fired into German positions by Typhoon fighters and were supported by tanks. Rocket firing aircraft destroyed 59 German tanks and many armored cars. The Germans had concentrated all possible troops and material from the Bois de Homme and Oudefontaine areas for an attempted stand on Mont Pinson. Small, isolated pockets of resistance remain north of the hill.

Vire has been liberated. Strong resistance continues in Estray, eight miles northeast of Vire, but the town has been by-passed in the eastward advance.

An Allied spokesman here stated that in the past two weeks the Allies have liberated about 20,000 square miles of northern France, or nearly one-tenth of continental

Slightly to the northwest of Domfront, the Germans began a large-scale counter-offensive on a 7½ mile front, and have recaptured Mortain, according to a Reuter dispatch. Another German armored column passed through St. Barthelmy, about 2½ miles north of Mortain on the road to Juvigny.

This new German counter-attack is a desperate effort to sever American forces speeding into Brittany and eastward toward Paris. The largest coordinated German offensive yet launched in the American sector was undertaken without air assistance. The enemy spearhead was continually attacked by the 9th USAAF and RAF Typhoons which destroyed 88 German tanks by rocket fire.

The attack was launched with strong armored forces almost due west, in the direction of Cherence le Roussel, and has penetrated to a depth of three miles. American forces still hold the high ground surrounding Mortain, which is in a valley. The heaviest fighting is in the Cherence area, where between 30 and 40 German tanks are engaged with American armor.

In the Brittany Peninsula, American forces have occupied Saint Brieuc, 35 miles west of Dinan. Guingamp, further to the west on the main highway, has also been taken. In the center of the peninsula, an armored column took the town of Huelgoat on a secondary road leading into Brest. The town of Auray, between Vannes and Lorient, has also been occupied. Fighting still continues in the area of Saint Malo, which is now completely cut off.

openings for more and more fighter-plane strips. An Allied general recently declared, said the correspondent, that engineers would keep on building airfields «all the way to Berlin.» He wrote that the stream of supplies on the way up to the fronts «makes you stand still and stare.»

A BBC correspondent with the American forces in Brittany wrote: «It is the completeness of the materials that staggers you. It is a mechanical army down to the last detail, an army that is moving forward at a tremendous pace.» This correspondent contrasted the American vehicles with the ramshackle cars, trucks, and carts, with the horses dead between the traces, lying about on the roads.

A New York Times correspondent wrote that the boldness of the American tactics in the southerly and easterly drives had been vindicated by their success. The armored division, he wrote, had been the decisive factor. First of all, aircraft harried enemy positions and broke up convoys, and brought back valuable information. Artillery and tank guns knocked out strongpoints. Then, the armor broke through, infantry mopped up towns captured by the tanks, and cleared minefields.

«Our armor,» he wrote, «attacked at full speed, followed by the infantry, without worrying about the security of its flanks or slowing down the rate of advance. There has been no regular German line for the past eight days. The penetration has been so swift and deep that the Germans wouldn't be able to organise counter-attacks on the American flanks, since by the time they could get ready to deliver the blows the flanks would no longer exist.» (Reuter - AP)

INDEPENDENT CANADIAN ARMY IN NORMANDY

CANADIAN ARMY HQ, FRANCE, August 7 — The 1st Canadian Army left the 2nd British Army on July 31, according to the Associated Press, and today for the first time in Canadian history, the Dominion has an independent army formation in the field.

The French front now has the American 1st Army on the right, the British 2nd Army in the center, and the Canadian 1st Army on the left, the Associated Press said.

The Canadian Army is complete in every detail.

In Italy, a Canadian Corps is fighting as part of the British 8th Army.

HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK AIRCRAFT PLANT

MOSCOW, August 7 — The Eastern Command of the United States Strategic Air Force announced here tonight that heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF, escorted by long-range Mustang fighter planes, today bombed the German aircraft factory at Rahmel, 10 miles northwest of Gdynia, and then went on and landed at American bases in Russia. Crew members reported the target area well covered.

Today's mission was the 20th operation in which Eastern Command bases in Russia have been used since American planes first landed in the Soviet Union on 2 June.

A sharp decrease in the severity of flying bomb attacks on England has resulted from the destruction of 56 flying-bomb storage depots in northern France, the British Air Ministry announced today.

The heavy bomber assaults that wiped them out also heavily damaged 44 others.

Flying torpedoes exploded intermittently in London and southern England Sunday as rescuers dug the dead and injured out of debris caused by Saturday night's flying-bomb attacks.

northwest of Dreux, and north of Le Mans and Courtenin.

The bombers and escorting fighters met no opposition, and all returned.

In a furious battle over Hamburg yesterday one American pilot set an 8th Fighter Command record by shooting down six German aircraft within a few minutes.

From Sunday's operations, 24 heavy bombers and nine fighters are missing, the USAAF communique said Sunday night, while planes of the 8th Fighter Command destroyed 33 German planes in aerial combat.

The bombers encountered intense flak in the Berlin sector, and moderate to intense anti-aircraft fire in the Kiel and Hamburg regions.

Scores of enemy fighters rose to meet the attacking formations on the way into Germany, and again as the bombers were returning to their bases.

Sunday night, RAF Mosquitoes attacked a synthetic oil plant at Castrop Rauxel, in the Ruhr district. In bright moonlight, one pilot saw fire and smoke rising before he left, the Air Ministry said today.

Further information about the RAF daylight blow against German submarine lairs at Brest showed that five of the 16 Lancasters scored direct hits with six-ton bombs, instead of only three as reported earlier.

Following up this attack, RAF Lancasters with fighter escort made an assault Sunday evening with these 12,000-pound bombs on the submarine shelters at Lorient, one of the most important in the Brest Peninsula. (PRO)

GENERAL STEGMANN KILLED IN NORMANDY

WASHINGTON, August 7 — Major General Rudolph M. Stegmann has been killed on the French front, according to the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm Aftonbladet.

Stegmann was a holder of the Knight's Cross, and formerly an infantry commander on the Eastern Front. He was the eighth German general to be killed in action since the Allied landings in Normandy. (OWI)

GENERAL WALKER KILLED IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, August 7 — Brigadier General Nelson M. Walker, assistant commander of a U. S. Infantry Division, was killed while personally leading an assault on a German machine gun position in Normandy, an Associated Press report said in a delayed dispatch.

General Walker has been recommended for a posthumous Distinguished Service Cross. He had recently been awarded the Legion of Merit for his work in the Army's Plans and Training Section in Washington. (OWI)

GENERAL DE WITT RECEIVES NEW COMMAND

WASHINGTON, August 7 — Lieut. General John De Witt has been given an undisclosed command of the greatest importance somewhere in Europe according to a War Department announcement today.

He succeeds the late General Lesley McNair, who was killed in Normandy last month. The United States War Department had announced on July 14 that General McNair had been relieved of his command of the U. S. Army Ground Forces for «an important overseas assignment.» (Reuter)

ALLIED MASTER PLAN IN NORMANDY

LONDON, August 7 — Any tendency to look upon the present Normandy campaign as two distinct operations, British and American, takes no account of a master plan, essentially an Allied plan, which has come to fruition in every detail, said the London Times correspondent in Normandy.

The best the Germans could do Sunday was sporadic fire punctuated by fairly long lulls, the Associated Press reported. Saturday night a flying bomb killed 11 villagers at work in their gardens, and trapped others in several smashed houses. Many more caused multiple deaths Saturday night, the AP added.

Bright weather over the Straits gave the defenders a good score Sunday against the flying torpedoes.

Nazi fighter planes have appeared in increased strength recently to resist the Allied attacks on flying bomb installations, the Air Ministry said. The Germans have erected flak towers to help defend these depots.

RAF Lancasters that attacked a bomb depot north of Paris encountered 20 or 30 German fighters, which were beaten off, the AP said.

The 8th USAAF alone flew about 7,000 heavy bomber sorties in the last week. This was more than they flew February 6 to 12, when their attacks on enemy aircraft plants sealed the decline of the German Air Force, or in the week of July 16 to 22, when they assailed industrial targets in Germany, the United Press said.

Weather hampered operations over the French battle-front early yesterday, but as it improved, the air swarmed with planes supporting the ground troops.

LONDON, August 7 — Any tendency to look upon the present Normandy campaign as two distinct operations, British and American, takes no account of a master plan, essentially an Allied plan, which has come to fruition in every detail, said the London Times correspondent in Normandy.

Various manœuvres within a broad frame have been necessary to bring it about.

In a contest of wills, the correspondent said, the reactions of the enemy have played their part, but if the American forces are now racing across the Brittany Peninsula, it is because they were always intended to do so by an Allied plan designed to draw German strength against General Dempsey's army.

When the Americans launched their attack on Coutances, it became evident that the enemy hoped to hinge on Caumont, and it was thus to the British that the Caumont offensive fell yesterday after an incredibly swift regrouping of armour, considering the difficulties of the terrain. (PWB)

TENSE NAZI SUPPLY SITUATION IN FRANCE

1ST ARMY HQ, FRANCE, August 7 — The Germans' supply situation in France is «extremely tense», according to a letter written by General Hauser, commander of the Nazi 7th Army.

This letter, which was captured by Allied troops, admitted that there was a breakdown of German supplies. General Hauser urged that «even seemingly useless weapons and equipment be salvaged in an effort to repair damaged material, as few replacement parts are coming through.» (Reuter)

ATTLEE RETURNS FROM FRANCE

LONDON, August 7 — The British Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee, told a Daily Herald reporter about his recent two-day visit to Normandy. He said:

«The whole show in France is going very well indeed. I was greatly impressed by the courage and spirit of the French people. They greeted us with cheers and flags wherever we went, and were anxious to demonstrate their solidarity and inflexible faith in victory.»

Attlee said he was struck by the efficient atmosphere in the liberated area. Allied organisation was first-class, and everyone was full of confidence. (PWB)

ALLIES PLANNED TO TAKE BREST IN D-DAY PLUS 50

SHAEF, August 7 — The next two or three weeks may be the most critical of the war, a senior British general said in an interview with Doon Campbell, Reuter correspondent.

The Allied campaign in Normandy is going almost exactly on the schedule planned in London several months ago. The general said:

«We were supposed to get to Brest on D-Day plus 50. This did not include the complete cleaning up of the Brittany Peninsula — that was expected to take up to D-Day plus 60. That was the plan before February. Today is D-Day plus 62.»

General Montgomery's policy of building up large reserves before cracking through German defenses was backed by the general, who said: «While it meant that earlier stages of the campaign had to be slower, it is hoped that later stages may be quicker than expected. We have made contact with 35 German divisions, and as a result of recent operations, about 13 divisions have been virtually eliminated. From the remaining 22, approximately 11 are facing each army. We believe we have five panzer divisions against us, and about three against the Americans.

«One thing is certain — the Germans have decided to try to hold key points and ports. The enemy is pulling out into fortress areas. From a naval viewpoint, it means a major disaster for him if he loses the operational value of the Brittany ports and the whole of his naval strategy will have to be reoriented.» (Reuter)

RED ARMY CAPTURES BORISLAV AND SAMBOR

MOSCOW, August 7 — The great industrial oil centre of the western Ukraine, the town of Borislav, was today stormed and captured in a fierce battle by troops of the 4th Ukrainian Army, a special order issued by Marshal Stalin announced today.

Borislav is Poland's greatest oil centre, and produces 75 per cent of the country's total oil output. Italy-based heavy bombers of the 15 th USAAF were bombing in the vicinity of the town today, and hit two large synthetic oil refineries.

The order announcing Borislav's fall was the second of the day. An earlier one proclaimed the capture of the large railway junction and important enemy stronghold of Sambor, in the approaches to the Carpathian foothills, in which the last German resistance was crushed today when troops of the 1st Ukrainian Army broke through the defenses after stubborn fighting.

Vistula Bridgeheads Expanded

Sambor, which had a pre-war population of 22,000, stands on the main railway line between Lvov and Uzhorod, capital of sub-Carpathian Ruthenia, and is connected by another rail line to Nowy Sacz, 45 miles southeast of Cracow. The Dniester, which starts 20 miles away, runs through the town, and 20 miles to the northwest is the great oil centre of Drohobicz.

fell after all German resistance had been overcome. The town of Lubana was captured when Soviet forces continued their advance northwest of Rezekne (Rezhitsa), cutting the Dubinye-Lubana rail line and occupying many inhabited places.

There were no material changes on other sectors of the front, stated the communiqué. On all fronts yesterday, the Russians damaged or destroyed a total of 110 German tanks, and shot down 117 enemy planes.

Furious fighting continues in the streets of Warsaw between the Polish Patriot forces and the German garrison. A communiqué from General Bor, the commander of the Polish Underground, stated that patriot detachments have extended their hold on several parts of the city. The women of Warsaw are sharing in the battle. The Poles launched a counter-attack against German forces rushed in to the suburb near the Citadel on the Vistula River. Wilson Square and adjoining streets are held by the Poles, who have captured tanks and are sending them into action. In many parts of the capital, the Underground has installed loud-speakers which broadcast continual reports on the progress of the battle. The Germans have cleared all civilians from the Aleje Jerezolimskie, a traffic artery running west through the city to the Praga district over the Poniatowski Bridge. (Reuter - AP)

RUSSIANS CONSOLIDATING ON EAST PRUSSIA BORDER

LONDON, August 7 — On all active sectors of the Russian front, opposing armies are now locked in grim, exacting battles, said the Moscow correspondent of the London Times.

«The prizes at stake,» said the correspondent, «are great. They are: two trapped German armies; the sacred soil of East Prussia; the Polish capital; Cracow and Silesia beyond it, and the Carpathian passes.

«The Germans are going to yield none of these without fierce struggles.

«The summer campaign has probably reached its decisive moment. The Germans have added strength to all fronts except south of Lvov.

«East Prussia is being combed for extra men, and as German women and children stream westward, their menfolk are taken off farms and sent without training eastward to the Insterburg gap.

The Moscow correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says the Russians definitely do not seem to be in a hurry to begin the invasion of East Prussia. Although it is possible that forward elements have already crossed the Prussian border, the main Soviet forces are consolidating positions a few miles away from German territory, from where Russian artillery and air forces are reported softening up enemy defenses across the frontier. The Daily Telegraph correspondent added:

«According to prisoners taken (on this front) the Russian advance beyond the Niemen took the enemy completely by surprise. All preparations for the big push were carried out under cover of darkness. German scout planes frequently flew over the sector, but failed to observe any signs of intended attack... The enemy retreated more than 48 hours before he was able to make anything like a serious stand.» (Reuter)

RUSSIANS WILL KILL GERMAN LOVE FOR SWORD

MOSCOW, August 7 — Germans preparing already for World War III may as well save their breath, Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian journalist, warned them in the newspaper, Pravda.

We believe we have five panzer divisions against us, and about three against the Americans.

«One thing is certain — the Germans have decided to try to hold key points and ports. The enemy is pulling out into fortress areas. From a naval viewpoint, it means a major disaster for him if he loses the operational value of the Brittany ports and the whole of his naval strategy will have to be reoriented.» (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 7 — The great industrial oil centre of the western Ukraine, the town of Borislav, was today stormed and captured in a fierce battle by troops of the 4th Ukrainian Army, a special order issued by Marshal Stalin announced today.

Borislav is Poland's greatest oil centre, and produces 75 per cent of the country's total oil output. Italy-based heavy bombers of the 15 th USAAF were bombing in the vicinity of the town today, and hit two large synthetic oil refineries.

The order announcing Borislav's fall was the second of the day. An earlier one proclaimed the capture of the large railway junction and important enemy stronghold of Sambor, in the approaches to the Carpathian foothills, in which the last German resistance was crushed today when troops of the 1st Ukrainian Army broke through the defenses after stubborn fighting.

Sambor, which had a pre-war population of 22,000, stands on the main railway line between Lvov and Uzhorod, capital of sub-Carpathian Ruthenia, and is connected by another rail line to Nowy Sacz, 45 miles southeast of Cracow. The Dniester, which starts 20 miles away, runs through the town, and 20 miles to the northwest is the great oil centre of Drohobicz.

In heavy fighting today, Red Army troops expanded their bridgeheads over the left bank of the Vistula. Over 60 inhabited places were taken, including the railway station at Bodola. Soviet troops continue to pour across the river, despite all-out attempts by the depleted Luftwaffe to ston them. The Germans are reported to have been employing some of their best air squadrons in vain efforts to block the ferries. The great Soviet bridgehead was established 100 miles southeast of Warsaw, and has been widened to within 35 miles northeast of Cracow. According to AP reports today, it threatens to crack open the temporarily-stabilized German line in the area. The enemy have been counter-attacking persistantly against the dagger-shaped salient, sometimes as often as seven times in the day, writes a Pravda reporter. The crossing of the river by the Red Army was swift. The first Russians to force the ferry reached the banks at the same time as the retreating Germans, after a lightning march of 31 miles.

Elsewhere the Russian armies have continued to press forward on every offensive front. The Germans were forced back west and southwest of Schaulen (Shavli), and the Soviet drive overran the important road junctions of Kurneczaj and Szapkjany, with 50 other inhabited places, stated tonight's Soviet communiqué. Another 40 localities were taken by the Russians northwest of Kovno, and northwest and southwest of Bialystok, the towns of Knyszyn and Lapy

LONDON, August 7 — On all active sectors of the Russian front, opposing armies are now locked in grim, exacting battles, said the Moscow correspondent of the London Times.

«The prizes at stake,» said the correspondent, «are great. They are: two trapped German armies; the sacred soil of East Prussia; the Polish capital: Cracow and Silesia beyond it, and the Carpathian passes.

«The summer campaign has probably reached its decisive moment. The Germans have added strength to all fronts except south of Lvov.

«East Prussia is being combed for extra men, and as German women and children stream westward, their menfolk are taken off farms and sent without training eastward to the Insterburg gap.

The Moscow correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says the Russians definitely do not seem to be in a hurry to begin the invasion of East Prussia. Although it is possible that forward elements have already crossed the Prussian border, the main Soviet forces are consolidating positions a few miles away from German territory, from where Russian artillery and air forces are reported softening up enemy defenses across the frontier. The Daily Telegraph correspondent added:

«According to prisoners taken (on this front) the Russian advance beyond the Niemen took the enemy completely by surprise. All preparations for the big push were carried out under cover of darkness. German scout planes frequently flew over the sector, but failed to observe any signs of intended attack... The enemy retreated more than 48 hours before he was able to make anything like a serious stand.» (Reuter)

MOSCOW, August 7 — Germans preparing already for World War III may as well save their breath, Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian journalist, warned them in the newspaper, Pravda.

In his article, broadcast by Radio Moscow, he pointed out: «Every Red Army man knows that it is essential for us to stay in Berlin for a while.

«We want to teach the Germans to forget how to fight. We want to teach those who think that in 1964 they might do better than in 1944.

«We want to cross Germany with the sword in our hands, in order to kill German love for the sword for centuries to come. We want to get to their land, in order that they may never again get to ours.» (Reuter)

ITALIAN FRONT STATIC

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 7 — With 8th Army forces painstakingly mopping up the last pockets of enemy resistance south of the Arno, the Allied advance in Italy has come to a momentary halt along a 70-mile stretch of this outlying water barrier of the enemy's formidable Goth Line.

Although both 5th and 8th Army troops were in active contact with the enemy yesterday, and sharp patrol skirmishes occurred on both banks of the Arno around Florence, no major action occurred anywhere along either front.

German forces still clung grimly yesterday to high ground in the vicinity of the Gonfolina gorges, 10 miles west of Florence, and the high ridges southeast of the city, where the Arno twists sharply from the south to the west, but 8th Army forces had cleared most of the river's south banks from the confluence of the Pesa River to east of the city.

Although the communique declared that South African troops were in contact with the enemy on the north bank of the Arno within Florence, detailed reports stated that only reconnaissance patrols had so far crossed the river, and these had all returned to the south bank. The Germans were continuing to shell the Florence sector occupied by 8th Army forces, it was reported, but no indication was given that the Germans are actually subjecting to shellfire the southern part of the city itself, where the famed Pitti Palace and its galleries are located. Allied guns, it was specifically stated, are not shelling any part of the city of Florence whatsoever.

Apparently only small formations of enemy troops, mainly machine gunners spotted along the northern bank of the river, are in Florence itself. It was officially stated here, « There will be no need for the city itself to become a battlefield. »

West of Florence, the towns of Empoli and Montelupo are still noman's-land, with Allied patrols in and out of both localities.

In the Pratomagno Hill masses, enemy shell and mortar fire have slowed the advance of Indian troops. Leading elements are now some eight miles north and northeast of Arezzo, where they have consolidated their gains despite enemy counter-attacks. Further east, patrols entered the towns of Sansepolcro and San Giustino, in the upper Tiber Valley, and reported them clear of the enemy.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish and Italian forces of the 8th Army continued their advance in the face of a widespread enemy withdrawal. Troops of the Corps of Italian Liberation occupied the villages of Montale and Ostra Vetere, while Polish infantry and supporting tank forces have taken Santa Lucia and Ripe, and pushed a mile beyond Senegallia on the coast.

It was reported today that the total of German prisoners taken since the assault on Cassino is now 50,000.

Heavies Hit Silesia

Over 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators crossed the Alps to hit two synthetic oil plants at Blechhamor, 75 miles southeast of Breslau in Silesia, it was announced today.

Only a few enemy intereceptor planes were encountered, but there was heavy anti-aircraft fire over the targets.

The two synthetic oil plants which are about four miles apart, manufacture high grade gasoline. The southernmost of the two plants is the third largest refinery in Axis Europe.

Other forces of Liberators bombed oil installations northwest of Belgrade on the Danube River, and an airfield northeast of the city.

Southern France Struck

While Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers flew from dawn to dusk in attacks in northwestern Italy and southern France, strong forces of heavy bombers from Italy smashed at 14 military targets in southern France yesterday.

In slashing assaults on the French Riviera and the Rhone and the Var River valleys, which have engaged Mediterranean-based bombers for four days out of the past five, rail bridges, oil storage depots, airdromes, and naval installations have been struck. Throughout yesterday's extensive operations, no enemy aircraft attacked the bomber formations, and only three enemy fighters were encountered by escorting planes.

Both heavy bombers and medium bombers combined their attacks on five key bridges over the Rhone between Lyon and Marseilles, with medium bombers returning four temperary homes and lived in the most cramped conditions.

Water was supplied from one fountain only, and it was often a full-day assignment for one of the family to stand in line to obtain the family's water supply. Substantial food was almost non-existent and, on the whole, these people were living on the barest minimum. Bread and meat were entirely absent from their diet, and meals consisted mainly of a few vegetables, a little fruit, and pasta.

By general consent, they arranged private cooking facilities in the way of two or three bricks where fires were made.

Health conditions are still fairly good, however, an Italian doctor said, adding that if present conditions were prolonged, there would be cause for concern. (PWB)

20,600 GERMANS KILLED IN YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, August 7 — Today's Yugoslav communique said that offensive operations continue in Montenegro, eastern and central Bosnia and Croatia.

In the town of Novska, in Croatia, several railway cars were burned and a great quantity of war material destroyed.

An enemy train carrying gasoline and naphtha has been burned as the result of Allied bombing.

In the town of Cracac, in Croatia, an enemy column engaged in stealing the peasants' crops has been turned back by Patriot forces.

Lieut. General A. C. A. Jovanovitch, chief of the general staff of the National Liberation Army, said that German losses covering the period of the seventh German offensive in Yugoslavia were 20,600 dead, 16,000 wounded and 6,500 prisoners. A considerable amount of war material was also captured. (PWB)

AMERICANS MAKE FURTHER ADVANCES ON GUAM

ADVANCE AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, August 7 — Admiral Nimitz announced today the capture of Ukudu and Liguan, towns on Guam Island, as a result of a further advance of two miles by American forces on the left sector of their front. Japanese forces are reported bottled up in the northern tip of the island, three-quarters of which is now under Allied control.

American and British troops in British New Guinea, in a maneuver which threatens to isolate the inland Japanese force around the village of Afua, have cut the main Japanese supply route to the Drinlumor front, said today's MacArthur communique.

The communique also announced the sinking of a 1,000-ton freighter and the damaging of two other ships in an Allied bomber attack Saturday on a Japanese convoy near Amboina Island. On the same day, 73 tons of bombs were dropped on Yap Island, and targets on Palau and Woleai in the Carolines were also hit.

Referring to operations at Sansapor, in Dutch New Guinea, the communique said the Japanese had prepared for an attack against Manokwari, but the unsuspected landing at Sansapor cut their main coastal communications and threw confusion into their plans. This operation of the Dutch New Guinea campaign, which can now be regarded as completed, was accomplished with very small forces and only a handful of casualties.

In the Aitape-Wewak area of New Guinea, the number of Japanese dead counted now totals 5,935. (Reuter)

HEAVY JAP LOSSES IN BONIM BATTLES

PEARL HARBOUR, August 7 — Further details of the two-day battles off Bonim and Volcano Islands, in the West Central Pacific, were given by correspondents cabling today.

On Thursday, it was reported, American planes sank four cargo ships of about 4,000 tons each, three escorting destroyers or destroyer escorts and four barges. They also

The other attacks, with the exception of that on the Valence rail yards between Lyon and Avignon, were concentrated along the Riviera coast between Toulon, the naval port, and Nice, near the Italian border.

Enemy rail lines in northwestern Italy were also struck during the day, and the recently-announced Balkan Air Force continued its offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia.

100,000 REFUGEES IN FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, August 7 — The whole of Florence houses over 100,000 refugees, it was estimated today, and in the southern section of the city which is controlled by the Allies, thousands had sought safety.

Allied authorities found the majority of the refugees herded under any available roof and in the Palazzo dei Pitti, former royal palace, 5,650 men, women and children were living under almost indescribable conditions. They overran courtyards and every room of the high-storied palace. Each family, sometimes with as many as 11 or 12 in the family, appeared to have agreed on boundaries of their own small,

On Thursday, it was reported, American planes sank four cargo ships of about 4,000 tons each, three escorting destroyers or destroyer escorts, and four barges. They also damaged one cargo vessel and the balance of the escorting warships.

On the same day, American surface vessels sank one large destroyer, a cargo ship, a small oiler, and several barges. One damaged escort vessel escaped.

On Friday, a Japanese escort vessel and two other small craft were sunk, and five barges, a landing craft, and three smaller vessels were damaged. A light cruiser and five smaller vessels were possibly sunk. All six ships were left burning, while a destroyer escort and 10 small craft were also damaged.

On shore, five enemy planes were damaged on the ground, six airborne planes were shot down, and six others were destroyed. The Americans lost 16 planes from enemy aircraft fire, and 19 flight personnel.

Strong Japanese defence positions on the western shore were wiped out, and other enemy positions in the eastern Marshalls were bombed on Friday. Ponape and Wake Islands were attacked on the same day, and from these operations all the Allied planes returned.

In his first proclamation at Guam, Admiral Nimitz revealed all Japanese regulations and set up an American Military Government.

JAP RESISTANCE IN MANIPUR COLLAPSING

KANDY, CEYLON, August 7 — All Japanese resistance in the Indian border state of Manipur is collapsing as the result of the Allied offensive, front-line correspondents reported here today. Enemy elements remaining in Manipur were being pressed back into the small, southern part of the state, and they were not believed to be in very great strength.

Other Allied troops, battling to drive the Japanese from northeastern India, advanced into northern Burma in pursuit of the retreating enemy, following the capture of Tamu.

Further to the northeast, other Allied troops, operating in the Imphal sector, were reported by the Associated Press to have driven the Japanese back into the mountain exits to the Chindwin Valley in Burma.

The capture of Tamu gave the Allies control of the main advance base from which the Japanese launched their invasion of India. The Allies also control an important airfield.

Dispatches from the Mogaung front in northern Burma stated today that General Joseph Stillwell's forces captured an important hill feature, 12 miles southwest of that town. Allied troops were forced to overcome bitter enemy resistance along the Mandalay railway. Allied aircraft strongly attacked Ehamo on the line of extension of the new Burma Road from captured Myitkyina.

A bitter battle was reported raging today within the city of Hengyang on the Canton-Hankow railway, where the Chinese garrison of 20,000 has been besieged since early last month. A Chinese High Command statement today said that the enemy had penetrated into the city, but were driven out again by a determined Chinese counter-attack.

Japanese forces were reported to have broken out of the Luechow Peninsula and to be threatening Limkeng and Fahsien. The Associated Press said that the enemy drive was launched in two directions, to the northeast and northwest against Chinese positions just across the straits from the Japanese-held island of Hainan. U. S. ANNOUNCES NEW EXPLOSIVE

WASHINGTON, August 7 — A new explosive, 50 per cent more powerful than any previous type, is now being used by the Allied armies, Colonel A. I. Luke, of the United States Ordnance Department, announced yesterday.

This new explosive is called RDZ and detonates with such a tremendous force that bomb fragments can cut through reinforced concrete fortifications and the blast effect alone can be almost as dangerous as the fragments.

Bombs filled with RDZ have given the Allied air forces destructive power 50 per cent larger, without the addition of a single plane or pilot, Colonel Luke pointed out.

In Brittany, the French Forces of the Interior, supported by French paratroopers, have been fighting since June 6. They have compelled the enemy to remain in his strongholds, have attacked his detachments, destroyed his columns. Now they are taking part with the American troops in the mopping up, and have killed several thousand Germans in Brittany since the 6th of June. Thousands of Germans have surrendered to our forces.

Every Frenchman realizes that he should take an immediate part in this supreme war effort. Everyone can and should fight. Those who are fit should join the French Forces of the Interior. The others should help cripple the enemy.

Follow the orders of the French Resistance. Those who are free — either in the French Empire or in France — should double their efforts and their devotion.

We shall see the credits, the losses, and the sacrifices. We shall also sum up the mistakes made by us, the French people, or by others, which led France to the verge of catastrophe. We shall then take in due course and with our recovered might the necessary steps to prevent their recurrence.

Today, the outstanding fact is the vital necessity of destroying the enemy on our territory in order victoriously to penetrate afterwards into his own country.

Courage! Unity! Discipline! The decisive days have come...

French People! Rise and fight! (PWB)

COMMENTS ON GERMAN INTERNAL CRISIS

LONDON, August 7 — The magnitude of Germany's internal crisis was described in an article in the Soviet trade union publication, War and the Working Class, quoted by Radio Moscow Saturday. The broadcast said:

«The crisis enveloping Germany has stepped past the Gestapo's sentries and has penetrated into the narrow circle formed by the leading clique itself.

«The Fuehrer is progressively disappointing all who placed him on the stage of history. He does not lead the German highway robbers towards the glorious times they were expecting from him. He leads them from one defeat to another. He has become the personification of catastrophe.

«Though the attempt made by some circles to eliminate Hitler has failed, in this particular case it is much more important that such an attempt was made at all.

«Hitler has shot many German officers. He may shoot further hundreds and thousands of them, but he cannot shoot the causes which have brought forth the conspiracy. The fact that they are trying to overthrow the Fuehrer shows plainly that the German generals have realized the absolute hopelessness of the Hitler war.»

Officers Denounce Courts

United Press correspondent Joseph Grigg, in a dispatch from London, said today that «well informed observers» in the British capital viewed with particular interest Hitler's emphasis on his claim that «Providence» had saved him, and his assertions that he is «necessary for the nation» because Germany needs a man who will not capitulate in any circumstances.

Grigg said:

«These statements, it was felt, revealed Hitler's deep rooted fear that none of his generals of the Nazi higher-ups could be trusted to continue the struggle against the Allies to the bitter end.»

DE GAULLE SAYS HOUR OF REVENGE HAS COME

LONDON, August 7 — General Charles de Gaulle gave a five-minute broadcast over Radio Algiers tonight, as follows:

The battle of France is gaining ground and speed. In Normandy, the enemy withdraws gradually before the British and American forces. In Brittany, his collapse is almost completed. Moreover, the American armored divisions progressing eastward have crossed the River Mayenne. Very soon a powerful French army — well trained and well equipped — will be engaged on the Allied front.

Lastly, on the Eastern Front, the Russians have reached German territory.

The time of revenge has come!

Meanwhile, numerous brave French troops are fighting at many points of our territory a fierce battle, and thus help most effectively the advancing Armies of Liberation.

East of the Rhone River, more than 10,000 Germans were killed in two months by the French Forces of the Interior, and in the Vercors Mountains alone, two German divisions have been pinned down since the middle of July, destroying the enemy on our territory in order victoriously to penetrate afterwards into his own country.

Grigg said:

«These statements, it was felt, revealed Hitler's deep rooted fear that none of his generals of the Nazi higher-ups could be trusted to continue the struggle against the Allies to the bitter end.»

The United Press also quoted Reichcommissar for Norway Josef Terboven as saying, in broadcast over Radio Oslo, that the German officers expelled from the Nazi army will probably be tried by the notorious «people's court of honor» next Tuesday.

German officers captured on the Normandy front today denounced Hitler's «court of honor» in statements delivered over Radio London.

One officer said:

«I am a German officer who has fought in the West and in the East, and I am expressing the views of all my comrades in saying that those of the officers who have been turned against Hitler are not the honorless ones. On the contrary, long ago, cool, matter-of-fact thinking has made us realize that the limits of our military capacity have been reached, and even surpassed. Hitler is playing an irresponsible game for power and it is the German people who are going to pay for it.»

An Associated Press dispatch from Stockholm today quoted travellers arriving in the Swedish capital from northeast Germany as saying that Gestapo agents and military police swooped through a number of German military establishments in that area a week ago and seized «some officers,» who were transported to unknown destinations.

The dispatch listed Danzig, Gdynia, Tczew, Marienwerder, and Graudenz as among the points where raids were made. Other raids were reported in Stettin, Rostock, and Lubeck.

The German News Agency put out a statement Sunday night that the attempt on Hitler's life was meant to kill Mussolini as well. Quoting a so-called Italian Government spokesman, the agency said: «The same German military circles which were responsible for the attempt on Hitler managed to insist on Mussolini's coming to Germany a few days earlier than he had planned. They hoped to use the meeting of Hitler and Mussolini to make the attempt.»

In addition to Hitler's own admission that opposition to his rule had been continuous since the Nazis came to power in 1933, other German spokesmen are stressing its comprehensive nature. The radio commentator Hans Fritsche, in a week-end broadcast, said:

«It has now been established that the German Army, the police, the Foreign Office, representatives of German industry, and conservative politicians of the old system all were involved in the revolt against Hitler.

«The participation of the military commander of Nuremburg and of other cities is proof that military units within Germany gave wide support to the revolt.»

German newspapers which have reached Madrid recently carry more and more death notices with the names of Prussian Junkers. Instead of the usual formula «Died for the Fuehrer at the front,» these notices say, «Died unexpectedly.»

Reports reaching Stockholm from Germany state that foreign workers inside Germany are showing signs of unrest. Many, the reports say, have deserted from factories and farms, and are streaming back to their homelands. Some Germans assist them with food and shelter on their way, in the hope of currying favour which will help them in the hour of Germany's collapse. A Munich newspaper carried an appeal to all Germans to do all they can to stop foreign workers from leaving their places of employment and going underground. (PWB)

LONDON «TIMES» ON GERMAN REVERSES

LONDON, August 7 — The Times said today that the rulers of Germany have suffered during this past weekend a further contraction of what Prime Minister Churchill has called «the doomed and narrowing circle of their power.»

The Normandy front is rapidly dissolving into exceedingly mobile warfare. While the British and Canadians on the left flank have pinned down the bulk of the enemy's heavy armour, the Americans on the right wing, having burst out of the Cotentin Peninsula, are sweeping on.

As Allied tanks range further into the interior of Brittany, the Maquis will be helping to blaze their trail and the odds will be greatly against the Germans attempting to consolidate their infantry against them. With the tremendous weight behind the American advance, and the Breton Peninsula effectively cut off, the three Atlantic harbors of Brest, Lorient, and St. Nazaire should fall before long.

Disasters of the German defences in Northern France have an accumulative effect, because simultaneous enemy defeats continue on the other European fronts in Russia and Italy.

All this converging pressure, the editorial said, portends the doom of the National Socialist program. The announcement that the army is to be purged «at its own request» is merely a dignified form of words used to cover an ugly process. This ruthless purge, however, only illustrates the true hollowness of party despotism. The fact that the truth is being concealed from the German masses by the skill of Goebbel's propaganda, and the discipline of Himmler's police, will not prevent the inevitable collapse of Germany. AGRICULTURE INSTITUTE SURVIVES IN ROME

ROME, August 7 — The International Institute of Agriculture, founded in Rome in 1905 as the result of the work of the late David Lubin of California, has been able to preserve its staff and properties intact, and is ready to make its contribution to settlement of post-war agriculture problems.

This was learned today at Institute headquarters in the Villa Borghese.

The Institute was able to survive the latter phases of Fascism and nine months of German occupation, chiefly because it enjoys extra-territorial rights. It is the only non-religious or non-diplomatic institution in the city with such rights.

The latest president of the institute was Giacomo Acerbo, who went into hiding last year after he voted, as a member of the Fascist Grand Council, to oust Mussolini. He has subsequently been tried and condemned in absentia by the Fascist Republican Special Tribunal.

An attempt by the Fascist Republicans to name one of their number as Acerbo's successor failed a few months before the Allied liberation of Rome. Giuseppe Tassinari, former Minister of Agriculture, was appointed Italian delegate to the institute with the understating that he should become its president. Staff members persuaded him that it would be futile to try to take control. He has since fled northward with the Nazi-Fascists.

Fifty-eight nations had delegates and membership in the institute prior to the outbreak of the present war.

Since the Allied liberation of Rome, the institute staff has established contact with various sub-commissions of the Allied Control Commission notably that for agriculture and the representatives of the American and British foreign offices.

The institute has its own flag, which is a green field with three sheaves of wheat emblazoned on it. This flag flew over the main building, the library, and the statistical workshop throughout the German occupation. The extra-territorial rights derive from the fact that the institute was set up by a formal treaty or convention, signed by the 40 original member nations. (UNN)

RETIRING ROME AREA COMMANDER DECORATED

ROME, August 7 — One of Italy's highest decorations, the Grand Cross of the Order of the Crown of Italy, was today conferred by the Lieutenant General of the Realm upon Major General Harry Johnson, commander of the Rome Area Allied Command since the liberation of the city.

The presentation was made tonight at meeting of the General with his staff on behalf of the Lieutenant General by Lt. Col. Geri Della Rocca de Candal, Wing Commander and flying officer in the Royal Italian Air Force and liaison officer to the Rome Area Command, who expressed the appreciation of his commander-in-chief and that of the people of Rome for the work of General Johnson as military commander of the city.

In accepting the honor, General Johnson said that he did so in behalf of the officers and men of the command who have striven since June 5 to serve the common aim of winning the war and of liberating and restoring Italian life. He looked forward to the day when Italy would be fully restored to the family of free nations when all its citizens would enjoy the rights of a democratic society, he said. (UNN)

Reports reaching Stockholm from Germany state that foreign workers inside Germany are showing signs of unrest. Many, the reports say, have deserted from factories and farms, and are streaming back to their homelands. Some Germans assist them with food and shelter on their way, in the hope of currying favour which will help them in the hour of Germany's collapse. A Munich newspaper carried an appeal to all Germans to do all they can to stop foreign workers from leaving their places of employment and going underground. (PWB)

SFORZA ASKS DISMISSAL OF 309 SENATORS

ROME, August 7 — Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for Sanctions Against Fascism, today recommended to the High Court of Justice that 309 out of Italy's 420 senators be purged for Fascist activity.

The sweeping clesnup order set forth the rules for judging senators who contributed to Fascism after 3 January 1925.

Count Sforza divided the senators into six groups, according to their degrees of responsibility for Fascism.

The first group included senators who were ministers, undersecretaries of state, presidents, and vice presidents of the Senate, or of the Chamber of Deputies, after 3 January 1925. The second group included those who continued after that date as presidents of senatorial commissions. The third included those whose tenure was not validated by the plenary assembly, as well as those named senators for having been deputies or national councillors after 1929. The fourth group included those not confirmed by the assembly, but imposed after abolition of the validations law. In the fifth group are those who adhered to the Fascist regime in 1943, while the sixth group contained those senators who have individual responsibility for Fascist acts. (UNN)

GREEK PREMIER WILLING TO RESIGN

CAIRO, August 7 — Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou told the Greek Cabinet on Friday that he was prepared to resign his position in the interests of national unity, it was learned here last night.

The Prime Minister was replying to a telegram in which the EAM accepted the Lebanon agreement as a whole, but demanded that the Premier should resign on the grounds that he already has acted contrary to the spirit of the Lebanon agreement. The Greek Government here refused to consider this demand.

Premier Papandreou welcomed the decision of EAM to participate in the government, and asked them to send representatives.

He formed the present Greek government on April 27. A month ago it was officially announced here that the EAM had refused to participate in the new administration and to accept in its entirity the Lebanon agreement, an eight-point program for Greek unity formulated at Beirut in May. (PWB)

NAZIS TRY TO TERRORIZE PATRIOTS

ROME, August 7 — Numerous accounts of how the Germans are attempting to track down Patriots reach Allied authorities.

One report told how the Germans took 26 young men as hostages from Massa Marittima on June 23, when the Patriots were found to be hampering their movements. All but two of them were taken to Florence and nothing has since been heard of them.

Another account related how German soldiers entered the mines of Niccioletta, intent upon the deportation of the workers to Germany. When a few of them tried to escape, the Germans shot them on the spot.

It was reported that German troops were attacked by Patriots in the Guardistillo sector. In retaliation, the Nazis seized all those who happened to be in the vicinity and machine-gunned or bludgeoned 50 of them. Others who ran to the spot to learn what was occurring were captured by the Germans, adding 25 to the list of murdered leaving 74 dead in all, with heads smashed in with rifle butts. (PWB)

MORE ITALIANS SENT TO CONCENTRATION CAMPS

ROME, August 7 — Italian political prisoners who are confined to the seriously damaged San Vittore prison in Milan are continually being sent to concentration camps in Germany or Poland, it has been reliably learned here.

During the questioning that all prisoners must undergo, the victim, with his hands high above his head and fastened to a chain in the wall, is frequently flogged with heavy oxhide whips by two assistant gaolers. At times scores of prisoners are herded into carefully sealed trucks, where they remain for several days without food, water, or proper sanitation. (PWB)

SWISS TO DECIDE ON WAR CRIMINAL ASYLUM

BERNE, August 7 — The Swiss Federal Council will decide major cases involving the right to asylum for persons who may be considered war criminals, the Associated Press said.

Frontier officials will decide minor cases, the dispatch said, in announcing that the right of political refugees to asylum in Switzerland had been officially restated here.

Instructions recently given to Swiss frontier guards mention exclusion of persons on account of their activities, but these were not defined specifically.

In deciding such cases, the Swiss could — but need not — parallel the Allied definition of war criminals, the dispatch pointed out. (OWI)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 7 — Today's communique:

LAND: Troops of the 8th Army are now firmly established on the south bank of the River Arno, except for pockets of enemy resistance south of Pontassieve and west of Empoli.

South African troops are in contact with the enemy on the north bank of the Arno in the city of Florence.

On the remainder of the front there is no change in the situation.

AIR: Strong forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked rail communications and oil storage facilities in the Rhone Valley, and submarine pens at Toulon, while fighter aircraft attacked two airfields along the lower Rhone. Others carried out offensive sweeps over the Ploesti and Bucarest areas.

Tactical aircraft attacked military objectives in northern Italy, the battle area, and Yugoslavia, as well as railroad bridges in the south of France.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and 12 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 2,100 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 7 — Today's communique:

LAND: In the Brittany Peninsula, Allied troops continue to strengthen their positions in the vicinity of Brest. Our armor has freed Carhaix, Vannes, and Redon, and other units have reached the Vilaine River at various points from Rennes to the sea. Chateau Gontier and Toussay have been cleared of the enemy. The Mayenne River has been crossed 17 miles south of Laval. Mayenne is in our hands.

Allied armor is in the outskirts of Vire. Foret de Saint Sever is being cleared of light resistance. The strong point of Saint Pois has been taken. Two enemy counter-attacks in that area were unsuccessful. To the northeast, high ground at Mount Pincon was captured yesterday by Allied troops after heavy fighting. Between this area and the Vire, enemy resistance was stubborn, and strong enemy counter-attacks were repulsed.

South of Caen, a local attack on the east bank of the Orne met heavy enemy resistance in May sur Orne.

AIR: Railway bridges at Oissel, Saint Remy sur Avre, Courtelaine, and Beaumont sur Sarthe, and ammunition and fuel dumps in the forests of Blois and Aisne and Perseigne and at Livarot were attacked by escorted medium and light bombers. Other formations attacked panzer division concentrations near Thury Harcourt.

«PRAVDA» COMMENTS ON TURKISH BREAK

MOSCOW, August 7 — The first Russian comment on Turkey's diplomatic break with Germany has appeared in the official Soviet organ, Pravda.

The journal recalled Turkish aid to Germany throughout the war, and said the break was dictated first and foremost by the fear of the political isolation of Turkey after the war.

The newspaper also stressed that the break did not signify that Turkey «has joined the ranks of the countries waging a bitter struggle against Hitler's Germany. One must not forget that Turkey has still retained close relations with the satellites, particularly Hungary and Rumania.»

The article said that the previous Turkish policy stemmed from the conviction that a split among the Allies was inevitable, but «the relations among the members of the Anglo-Soviet-American coalition not only did not weaken during the course of the war, but considerably strengthened.» (PWB)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 7 — Monday night's communique:

During August 7, northwest of Rezekne (Rezhitsa), our troops continued to advance and captured the town of Lubana, and with fighting occupied several populated localities, including Setrinaiki, Lubeniki, Luza, and Klepet. Our troops cut the railway line of Dubinye-Lubana.

West and southwest of Siauliai, our troops with fighting continued to advance and captured the large highway junctions of Kornishai-Ishaktani, and also with fighting occupied over 50 populated localities, including Smergl, Yanmaitsi, Kurtsovyani, Zavgory, and Gordy.

Northwest of Kaunas (Kovno), our troops in surmounting enemy resistance occupied over 40 populated localities, including Andrushaitsy, Trahutse, Primbye, Promezhdovo, Pushiny, Podryauvtsi, and Zubki.

Northwest and southwest of Bialystok, our troops broke up enemy resistance, and captured the towns of Knysheri and Laty.

West of Sandomir, our troops continued successful operations for expansion of the bridgeheads on the left bank of the Vistula, and occupied over 60 populated localities, including Sosnyechany, Klimonty, Kenary, Dogarye, Shiblo, Pshiguru, and the railway station of Bodola.

Troops of the 1st Ukranian Front, as a result of an impetuous battle, August 7, by storm, captured the important defence point of the Germans in the foothills of the Carpathians, the town and large railway junction of Sambor.

Troops of the 4th Ukrainian Front continued their offensive August 7, and with fighting captured the large industrial oil center of the western Ukraine, the town of Borislav.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During August 6, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 110 German tanks.

In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 117 enemy planes were shot-down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ROME, August 7 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

On the night of July 25, patriots attacked the Fascist headquarters of Cummino, east of Caporetto. The commander and the second-in-command were executed. All Fascist soldiers were disarmed. On the following night, the attack was renewed, when the enemy lost 10 more killed. Several militiamen deserted. In these actions, Fascist forces totalled 50 men, while the patriots had only seven. One patriot was wounded.

The patriots operating near Arona, having learned that one German SS battalion stationed at Turin was on the way to the Lake Maggiore area, blew up a viaduct on the railway line. The train carrying the German soldiers was wrecked, killing 30 and wounding 200. In reprisal, the German command sent two fresh SS battalions, which for more than 10 days ravaged the entire countryside.

In Tuscany, the patriots seized food and equipment at a German depot, at Pistoia. Fascist soldiers have become immobilized. At Lucca and Apuania, by reason of the intense activity of the patriots, several bridges have been mined and blown up, thereby interrpting German front line communications.

Many Nazi-Fascists have deserted and surrendered to the patriots, among these being some of the security unit organized by the Fascists in the Florence area.

It is now disclosed that 60 SS troops went to the village of Cumiana, in Turin Province, where they searched all houses rounding up personnel for labor battalions. Patriots stationed in nearby mountains came to help the population. In the violent engagement which followed, many Germans were taken prisoner, while others escaped.

After this failure, the village was attacked by a battalion of German and Fascist troops. All men between the ages of 14 and 70 years of age were rounded up, 68 of whom were sentenced to death. When the Fascists refused to execute the prisoners, a German officer killed them one-by-one, shooting them in the back of the head. (UNN)

In Italy, from August 1 to August 5, 1,212 terrorists and saboteurs were killed in action in the course of mopping up operations.

German patrol vessels sank two enemy motor sailing boats and damaged a British motor assault boat off the Dalmatian coast. In the east, strong Soviet attacks were frustrated on both sides of Mielece and north-east of Baranovo. Enemy forces, which had advanced northward, were dispersed. Southeast of Varka, our troops repulsed the Bolsheviks in an easterly direction. Northwest of Bialystok, a Soviet attack which had been launched after a fierce artillery preparation was smashed in fighting at close quarters. Yesterday, north of the Memel, our troops destroying 78 tanks frustrated repeated Bolshevik attempts at breaking through.

In Latvia, grim fighting developed at Birsca and east of the Duena. All attempts at breaking through and attacks were checked, and two enemy regiments were wiped out.

Yesterday, enemy bomber squadrons made terror raids on Berlin, Hamburg, and some localities in the sectors of the Baltic Sea. In the night, some isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on the Rhenish-Westphalian regions. Fifty-seven enemy planes, 45 of which were four-engined bombers, were brought down over the Reich territory.

Submarines sank five ships totalling 31,000 tons, and two destroyers. (Radio Berlin)

German Overseas Stations: On the western front, Canadian divisions are attacking south of Caen, and have been halted at Periers and Tilly la Champagne. Eisenhower's statement that Allied losses since the invasion amount to 117,000 men is challenged by German authorities who quote the 220,000 taken prisoner in June and July. The Soviets continue their diplomatic offensive. It was pointed out to Prime Minister Mikolajczyk in War and the Working Class that Poland was expected to accept the viewpoint of the Soviet Union. Turkish policy is regarded with approval as enabling Russia, through the Straits, to establish contact with the rest of the world. The fact that the official Soviet News Agency Tass criticised Turkey for having assisted Germany is looked upon as a preliminary to a certain amount of political blackmail. The Italian press, discussing the change of status of Italian war internees, notes that the agreement between Hitler and Mussolini on this matter has been speedily put into effect. The German Commander in Norway addressed a mass meeting and declared that the recent attempt on Hitler's life had united and strengthened the Wehrmacht.

Transocean and DNB. Fighting in Brittany and in the region between Normandy and the lower Loire is assuming a mobile character. The American 3d Army is expected to undertake a major thrust into the interior of France. Other reports assert that the centre of gravity in Normandy is moving eastward. Although there has not yet been a direct attack on Brest, it is thought that this is imminent. An American attack yesterday on St. Malo was repulsed with heavy loss. It is noticeable that the Americans are bearing the brunt of the campaign, while the British are limited to local thrusts and minor activity. A German military spokesman considers that large-scale Allied landing operations need not be counted on, since four armies are already engaged in the invasion area. When Churchill realised that an advance on Paris would not be practicable, he decided on a breakthrough into Brittany. Strong formations of German fighters and battleplanes attacked American troop concentrations in the western sector of the invasion front. The German Commander in Norway addressed a mass meeting and declared that the recent attempt on Hitler's life had united and strengthened the Wehrmacht.

Transocean and DNB. Fighting in Brittany and in the region between Normandy and the lower Loire is assuming a mobile character. The American 3d Army is expected to undertake a major thrust into the interior of France. Other reports assert that the centre of gravity in Normandy is moving eastward. Although there has not yet been a direct attack on Brest, it is thought that this is imminent. An American attack yesterday on St. Malo was repulsed with heavy loss. It is noticeable that the Americans are bearing the brunt of the campaign, while the British are limited to local thrusts and minor activity. A German military spokesman considers that large-scale Allied landing operations need not be counted on, since four armies are already engaged in the invasion area. When Churchill realised that an advance on Paris would not be practicable, he decided on a breakthrough into Brittany. Strong formations of German fighters and battleplanes attacked American troop concentrations in the western sector of the invasion front. It is officially denied that the French Government has been asked by the Germans to transfer its headquarters from Vichy to Nancy. On the Italian front, there has been little change. The Allies are finding that the evacuation of Florence by the Germans for cultural reasons has brought them no advantage. The Soviets are staging a large-scale attack on Warsaw, without noticeable success. On the East Prussian border, fortifications are being constructed by thousands of volunteers, from boys of 15 to men of 65. The German Navy is preparing to launch a new fighting weapon, in succession to the one-man torpedo. Official Italian quarters disclose that the attempt on Hitler's life was intended to involve that of Mussolini also. The date of the Duce's visit to the Fuehrer was advanced with the object of making their meeting the scene of the attempt.

Fascist Radio: Only patrol clashes are reported from the battlefront south of Florence. The British attempt to cross the Arno was frustrated by German gunners, and a battalion was wiped out. In other sectors, the Allies are regrouping their forces.

AMERICAN FORCES 18 MILES FROM ST. NAZAIRE

SHAEF, August 5 — Field Marshal Rommel tonight faced his gravest crisis since the battle of France began. He was giving up Brittany Peninsula almost without a fight, falling back along practically the whole line from the peninsula to southwest of Caen. No organized resistance was being met by American forces who were rapidly nearing Brest, Lorient, Saint Nazaire, and Nantes.

These lightning tactics brought the Americans to within 55 miles of Lorient, 32 miles of Nantes, and 18 miles of Saint Nazaire. Fighting was reported in the area of Saint Malo, although the port could not yet be claimed as captured. Local garrisons were being cleaned out or were bypassed for supporting infantry to deal with.

Once Brittany ports are in Allied hands, the unloading of troops and supplies will be accelerated. A BBC broadcast late tonight said that the position of the German garrisons in these ports, which include elements of three German infantry divisions and remnants of a parachute division, was hopeless.

west of Caen, and Evrecy, Esquay, and Hills 112 and 113 have been recaptured.

An official spokesman broadcasting from London last night gave instructions to the people of Brittany. The spokesman emphasised that he was not addressing the French Forces of the Interior. He said that the French civil populations must first get possession of French arms, and he urged them to join the FFI. Persons in official positions, he said, should remain at their posts, but should carry out no orders except those given to them by the resistance movement.

Norman Clark, representing the London News Chronicle, said that the Allied armies in France are reaping in full measure the assistance of the French resistance movement. «When you drive into a newly-freed village,» he wrote, «French peasants with their armlets, a carbine seized probably from a German sandbagged in the night, are there to shake you by the hand and to pour out information about the enemy in the neighbourhood. At night, these peasants go on patrol and bring back German pilots who have bailed out.»

Alan Moorehead, of the Daily Express, also paid tribute to the French civilians. «French civilians eager to help are coming into every British camp,» he wrote. «They bring news and think nothing of passing through the German lines. The fire brigade in one village actually wanted to go to put out a fire in a hamlet behind the German lines.»

ALLIED NORMANDY CASUALTIES TOTAL 117,000

LONDON, August 5 — Allied casualties on the western front from D-Day until July 20 totaled just over 117,000, it was announced today at SHAEF.

The figures included British casualties totaling 39,594, of whom 5,646 were killed; Canadian, 6,545, of whom 919 were killed; and American, 75,009, of whom 11,156 were killed.

RENNES CITIZENS GREET ALLIES

RENNES, BRITTANY, August 5 — Waving French and, occasionally, American flags, French people welcomed American troops entering Rennes yesterday.

A correspondent of International News said that German troops trapped inside the city finally came out and surrendered. The walls of Rennes were still plastered with German posters about labor conscription and about the penalty that would be inflicted on any civilians aiding Allied soldiers or paratroops to escape.

Resistance in Rennes collapsed after the Germans had blasted the heart of the city, during which time they ordered the civilian population to remain indoors.

British Reach Orne

An Associated Press dispatch said that United States forces have cleared the Foret de Saint Sever, formerly one of the main German ammunition dumps in Normandy. The town of Saint Pois, five miles northeast of Brecey, has been captured, and advance troops were in Les Mesnil Gilbert.

In the center of the Normandy front, the Germans were reported to be making an orderly withdrawal from their salient between Mortain and Vire.

On the eastern sector of the Normandy front, British vanguards have reached the Orne River at the village of Le Hom, seven miles southwest of Aunay-sur-Odon and just north of the town of Thury Harcourt, the Associated Press reported. Other British troops have taken Aunay-sur-Odon, and have driven the Germans from all territory east of the town to the River Orne.

General Dempsey's troops advanced at the rate of a quarter of a mile hourly over a heavily-mined and booby-trapped road leading into Villers Bocage, a Reuter correspondent stated. Rommel's men were still offering sporadic resistance south of the city.

German troops were withdrawing along an eight-mile front from Landes to Amaye-sur-Orne, eight miles southeast of Villers Bocage, the correspondent said.

FRENCH PATRIOTS AID ALLIES

LONDON, August 5 — Allied soldiers are receiving the help of French patriots in every way possible, except those given to them by the resistance movement.

RAF ATTACKS GERMAN EVACUATION AT BREST

LONDON, August 5 — A strong force of Royal Air Force Lancasters today gave direct support to the American forces advancing to the port of Brest when they attacked the German U-boat pens and harassed enemy attempts to evacuate troops from the city.

In another big daylight operation, Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the USAAF struck at an oil refinery 18 miles east of Hanover; an oil storage plant at Neinburg; an aircraft component factory and marshalling yards at Fallerslaben, 13 miles northeast of Brunswick, and war industries and other military objectives in Germany.

The American bombers as well as the RAF planes were escorted by very strong formations of fighter planes. The weather over both target areas was described as excellent. Returning crew members reported that they encountered virtually no fighter opposition, but that the flak barrage was heavy. An Associated Press report tonight said that 2,750 tons of bombs were dropped by the U. S. bombers.

Other RAF bomber formations attacked railway bridges at Etaples, on the main coastal route to Belgium, for the second time within two days.

Aerial reconnaissance photographs of last Saturday's raid by the RAF on the submarine pens at Brest revealed today that three direct hits by six-ton « earthquake » bombs were scored on the shelters. (Reuter)

ATTLEE VISITS NORMANDY

LONDON, August 5 — The Deputy Prime Minister, Sir Clement Richard Attlee, has just returned to England after a two-day visit to British and American troops in Normandy, it was announced here today. During his visit, Sir Clement saw General Montgomery and dined with the French Regional Commissioner for Normandy, Coulet. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS 80 MILES FROM GERMANY PROPER

MOSCOW, August 5 — The Red Army smashed at what was left of the German lines in southern Poland, capturing Stryj, rail and road junction south and slightly west of Lvov in the Carpathian foothills, and moving in a powerful thrust toward Cracow and the German border in Silesia, the latter less than 80 miles from the onrushing Soviet forces.

In taking Stryj, the Red Army forced the River Stryj an order of the day tonight stated, taking the city with a frontal assault which crumbled German defenses bolstered by Hungarian puppet divisions. Red Army panzer destroyer crews smashed Hungarian tanks whose striped camouflage was of no avail when the tanks crawled out of hillside hideouts in the Carpathian sector. In the same sector, Russian Stormoviks blasted Junkers-52 transports out of the air, as the German planes tried to carry supplies to harassed Nazi troops.

The Red Army surged toward Cracow in a manner described by one correspondent as being « like the waters of a turbulent river that broke a dam. » Tank, big guns, and infantry poured through the gap in the German lines across the lower Vistula.

Soviet artillery concentrated on narrow sectors of frontier fortifications while Red Army sappers, blasted German pillboxes one by one in nightlong excursions into the German lines.

One sector of activity is the Suwalki triangle, annexed by Germany to East Prussia in 1939, where the Red Army is closing in on the town of Suwalki, a junction of six roads.

The Germans are losing more than territory and a place to slaughter people in their retreat across Poland toward Germany. They are losing the important Polish oilfields which in 1939, the Nazis boasted, doubled their crude oil resources. (Reuter - AP)

8TH ARMY OCCUPIES SOUTHERN FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 5 — South African armoured forces and British Guardsmen yesterday occupied the southern portions of historic Florence, as the 8th Army swept forward toward the Arno River along a 25-mile front.

German forces have demolished five of the six bridges across the Arno, including the famous Ponte delle Grazie, dating from the 13th century, and have posted parachute troops along the river banks within the great renaissance town. It was officially stated here that it is « clear » that the Germans intend to oppose any crossing of the Arno on both sides of the city. All inhabitants have been evacuated from the north bank of the river, according to a message from the Florence Committee of National Liberation, and the enemy has established bristing gun positions on the heights around Fiesole, northeast of the famous city.

Only the ancient, shop-cluttered Ponte Vecchio, with foundations from Roman times, now connects the main quarters of Florence with its southern extension, where the Pitti Palace and the renowned art collection is located. Directly across the narrow bridge, unsuitable for wheeled traffic, are the even more famous Uffizi Galleries, housing one of the greatest art collections of the Renaissance. It is believed that the Germans spared this bridge from destruction only because it is impassable for military traffic. Houses have been demolished at each end of the old bridge, to confront the Allies with road blocks.

Vital Stronghold Captured

The swift advance to the Arno at Florence came only after the South African tanks and British Guards forces, exploiting the New Zealanders' break-through in the German hill positions, pushed across the Ema River to capture the German stronghold of Galluzzo. This village, on Highway 2 just northeast of the confluence of the Ema and the Greve, a tributary of the Arno, and known for its Carthusian monastery, had been built into a strong rear position by the Germans after they had relinquished their forward lines. Once this point had been taken, the 8th Army column swept on past San Gaggio to enter the southern part of Florence in the early morning hours yesterday.

Southwest of Florence 8th Army forces were advancing north from their bridgehead across the Pesa, and were reported to be within a half mile of the town of Signa, on the north bank of the Arno River seven miles from Florence. Forward elements of other 8th Army forces were reported at Scandicci, on the south bank of the Greve River, 2 1/2 miles southwest of Tuscany's chief city.

Southeast of the historic city, British troops and tank forces captured Grassina, three miles distant and on a secondary road along the Ema's course. At the extreme eastern end of the 8th Army's advance, British forces thrust forward to take Bagno a Ripoli, 2 1/2 miles southeast of Florence, and continued their drive to within a half mile of the Arno's banks. The town of Rignano, on Highway 69, was also captured as leading troops approached to within five miles of the important rail center of Pontassieve, eight miles east of Florence. German forces were reported to be

The Red Army surged toward Cracow in a manner described by one correspondent as being «like the waters of a turbulent river that broke a dam.» Tank, big guns, and infantry poured through the gap in the German lines across the lower Vistula.

This break in the German line was a graver threat to Germany than East Prussia because in the Cracow area the objective is industrial Silesia and certainly more vital to the defense of Germany than the East Prussian home of the Junkers.

In the Warsaw area, the Germans were fighting a two-side war — inside and outside the city. Within Warsaw, the Polish Patriot Army seized the Wschondl railway station in the northern part of the city on the Vistula's east bank. While the Germans had their hands full with the terrific pressure of the Red Army outside the city, they had to divert heavy tanks, artillery, and bombers in attempting to check the patriots. But the patriots were persistent, and a radio message from within the city to London stated that the Patriot Army was meeting with «great successes.»

The Red Army was fighting on the East Prussian border against German troops who were put into the line only three days ago. The German Overseas News Agency admitted heavy fighting against Soviet formations which had broken through on the border north of Virbailis, a town southwest of Kaunas and on a direct line east of the East Prussian city of Insterburg.

Soviet tanks, which until recently were in the deep south on the Rumanian front, rolled toward East Prussia. Their crews are from Guards units who have sworn to bring their banners to Berlin.

German forces were reported to be holding desperately, however, to the high ground between Bagno a Ripoli and Rignano, where outlying slopes of the Chianti Mountains reach a height of over 1500 feet.

Further east, before the Arno River bends west in its long detour around the Pratomagno Mountains, 8th Army forces occupied the town of Subbiano and pushed on two miles further north on Highway 71.

There was little except patrol activity on the Tuscan or the Adriatic coastal sectors.

1st, 5th British Divisions

The 1st and 5th British Infantry Divisions have been in action in Italy, it was revealed here today.

The 1st Division, which first won fame for its exploits in North Africa, has served with both the 8th and 5th Armies in Italy. This division was one of the units in the initial landings at Anzio. They also took part in operations which resulted in the liberation of Rome.

The 5th British Infantry Division first took part in the landings in southern Italy with the 8th Army. They later were shifted to the 5th Army command, and played an important rôle in the crossing of the Garigliano River. The division then was transferred to Anzio, and participated in the operation leading to Rome and beyond. (PRO)

ROME'S WELCOME REENACTED IN FLORENCE

WITH ADVANCING 8th ARMY FORCES, ITALY, August 5 — The festive scenes of the Rome liberation were reenacted in Florence as Allied troops edged their way through the city. Crowds surrounded the Allied tanks, and men, women, and children cheered and tossed flowers at South African soldiers who appeared rather embarrassed at the warmth of their reception.

But the enemy did not relax his complete grip of Florence without rigorous resistance, and although the first South African troops — a forward patrol consisting of a lieutenant and a handful of soldiers penetrated the city at 0550 hours, many hours passed and still the city remained uncleared of the enemy.

Extraordinary scenes of welcoming crowds, who first gathered about the Allied soldiers and then disappeared behind closed doors and shuttered windows as the cry of « Tedeschi » was heard, greeted the Allies as they entered the city. The Germans left many snipers in various buildings throughout the city, and the first troops had to edge their way forward cautiously.

A United Nations News special correspondent stated that there were countless refugees in the city, and they and the normal population had suffered badly from lack of food. Bread was rationed at 100 grams per person, but had long since disappeared from the market.

The enemy destroyed the water supply system and the city was dependent on a few wells. They also destroyed the supply of electricity. (UNN)

COMMANDO RAID AGAINST DALMATIAN ISLANDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 5 — Combined Allied land, air, and naval forces have carried out a successful attack on enemy craft and installations on the islands of Korcula and Orebic, off the Dalmatian coast, a special communique issued by Central Mediterranean Forces, AFHQ, declared here today.

The announcement said that « land forces in the Adriatic, » with the aid of Royal Navy and Royal Air Force units, had made the raid on August 2, and had withdrawn without loss after completing their task.

A RAF announcement, made simultaneously with the headquarters communique, stated that the raid had achieved complete surprise, and that British land forces had evacuated the island of Korcula without a single casualty or loss of a single item of equipment.

Spitfires were used to reduce German gun positions on each side of the Peljesacki Channel, through which, apparently, the armada made its way to land. Disembarkation, the RAF reports said, proceeded without interruption, and Allied artillery scored several hits on enemy ammunition supplies.

TAF Strikes Communications

Tactical Air Force medium and fighter-bombers yesterday carried into the third successive day their slashing attacks upon enemy communications in southern France and northwestern Italy.

A rail bridge on the Riviera line, five miles east of the French frontier was hit, as well as bridges over the Var and the Esteron rivers northwest of Nice, France.

Nice harbour was attacked, as well as the Italian port of Imperia, where a 2,000-ton merchant vessel was believed damaged.

Spitfires carried out offensive sweeps over Albania, shooting up 13 motor vehicles and four trains. (PRO)

U. S. ITALY-RUSSIA SHUTTLE FLIGHT

quarters reported. The communique credited the success to partisan units fighting in the Sandjak district, who liberated the town of Priboj.

The announcement stated that the enemy had been cleared from the Prijepolje Visegrad sector, running roughly along the Lim River. It was also reported that the capture of the upper Vakuf, stubbornly defended by units of the German Prinz Eugen Division, cut the enemy's main communications from the valley of the Neretva River to Western Bosnia. Partisan troops are now well established in the southern Lim River sector.

The communique said that many soldiers from Italian garrisons are being mobilized into partisan units, and the Italians are bringing along their own automatic weapons.

Concluding, the communique said: « The recent victories of our units have greatly aggravated the already serious situation of the German army in the province of Istria. »

JAPS RETREATING IN DUTCH NEW GUINEA

PEARL HARBOUR, August 5 — The Japanese are in full retreat in western Dutch New Guinea and are withdrawing from all their strongpoints in Geelvink Bay, said an Advanced Allied Headquarters communique today.

General MacArthur's communique added that « the effectiveness of the 2nd Japanese army defending New Guinea is approaching its end » and that the enemy will sustain « calamitous losses. »

In British New Guinea, Allied planes bombed and strafed enemy communication routes. At Sansopar in Dutch New Guinea, where American troops made a surprise landing last Saturday, a Reuter correspondent reported the surrender in group of 90 Japanese, this being the first recorded occasion of a Japanese group surrender in the Southwest Pacific.

A communique from Admiral Nimitz' headquarters stated that American forces on Guam were pushing slowly ahead against stiffening enemy resistance on the northern half of the island.

A single American reconnaissance plane bombed Japanese installations on Nauru Island. Continued Allied air attacks were reported on widespread Japanese targets. (Reuter)

CHINESE CONTROL TWO-THIRDS OF WAINGMAW

KANDY, CEYLON, August 5 — Chinese troops crossing the Irrawaddy River south of Myitkyina have captured two-thirds of the town of Waingmaw, as well as the levies east of the river, it was announced here today in Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique.

In the Manipur Hills, except for limited gains on the Tiddim Road south of Churanchandpur, where enemy rearguards have fallen back under heavy Allied artillery fire, there have been no new developments.

Conditions inside Hengyang, where Chinese troops have been beseiged for 49 days, still are fairly good, a war correspondent reported today.

General Joseph Stilwell, U. S. commander-in-chief in China, who is visiting here, stated today at a press conference, « The Japanese have been thrown into a terrible tailspin by the Allied attacks on the Burma front. The best of four enemy divisions have been eliminated. Fifty thousand Japanese have been killed.

The general revealed that the victory in the north and the capture of Myitkyina had already permitted transport supply planes to fly at a much lower level and in greater safety. (Reuter)

U. S. ITALY-RUSSIA SHUTTLE FLIGHT

MOSCOW, August 5 — American Lightnings and Mustangs, in a shuttle flight from Italy to Russia, yesterday strafed the German airdrome at Focsani, Rumania, and shot up enemy communications.

The shuttle flight was marked by a dramatic rescue episode when 20-year old Flight Officer Richard Andrews landed in a Rumanian meadow and picked up a fellow Lightning pilot, Richard Willsie, who had been shot down. Other Lighinings circled around staving off Messerschmidts while the rescue was effected.

Rescuers and rescued arrived safely at the Russian base. Flight officer Andrews said:

Willsie set fire to his grounded plane, before climbing into Andrew's plane, and seemed more concerned that he had lost the one assigned to his commanding officer than over the hazards he had gone through.

«I tried to make my way back to the Russian lines as I went down,» he said, «but I was mighty happy to see Andrews.» (Reuter)

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE MORE ENEMY STRONGHOLDS

LONDON, August 5 — A number of enemy strongholds have been captured by Yugoslav Partisan troops in the last few days, today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters said.

General MacArthur's communique added that «the effectiveness of the 2nd Japanese army defending New Guinea is approaching its end» and that the enemy will sustain «calamitous losses.»

In British New Guinea, Allied planes bombed and strafed enemy communication routes. At Sansopar in Dutch New Guinea, where American troops made a surprise landing last Saturday, a Reuter correspondent reported the surrender in group of 90 Japanese, this being the first recorded occasion of a Japanese group surrender in the Southwest Pacific.

A communique from Admiral Nimitz' headquarters stated that American forces on Guam were pushing slowly ahead against stiffening enemy resistance on the northern half of the island.

A single American reconnaissance plane bombed Japanese installations on Nauru Island. Continued Allied air attacks were reported on widespread Japanese targets. (Reuter)

CHINESE CONTROL TWO-THIRDS OF WAINGMAW

KANDY, CEYLON, August 5 — Chinese troops crossing the Irrawaddy River south of Myitkyina have captured two-thirds of the town of Waingmaw, as well as the levies east of the river, it was announced here today in Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten's communique.

In the Manipur Hills, except for limited gains on the Tiddim Road south of Churanchandpur, where enemy rearguards have fallen back under heavy Allied artillery fire, there have been no new developments.

Conditions inside Hengyang, where Chinese troops have been beseiged for 40 days, still are fairly good, a war correspondent reported today.

General Joseph Stilwell, U. S. commander-in-chief in China, who is visiting here, stated today at a press conference. «The Japanese have been thrown into a terrible tailspin by the Allied attacks on the Burma front. The best of four enemy divisions have been eliminated. Fifty thousand Japanese have been killed.

The general revealed that the victory in the north and the capture of Myitkyina had already permitted transport supply planes to fly at a much lower level and in greater safety. (Reuter)

JAPS PLEAD FOR ARMY-CIVILIAN HARMONY

WASHINGTON, August 5 — The Japanese Premier, General Kuniaki Koiso, pleaded today for greater harmony between the civil and military chiefs of Japan, the Japanese News Agency, Domei, said.

Simultaneous with this plea, which the agency said was «more important than any other matter,» came the announcement of the formation of a new Supreme War Council, which is supposed to map basic policy for directing the war and to obtain «greater harmony and coordination between fighters and civil services.» (PWB)

FAULTY AMMUNITION CAUSES GERMAN DEATHS

LONDON, August 5 — Many German troops have been killed in accidents caused by faulty ammunition, according to a German High Command document which has fallen into Allied hands.

The document, which is a set of instructions to German officers, revealed further signs of Germany's acute shortage of skilled labor and raw materials, and the effect which Allied airpower has had upon German transport facilities.

German officers are instructed to meet the complaints of their men by explaining the reasons for the sub-standard quality of the ammunition, which, according to the document, are the attempt to increase output with mass production methods without sufficient tooling; an increasing use of sub-

AIR OFFENSIVE REDUCES TRAFFIC IN EUROPE

LONDON, August 5 — A Hungarian news agency announcement said that both passenger and goods traffic on Hungarian railways have been severely curtailed, and added that within the next few days new restrictions will take effect.

These restrictions, and the recently-announced German prohibition of all non-military auto traffic in Belgium and France, reflect the growing strain on the German-controlled European transportation systems as a result of Allied air attacks.

The British Ministry of Economic Warfare announced that during the past two months, rail traffic over the Budapest-Bucharest and Budapest-Ploesti lines has been greatly reduced by the air offensive in that sector, and that Danube traffic has been at an extremely low level. (PWB)

DROTTNINGHOLM TO U.K. WITH INTERNEES

LISBON, August 5 — The Swedish repatriation liner Drottningholm sailed for England this morning with 900 British subjects who are returning from Germany in exchange for German subjects, a dispatch from Reuter stated.

The British citizens came from Nazi prison camps in France and Germany, and were exchanged for a similar number of German internees from South Africa. The British were nearly three weeks on their journey through France, due to the dislocation of rail traffic caused by Allied bombings. (Reuter)

HITLER'S GENERALS ILL-FATED

LONDON, August 5 — Being a German general is no longer so safe an assignment in the present war as it was during the last one, William Forrest wrote in the News Chronicle. He said:

"Von Schleicher, whom Hitler succeeded as chancellor, was shot in the blood purge of June, 1934. In February 1938, Hitler dismissed: War Minister Marshal Blomberg, commander-in-chief General Fritsch, and chief of staff General Beck. Fritsch died mysteriously on the Polish front in September 1939. Blomberg was reported to be in prison soon after the war began.

"Beck was one of the three generals implicated in the recent plot against Hitler. He committed suicide. Of the others implicated, Olbricht was shot and Hoeppner is awaiting trial."

Naming the German generals who have surrendered, Forrest said:

"Arthur Schmidt, defender of Bardia, was the first general to surrender to the British in 1942. Von Arnim surrendered in Tunisia. Paulus of Stalingrad surrendered with 14 subordinate generals. Schlieben of Cherbourg, having sent out a "no surrender" call to his men, came out of a 20-foot deep shelter and gave himself up to the Americans.

"In the past four months, five generals have died "by accident". Dietl of Finland, Hube, Jodl, Grimm and Vahl of the SS. General Korten was killed in the bomb plot.

"The "heroes" of the march into Russia — Leeb, Bock, List, and Kleist — have one by one disappeared in disgrace." (OWI)

GENERALS PURGE SHOWS ROT HAS BEGUN

LONDON, August 5 — Commenting today on Hitler's extraordinary step because rumor, spreading wide since the plot of July 20, has cast suspicion on the whole corps of higher officers. To try to present a clear picture and reestablish the loyalty of the majority of the corps, a generals' court has been set up.

"At the same time, the whole process is fundamentally a purge of the Army by the real dispensers of power in Germany — the inner ring, composed of Party leaders and desperately loyal generals." (OWI)

BATTLES ARE NAZI STRUGGLE FOR TIME

LONDON, August 5 — "It must be left to history to reveal the shortcomings and underlying reasons which led to the mobilization of German reserves at such a late stage," said a Nazi military correspondent quoted Friday by the German News Agency.

"The mobilization of these forces," the quotation continued, "was necessary, and should have been possible long ago. The question arises whether the measures now taken will become effective in time to attain a stabilization on the Eastern Front."

An article from Goebbels' Voelkischer Beobachter, broadcast Friday, said:

"Germany's enemies were loath to grant Germany the time necessary for her to complete her program. In view of this, it must be the German Command's temporary aim to postpone the decision until our counter-measures can take effect. Everything that takes place at present on all fronts is a dramatic struggle for time." (OWI)

GENERALS PURGE SHOWS ROT HAS BEGUN

LONDON, August 5 — Commenting today on Hitler's purge of the German generals, the British Daily Express said:

"This means more trouble for Hitler. This dissatisfaction among his generals has spread so far that nothing will suffice but an overhaul of the entire Wehrmacht leadership. Dismiss the eyewash in the headquarters statement about the Army's asking for it. Every German general is under suspicion of treason. Will any of them fight the better for that?

"This is only the beginning. The rot will spread. The pattern of German collapse becomes clearer and clearer. The strain on the Nazi organisation mounts as the brains and skill of the Wehrmacht become more and more alienated." (OWI)

PURGE SHOWS MAGNITUDE OF CRISIS

LONDON, August 5 — The news that a field marshal and nine German generals have already been judged guilty of complicity in the anti-Hitler plot, or of desertion, proclaims the magnitude of Germany's crisis, the diplomatic correspondent of the London Times wrote today. He said that there are others known to be in the plot who have not been officially named.

Summarizing Hitler's motives in ordering the purge, the Times said:

"Germany's enemies were loath to grant Germany the time necessary for her to complete her program. GRANARIES OF PEOPLE DRIVE CONTINUES

ROME, August 5 — Violators of the Granaries of the People law continue to receive stiff penalties from the courts, it was indicated in reports reaching the capital.

In Matera, the Provincial Tribunal has sentenced a threshing machine mechanic to two years in prison and fined him 100,000 lire for hiding grain destined for the Granaries of the People. A farmer who failed to turn in his portion of grain was sentenced to five years in prison and fined 150,000 lire.

In Sicily, the Tribunal of Caltanisetta sentenced a grain grower to six years in prison and fined him 80,000 lire for withholding 34 quintals of grain.

The Prefect of Palermo, as well as the mayor of the city, together with other government officials, have completed a tour of wheat-growing areas. They addressed a number of farmers' meetings, emphasizing the importance of the wheat harvest through the Granaries of the People. They pointed out that not only the well-being of families, but the honor and dignity of Sicilians depend upon the success of this wheat harvesting plan. (UNN)

JORDANA AIDED IN STOPPING EXPORTS TO NAZIS

WASHINGTON, August 5 — Count Francisco Gomez Jordana Sousa, Spanish Foreign Affairs Minister, whose death was announced yesterday, took a leading part in the prompt acceptance by the Spanish Government of the Allied guarantee not to violate Spanish neutrality during the time of the North African landings, the U. S. State Department announced today. The statement said:

"When the Spanish Government failed to obtain equivalent guarantees from the Germans, Count Jordana likewise took the leading part in warning the Germans that Spain would resist any effort on their part to cross Spanish territory in an attempt to close the Straits of Gibraltar to our forces.

"This Government conducted a series of important negotiations with Count Jordana which brought great benefits to the Spanish people, as well as to the United States and its Allies. The recent wolfram negotiations were outstanding in this category.

"With his cooperation, many thousands of Allied and stateless refugees who had escaped from Nazi oppression and entered Spain, were evacuated with American assistance to destinations of their choice."

The State Department also announced that Acting Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, had sent a telegram to the Foreign Affairs Ministry in Madrid, expressing the deep regret of the United States at the untimely death of the Count. (OWI)

BRITISH ENGINEERS AID SOVIET REBUILDING

LONDON, August 5 — British engineers and technicians have made possible the rebuilding of the Dnieper hydro-electric power station, Sam Lesser, a member of the British Engineering Union, said in a BBC broadcast yesterday.

Material valued at four million pounds, for other power plants, has been delivered to the Soviet Union under Lend-Lease through the U. S. government, he added.

Mr. Lesser said that the Dnieper plant will be electrified with British equipment and one of the largest steel foundries in Britain is already at work on the castings for the huge turbo-generators. He stated that British engineers have also developed power units which follow in the wake of the Red Army, and enable Russians to resume public utility services as soon as they have cleared a town of the enemy. (BBC)

Mr. Henderson said that world currency stabilization is imperative. He added that the U.S. should settle foreign trade matters, looking toward lower tariffs, greater access to raw materials, and overall policy on oil, food, shipping, airlines, and communications.

Mr. Henderson spoke at the first of a series of forums sponsored by the newly-formed Liberal Party, which advises the immediate creation of a United Nations Council to check aggression as represented in the political, social, and economic causes of war. (OWI)

OCCUPIED AREAS

FFI DESTROY 720,000 LITERS OF NAZI PETROL

LONDON, August 5 — The Germans lost 720,000 liters of petrol as a result of a daring act of sabotage by the French Forces of the Interior, authoritative French sources reported last night. The action occurred in a tunnel in the railway station of Yvoire.

Four wagons loaded with quick lime were made to run back into the tunnel, crashing into a 36-wagon petrol train, each wagon holding 20,000 liters. The crash derailed the train and overturned some of the wagons, the petrol pouring on to the tracks. The last wagon was loaded with explosives which blew up, setting the petrol on fire and turning the tunnel into a vast furnace.

The fire lasted two days, as early attempts to put out the fire proved disastrous, owing to the action of the water on quick lime. The Germans then used compressed air tubes, but failed to check the fire.

It was estimated that the tunnel will be out of action for at least six weeks.

In the Seine et Loire Department, a detachment of FFI members engaged a German column, killing 20 Germans and capturing 80 machine guns and a quantity of ammunition.

French forces now control the Haute Savoie so thoroughly that on Tuesday morning they were able to hold a grand march complete with a military band, according to the Swiss paper Journal de Geneve. All the inhabitants of the district turned out to watch the parade.

In the Morbihan Department, which American troops are now entering, one of the most highly organized areas of Maquis resistance, French forces have killed 1,400 Germans in the past three weeks with a loss to themselves of 300. (OWI)

PEACETIME AIR ROUTES PLANNED

LONDON, August 5 — The British war cabinet has authorised Lord Beaverbrook to resume conversations with the United States Assistant Secretary of State, Adolf Berle, on the international civil aviation policy, it was announced in the House of Commons yesterday by Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air.

Balfour told the House that Britain and the United States have made a complete schedule of air routes to be run all over the world after the war, and that for war-type planes of major importance it has been decided that civil aircraft will have equal priority with military aircraft in design and production in England.

Balfour said he hoped that discussions would be held with representatives of Russia and other powers, in preparation for the international conference. (PWB)

NORWEGIAN RESISTANCE

WASHINGTON, August 5 — Fighting is going on in Valdres, Norway, in a mountainous district, between the police and Norwegian youths in concealment from labor mobilisation, the Stockholm paper Tidningen said yesterday.

The Swedish newspaper Aftontidningen said Friday that the Underground Norwegian Press recently made a strong appeal to all Norwegians to be careful what they say to Germans and quislings searching for youths who are evading mobilisation. The Underground press was also quoted as telling employers to show understanding towards employees who, «owing to their Underground activity, cannot always fulfill their civilian work absolutely perfectly.»

The Goeteborgs-Posten said Tuesday that the Norwegian Underground press recently stated, «No good Norwegian should accept promotion within Nazi-managed institutes.»

The Morgon Tidningen said yesterday that tension in the Norwegian frontier areas has increased considerably. It added that a high Nazi official in Oslo was reported killed some days ago, and suggested that this was «probably done by Norwegian patriots.»

BALKAN SATELLITES SEE NAZI DIFFICULTIES

LONDON, August 5 — Sweeping changes in the Bulgarian administration were reported yesterday by the German News Agency, DNB. Director-General Bonchev, of the Ministry of the Interior, was succeeded by Constantin Michailov, a Sofia District Court judge, and Mandev, Director of Administration, was replaced by General Manov.

Administrative heads of various Bulgarian towns were also reshuffled, added DNB.

The German Balkan news agency, Transkontinent Press, Friday reported lengthy talks between the Bulgarian Premier, Bagrianov, and the Sobranje president, Kalfov.

A Hungarian comment on Bulgaria's critical situation was transmitted yesterday by the Hungarian News Agency, which quoted a dispatch by the Sofia correspondent of the Budapest Pester Lloyd as saying: «The Bulgarian nation, to which history has allotted a position at the crossroads, today faces heavy trials... In this fateful hour, the Bagrianov Government must lead the Bulgarian people on the right road.»

In Rumania, the Bucharest paper Porunca Vremii said recently that people have already started to establish alibis to «bridge the gap between the past and the present.»

The paper admitted that the present situation is a very difficult one for the German High Command. It said:

TURKEY EXPELS GERMANS

ANKARA, August 5 — The Turkish Government has decided to permit German Jews and anti-Nazis, whose lives might be endangered if they returned to Germany, to remain in Turkey, said a correspondent of the United Press.

The correspondent added that 100 undesirable Germans were ordered to leave Turkey immediately, while an estimated 1,500 Germans still in Turkey have been given until next Saturday to leave the country.

One thousand have already left for Germany, and those who remain behind will probably be interned, the report added.

It was announced yesterday by the Turkish radio that the exchange of Turkish people living in Germany for Germans living in Turkey is now fixed. (Reuter - UP)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 5 — Today's communique:

LAND: Considerable progress has been made by the 8th Army south of Florence. Troops of a South African division, with units of a British Guards brigade having forced the crossing of the River Ema during the night of August 3/4, and taking the enemy strongpoint of Galluzzo, on the far bank the early morning of August 4, were able to press forward to the outskirts of the city. On their left, New Zealand troops which won the high ground two days ago made a considerable advance, which was badly hampered by demolitions.

Farther west, troops of an Indian division advanced north from their bridgehead over the Pesa River, and are now within 1,000 yards of Signa. East of Florence, troops of a British division have taken Bagno a Ripoli and are within 1000 yards of the Arno north of the town, while the enemy is still on the high ground to the east.

Other British troops, driving up towards Pontassieve, have occupied Rignano. North and northeast of Arezzo, limited gains have been made in the Adriatic sector.

southeast of Landivy, and while fighting continues in Mortain, advance troops have reached the area of Barenton. A large part of the Foret de Saint Sever is in our hands.

Esquay and Evrecy have been cleared of the enemy, and leading troops are reported in the area of Vacognes and Amaye sur Orne. Further south, our position has been improved by the capture of Ondefontaine. Determined enemy counter-attacks in the area east and northeast of the Vire have been frustrated.

AIR: Yesterday, escorted heavy bombers attacked in widely separated districts of France, including airfields at Lille and Achiet, and railway bridges at Etaples, a coastal battery at Pas de Calais, and oil storage depots at Pauillac and Bec Dambres, near Bordeaux. Medium bombers attacked railway yards at Montfort and Beauvais, a railway embankment at Epernon, and a concentration of enemy troops south of Aunay. Light bombers went for rail targets in western France and blew up an ammunition train near Bordeaux. Fighter-bombers flew reconnaissance flights beyond the battle area and in northeastern France, in addition to attacking oil dumps at Angers, barges on the Seine, and an airfield near Amiens. In these operations, locomotives, rolling stock, and motor transports were destroyed. A coastal vessel was blown up during an attack by rocket-firing fighters on a convoy off the Dutch coast. During last night, road and rail transport and enemy concentrations were attacked by medium and light bombers. Five enemy aircraft were shot down over Normandy.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 5 — Saturday night's communique:

During August 5, northwest and west of Rezekne (Rezhitsa), our troops in the course of their advance, occupied over 60 populated localities, including Vichnye, Salunski, Labanyi, Romuli, Beltunye, Turkevichi, Ozdiena, Rubtsanye, and Sixtuli.

Northwest and west of Kaunas (Kovno), our troops with fighting continued to advance and occupied over 40 populated localities, including Vidzulyi, Kaynishki, Budkishki, Kruki, Ingolo, Stoshki, Begluzhe, Treulne, and Selenushki.

North and northwest of Siedlce, our troops with fighting occupied over 70 populated localities, including Kamyenchik, Dzezhdi, Yablonya, Robuh, Sozhihv, Jaroslavel, Kobusy, Yniari, Yasobodi, and Ninchen-Prozhiv.

In the triangle of the union of the rivers San and Vistula, our troops were successfully fighting for the liquidation of the enemy bridgehead and captured the towns of Rubvadie and Pankobzhek, and also occupied over 30 other populated localities, including Maydan, Skovezhin, Zhavy, Dozhiste, Yeksushe, and the railway stations of Rozvady, Zvenye, Sobu, and Tarnobzhek.

Southwest of Sandomir, our troops continued their operations for expansion of the bridgehead on the left bank of the Vistula, and occupied several populated localities.

Northwest of Zheshuk, our troops, in the course of their advance, occupied over 40 populated localities, including Volku, Rodznyati, Mlodohu, Stranka, and the railway stations of Padyen, Yaeliani, and Hozheluk.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front, continuing their offensive, forced the River Stryj, and today captured by storm the large railway junction and important German strongpoint in the approaches of the Carpathians, the town of Stryj.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During August 4, our troops damaged or destroyed a total of 128 German tanks. In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 85 enemy planes were shot down.

ANKARA, August 5 — The Turkish Government has decided to permit German Jews and anti-Nazis, whose lives might be endangered if they returned to Germany, to remain in Turkey, said a correspondent of the United Press.

The correspondent added that 100 undesirable Germans were ordered to leave Turkey immediately, while an estimated 1,500 Germans still in Turkey have been given until next Saturday to leave the country.

One thousand have already left for Germany, and those who remain behind will probably be interned, the report added.

It was announced yesterday by the Turkish radio that the exchange of Turkish people living in Germany for Germans living in Turkey is now fixed. (Reuter - UP)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 5 — Today's communique:

LAND: Considerable progress has been made by the 8th Army south of Florence. Troops of a South African division, with units of a British Guards brigade having forced the crossing of the River Ema during the night of August 3/4, and taking the enemy strongpoint of Galluzzo, on the far bank the early morning of August 4, were able to press forward to the outskirts of the city. On their left, New Zealand troops which won the high ground two days ago made a considerable advance, which was badly hampered by demolitions.

Farther west, troops of an Indian division advanced north from their bridgehead over the Pesa River, and are now within 1,000 yards of Signa. East of Florence, troops of a British division have taken Bagno a Ripoli and are within 1000 yards of the Arno north of the town, while the enemy is still on the high ground to the east.

Other British troops, driving up towards Pontassieve, have occupied Rignano. North and northeast of Arezzo, limited gains have been made in the Adriatic sector.

In the Adriatic sector, Polish and Italian troops of the 8th Army have advanced their patrol line more than two miles in many places across the Misa River.

Activity on the 5th Army front has been confined to very active patrolling, in which many clashes occurred, and exchanges of artillery fire.

AIR: Tactical aircraft yesterday attacked enemy communications, including rail lines and bridges, highways, transport, and other targets in northern Italy, southern France, and the battle area. Other aircraft were active against military objectives in southern Albania.

There were no heavy bomber operations.

In these operations, three of our aircraft are missing. One enemy aircraft was destroyed, and two of ours are missing from night operations on Aug 3/4.

MAAF flew approximately 700 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 5 — Today's communique:

LAND: Allied troops have made rapid progress in Brittany, fanning out to the neighbourhoods of Loudeac, Mauron, Derval, and Chateaubriant. Rennes is in our hands, and Dol has been cleared of the enemy. Our forward troops are already beyond Fougeres. Other forces are advancing

During last night, road and rail transport and enemy concentrations were attacked by medium and light bombers. Five enemy aircraft were shot down over Normandy.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 5 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

German units were repulsed by patriots at Valsugana after lively and protracted engagements. The enemy lost 700 men in dead and wounded; 47 vehicles were destroyed and a great deal of war material captured.

Four German batteries have been captured by the patriots in the Lanzo Valley after fierce encounters.

A German garrison, stationed in the Cadore sector, has been made prisoner

At Bussano del Grappa, patriots exploded a powder magazine and destroyed two complete trains bearing war material.

One of the Garibaldi brigades seized the Bobbio-Torriglia road. The Fascist leader of Placenza has been made prisoner. The intense activity of the patriots in this province compelled the Germans to send 10,000 heavily-armed soldiers to this sector. They were stationed in the military arsenal of the 4th Artillery Battery, and in other barracks at Placenza.

Patriots have given noteworthy support to the Allied troops in the fighting for the liberation of Florence.

Patriots have executed the Fascist S.S. leader, Del Sole.

Colonel Incerpi was shot by the Germans July 20. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 5 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, the enemy yesterday undertook strong attacks to the north of the Vire, as well as to the northeast and the east of Avranches. The attacks, which were supported by tanks, were repelled after hard fighting; several enemy groups which were encircled behind our lines were annihilated.

In Brittany, the garrisons of our strongpoints resisted stubbornly the enemy motorized formations advancing further to the west and the southwest.

Battle planes participated effectively in the ground fighting; they dispersed enemy columns. At night, localities occupied by the enemy and anti-aircraft batteries were the target of our fighter-bombers and night battle planes.

In the French rear area, 59 terrorists were annihilated.

The V-1 retaliatory fire continues to cover London.

In Italy, our troops were withdrawn to the area to the north of Florence, in order to spare the historic town with its irreplacable art treasures. The enemy shelled the town yesterday all day long with heavy artillery. To the north of Arezzo, violent fighting is going on with the enemy, who has penetrated into our positions.

In the course of mopping up operations on the Ligurian coastal sector, more than 100 terrorists were liquidated.

Italian torpedo fliers sank a freighter of 7,000 tons and damaged two additional ones of 14,000 tons to the north of Benghazi.

In the Carpathians and in the great Vistula bend, numerous attacks of the enemy were nullified immediately in the course of counter-attacks; only in the area of Milec, and to the southeast of Warka, were the Soviets able to gain ground; counter-attacks are here under way.

To the east of Warsaw, tank forces of the Army and of the Waffen SS, as well as the parachute - Hermann Goering - continued their attacks under the command of Field Marshall General Model, against the encircled Bolsheviks who offered stubborn resistance. Enemy relief attacks failed.

Between the central Bug and the Niemen, the enemy attacked again, particularly at both sides of Bialistok and in the Suwalki-Sakiai sector. His breakthrough attempts were generally frustrated after grim fighting; at some points, embittered fighting is raging. In the course of this battle, yesterday alone 119 enemy tanks were knocked out within the sector of a tank army.

At Mitau and Pauske, penetrations from the previous days were eliminated.

To the east of the Dvina, to the northeast of Schwanenburg, and on the Narva Isthmus, strong enemy attacks were either repelled or halted in the course of fluctuating fighting; a large number of tanks were destroyed.

Forty-one enemy planes were shot down in the course of aerial combats, and by anti aircraft artillery.

In the course of a flight of enemy long-range fighters into Rumanian territory, German and Rumanian air defense forces shot down 10 enemy aircraft.

Enemy bombers yesterday attacked several places in northern Germany, especially Hamburg, Bremen, Anklam, and Schwerin; 46 enemy aircraft were destroyed by air defense forces.

At night, some enemy planes dropped bombs in the area of Insterburg and Gumbinen. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

German Overseas Stations: It is asserted in Milan that the bomb found in Vatican precincts was placed there by the direction of the newly-formed Atheist movement in Rome. This movement has as its avowed object the undermining of the influence of the Roman Catholic Church. Total mobilisation in Germany is proceeding so fast that it is stated in Das Reich that over a million workers will be released for armament production. Practical suggestions to further the war effort are pouring in to the Reich Commissioner from every part of Germany. The Voelkischer Beobachter, in reporting the meeting of Reich leaders in Germany, states that unity between the Army, the Party, and the Nation is the basis for victory.

German Home Service: Colonel General Lindeman is said to have no connexion with the General Lindeman involved in the conspiruter of June 20.

Transocean and DNB: The Soviet advance towards the East Prussian border is stated to be due to: numerical superiority in weapons, especially tanks; overwhelming superiority in manpower and the favorable nature of the country to advancing troops. Military circles in Berlin, however, report that the advance has been checked. Only at Varka bridgehead (west of the Vistula), and near Suvalki (east of the Prussian border), are the Soviets still attacking strongly. On the western front, conditions in the past 24 hours remain unchanged. Skirmishes have occurred between German defence units and American scouting detachments, with heavy losses to the latter. The Allies, on August 3 and 4, lost 400 tanks and other armor; the total tank losses represent more than two British tank divisions. Moscow has made no comment on the rupture in Turkish-German relations, and this is regarded in Germany as significant of Soviet disapproval of the fact that no Soviet bases have been granted in Turkey. Commenting on the death of Count Jordana, Foreign minister of Spain, Transocean correspondent René Sayer states that his successor will be expected to pursue his policy of keeping Spain out of the war at all costs. A German newspaper champions Japan against the insulting remarks of Churchill, and states that they represent his anger at Britain's exclusion from the Far East.

Fascist Radio: Fighting is reported to be still in progress south of Florence, with heavy British losses. Serious damage to Florence has been caused by Allied shelling and bombing, and nearly all the bridges over the Arno have been destroyed. Italian torpedo-carrying planes have sunk 10 Allied cargo vessels in the Mediterranean. Artillery duels are reported in the Adriatic Coastal sector.

Late broadcasts give the news that Kesselring has withdrawn troops to the nothern bank of the Arno, and that the suburbs on the southern bank of Florence have been occupied by New Zealanders.

The 22.30 broadcast said that the entire city had been evacuated.

WAR FRONTS

BREST PENINSULA SEALED OFF

SHAEF, August 6 — Striking out through Brittany in several directions simultaneously, American forces have sealed off the Brest Peninsula by reaching the River Loire, near Saint Nazaire; have smashed into the great port of Brest itself, on the western tip of the peninsula; and have liberated the city of Vannes, about 30 miles east of the port of Lorient.

Another armored column has reached Carhaix, a junction of roads leading east from Brest and north from Quimper. There is still heavy resistance to the Allied drive [illegible] Saint Nole and there is fighting at Chateauneuf is not known. The British force suffered a small number of casualties.

Armored Thrust

Further east, American forces are pushing steadily ahead against the German salient at Vire, against tough resistance.

They have advanced through the Foret de St. Sever and have entered the village of Chap du Boult. The forest is not entirely cleared of the enemy, however.

Allied armored units are in the outskirts of Vire, while other forces closing in on the city have advanced to La Papillonniere, two miles northwest of Vire. Mont Champ, on the Vire-Aunay road, has been taken.

To the south, forging eastward against enemy panzer units and paratroops, the Americans are in the village of Le Mesnil Gilbert.

American forces have advanced between Villedieu and Mortain, in the area of Cherence la Roussel, against slight resistance. The German strongpoint holding up the Allied push at Saint Pois has been reduced and counter-attacks repulsed.

In the central sector of the American drive eastward, a powerful armored column has thrust beyond Fougeres on the military highway to Paris. Vitre, another vital communications center, about 23 miles east of Rennes, has also been taken.

Other American forces have captured Mayenne, 53 miles northeast of Rennes, and are driving on Laval.

The Allied drive to the east is forming a threat to the flank of the Germans holding below Caen. British forces have entered the road junction of Aunay sur Odon after cleaning up, and Villers Bocage and Evrecy are in our hands. The west bank of the Orne River has been cleared of the Germans as far south as the village of Le Homs, just north of Thury Harcourt.

Canadian troops in the sector east of the Orne and south of Caen improved their positions by gaining ground in local attacks.

The British advance against German positions southwest of Caen was officially described as «significant and satisfactory,» for this area has always been the hinge of the German line and the enemy has fought grimly since D-Day to retain his hold on this line.

Loss of U-Boat Bases

One correspondent states that six of the eight U-boat flotillas in Western France are at St. Nazaire, Brest and Lorient. The loss of the ports will leave the enemy with only two bases on the French Atlantic coast — La Pallice and Bordeaux.

There is still heavy resistance to the Allied drive toward Saint Malo and there is fighting at Chateauneuf, eight miles south of the town. Pontivy, an important road and rail junction about 60 miles west of Rennes, has been taken.

The American advances far exceed anything achieved by the Germans during their blitzkrieg break-through in France in 1940. American tanks have covered over 125 miles in their drive to Brest since they were reported at Rennes two days ago.

It was announced in London today that French parachutists landed behind the German lines in Brittany with heavy anti-tank guns and large quantities of explosives. One officer said that the Germans were so terrified that they remained in their barracks, leaving all the railway lines free for use in carrying out their missions. They destroyed German trucks filled with troops and freed large areas from the enemy.

A German convoy and escort numbering seven ships were destroyed early today southwest of Saint Nazaire, the British Admiralty announced. The cruiser HMS Bellona and destroyers HMCS Haida, Tartar, Ashanti and Iroquois encountered the German convoy proceeding southward, and in the action which followed all seven ships were destroyed.

Later another convoy was encountered off Saint Nazaire but escaped into port and the extent of its damage

LATE BULLETINS

U.S. TASK FORCE SINKS 12 JAP SHIPS

PEARL HARBOR, August 6 — A powerful United States task force has sunk 12 Japanese ships, including a large destroyer and five smaller vessels, and damaged 22 others, during a two-day battle Thursday and Friday off the Bonin and Volcano Islands in the west central Pacific, it was announced here tonight. The communique added that a light Japanese cruiser also was probably sunk.

During the two-day battle, the American task force, which included aircraft carriers, damaged airfields, towns and scores of military installations on the two islands.

At least 38 Japanese vessels were reported sunk or damaged in the action. Sixteen carrier-based planes were reported lost. No mention was made in the communique of damage to the United States ships. (Reuter)

AMERICANS CAPTURE LAVAL

SHAEF, August 6 — Allied troops have captured Laval, 42 miles east of Rennes; Mayenne, 56 miles northeast of Rennes; Ambrieres le Grand, seven miles north of Mayenne; and Chateau Gontier, 17 miles south of Laval, it was reported by Reuter tonight.

American forces have taken about 83,000 prisoners since D-Day, 12,000 of whom were taken in Brittany. (Reuter)

The U-boats, he writes, failed to prevent the concentration of men and materials in the British Isles before the invasion. They failed even to inflict losses upon the vast number of ships engaged. Now the armies which they were to have sunk in their transports before ever they reached land, are hunting them down. The great concrete pens, the supply depots, the repair plants, the accumulations of materials built up at such great expense of labour and material over the last four years, will now have to be abandoned. It is the final stage in the failure of the U-boats which Hitler boasted would destroy the naval power of Britain and the United States and keep the shores of the fortress of Europe inviolate.

Today's SHAEF communique states that the enemy bombed Pontorson and Avranches early yesterday but did little damage.

At midday yesterday Allied heavy bombers struck at the railway bridge at Etaples and submarine pens at Brest. Hits were scored on the pens with 12,000 pound bombs. In the evening, storage depots at Bassens and Blac, near Bordeaux and at Pauillac were attacked by other heavy bombers. Two heavy bombers are missing. Medium and light bombers attacked communications and direct support was given to the fighting troops by fighter-bombers and fighters, which also provided bomber escort.

GERMANS WITHDRAW ON ADRIATIC SECTOR

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 6 — On the 8th Army front, interest has switched to the Adriatic coast, where the Germans are withdrawing along the whole sector. Poles and Italians have advanced several miles beyond the Misa river.

On Route 69, 8th Army forward troops have advanced beyond Rignano. In the Pratomagno mass, Loro Ciuffanna has been occupied and patrols are active in the high ground north of Castiglion. Pushing up Route 71, forward elements are beyond Subbiano, and in the hills west of the road we occupy Bibbiano and Monte Grillo, which overlooks the river Salutio valley. East of Route 71, in the Alpe di Catenaia, Monte Altuccia was captured after heavy fighting.

All Senigallia is now in Allied hands and 8th Army troops have advanced against slight shelling beyond the port to Cavallari, Scapezzano and Roncitelli, two miles beyond the Misa river.

Work on repairing port installations at Ancona is proceeding in record time and most of the port is now in use.

Guardsmen who, with South African infantry and armor, have been the leading troops in the advance from Rome to Florence, to commemorate successful and happy association with their Dominion comrades and in honor of good work done together, have incorporated the South African divisional flash with their own.

Pontoon Bridges

British and Dominion troops now hold a line about 1,000 yards south of the Arno on both sides of Florence, from Montelupo to a point four miles from the city's eastern bounds. The Allies occupy a sector of Florence on the south bank of the river, where active patrolling continues.

On the western flank of the 8th Army front, Allied troops patrolled into Empoli. Further east, on Route 67, forward elements found Montelupo occupied and are now 500 yards away at the nearest point on the north bank of Pesa river. German long-range guns in the commanding hills north of Florence are shelling the city south of the Arno with 17 mm. guns. We are not using any artillery against the city. There is considerable sniping activity in the town and lively duels are frequent across the river by Ponte Vecchio from under cover of demolished buildings.

Fifth Army patrols crossed the Arno River to probe enemy positions and returned after several hours behind

River. Forward patrols reached Nevola River. Further northeast, Polish troops also crossed the river to Brugnetto and Monte di Ripe, on the Nevola River, and to San Vito, without contacting the enemy. (PRO)

SOVIETS CAPTURE DROHOBYCZ

MOSCOW, August 6 — The large communication center and regional city of the Ukraine, Drohobycz, was captured by troops of the 4th Ukrainian Front, Marshal Stalin announced in a special order of the day to Colonel General Petrov.

Drohobycz, 40 miles southwest of Lvov, is an important oil center as well as strongpoint of the German defenses covering the approaches to Borislav through the Carpathians.

The capture of Drohobycz follows closely the liberation of Stryj, to the southeast, by Marshal Koniev's 1st Ukrainian Army and indicates a new drive through the Carpathian foothills to Czechoslovakia.

On the western extremity of Marshal Koniev's front, his forces are thrusting westward toward Cracow, trying to keep pace with Marshal Rokossovsky's troops spearheading toward Cracow from the northeast. Marshal Rokossovsky has extended his bridgehead on the western bank of the southern Vistula.

Drive towards Silesia

Streams of Russian tanks and infantry formations are extending the bridgehead thrown across the Vistula northeast of Cracow yesterday and are leaving behind large trapped German forces which are being liquidated, according to latest dispatches from this sector of the front. The surprise push is aimed at the vitally important German industrial region of Silesia. Cavalry patrols are reported to be 30 miles from Cracow and 80 miles from the Silesian border.

First indication of the presence of Russian troops on German soil came last night from the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish paper Morgentidnigen. Referring to the fighting around Suwalki, the correspondent said: « Bloody fighting is going on in East Prussian territory. » He said it was impossible to obtain information regarding the depth of the penetration.

The Germans in southern Poland are said to be seized with panic at the drive to southeast Germany by the two Russian army groups. The German command is faced with the choice of attempting to prevent a junction between Rokossovsky's left flank and Koniev's right flank or throwing the whole of their strength into an emergency defence of Cracow. East of this sector, at the base of the salient in southern Poland, Russian forces have mopped up German groups isolated in the triangle between the Vistula and the San.

Heavy Fighting

The battle for East Prussia is reaching a climax, says Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent. All along the front west of Kaunas, both sides are exerting maximum pressure. The German high command is hurling tanks, mobile guns, infantry and planes into battle almost on a counter-offensive scale. In a single counter-attack the Germans threw in 50 tanks supported by 2,000 men, but the attack was smashed by Soviet guns.

The latest gains have brought the Red Army within less than 50 miles from the German town of Tilsit, just inside the northern border of East Prussia, and have left the Red flag flying over scores of smashed German strongpoints on the Koenigsberg highway.

In the southern sector of the drive on East Prussia, General Chernyakhovsky's 3rd White Russian Army has advanced in a series of swift maneuvers from one zone to fighters, which also provided bomber escort. (Reuter-OWI)

GERMANS WITHDRAW ON ADRIATIC SECTOR

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 6 — On the 8th Army front, interest has switched to the Adriatic coast, where the Germans are withdrawing along the whole sector. Poles and Italians have advanced several miles beyond the Misa river.

On Route 69, 8th Army forward troops have advanced beyond Rignano. In the Pratomagno mass, Loro Ciuffanna has been occupied and patrols are active in the high ground north of Castiglion. Pushing up Route 71, forward elements are beyond Subbiano, and in the hills west of the road we occupy Bibbiano and Monte Grillo, which overlooks the river Solutio valley. East of Route 71, in the Alpe di Catenaia, Monte Altuccia was captured after heavy fighting.

All Senigallia is now in Allied hands and 8th Army troops have advanced against slight shelling beyond the port to Cavallari, Scapezzano and Roncitelli, two miles beyond the Misa river.

Work on repairing port installations at Ancona is proceeding in record time and most of the port is now in use.

Guardsmen who, with South African infantry and armor, have been the leading troops in the advance from Rome to Florence, to commemorate successful and happy association with their Dominion comrades and in honor of good work done together, have incorporated the South African divisional flash with their own.

Pontoon Bridges

British and Dominion troops now hold a line about 1,000 yards south of the Arno on both sides of Florence, from Montelupo to a point four miles from the city's eastern bounds. The Allies occupy a sector of Florence on the south bank of the river, where active patrolling continues.

On the western flank of the 8th Army front, Allied troops patrolled into Empoli. Further east, on Route 67, forward elements found Montelupo occupied and are now 500 yards away at the nearest point on the north bank of Pesa river. German long-range guns in the commanding hills north of Florence are shelling the city south of the Arno with 17 mm. guns. We are not using any artillery against the city. There is considerable sniping activity in the town and lively duels are frequent across the river by Ponte Vecchio from under cover of demolished buildings.

Fifth Army patrols crossed the Arno River to probe enemy positions and returned after several hours behind the German lines. The enemy continued to attempt patrol infiltrations in the 5th Army sector. A small enemy patrol was contacted in the coastal area and all were killed or captured.

Enemy footbridges across the Arno were destroyed at several points by 5th Army mortar fire. There were scattered exchanges of mortar fire. South Pisa was shelled and mortared by the enemy on August 4.

The Arno, from Florence to the sea, has a wide bed 250 to 600 feet across. In summer, however, there is little flow and the actual water gap may vary from 40 to 340 feet between Florence and Pisa; thence from 400 to 600 feet, to the sea.

Between Florence and Pisa, the Germans were able to ford the Arno at several places and to build causeways as well as pontoon bridges. In Florence and Pisa, the river has steep masonry embankments almost 20 feet high. Elsewhere, the river has natural banks of varying heights from Capraia to the sea. There are floodbanks on one or both sides of the river.

On the Polish front, patrols have contacted the enemy in the Genga area. Between Sassoferrato and Route 76, Italian infantry of the 8th Army have reached Barbara across the river and also Serra di Conte, south of the Misa Vistula.

Drive towards Silesia

Streams of Russian tanks and infantry formations are extending the bridgehead thrown across the Vistula north-east of Cracow yesterday and are leaving behind large trapped German forces which are being liquidated, according to latest dispatches from this sector of the front. The surprise push is aimed at the vitally important German industrial region of Silesia. Cavalry patrols are reported to be 30 miles from Cracow and 80 miles from the Silesian border.

First indication of the presence of Russian troops on German soil came last night from the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish paper Morgentidnigen. Referring to the fighting around Suwalki, the correspondent said: « Bloody fighting is going on in East Prussian territory. » He said it was impossible to obtain information regarding the depth of the penetration.

The Germans in southern Poland are said to be seized with panic at the drive to southeast Germany by the two Russian army groups. The German command is faced with the choice of attempting to prevent a junction between Rokossovsky's left flank and Koniev's right flank or throwing the whole of their strength into an emergency defence of Cracow. East of this sector, at the base of the salient in southern Poland, Russian forces have mopped up German groups isolated in the triangle between the Vistula and the San.

The battle for East Prussia is reaching a climax, says Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent. All along the front west of Kaunas, both sides are exerting maximun pressure. The German high command is hurling tanks, mobile guns, infantry and planes into battle almost on a counter-offensive scale. In a single counter-attack the Germans threw in 50 tanks supported by 2,000 men, but the attack was smashed by Soviet guns.

The latest gains have brought the Red Army within less than 50 miles from the German town of Tilsit, just inside the northern border of East Prussia, and have left the Red flag flying over scores of smashed German strongpoints on the Koenigsberg highway.

In the southern sector of the drive on East Prussia, General Chernyakhovsky's 3rd White Russian Army has advanced in a series of swift maneuvers from one zone to another and are now within three miles of the border. Using his armored columns in close cooperation with Stormovik dive-bombers, Chernyakhovsky was reported aiming for the border town of Schirwindt, Eydktkau and Wehrkirchen.

Germans Trek to West

The official Communist Party organ Pravda stated that no actual Russian crossing of the line into Reich territory has been made. The paper added that German resistance was stiffening as the Red Army threatened German soil.

There is no news of the fighting in the extreme west flank of General Bagramyan's 1st Baltic Front, west of Riga. But on the eastern flank, great gains have been made by Russian forces driving west and northwest of Rezekne, across Latvia. Soviet formations have reached the River Pededze on a broad front and other units in the southwest have advanced from four to six miles, forcing the Rivers Isliana and Odze.

The effect of these Russian advances is to narrow the coastal strip in which German Baltic armies are being trapped.

The German radio yesterday said that 350,000 Germans are now returning from occupied Russian territories to their homeland. The report added:

« The nights are filled with rolling wagons as the great trek westward sweeps on. Vehicles are laden with household goods of all kinds. Partisans try to impede the German trek by leading isolated groups to their doom. »

NAZIS TOLD RUSSIANS IN REICH

SHAEF, August 6 — Nearly 400,000 leaflets reporting the Red Army invasion of East Prussia were dropped on the German soldiers in France this afternoon by the 9th Air Force. (Reuter)

NIGHT OF TERROR IN FLORENCE

WITH THE 8th ARMY, August 6 — Heavy gunfire was directed into the liberated portion of Florence by the Germans last night. Throughout the hours of darkness bursting shells shook the city, and the people of southern Florence were subjected to a fearful night as the enemy punded residential areas with a wide variety of explosives.

But in the morning the city was calm and the population showed no signs of panic, as the authorities and carabinieri had the situation under control.

Meanwhile, the military position in the city changed little. Allied troops occupy Florence up to the southern bank of the Arno River and enemy snipers and machine-gun nests continue crossfire on approaches to the river.

Allied troops have not yet fired any telling shots into Florence proper, whereas the slightest Allied movement produces a crescendo of small-arms and mortar fire from the enemy installed in the city's buildings. Yesterday afternoon, four enemy armored cars appeared in full view of Allied troops on the opposite bank of the river, but the soldiers displayed great restraint in not shooting at them.

However, there is far from being complete inactivity in the general area. Harassing fire is being concentrated on roads behind Florence and on troop concentrations and supplies to the north. (UNN)

NEW ALLIED LANDING ON BIAK ISLAND

ADVANCE AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, August 6 — A new American push in the Aitape area of British New Guinea has resulted in the death of 441 more Japanese, it is reported here. The trapped Japanese have now lost over 4,311 men in vain attempts to punch through the American lines along the Driniumor river, 17 miles east of Aitape. The Americans are pressing south from positions along the coast east of Driniumor.

A new American landing on Biak Island, in the Schouten group — at the mouth of Geelvink Bay in northwest New Guinea, — is reported. The landing, which was made at Korim Bay on Thursday, has shut off the escape of the Japanese remnants. « Allied planes and E-boats, » it is stated, « continue to harass the Japanese, who are in full retreat from the Geelvink Bay area. »

Referring to attacks on Wewak, General MacArthur's communique says that air bombing and strafing and shelling by Allied surface vessels has resulted in the systematic destruction of enemy lines of communication. His main bivouac areas present a picture of attrition and disaster. It is estimated that 25,000 of his force have been employed on this perilous line of communication with heavy personnel losses.

A Washington communique from Admiral Nimitz states that the American advances on both flanks in the north of Guam have pressed the Japanese back into a section covering about a quarter of the area of the islands. The communique said: « American troops advanced about three miles northward along the eastern shore of Guam on Friday, while Marines on the west coast pushed more than a mile and a half northward. About 22,000 Japanese civilians on [illegible] within the American lines. » have pushed on rapidly for a considerable distance, announced today's Southeast Asia Command communique.

Along the Tiddim road, Allied forces advancing against slight opposition are nearly 50 miles south of Imphal. Mopping up continues round Myitkyina, and southward across the river, Chinese units have overrun Waingmaw and moved northeast.

Chinese troops storming Tengchung, 20 miles west of the Burma road and 50 miles southeast of newly-won Myitkyina, have occupied all the city's inner defences, it is reported from the Chinese headquarters at Chungking.

In the Kwangtung and Hunan provinces, Japanese assault aimed checked, but the Canton-Hangkow railway have been checked, but the Chinese High Command admits the loss of Anjen, 38 miles east of encircled Hengyang, and reports new enemy offensives in Kwantung's extreme southwest.

Pingyang Recaptured

Pingyang, which has changed hands many times, has been retaken by the Chinese after heavy fighting, and they are still holding out in Hengyang, 90 miles to the south, where, after a six-weeks siege, the enemy have been flung from the town's outer defences and forced to give ground in the south, west and east.

In a widespread air offensive, Allied planes hit at enemy supply lines along the shallow Siang river in Hunan and at troop movements on other waterways and roads. The Japanese report « an all-out air attack » on their forces besieging Hengyang. An enemy airfield at Lashio on the Burma road was heavily bombed. More blows by Allied fighters and medium bombers on ground troops, shipping and airfields are reported from General Stilwell's headquarters. (Reuter)

BERLIN AND HAMBURG AREAS ATTACKED

LONDON, August 6 — More heavy aerial blows were struck against German communications and supply lines today when 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF attacked factories in France, and oil refineries, an airdrome and port installations in the Berlin, Hamburg and Kiel regions. The flying-bomb sites in the Pas de Calais area also were bombed again.

The German army lost a vast quantity of oil yesterday evening when the RAF Bomber Command attacked three more oil storage depots near Bordeaux, an Air Ministry announcement said today.

The oil depots were located at Bassens, at Blaye and at Pauillac, where, on the night before, another oil storage tank had been set on fire.

Yesterday, 9th USAAF Thunderbolts dive-bombed an enemy convoy hiding in the hedgerows southeast of Vire and a troop train and a marshalling yard and locomotives in the Chartres-Orleans area. They destroyed one tank, three armored cars, 12 trucks, four locomotives and three freight cars.

Lightnings, which escorted yesterday's heavy bombers, shot up 15 locomotives and railroad cars and at least five oil tankers. They destroyed also a total of 33 enemy aircraft, 29 of which were shot down in combat. (Reuter)

FINNISH PRESS WARN GOVERNMENT

LONDON, August 6 — Danger of a compromise between the peace advocates and the supporters of former President Ryti was reported yesterday by correspondents in Stockholm, who added:

« It begins to look as if the leaders of the Finnish Government are intent on playing international politics, in spite of the desperate situation in which Finland finds herself. »

The Finnish press, taking a realistic view of Finland's

ITALY—BASED BOMBERS ATTACK RHONE VALLEY

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, August 6 — More than 750 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, operating from Italian bases, today attacked rail communications and oil storage areas in the Rhone Valley and the U-boat pens at Toulon, in southern France, it was announced here early this evening.

Only a few enemy interceptor aircraft were encountered by the long-range fighter escort.

Flying Fortresses bombed the rail yard at Valence and an oil storage dump and rail bridge at Le Pouzin.

Liberators bombed the rail yard at Miramas, located 18 miles southeast of Arles. Other Liberators attacked five bridges between Lyon and Arles. (PRO)

ALLIED SUCCESS IN BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, August 6 — Allied 14th Army troops have crossed the Burma frontier and captured Tamu, in the Kabaw valley, inflicting heavy enemy losses, and from the town's outer defences [illegible] in the south, west and east.

In a widespread air offensive, Allied planes hit at enemy supply lines along the shallow Siang river in Honan and at troop movements on other waterways and roads. « It begins to look as if the leaders of the Finnish Government are intent on playing international politics, in spite of the desperate situation in which Finland finds herself. »

The Finnish press, taking a realistic view of Finland's position, is demanding quick action of the Government and an end to all political maneuvering.

A strong warning against such maneuvers appeared yesterday in the Press review of the Finnish radio, which said: « We cannot wait long for the formation of a new government. The Diet groups, who conducted themselves with less dignity last time, will have cause to deliberate upon the matter in its entirety in the light of realities and from no other point of view. Personal, authoritative and sentimental reasons will not be allowed to retard the matter. »

Similarly the Finnish paper Helsinki Sanomat as quoted on Friday by the Swedish radio, said, « It is desirable that a speedy decision be reached. In the present circumstances the country's government needs courageous men with a sense of reality and a cool head. Party tactical aims are out of place at the moment. » (UNN)

RUSSIAN PRESS PRAISES AMERICANS

MOSCOW, August 6 — Red Star, the official newspaper of the Soviet armies, praised Saturday the skillful maneuvering of the United States forces in their drive into Brittany.

The newspaper said: « The manoeuver of the American troops which started the battle for Brittany bears the mark of what we call high class manoeuvering. It is daring and brilliant and at the same time has cold-blooded reasoning.»

Colonel Kolomitsev, in Red Star added his praise Saturday. He said: « In beginning the battle for Brittany the Americans have carried the tactics of manoeuver to their highest pitch and have displayed the greatest daring, skill and perfect calculation.»

Red Star also paid special honor to Lieut General Omar N. Bradley, Commander of the U. S. ground forces, for breaking through the narrow corridor south of Avranches. (OWI)

HEROISM OF ITALIAN PATRIOTS

WASHINGTON, August 6 — Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, commenting on the achievements of the Italian Patriots, said on Saturday they are hastening the defeat of Germany by their undaunted acts of heroism.

Dr. Studebaker continued: « No one knows better than the Nazis the strength of the blows struck by Italian Patriots. Therein lies the reason for Nazi threats and their terrible deeds perpetrated against innocent bystanders, as at Arezzo.

« By every inhuman device, the desperate, defeated Nazis attempt to intimidate Patriots in a frenzied effort to ease in some measure the terrifying pressure which the constricting circle of war is bringing to bear upon them. The Nazis, as well as the world, know that these devices are doomed to failure.

« No vile threats, no dastardly acts designed to intimidate Italian Patriots will dissuade the Underground from pursuing, harrying and attacking the enemy with increased ferocity. By their deeds they will hasten the unconditional surrender of defeated Nazi Germany. » (OWI)

GERMANS MISS LUFTWAFFE

LONDON, August 6 — Some of the reasons why the Germans have been driven back some 150 miles from Rome to Florence in 60 days are indicated by statements from Nazi prisoners who surrendered to the Allied troops.

An ex-factory worker from Bremen said: « There is no sense fighting tanks if one has just a rifle and a few bullets

« On the east bank of the Vistula, the Germans are sparing no effort to keep their columns along the east-west thoroughfare and are especially stubbornly defending Alej Jerozolinskie, southward from the Vistula bridge through the center of the city. »

A radio message from Warsaw, received by the Polish Telegraph Agency on Saturday, said that volunteers were reporting daily. It added, « The population of Warsaw is filled with enthusiasm. The whole city is possessed by a burning desire to fight. All political organisations are united in a single Underground army. »

An unnamed delegate of the Polish Government and commander-in-chief of the Underground army has issued a manifesto saying: « Three days' fighting for the liberation of Warsaw has brought great success. Detachments of the Underground army are breaking the enemy's resistance. » (Reuter)

SPECIAL COMMANDOS AT WORK AGAIN

LONDON, August 6 — The Special Air Service, well-known to the Wehrmacht but totally unkown to the public, has been operating in the Normandy front, striking relentlessly at Rommel's communications since D-day Captain Derric Harrison reported in a special dispatch to Reuter.

It is once again doing to Rommel what it achieved in Africa, Sicily and Italy under the guidance of Lieut. Colonel R. B. Mayne, who has so trained his men that they can, while still wearing uniforms, live for months at a time in enemy territory. Colonel Mayne is not only a trained parachutist but is also skilled in demolition engineering and sabotage.

The Special Air Service was instituted in the desert in North Africa when Lt. David Stirling of the Scots Guards and Lt. Jock Lewis of the Welsh Guards were disbanded from the Middle East Commandos in May 1941. Their first attempt to raid behind Rommel's lines was unsuccessful, with a high percentage of casualties.

They learned, however, and a series of fantastic blitz attacks began on Axis-held aerodromes along the African coastal belt and in the interior. Up to 400 enemy aircraft were destroyed by raiding parties.

It was a Special Air Service patrol that first linked the 8th Army and the 1st Army in Tunisia, crossing country considered impassable and blazing a trail for the 8th Army's outflanking movement around the Mareth line.

With the end of the African campaign, the Command became for a time the special raiding squadron. It trained for three months for amphibious landings and made what is believed to be the first in daylight — an opposed assault landing at Augusta, and captured the city. (Reuter)

On the subject of transport difficulties in Italy the prisoners were very voluble. One said. « There are too few men for the length of the line we have to hold: owing to transport difficulties there is too much marching, especially for a unit supposed to be completely motorized. » Another said his group were « exhausted from over-work and over-marching. » (UNN)

UNDERGROUND FIGHTS FOR WARSAW

LONDON, August 6 — The Polish Government in London published on Saturday the following report of the fighting in Warsaw by the Polish Underground army:

« The battle continues in the whole city. The main north-south thoroughfare, Marszalkowska Street, is in our hands. Grim fighting rages for the possession of the bridges over the Vistula and for the central railway station, which has changed hands several times and is now again in the hands of the Germans. We are keeping firmly the Vilna railway station and the eastern railway station, both in the suburb of Praga.

Harrison reported in a special dispatch to Reuter.

GERMANY—HISTORY REPEATING

LONDON, August 6 — Germany's critical period now and exactly 26 years ago are almost identical. Germany's crucial period in the last war was between July 20 and August 8, 1918, when General Erich Ludendorff became aware of the serious cracks in the German war machine and the Allies, under General Foch, broke the German line.

Today, when the Germans have lost so many killed, wounded and captured on three fighting fronts, there are serious cracks both in the German war machine and in Germany.

In 1918, the Press, the people and the army knew the war was lost, but the Kaiser's appeal for victory became more exaggerated and more frequent. On August 18, 1918, the Kaiser was told by Ludendorff that the war was lost.

Today, Hitler knows the war is lost. The German generals responsible for the recent uprising in Germany know the war is lost.

Seventeen of the 27 generals who have surrendered in Russia have asked German soldiers to lay down their arms. Fifty-one German generals have been killed, captured or died in recent « accidents. »

NAMES OF GERMAN OFFICERS PURGED

LONDON, August 6 — The court which is effecting the purge supposedly demanded of Hitler by the army is continuing to expel officers implicated in the attempt on Hitler's life on July 20.

According to a statement from Hitler's headquarters the following are to be dismissed: General of Infantry Olbricht, Colonel Merz von Quirnheim and Lieutenant Hasften.

The proposal to expel former Colonel General Hoeppner is rendered void by the fact that the was already expelled from the Wehrmacht in 1942, and is no longer a member of the army, the statement continues.

Hitler has consented to the proposals and the officers expelled will be handed over to a peoples' court for judgment. The trial before this court will take place shortly in Berlin.

Following are details on some of the German officers expelled from the army in the purge announced by a German news agency on Saturday: Major General Lindemann, commander of the 361st German Infantry Division, was claimed by the Russians on July 23 to have been captured southwest of Brody in Poland. He was among 15,000 Germans encircled in that neighborhood.

Colonel Merz von Quirnheim belonged to the Bavarian nobility, like Count von Stauffenberg.

Signal Corps General Feligiebel is 57 years old and a professional officer. He was plenipotentiary for technical means of communication in Goering's «four-year plan.»

Count Hans Wolfgang York von Wartenburg is a member of the Nazi Reichstag and a civil servant. He is 41 and belongs to the same family of Prussian aristocrats as General York, who went over to the Russians with his troops during the Napoleonic wars, thus giving the signal for Prussia to join in an alliance against Napoleon.

General Friedrich Olbricht took part in the Polish campaign as divisional commander.

Details of the members of the court are as follows: General of Infantry Wasther Schroth is a professional soldier and a commander of the Coblenz military district. Lieut. General Karl Wilhelm Specht, also a professional soldier, is inspector general for the training of military leaders. He was appointed last spring «to coordinate military and ideological training of future officers with the Hitler Youth movement.»

General Karl Krebel, 52, another professional soldier whose brother was one of the leading fighters in Hitler's 1923 beer cellar putsch in Munich, was until recently commander of the military district of Munich. (UNN)

FRENCH TO LEAVE VICHY—SWISS REPORT

ZURICH, August 6 — The Germans have ordered the French Government to leave Vichy, according to a frontier report received by the Swiss paper Tribune de Geneve. The Germans are said to have suggested either Nancy or Vittel as the new seat for the Vichy government and Laval apparently preferred the latter, the report said. (Reuter)

NAZIS APPEAL TO GERMAN WORKERS

LONDON, August 6 — A leading article in the Nazi Party organ, Voelkischer Beobachter, tried to force the last ounce of effort out of German workers by emphasising the United Nations' superiority in all fields and underlining Germany' desperate military position. The article said that the Allies are compelling the Germans to relinquish more French territory than Germany likes, and that there is quite a possibility that the Russians may stage a new offensive.

The Allies have indisputable air supremacy, the article continued, and there is no reason to conceal that Turkey's decision has restricted Germany's political and economic freedom of action. The newspaper concluded by attributing the attempt on Hitler's life to «military developments on the fronts.» (OWI)

NEW BERLIN POLICE CHIEF

LONDON, August 6 — German general von Heinberg, chief of the Nazi security police in Copenhagen, has been appointed commander of the Berlin police and will assume his new duties this week, the Danish press service reported tonight.

Colonel Lorge will replace von Heinberg, who because of his harsh conduct during the recent strike in Copenhagen, has been placed on the Danish list of war criminals. (PWB)

FOOD ARRIVES IN FLORENCE

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, August 6 — Within 24 hours after the Allied entry into the southern section of Florence, care for the needy section of the population was proceeding smoothly. Officials of the Allied Military Government had the welfare of the civilians well in hand and the food supply functioning.

The first convoy of essential foodstuffs consisted of 10 huge trucks containing many tons of flour, sugar, salt and milk. A similar daily supply service and a distribution system providing for the restocking of shops insofar as possible for equitable rationing of the population's needs are planned.

It is estimated that between 80,000 and 100,000 people are living in the liberated portion of the city, and AMG officials have found essential materials scarce.

Following are details on some of the German officers expelled from the army in the purge announced by a German news agency on Saturday: Major General Lindemann, commander of the 361st German Infantry Division, was claimed by the Russians on July 23 to have been captured southwest of Brody in Poland. He was among 15,000 Germans encircled in that neighborhood.

Colonel Merz von Quirnheim belonged to the Bavarian nobility, like Count von Stauffenberg.

Signal Corps General Fellgiebel is 57 years old and a professional officer. He was plenipotentiary for technical means of communication in Goering's «four-year plan.»

Count Hans Wolfgang York von Wartenburg is a member of the Nazi Reichstag and a civil servant. He is 44 and belongs to the same family of Prussian aristocrats as General York, who went over to the Russians with his troops during the Napoleonic wars, thus giving the signal for Prussia to join in an alliance against Napoleon.

General Friedrich Olbricht took part in the Polish campaign as divisional commander.

HITLER CALLS FOR «BLIND CONFIDENCE»

LONDON, August 6 — Ending a conference with Reich leaders and gauleiters in Berlin on Friday, Hitler said: «I am not afraid of the fight against our exterior enemies. All I need is the conviction that in our rear there is absolute security, blind confidence and faithful collaboration». This statement is quoted by the German news agency today.

Earlier in the speech, Hitler said: «Traitors have continually sabotaged the fight of the nation, not only since 1941, but ever since the seizure of power by the National Socialists. The clique, though small in numbers, was considerable in influence.»

As the Berlin conference was in progress, a meeting of the Free German Committee in Russia was attended by eight of the German generals recently taken on the Central Russian front. General von Seidlitz, the Committee's Vice President, announced that all the Generals would become members.

Statements from German prisoners captured on the western front reveal that Hitler's efforts to crush the movement against him reached beyond army men in the Fatherland to officers in the field ranging from lieutenants to generals. The prisoners' stories indicated general gloom and dissatisfaction in the German army, and stated that officers are beginning to succumb to a defeatist attitude. Up to a few weeks ago they had been supported by SS

TURKEY: BLOW FOR SATELLITES

LONDON, August 6 — Turkey's severance of diplomatic relations with Germany in addition to the economic break fell like a bombshell in German satellite circles in Turkey, the correspondent for the Daily Telegraph stated on Friday.

«Surprise mingled with consternation,» the correspondent wrote, «and it manifested itself openly with the belated return to Ankara of Hungarian and Rumanian ministers and personnel from resorts.

«The possibility of Rumania's forming a national government came more and more into the limelight. Bulgaria might do the same and Hungary is on the verge of a reported cabinet change.

«The satellites believe now that Turkey is definitely in line with the United Nations and that she will suggest to them that the time has come for them to act, if there ever is to be any co-operation between formrer members of the Balkan entente with Bulgaria after the war.»

BLACK MARKETS CLOSED

LONDON, August 6 — Normandy's food supplies are now going to feed the French and are also being stocked for areas in France soon to be liberated instead of being sent to Germany, an Associated Press dispatch from Normandy states.

The correspondent wrote: «The hungriest parts of France are yet to be freed of the Germans. Normandy is rationing itself for them.»

The correspondent contrasted the picture of the Cherbourg housewife shopping at present and a few weeks ago. He added: «When the Germans were in occupation, the shops were bare, as all food had to be sent back to Germany. The French had to buy at fantastic prices from the black market, which has now ceased to exist. French civilians of the Cherbourg area may now buy, at reasonable prices, more butter, cheese and meat legitimately than they could on the black market under German occupation.

«Not only are there increases in the allotment of many foodstuffs, but there is the assurance that the people will get what they are entitled to buy. This they rarely were able to do under the occupation.» (AP)

GENERAL SOSNKOWSKI RETURNS TO LONDON

LONDON, August 6 — General Kasimierz Sosnkowski, commander-in-chief of the Polish Army, returned here yesterday following his recent tour of inspection of the Polish Corps in Italy.

In an official communique issued today it was stated that General Bor, leader of the Polish Underground army fighting within the besieged city of Warsaw, had reported that Polish patriots now control the «Old Town» section of Warsaw and other parts in the suburb of Mokotov.

General Bor also reported that Warsaw has been subjected to constant air attacks by the Luftwaffe. Fires have been started in all parts of the city and the Germans have frustrated all civilian attempts to extinguish the flames. (Reuter)

LASKI SAYS POWER OF NAZIS IN LAST PHASE

CHICAGO, August 6 — Harold J. Laski, noted British political economist, in an article in Friday's Chicago Sun, said no one can watch the spectacle of Nazi disintegration without seeing that the power of these gangsters has «entered the last phase.»

The article also said: «It is obvious that the power of the Nazis to retain authority rests now on the inertia of the masses. It is no difficult prophecy to predict that the period is coming when the inertia will be broken by defeat.

WHEN THE GERMANS SURRENDER

LONDON, August 6 — The diplomatic correspondent of the London Sunday Times wrote today: «The Allies are determined not again to be caught napping as they were in 1918, when the sudden and unexpected collapse of Germany found them unprepared with any cut and dry plans for an armistice.

«All three great powers — Great Britain, Russia and America — have contributed draft plans and the co-ordinated conditions agreed upon cover the whole field of military measures involved when the Germans finally surrender.

«Details of the occupation have already been unanimously agreed upon. The victorious Allied troops will not just stop at the frontiers of Germany but will occupy the whole length and breadth.» (BBC)

GERMANY MAKES SAME MISTAKES

LONDON, August 6 — Germany has made the same mistakes in this war that she did in the last, and now is in a more desperate situation than in the autumn of 1918, say Turkish and Swiss papers.

The Turkish paper Vatan said recently: «During the last war the Germans, who had prepared for it by organizing their armies and increasing their production, won victories for years. But their persistent propaganda about final victory never came true. In this war they wasted soldiers to no purpose, just as they did in the last war.»

The Swiss paper Nationalzeitung of Basle said: «Germany's military situation, particularly on the Russian front, is now far more desperate than it was in the autumn of 1918 in the west. The plot of dissatisfied generals shows that confidence in Hitler as the supreme commander is considerably shaken in large sections of the army.» (UNN)

YUGOSLAV PARTISANS DESTROY OIL TANK

LONDON, August 6 — Partisan units are continuing their offensive operations against the Germans, according to Marshal Tito's communique broadcast yesterday from his headquarters.

In Serbia, fierce fighting continues south of Lebane, where 117 German and Bulgarian soldiers were killed and a large amount of war equipment captured.

In Croatia, an entire train was destroyed on the Zagreb-Belgrade line by partisan units. Two other trains approaching the same location were sighted by Allied planes and destroyed by bombs. A million liters of oil were burnt when partisan units destroyed an oil tank on the Kurilovac airdrome near Zagreb.

In Dalmatia, the enemy is attacking with strong forces, trying to free communications in the north, where more than 500 Germans were rendered harmless in one day in the valley of Cetina.

The Cejle-Maribor railway line in Slovenia was wrecked in several places and on the Gorica-Trieste line, the White Guard garrison from Ribnica, numbering 90 men, came over to the Allies. They brought large quantities of equipment and were at once made members of the National Liberation Army.

In Macedonia, the Germans, attempting to fight their way through from Albania into Debar, are being repulsed by Macedonian and Albanian Partisan units.

In Herzegovina, 510 Germans were killed, many wounded and 20 taken prisoner. All enemy attempts to break through to Vlasenica, in Bosnia, were repulsed and two trains were destroyed near Sjenica. (OWI)

SS GENERAL KILLED BY FFI

LONDON, August 6 — French Forces of the Interior have killed an SS general in the Orne Department, together with 22 German officers and 74 soldiers, it was announced in London today.

Engagements between the French Forces of the Interior and the Germans continue throughout France, the announcement added.

Authoritative French sources report that from July 9 to July 15 only eight of 38 German troop equipment trains were able to leave Besancon.

In the Juras, the French Forces of the Interior are reported to have captured 15 tons of German arms and ammunition and 32 lorries, killing 17 German officers and 300 men. (OWI)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 6 — Today's communique:

LAND: On both sides of Florence, after a day of clearing pockets of enemy resistance south of the Arno, troops of the 8th Army are now firmly established on the south bank of the river in contact with the enemy.

Farther to the east troops of the 8th Army have captured Monte Altuccia, a dominating feature on the high ground between the Arno and Tiber valleys.

In the Adriatic sector, Polish troops have advanced between two and three miles across the River Misa, and have entered the town of Scapezzano and are in contact with the enemy immediately north of the town.

On the remainder of the front, including the American 5th Army sector, there is no change in the situation.

AIR: Adverse weather restricted operations yesterday. Tactical aircraft attacked roads, railways and enemy positions in the battle area and northern Italy, while other aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and the Adriatic, and military objectives in Yugoslavia.

Our heavy and medium bombers did not operate.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed, and five of ours are missing.

In France, 57 terrorists were again annihilated in fighting.

Retaliatory fire against London continued day and night.

In Italy, the enemy thus far probed only and made reconnaissance thrusts towards the entire Arno sector. An attempt at crossing the Arno south of Florence was frustrated by our concentrated artillery fire. The enemy achieved a local penetration, north of Arezzo, however he was repulsed in an immediate counter-attack.

East of Warsaw, the 3rd. Soviet Tank Corps which has been cut off since August 1, was annihilated after fierce fighting lasting for several days. The Soviets suffered severe casualties and lost 192 tanks and 45 guns. The enemy continued his attacks at the focal points of fighting, between Vistula and Memel. He was repulsed in grim fighting except for some local penetrations.

North of the Memel, our troops are engaged in fierce fighting aganist strong Soviet forces which had broken in. Within the area of a tank army 62 Soviet tanks were again shot up yesterday. An additional 27 tanks were destroyed by battleplanes. Major Rudel by himself shot up 11 tanks and scored his 300th victory by gunfire.

Bitter fighting continues in Latvia particularly near Mitau and Birsen. Forty out of 50 attacking enemy tanks were destroyed in one sector alone. The Soviets which had broken through at several points between the Dvina and Lake Pskov were checked in a counter-thrust. On the Isthmus of Narva, minor enemy attacks were frustrated. Battleplanes sank one Soviet tanker of 2000 tons and two transport vessels in the Bay of Narva. Two more ships were severely damaged. Enemy bomber formations carried out terror attacks on localities in central Germany. Damage to buildings and casualties were caused particularly in Magdeburg and Brunswick. Thirty-six enemy planes were destroyed by air defense forces.

Last night, a few enemy planes dropped bombs on the Rhenish-Westphalian area and on East Prussia.

U. S. TROOPS 36 MILES FROM ST. NAZAIRE ST. MALO CAPTURED

SHAEF, August 4 — Latest frontline dispatches from the western sector of the American front locate advance units at a point only 36 miles from the port of St. Nazaire which is at the mouth of the Loire River on the southern side of the Brest Peninsula.

Other American forces driving across the peninsula are reported to have sealed off the great ports of Brest and Lorient. BBC stated earlier today that the port of St. Malo had been captured. German troops, evacuated from the Channel Islands, are now fighting in Brittany.

On the eastern sector of the American front, American patrols early today entered the town of Barenton, six miles [illegible] road leading to Domfront.

Normandy. They overcame very extensive minefields and seized a number of ammunition stacks.

The picture of the battle proceeding on the Caumont front is not yet complete. Doon Campbell, of Reuter, who is with the British forces, reports that strong and persistent German counter-attacks have pushed the Allies back more than 2,000 yards from the villages of La Lande, St. George Daunay and the high ground to the west and northwest of Aunay. Reporting heavy fighting in the area, the official communique states that the enemy counter-attacks have been fierce along the entire front from north and east of Le Beny Bocage. The Germans, says the communique, have reinforced the whole area south of Villers with armor and infantry and are putting new forces into the fight to retain ground.

In the Vire salient, there was heavy fighting on the high ground at Arclais and in the town of Estry, farthest point of the Allied line east of Vire. A Reuter dispatch stated that Vire is surrounded by Allied troops but is not completely held.

Three German strongpoints along the front were standing firm against all assaults. These were Aunay, Villers, and Evercey. The three points prevented the Allies from straightening out their line and sweeping the Germans back to the River Orne.

A BBC reporter here said that to the southwest the big German pocket which stretched from Vire to the northwest has probably almost entirely gone, and that east of Vire itself, British troops were pushing on in a drive which may threaten the whole enemy positions to the north.

30,000 Prisoners Taken

Despite the stern opposition, the past week has gone far to liquidate the German battle army of France. It has now yielded more than 30,000 prisoners, and lost a large proportion of its material. With its resources thus diminished, it has to defend a greatly extended front against Allied armies which have won space to bring into action their superior strength and maneuvring power.

In the territory in which they were retreating in Normandy, the Germans were turning hundreds of French refugees onto the roads with instructions to proceed north, in the hope that they might clog the roads, said a Reuter correspondent. Previously, when the Germans evacuated an area, they forced the refugees to move south to prevent their carrying information to the Allies.

A message from Washington told of a new army breakthrough weapon which is being used in France. It is known as the tankdozer. It has a 3 1/2 ton blade which was used to smash through the hedgerows of Normandy and pave the way for the rapid American advance. The tankdozer is mounted on a M-4 Sherman tank, and has proved its worth.

The weather today over the battle front was brilliant and perfect for flying. The weather was good, too, yesterday afternoon and evening, and Allied fighters and fighter-bombers gave close support to the ground forces.

During last night, coastal aircraft were out attacking a bunch of E-boats, one of which was sent to the bottom

On the eastern sector of the American front, American patrols early today entered the town of Barenton, six miles southeast of Mortain, on the main road leading to Domfront, but later reports stated that they had withdrawn.

General Dwight D. Eisenhower visited the French front yesterday for the 10th time and conferred with Lieut. General Omar D. Bradley and General Sir Bernard Law Montgomery.

While American armored columns are thundering along the roads of Brittany, still meeting with no signs of organised resistance, and Allied formations east of the Percy-Villedieu road have made advances, very heavy fighting is going on in the area southeast of Caumont.

Americans Advance South of Rennes

In the coastal sector, this morning's communique tells of unbroken success. The Americans have entered Rennes and passed through to the south, while another column, moving more westwards has taken Dol and reached Dinan.

In the centre, The Allies have captured Beaumesil and are now reported to be in the area of St. Sever Calvados. To the south of this, Allied forces have taken Mortain, and one correspondent cables that the indications are that the Germans are pulling out from the area between Mortain and Vire.

American units have occupied the northern third of the Foret St. Sever, one of the chief ammunition dumps in Le Beny Bocage. The Germans, says the communique, have reinforced the whole area south of Villers with armor and infantry and are putting new forces into the fight to retain ground.

In the Vire salient, there was heavy fighting on the high ground at Arclais and in the town of Estry, farthest point of the Allied line east of Vire. A Reuter dispatch stated that Vire is surrounded by Allied troops but is not completely held.

200,000 Nazi Casualties

The German Army in France has suffered almost 200,000 casualties since D-day, an official spokesman stated today.

Over 70,000 Germans have been captured, 20,000 killed and 40,000 wounded on the American front, while on the

NEW U. S. THRUST NEAR FOUGERES

SHAEF, August 4 — An American column has penetrated to the vicinity of Fougeres, 23 miles south of Avranches, in a new thrust east of the Brittany peninsula.

British tanks and infantry reached the railway station to the southeast of Villers Bocage. A Reuter dispatch stated that Noyers was in British hands.

Other British troops were also on the outskirts of Evrecy and on the northern slopes of Hill 112.

GERMAN EQUIPMENT DESTROYED

U. S. HQ, AEF, August 4 — Before the start of the present offensive, the American 1st Army had destroyed tanks and equipment equivalent to that of two German divisions, it was announced here today.

The demolished material comprised 163 German tanks, 54 selfpropelled guns, and 51 half-track vehicles. The figures announced do not include guns and vehicles damaged and probably destroyed, but remaining in enemy hands where they might be repaired. (PWB)

ALLIED BOMBERS ATTACK PEENEMUNDE

LONDON, August 4 — More than 1,200 United States heavy bombers today attacked German experimental stations at Peenemunde; a fighter component plant and airfield at Anklam; an aircraft assembly plant at Bostock; port installations at Kiel; and an oil refinery at Bremen. The large bomber formation was escorted by a strong force of fighter planes.

Allied fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over the entire Western Front today in coordinated support of the ground forces, blasting German communications and other targets in front-line positions and in the rear areas.

Operating from airfields in liberated France, the Allied planes took advantage of the excellent weather to attack the enemy without let-up. Every type of enemy target was attacked.

Mosquito bombers of the 2nd TAF last night attacked trains and Seine River traffic. Three trains between Dreux and Le Mans, one of which consisted of 12 carriages, were left burning and stopped after a low-level attack. The Mosquitoes destroyed five enemy aircraft over the Normandy battle area during the night.

Yesterday's big Bomber Command attacks carried out against flying bomb installations in northern France cost the Allies six aircraft, an official announcement said here today. A correspondent at a Canadian bomber base reported that yesterday the RCAF sent up its largest group of planes thus far in the war.

Aerial photographs of Stuttgart, which was heavily bombed on July 24, 25, and 28 revealed widespread areas of devastation and destruction in the commercial and administrative centers of the town.

An Air Ministry announcement today stated that many industrial buildings in Fuerbach, a suburb of Stuttgart, were almost totally damaged. This town is an important center specializing in engineering work.

The synthetic oil plant at Bottrop-Welhiem, in the Rhur, which was producing 6,500 tons of oil monthly, is no longer operating. (Reuter - BBC)

GERMAN GENERAL KILLED

LONDON, August 4 — Lieut. General von Drabich Erachter, commander of the German 326th Infantry Division, was killed on Wednesday in the fighting south of Caumont, the German radio announced today.

The same broadcast reported the death on the western front of Major Wolf Werner (Count von der Schulenburg), commander of a paratroop regiment. He was the son of General Count von der Schulenburg, former Chief of Staff of the Army Group « Crown Prince, » and a senior SS group leader. (PWB)

French Patriots told them six Germans were hiding in a cellar, and after taking up positions nearby, the photographer threw a hand grenade into the cellar forcing the Germans out. (AP)

MOBILE POWER STATIONS FOR NORMANDY

LONDON, August 4 — Mobile power stations mounted on railway trains are being brought from the United States to Normandy.

Capable of generating a 5,000 kilowatt current, these units will supply heat and lighting to those towns whose power plants have been destroyed by bombing or by retreating Germans. (Reuter)

RED ARMY REACHES APPROACHES TO EAST PRUSSIA

MOSCOW, August 4 — The huge battle of the Eastern Front continued tonight with increased fury from the Baltic to the Carpathians as the Red Army smashed at Warsaw from the east, north, and south while the Polish Underground carried on another battle within the city.

Red Army tanks reached the immediate approaches of East Prussia at a moment when hundreds of thousands of hands of slave labor worked frantically under Gestapo guns to dig new lines of fortifications. Soviet bombers and fighters combed the air, bombing, strafing, and photographing a landscape which one correspondent described as a « futuristic nightmare with the Germans doing everything to disguise railways short of painting the rails green. »

To the south, Marshal Rokossovsky has opened up new routes into Germany itself with a sensational breakthrough on the western side of the Vistula about 100 miles south of Warsaw. He drove a wedge 15 miles deep in the direction of Tarnow, and it is estimated that he is less than 90 miles from Cracow.

Thus, in addition to the present offensive against East Prussia, the Germans are faced with the strong possibility of fighting in defense of German soil. Cracow is only 62 miles from the German border.

The commander-in-chief of the Polish Underground, General Bor, said in a message sent directly from within Warsaw, that « the general postoffice, Warsaw's skyscraper, and Prudential buildings in Napoleon Square have been in our hands since August 2. »

He added that the main power station and gas works are also in the hands of the Polish Underground, and that Polish flags now are flying from each of the buildings the Poles have captured.

A Polish Government courier, who recently returned from Moscow, said that he had witnessed the increasing demoralization of German troops and had personally purchased 10 machine guns from German non-commissioned officers for 50 pounds.

The radio message from within Warsaw also reported that the Germans are trying to maintain their hold on the main thoroughfares as avenues of retreat. The message said: « We destroyed a number of tanks and took prisoners. The Germans are blowing up public utilities and dwelling houses in the suburbs of Warsaw. The morale of our population is excellent, and large numbers of volunteers are joining our ranks hourly. »

PRISONERS IN ARMY ONLY THREE WEEKS

LONDON, August 4 — Hundreds of German prisoners were captured by the Americans in Normandy because their horse-drawn transports were wiped out, the American war correspondent Larry Lescur reported yesterday.

The type of prisoners taken clearly demonstrated, the reporter said, how hard-pressed Germany is for manpower today. Some of them are men just released from hospital and have not yet fully recovered from their wounds. Others had been in the army only three weeks. (BBC)

HEMINGWAY HELPS CAPTURE PRISONERS

WITH THE AMERICAN 1ST ARMY IN FRANCE, August 4 — Ernest Hemingway, American novelist, aided in the capture of six Germans, an Associated Press dispatch

Red Army tanks reached the immediate approaches of East Prussia at a moment when hundreds of thousands of hands of slave labor worked frantically under Gestapo guns to dig new lines of fortifications. Baltic Trap Tightens

Tonight's Soviet communique told of further advances north and northwest of Kaunas at the north of the line, thus tightening the trap of the German 16th and 18th armies in the Baltic region. A hint of what is in store for the trapped Germans who have only one escape route by sea came from Stockholm today in an Associated Press dispatch which stated that Russian trucks loaded with speedboats, torpedoes, and mines were speeding up the Soviet corridor to the Baltic Sea west of Riga.

In his push north and northwest of Kaunas, General Chernyakhovsky filled out a large area south of the Nieman River and captured Lukshe, 42 miles east of Tilsit.

A late dispatch tonight from John Evans, Reuter correspondent, stated that the fighting on the Baltic sector was « slaughter. » He added that General Schoerner's isolated divisions « have plenty of miscellaneous ammunition, but are believed running short of large calibre shells and other special supplies. Large scale actions are expected before Schoerner's troops can be liquidated. »

Reuter added that the railway from Rezekne to Krustils lies north of Dvinsk and runs east toward the Baltic coast. Rezekne is about 55 miles northeast of Dvinsk, and Krustils is about the same distance to the northeast.

Berlin yesterday announced that the Russians had broken through at Augustovo toward the adjacent frontier of East Prussia, and allowed publication of the news that German troops between Warsaw and the sacred Prussian soil are « paralysed with exhaustion. » (Reuter)

GERMANS WARNED ON TREATMENT PRISONERS

LONDON, August 4 — In a Polish broadcast, the BBC stated that the «Polish Home Army is a part of the Polish armed forces,» and that the Germans would be held responsible for treating any captive members in a manner contrary to international laws. The broadcast said:

«The Polish Home Army forms part of the Polish armed forces, and has remained at war with the Germans since September 1, 1939. Cases have occurred in which soldiers of the Home Army, engaged in regular warfare against the German armed forces, have been shot or handed over to the German civil authorities and put to death.

«The German military and civil authorities are hereby warned - first, that all persons, whether military or civilian, who are responsible for ordering these atrocities, will be tracked down and duly punished by the victorious United Nations. Second, that the German military authorities can not absolve themselves of their responsibility for the safety and proper treatment of captured members of the Polish Home Army by handing them over to German civil authorities.» (OWI)

FINN PARLIAMENT AUTHORIZES APPOINTMENT

STOCKHOLM, August 4 The Finnish Parliament unanimously adopted a bill enabling the president of Finland to be appointed instead of elected, the Helsinki correspondent of the Swedish News Agency reported today.

This means that legal machinery has been created for issuing a decree naming Field Marshal Mannerheim president. (Reuter)

SURPRISES POSSIBLE IN FINLAND

WASHINGTON, August 4 — The formation of a new Finnish cabinet is not yet completed, and surprises regarding the choice of a new premier are possible, said a Reuter dispatch from Stockholm today.

No Finnish-Russian peace negotiations are going on, the dispatch added.

Although the Swedish press Wednesday unanimously expressed the hope that Finland would find a way out of the war even at this late hour, it was acknowledged that tremendous difficulties face the Finnish government.

Svenska Morgonbladet said:

«It is manifest that Finland's leaders consider the country in great peril. The pact with Ribbentrop is now annuled. The sole task of the new government will be to conclude peace.»

Morgontidningen said that the course of events has finally «broken the spell», adding that the sensational form taken by the change in presidents bears witness to the country's position, but also «seems to give promise of a firm decision at all costs to break through the threatening ring of blunders and omissions.» (OWI)

ORDER OF GERMAN GENERAL CAPTURED

MOSCOW, August 4 — Red Army troops captured an order by Colonel General Schoerner, newly-appointed commander of the German northern group of armies which has been pushed back across the Vistula. The order disclosed a feeling of great gloom. The document was published in the supplementary Soviet communique today. The text of the order said:

«In this earnest hour, the Fuehrer has entrusted me with the command of the northern army group. He has ordered us to use all resources at hand for the defense of the Baltic.»

The new commander threatened his soldiers with severe penalties, and declared he would «get at every loafer, and

An average of 175,000 tons of cargo a month is delivered to the Russians, in addition to American and British army supplies carried on the same lines.» (OWI)

SOUTH AFRICANS GAIN OUTSKIRTS OF FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 4 — Following yesterday's successful advance by 8th Army troops, South African forces today gained the outskirts of the Tuscan city of Florence, it was announced here tonight.

Forward reconnaissance patrols found five out of the six bridges over the Arno destroyed. The famous Ponte Vecchio was found intact, but houses on either side of the road leading to the bridge were demolished to cause road blocks.

The foremost 8th Army troops pressing northward yesterday passed the village of Giogoli, on a secondary road leading from Cerbaia, where New Zealanders made the original crossing of the Pesa River, which flows westward along this stretch, and the Greve River, a tributary of the Arno.

East of highway 2, the main road from Poggibonsi to Florence, South African infantry and British Guardsmen, supported by Sherman tank forces, pushed north from Impruneta, which was captured yesterday, to take Montebuoni, about four miles south of Florence, and the village of Montecchio, about 4½ miles south of the city. These forces met with the fiercest resistance from German parachute troops, who clung bitterly to the high ground around Impruneta, Dominating the southern approaches to the Arno and Florence. Impruneta, a small town, was reduced to rubble in the savage fighting.

Southeast of Florence, where the Germans were withdrawing more slowly, leading British troops yesterday were still over nine miles from there, although they held high ground dominating the approach road leading through Bagno a Ripoli.

Armoured forces of the 8th Army advancing toward Florence along the Arno Valley have reached a point of Highway 69 just 10 miles from the city. Patrols entered Incisa itself, 11 miles from Florence on Highway 69 to find it unoccupied by the enemy.

The German withdrawal tactics, in which only small yardage at a time is yielded to the enemy, and contact is maintained almost constantly, is proving «very costly», it was reported here. In the 24 days from July 3 to July 27, 8th Army captured 5,000 prisoners, only 2,000 less than the total number taken in the 53 previous days from the opening of the present offensive May 11.

Enemy losses in killed and wounded have been proportionately increased by the new German tactics, which allow little time for the preparation of dug-in positions. As a result, German battalions and even regiments, have been combined to make up their strength, and thousands of reinforcements have been drawn from Germany, including an entire veteran division from the Russian Front.

On the 5th Army sector, an increase in enemy patrol activity was reported. Small enemy forces attempted to cross the Arno in small boats, only to be driven back. At Pontedera, a large enemy column was dispersed by American artillery fire.

Rail Lines Pounded

Medium bombers, including French planes, yesterday continued their savage attacks on enemy rail and road communications in southern France and northwestern Italy.

Road bridges northwest of Nice, a rail bridge near Monaco, and other key spans along the Riviera were struck, in a series of attacks which have now been coordinated with night assaults by RAF heavy and medium bombers, which last night hit the Portes les Valences rail yards.

Eighteen enemy aircraft were destroyed in the course

Finally, the German general begged of his soldiers and officers:

«Each yard of soil in each sector must be defended with flaming fanaticism. We must grow into the soil. You — soldiers of the army group — hold in your hands the fate and the issue of this war.»

The Soviet supplementary communique pointed out:

«The order of General Schoerner exposed with complete obviousness that everything is not well in the northern group of the German Army, pursued by our troops. German soldiers are aware of the fact that they are doomed. They dodge battle and desert. Neither severe orders nor hysterical begging will help the new commander.» (PWB)

RUSSIA-IRAN SUPPLY ROUTE BUSY

WASHINGTON August 4 — An official announcement disclosed that American supplies are reaching Russia through Iran, despite the most unfavorable climatic conditions and seemingly impossible transportation problems.

Praising the hardiness and ingenuity of the engineers and the labor battalions entrusted with the job, the announcement added:

about four miles south of Florence, and the village of Montecchio, about 4½ miles south of the city. Armoured forces of the 8th Army advancing toward Florence along the Arno Valley have reached a point of Highway 69 just 10 miles from the city. Patrols entered Incisa itself, 11 miles from Florence on Highway 69 to find it unoccupied by the enemy.

The German withdrawal tactics, in which only small yardage at a time is yielded to the enemy, and contact is maintained almost constantly, is proving «very costly», it was reported here. In the 24 days from July 3 to July 27, 8th Army captured 5,000 prisoners, only 2,000 less than the total number taken in the 33 previous days from the opening of the present offensive May 11.

Enemy losses in killed and wounded have been proportionately increased by the new German tactics, which allow little time for the preparation of dug-in positions. As a result, German battalions and even regiments, have been combined to make up their strength, and thousands of reinforcements have been drawn from Germany, including an entire veteran division from the Russian Front.

On the 5th Army sector, an increase in enemy patrol activity was reported. Small enemy forces attempted to cross the Arno in small boats, only to be driven back. At Pontedera, a large enemy column was dispersed by American artillery fire.

Rail Lines Pounded

Medium bombers, including French planes, yesterday continued their savage attacks on enemy rail and road communications in southern France and northwestern Italy.

Road bridges northwest of Nice, a rail bridge near Monaco, and other key spans along the Riviera were struck, in a series of attacks which have now been coordinated with night assaults by RAF heavy and medium bombers, which last night hit the Portes les Valences rail yards.

Eighteen enemy aircraft were destroyed in the course of yesterday's operations, which included long range bombing of Friedrichshafen, southern Germany, and vulnerable stretches of the Brenner Pass line into northern Italy.

Danube Traffic Disrupted

RAF mining of the Danube River has caused «widespread dislocation» of traffic along this vital enemy waterway, it was announced here today.

As a result of the disrupted traffic, freight rates and warehousing fees have doubled and in some cases increased tenfold, it was said. Wellingtons, Liberators, and Halifaxes last mined the river on the night of July 31.

DAF at Birthday Party

General Heydrich, commander of the 1st Parachute Division defending Florence, celebrated his birthday last Saturday in a lonely house about 10 miles behind the front, the London Daily Mail correspondent reported.

Some days before the party was held, details of all arrangements for it reached forward headquarters of an 8th Army division. The Desert Air Force was instantly informed in a message which read:

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

« General Heydrich is holding a birthday party. The date is July 29, time 2000 hours. The company of the desert Air Force is cordially invited, and it is hoped that tails and decorations will be worn. »

Pilots were specially briefed for the « party » and the location was pin-pointed on a minute map. A force of 26 fighter-bombers, each carrying five 100 pound bombs, attended the celebration.

They knew they were at the right house when very heavy anti-aircraft fire welcomed them. Flying through the flak, they dropped every bomb in the target area, and it is reported that at least two fell on Heydrich's house. (Reuter)

ELLIOT HEADS NEW BALKAN AIR FORCE

LONDON, August 4 — Air Vice Marshal William Elliot has been appointed commander of the Balkan Air Force, a new composite group of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, created for the centralization of the conduct of air operations in the Balkans, excluding strategic bombings, and for intensification of air operations in the Adriatic.

Vice Marshal Elliot had been commander of RAF operations at Gibraltar, and was previously director of plans.

Air Vice Marshal A. Charles Stevens has been appointed to succeed Elliot as commander of the RAF at Gibraltar. (Reuter)

PRIBOJ CAPTURED BY YUGOSLAVS

LONDON, August 4 — The Yugoslav National Army of Liberation communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, today said that Marshal Tito's forces in Serbia have completely cleared the Pusta-Reka-Jablanica region of the enemy in counter-attacks which inflicted heavy losses on him.

From the Sandjak came reports that partisans have captured the town of Priboj, thus completely clearing the Germans from the communication lines between the towns of Prijepolje and Visegrad.

On the Sjenica sector, partisans broke up an enemy unit, killing 50 Germans and taking one German officer prisoner.

Yugoslav forces in Montenegro dispersed an enemy group guarding communications in that region.

Mopping up operations were in progress in Istria and local battles were taking place on the Gracac-Bihac highway and in other Croatian districts. (Reuter)

JAP ATTACKS EAST OF AITAPE BEATEN BACK

PEARL HARBOR, August 4 — In spite of increased Japanese resistance, United States Marines and Army forces have advanced nearly two miles northwestward on Guam Island and have brought under control the important road junction town of Finegayan, Admiral Nimitz' headquarters announced today.

The communique added that on Wednesday the American flag was formally raised on Tinian Island, in the capture of which more than 5,000 Japanese were killed.

From General MacArthur's headquarters came the news that four separate enemy attacks on the American Afua flank positions east of Aitape, in British New Guinea, have been repulsed. These suicidal attempts to break through the closing trap drawn by Australian and American troops in that sector were supported by artillery, mortar, and machine gun fire, and are in addition to repeated unsuccessful thrusts reported yesterday. These attempts have so far cost the Japanese nearly 4,000 dead.

More Allied air attacks were reported on Timor and Ceram islands and other targets in the southwest Pacific. A 1,000-ton freighter and several small craft were destroyed [illegible] while to the west a direct

During the violent and bloody siege of Myitkyina, which began on May 17, at least 3,000 Japanese were killed, stated an AP report. The capture of the city, which is an essential step in General Joseph Stilwell's drive to link the new Ledod highway with the old Burma Road, came after Allied forces had put to flight enemy formations which had invaded northeast India. Myitkyina had been in enemy hands for over two years. The last remnants of the Japanese garrison were killed in the final mopping-up.

Myitkyina is the largest city in northern Burma. Its capture gives the Allies control of two airfields, and an important road and rail junction on the upper Irrawaddy River, and augurs well for a junction with the Yunnan Chinese forces to the east in a combined effort to open a land route to north China.

Forward Allied troops in north Burma are firmly established only about 21 miles from the westward-driving Chinese forces. After an advance of three miles along the Tiddim road, the Allies are in contact with the enemy five miles south of Churachandpur. The occupation of a hill on the Tamu-Palel road has brought Allied units within seven miles of Tamu.

In western Yunnan Province, Chinese troops have fought their way into the Japanese bastion of Tengyueh, stated UP correspondent George Wang. The advance was made in the wake of a shattering raid by B-25s of the 14th USAAF.

A recent Tokyo broadcast, quoting Domei, said the new Japanese Premier, General Kuniaki Koisi, has warned the Japanese people that « the Allies might attempt a landing on the Japanese mainland. » The broadcast added: « The offensive against the fortress of Asia is being carried on from east, west, south, and north, » and expressed concern about Allied Pacific successes.

American fighter-bombers have raided Hengyang airfield, targets on the Yellow River, Suiween in South China, and French Indo-China, stated a communique from General Stilwell's headquarters. River shipping in the Tungtin Lake area was bombed, and 14th USAAF planes destroyed 200 trucks and inflicted casualties on the Japanese elsewhere. None of the American aircraft was lost. LEDO ROAD GROWS BEHIND MOGAUNG DRIVE

KANDY, Ceylon, August 4 — As General Joseph Stilwell's Chinese-American forces drive down the Mogaung Valley, the Ledo Road, under the hands of American engineers, is growing in their wake. It is being built by the same specialists who constructed the Alaska-Canada Highway.

The Ledo Road has already been completed as a two-lane highway to within 34 miles of Myitkyina, it is reported today. The New York Times Friday described the road as « destined to open a new major front against Japan, » and cited General Stilwell's recent appointment to full, fourstar General as emphasizing the growing importance of the Burma war theatre. The paper pointed out that Japan's hopes of invading India are now no more than a memory. Her abortive attempt at invasion had cost her 50,000 men. (PWB)

FAR EAST AIR FORCES NEVER LACK FUEL

WASHINGTON, August 4 — Aviation gasoline and other petroleum products are being delivered so successfully to the Allied forces in the New Guinea campaign that Far East air forces never lack fuel, stated the War Department yesterday.

American ingenuity, willingness, and cooperation between the various services made possible this achievement, said a War Department spokesman, who went on to describe how ingeniously-improvised means brought aviation fuel to American forces on Wakde and the Admiralty Islands.

MYITKYINA TAKEN, TENGCHUNG ASSAULTED

KANDY, CEYLON, August 4 — As Allied forces completed the capture of the north Burma town of Myitkyina, which for 12 weeks has been the scene of some of the bitterest fighting of the Burma campaign, Chinese troops, little more than 80 miles to the southeast, were battering their way into the walled city of Tengchung, a key point on the overland route to China.

A battle with the Japanese garrison of Tengchung is now in progress, stated a Chinese High Command communique. In the Hunan Province, added the communique, fierce battles are raging, with the Chinese still holding out in encircled Hengyang. Chinese relief columns are trying to force a way through the Japanese lines to aid the city's defenders. Allied warplanes struck hard at enemy air power nests at Hankow and Canton. Fires were visible from miles away as medium bombers streaked for home after attacking two Canton airdromes. Good results were reported from the Hankow raid.

NAZIS HAD PLANNED TO SEIZE URUGUAY

NEW YORK, August 4 — German agents planned to seize Uruguay without waiting for Hitler's intended invasion of the Americas from Dakar, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the U. S. Federal Bureau of Investigation, wrote in an article in the American magazine. He wrote:

« The Axis had made definite plans to invade South America from Dakar and the situation had become alarming. The German population was to have worked toward the plan which would have crushed Uruguay in 15 days and spread into Brazil and Argentina.

« When the country had been taken over, German agents intended to liquidate all Jews and Freemasons, confiscate banks and lands, and set up a Nazi government. But before the leader could complete his plans, he was arrested and sent to prison for 13 years. »

Telling how the Axis espionage and sabotage system in South America was smashed, Hoover said that over 7,000 Axis agents and sympathizers had been expelled, interned, or moved to residences where they could do no harm. More than 250 highly-trained enemy spies and saboteurs were neutralized, and 29 secret shortwave radio stations, used for transmitting information about the United States to Germany, had been eliminated. FOUR CITIES SHATTERED NAZI HOPES

LONDON, August 4 — Four cities of Europe have shattered the Nazi onslaught, an editorial in the London Evening Standard said today.

They stood at each point of the compass: Leningrad in the north, London in the west, Stalingrad in the east, and Malta's Valetta in the south. Today, they are no longer beleaguered cities, but the sallying points of conquering armies.

Through two winters the citizens of Leningrad lived like Arctic explorers, starving, shelled, but working as never before in the history of the city, the article commented.

Stalingrad, it said, was the grave of a German army and of German hopes. If Malta had fallen, no force in the world could have prevented the junction of the Nazis with the Japanese.

In the west, London defied Nazi threats. It suffered, and is still suffering, but it now has the certainty of victory and the knowledge that the West is saved. (PWB)

TRANSATLANTIC RECORD BROKEN

NEW YORK, August 4 — Brigadier General Lawrence Fritz today said the North Atlantic division of the Army Air Transport Command has broken the transatlantic air traffic record by moving more cargo, mail, and passengers in the first six months of this year than in all of 1943.

Transport Command officers reported that successful

A statement from Hitler's headquarters said that the Army, in order to vindicate its honor, had requested Hitler to carry out a ruthless purge to cleanse it of the last criminal who took part in the attempt on July 20, and thereby re-establish the honor of the Army.

Those who were found to have taken part in the revolt against Hitler would then be turned over to the « people's justice », which implies that punishment will be at the ruthless hands of the Gestapo, rather than the Army itself.

The statement read: « The court of honor is to inquire into the antecedents of field marshals and generals to learn who took any part whatever in the attempt. Those who had part in the attempt should be expelled from the Army or, being under suspicion, should be dismissed temporarily. »

Hitler has reserved the right personally to exercise the final decision over the proposals of the court.

« The following who were shot under sentence of court on the strength of the results of its investigations, were submitted to Hitler today:

(General Fellgiebel was plenipotentiary for technical means of communication in Goering's four-year plan.)

« The following who were shot under sentence of court martial on July 20 are also to be expelled: Infantry General Olbricht, Colonel Count Stauffengerg, Colonel Mertz von Quirnheim, and Lieutenant Haeften.

« Also, the deserters to the Bolshevists: Artillery General Lindemann and Major G. Kuhn.

The proposal to expel former Colonel General Hoeppner is rendered void by the fact that he was already expelled from the Wehrmacht in 1942, and is no longer a member of the Army.

« The Fuehrer has consented to the proposals, and the persons expelled will be handed over to the people's court for judgment. The trial before the people's court will take place shortly. »

The members of the court of honor, who were appointed by Hitler, are: General Field Marshal Keitel, Field Marshal von Rundstedt, Colonel General Guderian, Infantry General Schroth, and Lieut. General Specht. The deputies are: Infantry General Kreibel and Lieut. General Kirchheim.

HITLER PURGES WEHRMACHT

LONDON, August 4 — The Wehrmacht has requested Hitler to carry out a purge in the army the German News Agency reported from Hitler's headquarters tonight. A court of honor has been set up to inquire into the attitude of field marshal and generals.

The German report also stated that one field marshal and four generals had been expelled from the Wehrmacht at the first sitting of the court today.

Military observers in London pointed out that Hitler is attempting to make it appear that the German Army, instead of the Nazi Party, instituted the current purge. They recalled that the original purge, sponsored by Goering, Himmler, and other Party leaders, began immediately after the attempt on Hitler's life.

HITLER DEMANDS « LAST CARTRIDGE »

LONDON, August 4 — Hitler and Himmler recently held a conference of army officers at Hitler's headquarters, said the German telegraph service for the front yesterday. Both Himmler and Marshal Keitel, chief of the High Command, addressed the officers, who are styled « leading National Socialist officers. »

It is recalled that some months ago, Hitler and Keitel stressed that only a politically trained officer would be able to demand the necessary sacrifices from the German soldiers. One such demand for sacrifices was made by Hitler a few days after D-day in an order to officers on the Normandy front, which has now come into the possession of the Allies.

This order requires officers to make it their soldiers' task « to deny the enemy entry into Europe in any circumstances. » It says « every commander of a str[illegible]a point, of an island, of a fortification, and of a ship is responsible on his honor never to capitulate, to carry on the fight to the last gun and the last round of ammunition. »

The order concluded by asserting that the Allies will not succeed in getting a firm hold on the coast protected by the Germans, and that victory will therefore be Germany's.

German soldiers, prisoners in Allied hands, have their own comments to make on this order. One of them said, « sounds easy, but Hitler should have been there. Then he would have seen how high were our losses. » Another said, « Ridiculous: everybody knew that when the Allies landed we should not be able to hold them. » (PWB) today, after seeing how works of art had been carefully hidden to keep them away from the Nazis' clutches.

Some of the works saved included The Madonna by Giotto, 14th century; the Madonna by Cimabue, 13th century; The Battle Scene by Paolo Uccello, 14th Century; Botticelli's Primavera and his Adorazione Dei Magi; Santa Anna by Masaccio; two paintings by the Lippis, father and son — the Coronation of the Virgin by Filippo Lippi, the Father, and the Descent from the Cross by Filippino Lippi, the son; Portrait of a Knight by Reubens; The Madonna by Andrea Del Sarto; and The Madonna with a Group of Saints by Fra Bartolomeo.

The list of rescued art pieces was confirmed by Professor Cesare Fasole, curator of the Library of Fine Arts in Florence, who said that most of the pieces came from the Uffizi Gallery and the Accademia Gallery.

However, not all of the paintings came through unscathed, and some of them were stolen by the Nazis. One of the places where the paintings were hidden was in charge of a priest who was forced to flee when the Germans suspected him of having sympathized with the Italian Partisans.

Professor Fasole said: « Luckily, the paintings left there were not the most important. When I arrived ,there was nobody in the place and the Germans were wandering about at will among the collection. The most precious pictures there were The Crucifixion by Perugino, 14th century, and The Master by Raphael. These are safe and undamaged. However, it is certain that some of the paintings have been stolen or damaged, but as far as I can tell, only the smaller pictures suffered. »

Professor Fasole praised Allied officials for the care and solicitude they have shown for the works of art. At present, the masterpieces which escaped the Nazis' hands are under the guard of Allied soldiers.

Prince Andrea Corsini, whose family possesses a fine collection of china, tapestries, furniture, and paintings, showed where the Germans had damaged six paintings leaning against a wall by plunging a bayonet through them. Old prints in his villa were ruined by bayonet holes. The Germans also broke all of the mirrors in the Prince's villa. (UNN)

ROME, August 4 — The Minister of Public Instruction announced today that 25 members of the faculty of the University of Rome have been removed from office, pending examination of their cases for final disposition by the Fascist purge commission. (UNN)

AMG BEGINS PRICE LISTS ENFORCEMENT

ROME, August 4 — An AMG Summary Court today fined three jewelers a total of 35,000 lire for failing to put price marks on items for sale in their shops.

A barber who failed to post the approved scale of prices for his services was fined 5,000 lire.

The Court explained that these mild sentences were given in view of the novelty of the price enforcement system under AMG ordinances, but stiffer sentences, including jail terms, may be expected by later violators. (UNN)

FONTINE MARSH WORKS TO COST 100 MILLION LIRE

ROME, August 4 — A survey just completed by the Regional Engineering Office of the Italian Government estimated that 100 million lire will be required to restore about 23,000 acres of land in the Pontine Marsh area. The Germans flooded this land reclamation project last winter. (UNN)

MORE ART TREASURES IN ITALY SAVED

WITH THE 8th ARMY, ITALY, August 4 — Irreplaceable masterpieces of art have been saved from the Germans, a correspondent of the United Nations News Service reported were not the most important. When I arrived there was nobody in the place and the Germans were wandering about at will among the collection. The most precious pictures there were The Crucifixion by Perugino, 14th century, and The Master by Raphael. These are safe and undamaged. However, it is certain that some of the paintings have been stolen or damaged, but as far as I can tell, only the smaller pictures suffered.»

Professor Fasolo praised Allied officials for the care and solicitude they have shown for the works of art. At present, the masterpieces which escaped the Nazis' hands are under the guard of Allied soldiers.

Prince Andrea Corsini, whose family possesses a fine collection of china, tapestries, furniture, and paintings, showed where the Germans had damaged six paintings leaning against a wall by plunging a bayonet through them. Old prints in his villa were ruined by bayonet holes. The Germans also broke all of the mirrors in the Prince's villa. (UNN)

MAQUIS CAPTURE ULTRA-COLLABORATIONIST

LONDON, August 4 — The Maquis have captured Admiral Platon, the man who was so pro-German that he denounced Pierre Laval to Hitler as "lukewarm," and the German Reichsrichter, Judge Kunst, is being held as a hostage, it was announced today.

Platon, French ex-Minister for Colonies, who had previously been expelled from the Vichy government for plotting against Laval, was seized by the Maquis at his home in Dordogne. Recently, with Marcel Deat and others, he sent a letter to Hitler denouncing Laval's "lukewarm" collaboration and asked the Nazi Leader forcibly to intervene to obtain more energetic support from France.

Kunst was taken by French Forces of the Interior near Lyons. The German authorities were informed that he is being held as a hostage. (PWB)

ITALIAN PATRIOTS TO ASSIST NAZI SURRENDERS

ALGIERS, August 4 — Italian Patriots in the areas north and east of Spezia were instructed to receive German soldiers carrying surrender leaflets, said a broadcast by Radio Sardinia on Wednesday.

Patriots who speak German were asked to reassure the deserting soldiers that their lives will be spared, and that they will be treated according to international law.

The radio said that it was reported that the Germans in Spezia Province are losing 30 to 40 soldiers daily. (OWI)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 4 — Today's communique:

LAND: Following limited progress which has been made day by day against stubborn enemy resistance during the last week, further significant gains have been made by troops of the 8th Army who have forced the enemy to contract their defences south of Florence. The enemy's original defensive line having been made untenable, he has been forced to withdraw to about the line of the River Ema and the high ground to the east, where a further defence south of the Arno is still practicable.

During the day, troops of an Indian division of the 8th Army have increased their bridgehead over the River

Rail and road bridges in the Nice area, as well as military installations in Yugoslavia and Albania, were also attacked.

Last night, our bombers attacked railyards at Portes les Valence, in southern France.

In these operations, 18 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 15 of ours are missing.

Two enemy aircraft were destroyed during night operations on August 2/3.

MAAF flew approximately 1,500 sorties. (UNN)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 4 — Today's communique:

Allied forces have reached Rennes and have elements south of the town. Another column has advanced through Dol and, moving westward along the north side of the Brittany Peninsula, has reached the area of Dinan.

Other Allied formations east of the Percy-Villedieu road have captured Beaumesnil, and are now in the area of Saint Calvados. Further south, our forces have captured Mortain.

In the area southeast of Caumont, Allied troops have made progress towards Villier Bocage and Aunay, where there has been some fighting. We hold Bois de Buron. There has been a series of enemy counter-attacks along the entire front from north and east of Le Beny Bocage.

Bridges near Paris, Orleans, Chatres, and Rouen were bombed with satisfactory results by medium and light bombers yesterday. Other formations attacked ammunition dumps at Maintenon.

Three mashalling yards and an oil dump in Alsace Lorraine, objectives near Paris and Brussels, and a synthetic oil plant and storage depot near Douai were hit by strong forces of heavy bombers. Accompanying fighters attacked rolling stock, power stations, and other targets.

Rail communications were attacked during the night by our light bombers. One of a formation of five E-boats was sunk by a direct bomb hit by coastal craft in an attack off the Channel Islands. A force of enemy E'boats was intercepted yesterday morning west of Cap de la Havre by light naval coastal forces. In the short action which followed, one of the enemy was sunk and another damaged before he made good his escape towards Le Havre. (Reuter)

SOVIET

During the day, troops of an Indian division of the 8th Army have increased their bridgehead over the River Pesa, and advanced to the high ground about Inno. New Zealand troops in the sector southwest of Florence have captured the high ground about Pian dei Corri, and are advancing toward the River Greve, and are now less than four miles from the city. South African and British troops on their right have similarly made important gains and are approaching the line of the River Ema four miles from the city. During these advances, the towns of Impruneta and Montebuoni have been captured.

In the Arno Valley to the east of Florence, British troops have made considerable progress, entering the town of Incisa, and are within five miles of the important town of Pontassieve.

In the American 5th Army sector and on the remainder of the front, there is nothing to report.

AIR: Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked industrial plants and other military objectives in southern Germany and bridges and lines in northeastern Italy.

Fighter aircraft conducted an offensive sweep over the Belgrade area.

Enemy communications, harbour installations, shipping, and airdromes in northern Italy, off the east and west coast of Italy, and in the battle area, were attacked by tactical aircraft.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During August 3, our troops on all fronts have damaged or destroyed a total of 53 German tanks. In air combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 30 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, August 4 — To-day's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Five hundred Fascist soldiers who advanced towards Varzi and Brallo to carry out acts of reprisal against the civil population were met and routed by patriots. Seventy Fascists were killed and as many wounded. Some vehicles and a considerable number of arms were captured. German motorized units, coming from Voghera, are at the present time moving against the patriots as reinforcements of the defeated and dispersed Fascists.

In the Valley of the Nure, a strong enemy attack against patriot units was repulsed with the effective support of Allied Air Forces. The enemy suffered heavy casualties in men and materials.

Owing to reverses of the last few days, the Germans have been compelled to send reinforcements to the Spezia sector in an effort to intensify operations against the patriots. Another heavy contingent of German troops are preparing to renew their attacks against the patriots in the Abetone sector, where they have already suffered heavy casualties. In addition to the killed and wounded, whose number has not yet been verified, the Germans lost 250 men in prisoners to the patriot forces. Many enemy vehicles were destroyed.

A violent clash took place between patriots and German soldiers, which resulted in German losses of 60 dead and many wounded.

Eight thousand Nazi-Fascists have been sent to the north of Bobbio to attack groups of patriots who for some time have carried on an active and coursgeous fight.

Clashes have also taken place in the Province of Parma.

Tuscan Patriots, reinforced by units from other regions, continue to make a noteworthy contribution to the Allied war effort by harassing enemy troops. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 4 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, southeast of Caen, local enemy attacks were frustrated. In the Coulvain sector, fierce fighting was in progress throughout the whole day, but no considerable change was brought about in the general situation. Southwest of Coulvain and in the Vire sector, the Germans succeeded in repelling the enemy who had punched a gap into our lines in a counter-attack and in closing the front line. Fifty enemy tanks were destroyed. A strong enemy group is encircled and is subjected to concentrated attacks.

Northeast and east of Avranches, many enemy attacks supported by tanks were frustrated with heavy losses for the enemy. In the eastern part of Brittany, motorized enemy troops who, via Avranches, had broken through in a southerly direction, advanced south and westward and, at several points, were engaged by the garrison of German strongpoints in this sector.

One cruiser, three destroyers, two corvettes, five freighters, and a special ship totalling 36,000 tons were sunk in the waters off the invasion front. Numerous other ships, totalling more than 56,000 tons, were torpedoed. The loss of a big part of these ships may be reckoned with. On Thursday night, German motor assault boats sank a British artillery speedboat in the eastern part of the Seine Estuary.

London and its outskirts continue to be kept under heavy fire with « V-1 ».

In Italy, our troops withdrew to a narrow bridgehead just south of Florence. Enemy attacks on this position were frustrated. The historical town, with its irreplaceable cultural values, is being kept under heavy enemy artillery fire.

On the northeastern borders of the Carpathians, an enemy attempt at breaking through toward the pass road crossing the Beskides was frustrated. The 271st Soviet Rifle Division was encircled and destroyed during this operation. Several other Soviet divisions suffered heavy losses in men and materiel. From July 31 to August 3, 181 guns, 13 tanks, and numerous infantry weapons, as well as lorries, were destroyed or captured in this sector. West of Reichhof (Rzeszow), repeated Bolshevik attacks were frustrated. West of Baranov, mobile guns destroyed 23 enemy tanks. On the remaining Vistula front, fierce fighting is in progress east of Sandomirz, on both sides of Pulawy and east of Warka.

Northeast of Warsaw, Soviet forces were cut from their communications and compressed in a narrow area by counter-attacks of German tanks; 76 enemy tanks were destroyed. On the front running form Warsaw to the area west of Kauen, all Bolshevik attacks were repulsed.

In several sectors of the Latvian front, enemy attacks were repelled with bloody losses for the enemy. Local infiltrations were sealed off or narrowed down in counter-attacks. In the Narva Isthmus, the Soviets again attacked with nine rifle divisions and four tank units. They again suffered heavy losses and achieved no successes.

On Wednesdaw morning, an enemy attempt at landing on the Dalmatian Island of Korcula, which was supported by English destroyers and numerous fighter-bombers, was frustrated by the garrison of the island after a short, fierce fight.

Enemy bomber squadrons, violating the Swiss air space, launched terror attacks on localities in southern and southwestern Germany particularly on Friedrichshafen, Saarbruecken, and Kempten. Air defense forces brought down 43 enemy planes, 40 of which were four-engined bombers. (Radio Berlin)

ENEMY BROADCASTS

German Overseas Stations: On the western front, Kluge has brought up his reinforcements, with the object, it is said, of frustrating Churchill's plan to end the invasion campaign by October. The front line continues to run obliquely from south of Caen between the Cotentin Peninsula and Britanny. The situation on the Italian front remains unchaged. The Eighth Army on Wednesday launched several attacks on Florence from the south and west, with heavy losses to the New Zealand and Indian formations concerned. The rupture of relations between Germany and Turkey is regarded by the Swiss press as a victory for Stalin. The Japanese Information Office states that Turkey has given up her neutrality at the dictation of Great Britain and the United States. The Allies have lost 217 planes (which means the loss of 2,000 airmen) in attacks on Hungary within the past four weeks.

Transocean and DNB: With reference to the fighting on the western front, it is suggested that the Allies are adopting Soviet tactics in eastern Brittany. It remains to be seen whether these will meet with success. On the Italian front, continued bombardment of Florence is reported. The pleasure surtax, initiated by Mussolini and now levied in the Italian Fascist Republic, will help in the relief of fugitives from Allied-occupied Italy and devastated Italian towns. It is reported from Venice that Italy, following the example of Germany, is mobilising all efforts for total war. Measures inaugurated in the Trieste region are meeting with enthusiasm everywhere.

Fascist Radio: Following the withdrawal of German troops from some sectors of the Arno, the battle for Florence has entered a new phase. British fighter-bombers have joined in the attack on the city, with resulting damage to monuments and buildings. Limited activity only is reported from other sectors of the Italian front. The Duce has issued a decree for the institution of a Women's Volunteer Corps for auxiliary service with the Republican Armed Forces.

NEWS SUMMARY

Public Relations Office

PENINSULAR BASE SECTION NUMBER 296-FRIDAY, AUGUST 4, 1944

AMERICANS HALF WAY ACROSS BREST PENINSULA: SHAEF, August 4--American armored columns driving more than 100 miles south of Cherbourg have taken the important town of Rennes and are pushing on south of Rennes to cut off the Brest peninsula at its base. Advance elements are already reported to be half way across the peninsula. The swift American advance has reached the town of Dinan and is threatening the twin towns of Saint Malo and Saint Servans on the coast.

The capture of Rennes was announced personally by War Secretary Stimson and caused the Germans to make the remark that "the Americans have broken the lock on the door to the western front." It is an important airfield town and a road and rail junction from which five main arterial roads radiate. Its capture cuts the main line to Brest.

General Montgomery was enthusiastic: "Progress is excellent. We are hitting the Hun a good crack. It is all going very well. I am satisfied and delighted with the whole thing. We have taken a lot of prisoners of war and the Allied total is now approaching 100,000--quite apart from those we have written off." German forces have left big pockets to be cleaned up by American infantry racing through Brittany in the wake of the tank forces. As armored columns raced toward Rennes ffom the north 1000 Germans marched in under their own officers to surrender.

An eastward thrust near Avranches has brought the capture of Mortain and the German salient to the north, further threatened by this thrust, has begun to withdraw rapidly. A considerable advance has been made by the Americans in the area southeast of Villedieu and Tessy sur Viro.

British and Canadian forces had tough going yesterday. The Germans have shifted the main weight of their forces from south and east of Caen to the Villers Bocage -Aunay region. Every advance by the British is bitterly contested. They are on the outskirts of both Villers Bocage and Aunay but German resistance, if anything, is even stiffer than before.

WARSAW PATRIOTS BEGIN STREET FIGHTING IN POLISH CAPITAL: London, August 4--Warsaw's patriot forces, driven under ground for nearly five years, have come out into the open again to join in the battle to free their city. As Russian armies close in on the Polish capital from the north, east, and south, the patriots have risen against the German garrison. Heavy fighting is now going on in the streets and already the patriots have seized parts of the center of the city as well as some of the northern, southern, and western districts. They are in touch with the Russian forces outside the city and have sent an urgent appeal for anti-tank guns. Meanwhile, the German radio commentator last night said that Soviet troops have already outflanked Warsaw and are "headed straight to the west." Another German radio commentator said last night that German troops on the sector west of Bialystok were suffering from "paralyzed exhaustion."

For the first time last night's Soviet communique mentioned a bridgehead across the Vistual River. The Germans had spoken of Soviet forces across the river several times previously but it had never been mentioned by the Soviets. The new bridgehead is 20 miles long and 15 miles deep and is located southwest of Sandomierz, a town 115 miles southeast of Warsaw and 90 miles northeast of Cracow.

In the frontal push toward Cracow the Soviets have captured another 200 localities, including two railway stations. The Soviet advances is also continuing north and west of Kaunas and west of Rezekne. In the area northwest of Kaunas many mobile forces are racing forward to cut the Siauliai (Shavli)-Tilsit road. German resistance on the approaches to East Prussia has stiffened considerably but the German radio yesterday reported that German positions defending East Prussia near Augustovo had been broken through.

TWO-MILE ADVANCE ON GUAM: Washington, August 3--American forces advanced nearly two miles northwest in yesterday's drive on Guam Island, it was announced here today. The American flag was formally raised in the Tinian Islands on August 2.

Japanese dead on Tinian are estimated at more than 5000. Approximately 4000 civilians were interned. The Japanese dead on Guam number 7893 and about 7000 civilians have sought American protection.

There was no mention in today's communique of the landing on Rota Island which was reported by the Tokyo radio.

LITTLE BY LITTLE TOWARD FLORENCE: Allied Headquarters, August 3--South of Florence Eighth Army units have made a further advance across the River Greve and have captured the bitterly contested town of Strada. The Eighth Army men are still edging forward against the most determined resistance and the heavy assaults of the German

The Germans issued a report tonight that the Allies had been shelling Florence heavily since noon. Late dispatches from the front indicated that the Germans may have had enough at last. It is still too early to determine whether they have begun a real withdrawal but there were some signs evident. British troops have now edged up to within three miles of the city's outskirts.

U.S. AIRFORCES IN BRITAIN DROPPED A TON A MINUTE DURING JULY: London, August 3--It was announced tonight that the United States Strategic Airforce dropped more than 73,000 tons of bombs on Germany and German dominated Europe during July. Eighth Air Force Liberators and Fortresses averaged more than one ton every minute day and night throughout the month. Losses were 1.5 per cent of the heavy bombers and .7 per cent of the fighters. Together with RAF totals already announced, British based bombers last month dropped a grand total of 118,333 tons on Europe.

Communiques received today indicated that there has been no let up in the air war. Heavy forces of RAF bombers last night blasted flying bomb depots and warehouses in the area north of Paris. Today more than 1000 Eighth Air Force heavy bombers attacked a variety of German installations throughout the afternoon and evening. Rail yards at Strasbrug, Saarbrucken and Mulhouse, an oil storage dump at Merkwiller, and additional military installations in France were among the chief targets in the afternoon. Strong forces of Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked flying bomb launching sites in the Pas de Calais region during the evening while other forces hit oil plants and oil storage areas in the region of Paris and Brussels. From all operations seven bombers and six fighters are missing.

GERMANS CLAIM TOLL OF ALLIED SHIPS IN ESTUARY: London, August 3--The German radio was busy tonight laying claim to a "disaster" said to have been inflicted on Allied shipping lying in the Seine estuary. According to the Germans one cruiser, two destroyers, two corvettes, and seven transports, freighters or landing ships were sunk "by a new weapons of the German Navy often mentioned of late." The Germans were presumably referring to the one-man torpedo. There has been no confirmation of this story.

HITLER PROMOTES SS GENERALS: London, August 3--The German news agency tonight announced that Hitler has promoted General Dietrich and Paul Hausser to the rank of colonel generals of the SS (Black Guards). The two generals are corps commanders in Normandy? The agency added that eleven lieutenant generals have been promoted to full generals. Colonel general is the highest rank held by any SS leader. The SS was recently given the role of assuring Hitler's and Himmler's control over the armed forces.

RUMOR DEPARTMENT: Stockholm, August 3--"Usually well informed circles" report that Finland concluded an agreement with Germany before she changed her president. It is believed that Germany agreed to Finland's making a separate peace with Russia.

AMERICANS RACE FORWARD SOUTH OF RENNES

SHAEF, August 3 — American troops have reached the area of Dinan and other forces are reported to be rolling unchecked south of the recently-captured city of Rennes.

In the Brest Peninsula, American armored forces have ters in an apple orchard which had been evacuated by the Germans 72 hours before. He said: «We have taken a lot of prisoners of war and the Allied total is now approaching 100,000 men — apart from those killed.»

Press dispatches reported a new attack below Caen by Canadian troops. The new drive east of the Orne River was aimed at Tilly la Campagne, a German strongpoint. The assault was preceded by heavy air and ground bombardment.

There is still no sign of a co-ordinated stand or a prepared line, adds Stern.

On the British sector, a force has hammered its way to Vire, nerve-center of the German positions on the central front. The capture of the town of Saint Pois widened the Allied corridor east of Avranches to 14 miles, and there seemed to be no organised resistance.

Between St. Pois and Vire there is now only a narrow escape corridor for the Germans who are trying to pull out of Tessy, Percy, and the Villedieu pocket. From Vire right up to just west of Villers Bocage, the British were making full use of the best tank country they have so far met in Normandy. The British spearhead had thrust more than six miles east from Vire and was approaching the town of Vassay.

Further north, another armored column had outflanked the strong German group round Villers Bocage. Other Allied troops stood on the outskirts of Villers Bocage.

South of Caen also, the British troops attacked and came up against the 1st Panzer SS Division. (Reuter - OWI)

ALLIES THREATEN GERMANS AT CAEN

WASHINGTON, August 3 — The rapid advance in France in the last nine days is «the most satisfying accomplishment since the successful Allied landings on the French beaches,» Secretary of War Stimson said in a press conference today.

Summarizing the accomplishments of American troops in the Normandy offensive, Mr. Stimson said that they had made an advance of over 37 miles and had liberated more than 900 square miles of French territory. Twenty thousand prisoners were captured and heavy losses in enemy tanks and artillery were inflicted. Mr. Stimson said that so many enemy vehicles were destroyed on the roads by Allied planes, that American advance columns were actually slowed up by the abandoned German equipment.

Though the Americans have made the most spectacular advances, Mr. Stimson said, the British and Canadian attacks were timed to follow the American breakthrough and enabled the Allied forces to advance 18 miles south of Caumont to Vire.

He commended the coordinated operations of the British and Americans, and said «all share in the success so far achieved.»

AMERICANS RACE FORWARD SOUTH OF RENNES

SHAEF, August 3 — American troops have reached the area of Dinan and other forces are reported to be rolling unchecked south of the recently-captured city of Rennes.

In the Brest Peninsula, American armored forces have captured Dol, 12 miles due west of Pontorson, and are apparently by-passing St. Malo. Elements of four German divisions have been identified in Brittany, the 266th and 343rd Infantry divisions and the 2nd Paratroop Division.

Another thrust southeast of Brecey has brought American forces to the area of Mortain, and have captured St. Pois to the north.

German forces have left big pockets to be cleaned up by American infantry who are racing through Breton country in the wake of tank forces, a Reuter correspondent reported. The number of prisoners continued to mount and as the armored forces raced toward Rennes earlier today, 1,000 Germans led by their officers marched in orderly columns to surrender.

There were indications that the Germans had intended to defend the city of Rennes, which is a communication center for the whole of the Brest Peninsula and is the junction of four railway lines and many main roads. Rennes also serves as a clearing house for all naval stores supplying U-boats based along the coast of St. Malo.

The appearance of the Luftwaffe over the battlefield strafing American columns indicated that the military situation in the peninsula is worrying the German High Command, and they are throwing in all available guns, tanks, and planes to halt the unexpected advance.

«Progress along the Normandy front is excellent.» General Sir Bernard Montgomery stated at his headquarters in the south is disintegrating under the powerful blows of General Montgomery's armies, says William Stern, Reuter correspondent.

There is still no sign of a co-ordinated stand or a prepared line, adds Stern.

The Secretary of War viewed this latest achievement of the American armored forces as the «first large-scale test in France» which they had passed with flying colors.

LATE BULLETINS—

NAZIS LEAVING VILLEDIEU-PERCY-TESSY SALIENT

SHAEF, August 3 — There are indications that Germans are withdrawing from the Villedieu-Percy-Tessy salient. The Germans are also withdrawing south of Vire and Mortain.

British troops are now within 2,000 yards of Villers Bocage and 1,500 yards from Aunay. The Germans have brought fairly strong armored reinforcements to this area from south of Caen, and there is very heavy fighting, particularly around Aunay. (Reuter)

61,000 TONS OF BOMBS ON GERMANY

WASHINGTON, August 3 — More than 61,000 tons of bombs were dropped on targets in German-occupied Europe by the U. S. Strategic Air Force between June 6 and July 30, the War Department announced today. (OWI)

« Strategically, the United States successes mean the breaking of our confinement in the Cherbourg Peninsula and the opening of territory in which mobile warfare may be waged and the growing Allied strength be put to full use. As a result of these Allied victories, the German positions at Caen, hinging on the Villers Bocage defenses, are in danger. » (OWI)

HEAVY BOMBERS ATTACK SAARBRUECKEN

LONDON, August 3 — A strong force of Fortresses escorted by fighters today attacked railway marshalling yards at Saarbruecken, Mulhouse, and Strasbourg, and oil and storage dumps at Merkwiller. The weather was reported as excellent.

RAF Bomber Command planes operated on a 24-hour night and day schedule during the month of July in carrying out attacks against the enemy, a British Air Ministry announcement said yesterday.

These operations included repeated attacks on German centers of production and oil supplies, three massive attacks in support of the 2nd Army in Normandy, and a sustained offensive against enemy flying-bomb and rocket installations.

The Air Ministry announcement said the aggregate tonnage of bombs dropped during the past month established a new record — 57,000 tons, of which more than 13,000 tons fell on targets in Germany. Five heavy attacks were made on the important German industrial centers of Stuttgart, Kiel, and Hamburg, over which nearly 8,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

Mosquitoes took part in eight attacks on Berlin and in the raids on synthetic oil production centers.

The main attention of the British air defenses has been directed against flying bombs and their launching sites, the announcement said, adding that during last night and this morning more civilians were killed and injured and further damage was done to residential property in raids by flying bombs over southern England counties and the London area.

The BBC said Allied bombers from Britain yesterday attacked naval vessels in the Le Havre harbor, river traffic in the Seine, and fuel and ammunition dumps in northern France. Bridges near Paris and railway installations leading to the battle area were also attacked. (Reuter - BBC)

RENNES LARGEST LIBERATED FRENCH CITY

WASHINGTON, August 3 — Rennes, Brittany capital with a population approaching 75,000, is the largest city yet liberated by the Allies in France.

It is the chief town of the Department of Ille et Villaine, and stands at the confluence of the rivers from which the department derives its name.

Its principal industries were iron founding, tanning, flax spinning, and the manufacture of tenting and other coarse cloth. It has a large trade in farm produce. (OWI)

NEW GERMAN WEAPON

LONDON, August 3 — The latest German air weapon — a Junkers bomber filled with explosives and operated by a pilot in a Messerschmidt joined to the top of the Junkers to form a composite plane — has been destroyed over Normandy.

The bomber has all the forward guns removed and the space in the nose is filled with explosives. When fire or fighters prove dangerous, the pilot in the Messerschmidt can set the bomber on its fixed course and then break away to make his escape. (Reuter)

19 CANADIAN SOLDIERS MURDERED BY NAZIS

LONDON, August 3 — [illegible]

General Crerer's message to his troops said:

« It is because I realise the anger you will feel that I want a definite guidance from me to reach all ranks at this time. The universal and natural determination of Canadian soldiers to avenge the death of our comrades must not, under any circumstances, take the form of retaliation in kind.

« Instead, Canadian anger must be converted into a steel-hard determination to destroy the enemy in battle, to hit harder, to advance faster, and above all never to stop fighting while life remains.

« If any reminder were needed by us concerning the issues we are fighting for and the evil forces we are fighting against, this has surely been provided. »

An interim report is now being considered by the British, Canadian, and United States governments.

A United Press correspondent wrote that since the earliest days of the landings there had been reports of German shootings of prisoners, particularly in sectors where the SS troops were operating. It is reported that the shooting order was given by a German major because the men refused to give the enemy any information. (UP - Reuter)

BISHOP OF COUTANCES PRAISES ALLIES

CHERBOURG, August 3 — The Bishop of Coutances and Avranches in a statement broadcast by Radio Cherbourg in liberated France today praised the kindness of the Allied forces and compared it to « the great sufferings » inflicted on his people by the Germans.

The Bishop said: « I am treated with a respect and consideration to which I had become unaccustomed after four years of occupation. I can hardly believe in all the kindness, because I still labor under the terrible impressions of the great sufferings which have been inflicted on my unfortunate flock. »

Speaking of what it was like in France under Nazi occupation, he said: « Religious institutions were thrown on to the roads with hundreds of sick and suffering. But God had pity and mercy upon us, for He is giving us back an earth full of consolation and reparation. » (PWB)

« MYSTERY GENERAL » DREW NORMANDY PLANS

LONDON, August 3 — The man who drew up the plans for the landing in France — Lieutenant General Frederick Edgeworth Morgan — is one of the « mystery men » of the war, said the British Daily Express today, remarking on Churchill's disclosures yesterday.

For 16 months, from March, 1943, General Morgan, who is Deputy Chief of Staff, has been head of the planning staff.

When assigned to his great task, Morgan, with two senior officers and a band of young officers, set up his secret planning headquarters on floors over a famous London store.

His plan was accepted practically without alteration by General Eisenhower.

It is contained in a book the size of a family Bible. (OWI)

GRENADE DEVICE FROM SPOON, MESS-KIT

LONDON, August 3 — A device which has helped American grenade throwers clean up French hedgerows is made from scraps of metal from a GI spoon and bits of aluminum from a cast-off mess kit.

It is reported to increase the effectiveness and firepower of grenade launchers by improving accuracy and timing. It causes the grenades to explode just over the heads of the enemy.

Its inventor is Tech Sergeant J. B. May of Dallas, Texas.

19 CANADIAN SOLDIERS MURDERED BY NAZIS

LONDON, August 3 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced in the House of Commons yesterday that Great Britain would lodge a strong protest through the Swiss government against the German government for the murder of 19 Royal Canadian soldiers by Nazi SS troops after they had been taken prisoner in Normandy. The Swiss government has been asked to demand an immediate and searching investigation and punishment of those persons responsible.

In the Canadian House yesterday, Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King disclosed that a Canadian court of inquiry would be launched to conduct an investigation into the details of the murder.

Two days after the landing in France, the 3rd Canadian Division fought south across the Caen-Bayeux road and reached an area where a number of prisoners were lost to the enemy. It was later discovered that 19 of them had been shot dead after being taken to the rear.

The bodies, which had been buried, were exhumed and an exhaustive pathological investigation was made. The investigation proved that the 19 men had been shot deliberately.

Only when the evidence was found to be incontrovertible was the decision made to reveal what is one of the biggest atrocities committed by the Germans against opposing troops in western Europe.

SOVIET LEADERS THANK POLISH UNDERGROUND

LONDON, August 3 — Soviet commanders in the Vistula sector have expressed their appreciation of the help given by the Polish Underground Army units to the Soviet armies in capturing the crossings of the Vistula, a military spokesman of the Polish General Staff said yesterday.

He added that a report had been received from the headquarters of the commander-in-chief of the Polish Underground Army stating that, in addition to units of the 27th Polish Infantry Division, which had been fighting successfully in the district of Lublin, units of the 3d Infantry Division had taken part in the recent battles. POLISH UNDERGROUND IN WARSAW JOINS VAST EASTERN FRONT BATTLE

MOSCOW, August 3 — The 1,000-mile Eastern Front was ablaze tonight with one of the greatest battles in history. The Germans are throwing in raw reserves and carefully-rationed aircraft with little effect on the onrushing Red Army.

There was a terrific battle on the East Prussian frontier, while Red Army big guns poured shells into German territory.

The Germans admitted that Soviet forces had outflanked them in Warsaw at a moment when the Polish underground, which had been waiting its chance for five years, flung themselves into the battle for the Polish capital. In the meantime, the Russians thrust westward to within 70 or 80 miles of Cracow.

To add to the mounting German desperation, the Russians drew tighter the trap on about 350,000 German troops, caught in the Baltic pocket with but one escape route, by sea.

The Soviet offensive showed no sign of weakening. On the contrary, more and more reserves appear magically along with huge quantities of arms and supplies, which are catching up with the advancing troops. As an indication of the speed of the Red Army's advance, a Reuter correspondent said that without counting the gains on the Finnish front, the Red Army has liberated territory equal in area to three-quarters of the area of Germany proper.

Polish underground reports reaching London said that the Polish underground in strength had pitched into the battle against the Germans on Tuesday. Polish units are fighting in the northern, western, and southern sections of the city, and are in touch with each other and with Russian commanders. The largest district in Warsaw — Saxon Gardens — was reported in complete control of the Polish underground. Meanwhile, the Red Army is striking west, presumably from a sizeable bridgehead forced across the Vistula.

The Germans admitted last night that the Red Army had broken through Nazi defenses at Augustov, the last defense line before the East Prussian border and only eight miles from German territory. The Red Army is moving on East Prussia from at least six directions. The Germans are retreating so fast they have no time to blow up bridges or destroy abandoned equipment. Hundreds of abandoned German trucks and guns in working order have been found along the road by the advancing Russians.

The tightening of the trap on the 16th and 18th armies in the north resulted from the firm grip the Red Army has on the shore of the Riga Gulf, less than 20 miles from the city. Soviet outposts moved about 25 miles beyond Narva. Now, the Germans are faced with another major disaster unless they can extricate themselves by sea.

In the south, General Konev's troops are advancing on Tarnov, road and rail junction en route to Cracow. Tonight's Soviet communique said that the Red Army has established a bridgehead over the Vistula, southwest of Sandomierz, which is in the direction of Cracow. This puts the Red Army less than 120 miles from German Silesia, heart of Germany's industrial area.

Summing up the multi-pronged thrust at Germany, the Russian newspaper Izvestia said: « The Red Army is preparing to tear open the steel locks of Hitler's innermost fortress... Germany's hour is striking. » (Reuter - AP)

POLISH ADMINISTRATORS FOR FREED POLAND

MOSCOW, August 3 — Polish civil administrations and municipal governments are to be set up in the province of Lublin and other liberated Polish territories between the Bug and the Vistula, it was reported today.

An information bulletin from the Union of Polish Patriots said that local peoples' councils and representatives of the Polish Committee of National Liberation have already taken steps to this end. Local leaders and officials have been recruited from the ranks of the underground organizations, which fought the Germans, and from prominent, local, patriotic citizens. (PWB)

MANNERHEIM MAY REPUDIATE NAZIS

LONDON, August 3 — The first step which Field Marshal Carl von Mannerheim will take when he officially [illegible] Finland will be to repudiate to their doom, or whether to choose the only way out — to cease hostilities — thus saving the lives of hundreds of thousands of German men for Germany.

« At this hour, loyalty to the people bids you to refuse obedience to Hitler. The life and personal welfare of your comrades are your responsibility and those of your commanders. Do not let them be sacrificed to senseless military enterprizes. He who fights on is a gravedigger to the German people.

« Whoever hesitates incurs guilt and sin.

« You divisional chaplains must now make that clear to your generals, seriously counselling them. Turn against Hitler, who misused the confidence of the German soldier and who has betrayed the armed forces. »

The appeal was read by Chaplain Drummacher, who, the broadcast stated, was an official in the foreign office of the Protestant Church in Berlin. (OWI)

KIWIS AGAIN FIVE MILES FROM FLORENCE

ALLIED FORCE ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS, ITALY, August 3 — New Zealand forces of the 8th Army yesterday captured the height of La Poggiona on the western rim of the German semicircle of hill defenses south of Florence, to approach, for the second time in six days, within five miles of the historic city.

The New Zealanders battled their way to the ridge top and seized a neighbouring hill feature to the west, as the 8th Army launched a whole series of assaults on the hill perimeter south of Florence, to which the Germans have clung fanatically for nearly two weeks.

As a result of the New Zealanders' gains yesterday, a key segment of the German defenses in the Chianti Hills has been ripped from their grasp, and a down-grade, cross-country route into the city has been opened up across the Greve River Valley. New Zealand forces had broken through enemy lines to gain a foothold on these key hill positions in a spectacular night advance on July 27. To repair this breach in their positions, the Germans had launched five savage counter-attacks in four days, in the course of which the New Zealanders yielded some two miles of their gains. Twice in this period of heavy fighting, German Tiger tanks penetrated the village of San Michele, where the New Zealanders stabilized their line, seven miles southwest of Florence.

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army yesterday forced a second crossing of the Pesa River north of the original New Zealand bridgehead to drive a wedge one mile deep and two miles wide into the German defenses in this sector. The forward edge of this new bridgehead across the Pesa in the vicinity of the village of Ginestra is approximately eight miles southwest of Florence.

Second Pesa Crossing

The situation along the northern stretches of the Pesa River, near where it joins the Arno River, was not clear in the official reports available here. Several enemy counter-attacks « east of Empoli » are reported to have been repelled yesterday, which would indicate that the enemy is present in some strength on the western banks of the river. Empoli is four miles west of the Pesa River, and its capture by the British and Indian troops fighting in this area had not been announced, although the communique of July 31 announced that this area had been cleared « except for a few small pockets of enemy resistance. »

In attacks due south of Florence, Guards forces and South African troops of the 8th Army yesterday captured the villages of Strada in Chianti and Poneta, both within eight miles of Florence along a secondary road leading through the Ema River Valley. The Germans were reported to be relying upon their self-propelled guns, placed well forward and masses of field artillery, to slow the 8th

LONDON, August 3 — The first step which Field Marshal Carl von Mannerheim will take when he officially assumes the presidency of Finland will be to repudiate the Ryti Government's recent pact with Germany, committing Finland against making a separate peace, according to a Stockholm report quoted by the BBC today.

Reuter correspondent Bernard Valery reported that Stockholm observers state it is practically confirmed that the Germans are evacuating southern Finland. German warships were sighted off the Aaland Islands between Finland and Sweden, according to Finnish reports received in Sweden. There are other reports that there is a concentration of German shipping in the Finnish port of Abo.

Observers also point out that 24 hours after the election of Mannerheim, the Germans had not taken any counter-measures, although it is clear with every hour that the chances of a successful coup are decreasing. (OWI - BBC)

CAPTURED GERMAN CHAPLAINS CALL TO TROOPS

WASHINGTON, August 3 — Six German army chaplains captured on the Eastern Front have appealed to divisional chaplains in the German Army to urge their commanders not to prolong the war further. The appeal was made in a broadcast today from Moscow.

The broadcast said, in part: "Divisional chaplains on the Eastern Front! Your troops and officers and commanders are facing great decisions on whether to lead your troops miles of the historic city.

The New Zealanders battled their way to the ridge top and seized a neighbouring hill feature to the west, as the 8th Army launched a whole series of assaults on the hill perimeter south of Florence, to which the Germans have clung fanatically for nearly two weeks.

As a result of the New Zealanders' gains yesterday, a key segment of the German defenses in the Chianti Hills has been ripped from their grasp, and a down-grade, cross-country route into the city has been opened up across the Greve River Valley. New Zealand forces had broken through enemy lines to gain a foothold on these key hill positions in a spectacular night advance on July 27. To repair this breach in their positions, the Germans had launched five savage counter-attacks in four days, in the course of which the New Zealanders yielded some two miles of their gains. Twice in this period of heavy fighting, German Tiger tanks penetrated the village of San Michele, where the New Zealanders stabilized their line, seven miles southwest of Florence.

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army yesterday forced a second crossing of the Pesa River north of the original New Zealand bridgehead to drive a wedge one mile deep and two miles wide into the German defenses in this sector. The forward edge of this new bridgehead across the Pesa in the vicinity of the village of Ginestra is approximately eight miles southwest of Florence.

Second Pesa Crossing

The situation along the northern stretches of the Pesa River, near where it joins the Arno River, was not clear in the official reports available here. Several enemy counter-attacks "east of Empoli" are reported to have been repelled yesterday, which would indicate that the enemy is present in some strength on the western banks of the river. Empoli is four miles west of the Pesa River, and its capture by the British and Indian troops fighting in this area had not been announced, although the communique of July 31 announced that this area had been cleared "except for a few small pockets of enemy resistance."

In attacks due south of Florence, Guards forces and South African troops of the 8th Army yesterday captured the villages of Strada in Chianti and Poneta, both within eight miles of Florence along a secondary road leading through the Ema River Valley. The Germans were reported to be relying upon their self-propelled guns, placed well forward and masses of field artillery, to slow the 8th Army push.

On the eastern rim of the hill ring south of Florence, troops of a British division pushed two miles beyond Monte Maggio and have now established a line just southeast of Incisa, 11 miles southeast of Florence and on Highway 69. The enemy was also being pushed slowly northward through the Arno gorges further east, where the serpentine river doubles back after detouring to the south of the Pratomagno Mountain mass.

Enemy forces crossed the Arno at least two points along the 5th Army's 30-mile-long line yesterday, but in both instances were repulsed. Nearly 200 enemy infantrymen got across the river near Pontedera, 12½ miles southeast of Pisa, on Tuesday evening, but were dispersed by artillery fire before a strong 5th Army combat patrol could contact them. The other crossing was made near Cascina, eight miles southeast of Pisa, and at the junction point of the Arno River and the drainage canal which flows into the Ligurian Sea south of the river's natural mouth. These troops withdrew after a sharp clash with American forces.

Fanatical Resistance

In fierce efforts to prevent armored reconnaissance penetration of their positions south of Florence, the Germans are standing up single-handed against three-inch howitzers, the commander of a New Zealand armored vehicle [illegible]orted today.

The New Zealanders' armored car was first attacked by a German infantryman, who leapt onto the car as it was moving forward, and attempted to wedge grenades into the top.

When this assailant was brushed off as the car accelerated, another German armed with a bazooka stood in front of the oncoming vehicle even though it was armed with a three-inch howitzer levelled directly at him. Before the German could fire, the armored car had obliterated him with a single shot.

Aircraft Factory Blasted

Up to 750 heavy bombers flew across the Alps today to bomb an aircraft factory near Friedrichshafen and bomb the Avisio viaduct on the Brenner Pass line into southern Germany, an announcement said here this afternoon.

Liberators attacked the Manzell aircraft factory producing Dornier bombers, while Flying Fortresses bombed rail and other targets in the Friedrichshafen area.

Lightnings and Mustangs escorted the heavy bombers, but only one group of Liberators and their escorts met enemy opposition.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, including French planes, yesterday concentrated heavy attacks on road and rail bridges in northwestern Italy and in southern France.

Marauders piloted by French crews struck a road bridge over the Esteron River, 15 miles northwest of Nice, in one of their first attacks against military objectives in their homeland. Three flights of the French planes bombed the bridge, at Gilette, and reported a good concentration of bomb bursts.

Other Marauders attacked another road bridge across the Esteron River, just east of Gilette, and railway tracks paralleling the river were cut. In other attacks, Marauders hit the Levenzo road bridge over the Var River northwest of Nice, and the Taggia River rail bridge between San Remo and Imperia on the Italian Riviera.

Mitchel bombers, in their first flights over France, struck heavily at three key road bridges across the Var River, 10 miles north of Nice. Each of the structures was covered with hits according to preliminary reports. The bridges are part of the highway system linking the south coast road with the great Rhone Valley, further west. In a late daylight attack, the east Alessandria rail bridge on the main line to Turin was bombed.

It was announced today that a torpedo factory at Valence had been one of yesterday's targets in southern France. Photo reconnaisance showed that the main workshop and three smaller buildings were damaged.

In other operations, coastwise shipping in the Adriatic and a power station in Yugoslavia were attacked.

NAZIS OUTGENERALED, OUTFOUGHT, KING SAYS

LONDON, August 3 — «It is true to say that the enemy has been out-generalled and outfought,» King George VI

The dispatch also said that the transfer of wounded soldiers to Germany, which began on a small scale some weeks ago, has now reached larger proportions. At least 4,000 have been hastily evacuated from Chamonix, where all hotels had been transformed into hospitals, and similar measures were being taken in other cities in the Vosges Mountains district, in Lorraine and in Haute Savoie.

Because of the insecurity of railway communications, the Germans are transporting their wounded over highways in long convoys of motor ambulances, the report added. (OWI)

WAR DRAWS NEARER TO BERLIN

WASHINGTON, August 3 — The shortest distances to Berlin from the three major battle fronts in Europe show how rapidly the noose is being drawn around the Germans.

From the Russian front, the shortest distance to Berlin is only 322 miles.

From the Italian front, it is 607 miles.

From the French front, it is 623 miles. (OWI)

ALLIES GAIN ON GUAM, DUTCH NEW GUINEA

PEARL HARBOR, August 3 — American troops have advanced 1 1/2 miles east of the Driniumor River in their offensive against approximately 40,000 Japanese trapped in the Aitape-Wewak area of British New Guinea, said General MacArthur's communique issued here today.

The Japanese made repeted attempts to break through the trap sealed off by American and Australian troops, the communique added, and the last one, made Sunday, aiming to turn the American flank at Afua, was repelled with heavy losses to the enemy.

Admiral Chester Nimitz' communique announced the capture of the strategically important Tyan airfield and three more towns on Guam, one of the key islands in the Marianas. This advance was made in the face of stiffer Japanese resistance. A Navy communique issued yesterday said more than 7,000 Japanese had been killed on Guam up to August 1.

American troops in the Sansapor area, in Dutch New Guinea, were expanding their beachhead positions and consolidating gains previously made, says today's Allied Advanced Headquarters communique. Patrol activity on Biak island, off the northwest Dutch New Guinea coast, has accounted for 354 Japanese dead, while on Noemfoor Island U. S. ground forces reported the destruction of scattered remnants of the enemy garrison there.

Night air patrols operating over the Molucca Sea sank a 5,000-ton Japanese transport, said General MacArthur's communique. It also mentioned the carrying out of daily attacks on Palau, in the Carolines, on New Ireland, on New Britain, and on Bougainville in the Solomons.

Mopping-up operations on Tinian Island, where organized resistance ended Monday night, are continuing. (OWI)

CHINESE TROOPS ENTER TENGCHUNG

CHUNGKING, August 3 — Chinese forces have entered the city of Tengchung, 20 miles west of the Burma Road, which is one of the main obstacles blocking the Chinese advance toward Myitkyina in North Burma, it was announced today.

Ten Japanese attacks on the outskirts of Hengyang have been thrown back by Chinese troops, and five points south of the city were recaptured, the Chinese communique announced today.

Aircraft of the 14th USAAF continued to hammer at the Japanese supply lines in the Hengyang-Tungting Lake area, destroying or damaging 60 motor vehicles. Other aircraft struck at Japanese headquarters, supply bases, and military targets in wide sweeps.

GERMANS THREATEN NEW U-BOAT

LONDON, August 3 — The German-controlled Radio Paris, quoting an official Berlin announcement today, said that new U-boats will soon be introduced, and that this time « they will be a sensation. »

In connection with this work, said the broadcast, Hitler has awarded the Knight's Insignia to the Iron Cross to Doctor Friedrich Schuerer, creator of the modern German U-boat and naval construction expert attached to the German Naval Staff.

The broadcast said that the new U-boat construction program was well under way, and new types of vessels were being built. (Reuter)

U. S. NAVY DEVELOPING NEW DIESEL FUEL

WASHINGTON, August 3 — A new high-octone diesel fuel which gives promise of having revolutionary effects in naval engineering and design is now undergoing intensive tests, according to a statement issued here yesterday by Admiral Edward L. Cochrane, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Ships.

SIX U. S. LABOR LEADERS TO VISIT ETO

WASHINGTON, August 3 — Six leaders of American labor will visit the European theater of operations to see American-made weapons and war equipment in action, the United States War Department announced Tuesday.

The group is made up of three members selected by William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor, and three named by Philip Murray, President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The representatives will be shown the need for constant replacement to sustain the Allied offensive, the War Department said adding that the labor leaders will also discuss the supply problems and performance of equipment with army personnel. (OWI)

The Canadian government built a chain of strategically situated airports from Edmonton to White Horse, in Yukon Territory, which today is the northwest staging route. It was used by Canadian-American airmen in 1942 to clear the Japanese from the Aleutians. The route resembles a mighty aerial parade, especially during the weekends, when traffic is heaviest.

At the same time, it was announced that a northeast route also was established to protect the northeast back door of America when the Germans were in Greenland, and when the German surface and undersea fleet menaced Allied shipping. The route served also to permit the transport of short-range bombers and fighters to Europe.

This route was never fully required, as the submarines were defeated and the North Africa landings opened the South Atlantic ferry route. (OWI)

SECRET ALASKAN AIR ROUTE TO RUSSIA

EDMONTON, ALBERTA, August 3 — A Canadian dispatch revealed the existence of a secret Canadian-Alaskan-Siberian air ferry route over which more than 5,000 fighter-planes and bombers have been flown from American factories to the Russian fronts during the last three years in a joint United States-Soviet operation.

Since October, 1941, nearly 10,000 Lend-Leased planes have been sent to Russia, via Canadian and other routes.

The United States Air Transport Command ferry pilots take the planes from Great Falls, Montana, through Edmonton to Fairbanks, Alaska, where Soviet flyers take over and relay the planes to Nome, cross the Bering Straits to Siberia, and proceed to the fighting fronts by secret routes. Many Russian women pilots have made the flight over the wastes of the northwestern American wilderness.

This Canadian Northwest staging route permits the passage of the fastest fighters and the heaviest bombers and provides landing fields, radio facilities, and servicing depots comparable with those of the main United States air lines. This aerial short-cut to Russia was pioneered by daring Canadian airmen and engineers who, in pre-war days, blazed the trail over Canada's wilderness, paving the way for the United States aircraft moving to Alaska and the Aleutians today.

Colonel O'Dwyer is at present chief of the economic section of ACC in Italy, and is District Attorney of King's County (Brooklyn, New York), on leave of absence to the army. (PWB)

SPELLMAN OPENS CATHOLIC CLUB

KEATS, SHELLEY RELICS RESTORED TO ROME

ROME, August 3 — Priceless relics of Keats and Shelley, taken from war-time Rome to Montecassino and miraculously saved in the destruction of that sanctuary, were yesterday ceremoniously restored to the safekeeping of the Keats-Shelley Memorial House, Rome, in the presence of Mr. Alexander Kirk and Sir Noel Charles, pre-war members of the Memorial Committee and now United States and British representatives to the Allied Advisory Council for Italy.

The relics included ashes of Shelley taken from the funeral pyre of the drowned poet on the shores of Viareggio; irreplaceable first editions of Keats; manuscript poems; and the famous wash-drawing of Keats' head done by Severn as he watched by the death-bed of the poet in the house in Piazza di Spagna, where yesterday's ceremony took place.

Signora Cacciatore, custodian of the Memorial and of the library which competes with the British Museum in its collection for the study of Keats, Shelley, and Byron, told the story of how its treasures survived the war and the German occupation. The American members of the Committee carried on after the British had to quit Rome, and, when the Americans in turn had to leave Italy, an improvised group of friendly Italians and neutrals saved the historic site and library from Fascist and Nazi vandalism.

When Piazza di Spagna came under German shellfire, on September 19, 1943, the most precious of the portable relics were packed in two boxes and smuggled through the German lines into the Monastery of Montecassino by Prince Filippo Caffarelli. When Montecassino, in turn, became a prospective battlefield last December, the boxes were once more successfully smuggled past the Nazis, who were already looting and dispersing art and literary masterpieces.

One morning, on the outskirts of battle-torn Cassino, a dusty figure in priestly robes «thumbed» a ride on a German truck into Rome. He had with him a dilapidated suitcase and a box. The box contained the camouflaged Keats-Shelley relics, and the priest was Don Mauro Iguanez, the Maltese librarian of Montecassino, who thus brought them to further sanctuary in a monastery in Rome.

Restored to their resting place yesterday, the boxes were officially unsealed, their contents found intact, and consigned to the care of the Memorial House. In the name of the Anglo-American Committee and of all lovers of English literature, Sir Noel Charles thanked those who had been concerned with the hazardous task of guarding the Memorial and its heritage with such conspicuous devotion and happy success. ed group of friendly Italians and neutrals saved the historic site and library from Fascist and Nazi vandalism.

When Piazza di Spagna came under German shellfire, on September 10, 1943, the most precious of the portable relics were packed in two boxes and smuggled through the German lines into the Monastery of Montecassino by Prince Filippo Caffarelli. When Montecassino, in turn, became a prospective battlefield last December, the boxes were once more successfully smuggled past the Nazis, who were already looting and dispersing art and literary masterpieces.

One morning, on the outskirts of battle-torn Cassino, a dusty figure in priestly robes «thumbed» a ride on a German truck into Rome. He had with him a dilapidated suitcase and a box. The box contained the camouflaged Keats-Shelley relics, and the priest was Don Mauro Iguanez, the Maltese librarian of Montecassino, who thus brought them to further sanctuary in a monastery in Rome.

Restored to their resting place yesterday, the boxes were officially unsealed, their contents found intact, and consigned to the care of the Memorial House. In the name of the Anglo-American Committee and of all lovers of English literature, Sir Noel Charles thanked those who had been concerned with the hazardous task of guarding the Memorial and its heritage with such conspicuous devotion and happy success. TURKEY GRANTS AMNESTY TO PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, August 3 — A report from Ankara said the Turkish National Assembly yesterday rushed through all its stages a bill granting amnesty to political prisoners, and others accused of breach of Turkish security laws, who are nationals of Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and the United States.

George Pavloff and Leonid Kornilloff, imprisoned last February for an alleged attack on Von Papen, German Ambassador to Turkey, will be released tomorrow, the report stated.

It was announced that over 100 Germans engaged in intelligence work have been rounded up in Turkey.

The German Overseas News Agency said that Von Papen left Ankara by plane yesterday afternoon. The Turkish chargé d'affaires in Berlin, the agency added, will leave for Turkey on Saturday. Other members of the respective missions in Berlin and Ankara will be exchanged later.

It is estimated that the number of Germans in Turkey is about 100,000, while the number of Turkish subjects in Germany is, by comparison, very small. (OWI)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE, HQ. AAI, August 3 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Some days ago, the Allied Command received an appeal from Italian Patriots asking the support of the Allied Air Forces in a battle they were fighting against the German forces.

Thousands of German soldiers, supported by 100 tanks and heavy artillery, were engaged by an inferior number of badly-equipped patriots. Owing to the number of forces involved the battle was the fiercest yet fought between patriots and Germans in the Apennines.

Allied Air Forces, five hours after receiving the request for help, sent 50 bombers to attack enemy targets. Following the information supplied by patriots, the intervention of the Allied Air Force was very effective — the battle is raging southeast of Florence.

Other patriot groups are fighting side by side with the Allied troops.

In the Provinces of Imperia and La Spezia, the patriots have interrupted nearly all communications. The fight is as violent as in the past days. The courage of the patriots increases in proportion to the ferocity of the Germans.

In Val Canonica, Nazi-Fascist reprisals, which began on the mountains are carried out in the lower valley. Villages have been plundered and set on fire by the Germans who are now threatening with more terror acts. Nevertheless, there is no let down in sabotage acts against roads and telephone and telegraph lines.

In the battle in Val D'Ossola, which lasted 2 1/2 days, the Germans lost about 50 dead and wounded. Considerable losses were also suffered by the patriots.

According to Allied estimates, during the struggle against the retreating Germans, from May 12 to June 24, 8,300 Italian Patriots were killed and 7,500 were taken prisoner.

In Italy, yesterday, our troops again frustrated all enemy attempts at breaking through toward Florence with heavy losses for the enemy. West and a few kilometers south of the town, our troops continued to oppose with grim resistance to the enemy.

On the northern slopes of the Carpathians, numerous Soviet attacks, supported by tanks, were frustrated. Particularly east of the pass road crossing the Beskides, the enemy was repelled by counter-attacks. West of Baranov, in the big Vistula bend, the enemy reinforced his pressure. Further northeast, numerous Bolshevik attacks were smashed with heavy losses for the enemy. Northeast of Warsaw, bitter fighting was in progress. The town of Radzymin was recaptured by our tanks in a counter-attack. On the central reaches of the Bug and south of Augustovo, repeated enemy attacks were frustrated. In the Seinen-Vilkovishken sector and at Mitau, grim fighting is in progress. In the Birsen sector, our grenadiers captured several villages in counter-attacks. East of the Duena and in the Narva Isthmus, fierce Soviet attempts to break through were frustrated in fierce fighting.

In the course of July, 3908 enemy tanks were destroyed by the troops of the Army and the Waffen S. S. alone, during the great defensive battle between the Carpathians and the Gulf of Finland. Another 250 enemy tanks were destroyed by the Luftwaffe. The Soviets further lost, 1,329 planes in dog fights and through the fire of anti-aircraft batteries during the same period.

CHURCHILL OPTIMISTIC IN WAR REVIEW

LONDON, August 2 — On every one of the world's battle-fronts, the armies of Germany and Japan are recoiling before the «grand alliance» of the United Nations, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today in his first review of the war in two months.

«I have on the whole,» Mr. Churchill began, «a good report to make tho the House today.

«In the air, on the sea and under the sea, our well-established supremacy increases with steady strides. U-boat losses since the beginning of 1944, compared with former years, are almost negligible. The vast fleets of the Allies have sailed the seas and the oceans from January to June with less than half the losses we have inflicted upon the dwindling and largely immobile naval resources of the

Mr. Churchill said Allied successes in the Pacific had opened up the prospect of a speedy climax in the Far East and added:

«Reverberations of these events in Japan have produced the fall of Admiral Tojo, chief war leader of Japan, whose accomplice and close colleague, Admiral Yamamoto, declared at one time that he would dictate his peace terms to the United States in Washington.

«It is not easy for us here to measure the character, the size and the force which have produced the remarkable political and military convulsion within Japan. But they can hardly arise from the conviction among Japanese that Admiral Yamamoto's program is being realized as fully as he and Admiral Tojo had thought.

«I must repeat that I am increasingly pleased to feel that the interval between the defeat of Hitler and the defeat of Japan will be shorter, perhaps, much shorter, than I at one time supposed.

«At Quebec last autumn, we planned the advance into northern Burma with the object of giving greater security to the immense American air highway to China. Admiral Mountbatten and his commanders have fought a successful and vigorous campaign. The Japanese everywhere have been driven back, sustaining losses far exceeding our own. India has been successfully defended from invasion for another year and the air line to China has been strengthened and maintained.

«Treacherous Power»

«In addition, Admiral Somerville has shown enterprise in his attacks on Sabang, Sourabaya, and other Japanese outposts in the Dutch East Indies. Our fleets in eastern waters will be greatly strengthened by the end of this year. The Japanese navy will have its time fully taken up by the United States Navy, which is already double the size of the fleet of that presumtious, ambitious and treacherous oriental power.»

Mr. Churchill then proceeded to describe the arrangements for crossing the English Channel and landing the armies of liberation in France.

«At Teheran,» he said, «we promised Marshal Stalin that we would put this plan, or something like it, into operation at the end of May or the beginning of June and he promised on his part that the whole Russian armies would be thrown, as indeed they have been, in the general battle in the east.

«In January of this year, the commanders were appointed. The Mediterranean became a British command under General Wilson and General Eisenhower assumed command of the expeditionary forces gathering in Britain.

«No man has ever labored more skillfully and more intensively than General Eisenhower. For more than a year past, American stores, equipment and men have been moving steadily into this island and we, ourselves, had selected [illegible] British armies here the expeditionary force which was

CHURCHILL OPTIMISTIC IN WAR REVIEW

LONDON, August 2 — On every one of the world's battle-fronts, the armies of Germany and Japan are recoiling before the « grand alliance » of the United Nations, Prime Minister Winston Churchill told the House of Commons today in his first review of the war in two months.

« I have on the whole, » Mr. Churchill began, « a good report to make tho the House today.

« In the air, on the sea and under the sea, our well-established supremacy increases with steady strides. U-boat losses since the beginning of 1944, compared with former years, are almost negligible. The vast fleets of the Allies have sailed the seas and the oceans from January to June with less than half the losses we have inflicted upon the dwindling and largely immobile naval resources of the enemy both in the east and the west.

« It is always possible that there may be a return of U-boats. There is talk of the Germans trying to make faster U-boats. There also is various talk, and it is well never to discount these matters. There is always the possibility that the German may gain some relative advantage in their aircraft. »

After recalling that at Washington in January, 1942, it was decided that Germany was the prime enemy and that only minimum forces necessary for safeguarding vital interests should be diverted to operations against Japan, the Prime Minister said:

Increased Resources

« Our joint resources, British and American, however, increased so rapidly that it became possible to wage war simultaneously with offensive vigor. In the Pacific, immense armadas of the United States are equipped with aircraft and every conceivable form of craft needed on the sea for amphibious warfare, all on the largest scale and led with commanding skill both on the sea and land under both Admiral Nimitz and General MacArthur, who commands not only American, but also powerful Australian and New Zealand forces and we have gained important and expanding success. » political and military convulsion within Japan. But they can hardly arise from the conviction among Japanese that Admiral Yamamoto's program is being realized as fully as he and Admiral Tojo had thought.

« I must repeat that I am increasingly pleased to feel that the interval between the defeat of Hitler and the defeat of Japan will be shorter, perhaps, much shorter, than I at one time supposed.

« At Quebec last autumn, we planned the advance into northern Burma with the object of giving greater security to the immense American air highway to China. Admiral Mountbatten and his commanders have fought a successful and vigorous campaign. The Japanese everywhere have been driven back, sustaining losses far exceeding our own. India has been successfully defended from invasion for another year and the air line to China has been strengthened and maintained.

« Treacherous Power »

« In addition, Admiral Somerville has shown enterprise in his attacks on Sabang, Sourabaya and other Japanese outposts in the Dutch East Indies. Our fleets in eastern waters will be greatly strengthened by the end of this year. The Japanese navy will have its time fully taken up by the United States Navy, which is already double the size of the fleet of that presumtious, ambitious and treacherous oriental power. »

Mr. Churchill then proceeded to describe the arrangements for crossing the English Channel and landing the armies of liberation in France.

« At Teheran, » he said, « we promised Marshal Stalin that we would put this plan, or something like it, into operation at the end of May or the beginning of June and he promised on his part that the whole Russian armies would be thrown, as indeed they have been, in the general battle in the east.

« In January of this year, the commanders were appointed. The Mediterranean became a British command under General Wilson and General Eisenhower assumed command of the expeditionary forces gathering in Britain.

« No man has ever labored more skillfully and more intensively than General Eisenhower. For more than a year past, American stores, equipment and men have been moving steadily into this island and we, ourselves, had selected from British armies here the expeditionary force which was practically as large as that of the United States in the opening stage.

« I do not believe, myself, that this vast enterprise could have been executed earlier. We did not have the experience and we did not have the equipment. But before we launched the attack in 1944, we had made five successful, opposed landings in the Mediterranean, and wonderful craft of all kinds had been devised by our services and by our United States colleagues on the other side of the ocean.

« The bulk of this had to be constructed in the United States, since our yards were strained and glutted to the utmost.

Powerful Army

« In less than a month, harbors had been created compared with which Dover seems small. My the end of June, in spite of the worst June gales for 40 years, a solid base had been created which gave us the certainty of being able to conduct an offensive campaign on the largest scale against any force which, according to all calculations, the enemy was likely to bring.

« These operations were protected and supported by a considerable part of the British fleet and assisted by a strong detachment of the American fleet, under Admiral Ramsay.

In paying tribute to the combined British-American air forces, the Prime Minister stated:

«These deeds of the air forces were not done without losses which, in killed and in proportion to their number of flying personnel, far exceed those of any other branch of the services. If we take April 1 as the opening of the air campaign, from then on until June 30 over 7,000 men of the home commands of the RAF alone have been killed or are missing. United States losses also are most severe.

Constant Battle

«The devotion of pilots and air crews of both countries was sublime. Since these days, we have been in a constant battle. General Omar Bradley clearing Cherbourg Peninsula and General Dempsey occupying the area around Caen. We have inflicted losses on the enemy which are about double those which we have suffered.

«Now at last, we are beginning to gain that space to deploy which is necessary for the size of the armies we are using. I must confess that the latest news seems to me extremely good.

«The first American army advancing down the Atlantic coast has reached a line on the River Selune and may well be approaching the important railway center of Rennes, about halfway across the base of the Brest Peninsula. We are largely superior to the enemy in men, armor and in the air, and I had little doubt in the mobility once the front was opened out.

«It is the wish of General Eisenhower that the battle in Normandy be viewed as a whole and as one set of single operations conducted by Allied forces linked in brotherhood and intermingled in every manner that may seem convenient.

«But lest our enemies should suggest on their wireless that the burden of struggle has been unfairly shared or make invidious comparisions of any kind, let me say that the losses of the British and Canadian forces together are about equal to those of the larger United States army in proportion to their relative strengths. It has been share and share alike in good fortune and bad all along the front.

Glorious Story

«So far as this has gone, this certainly is a glorious story not only liberating the fields of France from atrocious enslavement, but also uniting in true bonds the comradeship of the great democracies of the west and the English-speaking peoples of the world.»

After making a vigorous defense of the British tanks, Mr. Churchill said that the German Tiger and Panther tanks are essentially weapons of defense, whereas the Cromwell and Sherman belong to the offensive type. The Churchill the Prime Minister observed, can be either defensive or offensive as the circumstances may require.

Mr. Churchill said that the Germans had brought forward no new tank weapon or type of ammunition so far, whereas the Allies had put into action the Sherman tank mounting 17-pounders, the latest Churchill tank and the new Cromwell tank, together with a number of «interesting variants of very great ingenuity.»

«I am going to make public a word of praise for the War Office. In all the 40 years years I have served in this

«There are South Africans, and there are French and there are Poles who have distinguished themselves greatly and, of course, playing a most important part are the gallant Indians. There are also powerful Canadians. It is a most extraordinary party of all nations advancing to cleanse the soil of Italy.

«It is the Russian Army which has done the main work of tearing out the guts of the German Army. (Cheers) In the air and on the ocean and on the seas we can maintain ourselves, but there was no force in the world which could be called into being except for several more years that would have been able to maul and break the German Army and subject it to such terrible slaughter and manhandling as has fallen upon the Germans by the Russian Armies.

«Corporal Hitler»

«I salute Marshal Stalin (cheers), that great champion of his country, and I firmly believe that our 20 years' treaty with Russia will prove to be one of the most lasting and durable factors in preserving the peace and order and progress of Europe. It may well be that the Russian successes have been somewhat aided by the strategy of Corporal Hitler. Even military idiots find it difficult not to see some faults in some of his actions. Here he now finds himself with perhaps 10 divisions in north Finland and 20 or 30 cut off in the Baltic states, all of which three or four months ago might have been brought with their materials and weapons to stand between Germany and the Russian advance.»

The Prime Minister discussed the flying-bomb menace to England, stating that London and surrounding counties have been under almost continous bombardments for seven weeks. Mr. Churchill said:

«The latest figures available show that 5,340 of these robots have been launched upon us and have killed 4,735 persons, with 14,000 more or less seriously injured. There are also many slightly injured. The result has been a sad tale of human sorrow and suffering and wholesale destruction at home.

«We are sure that our defenses are gaining in power. We are pressing to the utmost our counter-offensive measures. I fear greatly raising false hopes, but I no longer feel bound to deny that victory may come — perhaps soon. If not, we must go on until it does.

«Every effort in manpower is being made to prevent and mitigate the effect of these bombardments. Hundreds of the most expert braths have been constantly riveted upon the problem, but I do not guarantee that it will be completely solved until we have occupied the regions from which these bombs are launched.

«It is by no means certain that the enemy has solved the difficult technical problems connected with rockets. None the less, I do not wish in any way to minimize the ordeal to which we may have to be subjected except to say that it is not one which we will not be able to bear.

«The weight of flying bombs launched upon this country from the evening of June 15 to the evening of July 31 is estimated to be some 4,500 tons. During the same period, the Allied air forces dropped about 48,000 tons of high explosive bombs on Germany.»

Close Empire Association

Since I last spoke on the general situation to the House, marked improvements have occured in several quarters. Among the first of these is the very great improvement in the relations of the French National Committee, headed by General De Gaulle, with the government of the United States. In the last four years, I have had many differences with General De Gaulle, but I have never forgotten and can never forget that he stood forth, the first eminent Frenchman to face the common foe, in what seemed to be the hour of ruin of his country and possibly the ruin of ours;

In all the 40 years years I have served in this house, I have heard that this Deparument has been steadily abused before, during and after our various wars, and if my memory serves me right, I have frequently taken part in wellmerited criticism which has been their lot.

« When I last saw General Montgomery in the field, he used these words which he authorized me to repeat if I chose. He said, "I doubt if the British War Office has ever sent oversea so well equipped an army as the one now fighting in Normandy." I must say I think it is a well justified statement. »

Italian Campaign

Turning to the Italian campaign, Mr. Churchill said that the whole scene has now changed, and added:

« It (the Allied Army) has flung its claws around Rome, protecting the city from all danger. General Alexander's armies have rolled forward rapidly, pushing the enemy before Florence. We can hope that the operations will be continued with the utmost vigor by General Alexander throughout the autumn. It is an extraordinary army. There has never been anything like it. This is a war of the United Nations. With the British and the Americans we have many other troops. There are Japanese-American troops fighting with great vigor; Greeks are coming — some are already there — and a force is beginning to take its place in the field.

« Our landing in Normandy shows quite clearly that we shall presently once again have to deal with the problems of France and Germany along the Rhine and from that discussion France can by no means be excluded.

« I look forward to the closest association of the British Empire, the United States and Russian and French representatives in the settlement of these important European problems.

« Im my opinion, this is a hopeful moment for Poland for whose rights and independence we entered the war against Germany (cheers). We, therefore, did our best to promote the visit of Mikolajczyk, the Polish Prime Minister, and other members of his cabinet to Moscow, where Marshal Stalin was willing to receive them.

« The Allies would welcome other generals rallying Polish forces, both those who are working with western powers, and those with the Soviets.

« We have several gallant Polish divisions fighting in the west, and there are others fighting in Russia. Let them come together. We desire this. It would be a marvelous thing if this foundation could be laid at the moment when the famous capital of Poland, which so valiantly defended herself against German invasion, had been liberated by the bravery of Russian arms.

Yugoslavia

«Conditions in Yugoslavia have sensibly improved since I last dealt with this topic in the House. The lawful King of Yugoslavia has gathered around him a government which is in friendly contact with Marshal Tito. Representatives of the fighting administration of Partisans have taken their seats in this new government, and we have here General Velebit, who is the liaison between the King's government and the forces led by Marshal Tito. We are working for unity here for one purpose alone, here as else-where, namely the gathering together of the whole united strength of Yugoslavia.

«The Foreign Secretary made a statement to the House last week about Greece which had the full assent of the War Cabinet and marks the line we are taking. The government of Papandreou is broadly representative of all the main forces in Greece.

«I have the authority of the Turkish Government to announce that on the basis of an Anglo-Turkish alliance Turkey has broken off all relations with Germany. (Cheers) This act infuses new life into the alliance we made with Turkey before the war.

«No one can tell whether Germany or Bulgaria will attack Turkey. If so we will make common cause with her, and shall take the German menace as well as we can in our stride. No one can expect to enter this conflict and not suffer. Turkish cities may receive the kind of bombardment we have never shrunk from here. I can take no responsibility in those matters.

«It was the policy of Mustapha Kemal to bring about close unity between Russian and Turkish peoples. I hope that this new step will contribute to the continuity of the friendship of Turkey and Russia.

«A great many statements have been made about the future organization of the world by most eminent people. I personally would prefer to hear opinions of other powerful nations before committing our country to too many details.

«Cannot we be content with the broad declarations on which we are all agreed — that there is to be a world council to preserve peace, which will in the first instance be formed and guided by the major powers who have gained the war, and that thereafter other powers and eventually all powers will be offered their part in this world organization.

«In the meanwhile, as the House will be aware, important discussions on an official level are shortly to begin in Washington. When these are completed we shall all of us have a very much better idea where we stand.»

TURKEY BREAKS WITH GERMANY

ANKARA, August 2 — The Turkish radio announced today that Turkey has broken off diplomatic and economic relations with Germany.

Prime Minister Sarajoglu told the Turkish Grand National Assembly that Turkey's entry into the war would depend on Germany. The Assembly approved the Government's decision to break with Germany.

Prime Minister Sarajoglu said: «Our friend and ally Britain has requested us, within the limits of our agreement, to break off diplomatic and economic relations with Germany. The United States government has supported the British request. After closely studying the question, the Government approved the request and decided to present the positive answer to the Grand National Assembly for acceptance.

«In order to meet difficulties which would arise from this decision, economic and financial help and war equipment were asked for. Following a positive answer to this

Departure from Turkey of the several-hundred-strong German diplomatic mission together with the closure of the German Embassies at Ankar and Istanbul, and the closure of the German consulate at Adana, which has long been known as the German «forward observation post» for the Middle and Near East and India;

The closing of the German consulate at Smyrna from which the Germans have been able to keep an eye on territories facing the northern group of Dodecanese Islands;

The expulsion of a large number of German agents not officially attached to the Embassy but closely working with the military attache's department, and the departure or placing under surveillance of hundreds of German civilians engaged in business throughout Turkey;

The withdrawal of Turkish diplomatic representatives from Germany and German-occupied countries, although German diplomats may be expected to remain in Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary, with which diplomatic relations will be maintained;

The total suspension of Turkish exports to Germany including copper, cotton, oilseeds, tanning materials and seafish;

The tightening of trade relations between Turkey and the Allies, who are believed to have already agreed to fill gaps in Turkish national economy.

List of Germans

It was reported from Ankara to Reuter today that Switzerland would be the protecting power for Germany in Turkey after severance of relations between the two countries.

Turkish authorities are reported to be drawing up a complete list of German subjects in Turkey. The Turkish government has already ordered all Turkish ships in Bulgarian and Rumanian ports to return to Turkish waters without delay. Some Turkish vessels due to have left home ports yesterday are still at anchor in the Bosphurus.

A last-minute effort to prevent the breaking off of German and Turkish diplomatic relations is understood to have been made by von Papen, the German Ambassador, during a 45-minutes interview with President Inonu yesterday.

M. Sarajoglu, the Turkish Prime Minister, was present at the interview, which was granted at Papen's pressing request.

FINNS MAY SUE FOR PEACE

LONDON, August 2 — Last night's news from Helsinki suggests that Finland has learned her lesson and is about to sue for peace, wrote Randal Neale, Reuter's diplomatic correspondent, today.

Marshal Mannerheim is probably the only Finn with broad enough shoulders to carry the responsibility for accepting Russia's terms, said the article. It remains for him to form a new government with which the Russians would talk. The news is ominous for Germay, falling on the eve of Turkey's expected break.

«The rot has set in with a vengeance,» Says Neale.

Early today the German News Agency quoted a Helsinki report which said that the Finnish Parliament met five times in secret session on Tuesday. A tabled motion was read twice, which means that only a third reading is required to make it law.

According to Finnish constitution this third reading can take place only in three days' time. The third reading will decide whether the motion should become law in its present form. No alterations are possible.

Following a positive answer to this request given by our British allies, our Government informed the British Ambassador that the Government will pass to the National Assembly the decision taken by the Cabinet to break off economic and diplomatic relations with Germany.

Proof of Friendship

«Two days later, the British Ambassador in a signed letter to the Foreign Office, stated this positive decision of the Turkish cabinet was real proof of friendship and agreement between Britain and Turkey and expressed also the importance of Turkey's position in the decisions she is about to take.

«The decision you are about to make is not a decision for war. This will depend on the attitude taken by the opposite side. I am sure the decision which will be taken by the Assembly, which has the fate of Turkey in its hands, will be a great and historical decision and will be useful for the future happiness of the country.»

Following the speech the bill was put to the vote and was unanimously passed.

Robert Bigio, Reuter's correspondent in Ankara, forecast the following as the immediate consequences of the rupture between Turkey and Germany:

List of Germans

The Finnish newspaper Social Demokraten remarked on Monday on the «lightning advance westward» of the Red Army and asked: «How far will the Russians advance? The Finnish man in the street can hardly take such speed into account.

«Lately the front has been moving forward at the rate of 25 to 30 miles a day. It can only be a question of days before the Russians reach the Baltic.» (Reuter)

TENSE SITUATION IN FINLAND

LONDON, August 2 — Risto Ryti, president of Finland since 1940, has resigned and Marshal Baron Karl Gustav von Mannerheim, aged commander-in-chief of the Finnish Army, has taken his place.

Ryti's resignation was announced by Premier Linkomies at a meeting of the Finnish Diet yesterday. At the same time Linkomies submitted to the Diet the draft of a law by which Marshal Mannerheim could succeed to the office of president in disregard of normal constitutional procedure.

The Finnish radio announced the change late yesterday in an official communique, which advanced the reason that in the present «increasingly difficult and fateful political conditions» it is desirable that the supreme military and civil powers should be combined in one person.

It is explained that these powers are indeed constitutionally combined in the person of the president, but that Ryti had previously delegated his powers as commander-in-chief of the armed forces to Mannerheim.

The communique says that there is a great amount of worry because Ryti's health is failing as a result of many years of heavy responsibility and hard work. The radio further said that Marshal Mannerheim, in taking over the post of president at this fateful hour at great personal sacrifice, would have the full support of Finland's people.

Acceptable to Russia

Marshal Mannerheim has long realized the futility of Finland's military resistance against Russia, said an NBC correspondente in Stockholm today, adding that in view of Mannerheim's attitude it is likaly that a new attempt will be made immediately to get Finland out of her suicidal war against Russia.

It is known that Mannerheim is acceptable to the Russians as a negotiator, said the correspondent.

The Stockholm correspondent of the London Times said today: « The upheaval beyond dubt means that Finland is making a final attempt to conclude peace with Russia before the German collapse. » He then explained that the change in the presidency would enable Finland to seek peace with Russia in spite of her pledge to Germany, less than five weeks ago, that no attempts to sue for a separate peace with Russia would be made. This pledge to Germany was made by President Ryti.

The Times today also revealed that yet another protest against the Ryti-Ribbentrop pact of June had been made by Finnish Social Democrats, which, however, was hushed up by the government.

According to unconfirmed reports reaching Stockholm from many sources, German troops are being evacuated from southern Finland and are being shipped to East Prussia. (PWB - SHAEF)

WAR FRONTS

RED ARMY TRAPS 350,000 NAZI TROOPS

MOSCOW, August 2 — The Red Army has trapped the German 16th and 18th Armies totaling about 350,000 enemy troops in the Baltic area. Only the Baltic Sea remains as an escape route for the isolated Germans.

What appears to be another German disaster in the making was achieved by Soviet forces in a brilliant, speedy drive to the sea. Riga was by-passed and the Red Army captured Tukums, due west of Riga, advancing to within 10 miles of the coast. Bottled up in this area, roughly 250 miles long and 130 miles wide, the major part of the two Soviet republics of Estonia and Latvia, are thousands of tons of irreplaceable heavy German equipment in addition to the tens of thousands of troops.

Tonight's Soviet communique states that the town of Varaklane, west of Rezekne and southeast of Riga in Lithuania has been captured by the Red Army. The communique also announced the capture of Kedainiai, north of Kaunas. A total of 600 inhabited localities were taken, it was added.

Another menace to the Germans is the Soviet air force and their deadly, cannon-shooting Stormoviks, which hold the mastery of the skies from three directions.

While this major setback faced the Germans, they are being smashed at from a strong, steel arc closing in on Warsaw. At the same time, Soviet big guns are already shelling East Prussia.

Now that the battle has reached German soil, there are indications that the Germans will put up their fiercest resistance of the current Soviet summer drive. A German officer, taken prisoner with his men during the battle of the Niemen crossing in southern Lithuania, said that Hitler's acknowledged by the fleeing of thousands of German officials and business men during the last seven days.

In mopping up between and Bialystok, the Russians captured General Franck, commander of the 73rd Infantry Division, with his staff. He is the 27th German General to surrender since the Red Army began its summer offensive. (Reuter)

AMERICANS TURN GERMAN FLANK IN BRITTANY

SHAEF, August 2 — American armored forces are today rolling into Brittany, smashing back all enemy resistance, and turning the German left flank. This morning spearheads of the Allied force were reported to be in Pontorson, nine miles south of the river Selune, and still advancing.

Behind them, other forces have recaptured Tessy, on the Vire river, and are clearing the Germans from Villedieu.

To break into Brittany, the American armor skirted the coast at Pontaubault, crossed the river and sped on through the town of Grey. Pontaubault itself has fallen and the latest reports place the American spearhead 16 miles southwest of Avranches.

In the 24 hours up to last night, more than 7,000 Germans surrendered on the American front. North of Avranches, 4,000 Germans have been killed or captured and 500 vehicles, including tanks, have been captured or destroyed. In the past week the Americans have advanced more than 50 miles.

One correspondent states that the Selune River was crossed at several points, and that one town captured in the advance is Montgothier, eight miles southeast of Avranches.

Spectacular Drive

Moving east of Avranches, another American force captured Brecey, nine miles away, and is now advancing along the River See in that area. The forces driven out of Tessy by the Americans are now being attacked from both sides by the Americans and the British and Allied tanks are pushing them slowly south. The main enemy force is now reported to be a little more than a mile south of Terigny.

The spectacular American drive from Avranches, which seized Pontaubault and Ducey, was co-ordinated with the attack which took Brecy and the River See, some eight miles east of Avranches. In addition to seizing two Selune River dams, the Americans captured bridges across the river. If the dams had been broken by the Germans they would have flooded large areas, delaying the advance for at least a week.

The thrust south of Avranches has gathered in a good springboard for continued drives. As the Allied troops moved into Brittany, reconnaissance showed little sign of German movement, and correspondents have already reported that Rommel earlier drew much of his strength from Brittany to meet the American drive south from Cherbourg.

Some of Germany's best divisions have been practically wiped out by the advance of General Bradley's men. These include the 2nd SS Panzer, the 17th SS Panzer, the Lehr Panzer, the 5th Panzer and four infantry divisions.

Easy Targets

Northeast of Caumont, the British captured the village of Anctoville and La Beny Bocage. They have established a firm bridgehead across the river Souleuvre and are driving on through good tank country towards the important road junction at Vire.

Allied bombers, fighter-bombers and fighters yesterday ranged behind the German lines in Normandy to attack airfields, bridges, road transport and dumps. American heavy bombers attacked German airfields in the Paris area. French Forces of the Interior have held up German troop and ammunition trains, making them an easy target for Allied change in the presidency would enable Finland to seek peace with Russia in spite of her pledge to Germany, less than five weeks ago, that no attempts to sue for a separate peace with Russia would be made. This pledge to Germany was made by President Ryti.

The Times today also revealed that yet another protest against the Ryti-Ribbentrop pact of June had been made by Finnish Social Democrats, which, however, was hushed up by the government.

According to unconfirmed reports reaching Stockholm from many sources, German troops are being evacuated from southern Finland and are being shipped to East Prussia. (PWB - SHAEF)

RED ARMY TRAPS 350,000 NAZI TROOPS

MOSCOW, August 2 — The Red Army has trapped the German 16th and 18th Armies totaling about 350,000 enemy troops in the Baltic area. Only the Baltic Sea remains as an escape route for the isolated Germans.

What appears to be another German disaster in the making was achieved by Soviet forces in a brilliant, speedy drive to the sea. Riga was by-passed and the Red Army captured Tukums, due west of Riga, advancing to within 10 miles of the coast. Bottled up in this area, roughly 250 miles long and 130 miles wide, the major part of the two Soviet republics of Estonia and Latvia, are thousands of tons of irreplaceable heavy German equipment in addition to the tens of thousands of troops.

Tonight's Soviet communique states that the town of Varaklane, west of Rezekne and southeast of Riga in Lithuania has been captured by the Red Army. The communique also announced the capture of Kedainiai, north of Kaunas. A total of 800 inhabited localities were taken, it was added.

Another menace to the Germans is the Soviet air force and their deadly, cannon-shooting Stormoviks, which hold the mastery of the skies from three directions.

While this major setback faced the Germans, they are being smashed at from a strong, steel arc closing in on Warsaw. At the same time, Soviet big guns are already shelling East Prussia.

Now that the battle has reached German soil, there are indications that the Germans will put up their fiercest resistance of the current Soviet summer drive. A German officer, taken prisoner with his men during the battle of the Niemen crossing in southern Lithuania, said that Hitler's personal orders were to throw the Russians back across the river at any cost. The Red Army lost count of the number of counter-attacks launched there by the Germans, but some Soviet units withstood as many as six to eight thrusts in force. The enemy paid a toll in thousands of men.

Street Fighting

Reuter reported that endless streams of German reinforcements are arriving from East Prussia to meet the Red Army advance onto German soil. The fiercest clashes are now taking place along the Augustow Canal in the Suwalki triangle.

When Kaunas fell, the Germans paid for that loss with 8,000 of their men killed and 1,200 lost as prisoners in addition to a large quantity of war material. The town's outskirts were the scene of bitter street fighting after the Red Army broke through the outer defenses.

In the Battle for Warsaw, the Germans are thowing in three divisions of tanks and latest reports from that sector stated that two additional divisions — one from Rumania and the other from Italy — have also been thrust into the fight to save the city for the Germans. That the Nazis were not too sure they could save the city was

8TH ARMY TIGHTENS GRIP ON FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 2 — Despite fanatical German resistance, 8th Army troops are slowly forcing the enemy back and tightening their grip on the German semi-circle of hill defenses south of Florence, it was announced here today.

Troops of an Indian division in heavy fighting yesterday occupied the village of Castiglioni, nine miles southwest of Florence and on the south bank of the Pesa River. New Zealand troops in the sector east of Castiglioni hold a line from the Pesa River to San Michele, thence to La Romola and Sant'Andrea. In action along this five-mile front yesterday, two Tiger tanks were knocked out and 30 prisoners taken.

East of Highway 2, the main road from Poggibonsi to Florence, patrols and guards forces reached two points, a mile and a half and two miles south of Strada in Chianti, while other British troops occupied the village of Sezzate, two miles southeast of Strada, without much enemy opposition.

Still further east, 8th Army forces made an advance of a mile to capture Monte Maggio, north of Monte Scalari, highest point in the Chianti Mountains, and savagely contested by the enemy even after its capture on Sunday.

In advances toward Florence along Highway 69, main road from Arezzo, leading elements yesterday pushed to within three miles of Incisa, 11 miles southeast of Florence. These troops advancing along the southwest banks of the Arno River are now two miles northwest of Figline in Vald'Arno, on the opposite banks of the stream. Other forces are working through the mauntains east of Figline and closing in on this town.

Slight gains were made in the upper Tiber Valley, northwest of Anghiari, where enemy resistance is slackening. On the coastal flanks of the Allied battle line across Italy there was little to report. (PRO)

RESISTANCE ENDS ON TINIAN

PEARL HARBOR, August 2 — After only eight days of fighting, all organized resistance on Tinian, in the Marianas, ended Monday night, Admiral Nimitz' communique said today. U.S. forces are now engaged in mopping-up operations.

A previous report stated that Japanese forces on the island had been cut off from escape.

Tinian Island, which lies four miles south of newly-won Saipan, is about 10 miles long by five miles wide and has two big airfields, which are already being used by American fliers, and excellent terrain for at least three more. It was mainly used by the Japanese as a staging base for planes from Japan proper to the Carolines.

In typical nipponese fashion, the Japanese threw in all their remaining strenght in an attempt to prevent complete American control of the Island. Three hundred Japanese soldiers charged the Marines' lines on the eastern side of the Island just before dawn, but only a few of them got through the outer American defenses and the majority of those who did blew themselves up with hand grenades. Earlier attacks, under cover of darkness, were made by smaller groups but none gained any ground.

From Allied headquarters in New Guinea comes the report that Allied forces have crossed the lower Driniumor River, in British New Guinea, on a 5-kilometer front and are driving eastward through the jungle. The communique adds that the forces in the northern Vogelkop area are expanding their positions and are now in control of a ten-mile stretch of coast line.

An Allied communique from Dutch New Guinea says that American penetration from the bridgehead at Sansapor has been extended to a depth of ten miles.

HOW MONTGOMERY TURNED GERMAN FLANK

LONDON, August 2 — How General Montgomery, by attracting the weight of the enemy armor against Caen, «the hinge of the door into France,» was able to push open «the door» by an American thrust against the west flank of the Germans in Normandy, is revealed in a Ministry of Information circular issued today.

On the 90-mile Normandy front on July 24 there were at least 20 Allied divisions, consisting of 14 infantry, three airborne infantry, and three armored divisions officially specified. This does not preclude the presence of other divisions whose numerals have not been divulged. Of these, eight British divisions, officially announced as belonging to the British 2nd Army, were holding some 50 miles of front from Caumont east to the sea. They comprised five attacke[illegible] east of the Orne at dawn on July 25. The German General Hausser reacted not only by engaging four divisions in immediate counter-attacks, but absorbed further German forces to the west in two days' vain counter-attacks against the British bridgehead across the Odon.

Broke Through

Allowing only six hours for the Caen attack to absorb the German forces fully, General Montgomery ordered the west flank to attack at 1200 hours on July 25 with two American armored columns west of Saint Lo. After the American infantry had smashed a four-mile gap into the German defences and armor had broken through at the rate of nearly one mile an hour, the Americans opened a new armored thrust southward from Periers, which joined the first thrust at Coutances. Simultaneously, two other armored columns moved southwest from Saint Lo. These thrusts, as planned, met German artillery, including many obsolete guns, but few German tanks. And the German command began immediately transferring troops westward from the central sector.

General Montgomery then ordered British forces in the center, which had just relieved American troops at Caumont, into their July 30 attack, which is going on at this moment.

The American 1st Army was acting, in the words of a Times correspondent, as the hammer to the British and Canadian anvil in the joint effort to break up the German army in Normandy. (PWB - MOI)

PORT OF ANCONA IN SERVICE AGAIN

ANCONA, August 2 — Ancona, ten days after its capture by the 2nd Polish Corps, is proof that, in the words of a British port restoration officer «you can't destroy a port.»

Vital supplies for the Allied armies pushing up to the Goth Line on the Adriatic side of the Italian peninsula, are pouring ashore from dockside berths and from a stream of amphibious ducks at this bomb-blasted port, only 10 days after it was liberated by Polish troops.

A British port restoration unit, under command of Major D. S. Curtis, moved into Ancona on July 18 with the first Polish infantrymen to enter the city.

They found the town and especially the port and railroad marshalling yards a heap of rubble and booby-trapped wreckage. «I was slightly depressed when I saw the initial clearance problem,» Major Curtis said. This is the 13th port he has cleared since the battle of El Alamein. «Except for Tripoli, I never saw a port so banged up,» he added. The Mediterranean Allied Air Forces had done their work well. The Germans had not been able to use Ancona for more than a month before they lost the town.

COMBINED OPERATIONS IN BALKANS

ROME, August 2 — The combined land, naval and air force attack on the Albanian coast at Himare was «one of the biggest combined operations of the Allies in the Balkans,» according to Carey Longmire, combined British American war correspondent, who accompanied the British assault forces.

The attack, made just after dawn on July 29, was carried out with the assistance of Albanian Partisan forces, who blocked coastal roads leading into the town and engaged German troops to the north and south of the garrison point. The attack «wiped out or captured» most of the German garrison forces. (PRO)

The remaining divisions included in the American 1st Army were holding some 40 miles of front westward to the sea. They comprised eight infantry, two airbone infantry, and two armored divisions.

Canadians Launched

Facing the Allied front was the German 7th Army comprising at least 22 and probably 23 divisions, made up of 11 infantry, two airborne infantry, one Panzer Grenadier (motorized infantry), one German Air Force, and eight armored divisions. The German infantry strength was spread fairly evenly over the whole front but of the eight armored divisions no less than six were concentrated against the British sector, leaving only two in the western sector.

General Montgomery was thus faced with an almost reverse situation. This, of course, is judging only from published details. In the east, the British 2nd Army, containing one identified armored division, absorbed over 85 percent of the German armored strength while in the west, the American 1st Army containing two identified armored divisions faced almost entirely infantry.

Choosing the west, therefore, for his surprise breakthrough, General Montgomery first launched Canadian infantry, supported by British armor, into a holding

NAZIS SEARCH FOR CONSPIRATOR

LONDON, August 2 — The Germans have offered a reward of 1,000,000 marks for knowledge of the whereabouts of Dr. Karl Friedrich Goerdeler, former mayor of Leipzig, who is described by the German radio as « one of the conspirators in the attempt on Hitler's life. »

Goerdeler was a close personal associate of Dr. Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, who has been reported executed in the present Nazi terror. He was for a time Reich Commissioner for Food Production.

Reports have reached Sweden that Colonel General Ernst von Busch, who was replaced on the eastern front by Field Marshal Model, has committed suicide after undergoing third-degree questioning at Hitler's headquarters. He had previously been reported missing from the White Russian front. (PWB)

NAZI TANKS SHORT OF GASOLINE

WASHINGTON, August 2 — Germany is now consuming 100,000 tons more gasoline than she produces every month, Senator Wallgren, a member of the military Affairs Comitee, said today in Washington, indicating that the Nazis are cutting heavily into their fuel supplies.

Quoting official Swiss reports, Wallgren said that after August 31 the operation of all civilian vehicles using gasoline or alcohol will be suspended in occupied France. He added: « The shortage is severely hampering the mobility of German mechanized units in Normandy, where the Allies have found enemy tanks in good condition abandoned because of lack of fuel — not even enough to set them on fire.

NEW CALL ON GERMAN WOMEN

LONDON, August 2 — German authorities will demand heavier sacrifices from the women of Germany, a German political commentator told the already fully mobilised German people.

Speaking over the German radio, the commentator referred to the new call-up of German women between 45 and 50, and said: « It will be surprising to hear, during the next few weeks, how many women in Germany are still slumbering in a peace-like fashion. It is not as though the competent authorities were trying to squeeze out a sucked lemon. On the contrary, the lemon still contains a large amount of juice. »

The Stockholm Tidningen on Friday said: « Many women in the German war machine are tired and ill as a result of unbalanced nutrition and long working hours. »

Recent German press reports reaching London have shown a sharp rise in the rate of absenteeism among German women workers. Among these reports is that of a 15-year- old German girl in Hamburg who set fire to a farmhouse because she was tired of working and wanted to return home.

WORK FOR ALL IN FRONT TOWN

JESI, Ancona Province, August 2 — Jobs are available in this front-line town for every citizen willing and able to go to work, an Allied Military Government officer said today.

The town has been liberated less than a fortnight by troops of the Italian Corps of Liberation. In the first week 1,113 men found jobs through the Allied Labor Office established in the town by AMG, and plans call for hiring 3,000 men in the next three weeks.

Classifications of available jobs embrace many types of work from divers (for clearing ports) to taxidermists.

The AMG office, besides paying the workers' daily wage, provides transport from and to their homes and a substantial midday meal. (PWB)

VIOLATORS OF HARVEST LAWS PUNISHED

ROME, August 2 — Reports from Liberated Italy continue to show that courts are realing severely with violators of the recently promulgated laws effecting the Granaries of the People.

From Sicily it is learned that the Tribunal of Caltanisetta has given Palletta Ignazio seven years in prison for illegally withholding 3,400 kilograms of wheat from the Granaries. In Trapani the Tribunal fined Sciacca Antonio 120,000 lire and sentenced him to one year in jail for withholding 599 kilograms.

From Naples it is learned that the Prefect has revoked the licenses of six flour millers for illegal milling of wheat. (UNN)

WARNING TO FASCISTS

ROME, August 2 — Fascists north of the present Allied line have been warned against further collaboration with the Germans in a radio speech delivered here last night by Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for the Application of Sanctions Against Fascism.

Count Sforza told a nation-wide radio audience that the Fascist purge will now be carried out with speed and promptness, as a warning to all persons in Nazi-occupied Italy to foreswear any aid to the invaders.

"If we hesitate to punish where punishment is necessary," Count Sforza said, "we ourselves, become responsible for the violent acts with which Fascist spies are still helping their German accomplices in the martyring of our enslaved brethren." (PWB)

POLETTI PRAISES ROMAN POLICE

ROME, August 2 — Regional Allied Control Commissioner, Col. Charles A Poletti, speaking tonight over Radio Rome, praised the Rome police force which, "purged of the Fascist and unfaithful in its own ranks," now offers an effective and continuing safeguard of law and order in the city.

The speaker said that 20 years of Fascism had led many citizens to regard policemen as enemies but that the new Rome police force may be safely regarded as a friend. (UNN)

ITALIAN WAR MINISTER VISITS FRONT

WITH THE ITALIAN LIBERATION CORPS, August 2 — War Minister Alessandro Casati on Sunday closed a two-day visit to the Italian Liberation Corps on a mountain front south of the approaches to the Goth Line.

The War Minister arrived by car from Rome and was met by the Commander of the CIL. Count Casati inspected all units of the Italian Corps, visited hospitals and spoke with officers and men of all ranks.

The War Minister's son, Sotto Tenente Alfonso Casati, is serving as a grenadier with one of the regiments and greeted his father in the front lines.

Minister Casati said he was deeply impressed by the morale of the Italian troops. He was particularly touched during a tour of hospitals to find men who, though gravely wounded, expressed their determination to return to the line as soon as they recovered their strength.

The inspection trip was the Minister's first visit to the Liberation Corps. (UNN)

PURGE COMMISSIONS NAMED

ROME, August 2 — The Minister of Justice has named the first departmental purge commission, that for his own ministry. This was done, it was explained, in view of the fact that many members of the magistracy and other officials of the Justice Department will be required to serve on the various epuration commissions.

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, August 2 — To-day's communique:

LAND: Heavy fighting continues in the sector southwest of Florence, where troops of an Indian division belonging to the 8th Army have occupied the town of Castiglioni.

In the upper Tiber Valley important local gains have been made against strong opposition.

On the remainder of the front activity continues to be confined to active patrolling and artillery duels.

AIR: Tactical aircraft yesterday continued to concentrate their attacks against enemy communications in northern Italy and the battle area. Rail lines, roads, bridges, transport, shipping and other targets were attacked. In Yugoslavia, attacks were carried out against supply lines and transport. There were no heavy bomber operations.

In these operations which were restricted by adverse weather, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and two Allied planes are missing. The MAAF flew about 1,000 sorties. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ., AAI, August 2 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriot activity has increased in Piedmont where their forces have blown up two bridges, one north of Ivrea and the second, more important, on Highway 21 near Cuneo. In southern Piedmont four locomotives have been destroyed.

Attacks against the enemy's communications have been accomplished in other regions of occupied Italy. Near Pontasieve five trains were derailed and another one destroyed. In the same zone two wagons loaded with wine and one with cereals, requisitioned by the Germans, have been destroyed by Patriots. 17 Germans were killed and several wounded during an attack against a train transporting war material.

At Pontelagoscuro a German boat was sunk.

In the Valdarno, the Patriots have assaulted enemy barracks and an observation point, capturing seven guns and one machine gun. The Germans have suffered severe losses in dead and wounded.

Leghorn's Patriots efficently contributed to the liberation of the town. It is calculated that about 500 Germans and Fascists were put out of battle before the arrival of the Allied troops.

In Venezia, 20 Nazi-fascists were killed and 50 wounded in the crash of the Giustiniani palace caused by the Patriots.

In the provinces of Novara and Vercelli, the Fascists supported by tanks and artillery, are actively engaged against the Patriots. The operations, directed by Rodolfo Graziani in person, have up to the present, yielded very few results because of the extreme mobility of the Patriot forces which nullify the enemy's superiority in men and material.

In Moncalieri, the Fascist leader and some of his henchmen of the Black Brigades have been executed by the Patriots. (UNN)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, August, 2 — Today's communique:

LAND: In the Avranches sector Allied armored forces continued to push forward to the south and east of Villedieu. Further progress has been made. Tessy has been captured after heavy enemy resistance. Our hold on Le Beny Bocage and crossing over the river Souleuvre have been strengthened.

AIR: Enemy vehicles, ammunition dumps and other battlefield targets were attacked by fighter-bombers in close support of our ground forces yesterday. Better weather during the afternoon made it possible to speed up the Allied air offensive and large-scale attacks were launched against enemy bridges and airfields. Airfields at Chateaudun, Orleans, Bricy-Oricans, Bricy-Tours, Chartres and Melun, bridges on the Seine and Marne rivers, and oil dumps at Rouen were attacked by heavy bombers. Rail bridges crossing the Loire and other rail bridges in the Le Mans-Chartres-Dreux areas were bombed. A fuel store at Saint Malo and an ammunition dump southeast of Caen were targets for medium bombers. (PWB - Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, August 2 — Wednesday night's communique:

Allied formations have continued their way forward during the day and have now reached Vire and the road from Vire to Conde. The village of Estry has been taken and progress continues. In the Caen area bitter fighting continued against enemy armored formations in the region of Tilly La Campagne. There is also heavy fighting in the area of Ondefontaine. Our troops are approaching Aunay.

In the western sector Allied armored formations have progressed beyond Ponforson, while other forces are approaching Saint Pois, and advancing southeast of Brecey. The town of Villedieu has been captured and further progres made south of Torigny. Our air operations were limited by weather. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, August 2 — Tonight's Soviet Communique stated:

During August 2, west of Rezekne, our troops in the course of their advance have captured the city of Varaklava, and also occupied over 30 other populated localities.

North of Kaunas (Kovno), our troops with fighting continued to advance and captured the district center of the Lithuanian S. S. R., the city and railroad station of Hednincy, and also occupied over 100 other populated localities.

Northwest and south of Mariampol, our troops continued their offensive, captured the city of Vilkoviskis, the city of Kalvarija, and also occupied with fighting over 100 other populated localities.

North and west of Siedlice, our troops with fighting occupied over 200 populated localities.

West of Jaroslaw, our troops surmounted enemy resistance, captured the city and railway junction of Zhechuk, and also with fighting occupied over 150 other populated localities.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During August 1st, our troops on all fronts have damaged or destroyed 63 German tanks.

In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 76 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ENEMY BROADCASTS

Transocean and DNB: Fierce fighting is in progress along the entire front in Normandy, as a result of the major offensive launched by the Allies. Eisenhower is ruthlessly bringing up reserves in his determination to make a breakthrough. From Berlin it is announced that Reich Marshal Goering has appointed Lieut. General Werner Kreipe successor to Colonel-General Koerten, who was killed in the assassination attempt. The Reich Government has asked the Turkish charge d'affaires to leave Berlin, following the rupture of Turkish relations with Germany. On the eastern front, Soviet forces are exerting pressure in almost all sectors. The Germans are using newly-arrived tank formations with good effect. On the Italian front, Florence is being subjected to Allied fire, and much damage is reported. Marshal Graziani has been appointed commander-in-chief of the new combined army of German and Italian divisions. Mussolini has declared the Fascist Party to be a defence organisation — an auxiliary corps of active squadrons and Fascist militia.

German Overseas Stations: On the invasion front, the British yesterday resumed their offensive on Calvados. The British and Canadians have been repulsed along the line from Bourguebus to St. Martin. In all, the Allies have lost 220,000 men during the eight weeks of fighting in Normandy. Despite reinforcements southwest of Florence, General Alexander has failed to accomplish any advance on the Italian front.

KAUNAS FALLS TO THE RED ARMY AS BATTLE FOR WARSAW RAGES

in southern Lithuania, the Red Army is actually seven miles inside of East Prussia, these towns being in the Suvalki triangle which Hitler annexed to East Prussia in 1939.

Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, said that the Soviets are moving up their heaviest guns to attack border communications along the East Prussian border. He added that the fall of Kaunas will release more men and machines, and swell the Red Army force which threatens to sweep over the East Prussian frontier to the Baltic.

Another grim headache for the German High Command is the knowledge that while Soviet Armies are sweeping forward in the field, behind the lines preparations continue to keep the Red Army at maximum strength. Young Russian reservists can be seen marching and training at every Red Army center in the Soviet Union.

At the southern anchor of the line, south of Przemysl, the Red Army is pushing a long spearhead into the Carpathians, threatening to cut off the rail junction of Sambor, and the oil center of Drohobycz, and the rail junction of Stryj, all within 30 to 40 miles of the Czecoslovakian mountain border.

Jelgava, only 20 miles from the sea, and 22 miles from Riga, fell to the troops of the 1st Baltic Front, who stormed into the town from several directions, smashed the fierce German opposition, and killed more than 2,000 of the enemy. A large number of prisoners and much war material were taken.

Baltic Armies Trapped

The capture of Jelgava, junction of five rail lines, cut the last rail link of the Germans in Estonia and Latvia with their main forces in East Prussia and Poland. One correspondent said that General Bagramyan had swung the gate shut on the huge German armies of the Baltic in an operation which may almost rival that of Stalingrad.

Among the officers honored in the capture of Jelgava was Colonel Vasily Stalin, son of the Russian supreme commander.

On the extreme eastern flank of this sector, Russian troops waged a successful offensive in action west and southwest of Pskov, pressing further into Estonia and enlarging their hold on Eastern Latvia.

Correspondents stated that all classes of German soldiers are being used up in the attempts to stop the Soviet drive — Veterans of the last war, the Wehrmacht grenadiers, and the Hitler Youth. The bodies of German soldiers of all ages are described by one correspondent as « floating down the green waters of the Niemen towards the Baltic. »

For provisioning the Red Armies in their speedy advance, the Russian commissariat can find plenty of food in the Ukraine and White Russia at this season of the year. The Germans are being driven back too fast to destroy or move it. All along the line of the march, said a BBC commentator, the Russians will find great dumps of German food and supplies intact, and the scale of this kind of booty is rising. Furthermore, the source of the great military strength of the Russian soldier is his simple mode of living. [illegible] him to make forced marches for days. (Reuter)

KAUNAS FALLS TO THE RED ARMY AS BATTLE FOR WARSAW RAGES

MOSCOW, August 1 — Kaunas (Kovno), pre-war capital of Lithuania, was captured by the Red Army, giving the Soviets an important railway springboard into East Prussia. The taking of Kaunas, after most of the Germans there had been killed, was announced in an order of the day to General Chernyakovski by Marshal Joseph Stalin, who was revealed as personally directing the troops by phone from Moscow.

A Soviet war correspondent said that any general on the front may get a telephone call at any time and a voice will say, « This is Moscow — Stalin speaking. »

The Red Army is advancing all along the line and at the moment is attacking Warsaw. One dispatch said there was fighting in the suburbs of the Polish capital. An Izvestia dispatch from the Warsaw front said, « The Germans in impotent rage, are burning and blowing up buildings in the Polish capital. » Russian flyers saw the demolition blasts going off and huge dense clouds of smoke are rising from the city.

The correspondent for the London Daily Herald said that Warsaw's fate will probably be settled by a tank battle. The dispatch stated: « The Germans aren't relying on Warsaw's own defense. They've brought up the three best tank divisions in the German Army to try to save the city. »

In the meantime, the attack on East Prussia is now moving forward on a 100-mile front. The London Daily Mail pointed out that by capturing Seiny and Mariampole

ALLIED ADVANCE IN NORMANDY CONTINUES

SHAEF, August 1 — All day today, the American and British armies have been surging forward unchecked below the Cherbourg Peninsula. General Omar Bradley's U. S. forces have been funning out from liberated Avranches to reach Pontaubault, four miles to the south, and Ducey, five miles to the southeast. The British 2d Army, under General Miles Dempsey, have advanced more than four miles in the Caumont sector, where the Allied bulge is reported nearly doubled.

Earlier, it was officially announced that in the western sector of the 80-mile Normandy front the Americans have

LATE BULLETIN

BRITISH CIVILIANS ARRIVE IN LISBON

LISBON, August 1 — Two out of three trainloads of British civilians expected here — part of the second group, to be exchanged for German prisoners, arrived this morning. (PWB) cleared the town of Granville, and driven ahead on a broad front to cut the main Percy-Avranches road a mile north of Villedieu, which according to the BBC fell this afternoon.

From here, the whole road is in Allied hands as far as Percy, where street fighting is going on. An important gain has been made north of Percy, where an American spearhead has thrust to within 1,500 yards of the Caen-Villedieu road. Another gain has been made west of Tessy. The important town of Brecey, about 10 miles east of Avranches, was taken by American troops today.

Southeast of Avranches, the Americans advanced nearly 10 miles to take two key dams on the Selune River, which separates Normandy from Brittany. One armored column crossed the river at Pontaubault, and another made the crossing at Ducey. The speed of their advance, and the chaotic state of the enemy retreat, indicated that bridges may have been captured intact, stated a UP report.

In advancing beyond Avranches, the Americans have spanned the last great natural barrier opposing a breakthrough to the south and are emerging from the hedgerow and grove country which has slowed their progress, an AP correspondent reported. Reuter pointed out that although there are many possible defensive lines south of the Selune, there is no major natural barrier until the Loire is reached. Along the Villedieu-Percy road, the Germans have fallen back to a strong defensive line, and are making a determined resistance. They are fighting back hard round Tessy-sur-Vire, and American patrols which had been holding the town have withdrawn. The German counter-attack here was earlier stated to be «well in hand.»

East of the Vire River, General Bradley's forces have taken Torigny, and in heavy fighting advanced beyond it to link up with the British drive southwest of Caumont and the Forest Leveque, which is in Allied hands.

Eleven Mile Advance

The steadily-advancing British forces have taken the village of St. Martin des Besaces and Hill 309. To the east, after a fierce struggle, they have cut the Avranches Villers highway and the railway from Vire to Villers. They have pushed forward southeast of Caumont to take St. Germain d'Ectot and Cahagnes. Two miles west of the German stronghold of Le Beny-Bocage, they advanced 11 miles south of the point from which they started their drive on Sunday. This brought them 22 miles inland from the English Channel, their deepest penetration since «D» day. The bridgehead over the Soleuvre River, forced after an advance of 10 miles in 24 hours, has been extended to a width of 11/2 miles, stated a spokesman here today.

After 12 hours of heavy fighting, the Canadians were firmly holding the ridge overlooking the village of Tilly la Campagne. Striking from west and north, they actually forced their way into the town, but a strong enemy counter-attack was flung in, and the Canadians withdrew to the railway just west of the town. Simultaneously, other Canadians moved from the north onto the commanding ridge.

Since the launching of the American drive last Tuesday, the capture of nearly 11,000 prisoners was reported, and front line correspondents estimated that the total will probably run close to 20,000 with the elimination of many small pockets of resistance far behind the rapidly-advancing front line. Prisoners taken by them in the 24 hours ending midnight last night totalled 7,812, stated a late report from Reuter. It was estimated that in the same period, 500 German vehicles were destroyed and 500 Germans killed in the second pocket formed southeast of Coutances.

Most of the Normandy correspondents pointed out that the Americans are moving so fast that they are entering towns almost untouched by war, and with cafes and restaurants still open. «Our tanks are racing ahead of our infantry,» wrote a UP correspondent, «and it looks as if

U. S. HEAVIES HIT CENTRAL FRANCE

LONDON, August 1 — «Strong forces» of Flying Fortresses and Liberators today attacked airfields at Chateaudun, Orleans-Bricy, and Melun, and other military targets throughout central France.

40,000 Tons of Bombs

Concluding July's operations, the 8th USAAF struck Munich and Ludwigshafen Monday, bringing the bomb total dropped within 31 days on enemy industry and communications to 40,000 tons.

In yesterday's attack, Munich alone felt the blast of 3,000 tons, said the United Press. This attack was the 13th made on German targets in July.

Most of the targets were engaged through cloud by means of instruments, though some strikes were visible to aircrews. Twelve hundred bombers took part and were covered by 1,000 fighters. The escorting Lightnings, Thunderbolts, and Mustangs attacked airfields and transportation, destroying 18 German planes on the ground, and shooting up locomotives, trucks and railroad cars.

The Germans did not send up any interceptors.

From this operation, 16 bombers and four fighters are missing.

RAF bombers Monday night attacked flying-bomb sites in northern France. A small number of flying bombs fell in southern English counties and in London. Damage and casualties were suffered.

Unofficial July summaries show that during the month 8th USAAF bombers and fighters shot down 318 German planes on bombing missions. Of this number, 235 were shot down in the 13 attacks on Germany which cost the United States 203 heavy bombers and 54 fighters.

General Doolittle's bombers, during the month, engaged strategic long-range targets and some of the aircraft joined in the assaults on flying-bomb platforms in Pas de Calais. This area received 12,750 tons.

On two occasions 8th USAAF bombers gave direct support to Allied armies in Normandy. They paved the way for the British push around Caen on July 18, and broke up German lines south of Saint Lô on July 25, when General Omar Bradley began his offensive.

American fighters escorting bombers over Germany recently reported encounters with small numbers of German rocket-propelled planes. These craft differ from jet-propelled planes in that the oxygen which helps to power them is carried aboard in a chemical combination with other elements, instead of being taken from the air through which the plane passes. The Germans were first reported to have used rocket-propelled planes during the air battles over the Reich in January.

CORRESPONDENTS SEND ELATED DISPATCHES

LONDON, August 1 — Dispatches reaching the British press from the Normandy front today were of an optimistic and elated nature following the successful advances in both British and American sectors.

«German units have been routed and smashed in the southern Cherbourg Peninsula on a scale I can only compare, in a smaller way, with the end in Tunisia,» wrote the Daily Express correspondent with the American forces.

On one road, the correspondent saw a column of 70 German vehicles, every one knocked out. The column comprised the whole of the headquarters of an SS division. The vehicles were ambushed at night. An American combat tank got into position at the end of a road. With its second shot it knocked out the leading German vehicle, and sealed

Along the Villedieu-Percy road, the Germans have fallen back to a strong defensive line, and are making a determined resistance. They are fighting back hard round Tessy-sur-Vire, and American patrols which had been holding the town have withdrawn. The German counter-attack here was earlier stated to be « well in hand. »

East of the Vire River, General Bradley's forces have taken Torigny, and in heavy fighting advanced beyond it to link up with the British drive southwest of Caumont and the Forest Leveque, which is in Allied hands.

Eleven Mile Advance

The steadily-advancing British forces have taken the village of St. Martin des Besaces and Hill 309. To the east, after a fierce struggle, they have cut the Avranches-Villers highway and the railway from Vire to Villers. They have pushed forward southeast of Caumont to take St. Germain d'Ectot and Cahagnes. Two miles west of the German stronghold of Le Beny-Bocage, they advanced 11 miles south of the point from which they started their drive on Sunday. This brought them 22 miles inland from the English Channel, their deepest penetration since « D » day. The bridgehead over the Soleuvre River, forced after an advance of 10 miles in 24 hours, has been extended to a width of 1 1/2 miles, stated a spokesman here today.

After 12 hours of heavy fighting, the Canadians were firmly holding the ridge overlooking the village of Tilly la Campagne. Striking from west and north, they actually forced their way into the town, but a strong enemy counter-attack was flung in, and the Canadians withdrew to the railway just west of the town. Simultaneously, other Canadians moved from the north onto the commanding ridge.

Since the launching of the American drive last Tuesday, the capture of nearly 11,000 prisoners was reported, and front line correspondents estimated that the total will probably run close to 20,000 with the elimination of many small pockets of resistance far behind the rapidly-advancing front line. Prisoners taken by them in the 24 hours ending midnight last night totalled 7,812, stated a late report from Reuter. It was estimated that in the same period, 500 German vehicles were destroyed and 500 Germans killed in the second pocket formed southeast of Coutances.

Most of the Normandy correspondents pointed out that the Americans are moving so fast that they are entering towns almost untouched by war, and with cafes and restaurants still open. « Our tanks are racing ahead of our infantry, » wrote a UP correspondent, « and it looks as if there is nothing to halt them. They go wherever they like. »

The Germans are surrendering everywhere before the American drive, even to French civilians. A correspondent who saw some German prisoners walking to the rear without guards, said that they were first-rate troops: Germany's best parachute units, SS divisions, and crack panzer formations.

Allied planes have continued to hit at the fleeing Germans and at any sign of transport on the roads ahead of the Allied drive. An Air Force officer said that destruction from the air during the past few days has been so heavy that in some sectors the advance was slowed down by knoked-out enemy vehicles cluttering the roads. H. R. Knickerbocker, of the Chicago Sun, flying over recently-taken territory, said he saw below him « a snake of burning vehicles nearly two kilometers long, » with vehicles in double and sometimes treble rows, hub-to-hub and bumper-to-bumper, with practically every one on fire. Another correspondent said that there must be upwards of 1,000 wrecked enemy guns and tanks on the roads of the battle-field. (AP - Reuter - UP)

52,000 GERMAN PRISONERS TAKEN

LONDON, August 1 — Over 52,000 German prisoners have been taken by the Allies in Normandy and Italy in the thirty days preceding July 26, Sir James Grigg said in the House of Commons today. These include two generals and one admiral captured in Normandy. (Reuter)

From this operation, 16 bombers and four fighters are missing.

RAF bombers Monday night attacked flying-bomb sites in northern France. A small number of flying bombs fell in southern English counties and in London. Damage and casualties were suffered.

Unofficial July summaries show that during the month 8th USAAF bombers and fighters shot down 318 German planes on bombing missions. Of this number, 235 were shot down in the 13 attacks on Germany which cost the United States 203 heavy bombers and 34 fighters.

CORRESPONDENTS SEND ELATED DISPATCHES

LONDON, August 1 — Dispatches reaching the British press from the Normandy front today were of an optimistic and elated nature following the successful advances in both British and American sectors.

« German units have been routed and smashed in the southern Cherbourg Peninsula on a scale I can only compare, in a smaller way, with the end in Tunisia, » wrote the Daily Express correspondent with the American forces.

On one road, the correspondent saw a column of 70 German vehicles, every one knocked out. The column comprised the whole of the headquarters of an SS division. The vehicles were ambushed at night. An American combat tank got into position at the end of a road. With its second shot it knocked out the leading German vehicle, and sealed the fate of the rest. The American infantry closed in on the column, and fought it out throughout the night with the SS men.

« The result was the most horrible destruction I have seen in two years of war reporting, » wrote the correspondent. « Four hundred Germans lay dead in the fields. About 60 lay dead along the roadside, beside the vehicles. Seventy vehicles, — half-tracked tanks, guns, trailers, and even the German general's caravan, — lay smoking in ruins on the road. »

Although the Germans outnumbered the Americans, they were annihilated. By surrounding the German force completely, the Americans prevented the Germans from going backward or forward, or manoeuvring in any direction.

As well as the ruins of military equipment, said the correspondent, there was so much property lying about that the column had evidently been « a loot column. »

All over the road were women's fur coats, dresses, underwear, shoes, hundreds of boxes of cigars, thousands of cigarettes; scores of bottles of wine, stacks of wool, bottles of perfume, and other stuff stolen from the civilians.

« The general's caravan, » wrote the correspondent, « was neatly fitted out with drawers crammed full of shirts, socks, ties, and other personal clothing. There was his private library and liquor store. There were cigars, radios, field

glasses, maps, documents, and everything else, just as he had left it when he dived out of the caravan for cover.»

Much military equipment was captured from vehicles that were still intact.

The Daily Telegraph correspondent on the British front wrote: «This, in many ways, is the most encouraging day I have known for some weeks. Our attack south of Caumont shows every sign of gaining momentum, rather than declining after the first few hours, as has sometimes been the case in this theater. But, more important than the actual distance covered, is the fact that our forces are now established in increasing strength on a height known as 309, which forms one of the northern peaks of the Pincon feature.»

This success, said the correspondent, was due to the daring initiative of a local tank commander in switching from the maze of fields and hedges to the main road and driving straight at the hill.

«Ordinarily, you don't send tanks to attack hills, but for operations in hilly country we posses a tank which has no equal. That is the Churchill. It's low outline does not make it an easy mark, and in country of this nature that is invaluable. This was shown over and over again in Tunisia, where Churchills climbed to positions out of reach of the normal anti-tank gun, thereby putting the infantry on the hill at their mercy.»

By the afternoon, the Churchills had established themselves securely on the crest of 309. They were still a good deal exposed and dependent on long lines of communication for ammunition and fuel. Ordinarily, it would have been customary to withdraw the tanks to harbor some distance back, since the infantry had not arrived to consolidate. But the tanks remained around the summit. Meanwhile, the infantry were rushed up in trucks through moonlight. When dawn broke, the British were firmly in control on the hill. (Reuter)

FRENCH REPORT ROMMEL WOUNDED

LONDON, August 1 — The wounding of Field Marshal Rommel in an Allied fighter sweep was described by a National Broadcasting Company correspondent, who quoted members of the French Underground.

The Nazis denied that Rommel has been wounded.

The correspondent, in a broadcast yesterday, said that on July 17 Rommel and his staff were driving toward the front line on the Doumvers road, when they were over-run by an Allied fighter sweep. The fighters dived to attack, and Rommel was too late to escape. One of the bursts of machine-gun fire hit him, and his body was thrown by the blast into the ditch.

«The Field Marshal,» said the correspondent, was then hurried off to the German surgical hospital at Lernay, and the pick of the German 7th Army surgeons worked on him for several hours. The Underground were not able to say how the operation fared.» (OWI)

FIVE NAZI DIVISIONS DEFEND FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 1 — Eighth Army forces yesterday stood off renewed German counterattacks south of Florence, and in stubborn fighting again advanced to within six miles of the city.

With five German divisions, including the 4th Parachute and the 3rd and 29th Panzer Grenadier divisions, massed in a 28-mile semicircle across the ridges south of the city, the 8th Army's progress has been slow, but constant pressure has dislodged the enemy from successive strongpoints.

German tank columns again struck heavily at the New Zealand lines southwest of Florence, and again Tiger tanks forced their way into the village of San Michele, only to be flung back. New Zealanders are once more in possession of the village, and in counter-thrusts, 8th Army Mo[illegible]ins, British forces are closing in on Figline in Val d'Arno, with main enemy forces withdrawing to strong positions north of the Riesco River, a tributary of the Arno just north of this town. The village of Faella, northeast of Figline, has been reported clear of the enemy, but German machine gunners still guard the exits from Castelfranco.

North of Arezzo, where the Arno first twists around the Pratomagno Mountains, 8th Army forces yesterday pushed along Highway 71 to a narrow gorge just three miles south of Subbiano, a town 7 1/2 miles north of Arezzo. Between the Arno and the Tiber, troops of an Indian division, supported by tanks, were picking their way through extensive minefields toward the village of Prato. The villages of Fraccano, Passerina, and Lama in this sector were reported clear of the enemy.

Both the Adriatic and the Ligurian coastal sectors were quiet yesterday.

30 Enemy Fighters Downed

Mustang and Lightning fighters escorting Italy-based bombers in yesterday's attack on oil refinery and storage areas in Bucharest shot down 30 out of 85 enemy aircraft which attempted to attack the tight bomber formations, it was announced here today.

Not a single enemy aircraft was able to get past the Allied fighters.

Although medium bombers were grounded yesterday by unfavourable weather, fighter-bombers and fighters slashed at enemy road and rail lines in the Po Valley and between Bologna and the battle lines around Florence. Gun positions and troop concentrations were struck in close cooperation with Allied ground forces.

RAF medium bombers struck harbor installations at San Remo, in northwest Italy, 25 miles northeast of Nice, France.

Speedy Nazi Defeat

Major General Nathan Twining, commander of the 15th AAF, told the men of his force today that by continuing to strike at the enemy's few remaining industrial centers, they could assure the «speedy and complete defeat» of Nazi Germany.

General Twining's message was sent on the occasion of the 37th anniversary of the United States Army Air Force, founded in 1907.

French With MAAF

French-flown aircraft operating with Mediterranean Allied Air Forces have been credited with five rail cuts and road blocks, one bridge destroyed and one damaged, in 168 sorties in the past week, it was announced here today.

Devers Decorates Anders

Lieutenant General Jacob Devers, deputy supreme allied commander, Mediterranean theater, today presented Lieutenant General Wladislaw Anders, commanding the Polish Corps in Italy, with the Legion of Merit, in behalf of the President of the United States, in ceremonies held at Rome.

The citation stated that General Anders' «outstanding leadership and tactical ability» had been a «primary contribution» to the success of Allied forces in the Italian campaign.

FIVE NAZI DIVISIONS DEFEND FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, August 1 — Eighth Army forces yesterday stood off renewed German counterattacks south of Florence, and in stubborn fighting again advanced to within six miles of the city.

German tank columns again struck heavily at the New Zealand lines southwest of Florence, and again Tiger tanks forced their way into the village of San Michele, only to be flung back. New Zealanders are once more in possession of the village, and in counter-thrusts, 8th Army forces captured the hamlet of La Romola, two miles east of San Michele and six miles southwest of Florence along the road leading from Cerbain to join Highway 2 just south of the city.

In another enemy counter-attack, also of considerable strength, German forces also lost ground after making preliminary penetration of 8th Army positions. The force of the German attack through the hills west of Highway 2 was broken and as the enemy column withdrew, 8th Army forces followed to seize the village of San Andrea, only 5 3/4 miles south of Florence.

The enemy also counter-attacked against British positions on Monte Scalari, southeast of Florence, one of the highest points in the hills ringing the city. Five enemy assaults were repulsed yesterday in this sector, yet 8th Army forces continued to move slowly forward. Patrols reached the village of San Martino, just west of Highway 69, the main Arezzo-Florence road along the Arno Valley, and 12 1/2 miles from Florence.

The enemy are reported to be using a new type of booby-trap to counter these Allied patrol thrusts. Trip wires are spread between trees at a level to catch the radio aerials of reconnaissance cars, and explode grenades which cause considerable damage to vehicle and crews.

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE 13 TOWNS

LONDON, August 1 — Marshal Tito's communique announced today the capture of 13 towns and villages in various parts of Yugoslavia.

In Macedonia, southern Yugoslavia, Partisans captured the town of Debar, thus cutting off communications between Albania and the upper Vardar Valley. The town of Plav was captured in Montenegro, while the whole territory to the Albanian frontier was liberated.

The communique announced that Partisans defeated parts of the Prince Eugen Division defending the Zenica-Zepca line, while in Dalmatia the important enemy stronghold of Vrilka, northeast of Split, was captured. (Reuter)

ALLIES CAPTURE SANSAPOR

PEARL HARBOR, August 1 — The Navy Department announced today that United States Marines have captured practically the whole of Guam Island.

There is still some sporadic resistance in the southern half, the announcement said, where United States ground forces are being given support by warships firing from both sides of the island. Over 6,000 Japanese have been killed in the operation.

From Allied headquarters in New Guinea, General MacArthur issued a communique announcing the capture of the northwest New Guinea coastal area of Sansapor and the nearby islands of Amsterdam and Middleburg, following a surprise thrust against the Japanese in that sector.

The Japanese base at Manokwari, pivot for the defense of the Vogelkop Peninsula, has been by-passed and the only escape route open to the enemy is over the hazardous swampy terrain to the south, the communique said, adding, «Allied air bases are now established from Milne Bay along the entire coast of New Guinea.»

The Japanese are no longer able to operate in the southwest Pacific except beyond the Halmahera-Philippines line, which has now become the defense line for their conquered empire. Should this line fail, their conquests to the south of China would be imperilled, and in grave danger of flank envelopment.

Two large Japanese forces are trapped by General MacArthur's troops. One is in the Aitape-Wewak sector of British New Guinea, where some 45,000 Japs suffered heavy losses in trying to break out of an Australian-American trap. Another force of more than 40,000 is surrounded in badly battered Rabaul.

Allied aircraft, beside covering the new landings, once more bombed Woleai in the Carolines, New Ireland, Bougainville, and Rabaul.

After a preparatory barrage of more than two hours by bombers and naval guns, the Marines have resumed their advance on Tinian, where dwindling enemy forces, despite difficult fighting terrain, were driven into small pockets at the tip of the island, the Navy announcement said.

Seventy-five additional tons of bombs were dropped on Truk Island. One Japanese interceptor was destroyed, one probably destroyed, and two were damaged. Four American planes were damaged. (Reuter - BBC)

JAPANESE DEFEATS IN BURMA

LONDON, August 1 — Today's communique from the Southeast Asia Command stated that the troops operating against the supply line of the Japanese in retreat down the Tiddim road struck far in the enemy rear and threaten to cut his main escape route.

In first clashes, the Japanese lost transport and more than 120 dead. To the north, Churachandpur had been strongly occupied but fell without a fight. Storms and swollen rivers which swept away bridges were delaying the Allied advance on Tamu.

A New Delhi message stated that five Japanese divisions, or more than half the Japanese garrison in Burma, have been totally defeated and largely destroyed in the Allied offensive on the whole Burma front in the last three months.

Japanese casualties were 50,840 killed and wounded, excluding losses by bombing, shellfire, fever, and starvation.

Air Chief Marshal Peirse, in a letter to General Giffard, G.O.C. 11th Army Group, said the Japanese defeat on the Assam front was probably the costliest reverse the Japanese Army has yet suffered.

Allied casualties in Burma were given by the War Minister, Sir James Grigg, in the House of Commons to-day, as 5,918 killed and wounded and 2,594 missing. These figures include casualties suffered by British, Indian, and West African forces. (Reuter)

RESTORATION UNIVERSITY PROPERTY URGED

LONDON, August 1 — The British Association for the Advancement of Science urged today that enemy powers be required to make full restoration of university property stolen or destroyed in war areas.

In a report on post-war education reviewed in the London Times, the Association stressed education for international cooperation as a necessary part of the university curriculum, and the rehabilitation of universities destroyed or damaged by the war. (PWB)

IMPROVEMENT IN TREATING CASUALTIES

WASHINGTON, August 1 — Returning from a recent tour of the European battlefields, Major General Norman Kirk, Surgeon General of the U. S. Army, said at a press conference yesterday:

«The tremendous advances made in preventing Allied battle casualties is due to efficient administration, a medical corps consisting of people who have known how to execute large-scale plans, and the unfailing spirit to do the task.

«One day after D-day an entire field hospital was sent to France; three days after D-day, two surgical companies were operating in hospital tents on one beach. Four days after D-day, 40 per cent of the Allied casualties were evacuated by air.

«The striking prevention of casualties was due primarily to advances in surgery supplemented by the use of sulfa drugs and penicillin, which have outstripped anything ever done before.» (PWB)

NAZI INTELLIGENCE CHIEF TALKS

MOSCOW, August 1 — Wilhelm Zimmerman is one of the most interesting prisoners captured by the Russians during the past few days. Correspondents say he has served on a number of German staffs on the Soviet-German front, and was latterly chief of intelligence to one of the staffs- the notorious « S » Department. Shortly before that, he was in charge of the radio intelligence of the German Army, and he knows many of the leading German generals personally.

Zimmerman told the Russians that he was dissatisfied with Hitler. «All that the High Command demands from the staffs of army units,» he said, «is that they stand to the death. Hitler spares neither soldiers nor generals in carrying out his operations. That is what occurred in 1942. I witnessed the historic talks between von Bock and Hitler. Bock was opposed to a simultaneous advance on Stalingrad and the Caucasus. Hitler removed him.

«I know also that generals in Berlin upheld Von Paulus' proposal to withdraw from Stalingrad before it was too late. But Hitler was adamant.

«Now the same thing has happened on the central front. We were ordered to defend a tremendous front. We were told not to retreat — to sacrifice everything down to the last man. Our propaganda about breaking away from the enemy and straightening out the line was deliberately false. On the contrary, we were told to stand firm at all costs.»

A similar story was told to the Russians three weeks ago by General Gollitzer, who was taken prisoner at Vitebsk. (OWI)

SITUATION «VERY GRAVE»

LONDON, August 1 — «It would be criminal to deny that the situation has become grave, very grave,» said the German Forces Radio yesterday, quoting an article in Goebbel's Wehrmacht newspaper. «We need better weapons, more fanatical fighters, superior leadership, and, above all, more firmly knit war morale,» wrote the author.

«It will do no harm if we get a clear picture of what would happen if the dreamers in Germany took it into their heads that this war could be given up now, only to be resumed later.

«For us, there are only two alternatives... we fight until we win or we lose. Otherwise, not only the class-leading National Socialists are lost, but all Germans will lose everything.

«There is no honourable capitulation for us in this war. There is only a struggle to the last breath. It is up to us to live through the coming weeks and months with gritted teeth, and to fight to the last scrap of energy. If we lose our nerve now, it means we fall in the midst of a crisis and will go under for good.» (Reuter)

GOEBBELS' MOBILISATION IS LAST EFFORT

LONDON, August 1 — Commenting on Goebbels' latest measures for total mobilisation, a Ministry of Economic Warfare spokesman said Monday: «It is the last desperate effort to try to stop the overwhelming power of the Allied attacks, with complete disregard for the ill effects on the whole of Germany. These ill effects may prove fatal before long.»

The spokesman pointed out that the mobilisation decree last January had for all practical purposes exhausted the supply of German labor. No more could be released without impairing the efficiency of industrial production.

But Goebbels said he may seize as many as half of these deferred workers as his only remaining source of manpower, and use them to prepare Germany literally for the last ditch — to erect fortifications and to dig trenches.

Goebbels in his speech Monday said that the armament production industry requires great reserves of manpower. This, said the Ministry of Economic Warfare spokesman, was in itself a confession that the armament industry cannot stand any further dilution with unreliable foreign labor.

SATELLITES NERVOUS

WASHINGTON, August 1 — Dispatches received here indicate that the spectacle of crumbling German might is causing fear in Germany's satellite partners.

The Bucharest pro-Nazi daily, Porunca Vremii, said in a recent issue: «Danger is knocking at Germany's door. All the continents are united to defeat Germany: the tremendous resources of England, the gigantic technical superiority of America, the limitless reserves of Russia. Germany is haunted with the simultaneous combination of several dangers. What is going to happen? No one knows.»

A Budapest dispatch to the Turkish news agency, Anatolie, on Thursday showed that Hungary is no less nervous over the outcome of the war. The dispatch pointed out the current crisis in German leadership, adding, «The generals' antagonism to Hitler reached its climax during recent months, particularly after the opening of the Western Front.»

The dispatch then asserted, «More important military leaders than the rather obscure General Ludwig Beck are involved in the movement.» (OWI)

The spokesman concluded:

«The new arrangements will definitely not solve the German manpower problem, and may be hardly worth the effort.»

Among measures Goebbels announced were the releasing of numerous workers for front-line duties, the suspension of public services, and the placing of 80 million people «exclusively under the hard law of total war.» (BBC - OWI)

HIMMLER USED FOREIGN SS UNITS

WASHINGTON, August 1 — Radio Moscow yesterday said that Himmler, new head of the German home army, employed foreign SS formations quartered in the Reich to suppress the generals' revolt.

The broadcast said: «These formations of SS troops were sent from their stations to several large German cities, and took part in the raids and arrests of officers who were suspected of the conspiracy.

«The foreign SS troops were also used to guard concentration camps where the arrested officers are confined. Himmler thanked these troops for their loyalty to Hitler and made several awards.» (OWI)

BRITISH POLICY ON EVACUATION OF CHILDREN

LONDON, August 1 — The United States and British governments have always been anxious to facilitate the reception by neutral countries of Jewish children from any part of Nazi Europe, Dingle Foot, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Economic Warfare, told the House of Commons today.

Mr. Foot said the Government had been informed by the International Red Cross of the offer by Admiral Horthy, Regent of Hungary, to permit Jewish children to leave the country.

The British Government had replied to the Red Cross saying it was willing to do all in its power to see these children evacuated as soon as possible.

«It has not been the fault of the neutral governments that evacuation schemes have not operated long ago,» he said. «It has been the reluctance of occupied authorities or enemy governments to let the children go.»

The Swedes and the Swiss, he said, had always shown willingness to receive refugees from German-occupied Europe.

Mr. Foot added that neutral countries had been informed of Britain's offer to sanction an increased importation of supplies through the blockade for the benefit of these children. He understood a similar assurance had been given by the United States. (Reuter)

RESISTANCE TO JAPAN IN SIAM

WASHINGTON, August 1 — The recent resignation en bloc of Premier Marshal Songgram's Government of Thailand, Japan's only satellite, is considered by Far Eastern experts here as evidence of the strength of the resistance movement in that country.

The view is taken that those Thais who long opposed the appeasement of, and collaboration with, Japan have now succeeded in ousting the man who with Japanese support became dictator of a once independent and democratic country.

In June, 1940, Songgram signed a «non-aggression» pact with Japan. In December of the following year, the Japanese Ambassador delivered an ultimatum, demanding passage through the country. While the Tailand cabinet was still debating, the Japanese entered the capital, Bangkok, and Songgram became the head of the collaborationist government.

Sani Pramoj, Thailand's minister to Washington, who has refused to recognize the Songgram dictatorship, said last October that the Thais soon realized that under Japanese domination they would be subjected to economic strangulation. (OWI)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, August 1 — Today's communique:

In the western sector, Allied forces which entered Granville have now cleared the town. Strong enemy resistance continues northwest of Tessy. We have made substantial gains in the Torigny-Saint Martin area. Isolated pockets of resistance throughout the area are being steadily eliminated.

Escorted heavy bombers attacked naval vessels at Le Havre and the railway center at La Roche, last night, as our air forces kept up their pounding of enemy supplies and communications.

Medium bombers hit rail bridges crossing the Seine at Mantes, Gassicourt, and Le Manoir, and over the Loire at Nantes, Tours, and Le Ponts de Ce. Fuel dumps in the Foret de la Guerche and at Tours, and ammunition dumps south-east of Caen, were bombed effectively.

Fighter-bombers on armed reconnaissance attacked railway rolling stock, airfields, and motor transport over a wide area. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, August 1 — Tonight's communique:

Allied progress in the western sector continues. Armored forces pushing from Avranches have captured Dams, south-east of Ducey and near Vezine, while others have taken Brocey and reached the River See in this area.

Fighting is going on south of Villedieu, though the town itself has not yet been taken. Our forces have driven farther forward in the Tessy area, and are now within a mile of the town.

There has also been some progress south of Torigny sur Vire. In the area south of Caumont, Allied troops, after clearing Foret Le Eveque, have crossed the River Souleuvre and taken Lebeny Bocage.

Poor visibility limited air activity from midnight to noon. During the morning, Normandy-based aircraft attacked targets in advance of our troops. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE MQ, AAI, August 1 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Italian Patriots are supporting Allied troops in mopping up operations on the hill of Pratomagno, north and northwest of Arezzo.

Important supply depots which belonged to the Todt Organisation in Val d'Aosta have been attacked by the Patriots and completely emptied.

In the La Spezia zone, frequent fighting is taking place, with the Germans losing 30 or 40 men a day.

It is now reported that in the mining town of Morgnano near Spoleto, a German detachment, encircled by Patriots, had found shelter in a local Fascist house and two nearby buildings.

The Germans, in order not to be overwhelmed, threatened to shoot 150 hostages. The Patriot leader decided to continue the attack, although without firing, until his forces should be within assault distance.

Under cover of darkness, the circle was closed except for a small escape route purposely left. The Germans, taken by surprise at a sudden assault, rushed for their lives into the opening, leaving their hostages behind. Then the intense fire of the Patriots forced the Germans to surrender.

As reprisal against the village of Stia, near Arezzo, which supported the Patriots, the Nazi-Fascists have shot 100 hostages. Among the victims are 500 women and 22 minors. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, August 1 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, our troops withstood all severe attacks of the enemy between Hottot and Vire, in heavy fighting. Subsequently, in some sectors they detached themselves a few kilometers towards the south. In the new positions all the attacks of the hard-pressing enemy were repulsed. Also in the section northeast of Percy, enemy attacks supported by strong tank forces and fierce artillery fire, failed. The enemy, who had penetrated deeply into our positions on the western wing, was held up in a counter-attack just south of Avranches. Heavy fighting was still under way along the whole front during the evening hours.

In the eastern sections of the beachhead, the enemy increased his artillery fire in the course of the night to drumfire. During the night, heavy fighter-bombers made effective attacks on enemy troop concentrations and deployments in the area northwest of Avranches. Torpedo-carrying airplanes damaged in the Seine Bay two merchantmen, totalling 15,000 gross register tons.

In the French hinterland, 60 terrorists were killed.

The V-1 retaliation fire on London was continued by day and night.

In Italy, the enemy resumed his attempts to break through towards Florence. They again collapsed against the unshakeable resistance of our panzer grenadiers and parachute troops, with heavy losses for the enemy. Insignificant local penetrations were sealed off. Fighting, which is still progressing on both sides, is waged with the greatest fiercely.

On the northern slopes of the Carpathians, enemy forces are pushing forward towards the Beskidi Pass road. Counter-attacks are under way. Between the region of the sources of the Dniester and the big Vistula bend, our tank divisions repulsed the Soviets in several sectors and destroyed a large number of enemy tanks. At the big Vistula bend, all enemy attempts to cross the river were frustrated, with the exception of one penetration for which fighting is still

In the successful defense against big Soviet attacks during the last few days, the 3d Germanic SS Panzer Corps, commanded by SS Upper Group Leader and General of the Waffen SS Steiner, with the Germanic Volunteer Divisions SS Nordland and SS Niederland; the 20th Estonian Volunteer Division; the 11th East Prussian Infantry Division; as well as units of the Navy employed on land; formations of Army Artillery and mortars; have particularly distinguished themselves.

In the Gulf of Finland, two Soviet minesweepers and one patrol ship were destroyed by mines. In the same waters, 10 Soviet bombers were downed by patrol vessels of the Navy and by fighters. Battleplane squadrons took part, with telling effect, in the fighting at focal points, and destroyed more than 300 enemy vessels.

North American bombers yesterday attacked Bucharest and the Ploesti area. Eleven enemy airplanes were brought down by German and Rumanian air defense forces.

Under cover of thick clouds, North American bombers carried out terror attacks on the towns of Munich, Mannheim, Ludwigshafen and Frankenthal. In spite of the difficult defense conditions, 15 enemy airplanes were shot down.

The Army, Navy, and the Air Force have sunk during the month of July 25 merchantmen and transport ships totalling 149,000 gross register tons; 20 more transport ships, totalling 110,000 gross register tons. Moreover, four cruisers, 11 destroyers, one frigate, one minesweeper, two patrol ships, and 11 speedboats were sunk. One battleship, four cruisers, 11 destroyers, one torpedo boat, two special landing boats, and several speedboats suffered partly serious damage by bombs, torpedoes, and artillery hits.

The anti-aircraft fire of Naval forces, merchantmen, and the navy artillery shot down 196 enemy airplanes in the period from July 1 to July 31. (Radio Berlin)

German Overseas Station: The Allies have launched major attacks in the sector between Caumont and the western coast of Normandy. Their losses in the sectors of St Lô and Caen have been so heavy that nine divisions of the Patton Army group have been brought over from England. The Americans have attempted, by the bombing of the German lines, followed by infantry attacks, to weaken the German defence, but without success. On the Italian front, the British are carrying out re-grouping movements and bringing up reinforcements in preparation for a large-scale offensive south of Florence. In order to save Pisa from destruction, the German troops have evacuated the historical parts of the city. The Allies claimed that the «Leaning Tower» was being used as a German artillery observation post, but this, as well as other historical monuments, was not in military occupation. The German Chief of Staff, General Guderian, stated that the strategical retreat on the eastern front is the last phase of defensive fighting there, and a preparation for a major offensive. It is reported that the Japanese Government has protested to the American Government at the conduct of American soldiers who entered the apartments of the Japanese Ambassador to the Vatican in violation of international law.

Transocean and DNB: On the eastern front, successful counter-measures are the prelude to the expected offensive. In the area of Przemysl, German panzer divisions are in operation. It is reported from the Finnish front that fighting there has slowed down. On the Italian front, the British continue their major offensive south and southwest of Florence, without making headway. Despite the efforts of London and Algiers propaganda, the population in southern France, with the exception of local terror attacks in some districts, has not responded to exhortations to rise against the

ITALY

New Zealand tank and infantry forces yesterday repulsed renewed German counter-attacks aimed at breaking the tightening 8th Army arc around Florence. On the left flank of the 8th Army forces, troops of an Indian division were reported to have cleared the area south of the Arno River and between the Elsa and Pesa tributaries. On the southeastern approach to Florence, 8th Army forces yesterday consolidated their positions on Monte Scalari, 10 miles from the city, after repelling an enemy counter-attack. East of the Arno, 8th Army forces were reported to have crossed the Figline-Castelfranco road. Italian patriots are helping British forces clear the enemy from the Pratomagno Mountains northwest and north of Arezzo. Patrols which penetrated to the village of L'Apia, six miles northwest of Arezzo, found it unoccupied. Northeast of Arezzo, patrols thrust north of the Arezzo-Anghiari road, and main forces were 2 1/2 miles from Sansepolcro. Along the western stretches of the Arno River, where the 5th Army now holds a 30-mile front, the enemy used flares Saturday night to illuminate the stream and its banks throughout the hours of darkness. Little change was reported from the Adriatic front.

FRANCE

The badly-battered town of Avranches is firmly in Allied hands after bitter fighting, stated a Reuter front-line dispatch last night. American tanks were said to be fighting in the streets of Granville. Another Reuter dispatch stated that American troops no longer hold the towns of Tessy and Percy, around which there is fierce fighting. A large pocket of German resistance near Saint Denis le Gast, seven miles southeast of Countances has been cleaned up, the dispatch added. Heavy fighting continued, according to yesterday's communique, in the areas of Gavray, Percy and Tessy-sur-Vire. In the Caumont sector, the British advance made further progress and high ground east of Saint Martin des Besaches was captured. About 1,000 planes supported the opening of the British attack in Caumont. Fighter-bombers and fighters attacked targets in close support of the ground forces.

Mitava (Jelgava), Latvia, 30 miles southwest of Riga, Mariampole, south of Kaunas; Minsk-Mazowiecki, 23 miles east of Warsaw; by-passed Siedlice, further east, and Lukov, 15 miles south of Lukov, have been captured by the Red Army, it was announced last night. The German radio admitted the loss of Kaunas (Kovno) in southern Lithuania, and added that the Red Army has launched the battle for Warsaw from a perimeter six miles from the Polish capital with heavy fighting near Praga, Warsaw suburb. In the drive toward East Prussia, Russian troops were only eight miles from the border at a point near the town of Augustinevo. In the south, Marshal Koniev's forces have advanced at two points west of Delatyh (entrance to Yablonica) right through the Carpathian passes. Southwest of Lvov, other Soviet troops fought their way across the rivers Strwionz and Dniester and captured the village of Karnalovici, 12 1/2 miles from Drohobycz. North of Shavli, the railway station of Platone, eight miles from Mitava, was captured.

PACIFIC

United States Marines have captured the town of Tinian, on Tinian Island in the Marianas, it was reported yesterday. Enemy resistance to the Marine's advance is increasing, the announcement said, but the Japanese troops have now been shut into an area of about five square miles at the southern tip of the island. Allied ground forces in the Aitape-Wewak areas, in British New Guinea, continue to mop up scattered Japanese parties in the wester sector. Allied aircraft attacked enemy concentrations south of Yakamua and supply lines east of Wewak. Further raids were made on Wolei, Satuawa Island, and Rabaul in New Britain. The coastal sectors of Bougainville, aerodromes in Timor and Ceam, and villages on the east coast of Moroti Island, were also pounded. Activity on Guam yesterday was limited to clearing local pockets of resistance and to patrolling. Allied aircraft have taken off from Orote Peninsula airfield to strafe Japanese small craft in Truk, and bomb Ponape and remaining positions in the Marshal Islands.

CHINA AND BURMA

According to an Associated Press dispatch, the Chinese High Command stated yesterday that the Japanese had broken into Hengyang proper, and that brisk fighting was in progress both inside the city and in its outskirts. Fighter and fighter-bomber attacks against Japanese road and river transport in Hunan Province were reported in yesterday's communique. The Southeast Asia Command communique yesterday announced that Allied troops captured their objective in the southern sector of Myitkyina. On the Tiddim road, Indian troops are established at Churachandpur, 40 miles south of Imphal.

AIR

More than 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF attacked military objectives in the Munich area and other points in central Germany yesterday, it was announced at American Air Force headquarters. While American bombers were carrying out the Munich operation, other Allied tactical air units bombed fuel dumps and road transport behind the Normandy battle zone. From 1,000 Allied planes who struck at the Caumont area yesterday, only one heavy and one medium bomber failed to return. Seven German planes were shot down yesterday in a fierce air battle, in which a RAF Polish Mustang Squadron was outnumbered three to one, stated a British Air Ministry communique today. Lancaster and Halifax heavy bombers of the RAF bombed three exceptionally strong points in the German defense lines between Caumont and Villers Bocage, it

RED ARMY CAPTURES MITAVA, MARIAMPOLE, SIEDLICE, MINSK-MAZOWIECKI, AND LUKOV

MOSCOW, July 31 — Mitava (Jelgava), Latvia, 30 miles southwest of Riga; Mariampole, south of Kaunas; Minsk-Mazowiecki, 23 miles east of Warsaw; by-passed Siedlice, further east, and Lukov, 15 miles south of Siedlice, have been captured by the Red Army in its great drive westward, it was announced tonight in three orders of the day by Marshal Joseph Stalin.

While the speeding Red Armies continued their unbroken advance, the German radio admitted the loss of by-passed Kaunas (Kovno), in southern Lithuania, and added that the Red Army has launched the battle for borderland country east of the Massurian Lakes. Soviet units fought their way to within 34 miles of the East Prussian frontier town of Eydtkuhnen.

The supplement to Sunday's Soviet communique stated that Soviet troops reached a point eight miles south of Kovno. It said also that southwest of Lvov, the Russians fought their way across the rivers Strwionz and Dniester and captured the village of Karnalowici, 12 1/2 miles from Drohobycz.

Regarding the fighting northwest and north of Shavli, the supplement said that the railway station of Platone, eight miles from Mitava, was captured. Eighteen tanks, an armored train, and 120 lorries were destroyed. Three railway trains were among the booty captured.

North and south of Alytus, one Soviet formation alone knocked out 45 German tanks, 33 guns, and 160 lorries, and the booty included 20 tanks, 11 self-propelled guns, and a quantity of rolling stock.

West of Brest-Litovsk, the Germans were hastily bringing up reserves and sending them straight into battle. In one sector, units of the SS Goering Tank Division launched a desperate counter-attack but were forced to retreat, abandoning 29 disabled tanks and about 500 dead soldiers.

Reports this morning of the fighting in the outskirts of Warsaw stated that the Germans were bringing up all the men they could from the rear to strengthen the garrison. (Reuter)

ADVANCE DUE TO TRANSPORT SYSTEM

MOSCOW, July 31 — In a dispatch to the London DAILY EXPRESS, Alaric Jacobs gave some of the reasons for the exceptional speed of the Red Army's advance. He wrote:

"Russian tanks are kept supplied with petrol by feeder dumps sent forward by rail. Petrol is also sent forward by transport aircraft, which dump it by parachute to tanks operating in the German rear. The Red Army is no longer short of locomotives or of rolling stock. Repair to tracks and trains are carried out with great speed.

"Vast numbers of trucks are available, both from the Allies under Lend-Lease, and from Russian workshops. Petrol is abundant. And there are also thousands of horse-drawn vehicles." (BBC)

U. S. TROOPS IN AVRANCHES AND GRANVILLE

SHAEF, July 31 — American tanks were tonight fighting in the streets of Avranches and Granville, stated a Reuter correspondent.

Gavray and Torigny were surrounded in a general advance along the middle and eastern sectors of the American front.

At the same time the Germans also acknowledged they were throwing in great numbers of reserves as the Soviet forces moved toward East Prussia. At one point near the town of Augustinevo, the Russians were only eight miles from the East Prussian border.

Alexander Werth, in a dispatch to the Allied Newspapers in London, said the Russian offensive is continuing on such an immense scale that it is almost impossible to say which sector of the front is the most important, adding:

"Two things are clear: The battle for Warsaw is in full swing, and the battle for East Prussia has begun... One of the most remarkable features of the swift Russian advance is that with the Germans retreating in the greatest disorder, they have been unable to evacuate or deport the bulk of the population in either Lithuania or Poland, and the destruction of towns and villages is relatively small."

In the south, Marshal Koniev's forces have advanced at two points west of Delatyn (entrance to Yablonica) right up through the Carpathian passes, it was admitted by the German Forces radio.

General Chernyakhovsky's cavalry and tanks struck deep into the Suwalki triangle, 21 miles from the East Prussian border and 9 1/2 miles from Suwalki itself, in the eight miles from Mitava, was captured. Eighteen tanks, an armored train, and 120 lorries were destroyed. Three railway trains were among the booty captured.

This American drive through rapidly-weakening German defenses has broken another possible defense line by reaching the estuary of the River See, and thus outflanking the German positions.

The total number of prisoners captured since the breakthrough is now about 10,500, including an additional 4,600 brought in yesterday.

According to an Associated Press report, about six German divisions, totalling perhaps 60,000 men or more, have been virtually knocked out of existence in the course of the latest American offensive.

The Germans are also reported to have withdrawn south of Caumont to St. Martin des Besaces, six miles to the southwest on Highway 175 — the main road from Caen across the base of the Cotentin Peninsula.

A communique this morning stated that an Allied armored column moving south from Brehal is within three miles of Granville, but with the capture of Avranches, Granville has lost all tactical importance.

If Rommel could have held Avranches, or made a stand just south of it, he might have established a line running along the high ground through Villedieu and Percy to Tessy. By taking Avranches, the Allies have cut off the coastal anchor of this line, and the Germans now run the risk of having their flank turned.

Avranches is at the juncture of the Brest and Cherbourg Peninsulas. Once past there, the Allies will be out of the restricted confines of the Cherbourg Peninsula, and the wide spaces of northwest France will lie before them. Through Avranches run the main railway line from Brittany to the north, and at least six roads, fanning out in all directions. The town has about 7,000 inhabitants, and stands on a hill dominating the estuary of the river See.

Heavy fighting continued, according to this morning's communique, in the areas of Gavray, Percy, and Tessy-sur-Vire.

British Advance Continues

In the Caumont sector, the British advance made further progress and the high ground east of Saint Martin des Besaches was captured. The enemy attack in the Noyers area was beaten off yesterday evening after hard fighting.

Doon Campbell of Reuter cabled last night that the momentum of the British advance south of Caumont had not slackened all day, and showed no signs of slackening. The Germans were being pushed back despite all their efforts to hold on. East of Caumont, said Campbell, the advance was slower but satisfactory.

General Montgomery yesterday expressed very great satisfaction with the progress of the battle on the Allied front. He said the British attack in the Caumont sector was made with great energy and determination, and added that operations were proceeding according to plan.

Prisoners taken by the British in the first few hours of their attack were relieved to be out of the war. One of them mumbled gloomily: « There's no future in it. There is not much use going on now, anyway: if we fire one round of artillery, we get 100 back: if we fire one mortar shell, we get 100 back. What can you do against odds like that? »

Many of the prisoners taken by the Americans surrendered voluntarily because, they said, their German officers abandoned them with plenty of ammunition, but no food.

Prisoners in the double thrust are estimated at about 10,000, including 2,000 taken yesterday. Several pockets of enemy resistance were being steadily eliminated by following troops. The Germans trapped behind the American lines made at least three unsuccessful efforts to break out yesterday in the areas of Lengronne and St. Denis le Gast. More than 30 enemy tanks were knocked out in the course burned out and smashed wreckage of German transport, after the devastating attacks by British and American planes.

About 1,000 planes supported the opening of the British attack in Caumont. Weather was unfavourable, but the total sorties over the whole battlefront for the day exceeded 2,500.

Lancaster and Halifax heavy bombers of the RAF bombed three exceptionally strong points in the German defense lines between Caumont and Villers Bocage, the Air Ministry reported. As the British line was only a few thousand meters away, great care had to be taken on the mission and bombers flew at less than 1,000 meters from the ground. Some of the crews who had their aircraft damaged said it was from the bursting of their own bombs, and not from German fire.

Fighter-bombers and fighters attacked targets in close support of the ground forces also. Road transport and rail targets in the region of Blois and Orleans were also hit. Six enemy aircraft were destroyed, and eight Allied aircraft are missing. (Reuter - OWI)

MOOREHEAD WATCHES BRITISH ADVANCE

LONDON, July 31 — Telegraphing from Caumont of the new British attack southward from there, Alan Moorehead of the London DAILY EXPRESS says that it was only yesterday morning that General Dempsey saw his chance.

The Americans were making their great breakthrough and beginning to draw off some of the toughest Germans from Caumont. Dempsey, said Moorehead, had to move with speed. In secrecy, and with the greatest organization of roads, he whipped his divisions across to the center. Advance units going ahead signposted the way and marked fields into which hundreds of units deployed.

The attack was ordered for this morning, whether the weather was suitable for bombers or not. It was fairly suitable, however.

« Whether the Germans expected this new blow or not, » Moorehead went on, « does not matter. Much depends upon what is happening. For the first time, the Allies are on the inside looking out. The Germans always had that advantage before in nearly every battle from Africa to Europe. We have been running round the outside looking for weak spots, while the Germans sat right in the center and conserved their strength. Now, it is Montgomery who can play about with his divisions, switching from one side of the bridgehead to the other. The Germans keep racing round outside, and it is not easy to move in the daytime when all parts of Normandy swarm with Allied fighter-bombers.

« Here, in Caumont, we have a wonderful view. On our side of the valley there is a tremendous commotion of unseen guns barking out of woods and hedges. Over on the German side you can practically trace the front line, where the infantry are advancing, by a long line of burning houses and barns and shell smoke that keeps rising across the horizon.

« That big blue line of hills ahead they call "the Pincon feature." It is a 3,000 foot high hump of ground that straggles away down to the Atlantic, and dominates all the southern approaches to the bridgehead. Whoever sits on Pincon looks across the bridgehead to the sea and southward into the country they call "Swiss Normandy." Not unnaturally, the Germans want to hold that line of hills.

« Clearly, the enemy was caught a bit off balance today, mostly because he had to draw off troops to meet the Americans. Tonight, probably, he will send in reinforcements to plug this new gap, and all these lower slopes of Pincon that I can see, with their roofless villages, are going to be an arena of savage battle.

« It is a fearful country for tanks. We can see them edging up to the front-line smoke across the open fields. » coastal anchor of this line, and the Germans now run the risk of having their flank turned.

Avranches is at the juncture of the Brest and Cherbourg Peninsulas. Once past there, the Allies will be out of the restricted confines of the Cherbourg Peninsula, and the wide spaces of northwest France will lie before them. Through Avranches run the main railway line from Brittany to the north, and at least six roads, fanning out in all directions. The town has about 7,000 inhabitants, and stands on a hill dominating the estuary of the river See.

Heavy fighting continued, according to this morning's communique, in the areas of Gavray, Percy, and Tessy-sur-Vire.

British Advance Continues

In the Caumont sector, the British advance made further progress and the high ground east of Saint Martin des Besaches was captured. The enemy attack in the Noyers area was beaten off yesterday evening after hard fighting.

Doon Campbell of Reuter cabled last night that the momentum of the British advance south of Caumont had not slackened all day, and showed no signs of slackening. The Germans were being pushed back despite all their efforts to hold on. East of Caumont, said Campbell, the advance was slower but satisfactory.

More than 30 enemy tanks were knocked out in the course of these counter-attacks.

American troops also repulsed a German counter-attack in the area of Tessy-sur-Vire, which was staged by elements of the German 2nd Panzer Division. An enemy counter-attack in the Noyers area was also beaten back yesterday evening after heavy fighting.

William Stringer, Reuter correspondent with the Americans, said that the American attack was carried out by six divisions, two of them armored. It may be recalled, said Stringer, that the German radio claimed that about 24 United States divisions — 12 tank and 12 infantry — were making the attack.

A despatch from an American correspondent said that, although the British attack did not compare in scale or force with the American assault further west, it was important because it was protecting the long flank which the Americans created in their drive down the west coast.

Correspondents have been estimating the German casualties. In addition to two panzer divisions which have been practically wiped out, the 17th SS, the 5th Parachute, the 353rd Infantry, the 77th Infantry and the 244rd Infantry divisions have been pretty well destroyed.

The Germans south of the Americans were abandoning large amounts of equipment as they retreated, including, in one instance, four completely undamaged tanks. The roads in the path of the American advance were littered with the

1,200 HEAVY BOMBERS HIT MUNICH AREA

LONDON, July 31 — More than 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF attacked military objectives in the Munich area and other points in central Germany today, it was announced at American Air Force headquarters.

Airfields in France also received attention.

The bombers were escorted by strong forces of fighters.

This attack on Munich was the city's sixth this month by an air armada of over 1,000 planes. Munich has five trunk railways, one through the Brenner Pass into Italy, and aircraft and chemical works used in the manufacture of flying bombs.

While American bombers were carrying out the Munich operation, other Allied tactical air units bombed fuel dumps and road transport behind the Normandy battle zone. From 1,000 Allied planes who struck at the Caumont area yesterday, only one heavy and one medium bomber failed to return.

Seven German planes were shot down yesterday in a fierce air battle, in which a RAF Polish Mustang squadron was outnumbered three to one, stated a British Air Ministry communique today. The battle was fought within sight of the Norwegian coast. More than 500 miles from their base, the Poles encountered 15 to 22 German planes off Norway's southwest [illegible], and, despite the odds against them, shot down seven enemy aircraft without loss to themselves.

Mitchell bombers of the RAF 2nd Tactical Air Force attacked a fuel dump north of Argentan yesterday afternoon. Allied reconnaissance patrols were flown as far eastward as Amiens, Paris, and Chartres.

Early yesterday morning, bombers attacked several small groups of German shipping between Dieppe and Ostend. Darkness made it impossible to assess the results, but several vessels appear to have been hit. No planes were lost. (Reuter)

80 GERMANS SURRENDER TO CAPTURED SOLDIER

NORMANDY, July 31 — The story of a captured U. S. private in Normandy, who in turn took 80 Germans prisoner, was told in a dispatch from an AP correspondent in France today.

The private was taken by a German patrol at St. Denis le Gast, and transported north towards Roncey, in which area a column of the 17th SS Division was planning to break through the ring of armor surrounding them and flee south.

The private said: « There was a German officer standing in the road giving directions to the column. He had red tabs, and was a general of some kind, but was apparently very drunk. Then 9th USAAF fighters and fighter-bombers attacked. They raced up and down the column with cannon blazing and bombs falling until the whole area was just a tangle of bodies and wrecked vehicles. After they moved off, there was a great quiet. But then about 80 Germans picked themselves up from here and there and came over and asked me to take them prisoner. They had had enough. » (AP)

SPERRLE HEADS NAZI AIR FORCE IN FRANCE

LONDON, July 31 — A 100 per cent Nazi and the terror of his subordinates, Field Marshal Hugo Sperrle, has been given command of the German Air Force in northern France, the Low Countries, and northwest Germany, Reuter reported today.

Sperrle was directly responsible for the insensate saturation bombing of Rotterdam in 1940, and the blood of thousands of Dutch civilians is on his head.

He commanded the German air fleet during the Spanish Civil War, and was air commander during the London blitz in 1940. (Reuter)

COUNTER-ATTACKS FROM FLORENCE BEATEN BACK

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 31 — Heavy guns and fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force backed up New Zealand tank and infantry forces yesterday to throw back with heavy losses renewed German counter-attacks aimed at breaking the tightening 8th Army arc around Florence.

The German attacks, carried out by big Tiger tanks and motorized infantry, slashed savagely into New Zealand positions southwest of Florence, and penetrated the village of San Michele, seven miles from the city, Saturday night. At daylight yesterday, fighter-bombers roared over the Chianti Hills to subject the German columns to a heavy pounding, and British and New Zealand guns opened up with a decimating barrage. Although the enemy attacks were renewed throughout the day, the main spearhead of the German forces withdrew to its hill positions north of San Michele, after suffering heavy losses.

The overwhelming Allied air superiority was also called on to strike at the German forces concentrated at Impruneta, seven miles south of Florence, and in the hills midway between the main Poggibonsi-Florence road and the secondary route through Strada in Chianti. Some enemy outposts east of Highway 2, manned by paratroopers of the 4th German Parachute Division, were captured by 8th Army forces, including one in the village of Santa Lucia, 7 1/2 miles south of Florence. Both along the Greve River Valley and south of Strada, 8th Army positions remained unchanged.

On the left flank of the 8th Army forces, troops of an Indian division were reported to have cleared the area south of the Arno River and between its two southern tributaries, the Elsa and the Pesa, with the exception of a « few small pockets of resistance. » Enemy forces were said to be resisting strongly, although 8th Army troops were well established across the railroad line running along the Arno Valley from Empoli, just east of the Elsa River, to the vicinity of Montelupo, just east of the Pesa River. The enemy had made numerous efforts to entrench themselves on this railroad embankment.

«Now he has delivered a third blow, in the center, where once again British troops have taken the offensive. Substantial progress is reported, and the prospects are all the more encouraging because the positions against which it was directed are already threatened by the advance of the Americans on their western flank. There are indications that Rommel is about to abandon the little he holds of the Cotentin Peninsula.

«Generally speaking indeed, the Americans have had the worst of the ground since the outset of the campaign. During a great part of the period they have been fighting amid marshes and inundation. Often the only alternative to advancing along roads like causeways, through water and swept by concentrated hostile fire, was to wade. They have shown great determination and tactical skill, which was all the more remarkable since the majority of their formations went into this campaign without previous experience of active operations.

«On the other hand, the greatest concentration on the German side, especially in armored forces, has faced the British south and southeast of Caen, this being from the point of view of hostile strategy a vulnerable flank.

«The object of the enemy's concentrations of some of his best troops in Normandy does not require much explanation. His whole Eastern Front down to the Carpathians is in the process of dissolution, and may collapse completely almost any moment. In Italy, his situation is extremely unfavorable, and holds out no hope of improvement. A break in the Normandy front would turn to defeat and catastrophe.

Edges of Empoli

There was no specific information in the official reports available here about Empoli itself, although since its capture has not been announced, it may be presumed that Allied troops still are only in the edges of this important road and rail town.

On the southeastern approach to Florence, 8th Army forces yesterday consolidated their positions on Monte Scalari, 10 miles from the city, after repelling an enemy counter-attack.

East of the Arno, 8th Army forces were reported to have crossed the Figline-Castelfranco road, and to have established close contact with enemy troops in this sector. Tanks were being employed to deliver a heavy fire on German forces, and in one position the defenders hoisted a white flag to surrender.

Italian patriots are helping British forces clear the enemy from the Pratomagno Mountains northwest and north of Arezzo. Patrols which penetrated to the village of L'Apia, six miles northwest of Arezzo, found it unoccupied. Northeast of Arezzo, patrols thrust north of the Arezzo-Anghiari road, and in advances from the latter Tiber River town main forces were 2 1/2 miles from Sansepolcro, important road center at the northeastern corner of the Val Tiburin.

Along the western stretches of the Arno River, where the 5th Army now holds a 30-mile front, the enemy used flares Saturday night to illuminate the stream and the bank throughout the hours of darkness. Official reports stated that the enemy showed «increased sensitivity» to patrol action, as if fearful of an attempted crossing of the water barrier.

Little change was reported from the Adriatic front. More than 900 prisoners have been taken, and at least 800 enemy killed in action on this sector since July 17, it was announced today.

Oil Installations Hit

Up to 500 escorted heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF today attacked five oil installations at Bucharest and Ploesti, to complete a record month of operations from Italian bases.

The targets were the Prahova oil refinery and the Morgasala fuel depot at Bucharest, the Creitul Minier refinery, the Targeviste tank farm, and a third, unidentified target covered by a smoke screen at Ploesti.

None of the formations encountered any enemy fighters, but escorts engaged German interceptor planes over Bucharest to score several victories.

Aerial Bombs

Enemy fighters used aerial bombs to attack 15th AAF Liberators which carried out a heavy assault on one of Hungary's most important oilfields yesterday.

The unusual interceptor tactic, which has been mainly employed in German attempts to stave off attacks on the great industrial centers of the Rhineland, failed to prevent bombers' causing several explosions and heavy fires in the target area, at Lipse Budafapuszea, in southern Hungary.

Tactical Air Force planes yesterday concentrated on northwestern Italy, striking at least seven rail and road bridges, especially in the coastal stretch between Genoa, Savona, and Alessandria. French Marauders attacked the Castale Monferrato rail bridge. One span in the Po Valley was hit, at Ferrara.

Fighter-bombers put 23 locomotives out of action in strafing attacks in the Zagreb, Yugoslavia, area.

RAF heavy and medium bombers carried out mining operations along the Danube in night missions. The operations were described as 100 per cent successful. The last mining by air about two months ago closed the river for some weeks. (PRO)

U. S. MARINES CAPTURE TINIAN

PEARL HARBOR, July 31 — United States Marines have captured the town of Tinian, on Tinian Island in the Marianas, stated Admiral Nimitz's communique today. Enemy resistance is increasing as the Marines advance, but the Japanese troops have now been shut into an area of about five square miles at the southern tip of the island.

General MacArthur's communique today reported that ground forces in the Aitape and Wewak areas, in British New Guinea, continue to mop up scattered Japanese parties in the western sector. An additional 1,385 Japanese dead were found.

Allied aircraft attacked enemy concentrations south of Yakamua and supply lines east of Wewak. Further raids were made on Woleai Satuawa Island (160 miles southeast of Truk), and Rabaul in New Britain. The coastal sectors of Bougainville, aerodromes in Timor and Ceam, and villages on the east coast of Moroti Island were also pounded.

A Pacific Fleet announcement stated that activity on Guam yesterday was limited to clearing local pockets of resistance and to patrolling. Enemy dead counted on Guam so far number 3,543, while 44 have been taken prisoner. American casualties on Guam, up to Saturday number 958 killed, 4,739 wounded, and 290 missing.

Allied ships are now using Apra harbor, on the west coast of Guam, the site of a former American naval base. Allied aircraft have taken off from Orote Peninsula airfield, strafed Japanese small craft in Truk, and bombed Ponape and remaining positions in the Marshal Islands. (PWB)

BITTER FIGHTING AT HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 31 — The Chinese communique last night reported grim fighting at Hengyang, the important Hunan city on the Kenkow-Canton railway, which the Chinese have been defending against the Japanese attacks for 35 days. This defence has been made possible by transport planes feeding the Chinese forces. On July 26, 22 tons of ammunition and supplies were dropped to them.

General Stilwell's communique today reported successful fighter and bomber attacks against Japanese road and river transport in Hunan Province. Large fires were started among Japanese installations near Leiyang, and incendiaries started fires along the entire length of island opposite Changsha.

In all operations, only one Allied aircraft was lost. Five enemy fighters were destroyed and six were damaged.

The Southeast Asia Command communique today stated that Allied troops, in an advance of 500 yards, captured their objective in the southern sector of Myitkyina. In the southeast, other Chinese units south of the railway gained 250 yards. Other Chinese troops fighting inside Tengchung, the key to the completion of the Ledo-Burma road, were driving ahead to contact General Stilwell's forces in the Myitkyina area.

BEST NAZI TROOPS LEAVE YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, July 31 — Germany has withdrawn all first-line troops from Yugoslavia, it was reported by Associated Press yesterday.

Out of 17 divisions in the country on July 1, only 10 now remain, and all but one of these are inferior troops. Only one division is composed of Germans, the others being made up of Poles, Czechs, Silesians, and Sudeten Germans.

The force now opposing Marshal Tito totals less than 350,000 men, even on a liberal estimate.

A Pacific Fleet announcement stated that activity on Guam yesterday was limited to clearing local pockets of resistance and to patrolling. Enemy dead counted on Guam so far number 3,643, while 44 have been taken prisoner. American casualties on Guam, up to Saturday number 958 killed, 4,739 wounded, and 290 missing.

Allied ships are now using Apra harbor, on the west coast of Guam, the site of a former American naval base. Allied aircraft have taken off from Orote Peninsula airfield, strafed Japanese small craft in Truk, and bombed Ponape and remaining positions in the Marshal Islands. (PWB)

BITTER FIGHTING AT HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 31 — The Chinese communique last night reported grim fighting at Hengyang, the important Hunan city on the Kenkow-Canton railway, which the Chinese have been defending against the Japanese attacks for 35 days. This defence has been made possible by transport planes feeding the Chinese forces. On July 26, 22 tons of ammunition and supplies were dropped to them.

General Stilwell's communique today reported successful fighter and bomber attacks against Japanese road and river transport in Hunan Province. Large fires were started among Japanese installations near Leiyang, and incendiaries started fires along the entire length of island opposite Changsha.

In all operations, only one Allied aircraft was lost. Five enemy fighters were destroyed and six were damaged.

The Southeast Asia Command communique today stated that Allied troops, in an advance of 500 yards, captured their objective in the southern sector of Myitkyina. In the southeast, other Chinese units south of the railway gained 250 yards. Other Chinese troops fighting inside Tengchung, the key to the completion of the Ledo-Burma road, were driving ahead to contact General Stilwell's forces in the Myitkyina area.

On the Tiddim road, Indian troops are established at Churachandpur, 40 miles south of Imphal. (Reuter)

SUPER-FORTRESS RAID ON ANSHAN DESCRIBED

NEW YORK, July 31 — Clyde Farnsworth, Associated Press correspondent, in a dispatch from « Aboard the Super-Fortress Monsoon over Japanese-occupied China, » described Friday's Super-Fortress attack on Anshan in Manchuria.

Farnsworth said:

« We 12 aboard the Monsoon have just witnessed a masterpiece of destruction, and 11 of us had a hand in it.

« We saw a great part of Japans facilities for manufacture of iron and steel and related production crumble in a holocaust of smoke in the first daylight precision test of the B-29 Super-Fortresses.

« Super-Fortresses by the dozen passed the test with distinction at Anshan on the Mukden railway, 53 miles southwest of Mukden itself. It was an incident that the Japanese will long remember.

« For 45 endless seconds, this particular B-29 was held on the bombing run. Below it looked like Hell had sprung its hinges.

« What the Monsoon did was done over and over again by other Super-Fortresses which attacked after us. There was nothing the Japanese could do to prevent it. We saw fighters try to reach our high altitude, and only turn away under our fire. Anti-aircraft fire was mostly low and ineffectual.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

« For five minutes before the Monsoon started her solo run B-29's singly and in formation had been bombing the sprawling factory district. Two ruddy orange fires already burned there, one marking a bull's-eye hit.

« Anshan was under bombing for about an hour. The last pilots over the target reported flames reaching 6,000 feet, and smoke to 26,000 feet visible as far as 160 miles. » (OWI)

NO U-BOAT SINKINGS IN JULY

LONDON, July 31 — Allied convoys are sailing the seas without enemy opposition, said the London DAILY HERALD correspondent, A. J. McWhinnie, today, adding that he found no evidence of convoyed vessels' being sunk by U-boats during the whole month of July.

McWhinnie continued: « They have failed. The Luftwaffe and its radio-controlled gliders have failed. The German surface navy has been whittled down to impotence. There is nothing to stop Allied shipping from steaming where they will and when they please. » (PWB)

PURGE TRIALS TO BEGIN IN AUGUST

ROME, July 31 — The first of a number of important trials under the new Italian law for sanctions against Fascism will open in Rome before the end of August, Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for the Application of Sanctions against Fascism, announced today.

The Commissioner, out of deference to the High Court now being created to hear these important cases, refused to name the person who will be tried first. He did mention however, a number of persons who are scheduled to go on trial before long. They include Caruso, former police chief of Rome; Frignani, director of the Bank of Naples; Lauro, Italian shipbuilding king who supplied the Japanese with a number of ships; Soprano, former Prefect of Naples, who ordered Neapolitan youths to Germany as members of a labor draft; and Cesare Rossi, intimate of Mussolini at the time of the murder of Matteotti.

Count Sforza also announced that the alleged murderer of Don Minzoni, first priest to be martyred by Fascism back in 1922, has been found and will be brought to trial shortly.

Chief Justice Casati, of the highest Italian tribunal will serve as president of the new High Court For Sanctions Against Fascism. The other seven members will be named shortly.

The four vice-commissioners to direct varous phases of the work are Mario Berlinguer, Mario Scoccimarro, Mario Cingolani, and Giuseppe Stangoni.

In an interview with the foreign press, Count Sforza also revealed that the jury system is being reintroduced in Italy in connection with the purge trials. These juries will consist of five men, who will act jointly with the Courts in deciding upon findings of fact and punishment to be meted out to the guilty.

Regarding the confiscation of illicit gains under Fascism, Count Sforza said that all high-ranking office holders since 1922 will be required to prove that they came by any personal enrichment honestly; otherwise, their properties will be taken over by the State.

The Commissioner reiterated that the application will be most severe upon those who enjoyed the greatest favors and rewards under Fascism, while the « little fellows » who merely fell for the Fascist propaganda may expect much more leniency. (UNN)

LECCE ACTIVE IN BEHALF OF GRANARIES

LECCE, July 31 — Provincial authorities, through surveillance of the public grain thrashing centers and road patrols, have been able to recover 76 quintals of wheat which would otherwise have been lost to the Granaries of the People.

Five flour mills found to be operating clandestinely have been taken over by public authorities and are now being operated by their respective local communes.

RECONSTRUCTION OF GREVE GOING AHEAD

GREVE, July 31 — Liberated Greve is rapidly returning to life, but it will be a long time before it flourishes as it did before. A UNN correspondent who visited the town said that the Germans had not spared it.

Normally, the population of Greve was 3,000, but when the AMG officials arrived there they found only 100 inhabitants. Those who had not been driven into forced labor service and taken away by the enemy had fled to the hills. Now they are drifting back to their homes.

Reconstruction of the town is proceeding without interruption. The water supply has been restored, and all public services are again functioning. The AMG official stated that

JUNKERS ARE HITLER'S SCAPEGOATS

NEW YORK, July 31 — Hitler is using the Junkers as scapegoats for Germany's defeat in this war in the same way as he blamed the Jews for her defeat in the last, said Samuel Grafton of the New York POST in a commentary, Saturday.

« Nazi propoganda is hammering the point that Junker generals deliberately failed to bring up sufficient reserves to halt the Russian drive, » he said, adding that the reserves had not been brought up because they did not exist. « Germany hasn't any strategic reserves in the ordinary military sense of the term. »

Hitler argued that the Junker revolt was responsible for the defeat in the East, whereas it was obvious that the defeat in the East was responsible for the Junker revolt. (PWB)

Reconstruction of the town is proceeding without interruption. The water supply has been restored, and all public services are again functioning. The AMG official stated that there was sufficient food, and the returning population had all that was necessary for their welfare.

The worst problem facing the AMG authorities was the restoration of the hospital, which had been almost completely destroyed and ransacked. Allied officials found medicines spilled over the floor, medical instruments stolen, and all essential equipment wrecked. X-ray apparatus was damaged beyond repair.

The Germains had made a good job of looting and pillaging. They went through buildings and houses and not one article of value escaped them.

The correspondent described a German atrocity which took place in a small village just outside Greve. All civilians from one farm settlement were taken from their homes and machine-gunned. British patrols found the bodies in a wood. They had been manhandled and there was evidence of torture. (UNN)

ROME BREAD REGULATIONS CHANGED

ROME, July 31 — The Rome Region Allied Military Government tonight issued important instructions regarding bread baked in Rome. Under the heading « Notice To Bakers », the communication read:

Prior to this authorization, the proportion of flour to bread locally was 100 grams of flour to 125 grams of bread. (AMG)

SLAYER APPEALS FOR REVIEW OF SENTENCE

ROME, July 31 — The defense in the case of Rosario Bentivegna, a youthful Patriot who was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment for the slaying of a Finance Guard on the day the Allies entered Rome, last Saturday filed a petition for review.

The trial was held in an Allied Military Government general court, but the penalty was assessed under Italian law. The petition for review was placed before the chief legal officer of the Rome Region, Allied Military Government, who in turn will submit it to the chief legal officer of the Allied Control Commission. Final decision, based on recommendations of the chief legal officer, will rest with the Chief Commissioner of the ACC. (UNN)

U. S. SUBMARINE PROGRAM CUT

WASHINGTON, July 31 — Loss of fewer submarines than expected, and the need for at least eight other types of ships or weapons, are two of the reasons why there has been a reduction in the submarine program, it was announced by the U. S. Navy Department today.

The announcement added that the total naval program will continue to increase in size until the first quarter of 1945.

The Navy said that these war supplies are aircraft carriers and cruisers; new types of assault ships; tankers; bombardment ammunition; rockets for firing from both planes and ships; 40 millimeter guns; machines for advanced bases; and high octane gasoline.

In reporting that it needs more aircraft carriers and cruisers, the Department said the Navy is not short of these ships, but needs every one that can be turned out this year and next.

Production schedules for bombardment ammunition have been increased more than 3,000 per cent since 1942, the announcement said, adding that ships had fired more than 41,000 tons of shells into Japanese and German shore fortifications alone.

It is impossible to get too many rockets, the Navy declared. The Navy now procures about 100 million dollars worth of ammunition a month, and when the rocket program reaches its peak, this figure will be doubled.

The air arm needs high octane gasoline, because while production has been good, consumption has been enormous.

Regarding tankers, the announcement said that the farther west the war moves, the greater the strain on our shipping. Our planes flying from Saipan's airstrips and our warships in Saipan Harbor are 1,200 miles farther from our shores than our planes and our ships at Kwajalein in the Marshall Islands — 1,200 miles over which gasoline and fuel oil must be hauled. ALLIES FIGHT FOR SMALL NATIONS, SAYS DANE

WASHINGTON, July 31 — «We know ours is a small country. We also know the outcome of this war can now be predicted with bomblike accuracy. It is also a major victory for Denmark, which we do not owe to ourselves, but to the major powers, whose fight is also a fight on behalf of the small nations,» stated Tomas Doessing, the Danish Freedom Council's representative in Russia, and Chairman in London, in an article in FRIT DANMARK. He has only recently escaped from Denmark.

From the early 1930's he said, Danish democrats protested relentlessly against Nazi horrors, «since Nazism is the denial of every form of political and cultural democracy.» After the German invasion of Denmark, every Dane had personally to take a stand. They had shown that it was possible for a disarmed country to arise in resistance against an armed force. There was no doubt that the great Danish people's blow would be remembered when Denmark's national status was defined. (PWB)

Fires seen burning on the French side of these border districts were not only from burning houses, but also from forest fires stated to have been caused by Germans on the pretext that they were laying out shooting ranges.

The statement added that the last time the British Foreign Secretary spoke about Spain in the Commons was on July 5. Then Mr. Eden said, in reply to a question, that the British Ambassador had been instructed to renew British protests regarding the presence of German agents in Tangier. ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 31 — Today's communique:

LAND: To the west of Florence, troops of an Indian division of the 8th Army have cleared the area between the Pesa and Elsa rivers, south of the Arno, except for a few small pockets of enemy resistance. Eighth Army troops southwest of Florence have made small but important gains in very heavy fighting.

In the 5th Army sector and the remainder of the 8th Army front, activity is confined to very active patrolling and artillery duels.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked military objectives in Hungary and Yugoslavia. [illegible] aircraft factory and airdrome near

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 31 — Tonight's communique:

Allied troops in the western sectors have entered the town of Granville and are mopping up the whole area between Avranches, Granville, and Brehal.

Other pockets of resistance are being cleared and heavy fighting continues northwest of Tessy and in the Percy area. The enemy has been driven from the ground immediately south of Gavray and Allied troops have also advanced on each side of Torigny-sur-Vire.

In the Caumont area, Allied progress continued, and we have taken Saint German de Ectot, Cahagny, and Saint Martin des Besaces.

Hill 309, east of Saint Mairt, remains in our hands in spite of several enemy counter-attacks.

Rail targets south of the battle area were attacked by escorted medium and light bombers. Rail bridges at Forges Chartres, south of Domfront and across the Loire, south of Tours, were bombed with good results. Elsewhere poor visibility prevented immediate assessment of results. Fighter-bombers were active in close support of our ground troops. Two airfields in northern France were attacked by small formations of heavy bombers shortly after noon.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 31 — Monday night's Soviet communique:

During July 31, west and northwest of Pskov, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied over 80 populated localities, including Viski, Ratva, Soselka, Cheremnovo, Turkolo, Naumovo, and the railway stations of Katuge, Maluga, and Tlia.

Northwest and west of Dvinsk, our troops in the course of their successful offensive occupied with fighting over 300 populated localities, including Dunava, Bebrene, Kaudabruna, Lashu, Yeglaine, Bulanai, Alexandravele, Tradesai, Rugelai, Bareschnai, Uveine, and the railway stations of Yeglaine, Moretai, Kobelai, and Vingvelai.

Troops of the 1st Pre-Baltic Front, as a result of an impetuous maneuver of our tank and infantry units, captured the town of Jelgava (Mitava), principal communication center connecting the Baltic region with East Prussia.

West and southwest of Ukmerge, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied over 200 populated localities, including Doine, Bubli, Slipi, Zhegovichi, Kresagola, Zheniani, Lepelishki, Khlebanishki, Pokalnishki, Gotlevo, Velveri, and the railway stations of Lukshui, Mavrutse, and Kalemonai. Our troops have broken into the town of Kaunas (Kevno), where they engaged the enemy in street fighting.

Troops of the 3rd White Russian Front, developing their successful offensive, captured the town of Mariampol, district center of the Lithuanian S.S.R., the railway junction of Kozlova Ruda, and also occupied with fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Pelvishki, Subruse, Mikhalin, Ludvinov, Krasna, Shostakov, Ogarine, Neravi, Seine, and the railway stations of Yure, Bogata, Pelvishki, Mariampol, Krasna, and Shostakov.

West and southwest of Grodno, our troops, advancing with fighting, occupied over 100 populated localities, including Podobrovo, Yazevo, Shtuben, Sukhovolye, Khodorushka, Krukovschizna, Miloshke, and the railway station of Taino.

Troops of the 1st White Russian Front, after stubborn fighting, captured by storm the following towns and communication centers: Siedlets, Minsk-Mazovetski, strongholds of the German defense in the approaches to Warsaw, and

NAZI DIPLOMATS LEAVING TURKEY

LONDON, July 31 — German diplomats are rushing out of Turkey, it was reported in dispatches from Ankara last night.

All German diplomatic officials in Istanbul who could find reservations had booked rail passages for today or tomorrow, presumably for Berlin or other destinations in German-occupied Europe, stated the reports.

Scores of Japanese, recently arrived in Istanbul from German-occupied Europe and Berlin, were also booking rail passages, probably for Russia, from where they might return to their homeland.

German and Japanese diplomats conferred on Friday at the German Embassy. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 31 — Today's communique:

LAND: To the west of Florence, troops of an Indian division of the 8th Army have cleared the area between the Pesa and Elsa rivers, south of the Arno, except for a few small pockets of enemy resistance. Eighth Army troops southwest of Florence have made small but important gains in very heavy fighting.

In the 5th Army sector and the remainder of the 8th Army front, activity is confined to very active patrolling and artillery duels.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked military objectives in Hungary and Yugoslavia. The targets included an aircraft factory and airdrome near Budapest, an oil refinery at Budafapuszea, in southwest Hungary, and rail yards at Brod, in northern Yugoslavia.

In northern Italy, the battle area, and Yugoslavia, tactical aircraft attacked enemy communications and supply lines, as well as other objectives.

In these operations, six enemy aircraft were destroyed, and nine of ours are missing.

SHAEF, July 31 — Today's communique:

An Allied armored column has entered Avranches, after an advance of 12 miles. Another column, moving south from Brehal, is within three miles of Granville. Heavy fighting continues in the areas of Gavray, Percy, and Tessy-sur-Vire. In the Caumont sector, the Allied advance has made further progress, and we have captured high ground east of Saint-Martin des Besaces. The enemy attack in the Noyers area was beaten off yesterday evening, after hard fighting.

Medium bombers attacked tactical targets in the Caumont area and fuel dumps near Argentan and Chateaudun. Fighter-bombers and fighters attacked targets in close escorted medium and light bombers. Rail bridges at Forges Chartres, south of Domfront and across the Loire, south of Tours, were bombed with good results. Elsewhere poor visibility prevented immediate assessment of results. Fighter-bombers were active in close support of our ground troops. Two airfields in northern France were attacked by small formations of heavy bombers shortly after noon. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 31 — Monday night's Soviet communique:

During July 31, west and northwest of Pskov, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied over 80 populated localities, including Viski, Ratva, Soselka, Cheremnovo, Turkolo, Naumovo, and the railway stations of Katuge, Maluga, and Tita.

Northwest and west of Dvinsk, our troops in the course of their successful offensive occupied with fighting over 300 populated localities, including Dunava, Bebrene, Kaudabruna, Lashu, Yeglaine, Bolanai, Alexandravele, Tradesai, Rageiai, Bareschingi, Uveine, and the railway stations of Yeglaine, Moretai, Kobelai, and Vingvelai.

Troops of the 1st Pre-Baltic Front, as a result of an impetuous maneuver of our tank and infantry units, captured the town of Jelgava (Mitava), principal communication center connecting the Baltic region with East Prussia.

West and southwest of Ukmerge, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied over 200 populated localities, including Dolne, Bubli, Slipi, Zhegovichi, Kresagola, Zhemiani, Lepsishki, Khlebanishki, Pokalnishki, Gotlevo, Veiveri, and the railway stations of Lukshai, Mavrutse, and Kalcmonai. Our troops have broken into the town of Kaunas (Kovno), where they engaged the enemy in street fighting.

Troops of the 3rd White Russian Front, developing their successful offensive, captured the town of Mariampol, district center of the Lithuanian S.S.R., the railway junction of Kozlova Ruda, and also occupied with fighting over 900 other populated localities, including Pelvishki, Stiburitse, Mikhalin, Ludvinov, Krasna, Shostakov, Ogarine, Neravi, Seine, and the railway stations of Yure, Bogata, Pelvishki, Mariampol, Krazna, and Shostakov.

West and southwest of Grodno, our troops, advancing with fighting, occupied over 100 populated localities, including Podobrovo, Yazevo, Shtaben, Sukhovolya, Khodorushka, Krukovschizna, Mileshke, and the railway station of Taino.

Troops of the 1st White Russian Front, after stubborn fighting, captured by storm the following towns and communication centers: Siedlets, Minsk-Mazovetski, strongholds of the German defense in the approaches to Warsaw; and also occupied with fighting over 500 other populated localities, including the town of Radzimin, the town of Valomia, the town of Otvod; Sernaki, Morti, Golublya, Zheslin, Opople, and the railway stations of Broshkus, Denbedelke, Radzimin, Volomin, and Otvod.

Southwest and south of Peremyal, our troops, in the course of their offensive, occupied over 60 populated localities, including Lubcha, Lomna, Novoye Mesto, and the railway stations of Germanovitse and Mezhakovitse.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 30, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 81 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 32 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 31 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Aosta Valley, which for many months has been one of the most active centers of the clandestine front, Patriot forces have improved their positions. Following the occupation of several towns, new resistance groups have been organized in the Fenis, Chambave, and Val Savaranche valleys, as well as in other places.

Patriot forces have also established their superiority in the Cogne region, where they are carrying out acts of sabotage against the important local steel plant.

By increasing the number of their members and by the coordination of activities among Patriot groups, the control over the road crossing the little St. Bernard Pass has been consolidated.

In the Rhone Valley, the collaboration between Italian Partisans and French Maquis has taken active form.

There have been clashes in Lama di Vado, where the Germans, strongly supported by artillery, have launched attacks with the aim of freeing the Vado-San Benedetto di Valsondro road, controlled by Patriots. After some initial successes, the Germans were forced back to the point from which they started, where they awaited reinforcements. Later they launched another fierce attack, again obtaining no results of any consequence, since the Patriots had blocked the road.

A small group of Patriots have secured a large quantity of ammunition from the powder depot of Maramo, before leaving the place to the Germans. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 31 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Yesterday, the enemy extended his major attack launched with the largest possible use of materiel to the whole front, from the area southwest of Caen to the western coast of the Cotentin Peninsula. The fighting is raging with gradually growing fierceness on both sides. South of Hottot, all enemy attacks were frustrated. On both sides of Caumont, the enemy succeeded in punching a deep gap into our lines. German counter-attacks are in progress. Northwest and west of Torigny sur Vire, fierce American attempts at breaking through were frustrated. Especially grim is the fighting south of Sourdeval and south of Cerences. Tank units have engaged the enemy, who had deeply penetrated our lines. A tank unit of the Waffen SS which had temporarily been cut off extricated itself from the area north of Sourdeval, and linked up with our main forces.

In the night, bomber squadrons attacked enemy shipping off the Orne and Seine estuaries. The enemy lost 11 planes.

In France, 97 terrorists were killed in action.

Last night, German motor assault boats attacked an enemy convoy off the English coast east of Eastbourne, and torpedoed three big ships.

In the East, between the Carpathians and the Gulf of Finland, extremely grim fighting is in progress. In the foothills of the Carpathians, numerous enemy attacks were frustrated. At Sambor, a tank division destroyed 20 tanks out of an attacking force of 30. In several sectors, our troops repelled the enemy in counter-attacks.

In the Warsaw sector, an enemy attempt at breaking through in the direction of the town, carried out with strong forces, was frustrated in grim fighting. Repeated Soviet attacks on Siedlce having been repulsed, our troops withdrew to new positions further north.

Between the lower reaches of the Bug and Olita, the front remained unchanged. At Kaunas (Kovno), the Bolsheviks continued their attacks and conquered the town, despite the stubborn resistance of our troops. In Latvia, grim fighting is in progress at Mitau and Birsen. West of Ostrov, Bolshevist attacks in general were repulsed.

Yesterday, in the Narva Isthmus, our divisions together with units of the Navy repelled all Soviet attempts at breaking through, carried out with strong forces in grim fighting. The enemy suffered particularly high losses in men and material.

Bomber formations disabled numerous tanks in low-level attacks and destroyed some hundred vehicles. A U.S. bomber formation yesterday attacked the Budapest region and some other localities in Hungary and Croatia. German-Hungarian air defense forces destroyed 15 enemy planes, 11 of which were four-engined bombers.

Submarines sank three freighters totalling 22,000 tons, two escort vessels, and one mine sweeper. (Radio Berlin)

ENEMY BROADCASTS

Transocean: Allied pressure on Turkey may succeed in bringing about a rupture in relations between the Reich and Turkey. This will be discussed by the Turkish National Assembly at its meeting on August 2. German circles consider that such a rupture may well involve Turkey in the war. It is reported from Ankara that conversations between the Turkish Prime Minister and the German Ambassador von Papen have been postponed until Tuesday, when the Turkish Republican People's Party will hear the Government statement on the political situation. On the Italian front, the British have suffered heavy losses in their offensive on Florence, and there has been a lull in the fighting.

German Overseas Station: General Bradley, the American Commander-in-Chief, launched his offensive on the western front with the purpose of gaining ground southwards and destroying German units on the western side of the peninsula in the Lessay-Coutances sector. General Alexander, on the Italian front, brought up reinforcements in the battle for Florence, from the south in the region of San Michele and westwards from the Arno Valley, but failed to achieve any success. The Reich Commissioner for Labor has announced the raising of the age-limit for women workers in German factories. Steps are being taken to ensure the maximum result from this year's harvest. No agreement has been reached between the Allies and th Bonomi Government with regard to publication of the Italian Armistice terms. It is said that the Allies contemplate separating Sicily from Italy, and annexing it to the British Empire by a so-called autonomy.

Radio Fascist: German defensive successes southwest of Florence are reported. Violent fighting is going on in the hills around the town. The Germans still hold the valley of Empoli, and have repulsed Allied attacks in the vallies of Pesa and Greve, destroying 47 enemy tanks. Supply centres and troop concentrations in the Arezzo sector have been strafed by the Luftwaffe. Artillery duels are reported from the Adriatic sector.

NEW RUSSIAN BREAKTHROUGH

MOSCOW, July 30 — Tonight's Soviet communique announced a great break-through toward East Prussia. Attacking from their bridgehead across the River Niemen, north and south of Alytus, the Russians have broken through the German defenses on a front of 66 miles, and have advanced up to 15 miles. The Russians have now covered more than half the way from the River Niemen to the frontiers of East Prussia.

Earlier today, the Germans said that the Russians had launched a big attack in the area of Augustopie, only eight miles from the East Prussian border.

The Russian communique also announced the liquidation of three German divisions encircled west of Brest-Litovsk. German dead numbered 15,000, and over 2,000 soldiers surrendered.

It was also announced that sweeping advances on the [illegible] southwest of Pskov and west of, localities and killed more than 2,000 of the enemy. A large quantity of war material was captured.

West of Dvinsk, the Red Army advanced into the Latvian district center of Ilukste, while other spearheads, southwest of Dvinsk, drove into Lithuania and reached the town of Zarasai. In this area, the Russians occupied 700 localities.

From Zarasai, the front turns northwest toward the sea, forming the northern rim of the wedge the Russians have driven into Lithuania. The point of the wedge has been pushed nearer to the coast by the Red Army forces advancing north and west of Siauliai.

Forward elements have captured Zagare, on the Lithuanian-Latvia border. Other troops were reported to be within 30 miles of Riga. The isolation of the German armies in Latvia and Estonia is almost complete.

The march on East Prussia continued with the capture of Jonava. This town represented the last defence before Kaunas. West of Grodno, the Russians have crossed the River Sidra after many hand to hand engagements. Dombrova, 20 miles west of Grodno, has been occupied and German Silesia. Leading elements are nearing the Galician oilfields below Przemysl and the Carpathian mountain-passes leading to Hungary and Czechoslovakia.

The Moscow correspondent of the London SUNDAY TIMES wrote today:

«Once the greater part of Poland is wrested from the Germans, the Russians will have the choice of several gateways into Germany. East Prussia is naturally protected in the south by the Masurian Lakes. A thrust into the left, well protected eastern part of East Prussia may be anticipated as soon as the Russians have disposed of the German forces which are now almost completely trapped in the Baltic Republics. SOVIETS TAKE 13 STRONGHOLDS IN WEEK

LONDON, July 30 — In the past week, the Red Army has captured 13 vitally important strongholds between the Gulf of Finland and the Carpathians, the BBC military correspondent pointed out today.

From north to south, these are: Narva, covering the road to Tallin, Estonia; Pskov, the main German base on the Baltic front; Dvinsk and Rezekne, chief outposts before Riga; Siauliai, essential rail and road junction for the withdrawal of Goebbels' Baltic Armies; Bialystok, north-east outpost of Warsaw; Brest-Litovsk, great hedgehog position east of Warsaw; Deblin, the Vistula fortress, south of Warsaw; Lublin, companion stronghold east of the Vistula; the historic bastion of Przemysl, which guards the western approaches to Cracow and Silesia and the southern roads to four of the Carpathian passes into Czechoslovakia; Yaroslov, north of Przemysl; Stanislavov, guarding two more passes into Czechoslovakia; and Lvov, once Germany's great base between Stanislavov and Przemysl.

On the central front, south of Bialystok, the town of Belsk and 60 other places have been taken, and progress has also been made southwest of Lvov and west of Stanislavov.

BBC stated that the Russian offensive is moving forward into a new phase, following the shattering series of defeats inflicted on the Germans in the past week. (BBC)

RED ARMY ADVANCES ON ALL FRONTS

MOSCOW, July, 30 — While Russian shells burst in the eastern suburbs of Warsaw, advances on all fronts from the Baltic to the Carpathians continued.

Reports earlier today said that Marshal Rokossovsky has established his headquarters on the outskirts of the Polish capital. The German High Command order to the Warsaw garrison said: «Fight for every house, every heap of rubble.»

In Latvia, and to the north of Dvinsk, the Red Army fought their way forward northwest and west of Rezekne in a drive to cut the vital Dvinsk-Riga railway. The Germans attempted to hold intermediary lines, but were forced to make a scattered retreat under the blows of the Soviet forces. In this area, the Russians occupied more than 400 pushed nearer to the coast by the Red Army forces advancing north and west of Siauliai.

Forward elements have captured Zagare, on the Lithuanian-Latvia border. Other troops were reported to be within 30 miles of Riga. The isolation of the German armies in Latvia and Estonia is almost complete.

CAPTURE OF GENERAL DESCRIBED

MOSCOW, July 30 — The Red Army newspaper RED STAR described the capture of Lieut. General Bamler, commander of the 12th German Infantry Division, by a Russian soldier who was among the first to break into the city of Mogilev. In an interview, the soldier said:

«I was running down one street with my comrades when we met two civilians who told us that a German general and his staff were hiding in a nearby cellar. I threw my rifle across my shoulder and took two hand grenades in each hand and approached the entrance to the cellar, but there was no one around.

«I hid beneath the staircase and shouted 'come out!' Some sort of German officer came out on the double, but scampered back like a rat. Then a German general came out followed by five other officers. As I came out from behind the staircase I noticed six other officers hiding under a fence in the yard. I threatened them with hand grenades, and they quickly understood me and fell in behind their general.

«My comrades and I escorted the general and his staff officers into the street, and handed them over to our lieutenant.»

General Bamler subsequently wrote the joint appeal of 16 captured German generals to German officers urging them to overthrow the Hitler regime. (OWI)

NEW BRITISH DRIVE MAKING STEADY PROGRESS

SHAEF, July 30 — British forces are pushing on south of Caumont, in their new drive and have reached a point three miles south of the town, Reuter reported tonight. The village of Sept Vents has been taken.

The new British attack extends along a front from Caumont toward the area below Caen.

Battle-hardened British infantry units with tank support formed the spearhead of this assault which began at 0600 hours this morning over some of the most difficult terrain in France. Forward troops ran into a thickly sown mine belt southwest of St. Germain Dectot and terrain bristling with booby traps. At 0720 hours, another column of infantry swung south from Caumont and fanned out toward Sept Vents and Le Bourg, where they met little opposition.

Other units to the east encountered heavy German fire from a small wood south of Le Bourg. Flame-throwers are being used to clear the wood. No German armor has yet been met, and there is no semblance of a prepared defensive line, the Reuter correspondent said.

Preceding the new British attack, strong forces of RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes with fighter cover attacked German positions and concentrations in the battle area between Caen and St. Lô. The weather was very bad, but the bombers sea. The BBC said that the Germans are trying to reinforce their battered divisions with units from the Brittany Peninsula, and were using the port of Granville to disembark.

The American line now runs roughly from Brehal to Gavray and Tessy-sur-Vire, where the Germans are putting up strong organized resistance and are using the 2nd Division with Tiger tanks, an unusual combination. The advance is moving swiftly south of that line, which is not solid but contains some pockets of resistance.

The Germans are continuing to retreat. Two efforts by them to break out of the triangular pocket in the St. Denis and Legronne district were repulsed.

A Reuter correspondent with the American army estimated that 8,200 prisoners have been taken since the attack started. There has been no estimation of the number of German casualties nor of enemy material destroyed. Allied planes however, have destroyed some 300 enemy tanks as well as hundreds of pieces of motorized equipment, gun emplacements, and horse-drawn vehicles.

Novel Saturation Bombing

A high airforce authority announced today that the American break-through was preceded by a new type of saturation bombing that covered a 10-mile-square area with 65,951 bombs dropped from 2,423 planes. The total of 4,302 tons of bombs left enemy soldiers completely demoralized.

A BBC correspondent said that behind the German front this morning was a wreck of ammunition carriers, lorries, and troop transports. A German convoy of 60 vehicles moving westward was caught by rocket-firing Typhoons.

Allied aircraft yesterday kept up their close support of ground troops and savagely attacked the roads leading south from the American battlefront, which are jammed with fleeing German troops, transport, and tanks.

Last night, rocket-firing Typhoons of the RAF and American Thunderbolts combined their actions in a manoeuver disastrous to the retreating armies.

The Thunderbolts first blasted a bridge ahead of a column of enemy tanks. With the tanks thus stalled, the Typhoons roared in, destroyed 18 and damaged 26 of them.

Yesterday morning, Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the U. S. 9th Airforce destroyed 17 tanks, 60 motor trucks, 4 staff cars, and other transport, including horse-drawn guns and trucks.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm yesterday evening bombed and machine gunned four German landing craft, crowded with German soldiers, off the port of St. Malo, on the Normandy coast. The landing craft, which were supported by three armed minesweepers, were steaming east when attacked, evidently bound for Granville with reinforcements for Rommel's left flank. One landing craft was sunk.

A Canadian correspondent in Normandy described the big concrete rocket installation captured by the Allies some time ago in the Cherbourg Peninsula. He said: «There must be enough steel in this installation to build a warship, and enough concrete to make a good size department store.

«In shape, it is like an enormous letter U, with the two prongs facing due north, and the whole thing is set on top of a hill facing the sea. All around are poles from which flat pieces of camouflage are suspended. There are also signs that the whole area was extremely well ringed with aircraft defenses.»

This site is giving our bombing experts a good deal of valuable information on how to attack other sites elsewhere in France, and is also supplying us with useful power

Forward troops ran into a thickly sown mine belt southwest of St. Germain Dectot and terrain bristling with booby traps. At 0720 hours, another column of infantry swung south from Caumont and fanned out toward Sept Vents and Le Bourg, where they met little opposition.

Other units to the east encountered heavy German fire from a small wood south of Le Bourg. Flame-throwers are being used to clear the wood. No German armor has yet been met, and there is no semblance of a prepared defensive line, the Reuter correspondent said.

Preceding the new British attack, strong forces of RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes with fighter cover attacked German positions and concentrations in the battle area between Caen and St. Lô. The weather was very bad, but the bombers flew below the clouds and pressed home the attack from a little over 2,000 feet. They were followed by hundreds of medium bombers, which sprayed several targets in selected areas ahead of the troops with fragmentation bombs to clear the way for tanks.

Bombers of the 9th USAAF followed the initial RAF attack and dropped fragmentation bombs on German positions as the British 2nd Army moved forward in its new offensive. Strong forces of Marauders and Havocs blasted enemy infantry and field gun positions under cover of Allied fighters. Preliminary reports indicated that there was no opposition from the Luftwaffe, and only very light anti-aircraft fire.

The British 2nd Army took over the Caumont region a few days ago. A British United Press report stated that it came as a «smashing surprise to the Germans in that sector.»

In the western sector, American troops continued their advance and have captured the important town of Brehal, about 10 miles south of Coutances; they have also taken Gavray, 10 miles southeast of Coutances, and Percy, four miles east of Gavray.

The Associated Press reported that there were at least two traps now closed tight around the German remnants to the north of Granville — one southeast of Coutances, and the other between the Coutances-Brehal road and the American [illegible] saturation bombing that covered a 10-mile-square area with 65,951 bombs dropped from 2,423 planes. The total of 4,302 tons of bombs left enemy soldiers completely demoralized.

A BBC correspondent said that behind the German front this morning was a wreck of ammunition carriers, lorries, and troop transports. A German convoy of 60 vehicles moving westward was caught by rocket-firing Typhoons.

Allied aircraft yesterday kept up their close support of ground troops and savagely attacked the roads leading south from the American battlefront, which are jammed with fleeing German troops, transport, and tanks.

Last night, rocket-firing Typhoons of the RAF and American Thunderbolts combined their actions in a maneuver disastrous to the retreating armies.

The Thunderbolts first blasted a bridge ahead of a column of enemy tanks. With the tanks thus stalled, the Typhoons roared in, destroyed 18 and damaged 26 of them.

Yesterday morning, Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the U. S. 9th Airforce destroyed 17 tanks, 60 motor trucks, 4 staff cars, and other transport, including horse-drawn guns and trucks.

Aircraft of the Fleet Air Arm yesterday evening bombed and machine gunned four German landing craft, crowded with German soldiers, off the port of St. Malo, on the Normandy coast. The landing craft, which were supported by three armed minesweepers, were steaming east when attacked, evidently bound for Granville with reinforcements for Rommel's left flank. One landing craft was sunk.

A Canadian correspondent in Normandy described the big concrete rocket installation captured by the Allies some time ago in the Cherbourg Peninsula. He said: «There must be enough steel in this installation to build a warship, and enough concrete to make a good size department store.

«In shape, it is like an enormous letter U, with the two prongs facing due north, and the whole thing is set on top of a hill facing the sea. All around are poles from which flat pieces of camouflage are suspended. There are also signs that the whole area was extremely well ringed with aircraft defenses.»

This site is giving our bombing experts a good deal of valuable information on how to attack other sites elsewhere in France, and is also supplying us with useful power. American engineers are drawing electricity from the huge diesel engine there.

Allied Strategy

«The matter of capturing ground is a minor one unless the terrain is really vital to the general strategic scheme,» an official spokesman at General Eisenhower's headquarters told correspondents today. He said:

«In Normandy, we do not gauge the success of an operation by the size of the advance made. Any general who trades men for ground, if it is just to expand, is a fool.»

The official said that the Allies were glad that Hitler follows the mad policy of never yielding an inch of ground, but that the Allies were not going to sacrifice lives just to take ground or hold it. «If we need it for strategic reasons, that is different,» he declared.

«We are fighting for ports and elbow room, and we are knocking off a lot more men than we are losing. Our last attack must have accounted for what was left of two or three German divisions.»

The Normandy fighting, he emphasized, should be considered as one front, all sections executing the Supreme Commander's orders.

FRANKFURT HIT WITH TWO-TON BOMBS

LONDON, July 30 — RAF Mosquitoes dropped their two-ton bombs on the German city of Frankfurt Saturday night following a day of heavy aerial activity over enemy and enemy-occupied territory, it was officially announced today.

More than 1,000 heavy bombers of the 8th USAAF struck the synthetic oil refinery at Merseburg Saturday morning for the second day in succession. Targets in the vicinity of Bremen were also hit.

The Liberators and Flying Fortresses were escorted by strong forces of Lightning and Mustang fighters. B-24 Liberators also attacked German airfields at Juvincourt and Laon Couvron, northeast of Paris.

The escorting fighters strafed ground targets in Germany and France, destroying three parked aircraft and machine gunning more than 40 locomotives, 25 railroad cars, and a dozen motor vehicles.

Twenty German interceptors were shot down by Allied fighter planes, while bomber crews destroyed 15 more. Seventeen allied bombers, and six fighters are missing.

All day Saturday, fighters and fighter-bombers gave close support to Allied ground troops in France. At least 20 tanks were destroyed. Fighters trapped an enemy convoy crossing a bridge over the Sienne river near Gavray and disposed of 12 tanks. Many armored and motor vehicles behind the enemy front were set on fire, particularly in the Vendom, Rouen, and Amiens areas.

For the second successive evening, RAF Halifaxes and Stirling bombers attacked an enemy supply dump near Watten, in the Pas de Calais area. The depot is a massive concrete structure believed to be connected with the German threat to use long range rockets against England.

The Germans sent more flying bombs over southern England and the London area, Saturday, causing further damage and casualties. (Reuter)

HUNDREDS OF PANZERS BLASTED FROM AIR

SHAEF, July 30 — A Reuter correspondent in Normandy, describing the terrific Allied air assault on the German lines, said today: «The magnitude of the Allied aerial victory over German tanks and armor in this campaign probably cannot be grasped at this time.

«Without exaggeration it can be said that the triangle made between Coutances, Granville, and Villedieu-les-Poeles is a fire-blackened pyre upon which a large portion of the Normandy panzers have been cremated.»

An intelligence officer said this morning: «I am making aerial photographs and it is impossible to appraise accurately the number of tanks and motor transport destroyed until this is completed.». (Reuter)

NAZIS «STRENGTHEN» FLORENCE POSITIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 30 — German forces are «strengthening» their positions on the ridges south of Florence, and have launched a third counter-attack in unsuccessful efforts to smash the New Zealand wedge into their last defenses south of Tuscany's chief city, it was announced here today.

At the expense of heavy losses, the German counter-attacks have apparently forced back leading New Zealand elements which had thrust to within five miles of Florence, for the nearest point to Florence reported in New Zealand hands today was the village of San Michele, seven miles away. The New Zealand forces battled their way to San Michele as a result of a counter-attack of their own on Friday night, which regained two points which had previously been ceded to the German onslaughts.

The three German counter-attacks followed within little over 24 hours the spectacular break-through the German lines by New Zealand forces which struck out from their positions across the Pesa River at Cerbain. The official reports released here described them as «without success,» and declared that New Zealand troops were still wedged «into the enemy's line,» and that «any penetrations» in this sector were «viewed with concern» by the enemy.

Strong Nazi Resistance

But the first enemy counter-attack shortly after dawn on Friday drove back one leading company nearly half a mile, and the subsequent attacks, at high noon Friday and on Saturday, involved very heavy fighting. It is evident from the official reports that although the New Zealanders have withstood the enemy counter-blows where they were in firm positions, the light forces which had thrust forward toward Florence and had actually penetrated the last enemy positions were forced to withdraw.

The Germans also strengthened their positions immediately south of Florence, astride Highway 2 up from Poggibonsi. The position of the 8th Army troops in this sector is not given in today's reports, but it was stated yesterday that a column of tanks and other troops had pushed forward two miles beyond San Casciano, or within little over five miles of Florence, and had temporarily halted there in face of enemy mines and demolitions.

On the left flank of the 8th Army forces closing in on Florence, aggressive patrols crossed the Pesa River just south of its confluence with the Arno, to enter the road and rail center of Empoli, 15 miles west of Florence. They were followed up by troops of an Indian division, which at last reports were in the outskirts of the town, and were approaching Montelupo, four miles to the east.

East of Highway 2, where two 8th Army columns were advancing along a network of minor roads north of Mercatale and up a secondary road leading directly into Florence through the Ema River Valley, little change was reported. Strada, a village about six miles east of San Casciano, was reported still to be in enemy hands.

On the southeastern approach to Florence, along the Arno Valley and Highway 69 leading up from Arezzo, 8th Army infantrymen were reported to be fighting bitterly to increase their hold on Monte Scalari, 10 miles south of the city and the highest ground in the Chianti Hills in this region. In another advance of over a mile, 8th Army troops captured another hill feature just west of Figline in Val d'Arno, a town on the east bank of the river opposite the main highway.

East of the Arno River where it bends south between the Chianti and the Pratomagno mountains, patrols entered Castelfranco, 3 1/2 miles east of the river, only to discover that the enemy had withdrawn. The official reports yesterday said that the Germans were believed to have considerable heavy artillery concentrated in this mountain town.

LONDON, July 30 — Only about 10 per cent of the German prisoners taken by the Allies in Normandy still believe in a complete German victory, it was learned from interrogation. Information and opinion volunteered by 75 of them who were captured this month show they have three major complaints against German Army conditions. These are, shortness of hot food, use of troops in ways for which they have not been trained, and lack of artillery support.

They complained, too, of officer shortages and desertion of the men by officers in a crisis, weight of battle equipment, and long marches. Troops get hot food only once a day after midnight, and have to get up at that hour and march some distance to the distribution point. The prisoners stressed with great bitterness the lack of artillery support and aircraft. (PWB)

The official reports yesterday said that the Germans were believed to have considerable heavy artillery concentrated in this mountain town.

British patrols have probed the slopes of the Pratomagno Hills along an eight-mile stretch from Loro to Castiglione, without making contact with German forces. Although the Germans still hold these heights, the «more fluid» nature of the fighting in this difficult sector would seem to indicate that the heavy guns which had prevented the Allied advance have been withdrawn. The enemy is also dropping back in the area northeast of Arezzo, where scouting parties have been unable to contact German forces. It is believed that this withdrawal has been made only to another hill line 2 1/2 miles further north.

Further east of Arezzo, the road center of Anghiari was captured after fierce fighting yesterday. In this sector too, enemy lines were reported to be thinning out.

On the Adriatic front, Polish forces were still fighting in the southern part of Senigallia on the coast. Italian forces beat back two enemy counter-attacks and inflicted heavy casualties, with their own losses limited to two killed.

Official reports said «the tempo of activity on the 5th Army front remained unchanged.»

King Decorates Clark

The Cross of Honorary Knight of the British Empire was conferred on General Mark Clark by King George during the royal visit to the Allied Armies in Italy.

The King also decorated with the Cross of Honorary Companion of the Bath, Major General Alfred Grunther, Chief of the General Staff of the 5th Army, and Major General Keyes, Commander of the 2nd Corps. After the ceremony, a number of senior officers of the 5th Army were presented to the King.

His Majesty reviewed troops representing the various combat and service branches of the 5th Army, including infantry, artillery, engineers, armor, anti-aircraft, WACs, nurses, and air OP flying personnel.

Among the combat troops reviewed by the King was the 442 Regimental Combat Team, composed of Americans of Japanese descent, all of whom are volunteers. This unit distinguished itself in the recent offensive which led to the capture of Leghorn.

On arrival at an airfield, the King was met by General Clark and Air Vice Marshall Dickson, commander of the Desert Air Force. Four wing commanders were presented to the King, who subsequently inspected a number of RAF squadrons of the Desert Air Force.

Heavies Hit at Budapest

Liberators and Flying Fortresses bombed the Duna aircraft factory and the Tokol airfield on the outskirts of Budapest today.

Another part of the force of up to 500 heavy bombers attacked the Lipse oilfield in southwest Hungary, and railway yards at Brod, on the Belgrade-Zagreb main line.

33 Enemy Planes Destroyed

Flying through unfavourable weather which grounded both heavy and medium bombers, Spitfires and Thunderbolts of the Tactical Air Force yesterday destroyed or damaged 33 enemy aircraft in attacks on four airfields northwest of Milan.

In other attacks, fighter-bombers hit a train running between Genoa and Savona and destroyed the locomotive and 10 cars, as well as damaging 20 others. In another west coast attack, the rail bridge near Castiglione was hit in three places.

Coastal forces of the RAF yesterday hit railyards at Ventimiglia, and a lone coastal bomber attacked a formation of three enemy destroyers at an undisclosed location. The bombs fell into the midst of the group, but results were not observed.

Air Sea Rescue

The first air sea rescue squadron in the Mediterranean theatre, equipped with Catalina flying boats, has rescued scores of Allied airmen forced down at sea, in the first three months of operation, it was announced here today.

Operating from a western Mediterranean base, the rescue unit is able to pick up the full 10-man crew of a heavy bomber from the surface of the sea, and return them to their bases in swift flights.

RUSSIAN-TRAINED YUGOSLAV BRIGADE READY

MOSCOW, July 30 — The first Yugoslav brigade in the USSR, under command of Lieutenant Colonel Nedic, is scheduled to go to the Yugoslavia front in the near future, Reuter reported today.

The brigade, which consists of Serbs, Croats, Slovenes, Montenegrins, and Macedonians, was recently sworn in at a ceremony attended by British, Russian, and Czech officers, as well as Lieutenant General Terzich, head of Marshal Tito's military mission to Russia. The brigade is well armed with modern artillery, tanks, trench mortars, and automatic weapons. (Reuter)

U. S. MARINES CAPTURE OROTE ON GUAM

ALLIED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HQ, July 30 — A communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz' headquarters last night announced the capture by United States Marines of Orote Peninsula on Guam Island.

Day and night for the past week, the peninsula has been bombarded by warships, planes, and land artillery. Admiral Nimitz described its capture as the «outstanding triumph of the invasion of Guam.» Organized Japanese resistance ceased on Friday.

In the Marianas, American forces control about two-thirds of the Island of Tinian, and are storming the heavily-defended town of Tinian itself.

General MacArthur's communique announced that in the first large-scale strike at the Japanese bases at Halmahera, bombers with strong fighter escort effected a complete surprise in an attack on the three most active airfields on the island.

At least 30 aircraft were destroyed on the ground, a coastal vessel was sunk, two fuel dumps set on fire, and 15 intercepting planes shot down for the loss of two American fighters.

Halmahera is a large island in the Moluccs group, due east of the Celebes and southeast of Mindanao.

Aircraft also attacked Japanese shipping, airdromes, and camps at Timor, Dutch New Guinea, and the Gulf of Manokwari. (Reuter)

JAPANESE REARGUARDS ENGAGED

KANDY, CEYLON 30 — The opposition to our advance on the Tamu-Palel road is centered in the hills south of the road about 20 miles from Tamu, South east Asia Command's communique said today. Japanese rearguards are being attacked in this sector.

On the Tiddim road, contact was regained with the enemy at Myitkyina by the Chinese in the western sector, and by the Americans north of the town. Both forces advanced 250 yards.

General Stillwell's headquarters announced Sunday that a Liberator bomber sank a 4,000-ton Japanese naval vessel and damaged a freighter off Hongkong. The Chinese have beaten off several Japanese attacks on Hengyang, which the enemy is trying desperately to capture. The Chinese High Command acknowleged the loss of Pingsiang, 100 miles northeast of encircled and battered Hengyang.

Five strongpoints were recaptured by the Chinese east of Hengyang after day-long battles Friday. Chinese forces completed mopping up in the Leiyang area, while other units continued the attack on Chaling, in Hunan Province.

An American fighter-bomber group, now engaged in attacking enemy communications in northern Italy, has flown 14,000 sorties and 1,500 combat missions in little over a year's operations, it was announced here today.

The unit, the 86th Fighter-Bomber Group, has destroyed or damaged nearly 5,000 enemy vehicles and more than 2,300 railway cars and locomotives. They dropped 5,000 tons of bombs on enemy objectives, and fired 3,000,000 rounds of 50-calibre ammunition in strafing attacks. (PRO)

MIDEAST AIRCRAFT HIT SHIPPING

CAIRO, July 30 — Spitfires of the Middle East Command shot down a German JU-88 south of Cyprus yesterday, while other aircraft attacked enemy shipping off Greece, a Middle East air communique stated today. Last night, the Missolonghi harbor in eastern Greece was bombed, and Beaufighters, using rocket projectiles, attacked and damaged an enemy launch north of Crete.

Off the east coast of Greece, other aircraft attacked a merchantman, a supply ship, and an escort vessel, and it is believed that the merchantman was sunk, the communique said.

U. S. MILITARY GOVERNMENT IN SAIPAN

NEW YORK, July 30 — The American Military Government is planning a democratic election among the Chamorros on the newly-liberated Saipan Island, wrote a New York HERALD TRIBUNE correspondent, in a dispatch describing U. S. work of rehabilitation for the war-torn inhabitants.

Other action taken by the Military Government to bring democratic social order to the island includes a limited form of self-government for the thousands of Japanese civilian families now living in a separate area on the island; reopening in September of schools for Chamorran, Japanese, and Korean children; and the restoration of freedom of worship to people who have been under Japanese domination since 1914 and who have had the Catholic Mass forbidden to them for the past three years.

There are approximately 1,700 prisoners of war on Saipan. They are receiving the best possible care and attention. (PWB) evidently, not satisfied with the extent of the enthusiasm of his soldiers for National Socialism. He said:

«The most dangerous of our enemies faces us with an idealogically conditioned army. The Wehrmacht can cope with this army only if it, too, is idealogically conditioned. Should the officer possess political training? In the past, this was generally deprecated. But today, the officer must be a leader of his men in every respect. This is especially necessary now, when the political and ideological conditioning and training of youth begins at the earliest stages in the Hitler Youth, the Storm Troopers, and the Labour Camps.

«Such training must on no account be interrupted when the young man enters the armed forces. The political training begun in the formation of the Party must be continued in the Wehrmacht. The officer must know how to make the man see the necessity for, and the meaning of his sacrifice.»

Demanding that his officers should be a mixture of officer and political commissar, Hitler said: «If the older officers cannot do this, they should appoint younger collaborators who possess such training as speakers as I cannot expect everyone of you to have. It is absolutely essential to strengthen authority and promote faith in the leadership.

Make Death Easier

«In this way, the officer not only fulfils a clear duty towards the leaders of his state, but he also makes service, and, in the last resort, death, easier for the soldier to bear.»

Later he said: «Party and Wehrmacht are inseparable. They must realise that all is at stake, and all petty difference must be buried. The Wehrmacht must know that it is necessary to be brutal, but that reason must guide their work and this work must be based on faith.»

Speaking of the fall of Italy, Hitler said:

«Italy had to break, because the armed forces and the state idea were not uniformly conditioned. Italy is lost. She will be broken up. Without faith, one cannot fight or stand.»

After attacking Roman Catholicism for its failure to counter Bolshevism, Hitler said:

«Even in Spain, General Franco, though acting on religious principles, would never have been able to overcome the Bolshevik and Communist revolts if Italy and the National Socialist armed forces of Germany had not helped him to success.»

Hitler said that the war was no longer chivalrous. «It breaks with all traditions,» he said. «It no longer knows the code of chivalry. We, too, must discard all hesitations. Every one of us must make up his mind to use every means at his disposal. We have no right to continue to respect past traditions, and to show consideration in accordance with past customs. Chivalrous or soldierly behaviour towards the enemy is a crime against our own people. Such things may again be possible in future wars.»

Hitler then spoke again of the difficulties of his own life. He said:

«I have only one thing to ask of destiny, and that is to spare me. I believe that only I shall be able to master fate. I do not have this wish for myself, because my last years, in any case, have been only worry and sleepless nights.» (OWI)

REVOLT PRODUCT OF DEFEAT

LONDON, July 30 — The well-known military commentator, Max Werner, writing in REYNOLDS NEWS said today on the revolt of the Generals:

«They have long been convinced that the war is lost, and, as they tasted the full and incredible strength of the Russian offensive, and as the Russians approach German territory, the generals could see no sense in risking their necks merely to save those of Hitler and his colleagues for a few more weeks or months. Thus, Germany's real military

ITALIAN PRISONERS AIDING U. S. WAR EFFORT

WASHINGTON, July 30 — Italian prisoners of war in the U. S. are making a substantial contribution to the war effort by volunteering for essential work, the War Department announced today.

They are working in general depots, arsenals, ordnance installations, embarkation ports, army posts, camps, and stations, receiving wages at regular prisoner of war rates and extra freedom. Prisoners are classified as to skill and aptitude by officers who first ascertain that they are not pro-Nazi or Fascist. Training is given where necessary.

Acceptance of Italian co-belligerency by Britain, the U. S., and Russia gives members of Italian service units a different status from ordinary prisoners. (PWB)

POLITICAL CONTROL OF MILITARY ORDERED

MOSCOW, July 30 — Nazi distrust of the Army has become so great that Hitler has appointed a special representative to the general staff for the political control of military personnel, Radio Moscow announced last night.

This special representative is Hernich Lohse, one of the many Nazi Party officials who have lost their jobs through the swift advance of the Russians.

Lohse was Reich Commissioner for «Ostland» — territories filched by the Germans from the Poles and Russians.

Lohse is empowered, in his new job, to dismiss officers of the German general staff. (OWI)

HITLER'S SECRET SPEECH REVEALED

LONDON, July 30 — Notes of a secret speech made by Hitler in October 1943 have fallen into Allied hands. They prove that even then Hitler was aware of the impending split between the German Army and the Nazi Party.

The speech was made on October 16, 1943, at Hitler's headquarters. Much of it was the characteristically woolly and hysterical condemnation of Jews, Bolshevism, and Roman Catholicism. But there were also some significant remarks.

Hitler appealed for a politically-minded army. He was, «In this way, the officer not only fulfils a clear duty towards the leaders of his state, but he also makes service, and, in the last resort, death, easier for the soldier to bear.»

Later he said: «Party and Wehrmacht are inseparable. They must realise that all is at stake, and all petty difference must be buried. The Wehrmacht must know that it is necessary to be brutal, but that reason must guide their work and this work must be based on faith.»

«In August 1918, we did not know that the German High Command knew that the war was already lost. This time we do. The German generals' sudden aversion to war is about five years too late. Like their aversion to Hitler, it is a product of defeat. (BBC)

MASS MURDERS OF FOREIGN WORKERS

BASLE, July 30 — The Germans are engaged in the mass killing of «enemies» among foreign workers, according to reports reaching the Swiss newspaper BASLER NATIONAL ZEITUNG. The dispatch said:

«Hundreds of thousands have already been murdered in advance of the German retreat in the East. Many persons inside Germany were killed "while trying to escape," according to the German explanation.»

The newspaper said that on the German home front a 72-hour working week has been introduced and women up to sixty conscripted for war work. The German Minister of Education has issued a decree for the compulsory reading and discussion in all schools of the German High Command's communique to «further the military education of German Youth.» (OWI)

VIOLATORS OF GRANARY LAWS PENALIZED

ROME, July 30 — No leniency will be shown to wheat growers who dishonestly withhold the material for the bread to go into the mouths of the Italian people, Minister of Agriculture Gullo said in a speech at Palermo yesterday.

In Sicily, the Tribunale of Caltanissetta sentenced one Cataldo Bruno, of Calogero, to 52 months in prison, and fined him 272,000 lire, for illegally withholding 13 quintals of wheat from the Granaries of the People.

The Catania Provincial Commission for the control of the Granaries of the People has reported Baron Grimaldi di Liscima, proprietor of the Segreto Farm, to the judicial authorities on a charge of illegally withholding 30 quintals of wheat.

At Naples the Questora, in the course of an inspection of flour mills, arrested four persons who are charged with illegally withdrawing grain from the Granaries, to mill into flour. (UNN)

EPURATION PASSES TO ITALIAN GOVERNMENT

ROME, July 30 — Simultaneously with the Italian Government's promulgation of its July 27 decree entitled «Sanctions Against Fascism,» the Allied Control Commission has made this decree applicable in all Allied Military Government territory south of the Army boundaries, it was announced today.

This means that epuration commissions set up by ACC in Rome and Naples, both of which territories are still under Allied Military Government, will cease to function. The work initiated by these AMG commissions will be carried on however, by the Italian Government commissions for the application of sanctions against Fascism, as provided for in the new decree. NAZI INSTRUCTIONS ON RETREAT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 30 — German troops have been given explicit instructions on their behavior when retreating through Florence, according to the testimony of a German prisoner.

The German soldiers « must behave well, and refrain from looting, rape, and other crimes, » the prisoner is said to have declared. The official statement containing the testimony stated that « by implication, Florence is to be an exception, » and charges that German « atrocities committed elsewhere were not due merely to poor discipline. »

It also cited a massacre of 103 civilians, including 50 women and 21 children, six of them under four years of age at Stia, 25 miles northwest of Arezzo. The official report, based upon documents found in the files of the Fascist Chief of Police at Arezzo, said that the mass murders were carried out in reprisal for the shooting by Italian partisans of two Germans wearing civilian clothes. It said that 1,500 troops of the Hermann Goering Panzer Parachute Division, aided by Fascist civilians, carried out the reprisal.

Many of the bodies recovered were unrecognizable, although the reports mentioned one old woman of 84 and a 3-Month's-old baby among those shot. (PRO)

NAZI ATROCITIES IN GREECE CONTINUE

LONDON, July 30 — The bodies of more than 250 civilians were removed from the charred ruins of the Greek village of Kiesoura following a recent German atrocity, the Greek Government in London announced yesterday.

Kiesoura is in the Kasteria district of Greece, on the Albanian border.

A clash occurred there recently between Greek Patriots and a German patrol. Two Germans were killed. In reprisal, the Germans locked up the civilians and burned the village down.

This brings to more than 1,000 the number of villages in Greece which the Germans have burned, and in which civilians have been slaughtered. The Greek Government said that during the first week of July, the Nazis burned out 25 villages. More than 24,000 Greek civilians have been slaughtered since the Germans entered the country. Of these, 4,000 have died in the last three months. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 30 — Today's communique:

LAND: To the west of Florence, troops of an Indian Division of the 8th Army in their advance to the River Arno are now in the outskirts of the town of Empoli, and are approaching the town of Montelupo. To the southeast of Florence, heavy fighting continues for the possession of the commanding high ground. Fierce counter-attacks in this sector have been repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy.

In the upper Arno Valley to the southeast of Florence, local but important gains have been made on both banks of the river. On the west bank of the Tiber, advances have been made, including the capture of the town and road centre of Anghiari.

In the Adriatic sector, Italian troops of the 5th Army have held their ground and beaten off two heavy counter-attacks.

In the 5th Army sector, activity is still confined to patrolling and artillery exchanges.

AIR: In operations which were curtailed by adverse weather, tactical aircraft yesterday concentrated their attacks on rail and road bridges, transport, shipping, and other targets in northern Italy and the battle area. Enemy communications and bivouac areas also were attacked in Yugoslavia. There were no heavy bomber operations.

Two of our aircraft are missing.

WESTERN FRONT (1)

SHAEF, July 30 — Today's communique:

Allied forces pushing south from Coutances have linked up with our forces in Legronne. The whole of the road between these two towns is in our hands. An enemy force south of the River Soulles has been surrounded and is being steadily eliminated in spite of determined efforts to break out.

Our troops advancing from the west have crossed the [illegible] of enemy infantry and armor which had been by-passed are being steadily eliminated.

Attempts to break out with tank support by the enemy encircled in the areas of Lengronne and St. Denis le Gast were frustrated, and more than 30 tanks were knocked out.

A strong counter-attack in the area of Tessy-sur-Vire was beaten back.

In the Caumont area, an advance of three miles has been made south of the town, and Allied troops have reached St Jean des Essartiers and Les Loges.

To the east of Caumont, our troops have gained ground in spite of strong enemy resistance, very difficult ground, and intensive minefields.

A force of heavy and medium bombers attacked tactical targets in the Caumont area this morning, in support of ground action there. Both visual and pathfinding techniques were employed, due to a cloud layer which extended to within 2,000 feet of the ground.

Fighter-bombers continued to support our advancing columns in the western sector.

Armed reconnaissance patrols were flown as far eastward as Amiens, Paris, and Chartres. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 30 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Venetian Patriots have carried out daring acts against the Nazi-Fascists and sabotage against enemy objectives. The most important action took place July 26, near Palazzo Giustiniani. Thirteen patriots were shot by order of the Extraordinary Tribunal. The insurrection movement in the city, which dates back to the heroic anti-German traditions of the Risorgimento, has become more widespread and intensified.

Violent clashes took place at Veto and Villa Minozza. The patriots, who have reported great success, succeeded in putting out of action and dispersing a group of about 500 Fascist guards, killing 12 and wounding 70 of them.

In the vicinity of San Rocco di Guastalla, patriots disarmed the soldiers of the local garrison.

The Republican guards barracks at Becorara was attacked by the partisans, who disarmed all the militiamen, killed a squad leader and captured considerable booty.

Forty patriots attacked the town hall of Travo, setting fire to the draft board list and taking possession of the arms deposited there. Other patriots took several prisoners at Ponte dell'Oglio.

German cars were seized by patriots near Piacenza. A bridge close to Cerrato, and another called Della Torretta, on the road between Reggio Emilia and Vinazzo, were blown up. (UNN)

LONDON, July 30 — Today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters:

In Serbia, the Kraljevo railway line has been severed at five points. Traffic will not be possible for a long time. On the Jablanica sector, our units succeeded in breaking the enemy ring.

In Montenegro, an enemy offensive group has been completely broken up in the valley of the upper Lim River. The town of Andrijevica has been captured, and mopping up of the enemy units in this sector is continuing.

In the Sandjak district, our units broke up two enemy columns which tried to break through towards Berane.

In Herzegovina, our units counter-attacked and captured three cannons, one heavy mortar thrower, six machine guns, 75 horses with supplies, and great quantities of ammunition and war equipment.

In northern Dalmatia, our units are continuing their operations to Bukovica, where the enemy is attacking with strong forces. The 52nd Motorized Regiment and the 1st Brandenburg Regiment are taking part in these attacks.

In Slovenia, our units broke into Slovenska Bistrica on the Celje Maribur sector and destroyed the aircraft parts factory.

In the Dolensko and the Krapinska Bistrica sector, the enemy put in fresh counter-attacks with strong forces, and heavy fighting is in progress. (Free Yugoslav Radio)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 30 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Yesterday, U. S. attempts at breaking through continued throughout the whole day on both sides of the Vire, at Moyen and in the Beaucoudray-Percy sector. The Americans were everywhere repelled in grim fighting with bloody losses for the enemy; 28 tanks and seven planes were destroyed.

On the western wing, the German divisions which had temporarily been cut off from the bulk of our forces broke through the enemy lines in a southerly direction, and occupied new positions in the Gavray-Trelly sector.

On the other parts of the beachhead front, the enemy launched an unsuccessful local attack south of Juvigny. Fighter and fighter-bomber squadrons brought down six enemy planes in dogfights. During the night, strong squadrons of heavy bombers launched effective attacks on enemy troop concentrations southeast of Caen and southeast of St. Lô.

In France, 27 terrorists were shot.

London and its outskirts are being held under heavy retaliatory fire.

Yesterday, our divisions again smashed all attacks launched by the enemy on Florence with Indian, South-African, New Zealand, and English divisions. The enemy, who had penetrated our positions southeast of the town, was thrown back in fierce counter-attacks.

In the Italian rear, the terrorists lost 8,300 dead and 7,500 prisoners in the course of mopping up operations lasting from May 12 to July 24.

On the Eastern Front, in the foothills of the Carpathians as well as south and north of Reichshof, enemy attacks were frustrated or checked in counter-attacks. In the big Vistula bend, our troops threw back the enemy who had crossed the river.

In the Warsaw-Siedlice sector, troops of the Army and the Waffen S.S. are engaged in grim fighting with advancing Soviet forces.

The garrison of Brest-Litowsk, which had temporarily been cut off, extricated itself and, evacuating the wounded, linked up with our lines.

Between the central reaches of the Bug and Ojita, our troops checked fierce Bolschevik attacks at Bialystock and north east of Augustowa.

In the Kaunas sector, the enemy launched his expected major attack. Several infiltrations were sealed off by counter-attacks of our tank units.

In Latvia, Soviet attacks launched on the town of Mitau and north-east of Anevezys remained unsuccessful.

Between the Duena and Lake Peipus, our infantry maintained their positions, despite strong attacks supported by tanks. In the Narva Isthmus, the enemy attacked our positions with strong forces. Units of the Army and Germanic volunteers of the Waffen S.S. achieved a complete defensive success, and, destroying 53 tanks, inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

On the Vistula, bomber squadrons sank several loaded ferry boats and enemy landing craft.

In the course of the night, heavy bombers attacked enemy troop concentrations and assembly areas of the big Dniester bend.

USAAF bombers made terror raids on central Germany and the town of Bremen. The population suffered losses. The air defense forces brought down 34 enemy planes, 31 of which were four-engined bombers. During the night, British nuisance raiders bombed localities in western Germany. (Radio Berlin) arms deposited there. Other patriots took several prisoners at Ponte dell'Oglio.

German cars were seized by patriots near Piacenza. A bridge close to Cerrato, and another called Della Torretta, on the road between Reggio Emilia and Vinazzo, were blown up. (UNN)

WARSAW LISTENS TO SOVIET GUNS

MOSCOW, July 29 — Soviet guns and dive-bombers were today battering at the outer defensive arc round Warsaw, with Russian spearheads of tanks thrusting on the southeast of the city and within sight of it.

The big push was being staged with the weight of the Red Army aimed at the Polish capital, while other Soviet forces struck northward to wheel in from the east. The boom of Russian guns can now be heard continuously in Warsaw.

Fresh German troops, rushed out of the city by lorry, were being as quickly hurled back, shattered by the weight of the Russian guns, while other enemy groups, which had taken a beating further down the Vistula, raced towards the capital.

Far to the south of Warsaw, Marshal Koniev's armies were pushing on from the fallen bastion of Przemysl, on a direct route to Cracow, while to the northeast of the Polish capital another big Russian group would soon be freed by the imminent liquidation of three German divisions, the equivalent of 35,000 men trapped against the western Bug.

It has surpassed all expectations, even the most optimistic ones. It has broken all records, and created military history.

« For from showing any signs of slowing down, it is gaining a new momentum every day, and every day makes worse the strategic position of the main German forces.

« There is no sign yet of a major rout or final catastrophe of the German Army, but is is a fact that if there was no opposition at all, the Red Army could hardly be expected to move faster. The explanation lies not in a planned retreat or enemy stubbornness, but simply in the magnitude of the front and the physical inability of the Germans out of their present available reserves of men to fill the gaps in the line.

« To-day, there seems no likelihood that they will be able to do this, and no reason why the offensive should not continue without pause until Germany cracks. »

BBC reported that the 24th German Panzer Division was rushed from Rumania and thrown into the fighting at Przemysl fresh from the march. They were defeated with severe losses, and their brief adventure ended with the fall of Przemysl. BBC called this « a fresh failure for the German-Rumanian brotherhood in arms. »

A London TIMES correspondent said, « Perhaps the most significant news of all is that divisions are now being engaged which the enemy has to withdraw from Scandanavia, Rumania, and the Balkans. »

Eddy Gilmore, Associated Press correspondent, said in a dispatch from Moscow tonight that American workers in automobile factories have a big stake in the current Soviet offensive because the trucks which they made are the backbone of Soviet communications. Although the fighting is now further from Moscow than from Berlin, Gilmore said: « There has been no indication that the Red Army's communications are slowing up in the slightest. The fact is, they have never looked better. » (BBC - Reuter- AP)

STALIN AWARDED HIGHEST DECORATION

MOSCOW, July 29 — Marshal Joseph Stalin has been awarded the Order of Victory, the highest Soviet decoration, by Mikhail Kalinin, President of the Praesidium of the Supreme Council of the Union.

The award was made for his « outstanding services in the organisation of offensive operations of the Red Army, resulting in a major defeat of the German Army and in a fundamental change in the situation of the front, in the struggle against the German invaders, in favor of the Red Army. » (Reuter)

The Russian advance into the Baltic countries was making huge inroads towards the sea, with the Germans' peril increased with every yard gained.

The latest Soviet advances above Schaulen reduced the Germans' escape gap to less than 50 miles. The Russians had driven 25 miles along the railway that leads to Riga, and last night were expected to reach the Baltic within 48 hours.

The German news agency reported the loss of Kaunas, but its capture had not yet been claimed by Moscow. The German High Command, in a statement broadcast by the German radio, said: « The Russians have succeeded, in the past few days, in deeply breaching our front in several places. The German Command decided on a radical shortening of the front. »

Correspondents are finding it difficult effectually to portray the speed and range of the Soviet advance. The fighting was proceeding over such a vast area that factual reporting was apt to be out of date before they could get the news out to the world.

The Russian-front correspondent of the London NEWS CHRONICLE gave some idea of the situation when he cabled his paper: « The time has come when it is really impossible in words to do justice to this Russian offensive. the front and the physical inability of the Germans out of their present available reserves of men to fill the gaps in the line.

« To-day, there seems no likelihood that they will be able to do this, and no reason why the offensive should not continue without pause until Germany cracks. »

MINE EXPLODES NEAR KING GEORGE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 29 — Two German mines were exploded less than 300 yards from King George VI at lunch yesterday. Seated with the King were Lieut. General Mark Clark and other British and American military leaders, and Archbishop Spellman of New York.

The American soldier who inadvertently set off the mines was killed instantly. No one of the King's party was injured. He had just finished inspecting a parade of American troops when the accident happened. (Reuter)

U. S. TROOPS 10 MILES SOUTH OF COUTANCES

SHAEF, July 29 — The American advance is progressing steadily all along the Normandy Peninsula front, despite stiffening German resistance south and west of Coutances, vital communications center which was liberated yesterday.

In a swift drive, an American column captured St. Denis le Gast, nearly 10 miles to the southeast, and advanced units pressed on three miles further to the outskirts of Lengronne.

To the southwest, the town of Brehal was occupied, thus closing the main escape route along the coast. Another spearhead was within two miles of Percy, which lies 15 miles due east from Brehal.

West of Tessy and northwest of Villebaudon, a spokesman said, «considerable fighting is in progress.» From this area to the sea there are no indications that the Germans have succeeded in establishing any definite defense lines, he added.

East of St. Lô also the front is on the move, and American troops here took St. Jean des Bassants.

Since the American break-through, some 6,000 German prisoners have been taken. The enemy is withdrawing in an orderly fashion, but losing hundreds of vehicles to the cannon and rocket fire of Allied supporting aircraft.

One American tank column pushed south from Coutances so rapidly that a German regimental panzer commander was overtaken and captured while wandering around in a car looking for his collapsing front.

On the Caen front, mortar and machine-gun fire continues without any further major engagement.

Air reconnaissance photographs showed reinforcements moving up to meet the American advance, and front-line dispatches said there was still no sign of German weakening before the British and Canadians.

American Correspondent H. R. Knickerbocker wrote: «The Allied air support of the ground forces is so fierce and unrelenting that German soldiers die cursing the absence of their own aircraft. Long lines of prisoners, deathly white beneath their grime and beards, plodded to enclosures where they stood staring at the ground or shuddering as they looked up at the USAAF. Old soldiers who have served in Russia said that our bombing of their positions was the worst they had ever experienced.»

At breakfast time today, RAF Spitfires dropped more than 12 tons of bombs on the village of Serignac from tree-top height, and wiped out what was believed to be a German headquarters.

25 German Divisions

Details of the disposition of German forces on the Normandy front were given here yesterday.

The Germans have some 25 divisions opposing the Allies, divided roughly into half on the American sector, and half on the British and Canadian sector. The bulk of the German armor is unquestionably on the Caen sector and distributed against the British and Canadians in the eastern portion.

Of the enemy reinforcements which have been brought up, two divisions, the 271st and the 272nd, came in on the Caen sector at full strength other units brought up have been below full strength.

There are eight first-grade panzer and SS panzer divisions on the Normandy Front, four of which have been known to be east of the Orne, southeast of Caen, in a highly confined space, confronting the British and the Canadians.

On the American sector are the 2nd SS Panzer and the Lehr Panzer Divisions, as well as the 17th SS Panzer Grenadier Division. The latter is motorized infantry, but

ROMMEL REPORTED SERIOUSLY INJURED

U. S. ARMY HQ, NORMANDY, July 29 — A German officer captured by the Americans stated that Field Marshal Rommel had been wounded and that the car removing him from the front overturned and left him unconscious by the side of the road for six hours, a Reuter correspondent reported today.

The prisoner added that Rommel was still in a serious condition. (Reuter)

MERSEBURG REFINERY BOMBED AGAIN

LONDON, July 29 — More than 1,100 heavy bombers of the 8th Air Force returned to Germany this morning and attacked the Leuna synthetic refinery at Merseburg for the second successive day, it was officially announced. The force also struck targets near Bremen. Some formations of bombers bombed visually, but others found that the clouds were heavy enough to require the use of pathfinder instruments.

The Leuna factory is the largest of the synthetic oil factories in Germany which are still producing. (Reuter)

Hamburg, Stuttgart Blasted

Targets in Frankfurt, Stuttgart, and Hamburg were hit by British-based bombers last night, the Air Ministry announced today. Mosquitoes attacked Frankfurt. More than 1,000 other bombers concentrated on Stuttgart and Hamburg.

Over Stuttgart, thick cloud made observation difficult, but the weather was more clear over Hamburg and crews reported large fires burning in the target area.

In numerous combats over Germany 21 enemy fighters were shot down.

Germany's dwindling oil supplies suffered again during yesterday when 1,000 Flying Fortresses, escorted by hundreds of fighters, took off from Britain and attacked the synthetic oil plants at Merseburg. Bombs were dropped through thick clouds by instrument. Of the few German fighters seen, five were destroyed. Seven American bombers and two fighters are missing from this operation.

Flying from bases in Italy, 500 American bombers hit Ploesti oilfields in Rumania for the third time in 24 hours yesterday. There is now not one oil plant left in Germany or German-occupied territory which has not been bombed and severely damaged by Allied air forces.

Yesterday, Allied fighter-bombers, scourging Rommel's fleeing columns in Normandy, shot up 194 German tanks and destroyed 884 motor vehicles.

In northern France, two forces of Halifaxes made further attacks on a supply depot near Watten, in the Pas de Calais.

Mines were laid in enemy waters.

From these operations, 62 Allied aircraft are missing. (Reuter)

NAZIS SHOCKED IN RECORD BOMBING

LONDON, July 29 — The terrific bombing by the United States 9th Air Force which preceded the American drive along the Saint Lô-Periers road inflicted great damage on the Germans, said Major General Louis H. Brereton to the press on Wednesday.

He said that initial statements from German prisoners indicated that the bombing was the most severe blow yet dealt to the German ground forces, and that they suffered very severe shock and shattered morale.

On the American sector are the 2nd SS Panzer and the Lehr Panzer Divisions, as well as the 17th SS Panzer Grenadier Division. The latter is motorized infantry, but has no supporting tanks.

Officials here reported that from June 6 to July 27, the Luftwaffe has lost 110 aircraft engaged in night operations over the beaches of the Normandy battlefront. This figure does not include enemy planes shot down by Allied intruder patrols.

During this time, the enemy mounted no night operations in strength against Allied positions or lines of communications. The average figure for a « large scale » night attack by the Luftwaffe has been 70 or 80 planes.

Contrite Prisoners

Among the German prisoners captured in the latest American drive were some Waffen SS troops who had torn the SS insignia off their uniforms and the « death's head » emblems from their caps.

They tried to disclaim all connexion with the Nazi party and quickly pointed out that they were « really good boys at heart who had been drafted into the SS. »

This lowering of morale was attributable, the prisoners said, to continued promises made by the German High Command which were never fulfilled. One of their principal complaints was the absence of the Luftwaffe over the battlefront. (BBC - Reuter - OWI)

He said that initial statements from German prisoners indicated that the bombing was the most severe blow yet dealt to the German ground forces, and that they suffered very severe shock and shattered morale.

The 9th Air Force commander said that the whole German communication system was wrecked for miles behind the line, and that the enemy command was completely out of touch with its troops until late Tuesday night.

The 8th and 9th Air Forces made a concentrated attack with between 2,500 and 3,000 planes on an area only a few miles long and less than 500 yards deep, parallel to the Saint Lô-Perriers road. Brereton added that the bulk of the bombs were placed in the small area where they were intended.

The bomber force consisted of 1,500 Fortresses and Liberators, 500 Marauders and Havocs, and numerous Lightnings and Thunderbolt dive-bombers. The bombardment lasted two hours and 50 minutes. Nothing larger than 100-pound bombs was used, so there would be no huge craters left to hinder the advancing infantry. Thousands of small anti-personnel bombs were dropped in clusters.

RAF ATTACKS SEA-BORNE REINFORCEMENTS

KIWIS FIVE MILES FROM FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 29 — New Zealand tanks and infantry forces, in a spectacular night advance north of the Pesa River, have smashed through the enemy's last hill positions southwest of Florence, and, despite violent counter-attacks, are pressing forward only five miles from Tuscany's chief city.

The New Zealand attack, launched Thursday night from the bridgehead across the Arno's tributary at Cerbaia, eight miles southwest of Florence, swept forward more than two miles in a spectacular break through the enemy's heavily defended hill positions. Shortly after dawn the shattered German forces rallied, and in savage counter-attacks battered back the leading New Zealand company 800 yards, before the battle line was stabilized at less than six miles from Florence.

Latest reports received here this morning indicated heavy fighting for the high ground overlooking Florence from five miles southwest. Eighth Army forces were also reported to be pressing hard on the Germans' hill defenses directly south of Florence.

One column of tanks and infantry forces, pushing north along Highway 2, the main road into Florence from Poggibonsi, was temporarily held up at a point a little over five miles south of the city, after encountering extensive minefields and demolitions. South African forces thrust several thousand yards north and northeast of Mercatale to cross the Greve River two miles south of the village of Impruneta, placing them within seven miles of Florence. The third force, working its way along a secondary road roughly six miles east of Highway 2, and following the Ema River Valley to meet the Arno near Florence, were within 1,600 yards of Strada in Chianti yesterday.

The 8th Army forces closing in on Empoli, key road and rail point 15 miles west of Florence, had met little active enemy opposition, although they were within two miles of the town. Infantrymen were gradually clearing up isolated groups of enemy resistance in the sector bound by the Arno River and its tributary, the Pesa. Forward troops were within 2 1/2 miles of Montelupo, at the junction of the two streams, and 11 miles west of Florence. The capture of Montelupo and Empoli would put all but an 11-mile stretch of the key lateral rail and road lines connecting Florence and Leghorn in Allied hands.

Enemy Struggling

It was believed here that the enemy would not relinquish his grip on these key towns without a struggle, probably based on main positions on the outskirts of Empoli and Montelupo, or perhaps on the railway embankment between Route 67 and the Arno River. The Germans have already staged heavy counter-attacks in this area, in abortive attempts to turn the right flank of American forces of the 5th Army advancing to occupy the south banks of the Arno. Attempts have also been made to build entrenchments along the railway line.

In mopping-up operations in this sector, 8th Army forces occupied the villages of Scognano, 3 1/2 miles west of Cerbaia, and Bottinaccio, 5 1/2 miles west of this hamlet on the Pesa River.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish forces of the 8th Army yesterday occupied the southern part of the fishing village of Senigallia, 16 miles northwest of Ancona, and at the mouth of the Misa River. The bridgehead across this stream further inland was being gradually expanded against considerable enemy resistance.

Troops of the Corps of Italian Liberation repulsed strong enemy counter-attacks in their sector southwest of Ostra, 11 miles in from the Adriatic, and northwest of Iesi, on the Musone River, eight miles to the southeast.

Just west of the Arno River where it twists to the enemy planes. A dense smoke screen protected the target area, so that the planes were forced to bomb by instruments; yet telling hits were made which caused flames and smoke visible for over 100 miles.

The heavy bombers operated in weather which grounded all medium aircraft. Light bombers and fighter-bombers hit military objectives at Rapallo and Santa Margherita along the Ligurian coast and at least five rail bridges were struck in the same general area.

1,008 Enemy Planes

Pilots of a fighter wing of the 15th AAF have destroyed a total of 1,008 enemy planes in less than four months, a victory ratio of six to one over enemy interceptors, it was announced here today.

The long-range Mustang pilots were credited with all 11 victories over Ploesti yesterday.

Generals to U. S.

Two American generals, commanding two veteran U. S. divisions, are returning to the United States to receive "important new assignments," it was announced here today.

The two generals, Major General Charles Ryder, commanding the 34th Infantry Division, now more than two years overseas, and Major General E. N. Harmon, commanding the 1st Armored Division, have brilliant records of leadership during the North African and Italian campaigns. (PRO)

KING VISITS FIGHTING TROOPS

WITH THE EIGHTH ARMY, July 29 — The King visited the front line yesterday and drove through detachments of South Africans, Rhodesians, New Zealanders, and British Guards who lined the streets of a village near the front.

On the top of the municipal building flew the Italian flag, the only flag on view, symbolic of liberated Italy and befitting the task the troops had come from all corners of the earth to perform.

A South African brigadier was first introduced to the King, who then chatted with many of the men.

Later, the King and his entourage emplaned at an airstrip recently built near the front and flew off. The troops immediately mustered and returned to the line.

While at 8th Army headquarters, the King received more than a score of war correspondents, who were presented by General Sir Oliver Leese, 8th Army commander.

The King spoke separately to the correspondents. The group included representatives of the British, Indian, South African, Canadian, Australian, American, and Brazilian press. (UNN)

NAZIS DEVASTATE SAN CASCIANO

WITH THE EIGHTH ARMY, July 29 — San Casciano, 10 miles from its main square to the main square of Florence, was liberated Thursday morning by New Zealand troops.

At 0430 hours, the last German was driven out of the town and at 0500 hours the first New Zealander entered it.

A UNN reporter yesterday found the town a shambles. Everywhere there were indelible scars of the German occupation. In the course of the fighting for the town, a notable milestone on the way to Florence, a number of buildings were damaged, but the Germans, 30 minutes before their hurried departure, demolished most of the buildings skirting the main streets to provide road blocks for the advancing New Zealanders.

The result is that, at a conservative estimate, 60 per cent

bonsi, was temporarily held up at a point [illegible] miles south of the city, after encountering extensive minefields and demolitions. South African forces thrust several thousand yards north and northeast of Mercatale to cross the Greve River two miles south of the village of Impruneta, placing them within seven miles of Florence. The third force, working its way along a secondary road roughly six miles east of Highway 2, and following the Ema River Valley to meet the Arno near Florence, were within 1,600 yards of Strada in Chianti yesterday.

The 8th Army forces closing in on Empoli, key road and rail point 15 miles west of Florence, had met little active enemy opposition, although they were within two miles of the town. Infantrymen were gradually clearing up isolated groups of enemy resistance in the sector bound by the Arno River and its tributary, the Pesa. Forward troops were within 2 1/2 miles of Montelupo, at the junction of the two streams, and 11 miles west of Florence. The capture of Montelupo and Empoli would put all but an 11-mile stretch of the key lateral rail and road lines connecting Florence and Leghorn in Allied hands.

Enemy Struggling

It was believed here that the enemy would not relinquish his grip on these key towns without a struggle, probably based on main positions on the outskirts of Empoli and Montelupo, or perhaps on the railway embankment between Route 67 and the Arno River. The Germans have already staged heavy counter-attacks in this area, in abortive attempts to turn the right flank of American forces of the 5th Army advancing to occupy the south banks of the Arno. Attempts have also been made to build entrenchments along the railway line.

In mopping-up operations in this sector, 8th Army forces occupied the villages of Scognano, 3 1/2 miles west of Cerbaia, and Bottinaccio, 5 1/2 miles west of this hamlet on the Pesa River.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish forces of the 8th Army yesterday occupied the southern part of the fishing village of Senigallia, 16 miles northwest of Ancona, and at the mouth of the Misa River. The bridgehead across this stream further inland was being gradually expanded against considerable enemy resistance.

Troops of the Corps of Italian Liberation repulsed strong enemy counter-attacks in their sector southwest of Ostra, 11 miles in from the Adriatic, and northwest of Iesi, on the Musone River, eight miles to the southeast.

Just west of the Arno River where it twists to the south in the steep valley between the Chianti and the Pratomagno Mountains, 8th Army troops captured hill crests just opposite Figline in Val d'Arno, 15 miles southeast of Florence. East of the river, forces were pushing to within two miles of Castel Franco, 3 1/2 miles east of Figline. German gun concentrations in Castel Franco and throughout the Pratomagno Mountains slowed the advance in the entire area of the 8th Army bridgehead across the Arno in this sector. British and Indian troops reported progress in the vicinity of Campriano, 4 1/2 miles northeast of Arezzo, and other forces were nearing Anghiari, in the Tiber Valley 10 miles east of Arezzo.

On the 5th Army front, only routine patrols and artillery and small-arms exchanges were reported.

19 MAAF Bombers Lost

Italy-based bombers which attacked Axis oil installations at Ploesti and the rail supply center of Florina in Greece yesterday lost 19 bombers as a result of intense enemy flak which attempted to protect these vital targets, it was announced here today.

Although large numbers of enemy fighters strove to intercept the formations of up to 500 flying Fortresses and Liberators, not a single one penetrated the fighter escort of long-rang Mustangs and Lightnings which downed 11

The result is that, at a conservative estimate, 60 per cent of the buildings are no more than rubble, entirely roofless, with walls sheer piles of broken bricks and mortar, and with smashed doors and shattered window panes, littering the streets with debris.

The cathedral and municipal offices were entirely devastated. The water supply and electric power system were smashed. (UNN)

U. S. MINESWEEPER SUNK IN MEDITERRANEAN

WASHINGTON, July 29 — The American minesweeper U. S. S. SWERVE was sunk in the Mediterranean recently as the result of enemy action, the U. S. Navy Department announced in a communique today.

The Associated Press stated that this sinking brought to 172 the number of U. S. naval vessels lost to date. (OWI)

YUGOSLAV PARTISANS CAPTURE URINA

LONDON, July 29 — The capture of Urina, in Montenegro, and the continuation of the Yugoslav Partisan attack on a wide front northwest of Bjelo Polje were announced in Marshal Tito's communique broadcast today over the Free Yugoslav Radio.

An enemy offensive column was attacked and surrounded in the Upper Lim Valley, and enemy troops are now being mopped up. Andrijevic was bombed by Allied air forces, the communique added.

The announcement also said that the Zagreb-Sisak railway line has been demolished at seven points, and one enemy train derailed. A locomotive and seven railway cars were destroyed, and 225 enemy soldiers killed. Railway lines in Slavonia and Slovenia have been blown up in many places. (PWB)

SUPER-FORTRESSES HIT MUKDEN AREA

WASHINGTON, July 29 — Super-Fortresses made a daylight attack Saturday on Japanese industrial targets in Anshan, in the Mukden area of eastern Manchuria.

The announcement said that the Super-Forts came from bases in western China.

It was the first daylight attack by Super-Fortresses and the weather was reported favorable for high altitude bombing. Two earlier operations, on June 15 against Yawata and on July 7 against Yawata and Sasebo, were night attacks at low level.

Anshan is about 60 miles southwest of Mukden and about 150 miles northeast of Dairen. A city of 200,000, Anshan is one of the most important producers of chemical by-products vital to Japanese manufacture of munitions. Its output, according to press reports, includes a substantial percentage of the total Japanese production of benzine, toluene, phenol, and synthetic oils. Anshan mills are the second largest producers of pig iron, and the third largest of rolled steel and steel ingots in Japanese-controlled territories.

The official announcement of the Super-Fortress raid said that another force of Super-Fortresses made a diversionary attack on the Chengshien railway yards in the northern Hunan Province, bottleneck of the Peiping-Hankow railway, which the Japanese are now furiously rebuilding, according to an Associated Press dispatch.

The Associated Press also said it was estimated officially that it would take the Japanese 12 months to rebuild some of the intricate installations hit by the huge USAAF bombers in today's attack. (PWB)

ALLIES MAKE GAINS ON GUAM

WASHINGTON, July 29 — The Navy Department said that United States forces have made substantial gains on all sectors in Guam.

Admiral Nimitz announced that there was heavy fighting Thursday, in which 4,700 Japanese were killed. Marines made gains of over two miles against stubborn resistance and occupied Mount Tenjo, two miles inland.

American troops also captured Elutan and Chacha, in the central sector of Guam.

Japanese dead buried on Saipan now number 21,036.

General MacArthur's communique to-day reported air attacks on Japanese shipping at several points. In addition to a merchant ship sunk off Ceram Island, it said that a coastal vessel was sunk and a 2,000-ton freighter left on fire off Vogelkop, Dutch New Guinea. Fighters destroyed a supply-laden barge and damaged three others off Sorong, and several small craft were destroyed or damaged in Geelvink Bay.

JAP GOVERNMENT REORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, July 29 — Radio Tokio yesterday told of the continuation of the Japanese government reorganization, with the resignations of Goro Murata, vice president of the Information Board, and Funio Goto, vice president of the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, which is Japan's single political group.

Earlier, Tokyo announced the appointment of Kakichi Takeuchi as new vice minister of munitions, and seven shifts in less important government posts.

The Tokyo home radio appealed Friday for police officers for China. The appeal came three days after the announcement that the Chinese quisling, General Yang Mao-Lin, had been shot and killed by Chinese Patriots, who escaped.

The shortage of manpower is also being felt in Japan, a Japanese-controlled Korean broadcast indicated. The broadcast said that the first aviation training center in Korea would be opened soon to train Korean boys aged from 15 to 17. Earlier broadcast asked for Korean recruits for the Japanese merchant marine and navy. (OWI)

CHINESE STILL HOLDING HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 29 — The city of Hengyang, besieged for 33 days, is still in Chinese hands, and Chinese tank forces are being rushed to southern Hunan front, where the Japs have concentrated 11 divisions, today's Chinese communique announced.

The Chinese military spokesman said that heavier fighting for the possession of the city may be expected. Japanese forces in the southwestern suburbs of the city are making a desperate attempt to prevent Chinese reinforcements from reaching the beleaguered city.

It was also announced that Chinese troops have wiped out enemy units south of Leiyang and have reduced several enemy strongholds southwest of Liling.

From Kandy, Ceylon, a Southeast Asia Command communique reported Japanese resistance on Paiel was weakening after six days' continuous fighting. The Allies are now within eight miles of Tamu on the Tiddim road, where the Japanese are still avoiding contact with Allied troops. American and Chinese troops made advances in all sectors of the Myitkyina front.

Bombers of General Chennault's Chinese-American wing destroyed 34 Japanese planes Friday. (PWB)

U. S. SUBS SINK 17 JAP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, July 29 — American submarines have sunk 17 more Japanese ships, including one small war vessel, the U. S. Navy Department announced tonight.

The U.S. Navy communique which announced the sinking of 17 enemy ships in the Pacific and the Far East said that the enemy ships sunk were one escort vessel, one large cargo transport, one medium tanker, one medium transport, three medium cargo transports, six medium cargo vessels, and four small cargo vessels.

The announcement raises the Japanese shipping losses to 38 in two days. Yesterday, the British Admiralty announced the sinking of 21 enemy craft by British submarines in Far Eastern waters.

The sinking of the 17 enemy ships raised to 823 the number of enemy vessels sunk or damaged by American submarines alone since the war started. This total includes 671 craft definitely sunk, 37 probably sunk, and 115 damaged. Among the vessels definitely destroyed were 53 warships. Against these losses, only 27 American submarines have been reported lost since the war began.

Today's announcement is the third this month on U.S. submarine successes in the attack on the hard-pressed Japanese supply lines to Southwest and Central Pacific bases. (OWI)

LONDON, July 29 — Marcel Deat, Vichy Minister of Labor, is openly at loggerheads with Laval and in an open letter has declared that preparations for evacuating the people of Normandy from the war zone are a public disgrace. The letter added that Deat was going to put all the facts of the Vichy Government's procrastination and indecision before the public at a mass meeting in the Salle Wagram in Paris.

Deat demanded dictatorial powers to overrule all police and prefectorial decisions.

Laval's reply was to order the Paris police to occupy the Salle Wagram and prohibit the meeting. He told Deat that he objected to such matters being discussed in public.

A breakdown between French collaborationists and the Germans was reported in a broadcast by NBC, which stated that three weeks ago Deat, together with Jean Bichelonne, production secretary, and Abel Bonnard, secretary of education, all well-known collaborationists, wrote a letter to Hitler pointing out a further weakening of collaboration in France. VICHYITE KILLED BY PATRIOTS

LONDON, July 29 — Reuter quoted the German News Agency as saying that the Vichy Government delegate for Jewish questions in Lyons, Marcel Carrell, has been shot dead. The Germans described the marksmen as « terrorists. » Also killed in the car in which Carrel was riding was Octave Bellier, inspector of the police communications service. (Reuter)

COOPERATIVE SALUTE PARTISANS

The paper added that inhabitants of this territory have been instructed to take with them a two-day supply of food, a minimum quantity of water, some kitchen utensils, and a blanket. Meeting centers for the evacuees are Nice, Antibes, and Cannes, and those living in coastal communities will have to reach these centers by by-passes, not by national roads.

The Stockholm newspaper SVENSKA DAGBLADET said Tuesday that the Germans have removed long-range guns from some points in the Oslo Fjord, and some schools used as barracks by the soldiers during the German occupation have been evacuated.

A report from the Czechoslovak Council in America said Monday that German newspapers in Prague are now publishing advertisements in which German owners of property in Moravia and Bohemia offer to exchange it for similar property in southwestern Germany. (PWB)

SWISS DEMONSTRATE AGAINST NAZIS

ZURICH, July 29 — Several thousand Swiss workers demonstrated at Basle Cathedral Square on Thursday against « German terror methods and the massacre of defenseless citizens unprecedented in the world's history. »

The meeting appealed to the Swiss Federal Council to do all in its power to save those threatened with extinction, and to give sanctuary to all those who fled to the Swiss frontier from German terror, but never to grant refuge to those responsible for these « brutal crimes. »

« Fascism is entirely responsible for them, and everything must be done to bring it to book, » said one speaker.

The meeting passed a resolution of protest, against « the brutal murder of many hundreds of thousands of Jews in Hungary, against attempts to barter surviving Hungarian Jews for war material, and against the burning of whole villages and the shooting of hostages. »

The demonstration, which was addressed by prominent citizens and politicians, condemned the system behind all these cruelties-the aim of which was defined in Hermann Goering's statement on March 3, 1933: « It is not my task to exercise justice, but to annihilate and exterminate. » (PWB)

SWISS TO HELP NAZI VICTIMS

BERNE, July 29 — A committee has been formed in the Swiss Canton De Vaud to help the French population of Saint Gingolph, the village on the French-Swiss frontier recently devastated by the Germans, the Swiss Radio said Friday. The inhabitants were forced to abandon everything to seek refuge in Switzerland, and lost most of their possessions.

The committee, organized by the De Vaud newspapers, is making a public appeal for funds. The Swiss radio added: « The Swiss population around the Lake of Geneva can thus show their active sympathy with the innocent civilian victims. » (OWI)

250,000 IN DUTCH UNDERGROUND

LONDON, July 29 — There are 250,000 men and women concerned in the Dutch underground movement, the Netherlands agency ANETA reported today.

About 12,000 Dutch are now interned as political prisoners in their own contry, and some 14,000 are captives in Germany.

Published lists of death sentences are lengthening. There are also much longer lists which are not published, the agency said. (OWI)

COOPERATIVE SALUTE PARTISANS

LONDON, July 29 — The First Lord of the Admiralty, Mr. A. V. Alexander, said in a recent broadcast to Czechoslovakia that, as one of the leaders of the cooperatives in Britain, he hoped to see the restoration of a strong and united cooperative movement in liberated Czechoslovakia.

The International Cooperative Alliance, said Alexander, is now preparing to help in the rehabilitation of cooperatives in Europe.

« We, the British cooperative movement, salute the brave fight which is being made in different countries by the Underground movement. You have suffered long years of oppression, but it will not be long before we shall speak freely to you in your own land. »

NAZIS PLAN MASS EVACUATIONS

NEW YORK, July 29 — Neutral press comment received here yesterday indicates that mass evacuations are being planned by the Germans in the French Mediterranean coast areas, and have already been carried out in Oslo Norway.

The Swiss newspaper FEUILLE D'AVIS DE NEUCHATEL said Thursday that a vast evacuation plan is under way in case the war reaches the French Mediterranean coast. It is said that under the plan, inhabitants will leave Nice by foot and travel over roads designated by German authorities, and that motor or horse-drawn vehicles will have permission to travel on these roads.

WAR COMMUNIQUES

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 29 — Today's communique:

LAND: Troops of the 8th Army are now approaching the Arno on a wide front west of Florence, and are within two miles of the important town of Empoli. Farther east, other 8th Army troops are engaged in heavy fighting for the high ground overlooking Florence, five miles to the southwest of the city.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish troops have entered the town of Senigallia, and increased their bridgeheads over the River Misa.

On the 5th Army front, activity is still confined to patrols and heavy artillery duels.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked oil refineries at Ploesti, Rumania, and a rail yard at Florina in northern Greece.

Tactical aircraft continued their attacks on enemy communications and supply lines, as well as other military objectives, in Northern Italy, in the battle area, and in Yugoslavia.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789121

In these operations, 12 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 25 of ours are missing. One of our aircraft is missing from night operations of July 27/28.

MAAF: flew approximately 1,700 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, July 29 — Today's communique:

Coutances is now clear of the enemy, and Allied armored forces have reached the sea south of the estuary of the Sienne River. Areas of enemy resistance north of the town are being rapidly cleared.

Further progress has been made by a thrust southwest from Notre Dame le Cenilly.

In support of ground operations yesterday, fighter-bombers attacked ammunition distribution points, enemy gun positions, enemy reserves, and vehicles. Other fighter-bombers and long-range fighters on armed reconnaissance over northwest France attacked locomotives, rolling stock, and road transport.

Targets for our medium and light bombers were eight rail bridges northwest of Paris, an important ammunition dump in the Foret de Senonches near Chartres, and rail centers north of Bernay. Last night, light bombers attacked 18 trains and many road targets in northern France.

Coastal aircraft attacked small enemy vessels off Saint Malo yesterday. One boat carrying troops was sunk. Five enemy aircraft were shot down over the beachhead last night. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 29 — Tonight's communique:

Allied armored columns in the western sector continue to advance against stiffening resistance.

One column has reached the coast west of Coutances and taken the town of Pont de la Roque. Another column reached Hyenville, south of Coutances. Pockets of resistance at Cerisy la Salle and Montpichon have been mopped up.

The salient between Villebaudon and St. Denis le Gast has been cleared of the enemy. The town of Hambye has been taken.

Southeast of St. Lô, Allied forces have advanced several kilometers.

German buildings near Morlaix were attacked by fighter-bombers this morning. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI — July 29 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Commanding officers of the Italian Patriots met in Suvoie Haute with chiefs of the French «Maquis.» Important measures have been adopted, in order to make more active the collaboration between Italian and French Patriots, and to coordinate the plans and the time of the next operations.

A great number of Italian artillery soldiers from St. Jean de Luz coast batteries passed to the French Maquis.

The Italian National Committee of Liberation for North Italy concluded an accord, approved by Marshal Tito, with the Slovene Liberation Committee, in order to create a common combat unit disregarding national distinctions. On the strength of this accord, Patriot actions in the respective zones will be intensified.

Meanwhile, Patriot activity in occupied Italy is maintained intense.

Sabotage acts were accomplished on the Genoa-Ovada railway, and on the Genoa-Ovada-Serravalle road.

In Bologna, a train loaded with petrol was set on fire. The number of German vehicles destroyed between Modenn and Bologna amounts to 26. (UNN)

On the western wing of the beachhead front, our divisions withdrew to the area on both sides of Coutances with the enemy pressing hard on their heels. All enemy attacks on the new positions were frustrated.

An enemy freighter of 6,000 tons was seriously damaged by torpedo planes off the beachhead.

On the night of July 26, motor assault boats sank two British speedboats and damaged several others. One German boat was lost.

In France, 189 terrorists were killed in fighting.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

In Italy, the second enemy large-scale attack on Florence was repulsed. Eight enemy divisions, supported by extremely intense artillery fire, again and again unsuccessfully attacked our front. In the evening, after grim fighting in tropical heat, the positions were being held firmly by our troops. Twenty tanks were destroyed.

In the other front sectors, west of the Tiber and in the coastal sector, the enemy limited himself to minor attacks which were frustrated.

In the East, in the foothills of the Carpathians, fierce Soviet attacks were smashed, partly by counter-attacks.

East of the big Vistula bend, the enemy approached the river with strong forces. An attempt at crossing the river was frustrated.

Southeast of Warsaw and at Siedlice, grim fighting is in progress. Between the middle reaches of the Bug and Kaunas, our troops repelled all enemy attempts at breaking through.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

In the Kaunas-Riga sector, the enemy pressure increased. The enemy, despite the grim resistance of the garrison, penetrated into the town of Shaulai.

Enemy forces advancing toward Mitau were again dislodged from the town in a counter-attack.

On the front between the Duena and the Gulf of Finland, yesterday, many Bolshevik attacks also were frustrated; 43 enemy tanks were destroyed.

Bomber squadrons destroyed 40 other tanks, numerous guns, and some hundred vehicles.

In the night, heavy bombers made a concentrated attack on the station of Molodechno, causing heavy fires and explosions among transport planes on the ground.

Fighting Soviet Bombers attacked the town of Kirkenes. Our fighters brought down two enemy planes.

U. S. Bombers made daylight attacks on central and western Germany, also raiding Wiesbaden and Merseburg.

In the night, Stuttgart and Hamburg were the targets of enemy terror attacks. Air defense forces brought down 97 enemy planes, 95 of which were four-engined bombers.

WAR FRONTS

BREST-LITOVSK, PRZEMYSL, YAROSLAV FALL

MOSCOW, July 28 — The Red Army, striking at a retreating enemy with a speed and ferocity unequalled in modern warfare, moved further westward, capturing bypassed Brest-Litovsk, large eastern defense bastion to Warsaw, and taking two vital towns in south central Poland, Przemysl and Yaroslav.

What is happening to the German armies on the Eastern Front is best summed up by the London TIMES, which stated: « The German armies, reeling backwards from the ruins of their enterprise against Russia, approach every day to a catastrophe surpassing that of 1813. »

The liquidation of Brest-Litovsk by one portion of Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army was only a minor task, compared to what the rest of his forces are doing in their drive on Warsaw. Already, according to correspondents, his army is within artillery distance of the Polish capital. Three great columns of his army are moving on Warsaw from the southeast, under clouds of Stormovik fighter-bombers.

the Germans are frantically trying to move their war plants, but are having little success because of insufficient rolling stock on Polish railways.

The capture of Brest-Litovsk was also a moral triumph for the Russians. It was the first large city to fall to the Germans when the Nazis attacked in 1941. It was also the city in which the Russians were forced to sign a bitter and merciless treaty with the Germans in 1917.

Przemysl, a key communications center on the northern fringe of the Carpathians, is approximately 60 miles due west of Lvov. It denies the Germans a complete communication zone west of Lvov. Yaroslav, the other captured town, is 7 miles north of Prezmysl. Both towns are on the west bank of the San River.

On the Baltic sector, Marshal Govorov was steadily widening the gap in the Estonian wall, while the 1st and 2nd Baltic armies put the Germans on the run toward the sea.

Nazi Front Convulsed

The plan for the elimination of the entire German northern group from the coming battle for East Prussia was progressing toward a certainty on all sectors. The simultaneous fall of six major strongholds yesterday threw the German front into one vast convulsion 1,000 miles long.

From Latvia to the Carpathians, the Russians burst through the Wehrmacht positions yesterday.

With Bialystok stormed, General Zakharov was free to speed on to Warsaw and develop a double drive to East Prussia, 50 miles away. The capture of Stanislavov, German Fortress at the gateway to the Carpathians, forces open the road through the mountain passes into Czechoslovakia.

A communique reported street fighting in Siedlice, 50 miles east of Warsaw, and the capture of Rudnik, on the west bank of the river.

Siedlice is on the railway from Brest-Litovsk. Rudnik is 50 miles northwest of Przemysl, and lies on the Lvov-Lodz railway.

The supplement to the Soviet communique, describing the capture of Dvinsk, said:

« The Germans had prepared for a protracted defense of the town and their troops had orders to defend it even if it were completely encircled. Soviet tanks and infantry, however, cut the Dvinsk-Riga road and emerged at the Duvina River. All German attempts to reestablish their broken communications failed. Russian troops smashed the mighty defenses, and, following fierce battles, Dvinsk was entirely cleared.

In the course of the battle for the town, Soviet troops routed units of three German infantry divisions, two SS regiments, and a police regiment. »

Of the capture of Schaulen, the supplement said that Soviet troops, after a 44-mile drive, cut the Schaulen-Riga

BREST-LITOVSK, PRZEMYSL, YAROSLAV FALL

MOSCOW, July 28 — The Red Army, striking at a retreating enemy with a speed and ferocity unequalled in modern warfare, moved further westward, capturing bypassed Brest-Litovsk, large eastern defense bastion to Warsaw, and taking two vital towns in south central Poland, Przemysl and Yaroslav.

What is happening to the German armies on the Eastern Front is best summed up by the London TIMES, which stated: « The German armies, reeling backwards from the ruins of their enterprise against Russia, approach every day to a catastrophe surpassing that of 1813. »

The liquidation of Brest-Litovsk by one portion of Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army was only a minor task, compared to what the rest of his forces are doing in their drive on Warsaw. Already, according to correspondents, his army is within artillery distance of the Polish capital. Three great columns of his army are moving on Warsaw from the southeast, under clouds of Stormovik fighter-bombers.

530 Nazis Die Hourly

Killing Germans at the rate of 530 every hour, and advancing at a rate described by one correspondent as putting « all previous conceptions of time and space in mechanized warfare in the shade, » the Red Army crossed the Vistula in a brilliant amphibious maneuver to bring it within striking distance of Warsaw. At the point where they crossed this, the last natural barrier for at least 100 miles to the west, the Red Army was 140 miles from the German frontier and 200 miles from the Breslau center and the priceless Silesian resources.

The Germans are retreating, it was admitted by Lieutenant Colonel Alfred Von Olberg, German Overseas News Agency correspondent, who said that under pressure of both Generals Rokossovsky's and Koniev's armies, the German « position had become untenable. »

So fast were the Russians moving that they had to shunt the Germans they have captured to side roads in their trek to the rear of the Russian lines in the east.

As the Red Army moves on Warsaw, the confusion among the Germans, who have made it the center of extermination for thousands of Poles, verges on panic, said the Swedish newspaper, AFTONTIDNINGEN. Patriots within Warsaw have taken a hand in the liquidation of hated German officials who have not yet fled and already, the paper added, two German SS guards known to have been especially cruel to Poles have been killed. They are Georg Hinner and Hans Harig. The newspaper also reported that cation zone west of Lvov. Yaroslav, the other important town, is 7 miles north of Przemysl. Both towns are on the west bank of the San River.

On the Baltic sector, Marshal Govorov was steadily widening the gap in the Estonian wall, while the 1st and 2nd Baltic armies put the Germans on the run toward the sea.

Nazi Front Convulsed

The plan for the elimination of the entire German northern group from the coming battle for East Prussia was progressing toward a certainty on all sectors. The simultaneous fall of six major strongholds yesterday threw the German front into one vast convulsion 1,000 miles long.

From Latvia to the Carpathians, the Russians burst through the Wehrmacht positions yesterday.

With Bialystok stormed, General Zakharov was free to speed on to Warsaw and develop a double drive to East Prussia, 50 miles away. The capture of Stanislavov, German Fortress at the gateway to the Carpathians, forces open the road through the mountain passes into Czechoslovakia.

A communique reported street fighting in Siedlice, 50 miles east of Warsaw, and the capture of Rudnik, on the west bank of the river.

Siedlice is on the railway from Brest-Litovsk. Rudnik is 50 miles northwest of Przemysl, and lies on the Lvov-Lodz railway.

The supplement to the Soviet communique, describing the capture of Dvinsk, said:

« The Germans had prepared for a protracted defense of the town and their troops had orders to defend it even if it were completely encircled. Soviet tanks and infantry, however, cut the Dvinsk-Riga road and emerged at the Duvina River. All German attempts to reestablish their broken communications failed. Russian troops smashed the mighty defenses, and, following fierce battles, Dvinsk was entirely cleared.

In the course of the battle for the town, Soviet troops routed units of three German infantry divisions, two SS regiments, and a police regiment. »

Of the capture of Schaulen, the supplement said that Soviet troops, after a 44-mile drive, cut the Schaulen-Riga

530 Nazis Die Hourly

Killing Germans at the rate of 530 every hour, and the Germans are frantically trying to move their war plants, but are having little success because of insufficient rolling stock on Polish railways.

The capture of Brest-Litovsk was also a moral triumph for the Russians. It was the first large city to fall to the Germans when the Nazis attacked in 1941. It was also the city in which the Russians were forced to sign a bitter and merciless treaty with the Germans in 1917.

Przemysl, a key communications center on the northern fringe of the Carpathians, is approximately 60 miles due west of Lvov. It denies the Germans a complete communication zone west of Lvov. Yaroslav, the other captured town, is 7 miles north of Przmysl. Both towns are on the west bank of the San River.

On the Baltic sector, Marshal Govorov was steadily widening the gap in the Estonian wall, while the 1st and 2nd Baltic armies put the Germans on the run toward the sea.

railway and road, as well as roads leading to Tilsit. Without allowing the enemy any respite, Soviet infantry and tanks then broke into the town.

Bialystok was taken when Soviet troops broke in from the east and north. The Germans made an attempt at a last stand by throwing into battle all their tank and infantry formations. Russian troops captured many tanks, lorries, guns, locomotives, railway carriages, and dumps of food, ammunition, and military supplies. Prisoners were taken in great numbers.

Lvov, continued the supplement to the communique, was carried by assault, and enemy troops encircled in the rear were wiped out. Southeast and west of the town, groups of Germans, cut off from one another, are being mopped up. The scene of battle is littered with enemy dead, broken equipment, and abandoned weapons. In one sector alone, Soviet troops disabled 40 tanks, captured 70 guns, and took more than 1,000 prisoners.

The capture of Stanislavov was achieved after Soviet units had cut the enemy's way of retreat to the northwest. Guards units then struck the decisive blow from the northeast. The enemy's routed units were retreating west in a panic, making their way through the forest into the Carpathians.

Lvov, southeast of Warsaw, is the gateway to central Europe and the Balkans. It controls the trunk railway running through Silesia to Breslau and Berlin, and the main routes through the Carpathians into Czechoslovakia and Hungary. It was the main German base on the southern front, and was Manstein's headquarters when he was in command here.

The third city of pre-war Poland, with a peacetime population of 350,000, Lvov lies on the Russian side of the Curzon Line. (Reuter)

EAST PRUSSIA IS AGRICULTURAL CENTRE

WASHINGTON, July 28 — Germany is facing the loss of an important agricultural region in East Prussia which supplies food to other parts of Germany, stated the United States Foreign Economic Administrator, Leo Crowley, yesterday.

« If the Russians occupy East Prussia, » said Crowley, « Germany will not only be facing military disaster, but it will mean that for the first time, the United Nations have succeeded in tearing a gap in her economic structure as apart from the recapture of conquered territory and the occupation of satellite countries.

« East Prussia is a stronghold of the German Junker class, and is predominantly a rye and potato country, and also produces livestock. »

U. S. TRAP CLOSING AT COUTANCES

SHAEF, July 28 — American armored spearheads were tonight rapidly completing the isolation of Coutances by a powerful three-way squeeze, said William Steen, Reuter correspondent.

Smashing along narrow roads through German-held woods and hedgerows, they were closing in on this town, which dominates the escape routes for the Germans hemmed in farther north, from the east, north, and south.

From the east, American forces had reached the point where the railway crosses the road from St. Lô, and late tonight were reported about two miles from Coutances; from the north, a swift drive down the road from Periers brought an armored column into the northern suburbs; and from the south, other armored units pushed on from Notre Dame le Cenilly to cut off one of the escape routes from the virtually surrounded town.

Some of the roads leading out of Coutances are already under American artillery fire, and two of the three bridges over the La Soulle River, which runs just south of the town, have been destroyed.

A report from a Reuter correspondent described the coordination between the air force and the ground troops. Fighter-bombers have been most effectively employed as escorts assigned to individual tank columns heading towards the sea in the Coutances area. Each unit of advancing armor has at least one flight of fighter-bombers immediately overhead during the entire day, with radio liaison between planes and tanks.

The planes keep a lookout for German armor on the roads ahead of the advancing columns, and at the first signs of the enemy go in to bomb and strafe. When the obstructing tank or other armored vehicles have been destroyed or driven off, the planes return and radio, « Take them ahead. Road clear. »

A constant air patrol over columns of tanks is maintained in half-hour relays, with one flight not leaving until the next has arrived.

Allied Tactics Successful

While General Omar Bradley's men are pressing forward rapidly in the western sector, General Montgomery's British and Canadians are pinning down German armor on the eastern flank.

The Germans are holding the British drive at the price of using reserves badly needed to strengthen opposition to the American push in the west.

The Allied tactics of hitting first at one end of the line, and then at the other, have forced the Germans to try to be strong all along the line. Their insufficient forces result in their having to give ground in one sector, while they manage to hold on in another.

There have been no signs of enemy panzer divisions moving over to the western flank from the Caen sector, despite the fact that they are badly needed.

The Germans are continuing to use up their reserve forces with continual costly counter-attacks against the British and Canadians, latest of which came in the Verrieres area and was sharply repulsed by the Canadians.

In support of ground forces in this sector of the battle-front, rocket-firing aircraft scored hits on tanks and motorized infantry targets yesterday.

East and south of the battle area, fighter bombers in strength attacked rail targets. In the Amiens-Saint Quentin area, an ammunition train was blown up. Other rolling stock was attacked, and rails were cut in many places.

An indication of the devastating effect that the Allied air effort has against the Germans was given by recently-captured prisoners at the Normandy front.

They said that not more than five shots were ever fired by a mortar from any single position. After five shots, the crews take cover as it is considered unsafe to be nearer than 50 yards from where they fired because of counter-mortar fire and aircraft attack. (Reuter-BBC)

Four thousand German prisoners have been taken by the Americans since their latest offensive started on Wednesday.

The Germans are not retreating in disorder, and are maintaining contact with the Americans. German resistance is strongest in the area northwest of Marigny, which seems to indicate that they are trying to hold a strong right flank, while their forces between Periers and Coutances withdraw.

Up at the north of the pocket, American troops are thrusting south in three almost parallel columns. One, striking south of Lessay, has advanced three miles and is now beyond the village of Marguerin. A little to the east, other forces pushing down both sides of the River Ay, have advanced four miles from the Lessay-Periers road. The third column, still farther to the east, is clearing the road south from Periers to Saint Sauveur Lendelin.

From St. Lô, the Americans have reached a point 10 miles south, to capture Tessy-sur-Vire.

The thundering lines of American tanks, half tracks, and self-propelled artillery hurled against the Germans have over-run 40 towns and villages in the two day-offensive, and 2,600 prisoners have been captured.

The German 2nd SS Elite Panzer Division and another armored Grenadier division are reported to be among those facing encirclement in this sector, as well as the Deutschland and Der Fuehrer regiments, Hitler's pride and joy.

LEUNA SYNTHETIC OIL PLANT STRUCK

LONDON, July 28 — The Leuna synthetic oil factory at Merseburg, and other military targets in Central Germany, were attacked by « very strong forces » of Flying Fortresses of the 8th Air Force, it was announced tonight.

Bombing was done through the pathfinder technique when heavy clouds obscured the targets, particularly the Leuna factory, which manufactures synthetic oil and ammonia in large quantities. Escorting fighters destroyed four German aircraft, while bombers accounted for one more. Seven Allied bombers and two fighters were lost.

Brussels, Ghent Hit

Early this morning, military targets at Brussels and Ghent were attacked by small forces of heavy bombers. Escorting fighters strafed roads and railway facilities in the same area. Enemy shipping off the Pas de Calais coast was attacked by coastal aircraft early today.

Throughout the day yesterday, 2,000 offensive sorties were flown, 1,500 of them by fighter-bombers and rocket-firing fighters in support of troops at both the eastern and western ends of the Normandy front.

German air activity was sharply stepped up yesterday, and approximately 175 Luftwaffe planes were sighted. Twenty-three of these were shot down.

The weather over the beachhead today was reported to be not very good, with cloud down to 1,000 feet, and only fair visibility.

The Germans sent more flying bombs over southern England, including the London area, last night. Anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes destroyed a number of the bombs, but some damage and casualties were caused.

LONDON, July 28 — A German pilot, his aircraft undamaged and he himself unhurt, landed on a British-held air field in Normandy and smilingly surrendered to the British troops, it was announced at SHAEF today.

8TH ARMY SEVEN MILES FROM FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 28 — The 8th Army's hard-fought advance northward through the Chianti Mountains yesterday brought them to within seven miles of Florence from the south, while more rapid gains to the southwest threatened the key road and rail center of Empoli, 15 miles west of Tuscany's chief city.

Three armored columns are leading the 8th Army forces pressing northward through the hill mass around which the meandering Arno makes sweeping detour to the north. Armored car elements have entered San Casciano and pushed to its northern limits, where demolitions were temporarily delaying the advance to Florence, just seven miles away, yesterday. Four miles northwest, New Zealand tank and infantry forces pushed across the Pesa River under heavy adverse fire to reach the outskirts of Cerbara, eight miles southwest of Florence. The third column, moving along a secondary road six miles east of Highway 2 at San Casciano, yesterday had fought their way to within two miles of Strada in Chianti, which would place them some nine miles south of the Tuscan city.

All three of these foremost columns are working their way down the narrow valleys of the Arno River's tributary streams. Cerbara, where the enemy's once crack 4th Parachute Division is putting up a fierce resistance against the New Zealanders, is an important junction of two secondary roads, one running northeast to Florence and into the Greve River Valley, and the other leading northwest along the Pesa Valley toward Empoli. Highway 2, the main road into Florence from Poggibonsi, runs almost due north through the Greve River Valley, while the route being followed by the easternmost of the three columns leads through the Ema River Valley.

Fierce Enemy Resistance

The enemy is putting up the fiercest resistance to this penetration, similar to the tactics by which the 5th Army finally enveloped and captured the Tuscan coast port of Leghorn. Every commanding height is stubbornly defended and used as a vantage point to lay down a heavy interdictory fire on the roads along the valley floors, so that advance is possible only after infantry have pushed back into the hills to outflank and destroy these upland strongpoints.

It was reported here today that the Germans have at least one more defensive hill line between the furthest point of the Allied advance and Florence.

In other gains along the sector south of the Arno now taken over by the 8th Army, patrols thrust two miles north of Castelnovo in the Elsa River Valley, to approach within four miles of Empoli, on the main Pisa-

the sector of the bridgehead over the Arno River north and northwest of Arezzo, small gains were made and positions consolidated. The town of Citerna, on the Cerfone River 11 miles east of Arezzo, was captured, and tanks and infantry were reported in Santa Fista, on the Tiber River 12 miles east of Arezzo.

On the 5th Army front, patrol actions and artillery exchanges continued, but no major developments were reported.

Alexander Instructs Patriots

General Sir Harold Alexander has broadcast instructions to Italian Patriots to continue harassing retreating Germans. The instructions were broadcast over Radio Sardinia.

Italian Patriots were also warned against the Fascist political police in another broadcast from Radio Sardinia.

King At Front

Within close range of German gunfire, the King yesterday pinned the Victoria Cross on three men: a British officer, a British soldier, and an Indian sepoy.

Later, the King reviewed Polish troops, heroes of the storming of Mount Cassino to prepare the way for the 8th Army advance.

Ploesti Struck Again

Up to 500 Italy-based Fortresses and Liberators today struck at military installations at Ploesti, Rumania, in the second attack within 12 hours. A heavy smoke screen protected the target, and forced the heavy bombers to drop their explosives by aid of instruments.

Intense flak was encountered, as well as a number of enemy interceptors which were prevented from attacking the formations by their long-range fighter escort.

A smaller formation of Liberators bombed the important railhead of Nazi supplies at Phlorina, Greece, near the Yugoslav-Albanian border. Neither flak nor enemy fighters were met on this mission.

Weiss Plant Seriously Damaged

As a result of yesterday's attack by up to 500 Italy based bombers on the Manfred Weiss armament works at Budapest, largest in all Hungary, 25 buildings were totally destroyed and some 23 others seriously damaged, it was announced here today.

The official report, based on reconnaissance photographs, stated that "very few buildings escaped serious damage," and declared that the aluminium electrolysis plants, the gas plant, the small arms plants, and the machine and assembly complex had been virtually destroyed by the bombardament, which sent columns of flame and smoke over 15,000 feet into the air.

The Liberators and Fortresses were over the big factory area for almost 40 minutes, and carried out their mission despite attacks by more than 100 enemy fighters, of which at least 14 were shot down by escorting fighters, according to preliminary counts.

Night flying heavy bombers yesterday attacked military objectives at Ploesti.

ains yesterday brought them to within seven miles of Florence from the south, while more rapid gains to the southwest threatened the key road and rail center of Empoli, 15 miles west of Tuscany's chief city.

Three armored columns are leading the 8th Army forces pressing northward through the hill mass around which the meandering Arno makes sweeping detour to the north. Armored car elements have entered San Casciano and pushed to its northern limits, where demolitions were temporarily delaying the advance to Florence, just seven miles away, yesterday. Four miles northwest, New Zealand tank and infantry forces pushed across the Pesa River under heavy adverse fire to reach the outskirts of Cerbara, eight miles southwest of Florence. The third column, moving along a secondary road six miles east of Highway 2 at San Casciano, yesterday had fought their way to within two miles of Strada in Chianti, which would place them some nine miles south of the Tuscan city

All three of these foremost columns are working their way down the narrow valleys of the Arno River's tributary streams. Cerbara, where the enemy's once crack 4th Parachute Division is putting up a fierce resistance against the New Zealanders, is an important junction of two secondary roads, one running northeast to Florence and into the Greve River Valley, and the other leading northwest along the Pesa Valley toward Empoli. Highway 2, the main road into Florence from Poggibonsi, runs almost due north through the Greve River Valley, while the route being followed by the easternmost of the three columns leads through the Ema River Valley.

Fierce Enemy Resistance

The enemy is putting up the fiercest resistance to this penetration, similar to the tactics by which the 5th Army finally enveloped and captured the Tuscan coast port of Leghorn. Every commanding height is stubbornly defended and used as a vantage point to lay down a heavy interdictory fire on the roads along the valley floors, so that advance is possible only after infantry have pushed back into the hills to outflank and destroy these upland strongpoints.

It was reported here today that the Germans have at least one more defensive hill line between the furthest point of the Allied advance and Florence.

In other gains along the sector south of the Arno now taken over by the 8th Army, patrols thrust two miles north of Castelnovo in the Elsa River Valley, to approach within four miles of Empoli, on the main Florence-Leghorn-Pisa road and railway south of the Arno River. Other patrols were reported beyond Vallecchia, and within six miles of the main road and rail center in this section of Italy. Troops of an Indian division made the largest gain of the day — some three miles — to push beyond Montespertoli, nine miles southeast of Empoli.

Between the main columns pressing north to Florence on Route 2 and on the Strada in Chianti road six miles to the east, 8th Army forces cleared the enemy from Mercatale and progressed a mile north of this town, along a network of dirt roads connecting the highways on each side. Still further east, 8th Army troops had also cleared the enemy from Penelli, just two miles southwest of the town of Figline in Val d'Arno, on the east banks of the Arno River.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish forces made considerable advances yesterday, after the sudden weakening of enemy resistance. Four villages stretching from the coast just south of the Misa River to a point some eight miles inland were occupied, and a fifth, just 10 miles inland and 11/2 miles southeast of the Misa, was entered by patrols. The captured hamlets were Mandriola, San Angelo, Filetto, and Ostra, while patrols only had reached Vaccarile.

Polish patrols crossed the Misa River under heavy mortar and artillery fire, while forward troops were fighting in the outsirts of Senigallia, on the coast on the south bank of the stream.

Later, the King reviewed Polish troops, heroes of the storming of Mount Cassino to prepare the way for the 8th Army advance.

Ploesti Struck Again

Up to 500 Italy-based Fortresses and Liberators today struck at military installations at Ploesti, Rumania, in the second attack within 12 hours. A heavy smoke screen protected the target, and forced the heavy bombers to drop their explosives by aid of instruments.

Intense flak was encountered, as well as a number of enemy interceptors which were prevented from attacking the formations by their long-range fighter escort.

A smaller formation of Liberators bombed the important railhead of Nazi supplies at Phlorina, Greece, near the Yugoslav-Albanian border. Neither flak nor enemy fighters were met on this mission.

Weiss Plant Seriously Damaged

As a result of yesterday's attack by up to 500 Italy based bombers on the Mannfred Weiss armament works at Budapest, largest in all Hungary, 25 buildings were totally destroyed and some 23 others seriously damaged, it was announced here today.

The official report, based on reconnaissance photographs, stated that "very few buildings escaped serious damage," and declared that the aluminium electrolysis plants, the gas plant, the small arms plants, and the machine and assembly complex had been virtually destroyed by the bombardament, which sent columns of flame and smoke over 15,000 feet into the air.

The Liberators and Fortresses were over the big factory area for almost 40 minutes, and carried out their mission despite attacks by more than 100 enemy fighters, of which at least 14 were shot down by escorting fighters, according to preliminary counts.

Night flying heavy bombers yesterday attacked military objectives at Ploesti.

Medium bombers of the 1st Tactical Air Force concentrated yesterday on the big Borgoforte rail bridge, a 1,000 foot-long steel span eight miles south of Mantua, and a bridge across the Po River 10 miles north of Alessandria. In other bridge attacks, medium and fighter-bombers ranged across Italy from near the French frontier to the Genoa and Turin-Milan area. At Porto Fino harbor, a 200-foot merchant vessel was struck. An enemy airdrome at Lonate Pozzolo, near Milan, was also attacked.

In these operations, comprising approximately 2,000 sorties, 18 Allied planes are missing.

VFW Head in Italy

Carl J. Schoeniger, commander-in-chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has arrived in the Mediterranean theatre to visit front line troops, hospitals, airforce units, and naval installations, mainly to question soldiers as to their post-war desires, it was announced here today.

The veterans' head is travelling under invitation from President Roosevelt, it was said. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS ROUT GERMAN GROUP

ALGIERS, July 28 — The Free Yugoslav Radio broadcast a special communique early today, from the Supreme Command of the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation, reporting the complete rout of a German group consisting of units of the S.S. Skenderberg Division, parts of the 181st Grenadier Division, and of the 4th Brandenburg Regiment — altogether over 5,000 men assisted by strong artillery, tanks, and air forces.

The Germans were carrying out offensive operations from Pec and Plav toward Andrijevica, with the intention of capturing Beranc and Lim Valley (in Montenegro) communications for the passage of Germans to Bosnia.

After capturing Andrijevica and approaching Beranc, and while Yugoslav units were offering desperate frontal resistance, other units completely encircled the German forces from the rear, and finally the whole group was destroyed.

A great quantity of war material fell into Yugoslav hands.

Island Fighting Continues

Fighting continues on the Dalmatian islands of Peljesac, Korcula, and Mljet, following the successful Partisan landings reported in Wednesday's communique.

On the mainland, the territory round Cetina has been cleared of the enemy, while in Slavonia, the Kosta Jinica railway line has been damaged at 10 points. Two enemy strongholds were destroyed, and Plenkovac has been captured. The Allied air forces are cooperating in these actions.

Enemy communications are being attacked and demolished in all parts of Yugoslavia. On the Prijepolje Plevle communication line in Montenegro, seven German tanks were destroyed. Near the town of Plevije, a German mechanized column was broken up and the remnants chased back to town.

Heavy fighting is going on in the Morava sector, in Serbia, where Yugoslav units are putting up stiff resistance against enemy attacks and also carrying out counter-attacks on the Kopalnik sector. The enemy has concentrated strong forces, and has begun to attack violently in an easterly direction, concentrating particularly east of the city of Nis.

In Herzegovinia, on the Gacko Bilek sector, Partisans are waging a successful war against the Germans.

SPELLMAN VISITS FRONT

WITH THE 5TH ARMY, PISA AREA, July 28 — Archbishop Spellman, of New York, visited the front line command post yesterday and talked to officers and men while shells whistled overhead. He flew in a Piper Cub close to the leaning tower of Pisa, and then went on to Leghorn. (PWB)

ITALIAN PATRIOTS' PACT WITH SLOVENES

ALGIERS, July 28 — The National Liberation Committee of Italy has concluded an agreement, approved by Marshal Tito, with the Liberation Committee of Slovenia providing for the creation of a joint fighting unit, without distinction of nationality, stated Radio France, at Algiers.

The purpose of the agreement is to coordinate action in the region in which both groups operate. A common paper in the two languages will be published. (PWB)

U. S. TINIAN CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, July 28 — Official figures give American casualties on Tinian, as of Tuesday, as 159 killed, 441 wounded, and 32 missing. Enemy dead amount to 2,089.

In the bombing operations on Yap Island, five American aircraft were lost, but four pilots are safe. On Tuesday evening, a formation of enemy aircraft attempted to attack our naval forces off the Carolines, but before they could come to close quarters three were shot down by fighters, two were damaged, and the remainder were driven off. Our heavy bombers made a daylight attack on supply areas.

American carrier-based planes also sank a Japanese destroyer and an oil tanker, an escort ship or mine layer, seven small cargo vessels, and many smaller ships in a series of attacks in the Western Carolines. (Reuter)

BRITISH SUBS HIT JAP SHIPPING

LONDON, July 28 — British submarines, intensifying operations against Japanese shipping, recently destroyed 21 more supply ships and other craft in Far Eastern waters. An Admiralty communique said today that, in addition, hits were obtained on two medium-sized supply ships, while a small tanker was severely damaged by gunfire.

Submarines bombarded oil tanks at Sibolga, on the northeast coast of Sumatra, and military installations on the northern part of Ross Island and Port Blair, in the Andaman group.

Describing the attack on Sumatra, Walter Logan, British United Press correspondent, said that Dutch and British ships penetrated into the harbor itself and shelled and torpedoed everything in sight.»

«Firing without pause, "added Logan," the destroyers pushed in to within a few hundred yards of the shore. Heavy shells ploughed into the dockyards and workshops, and 10 salvoes of the heaviest shells crashed into a barracks and devastated half the area. The place was covered with smoke and dust as the fleet steamed away, and billowing clouds of smoke indicated that oil storages had been hit.»

A communique from Kandy, Ceylon, stated that the Allied attack along the Palel-Tamu road continues in full strength. The Japanese are speeding up withdrawals from their main defensive positions about eight miles from Palel. Three more positions have been taken. On the Tiddim road, the Allies advanced another mile.

In fighting eight miles from Palel on the Tamu road, more than 130 Japanese dead have been counted. Three villages on the northern edge of the enemy defense system have been abandoned under threat of outflanking by Allied tanks and infantry. Tanks and aircraft are supporting the general Allied advance.

In the northwest Myitkyina sector, American units made some headway. Chinese troops along the western railroad sector and Indian forces occupied the village of Laja, shooting up two Japanese positions nearby.

On the Burma-China border, little change was reported in the fighting on the outskirts of besieged Hengchow and at other points in that area. Severe fighting is in progress to the town's northeast, where reinforced Japanese units are pushing southward. Chinese with support from American bombers and fighters overwhelmed enemy defenses at Laifenghsun, southwest of Tengyuen, a stronghold only a few kilometers from Myitkyina. Japanese casualties were over 600, and the Chinese took much material, when they captured enemy fortified hill positions southwest of Laifenghsun. (PWB)

JAPS DENY EXECUTION U. S. PILOTS

LONDON, July 28 — The Japanese news agency said that an official spokesman today denied reports that the American pilots who crashed on Japanese soil were being executed. The spokesman, referring to the notes exchanged between the American and Japanese governments through the Swiss Legation, said: «The American Government seems to have misinterpreted the radio message on July 15 from Shonan (Singapore). The announcer only said "the attacking B-29 bombers which were shot down out of the sky of Japan have thus come to their one-way ticket to hell."»

Reuter added that the Japanese broadcast on July 15, directed to the American forces in Southwest Pacific, said that several airmen captured in the first Super-Fortress raid on northern Kyushu had been executed. The broadcast warned that «any Allied airman who falls or bails out

CANADIAN AIRMAN WINS VC

LONDON, July 28 — A Canadian flight lieutenant, David Ernest Hornell, has been posthumously awarded the Victoria Cross, it was announced here today.

Hornell, who was the first Canadian airman to win a V.C. in the air, died after 24 hours in a dinghy when his plane crashed into the sea following a successful attack on a U-boat.

The citation said: «By pressing home a skilful and successful attack against fierce opposition, and by fortifying and encouraging his comrades in the subsequent ordeal, this officer displayed valor and devotion to duty of the highest order.» (Reuter)

U.S. WAR CASUALTIES TOTAL 257,779

WASHINGTON, July 28 — Casualties of the United States armed forces since the outbreak of war amount to 257,779, the Office of War Information announced last night. The total is made up of 58,670 dead, 104,888 wounded, 48,966 missing, and 45,255 prisoners.

Of the casualties, the Army's losses were 207,283 as of July 6, and the Navy's 50,496 as of July 27. (OWI)

INSIDE GERMANY

GENERAL ERNST VAHL KILLED

LONDON, July 28 — General Ernst Vahl of the SS has been killed in an « accident, » the German radio stated tonight.

The accident happened while he was on a visit to the front, the radio added. Vahl had recently been given a training job at the chief office of the Waffen SS command.

He is the fifth German general whose death by accident has been reported in the past four months. (Reuter)

NAZIS DARE NOT TELL FULL STORY

LONDON, July 28 — Robert Lloyd, Reuter commentator, said that the Goebbels version of the plot against Hitler, plus the names of the plotters given by the German News Agency, is proof that the Nazi chiefs have not told and dare not tell the full story. Lloyd wrote:

« Goebbels has alleged that the people mentioned frequently in the foreign press as opponents of the Nazi regime had come into the open during the present crisis. Yet, Colonel General Ludwig Beck had long fallen into oblivion, while Colonel General Erich Hoeppner, and General of the Infantry Friedrich Olbricht were completely unknown abroad, except to students of German Army lists.

« While the Nazis are evidently still wary about the names of the really prominent military leaders, they apparently try to implicate, along with real opponents, unknown men whose record can be used to throw discredit on the whole military opposition. This is plainly the case with Hoeppner, who has never been known to harbor any aspirations, and cannot have been in the German War Office at a critical moment, as he was reported then to be under arrest. Hoeppner, however, is the only German Army Commander to have been dishonorably dismissed during the present war, and that is precisely why Goebbels is dragging in his name.

« For the allegation that he, of all people, was a candidate of the rebels for the post of commander-in-chief is calculated to show leaders of the revolt as unworthy of the sympathies of the officer corps.

Source of Bomb

Meanwhile, Nazi propaganda has failed to produce any evidence for alleged links between the conspiracy and Germany's enemies. The Only "proof" preferred by Goebbels is the alleged British origin of the time-bomb used by Count Klaus Von Stauffenberg. As Von Stauffenberg was a high-placed German officer who could easily procure explosives at any time desired at home without importing them at great trouble and risk from abroad, it would appear that the Nazi imagination is getting somewhat exhausted. «

« At the same time, the very weakness of the Goebbels' statement is believed to have embarrassed Dr. Goebbels, who wanted to hush up the terror and did not refer to it in his Wednesday night's broadcast.

Many gaps have developed in the clientele of the bar restaurant of Berlin's famous Adlon, rendezvous of Prussian officers, the nobility, and rich industrialists, and favorite haunt of the former Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm. ALLIES DISCUSS PLANS FOR GERMANY

LONDON, July 28 — While Himmler's Nazi terror is raging in Germany, and the Nazi Party and the German generals are struggling for power, representatives of the United States, Britain, and Russia met in London yesterday to discuss the most recent developments in the German crisis, and to approve further details of the plans for handling a defeated Germany after the war.

Mr. John Winant, the U. S. Ambassador, Mr. Fedor Gusev, the Soviet Ambassador, and Sir William Strang, of the British Foreign Office, attended the meeting.

As the final German debacle becomes more imminent, the council will meet more often, it was stated in London last night.

More stories of the struggle raging in Germany are reaching London, in spite of frantic attempts by the Nazis to shroud it in secrecy.

Reliable reports from Stockholm stated that communications from Berlin were again cut last night in similar circumstances to those of the night of July 20, when the attempt on Hitler's life was made. The reports also stated that slaughter of German Army officers by Himmler continues unabated. (PWB)

BIOCHEMIST SAVES LABORATORY

ROME, July 28 — Allied Control Commission officials revealed today that Dr. Vittorio Zavaglia, director of one of the few vaccine-producing laboratories for livestock in Italy, was able to save his valuable equipment from the Germans when the enemy evacuated the Rome area.

As a result of the efforts of Dr. Zavaglia, who remained in his laboratory while the battle for Rome raged around and past the building, the laboratory is still functioning. It is expected to turn out its first product, 24,000 doses of vaccine against hoof and mouth disease in cattle, on August 2.

The scientist hid his most valuable equipment, and was able to save the small herd of cattle used in the vaccine production by explaining to German authorities that they were suffering from typhoid infection. He improvised a concrete shelter inside the laboratory, where he took refuge as shells from the battle penetrated the building.

The laboratory is the only one within liberated territory producing animal vaccines. It's potential production of 24,000 doses a week of vaccine against hoof and mouth disease will be distributed in all provinces. This cattle disease is endemic in Italy, but is normally fatal in only two per cent of the cases. (UNN)

The British guards were placed at the villa at the request of the Superintendant of Galleries in Siena and took their places in spite of battle conditions.

The same authorities here also reported that an important 14th Century fresco by Ambrogio Lorenzetti has been found on one of the altars of the Church of Saint Augustine in Siena. It was brought to light when a later painting was removed for safekeeping. (ACC)

GERMANS BURN REGISTRY AT MOCALE

FASCIST MONUMENT REMOVED

ROME, July 28 — By order of the civic authorities of Rome, the monument to Fascist Heroes on the Capitoline Hill which stood at the left of the Senatorial Palace has been removed.

It was erected in 1926, and was formed from a huge block of Egyptian marble found in the Sallustian Gardens. The stone itself is thought to have been the base of the Sallustian Obelisk, now at the Trinità dei Monti. Consequently, it will not be destroyed, but will be preserved as a relic of ancient Roman art, shorn, however of its latter-day, Fascist significance. (UNN)

MAXIMUM PRICES FIXED

ROME, July 28 — The office of Price Control has issued a list of the maximum prices to be charged for certain food articles and services effective August 15.

The highest price hotels may charge for coffee (without sugar) is 11 lire; for orangeade, 12 lire; for lemonade, 9 lire; and for vermouth, 14 lire. This does not include the tip for table service.

The maximum a first-class barber may charge for a haircut is 16 lire; for a shave with tonic, 8 lire; for a massage, 35 lire.

For a shoe shine, the rates are 5 lire for shoes 7 lire for boots, and 12 lire for knee-high boots.

The price lists must be conspicuously displayed for the benefit of the public, who may report infringement to any policeman, or to the Italian Office of Price Control in Piazza Gioacchino Belli, n. 2, or to the AMG Black Market Repression Office at Via Cesare Battisti n. 120. (UNN)

DEATH FOR CIVIL CRIMES ABOLISHED

ROME, July 28 — The Council of Ministers today abolished the death penalty in so far as ordinary crimes under the civil code are concerned. This is a return to the classic penal system of Italy prior to the rise of the Fascists, who introduced the death penalty in their codes.

The extreme penalty of death will remain, however, in the military penal code and in the law for the punishment of crimes committed by Fascists which latter exception corresponds, «to the absolute necessity of justice as demanded by the entire Italian people.» (UNN)

DUTCH GOVERNMENT RECOGNIZES FCNL

LONDON, July 28 — The Dutch Government in Exile has officially recognized the French Committee of National Liberation as the Provisional Government of France. (Reuter)

The Polish Minister of the Interior, Wladyslaw Banaczyk, broadcasting from London recently, paid tribute to the Soviet forces and to the Polish Underground Army which are rapidly driving German rule from Poland.

«The speedy developments of events in the East show that the days of German rule in Poland are numbered. Under the impact of the heroic Soviet forces, the resistance of the German armed forces is breaking. The rate of the Red Army's advance is undoubtedly speeded up by the fighting of the Polish Underground Army which, obeying the orders of its government, has passed to open fighting against the Germans.» said the Polish Minister. ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 28 — Today's communique:

LAND: Troops of the 8th Army in their drive to the River Arno west of Florence have made substantial gains, and are now within four miles of the town of Empoli. Further east, in their drive toward Florence, local gains have been made against strong opposition. In these two sectors, the towns of San Casciano, Vallecchia, and Cambiano have been taken. On the high ground between the Arno and Tiber Rivers, troops of the 8th Army have made local gains in heavy fighting, including the capture of the town of Citerna.

In the Adriatic sector, Polish troops of the 8th Army are now firm on the line of the River Misa, and are fighting in the outskirts of the town of Senigallia, with patrols across the river.

On the 5th Army front, the activity has been confined to patrols and artillery duels.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked the Manfred Weiss armament works, near Budapest.

Tactical aircraft concentrated their attacks on enemy communications and supply lines, as well as other targets in northern Italy, the battle area, and Yugoslavia.

In these operations, at least 16 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 18 of ours are missing. One of our aircraft is missing from the night operation July 26/27.

MAAF flew about 2,000 sorties.

Last night, our bombers attacked military objectives at Ploesti. (PWB - PRO)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, July 28 — Today's communique:

In the western sector of the Normandy front, Allied forces have maintained their rapid advances.

Our troops have pushed forward west of Marigny to the vicinity of Camproud, and southwest to the vicinity of Cerisy la Salle. Other formations have advanced south of Periers. Ground has also been gained west of Caumont.

South of Caen, our positions remain firm.

A number of attempts by the enemy to develop counter-attacks have been broken up by our artillery and supporting aircraft, which were active throughout yesterday on both sectors.

In the western sector, fighter-bombers patrolled ahead of advancing armored columns attacking tank units, gun positions, defended hedgerows, and observation posts as far as Coutances, and southward to Villebaudon.

In the eastern battle sector, rocket-firing aircraft scored hits on tanks and motorised infantry targets. East and south of the battle area, fighter-bombers in strength attacked rail targets.

In the Amiens-Saint Quintin area, an ammunition train was blown up. Other rolling stock was attacked, and rails cut in many places. Yesterday, at least 23 enemy planes were destroyed in the air; 21 of our aircraft are missing from all these operations. (Reuter)

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 28 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Lanzo Valley groups of patriots have engaged sizable German forces, taking many prisoners and inflicting serious losses on the enemy.

On the Apennine Mountains in the provinces of Bologna and Reggio, German motor columns carrying supplies and munitions to the front have been attacked by patriots. Several motor vehicles were destroyed.

In the Lanzo Valley groups of patriots have engaged of patriots carried out a series of successful operations occupying the villages of Sant'Agata, Feltre, and Fregheto. Several local Fascist authorities were executed, and many militiamen were killed in battle.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 763721

In successful attacks carried out against military posts and Nazi-Fascist barracks in Bellagio and Mandello (Como Province), as well as in Edolo (Brescia Province), arms and ammunitions were captured.

After violent clashes in the Taro Valley, the Germans were repelled after they had suffered severe losses. The booty taken by the patriots included a German gun.

Bedonia and Borgotaro, in Parma Province, and Bobbio, in Piacenza Province, are now under patriot protection.

In the zone of Imperia, in an ambush of a motorized enemy column, the Germans lost 200 dead or wounded.

In the Stradella sector, the patriots have suffered losses, while in the lower part of the Ossola Valley they captured some positions from the enemy.

The Semplon railway was cut by patriots in Meinalina, in Cortina, and Dobbiaco; the Cadore railway was cut at Castellazzo and the Udine-Trevise railway at Casarza.

Following acts of sabotage which have taken place in Turin in the FIAT factory there have been clashes and repressions. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 28 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the battle area to both sides of St. Lô, the Americans continued their big attack throughout the day. While they achieved only a few unimportant penetrations to the east of St. Lô, our troops to the southwest of the town were pushed back further to the south and southwest in bitter fighting; both sides suffered high losses. Counter-attacks with the purpose of sealing up a few gaps in the front are in progress; 75 tanks were destroyed.

In the sector of Caen, the enemy carried out only unsuccessful attacks of no great extent.

Fighter and battle plane formations brought down 10 enemy planes in the course of aerial combat.

During the night of July 27, torpedo-carrying planes sank one enemy tanker of 4,000 tons and damaged four transports of 26,000 tons and one destroyer in the Seine Bay. In the eastern part of the Seine Bay, an Army coastal battery scored several hits on an enemy battleship. Escort vessels of a German convoy shot six out of eight attacking enemy fighter bombers, off the Loire Estuary.

In the French area, 42 terrorists were annihilated.

The heavy V-1 retaliation fire on the area of Greater London is being continued almost without interruption.

In Italy, the enemy carried out numerous local attacks along the entire front. The focal point of the enemy reconnaissance thrusts lay in the sector to the south of Florence and on the Adriatic coast. All attacks were warded off in front of our position.

Since the early morning hours, the enemy has opened a renewed, large-scale attack on a broad front to the south of Florence; violent fighting has developed.

On the Eastern Front, the big defensive battle between the Carpathians and the Finnish Gulf has gained in violence. After the enemy succeeded in making penetrations into the front in various sectors, some of them deep ones, a few salients in some sectors were withdrawn in order to spare forces. In accordance with this straightening out of the front line, the towns of Lemberg, Brest-Litovsk, Byalistok, and Dvinsk were evacuated after all the installations of military importance had been destroyed.

In Galicia, our troops withdrew to new positions in the Carpathian Foothills according to order, and warded off all attacks of the rapidly-following Soviets.

To the west of the San, fluctuating fighting with enemy spearheads which are thrusting forward is in progress.

Beteen the upper Bug and the Vistula, Soviet attacks, supported by tanks, were repelled in the course of embittered fighting, after numerous enemy tanks were knocked out.

In the sector of Byalistok and Kovno, local attacks of the Bolseviks were frustrated. To the north of Kovno, fierce fighting with enemy tanks and reconnaissance forces is in progress.

On the front between Dvinsk and the Gulf of Finland, numerous heavy attacks of the enemy again broke down; he suffered high losses.

Strong battle plane formations supported the defensive fighting of the Army, and destroyed 71 enemy tanks and more than 400 vehicles in low-level attacks.

During the night, the railway station of Vilna, and Soviet troop concentrations to the west of Lublin, were the target of heavy German bombers.

American bombers carried out a terror attack on Budapest; 29 enemy planes, including 26 four-engined bombers, were brought down by German and Hungarian air defense forces.

Last night, enemy planes dropped bombs on several localities in western Germany and in East Prussia. Damage was caused, and the population suffered losses in the town of Insterberg. Three planes were shot down. (Radio Berlin)

German Overseas Station: The Polish Prime Minister, Mikolajczka, following the advice of Churchill, has set off for Moscow to attempt settlement of Polish problems. The ringleaders of hunger riots in Rome have been sentenced to death by the Bonomi Government. It is said that Liberal circles in Southern Italy had hoped that King George VI would visit King Victor Emmanuel. The German Reich Minister of Labor has stated that the German social system is now efficiently organised. A German News Agency war correspondent, reporting on recent fighting in the invasion area, declares that Canadian losses south of Caen have been particularly heavy.

Transocean and DNB: Sertorius reports that the Allied offensive on Florence has opened. On the Eastern Front, the Germans are fighting along the entire line. The Bulgarian Parliament is to discuss an amnesty bill with reference to Partisans. Georg Schroeder outlines Dr. Goebbel's proposed measures for all-out war effort: troops in training at home to be sent to the front; ablebodied men from industry and commerce to be conscripted for the Army; agelimit for women workers to be raised from 45 to 50. Fighting in the Caen area has been slowed down by the failure of Montgomery's offensive. He is now engaged in bringing up reserves of troops and ammunition.

Fascist Radio: The Allied drive south of Florence continues. The heaviest fighting is on the roads from Poggibonsi and Montevarchi to Florence. In the Arno Valley, all Allied attacks have been repulsed. Heavy artillery is in action in the Adriatic sector. Battle standards have been consigned to the newly-formed Black Brigades by Pavolini. Attacks have been launched against Partisans in the Novara Mountains.

RED ARMY CAPTURES STANISLAVOV, LVOV, BIALYSTOK, DVINSK, AND REZEKNE

MOSCOW, July 27 — In five special orders of the day, Marshal Joseph Stalin announced the capture of:

1. Bialystok, an important rail center and great German Fortress guarding the gateway to East Prussia.

2. Stanislavov, important oil town in south Poland on the main road leading to Czechoslovakia.

3. Dvinsk and Rezekne, two important railroad junctions in Latvia.

4. Lvov, largest city in southern Poland, which was by-passed a few days ago.

5. Schaulen (Shavli), large communications center linking the Baltic with East Prussia, and less than 90 miles from the Baltic Sea.

South of captured Bialystok, Russian forces have entered Brest-Litovsk, the Moscow Radio, quoting IZVESTIA, lines of communication running west of Brest-Litovsk, threw large forces into battle, but the Russians drove the enemy back and took the railroad center of Biala Podlaska, on the escape route to Warsaw. Here the day's manpower cost to the Germans was 4,000 killed.

In the Lvov area yesterday, Russian forces struck at the encircled German troops from literally all directions. Violent fighting continued in the suburbs and outskirts of the city. The Germans launched repeated counter-attacks, but, as the communique supplement described the situation, "an impenetrable curtain of gun, mortar, and machine gun fire" broke up their formations.

Operating in assault parties, the Russians were dislodging the enemy from pillboxes, houses, and cellars. The Soviet announcement said, "The fields of battle are strewn with enemy dead." Another score against the German manpower: 2,700 officers and men taken prisoner.

In the sector south of Lvov, the Soviet offensive continued, with more than 100 inhabited localities freed during yesterday.

Eighty-eight German tanks were destroyed or disabled on all fronts; 35 enemy aircraft were shot down in combat or by gunfire.

The Soviet air communique reported that German troops, trains, and military dumps at Tilsit and Warsaw junction were bombed on Tuesday night. Four German troop trains were wrecked and fuel dumps blown up.

At sea, too, the Russian offensive went on. Aircraft of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet air arm bombed and sunk an enemy escort vessel, a minesweeper, three patrol launches, and two self-propelled barges.

Russia-Based U. S. Planes

Eastern headquarters of the United States Strategic Air Force announced yesterday that American Mustangs and Lightnings, flying from the new bases in Russia, on Tuesday carried out offensive sweeps in the Lvov region — the first announced action by U. S. planes on the Russian front. The targets included a German airfield 94 miles northwest of Lvov, and a highway and rail junction.

A large formation of German Junker planes was surprised returning from an attack and 26 were shot down. With a total score for the day of 38 planes, the Americans returned to their bases without loss.

An Associated Press message dealing with the capture of Narva stated that the Russians won possession of a useful river port and reduced the principal German bastion guarding the entrance to the 36-mile-wide Narva corridor, between Lake Peipus and the Gulf of Finland.

Narva, Estonia's third largest city, lies on the Narva River eight miles south of its mouth, where it empties into the Gulf of Finland. The city is six miles west of the Estonian border. It is an important railway junction, a trade center, and a chief timber port.

Through Narva run the east-west Tosno-Tallinn and north-south Narva-Pskov railways. (Reuter)

RED ARMY CAPTURES STANISLAVOV, LVOV, BIALYSTOK, DVINSK, AND REZEKNE

MOSCOW, July 27 — In five special orders of the day, Marshal Joseph Stalin announced the capture of:

4. Lvov, largest city in southern Poland, which was by-passed a few days ago.

5. Schaulen (Shavli), large communications center linking the Baltic with East Prussia, and less than 90 miles from the Baltic Sea.

South of captured Bialystok, Russian forces have entered Brest-Litovsk, the Moscow Radio, quoting IZVESTIA, stated. Brest-Litovsk is a great fortress 120 miles east of Warsaw on the River Bug, and is important for its 50-mile canal connecting the rivers Bug and Mukgavetz between the Baltic and the Black Sea.

In the meantime, the Red Army is close enough to Warsaw for the Germans there to hear the firing of Soviet guns, the newspaper IZVESTIA said. A Reuter correspondent, discussing the advance on Warsaw, said yesterday afternoon: «Thousands of amphibious trucks are rushing Soviet infantry over the Vistula under the cover of the fire of massed mortars and artillery.»

This move follows the capture of Deblin yesterday by troops commanded by Marshal Rokossovsky. Immediately after Deblin's capture and mopping up, Soviet guns were brought to bear on the Vistula's left bank for a softening up process.

Yesterday, the hard-pressed German transportation system suffered another serious loss in the Vistula fighting — 23 locomotives and 340 freight cars loaded with supplies. The German manpower problem was heightened a bit, too — 1,500 enemy officers and men taken prisoner in this sector.

Between the northern and central sectors yesterday — the Leningrad and Vistula fronts — Soviet troops advanced six miles northwest of Pskov, Northeast of Deblin, violent fighting continued in an area 25 miles west of Brest-Litovsk. The Germans, striving desperately to hold their up their formations.

Operating in assault parties, the Russians were dislodging the enemy from pillboxes, houses, and cellars. The Soviet announcement said, «The fields of battle are strewn with enemy dead.» Another score against the German manpower: 2,700 officers and men taken prisoner.

CZECH CORPS TRAINING IN RUSSIA

MOSCOW, July 27 — A Czech army corps is completing training in the Soviet Union under General Jan Kratochvil.

The corps is training for a campaign of liberation in their homeland as the Red Army approaches the Carpathian frontier of Czechoslovakia, southwest of Lvov. Their slogan is «On to Prague.» Many veterans of the brigade which helped to win back Kiev are serving in this new corps, which was commended by Stalin for outstanding valor.

POLES REACH MISA RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 27 — Polish troops of the 8th Army have pushed forward against «weakening enemy resistance» to the line of the Misa River, northwest of Ancona, it was announced here tonight.

Nazis Counter-Attack, Barricade Pisa

German forces backed by Tiger tanks have staged new counter-attacks south of Florence in a desperate effort to fend off the 8th Army columns closing in on Tuscany's chief city, while, further west, the enemy is hastily barricading the streets of historic Pisa with the evident intention of fighting in this town.

But, despite savage enemy resistance, two 8th Army columns are now within eight miles of Florence, and are moving forward in a steady and determined drive through the last of the hill masses south of the Arno River bend.

South African troops repelled the main German counter-attack late Tuesday afternoon, in the vicinity of Mercatale, three miles south of San Casciano, and between the New Zealand force pushing forward on Highway 2 and another 8th Army column moving along a secondary road six miles further east. Although the enemy massed Mark VI tanks, self-propelled guns and troops for this thrust down into the Pesa River Valley, it not only failed to split the advancing 8th Army forces, but was flung back with heavy losses, including two of the Tiger tanks.

New Zealand patrols were reported yesterday to be in the «immediate vicinity» of San Casciano, eight miles south of Florence on Highway 2, while a twin column, pushing four miles north of Greve, were also within eight miles of the city on the road leading due north through the Ema River Valley. British forces were reported three miles northeast of Greve, where they had inflicted heavy causalties on enemy forces opposing them.

The 8th Army forces converging on Florence are now concentrating their attacks along a 10-mile-wide front south of the city, and in gains up to three miles yesterday kept this line across the Chianti Hills almost straight east and west. Three towns on the left flank of this advancing front, Castelnuovo and Valecchio on opposite sides of the Elsa River Valley, and San Pietro in Marcato, between the Elsa and the Pesa rivers, were being threatened by enveloping movements, it was reported today.

Leaning Tower as OP

The reports that the Germans are erecting barricades in the streets of Pisa and setting up machine-gun posts in key spots within the city coincided with testimony that German artillery observers are using the famous campanile and church steeples in the Renaissance centre as observation posts. No attempt of Allied forces to cross the river into the northern portion of the town, or attack German forces there, has been reported.

Along the rest of the 5th Army's front on the southern banks of the Arno, considerable patrol action and heavy artillery exchanges marked yesterday's fighting. In the

Sepoy Awarded VC

A Hindu soldier of the 8th Punjab Regiment was today awarded the Victoria Cross, Great Britain's highest honor for gallantry, for an action in which he destroyed, single handed and in broad daylight, three enemy machine gun posts north of the Rapido River at the opening of the present Allied offensive in Italy.

The sepoy, Kamal Ram, barely 20 years old and a member of a devout Hindu community in Karault State in Rajputana, is the youngest living holder of the Victoria Cross during this war.

The official citation said that Kamal Ram, when his company was held up by four strongly-placed enemy machine gun posts, volunteered to silence them. Although the «odds were obviously heavily against his success,» the sepoy was granted the permission.

«Alone, Sepoy Kamal Ram crawled forward through the barbed wire to the first machine gun post, shot the machine gunner and bayonetted and killed his assistant. A German officer tried to kill him with his pistol, but Kamal Ram was too quick for him and shot the officer. That finished the first post.

«The second post was now very active. Sepoy Kamal Ram killed the machine gunner in the same way he had killed the previous one, and then threw a grenade into the post, which caused the remaining Germans to surrender.

«After liquidating two posts, he saw his platoon havildar reconnoitering the third post, and shouted that he was now ready and in a position to clear that post too. Which he did.»

Kamal Ram was wounded in later action near Perugia, but has since returned to his battalion.

King Decorates Generals

King George VI, on tour of Allied battle areas in Italy, yesterday conferred the honour of knighthood on Lieutenant General A. F. Harding, Chief of Staff, Allied Armies in Italy, and the Order of Commander of the British Empire on Major General Lyman L. Lemnitzer and Brigadier A. L. Hamblen, at General Alexander's headquarters.

In the afternoon the King inspected troops of an Indian division with the 8th Army in company with Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese, 8th Army commander.

Budapest Steel Works Hit

Up to 500 escorted heavy bombers flew from Italian bases today to attack, at Budapest the Manfried-Weiss steel works, largest industrial plant in Hungary. The plant produces aircraft engines, arms, ammunition and machine tools.

The Liberators and Flying Fortresses concentrated on the target and reported heavy smoke clouds rising from the stricken areas.

In encounters with enemy aircraft, long-range fighters scored victories.

78 Planes Destroyed

Italy-based bombers and fighters destroyed 78 enemy planes yesterday, in attacks ranging from central Europe to the Balkans and including a fighter strafing mission carried out by long-range Mustangs and Lightnings which shot down 70 enemy planes while returning from a three-day shuttle trip to Russia.

The fighter pilots which participated in the shuttle flight to Eastern Command Strategic Air Force bases had account-

In the San Romano sector, where remaining German forces entrenched along the Florence-Pisa railway embankment between the river and Highway 69 were mopped up, 5th Army gunners destroyed an enemy railway gun, several tanks and self-propelled guns, and ammunition and supply dumps.

German resistance in the tongue of land enclosed by the horseshoe loop of the Arno River east of Pisa has been fierce and effective, and these forces continued to hold their ground, covered by heavy shellfire from the Monte Pisano hill masses to the north. German guns from this high ridge east of Pisa have stepped up their fire and are laying down considerable fire on crossroads south of Pisa in an effort to prevent Allied movement of supplies and material.

At the mouth of the Arno River, two German patrols which attempted to cross to the vicinity of Marina di Pisa were repulsed with losses.

In the central sector of the Italian front, 8th Army forces captured the height of Campriano, northeast of Arezzo, and have made progress in the Upper Tiber Valley, where forward troops are in Pistrino and Monterchi, on the Cerfone River 11 miles east of Arezzo. The road from Arezzo to Città di Castello is now entirely in 8th Army hands.

In the Adriatic sector, there were only routine patrolling and shellfire to report.

Italy-based bombers and fighters destroyed 78 enemy planes yesterday, in attacks ranging from central Europe to the Balkans and including a fighter strafing mission carried out by long-range Mustangs and Lightnings which shot down 70 enemy planes while returning from a three-day shuttle trip to Russia.

The fighter pilots which participated in the shuttle flight to Eastern Command Strategic Air Force bases had accounted for 64 enemy aircraft in their three days' operations, which included one flight into Poland from the Russian fields. These figures, plus 65 planes shot down in Tuesday's attacks on the Linz tank and shell foundry, and six enemy fighters destroyed Monday, bring the MAAF's three-day total to a near-record figure of 193 enemy planes wiped out.

Yesterday's principal attack was directed against the Wiener Neudorf aircraft engine factory, largest in all Axis Europe, and located 10 miles south of Vienna. The Flying Forts which attacked the vital plant, last hit only 10 days ago, encountered the heaviest aerial opposition of the day, in addition to intense flak. Other targets yesterday were three airfields within a 60-mile radius of Austria's capital, and the Berat-Kucove oil storage area, struck for the third time in four days.

Night bombers of the RAF hit the Ploesti oil refineries in early hours this morning, after fighter formations on their way to Russia had strafed airfields and on their return had shot down 30 enemy planes in this vicinity to cripple enemy opposition.

Tactical Air Force planes concentrated their attacks on rail bridges and lines along the northwestern coast of Italy, including the Riviera line into southern France. Marauders of the French Air Force attacked the Riviera line for the fourth consecutive day.

King Inspects Desert Air Force

King George VI, accompanied by Air Vice Marshal J. H. D'Albiac, deputy commander, Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Force, has visited Desert Air Force units, including the Royal Canadian Air Force squadrons, near an ancient university town in central Italy.

The King arrived at the field in his own plane, escorted by Spitfire formations, and was met by Air Vice Marshal W. F. Dickson, commander of the Desert Air Force, long associated with the British 8th Army in campaigns in North Africa, Sicily, and Italy.

The King then inspected the various units of the Wing, which included the East Indian Squadron, and then drove off with Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese, commander of the 8th Army, to tour army units in the vicinity. (PRO)

RESIDENT GENERAL OF TUNIS VISITS ITALY

TUNIS, July 27 — General Mast, Resident General of Tunis, accepting General Clark's invitation to visit Italy, went first to Siena, where he had long talks with General Juin. From there he went to Rome, where he discussed the economic future of Tunisia. Finally, he inspected a post held by a unit of Tunisian machine gunners, to whom he expressed their country's pride in their glorious exploits. (PWB)

U. S. PINCERS ON 7 DIVISIONS IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, July 27 — The American push south from St. Lô made notable progress today. One column, which early this morning engulfed the township of Canisy in its breakthrough across the St. Lô-Coutances road, later pushed on to Le Mesnil Herman, 5 1/2 miles south of the town of St. Gilles, which was taken yesterday.

Other American forces, thrusting westward, captured Camprond, five miles northeast of Coutances, and are threatening to trap at least seven German divisions, stated a Reuter correspondent.

Lessay and Periers are in American hands, while Coutances is within artillery range. An effort is being made to close the jaws of the trap on the Germans in the Periers-Lessay area. About half the entire German force on the American front, including the 2nd SS Panzer and the 17th SS Panzer divisions, are threatened with encirclement north of Coutances.

The Germans are trying frantically to withdraw from the pocket north of Coutances and their resistance is described as "disorganized and chaotic."

The German News Agency admitted tonight that the German lines at Periers have had to be taken back "in order to shorten the front line."

In the central sector, American troops have made a general movement forward and have reached Mauflet, five miles west of Caumont and two miles beyond Rebot Mont, which they captured yesterday.

After capturing the important road junction of Berigny, the Allies have pushed three miles to the south to reach Notre Dame D'Elle. East of the Orne, Canadians still hold firmly on to Verriers after repulsing two counter-attacks during the night.

Two Tank Thrusts

Describing the American attack, Ian Munro, Reuter correspondent, said: "After United States infantrymen broke through the main German lines of resistance on a four-mile front just west of Saint Lô yesterday afternoon, Sherman tanks streamed forward along two parallel roads running southwards. One column captured Marigny, six miles southwest of Saint Lô and nearly 10 miles northeast of Coutances. Marigny is the focal point of seven highways.

The Canadians waited until the Germans were only [illegible] yards away and then opened up with savage machine gun fire and grenades, blasting the Germans until they were forced to retire after another costly failure.

Four panzer divisions, three of which are SS units, are opposing the British and Canadians in this sector.

All British armored reserves are intact everywhere, while Rommel's reserves are being used up, stated a senior staff officer at General Dempsey's headquarters. The spokesman said: "The enemy is committing everything he has. We can replace our losses in tanks and weapons without difficulty, whereas the Germans are very short of arms and ammunition. That explains why they are fighting madly. They cannot afford to give ground, so they must hold out even at a suicidal price."

In support of the ground forces yesterday afternoon and evening, fighter-bombers attacked enemy gun positions, strongpoints, and tank and troop concentrations in and around battle areas.

Other fighter-bombers kept up attacks on transportation targets over a wide area from Douai to Vendome, cutting railway tracks and strafing locomotives, rolling stock, and vehicles.

Sixteen enemy aircraft were shot down, and 13 of ours are missing. (Reuter - BBC)

ANOTHER WARNING TO FISHERMEN

LONDON, July 27 — Another warning to fishermen was broadcast today over the BBC. The spokesman, a member of the Supreme Commander's staff, said it was now necessary to extend until August 10 the ban on fishing in coastal waters from Bayonne, near the Spanish frontier, to the West Friesian Islands.

The Supreme Commander, he added, recognizes that this requirement may have caused some hardship to fishermen, but the cooperation which fishermen have given has resulted in the saving of life and the facilitating of operations. (BBC)

GERMANS USE ARMOR AGAINST MAQUIS

SHAEF, July 27 — The Germans are now using armored columns to raid the Maquis areas, as part of new tactics aimed at eliminating resistance there, stated a communique issued here today, dealing with the activities of the Interior.

Meanwhile, these forces continue to disorganize German lines of communication in Normandy and other places. In one district a German convoy of 116 lorries was annihilated, and elsewhere, barges carrying 100,000 gallons of fuel oil were blown up. (Reuter)

U. S. HEAVIES STRIKE BRUSSELS, GHENT

LONDON, July 27 — United States heavy bombers, escorted by fighters, today attacked German military targets in the Brussels and Ghent areas in Belgium. No German planes were seen, it was reported here today.

Last night, Bomber Command Mosquitoes attacked Hamburg, and mines were laid in enemy waters. One aircraft is missing from these operations.

Yesterday, United States heavy bombers attacked military targets in the Vienna area, while fires still blazed in Stuttgart, 330 miles to the west, from the RAF's second consecutive night attack on that industrial city.

The flanking threat to German positions in the Lessay-Periers area caused by this armored thrust down to Marigny had been heightened by further progress by United States forces down the road from Carentan to Periers, where Allied forward positions are now well southwest of Raids.

Two new German formations have been identified as being in the line opposite the Americans. They are the 5th Paratroop Division and the 353rd Infantry Division.

A report from a Reuter correspondent with the U.S. 9th Air Force stated that fighter-bombers in close support of the American armored columns advancing in the Marigny sector claimed a total of 97 German tanks destroyed or damaged yesterday.

On the British and Canadian sector to the east, two fierce German counter-attacks within the past 12 hours against Canadian positions in the Verrieres area south of Caen have been crushed by Allied land and air power. The latest attack came this morning, when the Germans launched a silent attack with no preliminary artillery or air bombardment. They simply came creeping through the cornfields with fixed bayonets.

Yesterday, United States heavy bombers attacked military targets in the Vienna area, while fires still blazed in Stuttgart, 330 miles to the west, from the RAF's second consecutive night attack on that industrial city.

Bad weather hampered the bombing operations on Vienna targets.

Reconnaissance photographs taken after yesterday's bombing of the Goering tank works at Linz, west of Vienna, showed the whole target virtually destroyed.

In Normandy, Allied bombers smashed at German tanks, troops, and artillery west of Saint Lô, and fired a fuel dump in a wood near Alencon before rain and low cloud shut down. RAF Spitfires shot down four enemy interceptor planes. All Allied planes returned safely.

On the British-Canadian front, south of Caen, rocket-firing Typhoons roared low on the battlefront, knocked out 11 German tanks with direct hits, and disabled seven others.

The Germans sent flying bombs over the southern counties of England, including the London area, during the night. Damage and casualties were caused. (Reuter-BBC)

GENERAL MCNAIR KILLED IN NORMANDY

WASHINGTON, July 27 — The U. S. War Department announced today that Lieutenant General Lesley J. McNair, former commanding general of the U. S. Army Ground Forces, was killed by enemy fire in Normandy while observing the action of American front line troops in a recent offensive.

On July 14, the Army announced that General McNair had been given an important overseas assignment, the nature of which was not disclosed, and that Lieut. Gen. Ben Lear had succeeded him in command of the Army Ground Forces. Lieut. General McNair was 61 years old, and was responsible for the training of U. S. Ground Forces now in action overseas. (PWB)

ALLIES, PARTISANS COORDINATE ON VIS

ROME, July 27 — Allied and Partisan forces have worked out a coordinated system of command and civilian administration on the Isle of Vis, off the Dalmatian coast, which may become a «model» for other Partisan territories on which the Allies may land, according to Stoyan Pribichevich, in a story released to the combined-Anglo-American press here this afternoon.

Partisan units frequently join with Anglo-American forces in amphibian guerrilla operations along the coast, Pribichevich said. These operations are carried out on a commonly worked out plan, the success of which depends mostly upon the element of surprise.

Vis and nearby Lastovo Island are the only free islands along the Yugoslav coast, but no Dalmatian island is completely occupied by the Germans, Pribichevich said. «The enemy sticks to a few vital ports and certain inland dugouts, patrols the rest of the island by daytime, but does not venture out at night,» the correspondent said.

Vis was captured by a daring landing by 100 British troops last September, shortly after the Italian Armistice. (PRO)

FIGHTING ON ALL YUGOSLAV SECTORS

LONDON, July 27 — Steady fighting on all sectors was reported by today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio. A German stronghold at Pensanj, in central Bosnia, was captured, and the «Moravski Regiment» broken, suffering heavy losses in men and material. In western Bosnia, the Germans failed to break through from Tuzla to Sanskimos, and in eastern Bosnia the Yugoslavs are resisting stiffly and counter-attacking, despite heavy reinforcing by the enemy.

Fighting continues in the Kopaonik sector of Serbia, after a fierce battle in which 300 Germans were disabled. A violent struggle rages in the valley of the upper Lim River, in Montenegro, and on its southern bank, south of Prijepoljo in the Sandjak, Yugoslavs attacked German positions, bringing the base into immediate danger. Operations are still in progress in Slavonia, on the Kotlina sector.

During the freeing of the town of Tesanj by Yugoslavs, announced yesterday, the German 6th Chasseur Regiment was wiped out, and 250 prisoners, with important booty, taken.

The German-held stronghold of Ribnik, in the Sibenik district of Dalmatia, has been captured. (PWB)

SABANG BOMBARDMENT SURPRISED JAPS

ALLIED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HQ, July 27 — Complete surprise was achieved in the heavy Allied naval bombardment of Sabang at dawn on July 25, said a communique reaching here from the Southeast Asia Command Headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, today.

The bombardment was carried out by battleships, cruisers, and destroyers of the Eastern Fleet, and lasted 35 minutes. Harbor fittings were almost completely destroyed.

The fleet was covered by carrier-borne aircraft.

On Tinian Island, between Guam and Saipan, the beachhead has been broadened and deepened. Enemy counter-attacks have been broken up.

«At mid-morning,» said the communique from Advance Allied Headquarters, «our forces began an attack preceded fellows have now fought their w[illegible] into the northern half of Guam. The Americans now dominate the coast from Adelup to Ropoint, opposite Anae Island.

A communique from Advanced Allied Headquarters on New Guinea says that small Japanese patrols are still trying to break through the American lines across the Driniumor River on the Aitape-Wewak front.

Here, the Japanese 18th Army has been trapped for weeks, and the whole 45,000 of them have made several desperate attempts to escape to the west. In northwestern New Guinea, fighter planes and patrol torpedo boats attacked the Japanese base of Manokwari, damaging barges, fuel dumps, trucks, and bivouac areas.

Manokwari is on the New Guinea mainland, 50 miles west of American-occupied Noemfoor.

Air attacks were also made Wednesday on Wolai in the Carolines, and there were the usual daily attacks on New Britain, New Ireland, and Bougainville in the Solomons. (Reuter)

DUTCH SQUADRON FLIES 18,000 HOURS

KANDY, CEYLON, July 27 — A Netherlands squadron of Catalinas has flown a total of 18,000 hours on various operational sorties, the Netherlands news agency ANETA reported today.

The duties of this squadron include submarine patrols, escorting convoys, and reconnaissance flights.

Some members of this group took part in the East Indies campaign and made a historic non-stop flight in five Catalinas from Australia to Ceylon, across the Indian Ocean, the first time that Catalinas had made such a long sea-crossing. (PWB)

CHINESE HOLD HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 27 — After a month's bitter fighting, during which the Japanese have thrown in all their available reinforcements, Hengyang, a railway junction on the Canton-Hankow railway in southern Hunan, is still in Chinese hands, announced the Chinese High Command communique yesterday.

Chinese troops inside Hengyang and in the outer ring were attacked by the enemy all day on July 25, but these attacks were all beaten off.

During recent weeks, the 14th Air Force in the Tungting Lake and Changsha areas have destroyed over 1,000 Japanese junks, over 500 motor launches, and 1,000 trucks.

In Myitkyina, near the Chinese border of Burma, Chinese forces driving toward the border from the Chin Hills have made contact with the Chinese and Americans. Bitter fighting is in progress in this area.

Heavy rains continued to hamper Allied aircraft, but both the RAF and the USAAF gave close support to ground troops in South Manipur and at the upper end of the Myitkyina-Mandalay road.

Japanese soldiers are surrendering in greater numbers than ever before in the Burma theater, stated a report from the Exchange Telegraph.

There was even a case of a Japanese soldier who wanted to fight for the Allies after he had been deserted by his fellows.

A later communique said that Pagan Island, north of Tinian, was attacked by bomb-carrying fighters, and that installations on Rota Island, also in the Marianas, were hit.

On Tinian, the Americans have captured an airdrome and accounted for 2,000 Japanese dead. A combined press correspondent said that seizure of the 5,000 foot-high Mount Lasso gave the Americans an excellent vantage point.

«Since the first Marines swept ashore early in the morning on June 24,» he wrote, «they have fought their way two miles inland. They have ample elbow room to mount an attack of the scope which, early this month, destroyed an enemy garrison twice as large on Saipan.»

Patients in a Japanese hospital in a village captured by the Allies agreed to surrender when given good food and treatment. They were all in a starving condition, having had no food for 12 days.

Allied 14th Army troops who are driving Japan's beaten «India Invasion» army farther east along the Imphal-Tamu road have cleaned out enemy remnants resisting in the Tengoupal-Kampang area. The Japanese units which yesterday were thrown at bayonet point from dominating hills eight miles east of Palel continue to flee before the fierce assault of Indian and Scottish regiments, which have captured considerable equipment and inflicted heavy losses, despite heavy Japanese artillery fire.

U. S. INFANTRY OFFICER AWARDED DSC

WASHINGTON, July 27 — Captain Ralph Fisher, U. S. infantry officer, was posthumously awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for ordering artillery to shell his own position in order to stop an enemy counter-attack, the U. S. War Department announced Monday. Captain Fisher died in the resulting fire.

Conducting an assault in the Cassino area, Captain Fisher was met by a strong enemy counter-attack. To stop the attack, he ordered the artillery to shorten its range 200 yards. When warned by an artillery officer that his own position would be shelled, Captain Fisher insisted that the concentration be fired. His order was carried out. (PWB)

FRENCH AIR FORCE ON THREE FRONTS

ALGIERS, July 27 — The French Air Force has now reached full pre-war strength and is operating successfully on three fronts, M. Fernand Grenier, Commissioner for the French Air Force, told a press conference here today.

He revealed that three bomber squadrons and one squadron of paratroopers are now operating in Normandy with « magnificent » results. French paratroopers have been dropped behind the German lines.

French bomber and fighter units have done excellent work in Italy, added M. Grenier, and he recalled that the Allied High Command in Italy had paid special tribute to French aerial reconnaissance in the Mediterranean theater.

In Russia, the « Normandy » squadron has carried out more than 500 missions, and was recently mentioned in dispatches of the Red Army.

The Air Commissioner revealed two new principles of organization in the revitalized French Air Force. First, a system of promotion based on courage in action has been inaugurated which gives preference in advancement to officers and men who participate in combat or in other dangerous work. Secondly, a system of rotation of headquarters and field personnel eliminates any source of friction between the two sections. Under this system, constant exchanges of personnel from the general staff and units on active duty take place. (PWB)

CONSPIRATOR GENERALS NAMED

LONDON, July 27 — The three generals implicated in the plot against Hitler were General Olbricht, Colonel General Hoeppner, and Colonel General Beck, the German news agency announced tonight in a report which stated that Beck had committed suicide, that Hoeppner was arrested and to be tried shortly, and that Olbricht was shot after a court martial.

The agency added: « Although Beck was to have been given the post of Chief of the Civil Government of the Reich by the conspirators, it was Olbricht who held all the threads of conspiracy in his hands. In contrast to Beck and Hoeppner, Olbricht was on active service. He was Second-in-Command of the Home Army, and thus made it possible for conspirators to utilize military apparatus at home and to issue fake orders to army units on the evening of July 20. »

Fifty-six-year-old General of Infantry Friedrich Olbricht was Chief of the Army General Department, the central department of the German War Ministry in the Bendlerstrasse, Berlin. He was in a position to issue orders from that center in the manner described by Goebbels.

Colonel General Erich Hoeppner commanded a tank army on the Eastern Front until 1942, when he was retired without any reason's being given. (Reuter)

HITLER DRAFTING ALL FOR LAST STAND

WASHINGTON, July 27 — The U.S. Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson, said today that Adolf Hitler is « drafting all the resources and lives of his dominated people for the last stand of desperation. »

Mr. Stimson said that, although a group of German generals dislike Hitler and some of them have rebelled against him, the German General Staff and the Junker mind are no less against us than Hitler. »

JUNKERS LINKED WITH INDUSTRY

NEW YORK, July 27 — If Hitler is really going to get rid of the Junkers, he will be forced to destroy also a large part of German industry and the diplomatic service at home and abroad, wrote Heinz Pol, an authority on German affairs, in the American newspaper PM, recently.

« A powerful clique of Prussian Junkers, » wrote Pol, « not only rules the army, but decades ago infiltrated itself into German industry and finance. The diplomatic service has been almost completely in the hands of the aristocracy since Bismarck's time. »

Citing the power of the Stuelpnagel family, which includes General Otto Von Stuelpnagel, who was assassinated on the Franco-Swiss border last week, Pol said that he and his brother, General Joachim Von Stuelpnagel, were owners of the BERLINER BOERSENZEITUNG, the organ of high finance and the high command. They were co-owners also of the German cellulose trust, and as such had interests in Finnish mills and forests.

INSIDE GERMANY

GENERAL LINDEMANN RESIGNS

LONDON, July 27 — A neutral report said that General Lindemann, commander of the German forces in the Baltic region, has sent in his resignation to Hitler.

The report added that Lindemann said in his letter of resignation that he was willing to share the fate of Von Paulus (who was taken prisoner by the Red Army at Stalingrad), but he was unwilling to let his soldiers share the fate of the German troops before Stalingrad.

It is estimated that there are more than 20 German divisions in the Baltic republics, but they are already regarded by the German High Command as hopelessly lost as was the German 5th Army before Stalingrad.

Internment decrees for anti-Nazi boys were signed recently by Himmler and Ernst Kaltenbrunne, chief of the security police, which provide for the so-called anti-social youth to be examined by a criminal biological institute which dictates the sterilization or liquidation of undesirables.

Radio Moscow reported today that Baron Von Scherfenberg, son-in-law of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, former president of the Reichsbank, has been shot for « defeatism » after four months imprisonment.

They were co-owners also of the German cellulose trust, and as such had interests in Finnish mills and forests.

Krupp, Thyssen Works

The Krupp board of directors, wrote Pol, is always largely composed of representatives of the high command, including the brother of General Marlimondt. The huge Rhine metal works, formerly belonging to Fritz Thyssen, has now been taken over completely by the Army and Navy. The directors include the brother of General Jodl. Other famous Junkers families controlling large interests in Germany's industrial and financial ramifications, while their sons are in the Army or the Foreign Office, are Von Haniels, Von Hoesches, Von Mackensens, and Von Heckel-Donnersmarks.

Pol said that unrest within the ranks of the German officer corps was therefore understandable. Germany's 12,000 Junkers families are not concerned only with the Army. They want to protect and hold on to Germany's economy. Hitler and Himmler, in purging the Army of the Junkers, are at the same time wrecking the capitalistic industrial power of the country. It should not be forgotten, he said, that, contrary to widespread belief, even the officer corps of the SS has quite a sprinkling of Junkers aristocrats.

If Hitler wants to be sure, even of his SS, he has to get rid of hundreds of Junkers officers who are brothers, sons, and cousins of influential Army officers or chairmen of the biggest corporations in the Reich. (OW)

HIMMLER'S TERROR CONTINUES

LONDON, July 27 — Following fast on Joseph Goebbel's claim that Hitler's escape from the bursting bomb was a divine miracle, comes news from Turkey of Himmler's grip-tightening on the German Army.

In Vienna, on July 21, the day after the attempt on Hitler's life, Gestapo agents entered every Army bar and questioned officers and soldiers who were not known members of the Nazi Party. Many suspected of collaboration with the revolutionary movement were immediately shot. The SS also occupied all airdromes and replaced the Regular Army guard on the Hungarian frontier.

A French report Wednesday said that Gestapo agents in Paris have been ordered to drop all other enquiries and cooperate with the SS and military intelligence in weeding out officers and men in the Regular Army listed as belonging to the revolutionary movement.

A report from Madrid said that a shooting match between the SS and the Regular Army officers developed in Brussels. Two German brigadiers, five colonels, and 10 junior officers died.

The German news agency said Wednesday that SS Group Leader and Police General Wilhelm Grimm met his death while on an official journey. Hitler has sent a wreath for his grave.

Even before the attempt on Hitler's life, exasperation pervaded the German Army, said a report from Stockholm. There was a press conference some days before the incident in Berlin, said the dispatch. A spokesman of the German Army said to neutral reporters: «Gentlemen, we are not approaching a catastrophe. We are in the middle of one.» The conference was immediately called off and the statement censored out of correspondents' copy.

The correspondent who brought this story out of Germany said it was possible for days before the bomb incident to hear frank admissions in Germany of the country's desperate plight. He quoted one highranking German officer, who was in despair over the fuel shortage, as shouting: «Do you think the Fuehrer can make petrol out of water? If he cannot, the war will be over in three months!»

Neutrals report that, although the Germans say Kesselring was wounded in Italy, he has been deprived of his command and placed under arrest for complicity in the plot to kill Hitler.

The Red Army newspaper RED STAR said Wednesday, «The German generals wanted to get rid of Hitler to escape death with him in the final defeat. Their recent insurrection failed because they did not propagandise their views, but expected to succeed by striking at the top Nazis in the style of a palace revolution.

«Quite obviously, the plotters aimed to form a new Reich government. This was proved by Hitler's order to protect the Government quarters in Berlin, although the leading government members were not there.» (GWI)

ROME, July 27 — The arrival of two American military transport aircraft loaded exclusively with 140,000 vaccine innoculations to halt the spread of hog cholera in liberated Italy was announced today by the Veterinary Section of the Allied Control Commission.

The medicine, which is expected to save virtually all of the swine population of the country, was flown from the United States under the highest air transport priority. Emergency transport was decided upon after an outbreak of hog cholera in a southern province and the discovery that no vaccine existed in Italy for this disease.

The Under-Secretary for Press and Information, Sig. Spataro, today sent a circular letter containing important regulations for the press to the prefects of the provinces under Italian Government jurisdiction. These regulations have been drawn up in agreement between the Italian and Allied authorities, in order to unify the present regulations applicable in territory under the jurisdiction of the Italian Government, with a view to facilitating any eventual transfer of new zones from one authority to the other.

The circular letter concerns the Royal Decree of 10 January 1944 until a new law is passed within a short time. The regulations state that whoever intends to begin publication of a newspaper or other publication, even of a non-periodic character, must ask authorization from the prefecture of the province where such publication would take place. A Commission, authorizing all such publications, will decide on the request. The power of suspending or revoking authorization will be decided by this Commission. Any change of ownership, editorship, managership, or political tendencies from the information given when the application was made must be notified to the Commission through the same channels as the original demand.

Furthermore, the abolishment of political censorship is confirmed, there remaining in force preventive censorship only for news and comments of a military character, or which have relation to military affairs.

The new regulations come into effect as from 1 August 1944. (UNN)

LIBERATED ITALY

ALLIES FLY VACCINE FROM U. S.

ROME, July 27 — The arrival of two American military transport aircraft loaded exclusively with 140,000 vaccine innoculations to halt the spread of hog cholera in liberated Italy was announced today by the Veterinary Section of the Allied Control Commission.

The medicine, which is expected to save virtually all of the swine population of the country, was flown from the United States under the highest air transport priority. Emergency transport was decided upon after an outbreak of hog cholera in a southern province and the discovery that no vaccine existed in Italy for this disease.

Although one of the most virulent diseases affecting swine, hog cholera is not endemic in Italy, and had not occurred on an appreciable scale in 20 years, ACC officials said. The present outbreak resulted in the loss of 1,100 hogs in one commune. Scattered reports from other parts of the territory also led ACC officials to decide upon the quick import from the United States of a recently-developed vaccine, Peste Suini (Dorset), which with one injection is capable of destroying the virus.

To check the disease and save the country's herds of swine, it was decided to immunize all hogs. The work is being carried out by Italian Government veterinary authorities through the Stazione Zoo-profilaxis. Today, ACC authorities shipped 50,000 innoculations to Foggia Province, and 26,000 to Cosenza Province.

Without this emergency shipment of vaccine, it is estimated by ACC experts that 50 per cent of the existing swine herds of liberated Italy would be lost this year through this disease. (ACC)

NEW PRESS REGULATIONS — A CORRECTION

ROME, July 27 — Owing to the errors in translation from Italian into English, the item published in yesterday's UNN service under the heading «Government Takes Charge of Press» contained misleading points. The correct translation of the official statement is as follows:

only for news and comments of a military character, or which have relation to military affairs.

The new regulations come into effect as from 1 August 1944. (UNN)

MANY VIOLATORS OF PRICE ORDER

ROME, July 27 — According to a statement by the Allied Control Commission, Rome Region, there have been many violators of AMG Regional Order No 11 requiring the posting of prices for services and articles of merchandise.

No further warnings will be issued in this regard. Establishments found violating this order will be closed immediately, and proprietors will be arrested, subject to imprisonment or fine, or both, upon conviction by an Allied Military Court. (UNN)

FOGGIA TURNS IN GRAIN

ROME, July 27 — Foggia Province, often called the Granary of the Italian Southland, has turned in 456,000 quintals of wheat to the Granaries of the People, or 35 per cent of the total assigned to this area in this year's nation-wide harvest of grain. (UNN)

ARGENTINA RUN BY AXIS, U.S. SAYS

WASHINGTON, July 27 — «The dominant power in Argentina continues to be in the hands of pro-Axis elements,» said a statement by the U.S. State Department on relations with Argentina.

Though Argentina had made gestures of cooperation with the United Nations, she had in the past 2 1/2 years persisted in a course of action which had given constant aid to the Axis, continued the statement. The fact that even the most urgent considerations of national security and independence of each of the American republics, including Argentina itself, had not influenced the Argentina Government completely invalidated any suggestion that the other American Governments should recognise it.

The statement enumerated various pro-Axis actions of the Farrel Government after the resignation of Ramirez, and declared that the dominant power in Argentina continues in Axis hands, which have «rapidly and energetically implanted a domestic totalitarian system which fully complements and supports their pro-Axis policy.»

The Argentine war minister, the statement went on, in a speech on June 10, «admitted, in so many words, that the keystone of the Argentine policy is to be military force.

«The State Department is in possession of irrefutable evidence that, as late as the middle of June this year, the Argentine authorities required firms friendly to the United Nations to receive bids, as sub-contrators, from Nazi firms on contracts calling for materials imported from the United Nations. Within the past two weeks, newsprint imported under the authority of Allied navicerts has been supplied with the aid of the Farrell Government to Axis newspapers which daily viciously attack the United Nations.»

A message from Buenos Aires stated that the Foreign Minister, Peruffe, replied to U.S. Secretary Hull's statement last night with a broadcast that «Argentina will continue its present course of conduct,» and that any attempt to have the Argentines repudiate the present government would fail. PANAMA-ARGENTINE RELATIONS

PANAMA CITY, July 27 — The Foreign Minister of Panama, Samuel Lewis, announced yesterday that the Republic of Panama will not name a new minister to Argentina to replace Ernesto Mendez, who resigned last March. The foreign minister said the decision is a result of Argentina's failure to line up with the rest of the Americas for the security of the hemisphere. (PWB)

EAM DEMANDS «UNREASONABLE», SAYS EDEN

LONDON, July 27 — The leaders of the EAM movement in Greece have declined to ratify the signatures at the Lebanon Conference, and have instead put forward fresh, unreasonable demands, which would give them control over all patriot forces in Greece and Greek forces abroad, and representation in the Greek Government out of all proportion to their actual strength, Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, told the House of Commons today.

If the movement persists in their refusal to join the Greek Government on the basis of the Lebanon Agreement, they must be held responsible for the failure to achieve unity in Greek policy and arms in this «supreme moment in the common struggle,» he said.

Even at this late hour, the British Government still hoped that EAM would join the Greek Government on the basis of the Lebanon Agreement. (PWB)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, July 27 — Today's communique:

LAND: In the area west of Saint Lô, Allied forces have made good gains through enemy positions. One armoured column has driven south some five miles from the Periers-Saint Lô road to take Marigny.

Another armored prong thrust across the Saint Lô-Countances road through Saint Gilles. The advance is continuing. Elsewhere in the western sector, local gains have been made. South of Caen, there has been heavy fighting, with the enemy continuing a stubborn defense. All attacks by our forces in this sector have met strong concentrations of enemy tanks, artillery, and mortars. Several enemy counter-attacks have been repulsed.

AIR: Yesterday afternoon and evening, fighter-bombers attacked enemy gun positions, strongpoints, and tank and troop concentrations in and around the battle areas. Other fighter-bombers and fighters kept up the attack on transportation targets over a wide area from Douai to Vendome, cutting railway tracks and strafing locomotives, rolling stock, and vehicles.

Sixteen enemy aircraft were shot down. Thirteen of ours are missing. Fuel dumps at Fontainebleau and Senonches, and railway bridges at Epernon and Laigle, were attacked early yesterday evening by medium bombers. Heavy bombers, six of whom are missing, attacked the railway centre of Givors Badan, 12 miles south of Lyons, last night. Three enemy aircraft were shot down during the night, two over Normandy and one by Intruders. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 27 — Tonight's communique:

Allied armored thrusts in the western sector continue to make rapid progress.

One column has cut the road from St. Lô to Percy, in the neighborhood of Le Mesnil Herman, while another has advanced four miles to the southwest of Canisy. A third has driven some distance from Marigny down the Coutances road.

Between the Seves and Ay rivers, an advance of some 2,000 yards has cut the Periers-St. Lô road between St. Lô and Caumont. The enemy salient is being steadly eliminated, and advanced troops, after occupying Berigny, have reached the outskirts of Notre Dame D'Elle. Other forces, moving from the Caumont area, have reached the Village of Mouflet.

A strong enemy counter-attack toward Verrieres was repulsed last night. The enemy has made no further effort in the Caen area.

Fighter-bombers, supporting advancing ground forces in the St. Lô sector, attacked enemy guns and transport. Military targets at Brussels and Ghent were attacked by small forces of heavy bombers this morning. Escorting fighters strafed roads and railway facilities in the same area. Enemy shipping off the Pas de Calais coast was attacked by coastal aircraft early today. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 27 — Thursday night's Soviet communique.

Southwest of Pskov, our troops, advancing with fighting, occupied Palkino, district center of Leningrad Region, and also occupied over 40 other populated localities, including Gavrilovo, Brulevo, and Krishtava.

Troops of the 2nd Pre Baltic Front, developing their offensive, carried by direct assault the strongholds of the Germans, the towns and important communication centers of Dvinsk and Rezekne (Rezhitsa), and also occupied with fighting over 400 other populated localities, including Bukalaya, Terekale, Borovaya, Beresnuk, and the railway stations

LAND: Troops of the 8th Army have been fighting heavily on the River Greve less than 10 miles due south of Florence, where strong enemy counter-attacks, supported by tanks, have been successfully beaten off.

To the west of this area, in the sector north of Poggibonsi, troops of the 8th Army have made further progress towards the Arno and are now within six miles of the town of Montelupo, an important communication center, 10 miles to the west of Florence.

In the Tiber Valley, heavy fighting is taking place to the north of Città di Castello, where local advances have been made.

In the Adriatic sector, and in the 5th Army sector, activity has been confined to patrols and artillery duels.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked military installation in the Vienna area and an oil refinery in Albania, while fighter aircraft carried out an offensive sweep over the Brod-Zagreb area in northern Yugoslavia and the Ploesti-Bucharest areas.

Enemy communications and other objectives in northern Italy and the battle area, as well as in Yugoslavia, were attacked by tactical aircraft.

In these operations, 78 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 22 of ours are missing.

Last night, our bombers attacked oil installations at Ploesti.

MAAF flew approximately 1,800 sorties. (PRO)

Troops of the 2nd Pre Baltic Front, developing their offensive, carried by direct assault the strongholds of the Germans, the towns and important communication centers of Dvinsk and Rezekne (Ryezhitsa), and also occupied with fighting over 400 other populated localities, including Bukaieva, Tereksle, Borovaya, Beresnak, and the railway stations of Mezeni, Oksani, Oklona, Ortava, Vaganki, and Iskale.

Troops of the 1st Pre Baltic Front, as a result of the impetuous attack of tank and infantry units, captured the town and important railway junction of Shaulai (Shavli), and also occupied with fighting over 150 other populated localities, including Pokroi, Iokaneshti, Kievani, Lekunai, Vikshti, Shaplaki, Radzivilishki, Laudishki, and the railway stations of Shadov, Sheliani, and Belsakovo.

Troops of the 2nd White Russian Front, after two days' fighting, captured the town and industrial center of Byelostok, important railway junction and a stronghold of the Germans, and also occupied over 30 other populated localities, including Vasilkovo, Visoki, Staroseltse, Sloboda, and Solniki.

In the direction of Brest, our troops, in the course of their offensive, occupied over 50 populated localities, including Ratka, Motsikali, Zablotse, Dobrinduzhe, Cherechanka, Zachevki, Rakitno, and the railway stations of Lichitsa and Kamenka.

Northwest of Lublin, our troops, developing their successful offensive, captured the following towns: Mendigels, Zhelekush, Olzanish, and also occupied with fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Shanavi, Dombe, Osinets, Opole, Shekholin, and the railway stations of Shalavi, Solne, Shvida, and Leopolka.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Our troops were engaged in street fighting in the town of Siedlets.

West of Zamostie, our troops, in the course of their offensive, captured the following towns: Turovin, Yanuv, Krasnik, and also occupied with fighting over 250 other populated localities, including Posazhets, Tarnavka, Rogani, Toari, and Vezdekhovitsa.

West of Lubachev, our troops were engaged in successful fighting for the enlargements of their bridgeheads on the western banks of the River San, and captured the following towns: Ridrik, Mezhai, Sokolu, Radimno, and also occupied over 300 other populated localities, including Nizove, Kamen, Volya Gorchitska, Rokshala, Sanchuga, Rogisnitsa, Zhuravitsa, and the railway stations of Rudnik, Ventsovnya, Lezhai, and Radimno.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front, developing their successful offensive, captured the City of Lvov, important railway junction, strategically important stronghold of German defense, important economic and political center, and regional center of Ukraine; the town of Stanislavov, important railway junction, stronghold of the German defense at the Carpathian foothills, and regional center of Ukraine, and also occupied with fighting over 200 other populated localities, including the following district centers of Lvov Region: Vinniki, and Dobrosani; the following district centers of Stanislavov Region: Dukachevka, Baradadzhvni, and Kalusch; and the following important localities: Voroshinka, Novaya, Lesegik, Dulibi, Zagurechko, Chernuk, Darakhorina, Bubichna, and the railway junctions of Pogachevtsi, Kalusch, Lukachevka, and Kamenka.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 26, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 131 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 42 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of July 26/27, our Air Force carried out a massed raid on the railway junction of Tilsit (East Prussia). As a result of the bombing, large and numerous fires were started: railway cars, flatcars, and military stores were ablaze. Five German military echelons were destroyed by direct hits of our bombs. Fires were observed from a distance of 200 kilometers. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 27 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

At Armeno Novara Province, groups of patriots in a daring attack succeeded in destroying an airplane factory and propeller depot.

Near Carpi, other patriots attacked a train loaded with German troops inflicting heavy losses on the enemy; German reinforcements, arriving later, were unable to engage the patriots, who had moved away. They shot many civilians in reprisal.

In the Borgotaro zone, where the patriots are particularly active, German officers have been taken prisoner.

In Padua Province, everywhere in the vast flat region, the Nazi-Fascists are constantly attacked by the patriots, suffering losses in men and material.

Behind the enemy lines all along the fighting front nuisance actions are maintained against transports and isolated enemy patrols. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 27 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

South of Caen, positions reoccupied by us yesterday were consolidated and held in the face of renewed local attacks. Tank deployments east of Caen were smashed all enemy attacks. Effective attacks of German bombers during the night were made on enemy prepared positions in the area of Caen, and on shipping targets northeast of Cherbourg. The enemy lost 11 planes in aerial battles.

In France, 40 terrorists were annihilated in fighting.

Retaliatory fire continues against London.

In Italy, the enemy yesterday failed in his attempt, despite all efforts, to break through the German front in the area south of Florence. The enemy, employing strong infantry and tank forces, and supported again and again by artillery and heavy air attacks, hurled himself against the German positions, but was repulsed suffering heavy losses. A local penetration which the enemy was able to achieve only after very heavy fighting southeast of Figlino was sealed off.

On the Eastern Front, in the Stanislavov-Lvov sector, numerous Soviet attacks were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy. Our grenadiers continued to hold the city district of Lvov against all Bolshevik attacks. Strong enemy pressure continues in the area of Jaroslav and Lublin. The city of Lublin was lost after embittered fighting. On both sides of Brest-Litovsk, near Bialystok and east of Kaunas, all Bolshevik attempts at breaking through were frustrated, and local penetrations were sealed off. At Ponovitch, fighting is in progress against enemy reconnaissance and tank spearheads. Between Dvinsk and the Gulf of Finland, numerous Soviet attacks also collapsed yesterday with heavy losses. The town of Narva, located in a protusion of the front, was evacuated, after the destruction of all important war installations prepared for some time had already been carried out.

Enemy attacks against our shortened positions a few kilometers farther to the west were unsuccessful. In the heavy fighting in the area of Ludsen, the 32nd Infantry Battalion, under the command of Captain von Heydebreck, distinguished itself by exceptional steadfastness. The gallant commander met a heoric death in the front line. Between June 24 and July 24, 924 Soviet tanks were destroyed in the northern sector of the Eastern Front by troops of the Army, the Waffen S.S., Air Force units, and anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe. Strong formations of battleplanes successfully intervened in the ground fighting at the focal points, and smashed enemy columns. In the course of these operations, 35 enemy tanks and more than 400 vehicles were destroyed.

During the night, heavy combat planes attacked enemy prepared positions in the area of Lublin.

U. S. bombers attacked localities in southeastern Germany and Rumania. Air defense forces destroyed 24 enemy planes, including 35 four-engined bombers. Rumanian fighter planes, in aerial combat against a U. S. fighter formation, shot down nine enemy planes.

During the night, enemy planes dropped bombs on the area of Hamburg and the town of Tilsit. Six enemy planes were brought down. (Radio Berlin)

ENEMY BROADCASTS

German Overseas Station reports that Dr. Goebbels' speech, promising total war mobilisation, is approved by the whole German nation. On the Western Front, Allied attempts to break through at Calvados and Cotentin continue. Attacks are reported also in the area of the Caen-Falaise and the Caen-Fontenay roads. Some of the ground gained by the Allies has been recaptured in German counter-attacks. Last night, German torpedo-planes launched successful attacks on invasion ships lying north of the Seine Bay.

RED ARMY CAPTURES DEBLIN AND NARVA

MOSCOW, July 26 — The capture of Deblin, important stepping stone to Warsaw, and of Narva, seven miles inside the Estonian border, was announced tonight by Marshal Joseph Stalin in two orders of the day.

Narva, key to Estonia and the Baltic, became the first large Estonian town captured by the Red Army. Troops of the Leningrad Front broke through strongly fortified and deeply staggered German defenses to take the town, which is near the Gulf of Finland.

Possession of Deblin on the Vistula River, by General Rokossovsky's troops of the 1st White Russian Army, gave the Red Army a large railway junction to serve as a springboard toward Warsaw from the south. These troops are the southern spearhead of a three-pronged move on Warsaw [illegible] United Press correspondent, ted by the Czech Ambassador Cierlinger and the Chief of the Czech Military Mission, General Pika.

In the north, the Red Army is reported by the German Overseas News Agency to have begun a thrust toward Kaunas, Lithuania, in the direction of East Prussia. Kaunas is an important road and rail junction 75 miles east of Tilsit, and 140 miles due east of Koenigsberg.

Duncan Hooper, of Reuter, stating that the Red Army is now on the Vistula, said that two giant battles are reaching a climax at Bialystok and Lvov. Massed trench mortars and rocket projectors are joining guns of all calibres in a final pounding of Bialystok. An incessant deluge of fire on the Germans surrounded at Lvov is giving them the choice of death or surrender as the outcome of 120 hours' struggle. The Russians are also advancing less than 30 miles from the fortress of Przemysl, and threatening the transport hub of the Sambor, north of the Drogobych oilfields.

Southwest of Warsaw, Marshal Rokossovsky's forces are swinging a 50-mile-broad salient toward the Radom-Siedlice railway, while engineers are fortifying the hills on the left flank against fresh German forces moving up from the deep hinterland. Rokossovsky's right flank is pushing up northward in a movement which is threatening all the remaining communications of the large German forces embattled at Brest-Litovsk. Further south, Marshal Koniev is battering on the outskirts of Stanislavov, keystone of the German defenses on the Czechoslovak border.

General Hauffe Captured

One correspondent, writing of the battles round Lvov, stated that among the prisoners in this sector was General Hauffe, commander of the 13th German Army Corps, and the 25th Nazi general to surrender since the offensive opened a month ago. Hauffe had been severely wounded. He formerly commanded a division in the Orel area.

The Soviet air communique, broadcast from Moscow, stated that on the night of July 24, the Red Air Force raided concentrations of German military trains and war dumps at the railway junctions of Lvov, Tilsit (East Prussia), and Demblin (Poland). At the railway junction of Tilsit, many trains stood in the station when the raid was made, and the bombing started many fires and caused explosions.

Russian air crews stated that the railway bridge over the Niemen had been destroyed by a direct hit. At Siedlice and Demblin, numerous fires broke out. Railway trucks with war material were set ablaze.

According to an article in the Nazi newspaper, VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, new German reserves are to be concentrated behind the Eastern Front. RED ARMY CAPTURES DEBLIN AND NARVA

MOSCOW, July 26 — The capture of Deblin, important stepping stone to Warsaw, and of Narva, seven miles inside the Estonian border, was announced tonight by Marshal Joseph Stalin in two orders of the day.

Narva, key to Estonia and the Baltic, became the first large Estonian town captured by the Red Army. Troops of the Leningrad Front broke through strongly fortified and deeply staggered German defenses to take the town, which is near the Gulf of Finland.

Possession of Deblin on the Vistula River, by General Rokossovsky's troops of the 1st White Russian Army, gave the Red Army a large railway junction to serve as a springboard toward Warsaw from the south. These troops are the southern spearhead of a three-pronged move on Warsaw which Harrison Salisbury, United Press correspondent, described as moving at a pace « rivalling peacetime maneuvers. »

The capture of Deblin, 60 miles southeast of Warsaw, indicated that General Rokossovsky has elected to swing northwest along a course parallel with the river to the city's gates. Salisbury said that this army and the other Red Army forces moving on Warsaw will face German forces who are « disorganized and confused after retreating more than 310 miles in four weeks. » To support the onrushing Soviet units, the Red Air Force attacked the Wehrmacht on the Vistula's eastern bank in the vicinity of Pulawy.

Brest, Bialystok Encircled

Meanwhile, far in the rear, the by-passed German garrison at Brest-Litovsk is almost encircled and ready for liquidation, as is the by-passed city of Bialystok.

Further south, Marshal Koniev's move toward the Carpathians in the direction of Czechoslovakia is throwing an additional enormous burden on the German Army. An Exchange Telegraph correspondent reported that, while the Red Army was closing in on the oil town of Stanislavov, guarding the approaches to Czechoslovakia, Czech forces in the U.S.S.R. were ready for action.

The Czech forces, said the correspondent, eagerly awaiting the order to move « toward Prague, » were inspecting a final pounding of Bialystok. An incessant deluge of fire on the Germans surrounded at Lvov is giving them the choice of death or surrender as the outcome of 120 hours' struggle. The Russians are also advancing less than 30 miles from the fortress of Przemysl, and threatening the transport hub of the Sambor, north of the Drogobych oilfields.

Southwest of Warsaw, Marshal Rokossovsky's forces are swinging a 50-mile-broad salient toward the Radom-Siedlice railway, while engineers are fortifying the hills on the left flank against fresh German forces moving up from the deep hinterland. Rokossovsky's right flank is pushing up northward in a movement which is threatening all the remaining communications of the large German forces embattled at Brest-Litovsk. Further south, Marshal Koniev is battering on the outskirts of Stanislavov, keystone of the German defenses on the Czechoslovak border.

General Hauffe Captured

One correspondent, writing of the battles round Lvov, stated that among the prisoners in this sector was General Hauffe, commander of the 13th German Army Corps, and the 25th Nazi general to surrender since the offensive opened a month ago. Hauffe had been severely wounded. He formerly commanded a division in the Orel area.

The Soviet air communique, broadcast from Moscow, stated that on the night of July 24, the Red Air Force raided concentrations of German military trains and war dumps at the railway junctions of Lvov, Tilsit (East Prussia), and Demblin (Poland). At the railway junction of Tilsit, many trains stood in the station when the raid was made, and the bombing started many fires and caused explosions.

Russian air crews stated that the railway bridge over the Niemen had been destroyed by a direct hit. At Siedlice and Demblin, numerous fires broke out. Railway trucks with war material were set ablaze.

According to an article in the Nazi newspaper, VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, new German reserves are to be concentrated behind the Eastern Front. It is said to have been found that the former method of strengthening the German fighting lines by gradual infiltration of reserves is no longer effective. The article continued: « Not even the most exemplary bravery of the fighting troops can stop the Russians in the long run. »

The newspaper said that preparations were being made to concentrate large forces behind the present front « into which the withdrawing formations can be received. » A new ring of defence will then be formed to meet the Russian

SS LEADER KILLED IN ACCIDENT

LONDON, July 26 — SS leader Lieutenant General Wilhelm Grim, of the military police, was killed in an accident when on an official journey and was buried today, the official German News Agency reported tonight.

No details were given. (BBC)

UNDERGROUND FIGURE KILLED

LONDON, July 26 — In a Gestapo raid in Copenhagen an important figure in the underground movement has been killed in a pitched battle lasting half an hour, according to the Stockholm correspondent of the DAILY TELEGRAPH.

In normal life, Robert Jensen was a radio store owner, but he was a key link in the chain which engineered the escape of hundreds of Allied airmen. (Reuter) drive. The paper added: «where this line will be depends on the time required to concentrate.»

German military commentators show anxiety for what they call the critical situation on the Russian Front, said the BBC broadcast this morning. One of them, General Dittmar, last night tried to shift part of the blame on the men that recently rebelled against Hitler. He alleged that they weakened the resistance to the Russian offensive by interfering with several counter-measures. (Reuter)

U. S. FLIERS ON EAST FRONT

EASTERN COMMAND, U. S. STRATEGIC AIR FORCES, July 26 — For the first time, American fliers are taking part in the fighting on the Russian battle fronts, supporting Soviet ground forces and shooting up German defences, airfields, gun positions, and transport.

Today's communique from this American headquarters in Russia stated that Lightnings and Mustangs of the 15th U. S. Air Force, operating from bases in the Soviet Union, yesterday destroyed 38 enemy aircraft, 29 of them in aerial combat, in offensive sweeps in the Lvov region of the Eastern Front. The operations were carried out without the loss of a single American plane.

Numerous targets were attacked, among them German artillery emplacements, motor transport on roads leading to the enemy battleline, and a railway carrying German war traffic to the forward areas. The destruction of four locomotives and 13 trucks was announced.

Some of the Mustangs surprised a formation of JU-88's that were on their way back from a bombing raid. In the air battle that followed, 26 of the enemy planes were shot down.

Lightnings, supported by Mustangs, flew in low to bomb and machine-gun the enemy-held airfield at Mielec, on the Wisloca River, 100 miles northwest of Lvov. They destroyed a number of German aircraft on the ground, meeting very little opposition. Other Mustangs and Lightnings gave close support to Red Army ground forces surrounding the mauled German garrison at Lvov. (PWB)

ITALIANS FREED BY RED ARMY

MOSCOW, July 26 — The Red Army has liberated more than 4,000 Italians from German prison camps in Lithuania.

These men are now marching eastward along the Vilna-Minsk highway in high spirits. They are constantly asking the Russians for a chance to fight the Germans.

Some Italians had fought the Germans in the Greek Islands. Others had been taken while fighting with Marshal Tito's men. (Reuter)

DEFENSES WEST OF ST. LO PIERCED

SHAEF, July 26 — American forces, attacking along a front roughly 40 miles wide, today broke into the German positions west of St. Lô to a depth of three miles, and then threw in an armored spearhead to exploit the corridor in the German lines.

British troops have fallen back from most of the ground they gained in the diversionary attack made several days ago before the all-out push across the Orne. German forces tonight held the tip of Hill 112 (Calvary Hill 2), and Hill 113, northeast of Evrecy, and are in firm possession of Esquay and Evrecy, said Doon Campbell, Reuter correspondent.

On the east bank of the Orne, the Germans are back in May-sur-Orne in strength. Canadian infantry got into the village, but very heavy fire from German mortars on the other side of the river compelled them to withdraw.

in the infantry instead, said that the bombs and shells utterly confounded him, and killed or wounded most of the men around him. Other prisoners said half of their battalions were wiped out in the first few hours of the bombardment.»

Another correspondent, describing the effect of the bombardment on the enemy, said the prisoners included some Austrians thrown into the line yesterday with orders to attack at 0500 hours this morning.

«But, after a taste of the bombing yesterday,» he continued, «they cowered in holes throughout the night. When the bombing ended today, the survivors ran over to the American lines with their hands up, many blubbering and screaming in agonized, crazed fear. Others were unable to talk beyond murmuring, "It was terrible, terrible." One man said he was the sole survivor of his whole company.»

Saturation Bombing

The American advance followed a softening up of German positions yesterday by the largest force of planes ever used in a close support operation. Some 6,000 fragmentations and other explosives were dropped on enemy positions by 3,000 Allied warplanes in an area of five miles by two. Proof of the effect of this saturation was seen in the large number of German dead, wounded, and shell-shocked troops picked up by the advancing Americans.

On the other hand, General Omar Bradley's men are having to prise out a large number of German dug-in tanks which had been not so much affected by the fragmentation bombs. They are also suffering considerable machine gun fire from the flanks. In face of this heavy opposition, they cut the Saint Lô-Perriers road at a number of places.

General Dempsey's British and Canadian troops on the six-mile front south of Caen have held onto their initial gains in face of the heaviest German counter-attacks since D-day. Doon Campbell, of Reuter, said that, regardless of losses, Rommel is committing his infantry to hold at all costs the four mile sector between the Orne and Tilly la Campagne.

Bitter fighting was going on around the villages of May-sur-Orne, Verriers, and Tilly la Campagne. It was mainly infantry work, supported on both sides by tanks. Allied troops were forced to make a slight withdrawal to the northern outskirts of Tilly la Campagne in face of a savage counter-attack. The Allied hold on Verriers was strong.

Howard Marshall, of the BBC, said that today the position had not changed much from last night. The weather was not very good today, but Allied aircraft kept up their support of ground forces. Meanwhile, the Germans were using the reinforcements they were able to bring up during last week's bad spell of weather. There was a heavy percentage of SS men in these reinforcements. The SS divisions make up five per cent of the German armies on all fronts. In Normandy, however, they constitute 20 per cent of the forces.

It is believed there are four German Panzer divisions in the sector south of Caen.

Nazis Shoot POW'S

The commander of an American infantry unit which liberated a big group of Russian prisoners of war from a concentration camp in Cherbourg described, in an interview with a correspondent of the U. S. service journal YANK, atrocities perpetrated by the Nazis.

The correspondent said: «When the American troops saw the prison camps with barbed-wire fences and pigpen barracks, they attacked with fury and smashed the gates. The half-starved, emaciated Russian prisoners came out of the barracks yelling and began fighting the garrison. Within 30 minutes they had destroyed the Germans.»

The position is much the same at Tilly la Campagne, which we entered but had to leave under a very intense barrage of mortar bombs, shells, and rockets. We are, however, still holding our initial gains.

The drive into the German lines west of St. Lô put the Americans across the St. Lô-Periers road along an 8,000-yard front.

A total of 14 hamlets and one town were engulfed in the drive, which was renewed west of St. Lô at dawn and was given additional impetus in the form of new air and artillery bombardments.

Simultaneously with the bursting of the German line west of St. Lô, virtually the whole American flank is in action.

The town of Montrabot, which is east of St. Lô, was entered at 1830 hours and found deserted. Marigny and St. Gilles are firmly in American hands. U. S. forces broke through the German main line and also the reserve line at two points of the front west of St. Lô.

Shell-shocked German soldiers taken prisoner in the early stages of the American offensive, said a correspondent, painted a picture of the chaotic conditions which prevailed in the enemy's ranks during the saturation bombardment that marked the opening of the big push. He continued:

"The first prisoner, an 18-year-old Bavarian, who had been drafted for service with the paratroops but was used the large number of German dead, wounded, and shell-shocked troops picked up by the advancing Americans.

"Two thousand Russians, including Red Army prisoners and conscripted laborers, were originally imprisoned here, but 200 died of starvation. The prisoners were forced to work 14 hours a day on Cherbourg fortifications.

Two days before the Americans arrived, the Germans shot 200 prisoners who seemed likely to lead an insurrection.

After their liberation, the Russians immediately decided to ask permission to fight in France alongside the Americans, instead of returning to the Soviet Union, as repatriation would require a considerable time and they wished to fight immediately.

"EARTHQUAKE" BOMBS ON FLYING-BOMB SITES

LONDON, July 26 — Flying weather over Normandy this morning gave promise of being as good as yesterday when Allied aircraft flew about 4,700 sorties in twin thrusts from the St. Lô and Caen sector.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789521

All day yesterday, fighters, fighter-bombers, and rocket-fighters swarmed over the battle area in close support, and SHAEF spokesman said that «dozens and dozens» of pinpoint targets, were hit in advance of Allied troops.

The air offensive from British bases continued to-day. Early this morning, formations of fighters and bombers were seen going out over the Strait of Dover toward Calais, and shortly afterwards Radio Vichy stations, including Lille, Lyons, Nice, and Toulouse, went off the air.

Stuttgart Hit Again

RAF heavy bombers went back to Stuttgart last night to follow up Monday night's swift «saturation» raid, in which they dropped more than 35,000 heavy incendiaries, in addition to a great weight of high-explosive bombs. This was the third successive night the Bomber Command has been over Germany in great strength.

Mosquitoes dropped many 4,000-pounders on Berlin with good effect, the Air Ministry announced to-day. Other forces of heavy bombers attacked synthetic oil plants at Wanne Eickel in the Ruhr, and flying-bomb launching sites in northern France. The attack on the bomb sites was made by Lancasters, which dropped a number of 12,000-pound «earthquake» bombs. The attack on Stuttgart lasted about a quarter of an hour, and large fires were taking hold and spreading when the crews left the target.

Bremen and Mannheim were also bombed last night, and mines were laid in enemy waters. Thirteen bombers are missing from the night's operations.

Bombers and fighters attacked a Luftwaffe equipment depot and air-park at Saint Cyr, near Versailles, in daylight last evening. Reports indicated that the attack was concentrated. One bomber was lost.

Meanwhile, yesterday marked one of the heaviest days for the tactical pounding in the Normandy battle area. More than 1,500 American heavies, the largest force ever used in a single tactical operation, escorted by 1,000 medium, light, and fighter-bombers, yesterday morning blasted the way for the new offensive on the American sector of the Allied line.

Fighter Command went deep into France on patrol. They strafed ground targets and shot a dozen interceptors out of the air. (Reuter)

NEW ZEALANDERS NEAR SAN CASCIANO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 26 — New Zealand tank and infantry forces, under command of Lieutenant General Sir Bernard Freyberg, V.C., are leading the Allied forces closing in on historic Florence, and are approaching San Casciano, eight miles south of the city, it was announced here today.

Battling once more against their old enemies from Crete and Cassino, the intrepid New Zealanders have beaten back crack German paratroopers five miles in the past two days, and are rolling forward along Highway 2 into the upper stretches of the Pesa River Valley. Here, with a straight, hard-surfaced road leading almost due north into Florence, through open valleys, the hard-hitting New Zealand tank forces have the most favorable terrain for deployment in the entire area south of the Arno River.

Under the heavy pressure of these, and other tank and infantry thrusts all along the 25-mile front south of the Arno's great northern bend, German forces fell back yesterday from three to five miles. Greatest progress was being made by 8th Army forces pushing through the Chianti Hills east of the Poggibonsi-Florence road. Leading elements of these forces were reported to be nearing Mercatale, three miles southeast of San Casciano, and already to have seized strong positions covering this village Highway 69 in this sector. The German forces were wiped out in the action.

Enemy Tank Concentrations

German tank forces apparently are still concentrated in this vicinity. Patrols encountered a number of tanks and self-propelled guns in a night sortie, around San Miniato, and gave bearings for heavy artillery fire which caused the German column to disperse.

In the sector about Pisa, heavy enemy shellfire from gun emplacements on the towering Monte Pisano continued to harass approaching 5th Army forces. American troops which attempted to penetrate the German positions in the tongue of land enclosed by a horseshoe bend of the Arno 2 1/2 miles east of Pisa encountered strong resistance. German patrols which crossed the river at its mouth to enter Marina di Pisa yesterday were immediately dispersed and driven back across the stream.

The broad sector from the Arno Valley east of Florence to the Adriatic likewise showed little advance yesterday. Northwest of Arezzo, where 8th Army forces have established an expanding bridgehead across the Arno, tanks were making only slow progress in the face of heavy enemy shellfire from dominating positions in the Pratomagno Mountains. In the region of the Cerfone River, a western tributary of the Tiber, Le Ville, on Highway 73 nine miles east of Arezzo, was cleared of the enemy. Only patrol activity and artillery exchanges marked fighting on the Adriatic coast, where the Germans have momentarily stabilized their lines.

The German forces which had held as hostages 300 women and children of the town of Gubbio, yesterday withdrew from the monastery building where they had imprisoned them, after setting the civilians free.

22 Enemy Vessels Sunk

An Anglo-American inshore squadron of light coastal-craft have sunk 22 enemy vessels, including two destroyers, in attacks during the months of May and June, it was announced here today.

In addition, two other destroyers were damaged, and 10 other craft were damaged, captured, or probably sunk, in actions along the west coast of Italy. These totals exclude damage inflicted on enemy naval forces during the landings on the Isle of Elba.

It was also announced today that Anglo-American landing craft, guns, designated usually by the letters LCG played a major part in destroying 15 German «F» lighters and a sea-going tug in two night operations on March 27/28 and April 25, also in the Ligurian Sea.

Vienna Area Bombed

Up to 500 heavy bombers crossed the Alps today to attack, despite bad weather, military targets in the Vienna area.

Liberators and Flying Fortresses bombed the target area by the aid of special navigational instruments.

A number of enemy interceptors attempted to turn back the formations of bombers.

In the morning operations, Liberators flew from Italy to bomb, for the second time in three days, the Berat-Kucove oil refinery in Albania.

During the day's fighter operations, First Lieutenant James Varnell, a Mustang pilot, shot down his 16th enemy plane and came within one plane of the highest score of 17 planes to an individual pilot in the Mediterranean theater.

Leading elements of these forces were reported to be nearing Mercatale, three miles southeast of San Casciano, and already to have seized strong positions covering this village between the Pesa and the Greve Rivers. Armored cars and motorized infantry, supported by tanks, were reported over a mile north of Fabbrica, on the Pesa River 2 1/2 miles northeast of Tavernelle. These troops were maintaining close contact with the New Zealanders, about two miles further ahead and a mile further west.

Further east, British troops moving northward parallel to the Arno River in the hills to the west made gains of two miles in 24 hours, to approach the lateral road from Greve through the Chianti Hills to Figline in Val d'Arno, on the Arno River 14 miles southeast of Florence. British Guards units east of Greve made an advance of two miles along the river valley of the same name, after consolidating their positions on Monte Domini, east of the river town. These troops reported little opposition.

Along the line of the Arno River west of its junction point with the Elsa River, activity yesterday was confined to patrolling and heavy exchanges of artillery fire. American infantry forces cleaned up last remaining pockets of German resistance in the town of San Miniato and the village of San Romano, where the enemy had attempted three heavy counter-attacks Monday in an effort to turn the right flank of the American advance to the river. Further bitter fighting occurred in this region yesterday, as American forces surprised German troops entrenching themselves on the reverse slope of the Florence-Pisa railroad embankment, which runs between the river and Pratomagno Mountains. In the region of the Cerfone River, a western tributary of the Tiber, Le Ville, on Highway 73 nine miles east of Arezzo, was cleared of the enemy. Goering Works Destroyed

The great Hermann Goering tank and steel works at Linz, Austria, was «virtually destroyed» yesterday by a single attack of up to 500 heavy bombers which flew over 1,000 miles from Italian bases to make the first attack of the war on this target, it was announced here today.

All major buildings in the works, which were designed to turn out 1,000,000 tons of iron and steel and finished tank parts each year, were struck, reconnaissance photographs taken after the attack showed.

The whole area was pitted with bomb craters, and direct hits were made on rolling mills, storage sheds, transformer station, assembly shops, stamping mills, and the main foundry. In bursts in the rail yards next to the plant, over 150 units of rolling stock were derailed or destroyed, and two bridges over the Danube were damaged. The attack was carried out at least in part by the instrument bombing technique developed by the Allied Air Forces, since protective smoke screens were used to cover the target.

Tactical Air Force bombers and fighter-bombers yesterday struck at enemy communications straight across northern Italy from the Riviera coast to the Adriatic.

At Legnago, 30 miles northwest of Ferrara in the Po Valley, a formation of B-25 Mitchells attacked rail lines to complete its 10,000 operational sortie of the war. Another medium force straddled a moving train nearby with a dense pattern of bombs. Other bridge targets were attacked southwest of Savona, north of Turin, and on the Riviera coast line, into southern France.

French-piloted Marauders struck close to their homeland when they attacked a rail bridge at Ventimiglia, 10 miles from the French border on the Riviera line. On its return to base, the formation made a detour to cross a portion of French soil and to plummet the French tricolor down to their native land. One of the crew members reported on their return: «Over France, even at 12,000 feet, the air is different.»

Fortress and Liberator gunners and escorting fighter pilots shot down 65 enemy interceptors out of the 150 planes which attempted to stave off the attacks on the Linz works and against Villach, Austria, where rail yards were hit.

MAAF lost 23 heavy bombers and three other aircraft in the day's operations.

Air Support for Tito

Thanks to the close support furnished by Italy-based Liberator bombers, Marshal Tito's Partisan forces have retaken the town of Andrijevica, just north of the Albanian border, a message from Partisan headquarters to MAAF headquarters today revealed.

In the message, the Partisan area commander thanked the Allied bomber crews for their accurate attacks on German troop concentrations in the vicinity two days ago. (PRO)

PARTISANS LAND ON DALMATIAN ISLAND

LONDON, July 26 — Yugoslav Partisans made successful landings on three islands off the Dalmatian coast, it was announced in today's communique from the headquarters of Marshal Tito. More then 70 Germans were killed and nearly 80 were captured during the attacks on the islands, which a dispatch from Reuter identified as Korcula, Peljesac, and Mljet.

The communique also announced the Partisan capture of the German stronghold of Ribnik, which was taken during mopping-up operations in the interior of the mainland, east of the Dalmatian port of Sibenik. In Serbia, Partisan troops are beating back heavy attacks by German reinforcements on the southern Morava River sector.

Heavy fighting continues in Montenegro, where the Germans are bombing Partisans and bringing up reserves. The enemy managed to capture some positions west of the town of Andrijevica. In western Bosnia, Yugoslav units captured an important town, annihilating an enemy battalion of 700 men. (Reuter)

ALLIED TASK FORCE ATTACKS SABANG

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, July 26 — The trapped Japanese 18th Army in northern New Guinea has retreated from the Driniumor River Valley, and is apparently trying to reform its units south of Affua, stated General MacArthur's communique today. The enemy have withdrawn to a point six miles inland along the river. Their force, estimated at 42,000, is constantly under bombardment from the sea and air.

The Japanese news agency quoted the Japanese HQ communique as saying that an Allied task force of cruisers, destroyers, and submarines yesterday bombarded Sabang Harbor at the northwest end of Sumatra. Sabang said Reuter, is on a small island and is 650 miles up the Malacca Straits from Singapore and about 1,000 sea miles from Colombo, Ceylon. An enemy submarine base with oil storage facilities and a good harbor, it has twice before been attacked.

The New Guinea Allied communique stated that air

These islands, he said, provide the Allies with eight airfields and five harbors within 1,500 miles of Japan and the Philippines.

«Our sea, land, and air forces have now been on the offensive for six weeks without serious injury from Japanese air, surface, or submarine forces,» he said.

The Navy Secretary said that the landings on Guam and Tinian were made with comparative ease. This reflected the importance of the defeat inflicted on the Japanese fleet on June 19 and 20. American casualties had been light, and Japanese heavy. In the Saipan action, 3,049 Americans were killed. The enemy dead totalled 22,700.

Also at the press conference was Admiral King, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Fleet, who said it is certain there will be some change in Japanese strategy since a new cabinet took over. «Whether this means they will become more aggressive or go more nearly on the defensive remains to be seen,» he said.

Admiral William Halsey Commander of the 3rd Fleet in the Pacific, asked about the qualities of the Japanese fighting man, said: «They are still like rats, and fight until exterminated.» (OWI)

JAPANESE PEOPLE BLAMED FOR SAIPAN

WASHINGTON, July 26 — The people of Japan were blamed for the loss of Saipan by Tadayo Shiobata, President of the Japanese Industrial Party, in an appeal Tuesday to the industrial and home front of Japan.

Speaking over Radio Tokyo, he said:

«No one can doubt that our navy and air forces are matchless. Nevertheless, we could not destroy the enemy lurking before our eyes. This was due to the fact that the enemy had complete control of the air.

«I can imagine how the officers and men of our combined fleet felt toward the lack of aircraft. Aircraft is the very weapon which will defend Japan. This was obvious from the very early stages of the war. Truly regrettable as it is, those who are directly responsible for not being able to offer a proper solution to this obvious problem are we on the industrial line of the home front.

«The cause of our heroes of Saipan to give up blood or bitter tears and for our Emperor to feel anxiety is directed to you industrial fighters, who are losing the invisible war to the United States and Britain.»

HEAVY JAPANESE LOSSES IN BURMA

KANDY, CEYLON, July 26 — As the Allied assault on the Japanese defenses along the Palel-Tamu road develops satisfactorily, the enemy are losing heavily in men and materials, stated the Southeast Asia Command communique issued here today.

The Allies are mopping up on the hill which they have occupied astride the Tiddim road near Tangnoupal, eight miles from Palel, and, despite shelling, they are pushing on through the hills beyond Torbung, 32 miles from Imphal. Minor gains were made by the Allies during heavy street fighting in Myitkyina.

Chinese troops, operating from their homeland, are driving into Burma to reopen the supply lifeline with the Allies, it was officially reported from their headquarters at Chungking. Chinese guns are shelling Tengchung, a key town about 20 miles west of the Burma Road and about 65 miles southeast of Myitkyina. The fortified hill to the southwest of Tengchung is under Chinese bombardment, and all Japanese counter-attacks on the newly-won position have been repulsed. Rain along the entire Salween Front has reduced activity by both sides. (PWB)

ALLIED TASK FORCE ATTACKS SABANG

ADVANCED ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, July 26 — The trapped Japanese 18th Army in northern New Guinea has retreated from the Driniumor River Valley, and is apparently trying to reform its units south of Aitua, stated General MacArthur's communique today. The enemy have withdrawn to a point six miles inland along the river. Their force, estimated at 42,000, is constantly under bombardment from the sea and air.

The Japanese news agency quoted the Japanese HQ communique as saying that an Allied task force of cruisers, destroyers, and submarines yesterday bombarded Sabang Harbor at the northwest end of Sumatra. The New Guinea Allied communique stated that air patrols, sweeping over Japanese-held areas between northwestern Dutch New Guinea and the southern Philippines, forced a 1,000-ton enemy vessel aground near Halmahera, in the Moluccas.

Targets for the day included, as usual, Palau in the Carolines, New Ireland, New Britain, and Bougainville in the Solomons.

A communique from Admiral Nimitz, issued at Pearl Harbor last night, stated that American assault forces which landed north and south of Guam Island, in the Marianas, have made contact and have extended their lines at the base of the peninsula.

The communique added that Venturas pounded the Japanese base at Paramushiro in the Kuriles, which are a string of islands lying northeast of Japan.

On Tinian Island, lying between Guam and recently-captured Saipan, a Japanese counter-attack was broken up, and the American bridgehead there has been developed and deepened. (Reuter)

GUAM, TINIAN, SAIPAN ARE KEYS TO JAPAN

"NAVY HELPLESS", SAYS NAZI ADMIRAL

LONDON, July 26 — Rear Admiral Gadow, well-known German naval authority, admitted in a recent article in a north German newspaper that the German submarine warfare had failed, and that the present position of what is left of the German Navy is hopeless.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Gadow said: «We entered the war with a full and concentrated naval strength. Later, our heavy units were reduced because of the improved protection of the enemy's merchant traffic and, besides, we were hopelessly inferior to the enemy.

«The heavy demands on material and labor made by the land and air war rendered the replenishment of the Navy impossible, and forced us to limit ourselves to a U-boat warfare. Our U-boat offensive, however, has been stopped since 1943».

Gadow admitted that, because of the helpless position of their navy, Germany was unable to prevent the sending of large American forces to England or to interfere with Allied landings in Africa, Italy, and France. To use Germany's few remaining heavy naval units in the English Channel would mean losing them immediately, Gadow added. (PWB)

INSIDE GERMANY

GOEBBELS TELLS HIS VERSION OF PLOT

LONDON, July 26 — Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, the newly-appointed Reich Trustee for Total Mobilization of War in Germany, gave tonight his version of what happened July 20, when an attempt was made to assassinate Hitler with a bomb which Goebbels said was in a briefcase pushed right at Hitler's feet.

The Propaganda Minister, in his 45-minute speech over the radio, made no reference to the disturbances which broke out throughout Germany or the delay of several army commanders, notably those in Italy and on the Eastern front, to send messages of loyalty to Hitler, although specifically «requested» to do so.

With one breath he insisted that «no unit, whether at the front or at home, in the critical hour was «naked in loyalty toward the Fuehrer,» and in the next announced that Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler «will reorganize the entire apparatus from the home to the front and will put up and train numerous new SS divisions,» adding:

«Formations at the front will be more quickly replenished, thus making the front stable and formidable. Speedy expansion of armament production continues and has not yet reached the culminating point.»

Without explaining how, Goebbels continued: «All-out war will release so much manpower for the front and armament production that it will not be too difficult to master the difficulties of war.»

Goebbels' story of the attempt to erase Hitler described the arrival in Berlin of Count Stauffenberg via a courier plane, having been sent by an Army Colonel General to make a report at a conference, just before noon, at which Hitler was present.

Stating that he «owed the German people» an account of what happened July 20, Goebbels said he would give it to them «in my sober, uncolored report,» which went on:

«I have heard all reports of eyewitnesses, and have inspected the room where the attempt was made. The would-be assassin was sent by one of the arrested generals to the daily discussion of the situation under the pretext of reporting. He took the explosives with him in an attache case which, under the pretext of wanting to put it down, at the moment he was unobserved, he had shoved it right at the Fuehrer's feet.

Blown Through Window

«Colonel General Korten, who stood directly behind the Fuehrer, was seriously wounded, and succumbed from his injuries on Saturday. The force of the explosion blew him while he was conferring with other cabinet ministers. Goebbels said he hurried over to the scene immediately.

Goebbels said that both Hitler and the guards were so furious over the bombing that their fury reached «unparalleled proportions.» He declared that the soldiers grabbed their automatic pistols and rifles to prepare themselves «for the final settlement of the account.» This final settlement, it developed in Goebbels' speech, was an immediate court martial held at the scene of the explosions, which immediately sentenced «the guilty» to death. A platoon of the guard carried out the execution in the courtyard.

The BBC said in a broadcast after Goebbels' speech: «His speech adds nothing to previous statements from the Propaganda Ministry.» (Reuter-Transocean)

NO SYMPATHY FOR NAZI GENERALS

WASHINGTON, July 26 — The WASHINGTON POST yesterday carried a commentary entitled «Nazis and Junkers.» The commentary said that many of the German generals think Germany can gain nothing by fighting on. «These coldblooded professionals have not Hitler's faith in fanaticism as an instrument of warfare. It is, in their opinion, no substitute for weapons and numbers.

«There is a good deal of nonsense being written and said about these German generals. Some of them are being described as anti-Nazis, but this is a meaningless term. The German generals went along with Hitler every step of the way. They did not protest against the seizure of power by the Nazis, but welcomed it. They took no steps to prevent the massacre of the Jews, or the extermination of Poles, Russians, Yugoslavs, and other people in conquered areas. They never manifested aversion to brutality when they thought it possible to achieve their ends through such means.

«Their complaint today is, not that Hitler is a Nazi, but that he is a failure. They now regard him as the architect of Germany's ruin. They want to salvage what they can of the prestige of the German Army by saddling the responsability for Germany's second defeat in 25 years on the Nazi regime. By liquidating Hitler and his henchmen, they will win the gratitude of the German people and lay the foundation for the rebuilding of the German Army at some time in the future.» (PWB)

EASTERN GENERAL CONGRATULATES HITLER

LONDON, July 26 — Field Marshal Model, commanding two army groups on the Eastern Front, has sent a telegram of congratulation to Hitler on his recent escape from death.

The German news agency Transocean said yesterday: «Model is the first of all the German commanders on the Eastern Front to do so.»

It is pointed out that Model took up his East Front command only a few weeks ago. The other pledges of loyalty from any of the fighting fronts have come from Kluge, appointed two weeks ago to the Normandy Front, and Rendulic, who took over command of the German troops in Finland after Dietl's death on July 1. «Colonel General Korten, who stood directly behind the Fuehrer, was seriously wounded, and succumbed from his injuries on Saturday. The force of the explosion blew the participants of the conference for many meters through the window, and their uniforms were torn to pieces. There was only one spot relatively unaffected by the tremendous detonation wave, and that place was where the Fuehrer sat at the map table. The map table itself was thrown into the room by the explosion, but the Fuehrer, with the exception of slight contusions, burns, and scratches on the forehead, was absolutely uninjured.»

Goebbels said that the explosives were of British origin, but he did not say how he knew this.

He told the German people that they «must march through an inferno of obstacles, trials, and perils» before reaching the open road at the end. He added: «There can be no doubt that we shall succeed. But we must succeed, for otherwise we are all lost.»

Goebbels said that the plot which was to be carried out following Hitler's assassination was frustrated within an hour, and the attempt of the plotters to take over Bendlerstrasse (headquarters of the Supreme Command of the armed forces) was frustrated because, he added, the plotters «had forgotten that the Berlin guard battalion (on duty at Government buildings), like all other formations of the German armed forces, consisted of fanatical National Socialists.»

The Propaganda Minister reported that he had been notified of the bombing by a Major Remer, who telephoned

DEAD GENERAL WAS TYPICAL NAZI

ROME, July 26 — Colonel General Guenther Korten, whose death from wounds received during the recent attempt on Hitler's life was announced earlier, died two days before his 46th birthday.

He was a typical Nazi soldier. Of German middle-class origin, he enlisted in the first world war at the age of 16. He received his commission a year later, and before he was 20 commanded a company. Like many of his contemporaries who had never experienced working in civil life, he joined the famous reactionary «Freecorps,» and took part in the fighting against German revolutionary workers. He rejoined the army, and was again commissioned in 1925. Six years later, in 1931, he was apparently already trained as an airman, and was employed in the secret reorganisation of the German Air Force. When, in 1934, the Nazi Government decided to be more open about these preparations, Korten held an important position in Goering's «civilian» Air Department.

In 1938, Korten was posted as Chief of Staff to General Loehr to reorganise the Austrian air force. As Chief of Staff of the 4th Air Fleet, he was presumably responsible for the preparatory staff work for the bombing of Warsaw and other Polish cities in 1939. Some of the raids on London and Coventry in 1940, and the bombing of Belgrade in 1941, are taken to have been partly based on his staff work. He was promoted to full General during the Russian campaign.

He was certainly considered one of the most efficient among the staff officers of the German Air Force, but his promotion to Chief of Staff was due not only to his qualifications, but also to his political reliability. The appointment was made at a time, in August, 1943, when the Luftwaffe was fast losing aircraft, personnel, and prestige, and was plainly no longer able to fight on three fronts and at the same time cope with British and American day and night attacks on Germany.

Korten was one of the few high-ranking German officers who were thorough-going Nazis, and was a member of the «Blutorden,» the blood-order, the Nazi Party's highest decoration, given only to men who took part in Hitler's abortive «Beer cellar Putsch» of 1923, or in Nazi affairs in the movement's early days. He was reputed to be arrogant, domineering, and disliked. Through Korten's death by violence, Hitler has lost another among the dwindling circle of senior German officers on whom he can rely. (PWB)

DITTMAR ACCUSES OFFICERS OF SABOTAGE

LONDON, July 26 — General Kurt Dittmar, radio spokesman of the German High Command, told the German people by radio Tuesday that the conspiracy against Hitler had «inflicted harm on the striking power of the German Army in the field.»

He said:

«German officers on the central sector have sabotaged military operations by failing to carry out their orders with the necessary speed. Sand in the machine is the right word for it.» (PWB)

NAZIS CALL ON «INVISIBLE RESERVES»

LONDON, July 26 — Appeals for loyalty, coupled with threats, which foreshadow the new and stringent restrictions in Germany, are appearing in the Nazi Press.

The VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER writes: «Whatever is lacking in the way of arms must be replaced by will. The very fact that we realise the hopelessness of attempting to equal the enemy as regards tanks and aircraft helps to mobilise our invisible reserves. Do not underestimate these reserves, under the influence of the droning bomber formations and tank clusters, which are ineradicable.

«Neither the front nor the homeland can resist without the support of the inner voice, which comes from the depths of loyalty. Materialists, after five sobering war years, may prefer to refer to higher production figures in aircraft factories. We cannot do that. The present bad times make it necessary that the demands on character, to which Himmler demands that his SS must be equal, should be applied to all, and to every avenue of life. The slightest case will be judged all the more severely, because it harms us more easily in these hours of menacing acuteness.»

PENALISE FAMILIES OF DESERTERS

LONDON, July 26 — Conscripts of Lorraine are deserting on such a big scale that the Germans have officially introduced wholesale punishment of deserters' families.

The order by the Germans was published in a local paper, and stated that desertions constitute a «state of open rebellion against Reich authorities and war decrees.»

Claiming that investigations have shown that most desertions take place with the consent and aid of the deserter's family, the order announces that consent will in the future be assumed, unless the family can prove that it has done everything in its power to prevent flight.

Punishment will take the following forms:

The property of the whole family will be confiscated.

At least one member of the family will be arrested and taken to a labor camp outside Lorraine.

Should members of the family be found to engage again in activities hostile to the state, the arrested member will be shot. (Reuter)

GOVERNMENT TAKES CHARGE OF PRESS

ROME, July 26 — Effective August 1, the Italian Government will assume jurisdiction over authorization of newspapers and other printed matter within the territory it administers, it was announced today by Under Secretary for Press and Information Spataro, in accordance with agreements reached between Allied authorities and the Government.

The Allied Publications Board retains control of the licensing of all publications within Allied Military Government territory.

As under Allied control, the new Italian Government regulation of the press provides for complete freedom from political censorship. There will be no pre-publication censorship on military grounds, but all editors will be held responsible for violations of military censorship.

Under the press rules, anyone desiring to start a publication must apply to the Prefecture in the province in which publication will take place. A provincial commission with full powers to pass upon such applications will decide. The same commissions will have power to suspend or revoke such authorizations to publish.

The announcement was contained in a circular giving the rules regarding the press according to the decree-law passed January 10, 1944. A new press law will be passed shortly, it was indicated, but it is not expected to contain any serious modifications of the rules regarding authorizations. (UNN)

MAY LEND-LEASE FIGURES ANNOUNCED

WASHINGTON, July 26 — The Foreign Economic Administrator, Leo Crowley, announced yesterday that Lend-Lease shipments of munitions and other supplies last May reached a record total of 1,159 million dollars.

Crowley said that of this total, 559 million dollars' worth was shipped to the United Kingdom, 316 million to Russia, 110 million to the Mediterranean theater, and 44 million to all other areas, including other American republics, which received supplies valued at four million dollars.

Planes, guns, tanks, and other military equipment constituted almost 60 per cent of Lend-Lease shipments in May.

These shipments brought the total value of Lend-Lease exports since March 11, 1941, to 20,525 million dollars, Crowley said.

Crowley also made a statement on Reverse Lend-Lease. The United States forces in the South and Southwest Pacific received over 440 million pounds of foodstuffs, valued at more than 27 million dollars, from the New Zealand Government without cost, as Reverse Lend-Lease, up to May 31, 1944.

Crowley added that about 95 per cent of the total food consumed by the American forces in the South and Southwest Pacific is provided by Australia and New Zealand without cost, under Reverse Lend-Lease.

Because of this, he said, many tons of shipping space are saved, and can be devoted to the transport of munitions and other war material from the United States to the Pacific theater of war. (PWB)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 26 — Today's communique:

LAND: On a 30-mile front south of Florence, substantial gains have been made, particularly to the west of the Poggibonsi-Florence road, where the leading elements are now approaching San Casciano. To the west of the Arezzo-

South of Caen, fighting has been very bitter, and enemy counter-attacks, some supported by armor have continued all day. Our initial gains have been held, and fighting continues in the area of May sur Orne-Verrieres and Tilly la Campagne.

Following yesterday morning's operations in support of ground forces in both the Caen and Saint Lô sectors, smaller formations of Allied aircraft continued to give close support of our ground forces throughout the day.

Numerous tanks and gun positions, strong points, and motor transport just forward of our line, and an enemy headquarters west of Saint Lô, were among the targets attacked by fighter-bombers and fighters.

Other formations of both fighters and medium bombers attacked communication targets including bridges, fuel dumps, supply depots, rail yards, and trains behind the enemy line. At least 25 enemy aircraft were destroyed yesterday. Seventeen of ours are missing. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 26 — Tonight's communique:

In the western sector, the Allied advance has continued to make steady progress, and the battle area has been extended.

East of the Orne, the enemy is making every effort to block our entry to the open country southeast of Caen, and additional enemy reinforcements have been brought into the area. Allied attacks have been heavily engaged by defensively placed artillery and mortar fire.

In one locality, our troops have repulsed a heavy enemy counter-attack which was strongly supported by tanks.

Small forces of medium bombers, operating in poor weather, bombed enemy positions in the St. Lô area and a fuel dump near Alencon this morning.

Four formations of fighter-bombers struck at enemy bivouac areas, machine-gun positions, and other tactical targets, which were indicated by our land forces.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 26 — Wednesday night's Soviet communique:

Troops of the Leningrad Front, having gone on the offensive in the area of Narva, broke through the strongly fortified and deeply echeloned enemy defenses, and, as a result of an outflanking maneuver combined with a frontal attack, captured the town and fortress of Narva, and also occupied 20 populated localities, including Narva Jesku, Kotovo, Trengolm, Utreyu, Sumokrat, and the railway station of Auvere.

Southwest of Pskov, our troops occupied with fighting 30 populated localities, including Podgratie, Zarecchie, Zelilino, Gnilino, Usadische, Risava, and the railway station of Kupravo.

Northwest and south of Polevezhesk, our troops, in the course of their offensive, occupied over 150 populated localities, including Ushlatow, Katuni, Rosalin, Veimarovo, Zhudov, Trngelevo, and the railway stations of Tergunat, Pustoni, Lava, Skubirin, and Ushalotak.

Troops of the 1st White Russian Front, as a result of an impetuous attack of our tank and infantry units, captured by storm the town and fortress of Deblin (Ivangorod), stronghold of the Germans on the Vistula River, and also occupied with fighting over 100 other populated localities, including the town of Byalopodlaska, the towns of Ulavi, Starokamlya, Lisoviki, Mikhus, Riki, Osiru, Klementovitse, and the railway stations of Byalopodlyaska, Riki, Ulani, and Zalencho.

In the area of Lvov, our troops were engaged in the annihilation of encircled troops of the enemy.

In the direction of Stanislavov, our troops, developing their successful offensive, captured the following district centers of Stanislavov Region: Gorodani, Burshtin, Luman, Bezmennitsa, Nadvornaya, Deliagin, and also occupied with fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Medinya, Volchenets, Parischi, Bazheche, and the railway stations of Martinus, Burshtin, Povelche, Semnitsa, Kriblin, Nadvornaya, and Delyatin.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 25, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 88 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 35 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of July 25/26, our Air Force bombed enemy echelons and military stores on the railway junctions of Tilsit and Warsaw.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

During the raid on Tilsit, four enemy echelons were destroyed by direct hits. As a result of the bombing, over 40 fires were started, which enveloped the whole territory of the railway junction.

Fires were observed at a distance of 150 kilometers.

During the raid on the railway junction of Warsaw, large fires were started, which were followed by heavy esplosions. Especially large fires were observed in the suburb of Warsaw-Praha. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ. AAI, July 26 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

German communication lines and transports in North Italy have been incessantly attacked by Patriots. On the Belluno-Calalzo railway, traffic was interrupted for more than three kilometers. A freight train was derailed and precipitated into a gully. Before the attack, the railwaymen were invited to descend and seek safety. An iron bridge was destroyed. In Valdagno, the Patriots attacked and occupied two garrisons and seized the arms in the depots.

Efficacious attacks against the Nazi-Fascists have been carried out in Stresa Borromeo, Omegna, Valseriana, Val Brembana, and Val Cavallina.

Patriots attacked an observation point in San Giorgio di Travo, and captured rifles, clips, hand bombs, radio-telegraph material, telephones, and various equipments.

In Vianello, Patriots set on fire farms occupied by collaborationists. Two hundred Patriots attacked and destroyed the barracks of the Republican Fascist Guards. They inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, and only one Patriot was lost.

In Bettola, the Patriots destroyed various works belonging to collaborationist Fascists.

Among the dishcartened enemy troops in North Italy, rebellions and desertions are increasing. Foreign elements from the German Army have surrendered to the Patriots. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 26 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the course of heavy fighting south of Caen, the enemy succeeded in penetrating into our positions west of the Caen-Falaise road, and in bringing up further infantry and tank forces. However, our fanatically fighting troops frustrated a widening of the enemy penetrations, and in the afternoon hours launched a counter-attack. After embittered fighting, the former positions were again in our hands by evening. Enemy losses are high; eighteen tanks were shot up.

Northwest of St. Lô, a defensive battle of great extent is also raging. After the first enemy attacks, which had been launched with very strong artillery and air force support, were repulsed, the enemy at several points succeeded in penetrating our front and in crossing the St. Lô-Periers road towards the southwest. Counter-attacks are in progress. Since the morning hours of to-day, fighting with great intensity spread also to the area north of Periers.

Battleplanes successfully attacked enemy prepared positions in the beachhead, and heavily damaged one large transport vessel off the coast. In aerial battles, 11 enemy planes were shot down.

In southern France, 110 terrorists were annihilated in fighting.

Heavy V-1 retaliatory fire continues against the area of Greater London.

In Italy, the large-scale attack against the area south of Florence has begun. The enemy failed to achieve the North of Arezzo, and on both sides of the Tiber, enemy attacks were frustrated, and local penetrations were sealed off.

On the Adriatic coast, the enemy again launched an attack. Fierce fighting there continues.

Combat ferries of our Navy damaged two British E-boats off the Italian west coast. During attacks on supply convoys in the Aegean escort vessels of our Navy, anti-aircraft guns aboard ships, and fighter aircraft shot down seven out of 15 attacking planes.

In Galicia, between the Upper Dniester and Lvov, numerous enemy attacks, supported by tanks, collapsed with heavy losses to the Soviets. In the city district of Lvov, our troops repelled the enemy in a counter-attack. In the sector of an army, 553 enemy tanks were destroyed between July 14 to July 23, whereby the 20th Hamburg Panzergrenadier Division, under the command of Lieut. General Jauer, particularly distinguished itself.

In the fighting area between the upper Bug and the Vistula, the enemy gained further ground towards the San and the area of Lublin. Southeast of Lublin, however, all enemy attacks were frustrated. Between Brest-Litovsk and Grodno, as well as east and northeast of Kaunas, all enemy attempts at breaking through were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our divisions. On the front between Dvinsk and the Gulf of Finland, our troops also achieved a complete defensive success against all Bolshevik attempts at breaking through. Forty-seven enemy tanks were shot up there. Captain Weissenberger, Wing Commander of a fighter squadron, scored his 200th air victory on the Eastern Front.

Enemy bomber formations attacked localities in western and southeastern Germany. Particularly in Suttgart, damage and casualties were caused in a new terror attack. Moreover, some enemy planes dropped bombs on the area of the Reich Capital, and on localities in East Prussia. Air defenses shot down 51 enemy planes. (Radio Berlin)

ENEMY BROADCASTS

German Overseas Station: Successful defensive fighting is reported from all fronts. In Normandy, counter-attacks at Caen and St. Lô have regained the ground lost during the large-scale Allied offensive yesterday. Soviet drives were checked on the Eastern Front. A new offensive has been launched in the southern sector. It is reported that all attempts at a break-through in Italy have been frustrated. On the Adriatic coast, the Allies have opened a new offensive.

The newly-formed Polish Cabinet in Moscow is giving some anxiety to the British Foreign Minister and to Mr. Cordell Hull.

Mr. Stimson has stated that fresh divisions will have to be sent to the Western Front, to replace the heavy losses there.

Fascist Radio: The Allies have made no further progress in their advance towards Florence. Around Citta di Castello, the Germans have reestablished their defensive positions. Fighting in the Tyrrhenian sector is particularly strenuous. A report broadcast by the BBC, to the effect that Fascist forces were marching to rescue Milan from the revolutionaries who held it, has been denied. The Fascist Minister for Public Works, Romano, has spoken of the consequences that have arisen from the treason of July 25 and September 8 of last year. The anniversary of the Bandieras' death has been celebrated throughout free Italy. General Renato Ricci has sent a message to Republican battalions fighting in the Balkans.

WAR FRONTS

ITALY

Two enemy counter-attacks of "substantial strength" were repelled by the 5th Army yesterday and the American forces expanded eastward their hold on the southern banks of the Arno to within 1º miles of Florence, now threatened directly by Infantry and armoured forces only 10 miles to the south on the road from Pergihonsi. Forces of the 8th Army, approaching Florence from the southeast, neared Figline, 12 miles from Florence on the main Arezzo-Florence road. The enemy is waging a stubborn defense through the Chianti Hills south of Florence, it was reported. South African forces have seized Monte Fili, 13 miles from Florence, and have established a foothold on Monte Domini, in the valley of the Greve. The town of Greve is reported clear of the enemy by patrols which entered the town. In the Arno Valley, southeast of Florence, 8th Army forces occupied Laterto, west of the river, and 17 miles from Florence. In the upper Tiber Valley, 8th Army tanks and infantry approached to within two miles of the road junction town of San Sepolcro, nine miles north of Citta di Castello. On the Adriatic front, the stronghold of Ostra, south of the Misa River, was being stubbornly defended yesterday against Polish assaults. The Germans have brought up long-range guns to shell the port of Ancona, in an effort to harass Allied repair crews readying this harbour for use.

FRANCE

Troops of the British 2nd Army captured the villages of St. Martin de Fontenay and Verrieres in a renewal of the offensive at both ends of the Normandy battle front. American 1st Army troops continued their major battle in the western sector, and the assault was said to be developing satisfactorily. In the eastern sector, British and Canadian troops were still advancing last night along the Caen-Falaise ridge in heavy fighting, and strenuous fighting was also reported in the streets of Mayeur-Orne. An AP dispatch spoke of a battle at close quarters for the town of Tilly la Campagne. Medium and light bombers struck at German concentrations before the ground forces swept forward in the new offensive.

RUSSIA

The Red Army, striking at the retreating enemy all along the Eastern Front, cut the Dvinsk-Riga railway in Lithuania, it was announced in last night's Soviet communique. To the northwest, the largest motorized force ever assembled by the Red Army is speeding towards Warsaw. Northeast of Bialystok, Russians moved to within 20 miles of the East Prussian southern border. Troops of the 2nd White Russian Army have wheeled their way further to within Bialystok. Further south, Cracow, the big Polish city, is coming into the battle picture. West of the River San, the Russians have captured Jaroslaw, on the main railway line to Cracow. The town of Kalish, 14 miles from Stanislavov, has been captured in the course of the new Soviet advance which has taken the Red Army across the upper Dniester southwest of Tarnopol. In all, the Russians captured 1,500 places yesterday, bringing their total in the last three days to nearly 4,000.

PACIFIC

Enemy forces on Guam Island have been completely cut off in the Orote Peninsula, it was reported yesterday. The American forces have made gains despite stiff opposition. Air attacks were made on adjacent Rota Island, on Ponape in the Carolines, and on Shumushu, in the Kuriles, northeast of Japan. American forces which landed on Tinian Island, which lies between Rota and Guam, have secured good beachheads on the northwestern coast and have advanced about a mile. General MacArthur's communique said that fierce fighting has again broken out in British New Guinea, where the trapped Japanese 18th Army has made more attempts to break through the American lines east of Aitape. As the waves of Japanese came over, said the BBC yesterday, they were mowed down by American fire. Isolated groups which managed to break through are being mopped up.

AIR

Heavy bombers of the RAF struck at the city of Stuttgart yesterday while Mosquitoes dropped two-ton bombs on Berlin. In the attack of Stuttgart, over 30,000 heavy incendiaries were dropped in 15 minutes. In addition to their attack on Stuttgart, RAF Bomber Command planes also raided Frankfurt and Aachen. Twenty-three of the RAF planes did not return. Another force bombed oil storage tanks at Donges, near Saint Nazaire, for the second night in succession. Flying-bomb installations in northern France were also attacked. Fighters of the USAAF carried out an offensive sweep over southern Germany yesterday. RAF Lancasters dropped many 12,000-pound bombs on a large concrete structure in the Pas de Calais yesterday morning. Italy-based heavy bombers returned to southern France last night to subject the Valence la Tricastarie landing grounds, near Marseilles, to their second pounding within 12 hours. Tactical Air Force planes yesterday attacked rail lines in the Milan, Piacenza, Cremona, and Mantua areas. Fighters carried out punishing sweeps over Yugoslavia, hitting fuel dumps, bridges and other objectives. Up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF yesterday bombed the recently-constructed Herman Goering tank works at Linz, Austria and the Danube near the Bavarian border. MAAF flew approximately 1,700 sorties.

PENINSULAR BASE SECTION NUMBER 287 - WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1944

NAZIS MEETARE SUMMER EFFORT WITH TOTAL MOBILIZATION OF HITLER EUROPE: London, July 25--The German news agency's broadcast tonight said that Hitler had issued a new decree ordering total mobilization of Germany and occupied territories. Goebbels has been appointed responsible for the total mobilization. The announcement from Hitler's headquarters read: "Today, July 25th, the Fuehrer issued a decree valid for the territory of the greater German Reich and annexed and occupied territory about total mobilization for war. Its essential points are as follows: The war situation enforces the mobilization of the last ounce of strength for the Wehrmacht and the armament industry. I therefore order: Chairman of the Ministerial Council for Defense of the Reich, Herman Goering, is to adapt in every respect the whole of public life to the demands of total warfare. To carry out this task he will suggest to me a 'Reich Trustee for Total Mobilization.' In particular he will have to see to it that all public events are in line with the aim of total mobilization and do not take away any forces from the Wehrmacht or armament industry. He will have to re-examine the whole state administration, including the Reich railways, the Reich postal service, and all public establishments, institutions, and undertakings with the purpose of freeing the maximum of manpower. To do this men and material must be used rationally, tasks of lesser war importance stopped or reduced, organization and procedure simplified. To this end he may demand explanations from the highest authorities of the Reich and give them instructions. Legal decrees and administrative orders will subsequently be issued by the responsible highest authorities of the Reich, in agreement with the Reich Minister and Chief of the Reich Chancellery, head of the Party Chancellery, and delegate general for the Reich's administration. The head of the Party Chancellery will energetically support the measures which I have ordered by mobilizing the Party in accordance with the full powers he has been given. Under this decree, and at the suggestion of the Chairman of the Ministerial Council for Reich Defense Marshal Hermann Goering, the Fuehrer has appointed Reich Minister Doctor Goebbels to be 'Reich Trustee for Total Mobilization for War.'"

Later in the evening the German news agency's chief editor, Schroeder, came on the air to say that Doctor Goebbels, newly appointed trustee for total war mobilization, will probably work over the radio tomorrow to explain to the German people the new task with which he has been entrusted by Hitler. "An extraordinary amount of power has been placed into the hands of Doctor Goebbels," Schroeder said. "One will not go far wrong in the expectation that Doctor Goebbels will act with ruthless methods very quickly and very thoroughly. This will be done not only in Germany but also in occupied territories, and will extend to every sphere of life."

While the Nazis were mobilizing for a frantic, bitter-end fight, the Moscow radio last night broadcast an appeal by 16 German generals who are now prisoners in Russia urging the German armed forces to break immediately with Hitler and to cease fighting. Said the appeal:"...Hitler is trying to conceal from the German people the true state of affairs on the eastern front and to force them to submit to a continuation of a war which, thanks to him, has now become a war on two fronts and must inevitably bring final defeat on our country. We have been betrayed by Hitler's leadership..." The German news agency reports that Hitler received another loyalty message today. This one, the first from the eastern front since the attempted assassination five days ago, was from Field Marshal Model, commander in chief of the army groups on the Russian front. In London, Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that he was not yet in a position to make a considered statement about the "recent dramatic developments in Germany." Mr. Eden said that the information at the government's disposal was not yet sufficient to enable it to estimate to the full extent of the trouble or draw inferences of its likely development.

RED ARMY REACHES VISTULA RIVER: Moscow, July 26--A front line dispatch received early today says that Red Army forces have reached the Vistula River, a stream which runs through Poland's two largest cities, Warsaw and Cracow. The point at which the Soviet forces reached the river is not yet revealed but the most likely area appears to be where the Lublin to Warsaw railway crosses it, some 25 miles west-southwest of Lublin and some 75 miles southeast of Warsaw. Also reported in front line dispatches are the capture of the big rail town of Lukov, south of Siedlce on the Brest-Litovsk-Warsaw line. Last night's Soviet communique makes no mention of either Siedlce or Jarmolov which the Germans announced they had evacuated yesterday. There is no doubt, however, that Russian forces are driving on Warsaw at an unprecedented speed and the Reuters Moscow reporter estimates that they will be within sight of Poland's capital city inside another 48 hours if the present rate of advance continues. He adds that the largest motorized force yet seen on the Russian front is today driving toward Warsaw across the flat Polish farmlands.

A number of German strongpoints were surrounded or virtually cut off yesterday. In Latvia Russian troops have swung around Dvinsk and cut the railway to Riga behind it. The closest troops are now seven miles from the city on the north and all but one of its escape routes have been severed. At Bialystok, which is also closely invested, Soviet soldiers are fighting in the outskirts. A large German force at Brest-Litovsk is now reported to cut off and eliminated from the battle for Warsaw. Russian forces are now far behind the city and all its rail lines have been severed. In the south the city of Lvov has been completely surrounded and the Russians are engaged in the process of "liquidating" its garrison. Even Stanislavov is now threatened with Russian troops four miles from the city on the north and closing in on three sides.

NEW ALLIED ATTACKS IN NORMANDY MEET STRONGEST RESISTANCE YET: SHAEF, July 26--New attacks were launched on both the British and American fronts yesterday, the American push being preceded by an all-out aerial bombardment. Late last night Don Campbell, Reuters correspondent, wrote that "latest reports from all sectors of the British, Canadian, and American fronts speak of German resistance of unprecedented ferocity and at a pitch which can hardly be surpassed. 'It is as if Hitler at this moment of crisis had personally commanded every fighting man to make a supreme effort,' said one officer." At the outset of the British attack it was announced that its objectives were limited. No large tank battles have taken place as yet. The American attack was opened at 10 a.m. yesterday when the first wave of a force of 1,000 heavy bombers, escorted by almost 700 fighters, began the process of what was described at SHAEF as "saturation bombing". This largest force of heavy bombers yet employed on a single mission was followed up by approximately 500 medium and light bombers and 300 fighter bombers. The area of the American attack was east of Saint Le while the British-Canadian push was south of Caen. In yesterday's heavy fighting Allied forces advanced from 1000 yards to one mile south of Caen. Details of the American gains are not yet available.

FURTHER GAINS ON GUAM AND TINIAN: Washington, July 26--American ground and aerial forces which landed north and south of Apra Harbor on Guam have established contact says today's communique from Admiral Nimitz. It was also announced that the Marines on Tinian Island have advanced more than 1,000 yards inland on the northern end of Tinian Island.

TEN MILES FROM FLORENCE: Allied Headquarters, July 26--Today's communique reports that leading Allied elements advancing northward on the Rome-Florence road are 10 miles south of the city. German resistance south of the Arno has been quelled from the sea to a point 15 miles west of Florence. On the Adriatic coast Polish troops are threatening the town of Ostra. Local gains have been made east of the Rozzano-Bibbiano road.

RUSSIANS ADVANCE, CUT DVINSK-RIGA RAILWAY

MOSCOW, July 25 — The Red Army, striking at a retreating enemy all along the Eastern Front, cut the Dvinsk-Riga railway in Lithuania, it was announced in tonight's Soviet communique.

To the southwest, the largest motorized force ever assembled by the Red Army is speeding towards Warsaw with General Chuikov's troops from Stalingrad heading the procession.

The Red Army is moving so quickly that the Germans are unable in most cases to lay mines or blow up bridges to hinder the Soviet advance. Robert Magidoff, EXCHANGE TELEGRAPH correspondent, said in a dispatch:

"The enemy is so disorganized, and retreating with such speed toward Warsaw, that Soviet tanks and cavalry are having a hard time keeping up with them. However, they are doing it with deadly efficiency, preventing Germans from blowing up bridges and mining roads. They are routing forces left behind for rear guard actions so quickly, enemy forces are not allowed to break away. Soviet infantry

Lublin, a city of 120,000 people in peacetime, is in central Poland. It was taken by tank detachments, cavalry, and infantry of Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army. The town formed a connecting link between the German armies east of the Wisla and San rivers.

In the north, the Russian drive on Pskov has continued, and, further south, the Red Army grip on Dvinsk has been tightened, threatening to trap the German garrison in a pocket.

Drive on Bialystok

General Zakharov's troops of the 2nd White Russian Army have smashed their way further towards Bialystok. Further south, Cracow, the big Polish city, is coming into the battle picture. The Russians announced that due east of Cracow they have reached the River San on a 50-mile front and crossed it in several places. The Germans said that west of the river, the Russians have captured Yaroslav, on the main railway line to Cracow. This means that the fortress town of Przemysl has been outflanked from the north. The only escape route for the Germans in Lvov is now south through Stanislavov, in the Carpathian foothills. But even this route is threatened by a new Soviet advance which has taken the Red Army across the upper Dniester, southwest of Tarnopol, where they have captured the town of Halach, 14 miles from Stanislavov.

In all, the Russians captured 1,500 places yesterday, bringing their total in the last three days to nearly 4,000. On Sunday, 172 German tanks were destroyed.

Reports from Poland stated that the 27th Polish Infantry Division is engaging the German forces northwest of Lublin.

Since the start of the Soviet summer offensive a month ago, up to July 23, German casualties on the four Axis fronts total more than 500,000 men. This was officially announced in Moscow last night. Of these, more than 158,000 surrendered, including 22 Nazi generals. The material captured or destroyed included 600 planes, 2,700 tanks and self-propelled guns, 3,700 guns, 5,600 mortars, 23,000 machine guns, and 57,000 motor vehicles.

Of the encircled German forces at Brody, 17,000 Germans surrendered, including another German general.

MOSCOW, July 25 — The Red Army, striking at a retreating enemy all along the Eastern Front, cut the Dvinsk-Riga railway in Lithuania, it was announced in tonight's Soviet communique.

To the southwest, the largest motorized force ever assembled by the Red Army is speeding towards Warsaw with General Chuikov's troops from Stalingrad heading the procession.

However, they are doing it with deadly efficiency, preventing Germans from blowing up bridges and mining roads. They are routing forces left behind for rear guard actions so quickly, enemy forces are not allowed to break away. Soviet infantry is achieving miracles of mobility, and is arriving just in time to overtake the enemy, allowing tanks and cavalry to push on. »

Eddy Gilmore, United Press correspondent, said that « undoubtedly the Red Army is less than 50 miles from Warsaw. » He said that pilots report scenes of panic around the Warsaw region, with roads choked with transport. Gilmore stated:

« The Red Army presented a front fully 50 miles wide in the main drive upon Warsaw, and there are indications that other groups from northeast of the Bug and the southeast sector north of captured Lublin are about to join up for a major assault on the Polish capital. »

The correspondent said that Red Army forces are 300 miles from Berlin, adding, « which is not as far as its sounds. »

Northeast of Bialystok, Russians moved to within 26 miles of the East Prussian southern border. This new drive northwestward from south of the border threatened to outflank thousands of Germans fighting west of Nieman between Kaunas and Grodno.

A Reuter correspondent said the capture of Lublin, last German stronghold before Warsaw, while Brest-Litovsk and Lvov were by-passed, was the German Army's most disastrous day since the Russian offensive began a month ago.

General Zakharov's troops of the 2nd White Russian Army have smashed their way further towards Bialystok. Further south, Cracow, the big Polish city, is coming into the battle picture. The Russians announced that due east of Cracow they have reached the River San on a 50-mile front and crossed it in several places. FINNISH SHIPS FLEE TO SWEDISH PORTS

STOCKHOLM, July 25 — Finnish ship owners have begun to send their vessels to Swedish ports to prevent their falling into the hands of the Germans, the BBC reported today.

The broadcast said that 11 Finnish ships are now at anchor in Swedish ports. The BBC said this was a threat to the Germans, since they need all the shipping they can get to supply their northern army group now practically cut off in the Baltic republics. (BBC)

BRITISH ADVANCE SOUTH FROM CAEN

SHAEF, July 25 — Troops of the British 2nd Army captured the villages of St. Martin de Fontenay and Verrieres in a renewal of the offensive at both ends of the Normandy battle front. Supported by 3,000 bombers and fighters overhead, American 1st Army troops continued their major battle in the western sector, but the exact location of the American attack was not disclosed.

In the eastern sector, British and Canadian troops were still advancing last night along the Caen-Falaise ridge in heavy fighting, a spokesman here stated, and strenuous fighting was also reported in the streets of May-sur-Orne. An Associated Press dispatch spoke of a battle at close quarters for the town of Tilly la Campagne.

Falaise (birthplace of William the Conqueror) is a vital road and rail junction 21 miles southeast of Caen, and the focal point for six main highways and numerous secondary roads. The Granville-Dreux-Paris and the Cherbourg-Caen-Le Mans railway lines pass through it.

Some of the American units engaged in the fighting around St. Lô last week have been named. They were the 5th Infantry Division, formerly the Maryland National Guard, the 1st Infantry Division, and the 34th Infantry Division, formerly the Nebraska Infantry Division.

A Reuter correspondent with the British and Canadians stated that Canadian infantrymen struck up the slopes of "Dead-Eye Dick's Ridge" in the pitch blackness of the early morning today, and by 0730 had advanced about a mile, reaching May-sur-Orne, Verics, and Tilly la Campagne.

Montgomery's troops apparently opened their attack from the region of Bourgebus, five miles southeast of Caen. The Falaise road, on either side of which they are advancing, is a good paved highway from 18 to 24 feet wide.

The road follows a crest of the ridge, and runs through typical French farm country. A narrow-gauge railway closely follows the road.

A 2nd Army spokesman said today that there is no doubt that this morning German resistance has been extremely strong. Very heavy fighting is expected.

Before ground forces swept forward this morning, medium bombers struck twice at German concentrations in La Hogue Wood, only 2,000 yards in front of British positions southeast of Caen. They attacked at dusk last night and again this morning, and the army signalled that the bombing was very effective.

On the American sector, General Bradley's troops launched a coordinated attack just before noon today, following a very heavy air bombardment by heavy, medium, and light bombers. First reports stated that the Americans were moving ahead against very heavy German resistance.

Rail bridges and other communication facilities north of the River Loire and west of Tours were successfully attacked yesterday by our medium and light bombers.

Ammunition and fuel dumps southeast of Caen, and rail targets in the Arras and Le Mans areas, were attacked by low-flying fighter-bombers.

An enemy cargo ship was damaged by coastal aircraft

STUTTGART, BERLIN BOMBED

LONDON, July 25 — Heavy bombers of RAF Bomber Command were out in great strength last night. Their main target was the city of Stuttgart, seat of the vitally important plants of the Bosch works and the huge Daimler Benz factories where Diesel engines are turned out.

At the same time, Mosquitoes dropped two-ton bombs on Berlin, and another force bombed oil storage tanks at Donges, near Saint Nazaire, for the second night in succession. Flying-bomb installations in northern France were also attacked.

The Allied air offensive is continuing today, as large forces of aircraft crossed the Straits of Dover toward Dunkirk and Calais. Heavy explosions were heard from the other side of the channel.

The Germans sent more flying bombs over southern England, including the London area. Damage and casualties were reported. The Saint Thomas Hospital is among the buildings hit by flying bombs. There were no casualties, as the bomb hit an empty wing damaged by an earlier bomb.

Fighters of the USAAF which carried out a sweep into southwestern Germany yesterday reported the destruction of 18 Nazi planes on the ground in concentrated attacks. Returning pilots reported that three of a small force of enemy fighters were shot down.

On the return trip, the American fighters shot up three locomotives, an airfield control tower, a number of railroad cars, gun emplacements, and oil storage tanks.

30,000 Heavy Incendiaries

Over 30,000 heavy incendiaries were dropped on Stuttgart in 15 minutes — 2,000 every minute — during last night's attack by the RAF heavy bombers, it was disclosed today. A great load of high explosives was also dropped.

The best-trained and most formidable arm of the Luftwaffe was expected to offer opposition along the 300-mile route to Stuttgart. Bomber Command therefore carried out a feint attack well inside Germany. Mosquitoes were sent to Berlin, where in a five-minute attack they dropped many 4,000-pound blockbusters with great effect, and strong forces of heavy bombers went to France.

The result was that German fighters in any strength, never succeeded in intercepting the bombers which went to Stuttgart, and many crews reported that they had not seen a single German aircraft during the night.

Rocket Sites Hit

RAF Lancasters dropped many 12,000-pound bombs on a large concrete structure in the Pas de Calais this morning. The structure appeared to be connected with the Germans' threatened longrange rocket assaults on England, the Air Ministry stated tonight.

Frankfurt, Aachen hit

In addition to their attack on Stuttgart, RAF Bomber Command planes last night raided Frankfurt and Aachen, said a British Air Ministry communique today. Twenty-three of the RAF planes did not return.

RAF Tactical Air Force have taken over Carpiquet airfield, one of the airfields won with much hard fighting by the Canadians. Men of the RAF Regiment have already set up their gun positions. Craters are being filled in, and the airfield is rapidly being cleared of mines, stated Allied Expeditionary Air Force headquarters. Near each gunsite there is a large underground workshop.

An enemy cargo ship was damaged by coastal aircraft last evening off the Isle of Guernsey.

The Minister for War, Sir James Grigg, told the House of Commons today that possibly about 20,000 Germans have been killed by Allied armies in Normandy. Up to July 16, the Allies had captured 57,750 prisoners. Just under 5,000 of these were nationals of countries invaded by Germany since 1938.

3,000-Plane Mission

Three thousand planes, including the largest force of heavy bombers ever employed on a single mission, attacked the enemy in Normandy today in support of the American 1st Army.

Fifteen hundred American heavy bombers, 500 escorting fighters, 350 medium and light bombers, and 500 fighter-bombers attacked the enemy between 1000 and 1200 hours today in an effort to anesthetize enemy opposition. A great number of fragmentation bombs were included in the explosives rained on the Germans.

The exact location of the American attack has not yet been disclosed, but it was stated here tonight that the Germans are resisting « very, very strongly » the British and Canadian push in the east. Two SS Panzer divisions are opposing the 2nd Army's advance, and armor is being employed by both sides. (BBC - Reuter)

REBUILDING CHERBOURG HARBOR

CHERBOURG, July 25 — Rebuilding of the two key towns of Cherbourg and Caen is going ahead rapidly, reported a United Press correspondent.

At the port of Cherbourg, Admiral Harold Stark, chief of the U. S. Naval forces in European waters, expressed satisfaction at the progress made by the army and navy in rebuilding the port.

The Admiral said that the major purpose of his trip, his second to Normandy, was to get a picture of what is being done and what still has to be done.

« The army is doing a perfectly splendid job, and so is the navy, » said Admiral Stark.

The important communications center of Caen is being rebuilt with French state funds which were hidden away after the Germans invaded France four years ago.

As the war moved away from the city of Caen, French state funds that had been hidden from the Germans and from the Vichy Government for four years, began to emerge just in time for the Herculean task of restoring Caen as a place where 65,000 people can live.

FIRST HANGAR IN NORMANDY COMPLETED

CHERBOURG, July 25 — The first airplane hangar to be erected in Normandy is in the process of being completed — less than seven weeks after D-day.

The hangar will be used as a repair shed for fighter planes.

Fifty men working 4,500 hours will complete the job in nine days, it was announced at 9th Air Force headquarters. (Reuter)

FIRST RAILWAY LINE OPENED IN NORMANDY

CHERBOURG, July 25 — The first railway line in liberated France, put back into shape by a group of United States soldiers, is now carrying four passenger trains daily over a route which only a few days ago was the scene of bitter fighting.

Some French equipment was used in rebuilding the line, including locomotives which escaped being wrecked by the retreating Germans. The line is of standard gauge, so that rolling stock shipped across the Channel can go directly into service.

No charge is made for travelling, and travel permits are issued to those of the civilian population who wish to use it.

The New York TIMES correspondent reported that plans are being made in Washington for rebuilding and re-equipping French railways and industries on a huge scale, to begin almost immediately for military purposes, and to continue on a different basis after the armistice. (OWI)

AMERICANS REPEL COUNTER-ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 25 — American troops of 5th Army yesterday repelled two enemy counter-attacks «of substantial strength,» and dispersed a third by heavy artillery fire, as German forces strove unsuccessfully to turn the right flank of the 5th Army's advance to the Arno.

With the failure of the enemy attacks in the Elsa River Valley, American forces expanded eastward their hold on the southern banks of the Arno to within 13 miles of Florence, now threatened directly by infantry and armoured forces only 10 miles to the south on the road from Poggibonsi. Still other forces of the 8th Army, approaching Tuscany's chief city from the southeast, neared Figline, 14 miles from Florence on the main Arezzo-Florence road, through the Arno Valley.

The enemy is waging a stubborn defense through the Chianti Hills south of Florence, relying upon a «step-by-step» withdrawal, less than 2,000 yards at any time, to slow the Allied advance upon the famous city, and the formidable but unfinished Goth Line 30 miles further north. The new enemy tactic, which has replaced their former method of precipitate retreat following the piercing of a line of strongpoints, and then stabilizing their defense on a new line further back, means that an almost continuous battle must be waged to force them back.

Yet Allied forces including South African troops and British guardsmen of the 8th Army have thrust their way slowly forward through the hills and along the valleys of the Arno's tributary streams across a 25-mile-wide front stretching between the Arno and the Elsa River valleys. Leading elements have passed Strada on Highway 2 to ap[illegible] 10 miles of Florence. The South African German 278th Division had lost from 3,000 to 4,000 men in killed, wounded, and missing, as a result of their fruitless defense of Ancona.

Although the communique declared that American troops of the 5th Army had cleared «all» enemy resistance on the south bank of the Arno River from the sea to within 18 miles of Florence, mention in more detailed reports of «increased enemy activity» in the loop of the Arno south of Colognole, left some doubt as to whether the enemy forces holding this solitary strip of land had been driven across the river. Patrols which crossed the Arno reported heavy enemy defenses along the northern banks, and German heavy guns laid down concentrated fire on Allied units both in the southern portion of Pisa and elsewhere along the southern banks.

All bridges across the Arno at Pisa have been thoroughly demolished, it was reported, and all the approaches into the city have been heavily mined.

Goering Works Bombed

Up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today bombed the recently-constructed Herman Goering tank works at Linz, Austria and the Danube near the Bavarian border.

Although the enemy tried to protect the target by a heavy smoke screen, some of the bombers aimed their high explosives visually and they observed hits on the targets. The other planes of the formation used navigational aid to strike at the great factory, which was designed to produce over 1,000,000 tons of iron and steel a year and to manufacture tanks and armored cars.

A considerable number of enemy aircraft were encountered over the target, and some were shot down. The big factory has not been bombed at any previous time during this year.

Airfield Hit Again

Italy-based heavy bombers returned to southern France last night to subject the Valence la Tresorerie landing grounds, near Marseilles, to their second pounding within 12 hours.

As RAF Halifaxes and Wellingtons cratered the fields and started at least three fires in hangars, crewmen reported an unexplained, violent blast south of the target area. The bombers sighted a few enemy fighters, but were not engaged by them.

As a result of yesterday's attack on the Valence fields, and Les Chanoines field, 10 miles southeast of Arles-sur-Rhone, gasoline and oil stores were fired, runways and taxiing strips torn up, and planes in dispersal areas set afire. These fields are part of the complex of fighter and bomber bases which the Germans have built to defend the southern coasts of France, and which have been used also to supply interceptor and bombing planes for the German forces battling in Normandy.

Although original reports made no mention of fighter opposition, it was announced today that the enemy had sent up interceptor planes to protect the Valence airfields, and that five of these fighters had been destroyed.

Tactical Air Force planes yesterday attacked rail lines in the Milan, Piacenza, Cremona, and Mantua areas, and hit at stores and shipping at Ravenna. Medium bombers flown by French crews struck the Imperia rail bridge on the route into southern France. Fighters carried out punishing sweeps over Yugoslavia, hitting fuel dumps, bridges, and other objectives.

line, including locomotives which escaped being wrecked by the retreating Germans. The line is of standard gauge, so that rolling stock shipped across the Channel can go directly into service.

No charge is made for travelling, and travel permits are issued to those of the civilian population who wish to use it.

The New York TIMES correspondent reported that plans are being made in Washington for rebuilding and re-equipping French railways and industries on a huge scale, to begin almost immediately for military purposes, and to continue on a different basis after the armistice. (GWI)

AMERICANS REPEL COUNTER-ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 25 — American troops of 5th Army yesterday repelled two enemy counter-attacks «of substantial strength,» and dispersed a third by heavy artillery fire, as German forces strove unsuccessfully to turn the right flank of the 5th Army's advance to the Arno.

With the failure of the enemy attacks in the Elsa River Valley, American forces expanded eastward their hold on the southern banks of the Arno to within 18 miles of Florence, now threatened directly by infantry and armoured forces only 10 miles to the south on the road from Poggibonsi. Still other forces of the 8th Army, approaching Tuscany's chief city from the southeast, neared Figline, 14 miles from Florence on the main Arezzo-Florence road, through the Arno Valley.

The enemy is waging a stubborn defense through the Chianti Hills south of Florence, relying upon a «step-by-step» withdrawal, less than 2,000 yards at any time, to slow the Allied advance upon the famous city, and the formidable but unfinished Goth Line 30 miles further north. Leading elements have passed Strada on Highway 2 to approach to within 10 miles of Florence. The South African forces have seized Monte Fili, 13 miles south of Florence, and have obtained a foothold on Monte Domini, in the valley of the Greve, a tributary of the Arno. The town of Greve itself, on the western banks of the river, is reported clear of the enemy by patrols which entered the town.

In the Arno Valley southeast of Florence, 8th Army forces occupied Meleto, west of the river, and 17 miles from the historic city. Although 2 1/2 miles west of Highway 69, which follows the Arno River's course to Florence, Meleto offers an alternate cross-country approach to Figline Val d'Arno, four miles farther north, and strongly defended by the enemy. East of the Arno, in the Pratomagno Mountains, which force the river to make a long detour to the south to near Arezzo, British forces were carrying out patrols along the edges of their expanding bridgehead over the river.

In the upper Tiber Valley, 8th Army tanks and infantry approached to within two miles of the road junction town of San Sepolcro, nine miles north of Città di Castello.

On the Adriatic front, the enemy achieved a degree of stabilization yesterday, with the strongpoint of Ostra, south of the Misa River, being stubbornly defended against Polish assaults. With the strengthening of the enemy's lines, the Germans have brought up long-range guns to shell the port of Ancona, in an effort to harass Allied repair crews readying this harbour for use. It was announced today that the

Fighter Group Cited

The 57th Fighter Group, pioneer single-engined AAF fighter unit in the Mediterranean area, has received two Presidential citations, and is about to receive a third, for action in the North African and Italian campaigns.

The Group now has the privilege of flying blue silk streamers, marked «Cap Bon» and «El Alamein-Libya-Tunisia-Sicily,» on its standard. The third citation, awarded for the group's participation in the «Operation Strangle» which closed off German supply routes before the launching of the present offensive in Italy, has not yet arrived.

The group received its two standards today, the second anniversary of its action overseas, in which it has supported the British 8th Army and other Allied forces.

Alexander on Nazi Defeat

General Sir Harold Alexander, commander of the Allied Armies in Italy, said yesterday that Germany «will be beaten perhaps sooner than we anticipated,» in a speech accepting the order of Virtuti Militari from General Kasimierz Sosnkowski, Polish Commander-in-Chief.

In the address, delivered at Ancona, General Alexander praised the troops of the Polish Corps for their victories at Cassino and Ancona, and said that by their valor they had «opened the road to Rome» for the Allies in their attacks at the beginning of the present offensive in Italy. (PRO)

TITO'S MEN STRADDLE IMPORTANT ROUTE

LONDON, July 25 — Marshal Tito's forces in Yugoslavia have a strong foothold on the route from Italy into southern Germany, General Vladimir Velebit, head of the Yugoslav military mission, said today. The route runs through the northern plains of Italy and northern Yugoslavia to Vienna, skirting the Alps.

Velebit said that Tito's forces are «disposing» of about 1,000 of the enemy daily in killed, wounded, or captured. The Allied advance in Italy, he said, tends to make German positions in Greece, Albania, and Yugoslavia increasingly precarious, and expressed the opinion that the Army of Liberation can drive the enemy out of Yugoslavia. SEVEN-DAY BATTLE IN YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, July 25 — An announcement from the operational headquarters of the Croat and Slovenia units of the Yugoslav Army of Liberation said that more than 1,000 Germans were killed or wounded in Western Croatia during a seven-day battle between strong enemy forces and partisans of the liberated area of Zumbpak and Bijela-krajna.

Three battalions of a German Alpine regiment, as well as a Gestapo and two artillery units, took part in this fighting. Altogether, the enemy forces consisted of 8,000 men excellently equipped.

JAPANESE ON GUAM SURROUNDED

PEARL HARBOR, July 25 — Enemy forces on Guam Island have been completely cut off in the Orote Peninsula, today's communique from Admiral Nimitz headquarters reported. The American forces have made gains despite stiff oppositon. They have been able to advance because they have been given full support by the Air Force and the Navy.

The communique also told of attacks on adjacent Rota Island, on Ponape in the Carolines, and on Shumushu, in the Kuriles, northeast of Japan.

American forces which landed on Tinian, which lies between Rota and Guam, have secured good beachheads on the northwestern coast and have advanced about a mile.

General MacArthur's communique today said that fierce fighting has again broken out in British New Guinea, where the trapped Japanese 18th Army has made more attempts to break through the American lines east of Aitape. They attacked three times, first with a combined frontal and outflanking assault, and then again at night.

As the waves of Japanese came over, said the BBC today, they were mowed down by American fire. Isolated groups which managed to get through are being mopped up.

The Japanese are cornered between the Americans and the Australians and, with their supply lines bombed from the air and their barges sunk at sea, they must either break out or starve. Their casualties already run into thousands, and they are dissipating their strength in sporadic attacks. (OWI)

NAZIS LOSE 730,000 MEN SINCE MAY

LONDON, July 25 — The enemy has lost more than 730,000 men killed, wounded, and captured on three fronts in Russia, Italy and France from May 11 to July 23, a terrific drain on German and satellite manpower.

The bulk of these losses took place on the Eastern front where, along an entire front from the Baltic to the Carpathians, the Germans are in mass flight. In detail, since May 11 on the Italian front, the Germans have lost approximately 40,000 men in prisoners alone. Since June 6 on the Normandy front, enemy casualties are estimated at 156,000, and in the month from June 23 to July 23, the Russians have killed or captured 539,890 Germans.

German manpower and material are being exhausted on both the Russian and Normandy fronts, while the activities of patriots in occupied territory shows the enemy to be waging a hopeless battle against continuously growing odds. (OWI)

KING GEORGE VISITS NAPLES

NAPLES, July 25 — King George VI yesterday visited Naples, and, after lunching with General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Commander-in-Chief of the Mediterranean, proceeded by air to General Sir Harold Alexander's camp, where he spent the night.

The King began the day with a motor launch tour of ships and installations in Naples harbor, accompanied by Admiral Sir John Cunningham. He boarded the American flagship and visited the crews' quarters. Allied naval units were dressed for the occasion. Passing the only Italian warship in the harbor, the King returned the salute of its officers.

Afterwards, the King flew north over recent battlefields and was received on an airfield by General Sir Harold Alexander. He spent the night in the caravan normally used by General Alexander. (Reuter)

GOERING HEADS REICH DEFENSE COUNCIL

WASHINGTON, July 25 — Hitler has appointed Goering Chairman of the Council for the Defense of the Reich, and issued a decree ordering total mobilization of Germany and occupied territories.

The text of the announcement issued from Hitler's headquarters is as follows:

«Today, July 26, the Fuehrer issued a decree valid for the whole of the greater German Reich and annexed and occupied territory about mobilization of war. Its essential points are as follows:

«The war situation enforces mobilization of each ounce of strength for the Wehrmacht and armament industry. I therefore order that Chairman of the Ministerial Council for Defense, Reichmarshal Hermann Goering, is to adapt in every respect the whole of public life to the demands of total warfare; to carry out this task, he will suggest to me a "Reich Trustee for Total Mobilization".

He will have to examine the whole state of administration, including Reich railways, Reich postal services, and all public establishments, institutions and undertakings, with the purpose of freeing a maximum of manpower. To do this, men and materials must be used rationally and to the last. Tasks of lesser importance for the war must be stopped or reduced, organization and procedure simplified. GOEBBELS EXPECTED TO BROADCAST

LONDON, July 25 — Dr. Goebbels, the newly-appointed trustee for total war mobilization, will probably speak over the radio tomorrow to explain to the German people the new task with which he has been entrusted by Hitler, according to the editor of the German Overseas News Agency, Schroeder.

« An extraordinary amount of power has been placed in the hands of Dr. Goebbels, » Schroeder said, « and one would not go far wrong in expecting that he will act with radical methods very quickly and very thoroughly.

« This will be done not only in Germany, but also in occupied territories, and will extend to every sphere of life. » (Reuter)

NO OFFICIAL STATEMENT ON REVOLT

LONDON, July 25 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today that he was not yet in a position to make a considered statement about the « recent dramatic developments in Germany. » The information at the Government's disposal was not yet sufficient to enable it to estimate fully the extent of the trouble, or draw inferences of its likely development.

Mr. Eden said: « The German Government have, not unnaturally, been at great pains to prevent information leaving the country. They have great experience and skill in the machinery of repression and secrecy, and we are, therefore, for the present, dependent on our assessment of various and often contradictory public statements made during the last few days by the German leaders.

« I would only add that, while we may justly draw encouragement from recent news, it should spur us to further activity to ensure the Germans' final defeat in the field at the earliest possible date. » (Reuter)

WIDESPREAD EXECUTIONS IN GERMANY

GENEVA, July 25 — A remarkable letter from Germany published in the Swiss Paper JOURNAL DE GENEVE declared « without fear of contradiction » that hundreds of German officers of all ranks have been executed during the past few weeks. « When the walls of Vienna, Munich, Magdeburg, and Berlin are able to talk, » the letter stated, « the entire Wehrmacht will hide its face in shame.

« In the Graues Haus Prison in Vienna, executions of military personages take place twice weekly in two cells set aside for this purpose. German official statements are clear on this point: in the interior, as well as at the front, there have been mass executions of officers during the past few days.

« On the surface, the Nazi Party appears to have been successful, but it is only an ephemeral victory because one thing is certain — the home front has been seriously shaken, and at any moment the military front may be similarly affected.

RUHR PEACE DEMONSTRATIONS REPORTED

LONDON, July 25 — A number of peace demonstrations have been staged in the bombed areas of the Ruhr and in southern Germany, said the BBC today quoting Stockholm messages.

The Swedish paper MORGONTIDNINGEN was quoted by the BBC as saying « Germany is approaching a state of chaos. Her soldiers are tired, and the officers no longer believe in victory. »

GERMAN GENERALS APPEAL FROM RUSSIA

LONDON, July 25 — Sixteen German generals who are captives in Russia have signed an appeal to the German officers to overthrow Hitler, said the BBC today. The generals declared that their long service in the German Army and their experience of two world wars has brought them to the conclusion that the present struggle is hopeless.

They appeal to the German armed forces to do three things:

1. To renounce Hitler and his henchmen;

2. To bring an immediate end to this senseless bloodshed;

3. To carry this appeal to all German soldiers.

The appeal is being broadcast from Moscow. Russian planes are dropping thousands of copies of the appeal on German front-line positions and deep in the enemy rear. (BBC)

In 1936, von Kluge was promoted to General of the Artillery. He commanded the German 4th Army with distinction in the Polish and French campaigns, and was made a Field Marshal in July, 1940. In the winter of 1941/42, when von Bock was retired after his failure to take Moscow, von Kluge took over the command of the whole central sector of the Eastern Front. He kept the sector fairly stable for two years, and for his services was awarded the Swords to the Oak Leaves to the Knight's Cross — the second highest German decoration — at the end of 1943.

In March, 1944, it became known that von Kluge was no longer in command of the central sector, though it was not very long after his disappearance that the Russians breached the system of fortifications between Vitebsk and Bobruisk built up during his command.

Little is known about von Kluge's political views, and little to distinguish his career from that of his fellow Prussian officers except, perhaps, for one very important fact: von Kluge features on the Russian list of war criminals for atrocities committed under his command against the civilian population of Orel.

Guderian

Colonel General Heinz Guderian, Hitler's new Chief of Staff of the German Army, who on July 23 broadcast an appeal to German officers and men to maintain their loyalty to the Fuehrer and fight on, is a German general who himself fell into severe disfavour three years ago.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Guderian, 56 years old, served as staff officer during the last war, and continued in this capacity in the Reichswehr from 1919 onwards. In 1930 he was placed in charge of the 3rd Motorised Unit, one of the main experimental units used in the development of the future panzer arm of the German Army.

In 1931 he was made chief of staff to General Lutz, Inspector General of Motorised Troops. Lutz was one of the victims of Hitler's first purge of the generals in 1938, and Guderian, in the same year, was made a full general and chief of all armored and motorised troops.

In the Polish campaign, Guderian commanded the panzer group which contributed largely to the collapse of the Polish Army by cutting through the corridor and then thrusting to Brest-Litovsk. Still more important was the part he played in the West. His armored troops made the breakthrough at Sedan and the dash to Abbeville.

In the Russian campaign of the summer of 1941, Guderian, now a Colonel General, occupied Brest-Litovsk for the second time. His armored forces featured prominently in the German « victories of encirclement » at Bialystok and Minsk, and in Marshal von Bock's would-be final assault on Moscow. It was here, at Kaluga in November, 1941, that the famous panzer general was defeated for the first time, and the break- up of the German armies before Moscow began.

The result of this reverse was typical. Guderian, up to then constantly featured in the Nazi press, radio and newsreels, suddenly disappeared from view. Many rumours circulated — that he had been killed, retired, degraded, etc. It was only in February, 1943, that it was announced that Guderian had been made Inspector General of the armored forces under Hitler's immediate orders. This was at the time of the German disaster at Stalingrad, where the Germans, for the first time, admitted a great increase in Russian armored strength.

Allied comment on the appointment was, first, that it showed that Hitler had been forced to recall one of the expert generals he had unceremoniously sacked in 1941, and, secondly, that it showed Guderian's willingness to work within Hitler's immediate entourage. It also suggested that Guderian was not likely to take up a field command again.

On July 21, after the bomb incident, the appointment of Guderian as Chief of the Staff of the Army in place of General Zeitzler was announced. After an interval of two days, Guderian followed Goering, who spoke for the Luftwaffe, and Admiral Doenitz, who spoke for the German Navy, in assuring Hitler, in the name of the German Army, of its loyalty.

While Guderian was undoubtedly a brilliant exponent of armored warfare and a National Socialist hero during the first two years of the war, the fact that he has not held a field command during the German Army's 30 months of adversity must speak against him at the present juncture.

NAZIS SAY LESS THAN DOZEN LIQUIDATED

LONDON, July 25 — « Less than a dozen conspirators were liquidated by loyal officers and soldiers of the Army in the same rooms where the treacherous plot had been hatched, » said General Dittmar in his weekly broadcast over the German radio today, speaking of the attempt on Hitler's life.

« This was beyond any doubt an important affair, if only because the criminals held key positions in the Reserve Army. Now we shall have to cleanse our war machine of the sand that is in it before it can work again at full speed, » he said, adding that the Russian advance will necessitate « many extraordinary measures » to stabilize the Eastern Front.

Government and People to the United Nations against Germany during the remainder of the war. »

The Italian Premier then spoke of Italy's determination to prosecute the war against Germany with every means at her disposal, and said it was because of the promise contained in the armistice conditions that the Italian people had been fighting with the United Nations as co-belligerants for almost a year. He pointed out that following its liberation from Fascist tyranny, and the Italian request in the light of the Quebec promise, Italy was recognized as co-belligerant as far back as last October.

« I believe I shall not be making a useless appeal to the spirit of comprehension of the United Nations, » he said. « I have sure proofs, and have observed certain encouraging symptoms, which lead me to believe that Italy can participate in ever-increasing measure in the liberation of her territory, and the vast struggle to free the world of exasperated Nationalism and agressive militarism. »

Realistic Foreign Policy

Bonomi said that for this to be possible, Italy's foreign policy should be realistic, clear and precise, and should be based on Italy's old traditional foreign policy: friendship with the Western Democracies.

« We must turn toward those who were our Allies of the last war: Great Britain, France, Russia, and America. It is necessary, as Mr. Churchill recently said, that the British and Italian peoples revive their historic friendship. It is necessary for the people to re-echo — as it has already re-echoed — the noble words so recently spoken by General de Gaulle in Rome. It is necessary that democratic Italy expresses its intimate solidarity with Soviet Russia and America. »

French Armistice Nullified

In speaking particularly of France, Bonomi renounced the Fascist territorial claims against France. « Not only have we renounced these so-called revindications, but we have also declared null and void the armistice with France. »

He finished his address with an appeal to the United Nations for material aid in prosecuting the war against Germany, and maintained that Italy, which had passed over to the Allied camp 11 months ago, should be treated in a different manner from those nations which are still fighting side-by-side with the Nazis.

« We would remind our co-belligerants that on September 8 we opened our gates to the victorious Anglo-American advance, and ordered our fleet to leave its anchorages for ports which until then had been considered enemy ports. This gesture alone, carried out with an obedience which has earned for our Navy the eternal gratitude of the Nation, gave to the United Nations complete control of the Mediterranean. »

« I am comforted by the live spirit of comprehension of the men who have in their hands the destinies of the United Nations, and by the power of Public Opinion in those countries, which is certainly very sensitive to every appeal for justice, » Premier Bonomi concluded.

BONOMI SPEAKS ON ARMISTICE TERMS

ROME, July 25 — The armistice conditions accepted by the Italian Government last September 8 are « very hard », Premier Ivanoe Bonomi told a gathering of officials of the Italian Foreign Ministry today.

« Italy had to accept the conditions which were imposed upon her by the victors, » Bonomi said. He revealed that, before accepting office, at the express wish of the Allied authorities, he and his colleagues in the Italian Government read the armistice conditions, the publication of which his Government had agreed to « whenever the Allies so desired. »

« We have accepted the pacts signed by those who represented Italy, and we have declared that we shall respect them in their entirety, » he said.

Bonomi told his audience he had been comforted by a « solemn promise » on the part of the Allies. « In the memorandum drawn up at Quebec and attached to the armistice conditions, we were able to read these words; "The measure in which these conditions will be modified in Italy's favor, will depend upon the extent of the aid given by the Italian be based on Italy's old traditional foreign policy. Alone and with the Western Democracies.

He said the violators will be prosecuted in an AMG Court, and that the city tax will be rigidly enforced and collected. (UNN)

AFRICAN POLICE OFFICER ARRESTED

ROME, July 25 — Major General Rufaele Cartardi, 52 years of age, second-in-command of the now dissolved African-Italian Police Force, has been arrested by the Allies and placed in custody pending final consideration of his case by Italian epuration authorities.

General Cartardi was formerly in the regular Italian Army, but was appointed to the Fascist police force in 1937 as a colonel. He was advanced to the rank of general in 1940. He was awarded the German decoration of Grand Officer of the Eagle in ceremonies presided over by the German ambassador.

Allied police authorities said that the arrested man collaborated with the Germans from September of last year until the liberation of Rome, and that from time to time

AIR RAID PRACTISE IN ROME

ROME, July 25 (NOT for cable or broadcast) — Air raid precaution officials today reminded citizens that an air raid practise will be held Wednesday night at 2230 hours.

The alert consists of six short blasts at 15-second intervals. The all-clear will be one continuous blast lasting two minutes. All vehicles must pull to the curb, stop, and extinguish all lights during the practise.

In the event a real air raid should occur during the practice, the all-clear signal will be given as an indication of cancellation of the practice and will be followed at once by the short blasts of the warning. (UNN)

NO FUSION OF PARTIES

ROME, July 25 — Mario Cevolotto, General Secretary of the Democratic Workers Party, excluded the possibility of a fusion of his party with the Italian Liberal Party, in an interview with a UNN correspondent today.

«Any information as to an understanding between the Premier and the two parties in this respect, is not only unauthorized, but must be considered arbitrary,» he said.

Meanwhile, well informed circles in the Liberal Party stated that the Liberal Party itself would never unite with any other party. They pointed out however that any group would be welcomed into the Liberal Party. (UNN)

The statement asserted that the Soviet armies were engaged in «the liberation of the brotherly Polish people,» and that the Russian aim was to resurrect an independent Poland. The Soviet Government did not claim any Polish territory. Operations there were purely a military necessity.

The text of the statement, made by the Commissar for Foreign Affairs, was as follows:

«The Red Army, successfully forging ahead, has reached the state frontier between the Soviet Union and Poland. Pursuing the retreating German armies Soviet troops, in conjunction with the Polish Army operating on the Soviet-German front, have crossed the river Zapaby (Western Bug), crossed the Soviet-Polish frontier, and have entered on the territory of Poland.

«The foundation has thus been laid for the liberation of the fraternal, long-suffering, Polish people from German occupation.

«The Soviet troops have entered within the boundaries of Poland imbued with but one, single determination: to rout the hostile German troops and assist the Polish people in their task of liberation from the German invaders and the restoration of a strong and independent Poland.

«The Soviet Government declares that it views the military operations conducted by the Red Army on the territory of Poland as operations on the territory of a sovereign, friendly, Allied state. In this connection, the Soviet Government has no intention of establishing on the territory of Poland its own administrative organizations, considering this a concern of the Polish people.

«It has, therefore, decided to conclude with the Polish Committee of National Liberation an agreement regarding relations between the Soviet Command and the Polish administration.

«The Soviet Government declares that it does not pursue the aim of acquiring any part of Polish territory, or alteration of the Polish social order. Military operations of the Red Army on the territory of Poland are dictated solely by military necessity. The Soviet Government expresses its firm confidence that the peoples of the USSR and Poland will jointly pursue to its termination the struggle of liberation from the German invaders, and will lay the firm foundations for friendly Soviet-Polish collaboration.» (Reuter)

ASSEMBLY VOTE CONFIDENCE IN FCNL

ALGIERS, July 25 — The French Provisional Consultative Assembly today voted an Order of the Day saluting the French Forces of the Interior; praising General De Gaulle for his successful conversations in London and Washington; asking for full and strict adherence to democratic and republican principles in France's liberation policy; affirming the necessity of her participation in the elaboration of the armistice terms imposed on Germany; and assuring the National Council of Liberation of its confidence in carrying out this program.

The order followed a four-hour debate, during which General de Gaulle made a long speech, outlining France's situation at the present stage of the war.

He declared that France's liberation must come about by force of arms. The main weight of French arms would logically be applied from the Mediterranean, in accordance with the Allied Supreme Command.

French fighting forces outside the homeland, he said, had already lost 61,000 killed, wounded, and missing. They had taken nearly 100,000 enemy prisoners.

The total amounts of arms and equipment reaching the French Forces of the Interior in each of the months of June and July averaged seven times the deliveries in the most favourable month prior to the Allied landings. The strength of these forces had, in the past three months,

Arms to FFI

The total amounts of arms and equipment reaching the French Forces of the Interior in each of the months of June and July averaged seven times the deliveries in the most favourable month prior to the Allied landings. The strength of these forces had, in the past three months, reached several hundreds of thousands, about a third of whom were now properly armed. Their successes had fully met French expectations and surpassed those «of certain other authorities.» They had upset the entire rail communication system in France since the begining of June, and widely separated regions, including whole departments, were under their control in broad daylight. They had inflicted losses on the Germans of at least 8,000 dead, 1,000 prisoners, and much war material. Seven German divisions were employed against them.

It was time, said the General, that the Allied governments made a formal declaration of principle that «France has never ceased to be a belligerant» on the internal plane. He referred to the National Council of resistance unity after the victory.

Speaking of the structure of the future French State, the General said: «We have chosen democracy and a republic.» He promised elections to the Constituent Assembly as soon as France was freed. On the organization of French municipality, he said: «Though the French Government has decided to take measures against traitors, it does not wish to clear out the great majority of officials. We intend to use the basis of French administration.»

On the subject of international relations, he declared, «We must maintain French sovereignty everywhere. We must also play a primary role in the reconstruction of Europe and the world. My visits to London and Washington were intended to bring to our great Allies the homage of France, as they have done so much for the liberation of our country. I had frank and wide discussions with Churchill and Roosevelt. I have great hopes that France will be able to provide guarantees of security in the Europe of tomorrow.»

Agreement With Allies

General de Gaulle added: «We shall shortly conclude a protocol to the agreement with London and Washington for collaboration between French administration and Allied authorities in the liberated territories. The sovereignty of France will be recognized, and we shall bring all necessary aid to the British and American armies.

«Germany is tottering, but we would be unable to do anything unless the enemy was completely beaten.» (PWB)

WESTERN FRONT (I)

SHAEF, July 25 — Today's communique:

The Allied attack began early this morning astride the Falaise road south of Caen. First reports indicate that some progress has already been made.

Rail bridges and other communications north of the River Loire and west of Tours were successfully attacked yesterday by our medium and light bombers.

Ammunition and fuel dumps southeast of Caen, and rail targets in Arras and Le Mans areas, were attacked by low flying fighter-bombers. An enemy cargo ship was damaged by coastal aircraft last evening off the Isle of Guernsey.

Last night, an oil storage depot at Donges, near Saint Nazaire, was attacked by our heavy bombers, two of which are missing. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 25 — Tonight's communique:

Heavy fighting has followed our attack south of Caen this morning. In spite of stubborn enemy resistance with infantry and armor, the advance has been maintained and fighting is in progress in the area of May-sur-Orne and Tilly la Campagne.

In the western sector, an attack was launched at noon west of St. Lô. A great weight of Allied air power was employed in conjunction with our ground troops.

Very large forces of heavy, medium, light, and fighter-bombers joined in a concentrated attack preceding the ground operations near St. Lô, dropping very great numbers of fragmentation and high explosive bombs. More medium and fighter-bombers attacked targets in the zone beyond Caen. Fighters provided escort, and carried out offensive sweeps.

At least 12 enemy aircraft were shot down in these operations. According to reports so far received, six of our bombers and three fighters are missing.

Coastal aircraft this morning attacked enemy surface craft in the Channel. (Reuter)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 25 — Today's communique:

LAND: Further advances have been made by infantry and armoured units on the Poggibunsi-Florence road, and leading troops are now within 10 miles of the city of Florence. To the north of Arezzo, troops of 8th Army have made important local gains in the high ground to the east of the Arezzo-Bibbiena road. In the Tiber Valley, armoured patrols of 8th Army are now within two miles of Sansepolcro. In the Adriatic sector, troops of 8th Army continue to exert pressure on the German positions covering the road running inland from Senigallia, and are now threatening the town of Ostra.

American troops of 5th Army continue to consolidate their positions on the River Arno, and have cleared all enemy resistance on the south bank of the river from the sea to within 12 miles of Florence.

yesterday by our medium and light bombers.

Ammunition and fuel dumps southeast of Caen, and rail targets in Arras and Le Mans areas, were attacked by low flying fighter-bombers. An enemy cargo ship was damaged by coastal aircraft last evening off the Isle of Guernsey.

Last night, an oil storage depot at Donges, near Saint Nazaire, was attacked by our heavy bombers, two of which are missing. (Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 25 — Tonight's communique:

Heavy fighting has followed our attack south of Caen this morning. In spite of stubborn enemy resistance with infantry and armor, the advance has been maintained and fighting is in progress in the area of May-sur-Orne and Tilly la Campagne.

In the western sector, an attack was launched at noon west of St. Lô. A great weight of Allied air power was employed in conjunction with our ground troops.

Very large forces of heavy, medium, light, and fighter-bombers joined in a concentrated attack preceding the ground operations near St. Lô, dropping very great numbers of fragmentation and high explosive bombs. More medium and fighter-bombers attacked targets in the zone beyond Caen. Fighters provided escort, and carried out offensive sweeps.

At least 12 enemy aircraft were shot down in these operations. According to reports so far received, six of our bombers and three fighters are missing.

Coastal aircraft this morning attacked enemy surface craft in the Channel. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 25 — Tuesday night's Soviet communique:

During July 25, west of Pskov, our troops occupied with fighting over 40 populated localities, including Lokhantsevo, Belokhvostovo, Samokhvalovo, Kachanava, Aksenava, Tsepenishka, Mecrovo, Filata, Svilkovo, and the railway station of Zhiguli.

In the direction of Dvinsk, our troops, repelling counter-attacks of the enemy, continued their offensive, and occupied over 20 populated localities, including Butini, Kalki, Vasilevo, Rubenishki, Terdinani, and the railway stations of Medute and Vavole.

Our troops have cut the Riga-Dvinsk railway.

In the direction of Byelostok, our troops, advancing with fighting, occupied over 60 populated localities, including Zabluda, district center of Byelostok Region; List, Semleni, Novy Dvor, Tarakulie, Tovlyani (within four kilometers northeast of Byelostok), Protasi, and the railway stations of Belmi and Sapostovtsi.

North of Lublin, our troops, developing their successful offensive, occupied with fighting over 200 populated localities, including Lunazi, Shlista, Krinka, Chermerniki, Tarkovitsa, Chirli, Lubashuv, Malenche, and the railway stations of Bezbolya, Notich, and Tsadurki.

West and southwest of Kholm (Cholm), our troops, in the course of their successful offensive, captured the town of Krasnostav, the town of Zamostie, and also occupied with fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Travniki, Yuzefuv, Drupie, Zastave, Udriche, Vitno, Golovna, Shevnya, Rutka, Lipovets, and the railway stations of Ralgovets, Khane, Travniki, Krasnostav, Zvezhenets, and Busovaits.

In the direction of Lvov, our troops, developing their offensive, captured the following district centers of Lvov

Region: the towns of Yanov, Gorodok, Sokolniki; the town of Rutki, district center of Dorogobuzh Region; and also occupied with fighting over 160 other populated localities, including Yarochik Novy, Borovschitsi, Romanov, Bedniki, Davidov, Kozelniki, Zubzhe, Tolschuk, and the railway stations of Davidov, Obroshin, and Gorodok. Our troops have accomplished the encirclement of enemy troops in the area of Lvov, and engaged the enemy in its streets.

The seriously wounded Commander of the 13th Army Corps, Army General Taube, surrendered to our troops, together with his headquarters.

In the direction of Stanislavov, our troops, in the course of their offensive, captured the following district centers of Stanislavov Region: Bolshovtsi, Zhovkiin, Otinya, and also occupied over 80 other populated localities, including Komari, Teleis, Dobrovlyani (within 6 kilometers northeast of Stanislav), Bolshanitsa, Olekhus, Osmyani, Oleshi, Tarnovitsa Koina, Gavrilovka, Parischi, Maidan Gorishni, and the railway stations of Bolshovtsi, Dubovtsi, Zhovkin, Olokhus, and Tovmachi.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 24, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 103 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 36 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of July 24/25, our Air Force bombed enemy echelons and military stores on the railway junctions of Tilsit (East Prussia), Sedlits, and Demblin (Poland). During the raid on Tilsit, where there were numerous military echelons, large fires were started, which were followed by heavy explosions. Especially heavy fires and explosions were observed in the central and northwestern part of the junction. A railway bridge across the River Niemen was destroyed by direct hits of our bombs.

During the raid on Sedlits and Demblin, large fires were started; railway cars, flatcars loaded with various military equipment were set afire. A number of heavy explosions were observed. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT COMMUNIQUE

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 25 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Further particulars on the battle in Val d'Ossola between Patriot groups and strong German formations can now be revealed. The culminating phase of the battle took place on June 11 and June 12, after clandestine preparation and minor encounters. The Patriots put up violent and bitter resistance, inflicting notable losses on the enemy.

The battle was long, with both sides fighting to the last. The Germans were forced to throw in reserves and the Patriot losses were considerable. One of their most intrepid commanders was killed. In addition, four officers and 167 men were killed, while one officer and 147 men are missing.

The enemy losses were greater, but it was impossible to ascertain completely their number because the Germans managed to take away a large number of their killed.

The Patriots had at their disposal only light arms. During the last part of the battle they lacked supplies. Food was so scarce that for seven days the Patriots lived solely on vegetables. Nevertheless, they fought with strenuous resolution and attained important results.

When the battle was over, the Patriot groups, which had at first split up forces, re-grouped and occupied Valle Anzasca, forcing the German garrison to retreat to Piedimulera.

Later, the Patriots carried out an attack against Vogogna, capturing the German captain commanding the local garrison. (UNN) enemy-held localities in the beachhead, enemy prepared positions, and supply traffic.

An enemy destroyer was damaged in the waters west of Brest.

In the remainder of the beachhead, and in the occupied western territories, the enemy lost 21 planes.

In the course of mopping up operations in France, 75 terrorists were annihilated in fighting.

Heavy retaliatory fire continues against London.

In Italy, the enemy, yesterday, made numerous local attacks in the area of Pisa, east of Pontedera, and with major forces east and north-east of Poggibonsi, as well as north of Città di Castello. The enemy was repulsed everywhere, suffering heavy losses. Enemy units which had penetrated into our positions north of Città di Castello were thrown back in a counter-attack.

German E-boats heavily damaged one British motor torpedo boat off the Dalmatian coast.

In the East, the great defensive battle between the Upper Dniester and the Gulf of Finland continues with growing intensity.

In Galicia, numerous Soviet attacks, supported by tanks and battle planes, were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our gallant grenadiers. In the course of mobile fighting, Panzer formations threw back enemy assault troops at several points, and destroyed numerous tanks. In the city district of Lvov, fierce fighting continues.

Strong enemy pressure continues between the Bug and the Vistula. The garrison of Lublin offered stubborn resistance to the enemy, who is attacking from all directions. Northwest of Brest-Litovsk, several Bolshevik large-scale attacks on the western bank of the Bug were repulsed in a counter-attack. Between Bialystock and Grodno, as well as northeast of Kaunas, all Soviet attempts at breaking through failed in bitter fighting. On the front between Dvinsk and the Gulf of Finland, numerous enemy attacks supported by tanks and battle-planes collapsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Fifty-six enemy tanks were shot up. The Luftwaffe yesterday with strong formations of battle-planes also carried out numerous low-level attacks to support the ground troops, and destroyed another 59 Soviet tanks. The enemy lost 54 planes in aerial battles and by anti-aircraft artillery. Last night, enemy troop concentrations and deployments in the area of Lublin were the target of attacks by heavy bombers.

While at daylight enemy fighter planes made thrusts against the southwestern German area, a British bomber formation last night made a terror attack on Stuttgart. Furthermore, a few enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin and localities in East Prussia. Fifteen enemy planes were shot down.

RED ARMY CAPTURES LUBLIN, KEY TO WARSAW

MOSCOW, July 24 — The Red Army thrust its offensive closer to the borders of Germany, capturing Lublin, southern gateway to Warsaw and the scene of some of the barbarous German massacres of the Jews. The seizure of Lublin was achieved by a coordinated offensive of Soviet tanks, cavalry, and infantry, it was announced in a special order of the day to Marshal Rokossovsky, commander of the 1st White Russian Front by Marshal Joseph Stalin.

Even while the guns of Moscow were booming 20 salvoes from 224 guns, the Red Army was approaching Siedlice, 50 miles due east of Warsaw, which the German news agency said the German Army had evacuated. The Germans also admitted the evacuation of Yaroslav, 120 miles east of Cracow on the Lvov line.

Three powerful Soviet armies are now advancing on Warsaw. One of them by-passed Brest-Litovsk, leaving it in a pocket 40 miles deep. A frontal attack brought one Soviet column into the suburbs of the city.

Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, said thousands of German trucks are streaming westward across the [illegible] today in retreat of the Red Army [illegible]

Dvinsk, and the German garrison there is threatened with encirclement. With the fall of Pskov, the Germans no longer hold a sizeable town on the soil of pre-war Russia, and it puts the Red Army a few miles from the Estonian border on the road to Riga. Soviet forces have already cut the railway northeast of Dvinsk.

South of Lublin, Russian troops fighting in the direction of Cracow have reached the River San, a tributary of the Vistula. Spearheads of these widespread drives towards Warsaw and Cracow are big forces of Cossacks from the Don and Kuban areas, especially held in reserve for the battle of Poland.

Further south, fighting is going on again in Lvov, the fall of which is now imminent. Already Russian troops are 50 miles beyond the town, and the garrison is trapped.

Southeast of Lvov, the Russians, who have reached the River Gnilaya Lipa along a 37-mile front, are nearing Stanislvov, covering the approaches to the Carpathian passes.

In northern Lithuania, the Red Army is rapidly nearing the Riga-Koenigsberg railway in the main German retreat.

In the Brody pocket alone, 15,000 German prisoners have been counted. Over 30,000 dead were left by the enemy on the battlefield. (BBC-Reuter)

AMERICANS OCCUPY PISA SOUTH OF ARNO HOLD SOUTH BANKS WITHIN 20 MILES FLORENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 24 — American troops of the 5th Army have wiped out virtually all enemy positions south of the Arno River from the sea to within 20 miles of Florence, and have occupied the entire southern section of Pisa, it was announced here today.

Only on the tongue of land formed by the horseshoe bend of the Arno three miles east of Pisa, and almost directly south of the high Monte Pisano hills, where they are protected by heavy guns, have the Germans held on to the strong points which they had built to defend the river's southern approaches. American troops did not attempt to force their way into this sector.

The principal enemy resistance to this sweeping advance which has placed the Allies on the edges of this outlying water barrier of the Goth Line along a more-than-30-mile stretch was concentrated in a savage counter-attack two miles south of San Miniato, on the right flank of the American forces.

Mountains Slow Advance

Although American forces held San Miniatto, 22 miles east of Pisa, and about 2 1/2 miles south of the river, the

Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, said thousands of German trucks are streaming westward «across the dusty Polish plain today in retreat as the Red Army, using all possible captured material, speeds up its advance on Warsaw.» The Russian three-point drive is gaining weight and speed in all directions. The three great thrusts are First, northwest to Brest-Litovsk, where Soviet troops are less than 80 miles from Warsaw. Secondly, southwest of Brest-Litovsk, about the same distance from Warsaw. Thirdly, Marshal Rokossovsky's drive from Lublin in a great swing from the South.»

The Red Army forces moving west from the direction of Bialystok moved into the first semblance of German resistance, killing 2,000 Germans yesterday. The Germans are throwing in reserves straight from the march in an attempt to hold Bialystok. In all detachments, orders have been read in which the town is called «gate to East Prussia.» The Nazis have been ordered not to retreat a single yard, but they are giving way just the same.

An Associated Press Correspondent said that the Red Army's spectacular advance was already assuming catastrophic consequences for Hitler's eastern front fighters, adding that Marshal Stalin's «juggernaut offensive entered the second month with increasing momentum, having captured 23 German generals and knocked out possibly one-fifth of the 230 divisions in the east.»

The three Soviet drives toward the Baltic are proceeding with increasing force. Striking beyond captured Pskov, the Red Army has moved to within 20 miles northeast of the battle of Poland.

Further south, fighting is going on again in Lvov, the fall of which is now imminent. Already Russian troops are 50 miles beyond the town, and the garrison is trapped.

Southeast of Lvov, the Russians, who have reached the River Gnilaya Lipa along a 37-mile front, are nearing Stanislvov, covering the approaches to the Carpathian passes.

nearest forces reported to the east were in the vicinity of Castelfiorentino, on the eastern banks of the Elsa River, nine miles south of the Arno. In this region, the Chianti Mountains have slowed the Allied advance, so that the Allied forward line, after following the Arno for more than half its distance inland toward Florence, sags to 12 miles south of the river, only to join it again at San Giovanni, 13 miles southeast of Florence. A sweeping bend of the Arno in this area north of the Chianti Mountains accentuates this dip in the Allied line.

But it is this point, where the Allied line sags into the Elsa River Valley, that the Germans have chosen for their counter-attack, in an effort to deliver a punishing blow at the flank of the American forces. According to latest reports yesterday afternoon, the enemy thrust was still in progress two miles to the south of leading American forces at San Miniatto, and the enemy had amassed self-propelled weapons and troops in considerable strength to effect his purpose.

On the six-mile stretch of the main Florence-Pisa-Leghorn highway west of San Miniato, the towns of Ponte Evola, San Romano, San Torano, and Angelica were captured by American forces. The town of Cascina, north of the Arno Canal at its junction point with the Arno River eight miles southeast of Pisa, was also taken. Reconnaissance forces entered the town of Marina di Pisa, at the mouth of the Arno, to find it unoccupied. The American forces then withdew. Leghorn and this sector of the coast have been subjected to heavy calibre enemy fire, including that from a 280-millimeter railway gun located between Pisa and Viareggio.

Allied forces pushing into the Pisa and the Greve River valleys through the Chianti Mountains approached to within 12 miles of Florence yesterday, it was officially reported. Tavarnelle, seven miles north of Poggibonsi, was occupied, and leading elements were in the vicinity of Strada, 1 1 2 miles to the northeast. Montebello, between Castelfiorentino and Certaldo on the Elsa River, was also taken.

East of Highway 2, direct route from Poggibonsi to Florence, South African forces were still meeting strong resistance near Greve, a town on the Arno tributary bearing the same name, and located 13 miles south of Florence.

Eighth Army forces yesterday advanced to capture San Giovanni on the main Arezzo-Florence road, just 18 miles southeast of Tuscany's chief city. In other gains along the periphery of the expanding 5th Army bridgehead over the Arno west of Arezzo, Terranuova was occupied, and Montemarciano, 17 miles northwest of Arezzo in the Arno Valley, was threatened. Forward troops were pushing beyond Campogialli, three miles north of the Arno at a point 10 miles west of Arezzo.

In the Upper Tiber Valley, German forces still resisted to the northeast of Città di Castello, along the road from Monte San Maria to Monterchi. German troops still held out in the Sant Ubaldo Monastery north of Gubbio, where they have some 300 women and children, who took refuge in the institution, as hostages against Allied attack.

On the Adriatic coast, heavy enemy resistance has developed, and only a short advance east of Ostra, 1 1 2 miles south of the Misa River, was recorded for the hard fighting Polish forces.

Brazilian Troops Welcomed

Sir Noel Charles, British member of the Allied Council for Italy, has sent a message to General of Division Joao Battista Mascaremas di Mores, commanding a crack Brazilian formation, welcoming the Brazilian troops on their arrival in Italy.

Sir Noel, who was British Ambassador to Brazil until last March, told General Mascaremas that « as a sincere friend and admirer of Brazil, » he welcomed him and his gallant troops to this theatre of the war, where they « join the ranks of the Allies to ensure world freedom. »

The Brazilian troops arrived last Sunday, an American liaison officer described the Brazilian troops as « one of the best-trained armies in the world, » and said that they had been so anxious to get overseas to fight that many not assigned to the shipment had tried to come along as stowaways.

Italy Bombers Hit France

Heavy bombers of the 15th AAF, escorted by long-range Mustang fighters, today bombed two enemy air fields near the Rhone River, in southern France.

Other heavy bombers flew from Italian bases to attack harbor installations at Genoa, and four enemy troop concentrations in southern Yugoslavia. In other attacks Flying Fortresses, escorted by Lightnings, bombed a large tank repair shop at Turin, and the Orbassano ball bearing works southwest of this big north Italian industrial center.

The air fields attacked in the flights over southern France were those at Les Chanoines, 10 miles south of Arles-sur-Rhone, and at La Tresorerie, near Valence.

Slight to moderate anti-aircraft fire was met over the targets but no enemy fighters were encountered.

Liberators Attack Berat

A small formation of less than 70 Liberators yesterday delivered a crippling attack on the Albanian oil refinery near Berat, 55 miles south of Tirana, in one of the lightest day's operations in weeks for Mediterranean Allied Strategic Air Forces.

Several large buildings, including the power house at the refinery, were gutted by fires and explosions.

GERMAN REPRISAL AT SAN SEVERO

AREZZO, July 24 — As a reprisal for the killing of one soldier, the Germans shot 17 men, women, and children taken from the village of San Severo, just outside Arezzo.

Their bodies have just been found in a single grave. An army captain acting as civil affairs police officer showed a UNN correspondent a wooden board which had been placed on the grave by the Germans after the massacre.

It bore the words: « Rebels in the service of the English. Bandits in the pay of England. »

The officer said that the Germans had been more vicious in the Arezzo district than in any other place yet liberated.

eight miles southeast of Pisa, was also taken. Reconnaissance forces entered the town of Marina di Pisa, at the mouth of the Arno, to find it unoccupied. The American forces then withdew. Leghorn and this sector of the coast have been subjected to heavy calibre enemy fire, including that from a 280-millimeter railway gun located between Pisa and Viareggio.

Allied forces pushing into the Pisa and the Greve River valleys through the Chianti Mountains approached to within 12 miles of Florence yesterday, it was officially reported. Tavarnelle, seven miles north of Poggibonsi, was occupied, and leading elements were in the vicinity of Strada, 1 1/2 miles to the northeast. Montebello, between Castelfiorentino and Certaldo on the Elsa River, was also taken.

East of Highway 2, direct route from Poggibonsi to Florence, South African forces were still meeting strong resistance near Greve, a town on the Arno tributary bearing the same name, and located 13 miles south of Florence.

Eighth Army forces yesterday advanced to capture San Giovanni on the main Arezzo-Florence road, just 18 miles southeast of Tuscany's chief city. In other gains along the periphery of the expanding 8th Army bridgehead over the Arno west of Arezzo, Terranuova was occupied, and Montemurciano, 17 miles northwest of Arezzo in the Arno Valley, was threatened. Forward troops were pushing beyond Campogialli, three miles north of the Arno at a point 10 miles west of Arezzo.

In the Upper Tiber Valley, German forces still resisted to the northeast of Città di Castello, along the road from Monte San Maria to Monterchi. German troops still held out in the Sant Ubaldo Monastery north of Gubbio, where they have some 300 women and children, who took refuge in the institution, as hostages against Allied attack.

On the Adriatic coast, heavy enemy resistance has developed, and only a short advance east of Ostra, 1 1/2 miles south of the Misa River, was recorded for the hard fighting Polish forces.

King George in Italy

King George VI arrived in Italy yesterday after an air trip from England, to make his second tour of the Mediterranean battle areas, it was announced here shortly after midnight.

The special announcement stated that the King's «purpose is to visit units of the Royal Navy, the Army, and the Royal Air Force, and of the Dominions and Allied Forces.»

The King was met after his 3,000-mile flight in a specially fitted aircraft by General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater. The Queen and Princess Elizabeth bade farewell to the sovereign at a British airfield.

The King was tanned and smiling, and wore the uniform of a Field Marshal when he arrived at the Italian airfield. His special pilot, Wing Commander H. Collins, of the Royal Air Force, said that they had had «an ideal trip, with perfect weather.» RAF Beaufighters and MAAF Spitfires of a famous South African Squadron escorted the King's plane in the later stage of the journey. Major J. T. Seccombe, of Johannesburg, commanded the escort. The King's personal pilot, a veteran of 18 years in the RAF, flew the King on his North African tour last year.

The King shook hands with the members of the official reception party as he alighted from the aircraft, and then drove off with Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Naval Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, in the latter's car. Also present at the airport to meet the King were Air Vice Marshal G. B. A. Baker, RAF Chief of Staff Mediterranean, and Sir Harold MacMillan, British Minister attached to Allied Force Headquarters.

Other heavy bombers flew from Italian bases to attack harbor installations at Genoa, and four enemy troop concentrations in southern Yugoslavia. In other attacks Flying Fortresses, escorted by Lightnings, bombed a large tank repair shop at Turin, and the Orbassano ball bearing works southwest of this big north Italian industrial center.

The air fields attacked in the flights over southern France were those at Les Chanoines, 10 miles south of Arles-sur-Rhone, and at La Tresorerie, near Valence.

Slight to moderate anti-aircraft fire was met over the targets but no enemy fighters were encountered.

Liberators Attack Berat

A small formation of less than 70 Liberators yesterday delivered a crippling attack on the Albanian oil refinery near Berat, 55 miles south of Tirana, in one of the lightest day's operations in weeks for Mediterranean Allied Strategic Air Forces.

Several large buildings, including the power house at the refinery, were gutted by fires and explosions.

GERMAN REPRISAL AT SAN SEVERO

AREZZO, July 24 — As a reprisal for the killing of one soldier, the Germans shot 17 men, women, and children taken from the village of San Severo, just outside Arezzo.

Their bodies have just been found in a single grave. An army captain acting as civil affairs police officer showed a UNN correspondent a wooden board which had been placed on the grave by the Germans after the massacre.

It bore the words: «Rebels in the service of the English. Bandits in the pay of England.»

The officer said that the Germans had been more vicious in the Arezzo district than in any other place yet liberated.

LITTLE ACTIVITY IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, July 24 — Conditions were generally quiet on the Normandy front, with a small raid by British forces in the Esquay area, and the dispersal of some enemy armor by Allied artillery south of Maltot, in the only two actions of the day. This followed the clearing of the enemy from the village of Emieville the previous night in sharp local engagements.

Haze and thick clouds over the front grounded all aircraft.

The British raid on Esquay was a success, a Reuter correspondent reported. Prisoners were taken and some Germans were killed.

Canadian forces southwest of Caen held firm after three days of furious German counter-attacks on a 1 1/2 mile front. The Canadians destroyed an estimated total of 45 tanks, inflicted heavy losses with their machine gun fire, and took an average of 100 prisoners a day.

British and Canadian forces are straightening their line below Caen, digging in on a broad front from south of the town to the high ground east of Cagny.

The German High Command is frantically shifting troops in occupied Europe in an attempt to stem the Allied advance. The majority of 400 prisoners captured in the cleanup of Maltot on Saturday were identified as being from the 271st German Infantry Division which, with the 272nd, reached Normandy from the French Mediterranean coast only a few days before General Montgomery's big push.

Meanwhile, there is no let-up in activity behind the Allied lines, where captured ground is being consolidated and supplies, armor, artillery, and men are being brought up.

NO IMPORTANT CHANGE ON NORMANDY FRONT
LOCAL COUNTER-ATTACKS REPULSED

SHAEF, July 24 — Allied positions along the Normandy front remain substantially unchanged, it was announced here today. There have been sharp local engagements, and Allied troops have cleared the enemy from the village of Emieville, 2 1/2 miles southwest of Troarn.

South of Caen, British and Canadian troops improved their positions around Maltot in the face of German counter-attacks. Four hundred prisoners have been captured in this area.

British and Canadian forces are straightening out their line below Caen, digging in on a broad front from south of Caen to the high ground east of Cagny.

Canadian forces southwest of Caen held firm after three days of furious German counter-attacks along a 1 1/2-mile front. The enemy is estimated to have lost 45 tanks. The Canadians also inflicted heavy losses with machine-gun fire, and took an average of over 100 prisoners each day.

Two Regiments Cited

Two infantry regiments, which led the American assault against German coastal defenses in Normandy on D-day, were cited Saturday by Lieut. General Omar Bradley for outstanding heroism under the most adverse conditions.

The regiments, according to Associated Press correspondent Don Whitehead, were the 16th, from New York, and the 116th, from Virginia.

General Bradley gave a separate citation to each regiment, both of them reading approximately the same. In the citation concerning the 116th, General Bradley said: «While they were moving inshore in the assault craft, a violent sea swamped the regiment's supporting weapons, and hurled men and boats into the intricate and almost impenetrable barriers of mines and other underwater obstacles.»

German fire, continued General Bradley, mowed down the troops as they struggled ashore, and within a few hours a third of the assault strength were casualties. Men dragged themselves to the shores without leaders and scattered by the loss of key personnel. Blocked from advancing by the minefields, and pinned down by the annihilating enemy fire, wave after wave piled up on the seven-yard beachhead, until thousands of men lay on the fireswept shore.

«In the face of an apparently hopeless situation, the men began reorganizing, the citation said.» Officers and men gathered the remnants of their units together and slowly, with groups being cut down as soon as they were formed, began to develop from a confused, hurt mass into a cohesive and determined fighting force.

«With grim determination, and suffering terrible casualties, the regiment forced its way forward in a frontal assault on principal enemy strong-points. They enraged the enemy, and in a magnificent display of courage and will to win, destroyed them. Individually and collectively, members of the regiment turned a threatening situation into a glorious victory for the American Army.»

Nazi Officers Responsible

The Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force issued the following statement today.

«The Germans have attacked the French Forces of the Interior in the west coast region. German treatment of the prisoners taken in this action is such as will bring sudden retribution to the perpetrators.

«It is known that the guilty are the 9th Panzer Division, and the 157th Infantry Division. The officers of these two Kiel is Germany's greatest naval base. The Air Ministry report stated that there was cloud over Kiel, but pathfinder aircraft marked the target accurately and the crews reported the glow of large fires mingling with the reflections of target indicators.

The Air Ministry added that Mosquitoes also bombed Berlin with 4,000 pound bombs.

The RAF attack on German oil resources was continued with raids on two large oil-storage depots at Donges, near St. Nazaire. Other forces attacked flying-bomb sites in northern France.

Six Allied aircraft are reported missing from the night's operations, which included mine laying in enemy waters. The Allied air forces flew about 1,000 sorties yesterday. Heavy bombers attacked an oil refinery in Albania in daylight, and last night bombed military objectives near Bucharest. Targets in Yugoslavia and northern Italy received their usual hammering.

Paris Airfields Hit

American heavy bombers from Britain struck at airfields near Paris. Air attacks were also kept up on German communications and flying-bomb installations.

The Germans sent flying bombs over the southern counties of England, including the London area, last night and again this afternoon, the Air Ministry announced. Casualties and damage were caused.

Two low-flying Mosquitoes destroyed a German headquarters 30 miles from the mouth of the Loire River in France on Sunday, by putting a delayed-action 500-pound bomb through the walls.

They also blew up a nearby barracks in a roof-level attack, then went on to shoot up a power station and several locomotives at Limoges.

As the RAF has done on several similar missions, they slipped into occupied Europe just above the tops of the trees and farm houses so as to confuse anti-aircraft gunners and make fighter interception difficult. One plane flew back 400 miles to base on one engine. (OWI)

HEAVIEST BLOWS AGAINST GERMAN PRODUCTION

LONDON, July 24 — The striking power of the U. S. 8th Air Force in England, and the 15th Air Force in Italy, combined last week to deliver the heaviest blows ever struck in a single week in the history of the United States Strategic Air Force in Europe, against the vital war industries of Germany.

The official account of these attacks, issued by the Strategic Air Force on Saturday, stated that, taking advantage of the good bombing weather during the week from July 16 to July 22, the USAAF threw the tremendous power of the two forces into syncronised assaults against Germany's war production.

These combined blows served three purposes:

1. To keep down the strength of the Luftwaffe by destroying or damaging aircraft factories and knocking out repairs made to previously damaged aircraft plants.

2. Further to reduce German capacity to produce chemicals, ball bearings, and other products vital to war production.

3. To disrupt communications over which war supplies must go to fighting fronts.

The size of this assault was by far the greatest in the history of daylight bombing.

ADMIRAL STARK INSPECTS CHERBOURG

CHERBOURG, July 24 — Admiral Harold Stark, commander of the United States naval forces in European waters, made his first inspection of Cherbourg today, and expressed his satisfaction at the progress made in repairing the harbor.

Admiral Stark also praised the work done by British minesweepers, both in the harbor, and in the English Channel. He said:

«I think some of the greatest stories of the war will be written around the minesweepers.» (PWB)

3,000 TONS ON KIEL

LONDON, July 24 — The air offensive from Britain was resumed again at daybreak, when waves of aircraft flew outward across the Channel. Enemy radio stations reported that Allied bomber formations were over southwest and western Germany this morning.

Last night, RAF Bomber Command dropped nearly 3,000 tons of bombs on Kiel in one of the heaviest attacks

3. To disrupt communications over which war supplies must go to fighting fronts.

The size of this assault was by far the greatest in the history of daylight bombing.

Efforts Synchronized

Because large striking forces are available from both England and Italy, it has been possible, by synchronizing efforts on days when both forces could fly, to confuse and spread out the defending Luftwaffe fighters, and to take advantage of the fleeting favorable weather over Germany and the satellite territories.

Also, because of the reduced strength of the German air defenses, it has been possible this last week to split task forces into many units and go after as many as 15 important targets simultaneously.

Heavy damage resulted, for if German fighters concentrated on one or two formations, the others were able to aim their bombs with comparative freedom. Targets were hit from the Baltic Sea to the Alps, and from the Ruhr to Czechoslovakia.

Heaviest attacks were in the vicinity of Leipzig and Munich, where aircraft and engine factories were smashed. Simultaneously, Wintershafen oil depot was bombed, and aircraft struck at Muchendorf airdrome.

Continuing through the six days, the 8th bombed factories at Dessau, Gotha, and Russelsheim, while the 15th attacked factories at Friedrichshafen, and the synthetic oil factory at Brux in Czechoslovakia.

Over this period, 6,431 planes dropped 16,427 tons of bombs on industrial and communications targets in Germany. Escorting fighters which reached the target areas totalled 5,045.

These figures far eclipse the previous big week of February 22 to 26, when 4,326 heavy bombers of the U. S. Strategic Air Force attacked industrial targets in Germany.

Bomber losses for the forces dispatched from the 8th were 1.8 per cent. Fighter losses were nine-tenths of one per cent.

Eighth bombers and fighters destroyed 65 enemy aircraft in the air during the week, and 100 enemy aircraft were destroyed or damaged on the ground, either by bombers or by strafing fighters. (PWB)

POLISH COMMITTEE FORMED

MOSCOW, July 24 — Radio Moscow said today that the new Polish Committee of National Liberation includes a number of prominent members of the Union of Polish Patriots, such as Andrev Witos; Wanda Wasilewska, the Polish woman novelist; and General Zelenski, who was appointed Polish commander-in-chief by the Polish National Council in Poland last February.

Lieut. General Zigmund Berling, commander of the Polish forces fighting with the Red Army, is another member.

Another decree announced that the Polish Army and the Committee of National Liberation would be united. A new high command was set up with General Zelenski as commander-in-chief of the united Polish Army, and with General Berling as one of his deputies.

The decree does not interfere with the present arrangement, whereby General Berling's army, upwards of 100,000 strong, fights under the orders of the supreme command of the Red Army on the eastern front. (Reuter)

POLISH GOVERNMENT DENOUNCES NEW PCNL

LONDON, July 25 — In a statement authorized by the Polish Government in London, the Polish telegraph agency described the formation of the Polish Committee of National Liberation on Russian-freed territory as «an attempt by a handful of usurpers to impose on the Polish Nation a political leadership which is at variance with the overwhelming majority.»

It added that persons included in the committee were mostly completely unknown to the Polish people, who would never yield to any alien will. (Reuter)

BEAUFIGHTERS ATTACK CONVOY IN AEGEAN

CAIRO, July 24 — After an attack on an enemy convoy in the central Aegean yesterday, Beaufighters left a corvette and one supply vessel belching smoke, announced today's Middle East communique.

The text of the communique said:

«Beaufighters, operating over the central Aegean yesterday, shot down an Arado-196 into the sea. Continuing their patrol, our aircraft discovered an enemy supply convoy, and attacked with rocket projectiles and cannon. A corvette and one supply vessel were left belching smoke. Other enemy shipping was attacked and damaged during Friday night, and Kastelli Pediada airfield on Crete was bombed Saturday night. An explosion was seen. From these and other operations, three of our aircraft are missing». (Reuter)

AIRBONE SUPPLES FOR YUGOSLAVS

LONDON, July 24 — Big strides forward in the organisation of airborne supplies for Marshal Tito's Patriot Army have been made in the past few months, the BBC reports.

miral Harry W. Hill. Expeditionary troops are commanded by Major General Harry Schmidt.

American troops of two beach parties that landed on Guam Island are closing in towards each other in an effort to link up, wrote a Reuter correspondent. The landings have practically sealed off the escape corridor for an unknown number of Japanese trapped on Orote Peninsula.

Yesterday, the correspondent watched some American battleships, steam close into shore and pump heavy shells into Japanese positions on Orote. Land artillery laid down a curtain of fire which swept across the strip of land emphasizing the impossibility of escape. Wave after wave of dive-bombers added to the intensity of the bombardment.

On the southern beachhead, the American line has been carried beyond some of the loftiest features in the mountain range. It is now swinging towards Mount Tenjo, the highest peak in this part of Guam. Along the coast, the Americans have advanced 2,000 yards, capturing beach frontage that will greatly assist the supply problem. Fighting is going on over the coveted Dadi Beach, which is the best in the south of the island.

On the northern beachhead, there has been steady consolidation in difficult country between Adelup Point and Cabras Island, which runs out from the island parallel to the peninsula. The scene of the heaviest fighting is still Chonito Cliff, along the summit of which the Marines are holding a firm line. They have repelled savage Japanese attempts to dislodge them. The battle is raging day and night with all arms taking part in an attempt to break the stalemate which is holding up the advance on the northern flank.

General MacArthur's communique, issued from his headquarters in New Guinea, said that air patrols have sunk a Japanese coastal vessel 70 miles southwest of Mindanao.

Off Halmahera, medium bombers went in to attack villages and shipping. They sank a 1,000-ton vessel for the loss of one plane. Other planes ranged over the most important Japanese islands in the Pacific.

The trapped Japanese army in the Wewak-Aitape area of north British New Guinea is still trying to concentrate its forces. One of its small-scale reconnaissance attacks in this area was repulsed.

The Washington STAR said Saturday that the Marianas will become a base for massive air attacks on Japan and it will be possible for expeditionary forces to be launched against the Philippines, Formosa, and even the outlying portions of the Japanese homeland itself.

The article said: «It is interesting to note that the landing on Guam coincided with the first bombing by land-based planes of the Bonin Islands, less than 700 miles from Tokyo.»

In the three days fighting on Guam, American casualties have been 350 killed and 1,600 wounded or missing. (BBC-Reuter)

AIRBONE SUPPLES FOR YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, July 24 — Big strides forward in the organisation of airborne supplies for Marshal Tito's Patriot Army have been made in the past few months, the BBC reported today.

Exact figures cannot be given, but April figures were 40 per cent over March figures.

On the return trips, said the BBC, our aircraft bring out wounded. Wounded Patriots are not allowed to fall into German hands if it is possible to avoid it. The Germans shoot them.

Marshal Tito's communique said today that Patriots struck another blow at German communications by destroying part of the Bihac-Krupa railway, which the enemy was using to carry supplies to Dalmatia.

Two trains containing troops and materials were derailed, and more than 200 Germans were killed. In southern Moravia, violent battles are in progress, the communique said. (Reuter-BBC

U. S. MARINES LAND ON TINIAN GAINS MADE ON GUAM

PEARL HARBOR, July 24 — Assault troops of the 2nd and 4th American Marine divisions established beachheads on Tinian Island yesterday, it was officially stated today. The landings were supported by carrier and land-based aircraft, artillery, and naval gunfire.

Amphibious operations are being directed by Rear Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, commander of the Fifth Amphibious Force, who directed the assault on Saipan.

Tinian is 3½ miles south of Saipan, and is 5 miles long and 3 miles wide. Its highest point is 564 feet above sea level.

Tinian is the second island in the Marianas to be invaded. Guam, the largest island in the group, was invaded on July 21.

Admiral Nimitz announced today that the Japanese garrison on Guam has been reduced to 5,000 men. Of these, 1,000 are Japanese troops, and the remainder Japanese naval personnel and Korean labourers.

Admiral Nimitz said that the Japanese are fighting desperately, and that they have been driven into the northern part of the peninsula. The scene of the heaviest fighting is Chonito Cliff, along the summit of which the Marines are holding a firm line. They have repelled savage Japanese attempts to dislodge them. CHUNGKING, July 24 — A 14th USAAF communique announced further action in support of the surrounded Chinese garrison at Hengyang, which a Japanese military commentator admitted today is still offering bitter resistance to the besieging Japanese forces. Fighters, including some from Major General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American composite wing, attacked the airfield and railyards in the south of the town, inflicting damage and casualties.

In addition to direct support to the defenders of Hengyang, the 14th USAAF carried out widespread attacks on enemy targets from the Yellow River bend to the French Indo-China coast, where shipping was attacked.

In a successful attack on railyards and fuel dumps at Chengsien, in the Yellow River area, Mitchells with fighter escort were intercepted by 15 Japanese fighters, of which 10 were destroyed, according to preliminary reports. Further attacks in support of Chinese ground forces were made in the area of Tengchung, on the Salween front.

Liberators bombed Changsha, Japanese-held capital of Hunan, for the second day in succession, on Sunday.

CHURCHILL ON GERMAN WEAKNESS

LONDON, July 24 — «The Germans are in a grave state of turmoil, and none can measure the extent of their internal trouble».

These words were spoken by Prime Minister Winston Churchill in a speech yesterday to British airmen behind the front line in Normandy.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Mr. Churchill said: «There are grave signs of weakness in Germany. They are shooting each other. I cannot help that. But it might be that the end of the fighting may come earlier than we have the right to say».

The Prime Minister then said that he wished to praise and encourage all officers and men of this air force wing who were doing such splendid work.

He said: «This British enterprise, combined with our splendid American allies, is unparalleled in the whole vast history of the war. When you consider that at the beginning of this war it took five to six weeks to get three divisions ashore, it is astonishing that now we have here — well, I must not say, but you must think in large numbers.

«And these men have been brought in, in spite of constant enemy resistance. Allied air forces have been one of the big factors in this prodigious invasion. They have been able to cut down and destroy coastal defences. This has relieved the Navy of the terrible cost in ships which would have been involved in the battering down of coastal defences, had they not been scientifically treated from the air.

«You airmen have played a great part. I look back on 1940, when we had so little, and such small reserves. Perhaps we had 100 field guns — perhaps 20 tanks in our island home. The enemy said that they must «do in» the RAF before they could invade.

«Then came that splendid Battle of Britain. The life of the country was saved. We were able to go forward and over 20 nations joined — almost the whole world.

«We saw mighty Russia attacked and defend herself with such magnificent vigour, and the United States, who have always supported us, then joined in the fight.

«This story of how the nations joined forces to meet the common enemy will be told in history for hundreds of years.

«Now, given the required time, they will be victorious.

«We will come to a peace which will make it impossible for the kind of thing that brought about this war to happen again».

Mr. Churchill is now back in London after his three-day visit to Normandy. (BBC-Reuter)

ROOSEVELT APPROVES U. S. NAVY INCREASE

WASHINGTON, July 24 — President Roosevelt has approved a plan to increase the personnel on active duty in the United States Navy by 194,000 to 3,200,000 by December 31, 1944, it was announced today by the U. S. Navy Department.

The President also authorized the Navy to base plans upon a total strength of 3,389,000 by June 30, 1945. One reason for the increase, it was said, was that it is now possible to strike at the Japanese inner defense and bring the war to the doorstep of the enemy sooner than expected, although the war in the Pacific is by no means approaching an end. BELGIAN MISSION TO ALLIED HIGH COMMAND

HITLER THANKS GERMAN PEOPLE

LONDON, July 24 — Hitler has sent a message of gratitude to the Germans for their «loyalty,» the German news agency announced today.

His message said: «On the occasion of the attempt on my and my collaborators' lives, I have received numerous congratulations and demonstrations of loyalty from all classes of the German people, and particularly from the Party and the armed forces.

«There are so many who have thought of me in these days, that I should like to thank them on my own, and my comrades behalf, in this way.» (Reuter)

GUDERIAN PLEDGES ARMY'S LOYALTY

LONDON, July 24 — The German radio announced today that General Guderian, the new German Chief of Staff, has sent the following message to the rank and file of the German Army:

«Loyalty is a mark of honor. The German Army will give concrete shape to these words in the hard battles which lie ahead. We all serve the Fuehrer and his great mission, faithful to our vow of allegiance.»

This letter will be published in the German soldiers' magazine FRONT UND HEIMAT, which is distributed to the Wermacht on all fronts. (Reuter)

NAZI PRISONERS OF WAR SUPPORT REVOLT

LONDON, July 24 — For the first time since the war started, German prisoners have been brought before a BBC microphone to broadcast to their people at home. Commenting last night on the revolt in Germany, a German officer From Hamburg said:

«Colleagues, wherever you may have the opportunity, help to break the chains on our spirits. From now on the way is clear. If all spiritual and cultural values are not to vanish completely, the Nazi regime must go.»

A former worker from Berlin said:

«Every single person in Germany who is today against Hitler is in bounden duty with all other opponents of the regime, whether generals or workers, to come together in the great fight which lies ahead — the fight against Hitler, who wants to prolong the war merely to try to preserve himself and who, by doing so, becomes the murderer of our country.» (Reuter)

GERMAN ARMY ADOPTS NAZI SALUTE

LONDON, July 24 — On the occasion of Hitler's escape from assassination, «all parts of the German armed forces have asked for the German salute to be introduced into the armed forces, as a sign of unbreakable loyalty and closest attachment between Army and Party,» said the German news agency, quoting an announcement from Hitler's headquarters.

From henceforth, the military salute, made by lifting the right hand to the headgear, will be replaced by the so-called «German salute,» that is, the Nazi salute, which consists in raising the right hand in the Fascist manner to halfway between shoulder and head, while standing to attention and, if the occasion calls for words, saying «Heil Hitler.» (Reuter)

TWO NAZI GENERALS DIE OF WOUNDS

LONDON, July 24 — The Chief of Staff of the Luftwaffe, Colonel-General Guenther Korten, and the first officer in the operational department of the General Staff of the Army, Major-General Heinz Brandt, have died as a result home. The enemy said that they must «do in» the RAF before they could invade.

«Then came that splendid Battle of Britain. The life of the country was saved. We were able to go forward and over 20 nations joined — almost the whole world.

«We saw mighty Russia attacked and defend herself with such magnificent vigour, and the United States, who have always supported us, then joined in the fight.

«This story of how the nations joined forces to meet the common enemy will be told in history for hundreds of years.

«Now, given the required time, they will be victorious.

«We will come to a peace which will make it impossible for the kind of thing that brought about this war to happen again».

Mr. Churchill is now back in London after his three-day visit to Normandy. (BBC-Reuter)

JAP CRISIS BEGAN A LONG TIME AGO

WASHINGTON, July 24 — The capture of Saipan by the Allies «merely occasioned the Government crisis» in Japan and was not its «main cause,» wrote the Moscow newspaper PRAVDA, commenting on the Japanese situation yesterday.

The newspaper added, «This crisis had already begun a long time ago.»

PRAVDA listed the three main causes of the events in Japan as being: «The complete collapse of Japanese hopes in Germany,» the «reserves of Japan's war industry as compared with the reserves of her enemies,» and the «great discrepancy between the state of the Japanese Navy and the tasks set up for them.» (Reuter)

TWO NAZI GENERALS DIE OF WOUNDS

LONDON, July 24 — The Chief of Staff of the Luftwaffe, Colonel General Guenther Korten, and the first officer in the operational department of the General Staff of the Army, Major General Heinz Brandt, have died as a result of wounds suffered when the attempt was made on Hitler's life, the German news agency reported today.

Colonel General Guenther Korten was listed in the German announcement of the attempt on Hitler's life as one of those «slightly injured.» He was an early member of the Nazi Party, and held the Order of the Blood, the highest Nazi Party distinction. He was appointed Chief of Staff of the Luftwaffe in succession to General Jeschenck, who was killed during an RAF raid on Peenemunde, the technical research station of the Luftwaffe — the original home of the flying bomb — in 1943.

Concerning General Brandt, there is no information on record. (Reuter)

HITLER'S INJURIES DESCRIBED

LONDON, July 24 — More details of the injuries received by Hitler during the attempt on his life on the night of July 20 are given by a Reuter correspondent.

The report said: «The mine exploded when Hitler was in the middle of the room, injuring his right shoulder and right hand, and burning his left hand and the hair at the back of his head.» (Reuter)

NAZI COUNTER-TERROR SPREADS

LONDON, July 24 — Despite the iron censorship imposed by Himmler, there are reliable reports of the reign of terror in Germany induced by rage over the attempt on Hitler's life.

The Nazi counter-terror has now spread beyond the army, and is claiming civilian victims. The former German Foreign Secretary, Baron von Neurath, at one time «Protector» of Bohemia, is reported to have been arrested and his castle occupied by the Gestapo.

Other reliable reports tell of the arrest of the former Reichsbank President, Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, and his probable execution. Berthold von Staufenberg, brother of Colonel von Staufenberg, who placed the time bomb which should have killed Hitler, is stated to have been shot by the Gestapo.

All reports reaching neutral capitals state that the Gestapo is carrying out the greatest man-hunt Germany has ever known. One Swedish report stated that at least 500 people have already lost their lives, while 10,000 are in hiding. The terror is being applied wholesale to prevent the spreading of the army revolt.

The Nazi organ, VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, yesterday carried the following headline: «The hour of treason was converted into a gigantic internal clearance.»

An Associated Press representative quoted reports from the French frontier that Hitler's purge has extended to the Eastern Front, where at least eight German commanders have been arrested or replaced. Several divisional officers in France have also been arrested or are in hiding. It is stated that the arrests include those of Field Marshal Kesselring, von Manstein, and Generals von Falkenhausen and von Fromm.

Two Berlin bankers are also among the purged.

One report stated that General Blaskowitz, in the Bordeaux sector, ordered his troops last Monday to prepare for emergencies, but cancelled the order after the attempt to kill Hitler had failed. Blaskowitz, said the report, was later arrested.

Minor fights between the SS troops and the Wehrmacht occurred in Bordeaux, Limoges, Nimes, and Nantes. The mutineers were dispersed because they lacked arms.

The open clash between the Nazi Party and the Army generals in Germany has had a profound effect on the German troops at the front, said Richard Mc Millan, British United Press correspondent at SHAEF yesterday. Even the fanatical SS show signs of despondency. Quoting a British officer who had questioned hundreds of German prisoners, Mc Millan said that nearly 100 per cent of the German prisoners now admit that they have lost the war. Many of them have realised for sometime that there was a growing rift between the Army and the Party. (P.W.B.)

SS LEADER MADE TROOP COMMANDER IN GERMAN-OCCUPIED EAST

LONDON, July 24 — In a move similar to that of the appointment of Himmler as commander-in-chief of the Home Army, SS Leader Jeckeln, one of Himmler's henchmen, has been made commander-in-chief of German troops stationed in the Ostland (German occupied Eastern territories), the Stockholm newspaper, SVENSKA DAGBLADET said Sunday.

The newspaper reported that the only orders which are valid are those signed by Jeckeln or his authorized deputy. It was also reported to the newspaper that the evacuation of members of the German civil administration in the Baltic has been stopped.

Mass arrests have been made at Riga, Latvia, among former German civil administration officers, according to the paper. Sixty Germans in prominent positions have been imprisoned, including the Mayor of Riga. Reich Commissioner Loehse and General Commissioner Dechsler who were called to Germany last week have not returned.

THANKSGIVING SERVICE IN AREZZO CATHEDRAL

AREZZO, July 24 — His Excellency Emanuele Mignone, Bishop of Arezzo, yesterday held a solemn service of thanksgiving for the liberation of Arezzo.

A congregation estimated at over 2,000 packed the 13th-century cathedral. Italian patriots, wearing their distinctive neckerchiefs in the national colors of Italy, were stationed at each side of the altar as a guard of honor.

At the invitation of the Bishop, Allied officers attended the service and were given seats of honor on the right hand side of the choir. Among them were Lieut. Colonel J. O. Thorburn, Allied Military Government provincial commissioner, and members of his staff.

Partisans who had fought in the Arezzo region were represented in the congregation.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 765021

The Bishop gave an address saying: « When Arezzo was liberated by the Allies the people were at the end of their endurance from the refined barbarism of the Germans, who called themselves saviors, but who, on the contrary, were enemies more cruel than the hordes of Alaric, Genseric, or Attila.

« Because the city was deserted when the Allies entered, there were no festive greetings for the Allied soldiers, but joy was in the hearts of all the citizens.

« Today's gathering is in thanksgiving to God for the bravery shown by the troops in the deliverance of Arezzo and its people. »

A week after its liberation by Allied troops, Arezzo is beginning to revive once more. An AMG official told a UNN reporter that an estimated 5,000 of the evacuated population had returned to the city.

A complete water supply will soon be available again, for the damaged aqueduct is now repaired. The situation is well in hand, and the people of Arezzo are satisfied with the arrangements for their welfare, said the official.

Armed partisans no longer roam the streets. Their duty done, they have carried out the request of the Allied military and surrendered their arms and equipment. It is estimated that over 150 partisans operated in and around Arezzo, and by tomorrow nearly all will have voluntarily disarmed themselves. (UNN)

Our troops have cut the Brest-Warsaw railway.

West and southwest of Grudeshov, our troops, continuing their successful offensive, captured the town of Inkoral, and also occupied with fighting over 150 other populated localities, including Boislavitsa, Graboveis, Zubovitsa, Kozhunkhin, Verekhano, and the railway stations of Ukhane and Konukhi.

West of Rava Russkaya, our troops have reached the River San on a front of 80 kilometers, and occupied over 60 populated localities, including the following district centers of Lvov Region: Sinyava and Leshki Dolgie; and the following important localities: Sheshuk, Bistra, Buralevka, Zhukhov, and Nenovitse.

Our troops have forced the River San on a number of sectors.

In the direction of Lvov, our troops, in the course of their successful offensive, occupied the following district centers of Lvov Region, the towns of Zholkev, and Yavorov; district centers of Gradoboch Region: Sudovaya Vishnya and Mostishka; and also occupied with fighting over 150 other populated localities, including Zadvizhe, Vilka Krulevskaya, Burovitsi, Sholomya, Zherebin, Cherebin, and the railway stations of Polonitse, Zadvuzhe, Nikolaitse, and Staroye Selo. Our troops have cut the railway and highway of Lvov-Peremishl.

According to verified figures, the enemy suffered the following losses during the liquidation of encircled groups west of Brody: 17,175 German officers and men were taken prisoners, including the Commander of the 454 Security Division, Major General Nedvig.

Southwest of Zolochev, our troops captured the town of Rogachev, district center of Stanislavov Region, and, having forced the River Dniester, captured the town and railway junction of Galich.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 23, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 172 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 33 enemy planes were shot down.

Total German losses in the course of our offensive operations between June 23 and July 23, inflicted on the enemy by combined efforts of the four fronts: 1st Pre-Baltic, 1st, 2nd, and 3rd White Russian Fronts, which were culminated by the total rout of the central group of the Germans, and the liberation of the Capital of White Russia, Minsk; the Capital of Soviet Lithuania, the town of Vilna, and the important towns of Vitebsk, Mogilev, Vilevka, Baranovichi, Pinsk, Polotsk, Orsha, Bobruisk, Borisov, Zhlobin, Gomel, Osipovichi, Molodechno, Grodno, Lida, Slonim, Volkovysk, and Ponevezhesk.

German losses: Over 381,000 German officers and men were killed; 631 planes, 2,735 tanks and self-propelled guns, 8,702 guns of all calibers, 5,695 mortars, 23,071 machine-guns, 57,152 motor vehicles captured.

158,486 German officers and men were taken prisoners, including 22 German Generals: The Commander of the 53 Army Corps, Army General Golwizer; the Commander of the 35 Army Corps, Lieutenant General Lutzov; the Commander of the 27 Army Corps, Army General Stolkert; the Commander of the 12 Army Corps, Lieutenant General Mueller; the Commander of the 41 Tank Corps, Lieutenant General Hoffmeister; the Commander of the 206 Infantry Division, Lieutenant General Hipper; the Commander of the 246 Infantry Division, Major General Mueller-Bulov; the Commander of the 95 Infantry Division, Major General Michaelis; the Commander of the 78 Sturm Division, Lieutenant General Traut; the Commander of the 58 Infantry Division, Major General Previtz; the Commander of the 383 Infantry Division, Major General Gir; the Commander of the 12 Infantry Division, Lieutenant General Bummler; the Commander of the 36 Infantry Division, Major General Konradi; the Commander of the 260 Infantry Division, Major General Kliant; the Commander of the 6

In Ceto, during an assault against an enemy vehicle which was set on fire, a captain and three Fascist soldiers were killed. The patriots did not have any losses. In Artogna, in a fight against a large German and Fascist patrol, the patriots, without suffering any loss, killed two German officers and one Fascist soldier. In Edolo and Malonno, the Dicat garrisons were disarmed.

The patriots of Val Camonica have also blown up 25 high-tension electric poles, reducing almost to nothing the production of electrical power in the valley. The telephone and telegraph lines are being frequently cut.

In Artogna, the railway bridge has been blown up, and the telegraph and telephone lines were cut. In the same locality, the Republican Guard garrison was occupied and a serjeant major and seven Fascist soldiers were taken as hostages. In several points the road and railway communications have been cut. Intensive sabotage was accomplished in the electric station which supplies Toscana with electricity.

All the population took an active part in defending the patriots. The village of Cava was set on fire and destroyed by the Fascists. The population behaved heroically, and suffered many losses. Women and children have been killed by the Nazi-Fascists, who carried out mass arrests. Among these arrested were several priests. A young patriot, wounded in a battle, was brought to the Breno hospital, where he was murdered and not allowed to receive the Last Sacrament. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 24 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, no major fighting took place yesterday. The enemy made only several unsuccessfull attacks to the southwest of Caen, in the course of which he lost 19 tanks. A previous local penetration in the western end of the beach was abolished in a counter-attack. The enemy lost 450 dead and 300 prisoners.

In the French area, British sabotage squads which were dropped by parachuts, as well as 219 terrorists, were killed.

The retaliation fire on London was continued by day and by night.

In Italy, the enemy yesterday carried out major attacks against our rear guards to the north of Livorno, which were taken back to the northern bank of the Arno River in the course of the fighting. Particularly fierce fighting developed to the north of Poggibonsi, where our troops frustrated all enemy attacks with heavy losses to the attacker. Repeated enemy attacks on the Adriatic coastal sector were also unsuccessful.

In Galicia and to the west of the upper Bug, numerous Soviet attacks, which were supported by tanks and battle planes, were beaten off in embittered fighting. Only in a few sectors, the enemy spearhead gained further ground. Fierce fighting continues in Lemberg. The garrison of Lublin beat off repeated enemy attacks. Enemy attempts to break through between Brest-Litovsk and Grodno, as well as to the northeast of Kovno, were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our gallant divisions. At several sectors, the Bolshevicks who had penetrated were thrown back in the course of counter-attacks.

During these operations, the commander of a combat team, Lieutenant General Schneller, and the Chief of Staff of an Army, Major General von Treschnow, were killed in the first line.

Between Dvinsk and Lake Peipus, violent Soviet attacks were smashed. Local penetrations were sealed up in hard fighting.

Last night, a British bomber formation carried out another terror attack on Kiel; single aircraft bombed the area of the Reich's capital. (Radio Berlin)

AMERICANS ENTER PISA: 8TH NEARS GOTH LINE

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, July 23 — American troops of the 5th Army today fought their way into the southern sections of the historic city of Pisa, after a dramatic night attack which swept the enemy from the south banks of the Arno river along a seven-mile stretch in from the sea.

The American advance to the Arno's banks between Pisa and the sea places at least a 32-mile stretch of the river's south banks in 5th Army hands, and means that the southern portions of the city, including the main railway station, have been taken. There are four road bridges and a rail span crossing the Arno at this point, where it winds through the historic city in a northward sweeping bend.

According to reports this afternoon, resistance still

Enemy Armor Massing

Enemy forces have concentrated considerable tank forces near Pontedera, 12 miles east of Pisa on the Arno River, and are obviously preparing to resist in strength any attempted crossing of the river at this point. A German counterattack was launched yesterday in an effort to regain Castelfiorentino in the upper Elsa River Valley, and groups of snipers have still escaped detection in the eastern edges of this town, eight miles south of the junction of the Elsa and the Arno Rivers.

The strongest enemy defences of the entire river area appear to be massed between Pisa and the sea coast. At San Piero a Grado, three miles west of Pisa, and four miles in from the mouth of the river, a system of fortifications consisting of minefields, pillboxes, wire, anti-tank guns and ditches, machine gun nests and concrete road blocks has been built up. Causeways across the Arno have been blown up and the approachs cratered by demolitions. Sunken ships, pontoons holding underwater nets, and heavy iron bars driven into the river bottom in the shallower stretches effectively bloc the Arno where it enters the Ligurian Sea.

Historic Pisa itself does not seem to have suffered heavy damage, although three bridges across the Arno have been destroyed.

It is now apparent that the Germans have laid out their main defences north of Pisa, in the mountainous country just north of Pistoia, roughly 14 miles north of the main line of the Arno River. The Goth defences then follow the highest levels of the Apennines to Borgo San Lorenzo, 15 miles northeast of Florence, thence to Borgo Pace, just 13 miles north of 8th Army forces in Città di Castello, thence on eastward to the Adriatic north of Pesaro, some 37 miles northeast of Ancona. All the approaches to this lofty moutain line are upgrade, and mostly through a series of narrow defiles, which the enemy can be expected to defend with all his remaining resourses.

Poles and Italians Advance

Polish and Italian forces yesterday made gains of a mile or more in their drive up the Adriatic coast. Increasing enemy resistance slowed the momentum of their advances, which has now brought them to within three miles of Senigallia.

In the central sectors of the 8th Army front, patrols discovered German forces holding out in a monastery outside of Gubbio, and holding as hostages women and children who had fled to the religious institution for refuge. The Germans threatened to massacre these hapless civilians if attacked.

In the Arno valley southeast of Florence, gains of a few thousand yards were reported along the north bank

According to reports this afternoon, resistance still continues in the city, although no indication was given that any attempt had been made to cross the river into the main part of town. It is here, on the northwestern edge, that stands the famous campanile, world renowned as the leaning tower from which Galileo conducted his experiments which defined the law of gravitation.

Troops of the 8th Army yesterday captured the key Tiber Valley town of Città di Castello, after more than a week's heavy fighting, to thrust within 13 miles of one of the main passes through the enemy's formidable Goth Line.

Only after 8th Army tanks had smashed through the walls of houses to crush the last defenders, did the enemy relinquish this strategic town on the Tiber's banks, over 100 miles north of Rome. Located on a main highway leading through the Apennines to Pesaro on the Adriatic coast, Città di Castello in only 13 miles south of Borgo Pace, one of the key defense points of the enemy's mountain defenses defending the Po Valley and industrial north Italy.

After the capture of the Tiber town, 8th Army forces fanned out along the valley's eastern edges, where enemy resistance was reported to be weakening. It was in this sector that the German forces attempted to carry out their last disperate delaying tactics.

The woods and marshlands along the coast, which had been infested with enemy snipers and minefields, are now almost cleared.

STALIN ANNOUNCES FALL OF PSKOV

MOSCOW, July 23 — The capture of Pskov by troops of the 3rd Baltic Front was announced in a special order to Colonel General Maslennikov by Marshal Stalin tonight. The city was described in the order of the day as being a « powerful stronghold in the German defenses covering the road toward the southern regions of Estonia. ».

Pskov is the last city of pre-war Russia to be freed from the Germans. It was the scene of the Red Army's first victory against the Germans on February 26, 1918. This date is now the official birthday of the Red Army.

Standing guardian over the Latvian-Estonian border, Pskov barred the way to the direct road to Riga. Its fall will accelerate the general Soviet offensive in the Baltic and bring the full weight of three Russian army groups down on the northern defenses of East Prussia.

With the capture of Pskov and with Russian units reaching Lvov and Lublin, the Soviet summer offensive moved into its second month today with advances on virtually a continuous front from the Carpathian foothills in the south to the Finno-Russian frontier in the North.

(The German radio tonight reported that the Russians had made an outflanking move northwest past Lublin and added that « heavy fighting is now going on » in that sector.)

The official organ PRAVDA estimated that German losses in the first month of the summer campaign were a « good quarter of the German forces concentrated on the Soviet front. »

Correspondents said that the Red Army was moving forward so fast that the Germans were unable to carry out demolitions or to destroy their supplies. In many sectors, the Russians are making use of German supplies captured in their rapid advance.

For the first time German military reports say that fighting is going on in the area of Lublin, on the main road leading up to Warsaw 50 miles behind the river Bug. Correspondents point out that this big Russian move over the Bug has deeply outflanked both Brest-Litovsk and Lvov, key point of the German defences and a big communications center.

A German news agency said today that Russian spearheads have reached the city of Lvov. The German communique today admitted the pressure on both these towns and the German military spokesman says the battle of Lvov has assumed a very serious character.

Soviet troops fighting northwest of Sujjaervi, on the Karelian isthmus almost due north of Lake Ladoga, in the area of Lonkovaara, reached the state frontier which Finland established after the Russian-Finnish war in the winter of 1940. In addition to losing more of their dwindling weapons and supplies, two battalions of the 21st Finnish brigade were badly mauled.

A special communique issued last night said that on the night of July 22 the Soviet air force carried out a massed attack on the railway junctions at Bialystok.

A PRAVDA review estimates German losses since the beginning of the Soviet offensive at a good quarter of the German forces concentrated on the Soviet front.

ALLIES PUSH ON AS WEATHER CLEARS IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, July 23 — With a sharp improvement in the weather, Allied forces have resumed their push along the or less straight from Maltot through Etavaux to Saint Andre. Canadian troops have won control of half of the town of Troarn on the eastern tip of the Normandy front.

Two miles to the southwest of Troarn, Allied troops have taken the town of Emieville. A German news agency stated that the Allies have concentrated 1,000 tanks east of the Orne and says « All signs point to the fact that a new offensive by the 2nd Army is about to be launched. »

In support of our ground troops fuel dumps at Foret de Conches Messei and Chateau de Tortu were attacked by medium bombers early yesterday evening.

Escorted night bombers attacked rail lines at Bourth and military buildings near Vannes. Bridges near Brest and Cholet were hit by fighters and fighter bombers, and locomotives were attacked, tracks severed and trucks destroyed in the areas of Lorient, Chartres and Angers. Two of our aircraft are missing.

The first rest camp for Allied troops has been opened in Normandy, reported a British United Press Correspondent.

The rest camp has been started in a former hotel by the R.A.M.C. Since its opening men from the front lines have been streaming in and within an hour of their arrival enjoyed their first hot bath. They wear new uniforms, and have real English beer to drink. (PWB - BBC - Reuter)

CHURCHILL IN NORMANDY AGAIN

LONDON, July 23 — Prime Minister Churchill has made a second inspection tour of the Normandy front, it was announced tonight.

During his three-day visit he had several conferences with General Montgomery, the Allied commander-in-chief.

The Prime Minister was accompanied by General Ismay and other members of his personal staff. (PWB)

PROGRESS « SATISFACTORY » ON GUAM

PEARL HARBOUR, July 23 — « American troops are making satisfactory progress in both sectors on Guam, » states a communique issued here by Admiral Nimitz. Mount Alifan in the southern area has been captured, and in the north the roads from Agana to Pito are in Allied hands.

The Americans are enlarging their beach-heads in the face of enemy counter-attacks, during one of which the Japanese yesterday lost five tanks and nearly 300 dead. American reinforcements are pouring ashore, and marines, striking deep into the interior, are followed closely by forces of infantry. If the two American columns on Guam, last reported to be five miles apart, can effect a junction, the harbour and an important airfield will be cut off.

Recognising that the conquest of Guam would give the Allies another base from which to bomb the Philippines, the Japanese continue to fight back hard. All their counter-attacks so far have been repulsed.

Cabras Island, states the communique, is under Allied control, and about half of it has been occupied.

Following the attack on Guam and the taking of Saipan, further to the north, the U.S. Naval Secretary, James Forrestal, hinted last night that the time for big operations in the Pacific was approaching. He said that it has been « quite possible to strike at Japan's inner defences and bring the war to the enemy's doorstep sooner than was expected. »

CHINESE MAKE PROGRESS AT HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 23 — The Chinese are still holding out in the city of Hengyang, key railway centre in southern Hunan, and have made some progress in the outer defences, said the Chinese war communique issued here yesterday.

In addition to losing more of their dwindling weapons and supplies, two battalions of the 21st Finnish brigade were badly mauled.

A special communique issued last night said that on the night of July 22 the Soviet air force carried out a massed attack on the railway junctions at Bialystok.

A PRAVDA review estimates German losses since the beginning of the Soviet offensive at a good quarter of the German forces concentrated on the Soviet front.

ALLIES PUSH ON AS WEATHER CLEARS IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, July 23 — With a sharp improvement in the weather, Allied forces have resumed their push along the Normandy front, it was announced tonight.

British forces have turned back repeated counter-attacks in the Malmot area, and the town is now firmly held. The German salient pointing toward Caen, west of the Orne between Malmot and the river, has been eliminated.

American troops which crossed the Seves River have captured the village of Seves in the face of fierce German resistance and repeated counter-attacks. The village is now firmly held, it was announced. U. S. forces are now within two miles of Periers.

With the return of good weather, Allied aircraft early today resumed their attacks on enemy supply and communications lines. There were indications that the Germans had used the enforced lull of the past few days to bring up reinforcements.

Mosquitoes attacked targets in the Loire and Seine areas in the early hours of Sunday. Mauraders and Havocs later hit railway bridges and military installations west of Paris at La Croiselle, Evreux, Laigle, Ambriers, Argentun and Beaumont-sur-Sarthe.

The advance on Moltot followed a move by Canadians on the opposite side of the river into the village of Etavaux which lies in the westernmost bend of the Orne river, one mile northwest of Saint Andre-sur-Orne.

All Germans are now cleared from the east bank of the Orne down to this point and the Allied line runs more

CHURCHILL IN NORMANDY AGAIN

LONDON, July 23 — Prime Minister Churchill has made a second inspection tour of the Normandy front, it was announced tonight.

During his three-day visit he had several conferences with General Montgomery, the Allied commander-in-chief.

The Prime Minister was accompanied by General Ismay and other members of his personal staff. (PWB)

PROGRESS «SATISFACTORY» ON GUAM

PEARL HARBOUR, July 23 — «American troops are making satisfactory progress in both sectors on Guam,» states a communique issued here by Admiral Nimitz. Mount Alifan in the southern area has been captured, and in the north the roads from Agana to Pito are in Allied hands.

The Americans are enlarging their beach-heads in the face of enemy counter-attacks, during one of which the Japanese yesterday lost five tanks and nearly 300 dead. American reinforcements are pouring ashore, and marines, striking deep into the interior, are followed closely by forces of infantry. If the two American columns on Guam, last reported to be five miles apart, can effect a junction, the harbour and an important airfield will be cut off.

Recognising that the conquest of Guam would give the Allies another base from which to bomb the Philippines, the Japanese continue to fight back hard. All their counter-attacks so far have been repulsed.

Cabras Island, states the communique, is under Allied control, and about half of it has been occupied.

Following the attack on Guam and the taking of Saipan, further to the north, the U.S. Naval Secretary, James Forrestal, hinted last night that the time for big operations in the Pacific was approaching. He said that it has been «quite possible to strike at Japan's inner defences and bring the war to the enemy's doorstep sooner than was expected.»

CHINESE MAKE PROGRESS AT HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 23 — The Chinese are still holding out in the city of Hengyang, key railway centre in southern Hunan, and have made some progress in the outer defences, said the Chinese war communique issued here yesterday.

The city has now been besieged for almost a month, as the Japanese, in an effort to seal China off from American help, fight fiercely to break the defensive ring.

Associated Press quotes the Chinese High Command as saying that the Burma road between Lungling and Mangshis has now been blocked effectively, and that the Japanese garrison at Lungling are cut off from the east, north and south.

Further south, the main part of a Japanese column which had attempted to relieve the encircled garrison at Pingka, have completed their withdrawal into Mangshis, after suffering serious losses.

SMOKE SCREEN HIDES OIL TARGETS

ADVANCED AFHQ ITALY, July 23 — Although attacked by up to 750 heavy bombers yesterday, the great Romano-Americano oil refinery at Ploesti escaped without any vital refining installations being hit, due to a dense protective smoke screen, it was announced here today.

The Italy based bombers were forced to release their high explosives by the aid of instruments, and did succeed in hitting several of the large storage tanks in the vicinity, which blazed furiously and sent 15,000-foot columns of smoke into the air. Intense anti-aircraft fire was also employed to defend the big plant, once capable of produc-

60,958 GERMANS TAKEN IN NORMANDY

SHAEF, July 23 — A total of 60,958 German prisoners have been captured by British and American forces since the landings on Normandy, it was officially announced today.

The American forces have taken 50,549 prisoners and have buried 8,084 German dead.

On the British sector, 10,409 prisoners were taken and it was estimated that there were more than 53,000 German casualties in that area alone. (PWB - Reuter)

GERMAN AERODROMES ATTACKED

EASTERN COMMAND, U.S. STRATEGIC AIR FORCES HQ, July 23 — U. S. Air Force Mustangs and Lightnings, in the first all-fighter operation from Italian to Russian bases, attacked German aerodromes at Bazau and Zilistea, Rumania, it was announced today. The fighters destroyed 56 enemy planes in the operation.

The American fighters strafed the two aerodromes at Bazau and Zilistea, 30 and 35 miles, respectively, from Ploesti. They destroyed 41 planes on the ground and set fire to fuel dumps and other installations. Fifteen German fighters were shot down.

Only five American planes are reported missing.

CHENNAULT GIVES JAPS SIX MONTHS AFTER NAZI DEFEAT

CHUNGKING, July 23 — If Germany is beaten this year, the defeat of Japan will come within six months, Major General Chennault, commander of the 14th USAAF, said at his headquarters in China.

General Chennault said that the Japanese drive to seal off the inner defense zone in China by conquest of all the Hankow-Canton line would actually shorten the war, because of its suicidal aspects. (PWB)

RED FLEET SUCCESSES

MOSCOW, July 23 — The Soviet information bureau today issued a list of the German and other Axis ships sunk by the Red Fleet since the start of the Russo-German war.

These are: One cruiser, two armored coastal defence ships, 37 motor torpedo boats, 50 submarines, three mine layers, 129 mine sweepers, 137 patrol vessels, two monitors, 12 gunboats, 79 torpedo lauches, 288 cargo launches, 850 transports, 89 auxiliary vessels, 392 self propelling barges and 766 smaller vessels.

Anti aircraft fire from Russian ships and Fleet Air Arm planes have destroyed 6829 Axis aircraft.

RAF KNOCK DOWN FLYING BOMBS

LONDON, July 23 — RAF fighters and anti-aircraft defenses scored striking successes against German flying bombs over England after nightfall yesterday.

More of the raiders than usual were sent over but they were being blown out of the sky at the rate of three in five minutes.

COMMANDOS CAPTURE DODECANESE ISLAND

CAIRO, July 23 — Specially trained British and Greek shock troops have liquidated the enemy garrison of the island of Simi, in the Dodecanese group, southwest of Asia Minor, as result of a daring and successful raid.

Fifteen of the garrison were killed, and 150 taken prisoner. All military installations and equipment were destroyed. Allied losses were very few.

A number of heavily laden ships with troops and supplies approached the barren coastline of Simi about midnight. Unopposed landings were made in inky darkness but a crescent moon had topped the horizon when the invading force split into three separate parties and started to move forward to their assault position. There were no paths or tracks, and the whole countryside was strewn with boulders. Every man, in addition to his equipment, had to carry a load of ammunition, and one force had to climb 500 feet of rocks in a two-mile march.

Despite these difficulties they attacked at 0400, as it was known that the garrison was standing to during the night and relaxing in daylight. This strategy succeeded. The island's southern garrison was assailed with preliminary bombardment by mortars. Bewildered, they surrendered without offering resistance.

Commander Surrenders

The main attack was against German headquarters in an old castle in the center of the town of Simi. Here resistance was stronger, and not until after noon did the garrison surrender.

Heavy fire kept Allied troops at a distance during the morning. Meanwhile supply parties were toiling across the island with more ammunition.

Eventually emissaries from the attacking force went forward with prisoners and after a series of talks convinced the German commander that he had no alternative but surrender. It was explained that he was surrounded and that the rest of the island was in Allied hands. He surrendered, and the Allied conquest of the island was complete.

After dark the main body of the force evacuated, but a small patrol remained behind.

British commandos carried out the last previous raid on this island last November, when they damaged a power station and blew up six barges and an ammunition dump.

ALLIES START REPAIRS ON PORT OF ANCONA

ANCONA, July 23 — Allied engineers have already started in to repair the port facilities and public services in Ancona, where the Germans did a ruthless job of demolition and looting before being driven out.

U.N.N. correspondents today watched bulldozers and steam shovels levelling off quays and piling remnants of destroyed wharf buildings into craters. Gangs of men were busy on repairs; not a second is being lost in getting the harbor ready for use.

Huge gaps have been blown in all moles. The warehouse on Mole Vanvitelliana has been isolated from the land as the bridges leading to it have been destroyed. The fish market has been smashed and two huge oil storage tanks have been drilled with holes. Quaysides were piled high with the rubble of destroyed buildings.

Apart from rebuilding and repair, engineers must clear away sunken vessels. These include the king of Italy's private yacht which rests on the bottom. A light cruiser and two smaller steamers have also been capsized. The railway station and marshalling yards have been wrecked.

U.S. NAVY STRENGTH INCREASED

WASHINGTON, July 23 — In order to keep pace with the acceleration of operations against Japan, the strength of the United States Navy will be increased by 383,000 men by July 1, 1945, above its present authorized strength of 3,600,000, U. S. Secretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal announced yesterday.

The Navy reached its originally authorized strength this month, two months ahead of schedule.

Mr. Forrestal implied that the time for big operations was approaching and that «it may be possible to bring the war to the doors of the Japanese sooner than we expected,» the United Press reported.

The United Press stated that the planned increase is in enlisted personnel for the Navy alone and that no changes have been authorized in the Marine Corps or the Coast Guard. (PWB - OWI)

The water supply was destroyed, but there is no scarcity of water in the city, since supplies are available from fountains. Only emergency supplies of electric power are available.

The Allied Military Government has started the work of restoring public services and has the situation well under control.

Ancona had three radio stations but the Germans wrecked all three — two with mines and the third with hand grenades.

Many houses suffered during the fighting but the cathedral, which towers high over the city, is intact.

As was experienced at Arezzo, the Germans appear to have established a methodical system of looting, pillaging, and stealing everything they can. For some days before Ancona was liberated trucks left the city banked high with food and machinery. (PWB)

NO SYMPATHY FOR BEATEN GENERALS

LONDON, July 23 — Speaking today of the rift between the Nazi party and the older German generals, a BBC commentator said: «As far as we are concerned it does not matter who wins. We will go on with the job of defeating Germany utterly.»

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The commentator said that if the generals win in « the quibble » we may have peace sooner because their aim will be save what remains of the German army and preserve German soil from battle.

« It will be well to remember what happened in 1918, » he said. « You can read Ludendorf's memoirs. He was one of the German generals who recommended an appeal for an Armistice. While the Armistice was negotiated the beaten German armies would have been able to withdraw to the frontier, and if the Armistice had not been acceptable they could have fought on on a shorter front. Things did not go as planned. But the Germans got the Armistice before the army was defeated. The German people never felt the tide of battle on their own soil. To that extent in 1918 the Germans saved something of the Army's prestige. »

The commentator reminded listeners that the former American Under Secretary of State, Sumner Welles, last week warned British and Americans not to be tricked into sentimental thoughts about the German generals who look pathetic if they are beaten.

« They did not revolt because Hitler started this war, » he said. « Far from it. They revolted because he is losing the war in a way which would make another German war impossible. They know it is best to cut their losses and get out. That would make them gain time. »

BBC REPORTS HIMMLER « PURGE »

LONDON, July 23 — BBC, quoting a dispatch from Stockholm, said tonight that Himmler is conducting a purge throughout Germany which « far eclipses the massacre of June, 1934. According to the dispatch, Himmler's men are rounding up large numbers of civilian as well as military leaders charged with complicity in the plot against Hitler and the anti-Nazi revolt.

Earlier reports said that street-fighting was still going on in Berlin, and that disorders had broken out in Bremen, Stuttgart, Schweinfurt and other centers that have been subjected to heavy Allied air attacks. The SUNDAY CHRONICLE said that the commanding officers in those cities had mutinied.

The UNITED PRESS here today received a report from « a reliable private source » that an SS firing squad had executed Colonel General Fritz Fromm, former chief of the German home army who was replaced by Himmler after the attempt on Hitler's life.

Another anti-Nazi message was read today by a German officer over the Frankfurt station in behalf of the Commander of the Army Group of Resistance. The appeal was directed to « officers, soldiers and German people » and called on them to revolt against Hitlerism. (GGC)

HIMMLER ARRESTS 5,000 GERMAN OFFICERS

STOCKHOLM, July 23 — Over 5,000 German officers, many of them from trusted SS divisions, are reported to have been arrested on Himmler's orders in connection with the revolt against Hitler, stated despatches from Sweden today.

The reports stated that a powerful group of generals in Germany and the occupied countries had gone underground to carry on their struggle against Hitler. (PWB)

BBC SAYS HITLER IS WORRIED

LONDON, July 23 — Nazi propaganda claims that the revolt in Germany has completely collapsed are belied by all reports reaching the outside world from Germany, said the BBC today.

These reports indicate that not only are there continued disturbances in Germany today, said the broadcast, but that Hitler is worried about the attitude of the troops at the fighting fronts.

The broadcast quoted the OBSERVER'S Stockholm correspondent thus:

« If the German soldiers once knew that a revolt existed, supported by even a handful of generals, they would be only half calmed by the statements concerning liquidations. Three days have now elapsed but no new executions have been publicised. Many believe that this is because the front line troops would be bewildered if they knew the names of the men shot. »

Hans Fritsch, political director of the German radio, said in a home service broadcast last night, according to the BBC: « For once, we must concede our enemies right. A thing like this putsch and the attempt on the Fuehrer's life in the fifth year of the war cannot pass without its consequences. »

Fritsch reminded listeners of « the strict ban on their listening to foreign broadcasts. »

Goering's reference in his broadcast Thursday night to the setting up of an « alternative government » has been censored by Goebbels. A subsequent recorded version of his speech and the re-issue of its text to the German public omitted all mention of his reference to an « alternative government. » (PWB - Reuter)

GERMAN GENERALS VERSUS NAZIS

ROME, July 23 — From as early on as 1920 a certain section of the German General Staff had prepared for «the next war,» which was to make good the defeat of 1918. To the leading German generals the Nazis at first appeared as merely useful auxiliaries, who would arrange the partial military training of German youth and put down the free trades unions, the Socialist and Democratic parties and anyone else who might stand in the way of their preparations for another war.

It is said that when Hitler first demanded to be Chancellor in early 1932, old Hindenburg, the Reich President, indignantly suggested that the «Bohemian Corporal» could lick stamps with his, Hindenburg's, picture on them.

Nevertheless, when Hitler became Chancellor in the following year, partly through a series of intrigues among highly-placed generals and Junkers, the generals, without demur, swore an oath of loyalty to him as head of the German State. Soon, however, it became plain that a conflict for the control of the German armed forces was being fought out between the older generals of Prussian tradition, and the Nazis, backed by careerists and younger officers.

Lost Ground To Nazis

This conflict has continued from the time of the Nazi seizure of power until the present armed clash, with the older professional soldiers steadily losing ground to the Nazis. There were four outstanding stages in the battle: The retirement in 1938 of von Beck, the Chief of Staff, and von Fritsch, the German Army Commander-in-Chief; the retirement of von Brauchitsch and the replacement of von Rundstedt in December, 1941; the dismissal of Marshal von Bock and General von Halder in September, 1942; and the second dismissal of von Rundstedt and the present revolt.

General von Fritsch, when he was Commander-in-Chief of the Army in 1938 was known as a traditional Prussian officer of the old school openly voicing his contempt for the Brownshirts and other «Nazi rabble.» His dismissal in February 1938 and his replacement by the more pliable von Brauchitsch caused a minor sensation. He took part in the 1939 Polish campaign without holding a senior command, and was reported killed in action «in the front line» during the siege of Warsaw. The real circumstances of his death are a mystery.

Quarreled with Hitler

Field Marshal Heinrich von Brauchitsch, who is now 63, quarreled with Hitler, according to reliable stories, when the first attack on Russia was brought to a standstill late in 1941. Brauchitsch had opposed Hitler's attempt to conquer Leningrad, Moscow and the Caucasus in a single gigantic campaign, and when he realised that Moscow could not be taken, councelled a retreat to shorter winter lines.

Hitler was vehemently against this, dismissed the Marshal in early December of that year, and took over command himself. Since this dismissal, little of note has been heard of Brauchitsch.

Sixty-nine-year-old Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt has for some time been regarded as senior member of the old guard in the officers corps, and was considered in his time to be a brilliant strategist. In 1941 he commanded the German Army Group South, which in four months swept through the Ukraine and from the Polish Bug to Rostov.

Curious Communique

Apparently the Group outran its strength, for late in November 1941, Generaloberst von Kleist's army evacuated Rostov, and a curious communique was put out, stating that the retirement had been effected in order better to punish the Rostov inhabitants for their impertinence in resisting the Germans.

In a few days, however, it was obvious that the Germans had been thrown out by a successful Russian counter-offensive, and in December 1941, Hitler relieved Rundstedt of his Russian command, giving him the then more inactive and less important post of commander-in-chief of German forces in France.

In March this year he became commander of the German anti-invasion forces in the west, over the more-publicised Rommel, after a violent quarrel with whom, it is said, he was dismissed 48 days later. By tradition and training Rundstedt is a man who would always keep apart from the Nazis, and neutral sources have suggested him as likely to lead a revolt of Right Wing generals against Hitler. His name is probably less well known to the younger, Nazi-educated [illegible] officers corps, among whom it would reported retired on health grounds, but other reports speak of his dismissal.

Generaloberst Franz Halder is a 60-year-old Bavarian, who became chief of staff in February 1938 as successor to the conservative Prussian Beck, whose execution has just been announced. He has been highly regarded as a scientific professional soldier and was for some time called «the Ludendorff of the German Army,» although he is probably less well know to the German general public. LIBERATED ITALY

JEWS GIVE THANKS IN ROME

ROME, July 23 — The world heard tonight by radio the first Jewish thanksgiving service held in liberated Europe. More than 4,000 Jews of Rome crowded into the beautiful Grand Synagogue on the banks of the Tiber, the largest synagogue in Italy, to give thanks to the Allied armies who liberated them.

The service was broadcast throughout the world as it came from the synagogue altar. The huge organ played songs of thanksgiving and the Hebrew cantor sang the chant of thanks.

For this special occasion, the service, held during Tishobou the traditional period of nine days mourning over the ancient destruction of the temple in Jerusalem by the Roman legions of Titus, was transformed into a period of joy and celebration.

Captain Aaron Paperman, of Baltimore, Maryland, Jewish chaplain of the 5th Army, told the congregation, which included Colonel Charles Poletti, AMG Regional Commissioner for the Rome Area, and many American and British officers: «Centuries ago pagan Rome tolled the apparent death knell of the Jewish people. Today, Christian Rome, the first capital of Europe to be liberated, sounds the tone of hope and courage for the survival of the Jewish people.»

Chaplain Paperman read a message from General Mark W. Clark, commanding General of the 5th Army, to the congregation it stated:

«This is a proud day for the 5th Army, for the Jewish people and for the free world. For us who are fighting this bitter struggle, today's services represent the fruit of what we are fighting for, the promise of what the United Nations will bring to a liberated world.

Humbled and Beaten

«Under the Fascist and Nazi reign of terror, the Jews in Italy were humbled and beaten, driven into hiding, forbidden to worship according to their beliefs and traditions. Rome little more than a month ago was a city under the heel of a ruthless foreign master and enemy of liberty. Today — liberated by the 5th Army — Rome is a free city, and her people are free to worship as they choose. Freedom of religion, perhaps the greatest of the freedoms, has been restored to the Eternal City. The world has cause to be thankful.»

Rabbi Israele Zolli, Grand Rabbi of Rome, spoke to the world in English: «The brave American soldiers, like all the armies of the Allied nations, are the expression and the incarnation in our midst of the ideals of liberty and justice... You fight heroically and victoriously for the ideals of which we are the martyrs.

Rabbi Zolli said «For the men and peoples of the world who today fight against the tyranny of dictatorship there is applicable the proverb of the wise Palestinean doctors, All your actions shall be aimed toward heaven.»

The Rabbi added: «The heroic actions of the Allied nations, even though accomplished in a time of war, enclose the light of the peace to come. Even in the obscure times of war, you sacrificed, prepared and foresaw the coming light of new and better times — days that will conform with the Divine will.» (PWB)

the Brownshirts and other Nazi bodies. The February 1938 and his replacement by the more pliable von Brauchitsch caused a minor sensation. He took part in the 1939 Polish campaign without holding a senior command, and was reported killed in action « in the front line » during the siege of Warsaw. The real circumstances of his death are a mystery.

Quarreled with Hitler

Field Marshal Heinrich von Brauchitsch, who is now 63, quarreled with Hitler, according to reliable stories, when the first attack on Russia was brought to a standstill late in 1941. Brauchitsch had opposed Hitler's attempt to conquer Leningrad, Moscow and the Caucasus in a single gigantic campaign, and when he realised that Moscow could not be taken, councelled a retreat to shorter winter lines.

Hitler was vehemently against this, dismissed the Marshal in early December of that year, and took over command himself. Since this dismissal, little of note has been heard of Brauchitsch.

Sixty-nine-year-old Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt has for some time been regarded as senior member of the old guard in the officers corps, and was considered in his time to be a brilliant strategist. In 1941 he commanded the German Army Group South, which in four months swept through the Ukraine and from the Polish Bug to Rostov.

Curious Communique

Apparently the Group outran its strength, for late in November 1941, Generaloberst von Kleist's army evacuated Rostov, and a curious communique was put out, stating that the retirement had been effected in order better to punish the Rostov inhabitants for their impertinence in resisting the Germans.

In a few days, however, it was obvious that the Germans had been thrown out by a successful Russian counter-offensive, and in December 1941, Hitler relieved Rundstedt of his Russian command, giving him the then more inactive and less important post of commander-in-chief of German forces in France.

In March this year he became commander of the German anti-invasion forces in the west, over the more-publicised Rommel, after a violent quarrel with whom, it is said, he was dismissed 48 days later. By tradition and training Rundstedt is a man who would always keep apart from the Nazis, and neutral sources have suggested him as likely to lead a revolt of Right Wing generals against Hitler. His name is probably less well known to the younger, Nazi-educated Germans than to the officers corps, among whom it would carry weight.

Field Marshal Wilhelm Ritter von Leeb, now 63 years old, in 1941 commanded the German Army Group North advancing on Leningrad. He failed to continue the advance to the centre of the city, and in January 1942 was retired. He is a Bavarian Catholic, like von Stauffenberg, who made the attempt on Hitler's life. Little is known of his political activities.

Nazi Favourite

Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, who is 64, commanded the German march into Austria in 1938 and the unsuccessful attack on Moscow in 1941. He is reliably reported to have quarrelled with Hitler when, in 1942, as commander of the German Army Group South, Bock considered it impossible to take both Stalingrad and the Caucasus and advised a retreat and concentration of forces.

The Chief of Staff Generaloberst Franz Halder took the same stand. Hitler dismissed them both, and continued the double attack which ended in disaster.

Bock was replaced by von Kleist, and Halder by Kurt Zeitzler, who is now 51. In the present purge, Zeitzler, formerly regarded as a Nazi favourite, has been officially

For this special occasion, the service, held during Tishobou the traditional period of nine days mourning over the ancient destruction of the temple in Jerusalem by the Roman legions of Titus, was transformed into a period of joy and celebration.

Captain Aaron Paperman, of Baltimore, Maryland, Jewish chaplain of the 5th Army, told the congregation, which included Colonel Charles Poletti, AMG Regional Commissioner for the Rome Area, and many American and British officers: « Centuries ago pagan Rome tolled the apparent death knell of the Jewish people. Today, Christian Rome, the first capital of Europe to be liberated, sounds the tone of hope and courage for the survival of the Jewish people. »

Chaplain Paperman read a message from General Mark W. Clark, commanding General of the 5th Army, to the congregation it stated:

« This is a proud day for the 5th Army, for the Jewish people and for the free world. For us who are fighting this bitter struggle, today's services represent the fruit of what we are fighting for, the promise of what the United Nations will bring to a liberated world.

UNITED NATIONS

FINAL DRAFT OF MONETARY AGREEMENT ISSUED

BRETTON WOODS, July 23 — The final draft of the world's first agreement to stabilise currencies in foreign trade, the outcome of the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference which has been in session since July 1, was issued here last night. The prime object of the fund is to « promote international monetary cooperation through a permanent institution which provides machinery for consultation and collaboration on international monetary problems. »

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The par value of the currency of each member is to be expressed in terms of gold as the common denominator, or in terms of United States dollars « of weight and fineness in effect on July 1, 1944. »

Each member undertakes to collaborate with the fund to promote exchange stability, to maintain orderly exchange agreement with other members, and avoid competitive exchange alterations. The fund provides machinery for changing the par value of members currency only on the members proposal and after consultation with the fund.

Machinery is provided for regulating increases in par values and for sanctioning members who make unauthorised changes in par values. Part of the fund's operation is a system designed to discourage continuing unbalanced trends of currency flowing into the fund. One article makes it impossible for a member to use the fund's resources to meet a large or sustained outflow of capital. Members are required not to engage in transactions with non-member nations which would be contrary to the agreement or purposes of the fund.

Transitional Period

Dealing with the « transitional period », the agreement provides that the fund is not intended to provide facilities for relief or reconstruction, or to deal with international indebtedness growing out of the war. Members have the right to withdraw from the fund at any time by giving notice in writing.

In a speech to the final plenary session of the Conference, the U.S. Secretary of the Treasury and President of the Bretton Woods Conference, Mr. Henry Morgenthau, said, « We came here to work out methods which would do away with economic evils, competitive currency devaluation and the destructive impediments to trade which preceeded the present war. We have succeeded in that effort...

« The result will be of vital importance to everyone in every country. It will help determine whether or not people have jobs and the amount of money they are to find in their weekly pay envelope. » (PWB - Reuter)

ROOSEVELT MESSAGE TO MONETARY CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, July 23 — President Roosevelt sent a message of congratulation on the final draft of the world's first agreement to stabilize currency in foreign trade to U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., saying:

« The conference has prepared two further foundation stones for the structure of lasting peace and security. The main objective of the conference, at which 44 nations were represented, is to promote international monetary cooperation through a permanent international body, a body with powers and resources adequate to perform the tasks assigned to it. »

At the opening of the plenary sessions of the conference, Mr. Morgenthau again announced the decision of the Soviet government to increase its subscription to the bank. He said: « By this step, the Soviet Union has carried even further its collaboration toward the success of this conference and toward assuring international collaboration in solving the world's post-war problems.

« There exists a curious notion that the protection of national interests and development of international cooperation are conflicting philosophies — that somehow men from different nations cannot work together without sacrificing the interest of their particular nation. I am perfectly certain that no delegate to this conference lost sight of the particular national interest he was sent to represent. The American delegation has at all times been conscious of its primary obligation — the protection of American interests.

« Yet none of us has found any incompatability between and Bayonne with numerous loopings and doublings back. Three attempts, in one instance, were made to get through to Lyon.

One traveller described the journey as a « kind of triumphal progress for at every station the local inhabitants would come forward with food they could ill spare and with flowers. »

Smashed engines and trucks were passed all along the line. One woman exchange civilian said: « all the way through we felt we were under the protection of the "Maquis". Whenever a smoke signal exploded and we came to a stop, we knew that Frenchmen had put it there as a warning of broken rails ahead. » (PWB - Reuter)

BRITISH EXCHANGE CIVILIANS ARRIVE IN LISBON

LISBON, July 23 — The first trainload of the 1,000 British civilian Exchange internees from camps in Germany and France reached Lisbon today after an adventurous journey across Axis-held Europe, Reuter correspondent Douglas Brown reported. There were 292 men, women and children in a train, which took two weeks to complete a three-day journey.

The Germans used the train as a shield. It was usually accompanied by troop and munition trains, and whenever the train had to wait while the line ahead was repaired, it was shunted on a vital bridge or near a war factory.

The fantastic route the train took was from Langres, Beaune, Nevers, Bourges, Roanne, Saint Etienne, Lyon, Montelimar, Orange, Avignon, Nimes, Montpellier, Toulouse

Electrical power plants, either railway or industrial, have also been damaged along the Riviera. Enemy transport along the highways of Liguria has become hazardous.

German and Fascists have suffered heavy losses in Val Taleggio.

A group of Patriots carried out successful operations in the zone of Borgotaro, province of Parma, keeping the village under their control.

In Tuscany, the Marches and in Emilia, interference with the Germans' lines of communications continues. In many places recently liberated, the frontal attack of Anglo-American forces has been accompanied by armed insurrections on the part of Patriots acting behind the enemy lines.

GERMAN

FROM THE FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 23 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, bitter fighting went on yesterday for the possession of some villages to the south of Caen, which changed several times and finally remained in our hands. During attacks to the southwest of Caen, the enemy succeeded in making a local breach in our lines which was sealed up.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The 21st Tank Division, under the command of Major General Fauchtinger, which has distinguished itself again and again in the invasion battle has done superbly once more during the fighting of the last few days.

In southeastern France, 268 terrorists were encounted for in an area which was strongly bandit infested.

Heavy V-1 retaliation fire continues to be directed against the greater area of London.

In Italy the enemy made many local attacks yesterday as well which were repelled. At some sectors the fighting was still going on in the evening hours.

In the east, the battle for defence continues to rage with great fury. In the region of Lemberg spearheads of the attacking enemy reached the eastern outskirts of the town. Further to the northwest, mechanized forces of the Soviets are striking forwards towards the San, and to the west of the Upper Bug, the enemy is pressing forward to the area of Lublin. Our divisions are offering stiff resistance to the advancing enemy at all points.

Violent fighting is also going on between Brest-Litovsk and Grodno.

Numerous attacks of the Soviets were repelled and enemy forces which had penetrated into the German lines were brought to a halt. To the northwest of Grodno, the enemy was forced back to the east by counter-attacks. To the northeast of Kovno, our bravely fighting grenadiers brought the Soviets to a halt.

Between Dvinsk and Lake Peipus, strong enemy infantry and tank forces were stopped in the main, 50 Soviet tanks were destroyed. In two places where the German front has been breached, violent fighting is still in progress.

After the demolitions of all military objects, the ruins of Ostrov and Pskov were evacuated.

German battle plane squadrons took effective part in the ground fighting and inflicted high losses in men and material on the Soviets; 59 enemy aircraft were shot down. During the night, German bombers attacked the railway station of Molodeczno; large fires were started and explosions were observed.

for in an area which was strongly bandit infested.

Heavy V-1 retaliation fire continues to be directed against the greater area of London.

In Italy the enemy made many local attacks yesterday as well which were repelled. At some sectors the fighting was still going on in the evening hours.

In the east, the battle for defence continues to rage with great fury. In the region of Lemberg spearheads of the attacking enemy reached the eastern outskirts of the town. Further to the northwest, mechanized forces of the Soviets are striking forwards towards the San, and to the west of the Upper Bug, the enemy is pressing forward to the area of Lublin. Our divisions are offering stiff resistance to the advancing enemy at all points.

Violent fighting is also going on between Brest-Litovsk and Grodno.

OSTROV CAPTURED BY RED ARMY

MOSCOW, July 21 — In a special order of the day to General Maslennikov, Marshal Stalin announced the capture of the vital road and rail center of Ostrov, main point of routes leading into Latvia and Estonia.

Troops of the 3rd Baltic Front captured this powerful German stronghold controlling roads into the Baltic states by a skillful outflanking maneuver during their offensive which was first announced only 48 hours ago. Ostrov is about 10 miles east of the Latvian border, and about 25 miles southeast of the nearest point on the Estonian frontier.

In Lithuania, General Bagramyan's push around the flank of the German fortress of Dvinsk has made new and important progress. More than 30 towns were taken, including the railway stations of Panumenelis and Klapurishkis, which are 50 and 60 miles, respectively, west of Dvinsk, and are 60 miles inside Lithuania. The capture of these rail stations cuts the rail line to Dvinsk from Memel, thereby cuts off the most direct communication between Germany and von Lindemann's northern army group. Supplies to the German Army in that region will now have to go on over bridgeheads and captured the big village of Krystynopol on the western bank, and also took the town of Sokal.

North of Brest-Litovsk the advance toward Bialystok continues and the town of Gordok, 20 miles east of the city, was taken after its garrison of one battalion was wiped out.

There is no news from Russian sources about General Chernyakovsky's sweep toward East Prussia, but German reports speak of fighting only seven miles from the frontier.

According to reports from Ankara, the Germans are preparing to evacuate the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas. A BBC broadcast said that the move was a result of a Russian request which made such evacuation a condition for the maintenance of Soviet-Bulgarian relations.

Reuter reported that Russian airmen sank a 3,500-ton German supply ship in the Gulf of Finland.

5TH ARMY PATROLS PROBING IN PISA AREA
POLES CROSS ESINO ON 15-MILE FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY July 21 — With American forces of the 5th Army within less than six miles of historic Pisa, and confronted with heavy enemy artillery fire against both forward elements and the captured port of Leghorn, the Allied Armies in Italy today reported «one of the quietest 24-hour periods» since the present offensive began.

Enemy resistance was still being encountered north of Highway 67, leading into Leghorn from Florence, where a handful of German strongpoints were holding out between the Antifosseto Canal and the Arno River. At least one 5th Army patrol crossed the Arno River Wednesday night, and others were engaged in mopping up small enemy sniper parties and isolated pockets of resistance. Enemy patrols were also active, and one party made its way into the village of Cascina, eight miles southeast of Pisa, and on the Arno's southern banks. Pillboxes and anti-tank guns have been constructed by the enemy to guard all shallow spots along the Arno, where the stream might be forded.

On the Adriatic coast, however, Polish troops crossed the Esino River north of Ancona along a 15-mile front, continuing their rapid pursuit of withdrawing German forces. Leading elements of the Polish forces were nearing the towns of Montemarciano, Gabella, Monte San Vito, and Morro d'Alba, all north of the stream, while troops of the Corps of Italian Liberation had cut the important lateral Highway 67 and pushed beyond Iesi, 10 miles in from the coast.

On the 8th Army front, only patrol action marked the stubborn fighting in the upper Tiber Valey, although gains of three miles or more were made in the Arezzo sector.

With clearing weather, 5th Army engineers began a survey of damage effected by the retreating Germans in the great port of Leghorn. From preliminary reports, it is apparent that the possibility of restoring the port is not yet a certainty. The enemy methodically destroyed every

The capture of these rail stations cuts the rail line to Dvinsk from Memel, thereby cuts off the most direct communication between Germany and von Lindemann's northern army group. Supplies to the German Army in that region will now have to go on a roundabout route through Riga.

In the southern sector of the Russian front, the Germans are throwing up barricades in the northern outskirts of Lvov, as Marshal Koniev's troops batter their way closer to the city, a Reuter report stated. The Red Army is moving through intense heat over roads turned into quagmires by several days of rain.

They are getting an enthusiastic reception from Ukrainians and Poles alike. A New York TIMES correspondent wrote that Poles surround advance tank units and ask how they can join the Red Army.

One wing of General Rokossovsky's army is closing in on the German fortress of Brest-Litovsk, another gateway to the west. While some columns are in sight of the city from the north, others are sweeping in from the east, where they have been clearing the Pripet Marshes.

Many prisoners were taken when the Red Army captured the city of Kobryn, 27 miles east of Brest-Litovsk, and a big concentration of locomotives and freight cars were captured.

The Red Army opened an artillery barrage across the river Bug, the starting point of the German offensive against Russia in 1941, at a new point south of Brest-Litovsk. Pontoons and bridge-building units are now moving up the river after Marshal Rokossovsky's swift advance from Kovel.

The Nazis made strenuous efforts to check the Russians at the Bug, but they were insufficient. The Red Army threw

5TH ARMY PATROLS PROBING IN PISA AREA

POLES CROSS ESINO ON 15-MILE FRONT

With clearing weather, 5th Army engineers began a survey of damage effected by the retreating Germans in the great port of Leghorn. From preliminary reports, it is apparent that the possibility of restoring the port is not yet a certainty. The enemy methodically destroyed every potentially valuable facility in the harbor before withdrawing, and has sunk 16 ships in the fairways of the two entrances to the inner port. The quays themselves have been blown up by demolition charges set every few feet along their length, and must be completely rebuilt before they can be utilized, it was said.

Not a single one of 35 big power cranes and the 21 warehouses around the harbor escaped the enemy's

PLOT LASTED SIX HOURS, SAYS BERLIN

LONDON, July 21 — The German news agency said tonight that «it is officially announced in Berlin that the plot lasted no more than six hours, from the moment the attempt was made to when the last conspirator was detained. Not a single drop of blood, except that of the traitors, has been spilled.»

The report failed to explain how the death of one member of Hitler's entourage, announced in the original statement, came about without the spilling of «innocent» blood.

systematic devastation. The approaches to the harbor, and the port area itself, have been sown with mines, and bridges across the waterways have been demolished.

The enemy still has clear observation of the port from the 3,000 foot-high Monte Pisano, north of the Arno and between Pisa and Lucca. It is from the slopes of this mountain mass that the heavy German guns are carrying out harassing fire on the city. (PMB - PRO)

NAZIS HOLD 232 ITALIANS AS HOSTAGES

WITH 8TH ARMY NEAR GUBBIO, ITALY, July 21 — Robert Vermillion, United Press war correspondent, said in a dispatch from this front that German troops are holding a group of 232 Italian refugees, including 70 children, as hostages in a monastery near here to insure the Nazis' safety from Allied troops.

A priest of the monastery, which is atop Monte Ingino, served as a message bearer, and said that the helpless refugees are kneeling almost constantly in prayer while, 600 metres below, British troops are withholding their fire. In the meantime, the fanatical group of Nazis in the monastery are firing indiscriminately at the Allied troops.

The message brought from the Germans to the British troops read: "We'll defend this position to the last man, and will see to it that the civilians die with us." (PWB-UP)

RUSSIANS OF GERMAN DIVISION DESERT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 21 — The German 162 Enfrantry Division, a so-called "Russian Legionary" division of the German Army, now opposing the 5th Army near Pisa, lost many of its soldiers in Yugoslavia because they deserted to join up with the Partisans, a captured enemy document revealed.

The document, written in Russian and addressed to the troops of the 303d Regiment of the division, by the regimental commander, related an incident last February, when the division was in Yugoslavia, in which the Legionaries, mostly Kalmaks, killed their German non-commissioned Officers and passed over to the Partisan lines. The commander appealed to the troops to report such "traitors and disturbers of orders." (PWB-PRO)

HEAVIES HIT TARGETS IN SUDETENLAND

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 21 — Up to 500 heavy American bombers of the 15th Allied Air Force crossed the Alps today to hit targets in the Sudetenland, 125 miles south of Berlin.

Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by long-range Mustangs and Lightnings, bombed targets in Brux. A heavy smoke screen was used by the enemy to cover the targets, which were not identified in the communique. Intense flak and some enemy fighters were encountered.

The raid represented a round-trip of 1,400 miles.

118,000 Tons of Bombs

Italy-based bombers have dropped 118,000 tons of bombs on enemy targets in the Mediterranean theatre during the past 6 1/2 months, it was announced today.

The biggest tonnage dropped on a single target was at Ploesti, Germany's number one oil producing center, which received 8,000 tons in 12 attacks. (PWB - PRO)

17 Enemy Fighters Downed

It is a vital road junction which the Germans fought to the last man to hold. They tried to pull up reserves of infantry supported by armor, but the violence of the Allied attack gave Rommel no time to line up his reserves before Allied tanks were crunching over the cobblestones of the main street.

The first attack was made yesterday by Canadians, who were almost choked with dust. In the course of the attack, rain started to fall and has been falling ever since, coating the whole area with dough-like mud, the correspondent added.

The Canadians fought their way in late yesterday afternoon, but retired about a mile north last night in face of the heaviest counter-attack yet launched by the Germans south of Caen. Air support was out of the question, and even artillery was unable to provide a heavy barrage.

The village is hardly more than a cluster of houses, but it stands on high ground which commands German positions farther south. The Germans apparently intended to hold the feature at all costs, and snipers and machine guns still infest the wheatfields.

Canadian troops advanced over a mile toward St. Martin de Fontenay, five miles south of Caen beyond St. Andre sur Orne. South of the Caumont-Tilly road, British units advanced 1,000 yards. In spite of the unfavorable weather, the Allied line has steadily pushed further ahead from Caen in the past 24 hours.

It is now eight miles from Caen, north of Troarn, six miles southeast along the road to Mezidon and five miles to the south near Veriers.

Allied troops now hold the front firmly along the Orne from Caen to Saint Andre. The deepest penetration to the south of Caen is at a point 1,000 yards west of the village of Veriers.

North of Troarn, the line has pushed forward to a point about 1,000 yards west of Bures to give Montgomery's men the best positions in this area since D-day. They are now dangerously flanking Bois de Bavant, which is strongly held by Germans.

A Reuter correspondent, describing the battle for Troarn, vital key to the valley of the River Dives and the ground to the west, said: "German Tiger tanks rushed out to meet British armored spearheads which broke through to the station, but advancing Allied tanks evaded battle to sweep on to the dominating high ground south of the town which they still hold firmly."

One of the main links in the anti-tank screen has been over-run with the capture of Frenouville, and today immensity of the battle has decreased with the Allies consolidating and strengthening their grip on the 30 square miles they have already won since the start of the assault.

The new German infantry division, identified on the battlefield as the 272nd, has come from a long way east, under von Kluge's command, but it is unlikely that it has yet been fully committed to battle.

Canadian infantry have put up a particularly excellent performance, it was reported here today, by pushing out of Faubourg de Vaucelles to Fleurs.

Canadian troops have also seized the dominating hill 67, and have forced the Germans to abandon Maltot, on the opposite bank of the Orne, although the village has not yet been occupied by Allied troops.

To the west of Caen, the village of Noyers, scene of much bitter fighting, has been captured, along with the neighbouring village of Monts. Fighting continues in Evrecy and Bougy. The capture of Granville now gives Montgomery control of the Caen-Caumont road.

On the western sector of the front, American troops advancing down the road from Carentan have captured the village of Raids, 3 1/2 miles northeast of Periers. General

17 Enemy Fighters Downed

Italy based heavy bombers and their escorts shot down 17 enemy fighters yesterday in their third consecutive day's attack on targets in southern Germany.

Good results were reported in the assault on tank motor works at Friedrichshaten, and at airfields nearby and in the Munich area.

Tactical Air Force planes bombed at least 11 road and rail bridges in northern Italy, and destroyed 25 freight cars and damaged 50 others in attacks on rail lines and sidings. Gun positions, motor transport, ammunition dumps, and bridges and rails were also hit in the battle area.

RAF Wellingtons, in a night attack in the Adriatic struck an enemy destroyer off Porto Garibaldi, and started fires among harbour installations in the same area. Other shipping was attacked off the Yugoslav coast, and fighters shot up transport columns in Yugoslavia.

In these operations, 13 heavy bombers and two other aircraft are missing.

ADVANCE FROM CAEN IN ALL DIRECTIONS CANADIANS RETAKE TROARN

SHAEF, July 21 — In mud so deep that they repeatedly slipped and fell as they pressed forward, Canadian troops made their second assault in 24 hours to recapture the tactically important village of Bourguebus, five miles southeast of Caen, reported a «Reuter» correspondent.

advanced 1,000 yards. In spite of the unfavorable weather, the Allied line has steadily pushed further ahead from Caen in the past 24 hours.

On the western sector of the front, American troops advancing down the road from Carentan have captured the village of Raids, 3 1/2 miles northeast of Periers. General Bradley's troops have also occupied the village of Seves, and have straightened out their line.

Dispatches from this sector stated that the Germans are still pouring artillery and mortar shells into Saint Lô from the high ground to the south.

American patrols near the coast have crossed the Ay River at several points in the vicinity of Lessay.

A Reuter correspondent stated that, seizing the advantage of comparative respite from Allied air attack provided by bad weather yesterday, German road and rail reinforcements are swarming along all routes from the east and southeast towards the hard-pressed Orne battlefront.

Long convoys with dimmed headlights were seen by Mosquito intruders last night. All indications were that Rommel is taking big risks to build up the 25 divisions which he has already packed in against General Montgomery, and last night Air Chief Marshal Harris dispatched a powerful striking fleet of four-engined heavies to hit Courtrai, north of Lille, one of the biggest traffic bottlenecks between the low countries and the battlefield.

Bombers defied the bad weather to strike marshalling yards, and got excellent results. Mosquitos were responsible for starting fires among long motor convoys north of Paris. Others flew over Seine pontoons, and harassed other reinforcements crossing to the west.

Near Amiens, two trains loaded with enemy tanks were effectively bombed by fighter bombers. The Allied planes damaged a bridge over the Somme, and destroyed railroad rolling stock at Abancourt and Sable sur Sarthe, northeast of Angers. A highway bridge at Gisors was attacked, and rail lines were cut at several places north of Laval and at Le Mans.

Light bombers, with fighter escort, hit the rail center of Chaulnes, near Amiens, and destroyed much rolling stock.

Coastal aircraft attacked enemy surface craft in the Channel. One enemy aircraft was shot down near St. Quentin. Two of our fighters are missing.

LARGEST FORCE OF 8TH USAAF HITS REICH

LONDON, July 21 — The largest number of 8th USAAF planes to take to the air simultaneously — 1,200 bombers escorted by nearly 800 fighters — today flew over Germany, USAAF headquarters announced this evening.

The targets attacked were an aircraft assembly plant at Regensburg, ball bearing factories at Schweinfurt and Eveisbach, and a number of other targets in southern Germany.

The Air Ministry reported that RAF bombers dropped more than 4,500 tons of bombs on objectives in Germany, Belgium, and France during yesterday afternoon and night. The bombing included strategic attacks on flying bomb installations and German industries and railway yards in Belgium. Two of the largest synthetic oil concerns still working in the Ruhr, at Homberg and Bottrop, were attacked.

The Associated Press said today within the last four days, Germany and objectives on her immediate borders have been hit by Allied air armadas totalling more than 10,000 planes.

In daylight yesterday, medium forces of heavy bombers struck at a number of targets in south Germany, including an aircraft components factory and an aerodrome at Friedrichshafen, and another airfield at Memmingen, south of Munich. These bombers flew from bases in Italy. Tactical aircraft of MAAF attacked enemy supply lines and other objectives in the north of Italy and over the battle area. Fighters were engaged in offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia. In these operations 17 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 15 Allied planes did not return to their bases. MAAF flew about 1,400 sorties.

Yesterday morning, over 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF, with an escort of hundreds of Lightnings, struck at the Leipzig area. Their targets included the aero-engine factories at Dessau, the ballbearing factory at Leipzig, Messerschmidt assembly plants at Mockau and Gotha, air component and motor transport factories at Russelsheim, and oil plants at Merseburg and Lutzkendorf.

The Germans continued their flying bomb attacks on London and the southern English counties during the night and in daylight today. Numbers of the projectiles were shot down over the Channel last night by RAF fighters and AA artillery fire. Some that landed in the target areas caused damage and a few casualties. In one district of southern England a number of persons were sent to hospital after being rescued from houses wrecked by flying bombs.

"RHINO FERRY" IN NORMANDY LANDINGS

LONDON, July 21 — Headquarters of the U. S. Naval Forces in Europe announced that the "rhino ferry" was one of the most valuable innovations used by the Allies in the Normandy landings. It was developed by the Engineer Corps of the U. S. Navy.

The "rhino," a self-propelled barge, is made up of a number of the navy's prefabricated pontoons, which were used in ferrying tanks, guns, and other war material the Ships and carrier-based planes carried out the bombardment, and many shore defenses had been knocked out when the troops arrived on the beaches.

The landings are being directed by Rear Admiral Connelly, who commanded the amphibious forces in the Sicily and Salerno landings. (PWB - BBC)

JAP PACIFIC BASES ATTACKED

PEARL HARBOR, July 21 — Admiral Chester Nimitz announced yesterday in a communique that American heavy bombers had carried out a successful attack on enemy installations and shipping in the Bonin Island, less than 300 miles from the Japanese mainland.

The communique said that, in addition to damaging enemy shore installations at Chichi Jima and Haha, the American bombers either destroyed or damaged four Japanese coastal vessels, one cargo ship, and 11 seaplanes.

Meanwhile, successful aerial attacks were carried out on other Japanese bases in the Pacific.

It was also announced that on July 18, Army Liberators of the 7th AAF carried out a successful attack on the Japanese naval base of Dublon, in the Truk atoll. Seven American planes were damaged in this raid, but they all returned to their bases safely.

Other American aerial units carried on raids on enemy installations in the Marshall Islands.

General Douglas MacArthur's communique, issued from the advance Allied Headquarters in New Guinea, announced today that Allied ground forces carried out a series of counter-attacks which offset Japanese attempts to penetrate the southern flank of the Allied line.

American troops fought hard and successfully to hold their line along the river, about 15 miles east of the Aitape airstrips. Small Japanese groups which crossed the river did considerable sniping in the dense foliage, but they are being steadily mopped up by American forces, the communique added.

Thirty-four tons of bombs were dropped on the harbor areas of Rabaul. In New Ireland, U. S. planes attacked coastal targets.

Allied medium bombers attacked enemy installations in the Dili township of Timor, and also harbor shipping there, sinking a small freighter and damaging a larger one.

In the Tanimbar Islands, Allied patrol planes bombed the Selaroe airdrome. (PWB - Reuter)

HENGYANG HOLDS FIRM

CHUNGKING, July 21 — The Chinese garrison at Hengyang continued to hold firm today after a three-week siege, while American planes, supporting the Chinese ground forces, carried out a series of devastating raids on Japanese installations and supply columns, it was announced here.

Lieutenant General Stilwell's headquarters announced in a communique that the American planes scored direct hits on enemy wireholders, bombed and strafed enemy troop columns, and destroyed Japanese water supply craft on the Siang River.

Hengyang, which is 270 miles southwest of Canton, has been threatened for three weeks, but hard-fighting Chinese forces have repelled the enemy with heavy losses.

Meanwhile, other ground units continued their offensive in central Hunan Province, at a point 21 miles north of Hengyang, in what appears to be a major effort to relieve the Chinese garrison of that city, the Chinese High Command announced in a communique.

The communique also stated that Chinese troops have routed Japanese units sent to the relief of the besieged Pingka garrison in western Yunan Province. The announcement said that the Japanese rearguard was attacked 10 miles west of Pingka, while attacks on the Pingka garrison itself

Belgium, and France during yesterday afternoon and night. The bombing included strategic attacks on flying bomb installations and German industries and railway yards in Belgium. Two of the largest synthetic oil concerns still working in the Ruhr, at Homberg and Bottrop, were attacked.

The Associated Press said today within the last four days, Germany and objectives on her immediate borders have been hit by Allied air armadas totalling more than 10,000 planes.

In daylight yesterday, medium forces of heavy bombers struck at a number of targets in south Germany, including an aircraft components factory and an aerodrome at Friedrichshafen, and another airfield at Memmingen, south of Munich. These bombers flew from bases in Italy. Tactical aircraft of MAAF attacked enemy supply lines and other objectives in the north of Italy and over the battle area. Fighters were engaged in offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia. In these operations 17 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 15 Allied planes did not return to their bases. MAAF flew about 1,400 sorties.

Yesterday morning, over 1,200 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF, with an escort of hundreds of Lightnings, struck at the Leipzig area. Their targets included the aero-engine factories at Dessau, the ballbearing factory at Leipzig, Messerschmidt assembly plants at Mockau and Gotha, air component and motor transport factories at Russelsheim, and oil plants at Merseburg and Lutzkendorf.

The Germans continued their flying bomb attacks on London and the southern English counties during the night and in daylight today. Numbers of the projectiles were shot down over the Channel last night by RAF fighters and AA artillery fire. Some that landed in the target areas caused damage and a few casualties. In one district of southern England, a number of persons were sent to hospital after being rescued from houses wrecked by flying bombs.

"RHINO FERRY" IN NORMANDY LANDINGS

LONDON, July 21 — Headquarters of the U. S. Naval Forces in Europe announced that the "rhino ferry" was one of the most valuable innovations used by the Allies in the Normandy landings. It was developed by the Engineer Corps of the U. S. Navy.

The "rhino," a self-propelled barge, is made up of a number of the navy's prefabricated pontoons, which were used in ferrying tanks, guns, and other war material the last few hundred yards between vessels and the beach.

The ferry is made up of 30 pontoons in a row, six rows bolted together, with overall dimensions of 160 feet by 30.

Displacing approximately 275 tons, the ferry has a shallow draft compared with a loaded tank-landing craft, making it suitable for the long, shallow beaches of Normandy.

The U. S. Navy also developed the pontoon tug in much the same manner as the "rhino ferry," only smaller in size. Floating dry docks were also used. (OWI)

AMERICAN FORCES LAND ON GUAM

LONDON, July 21 — American assault troops and Marines have landed on Guam Island in the Pacific, the first landing on American territory seized by the Japanese. They have established beachheads, and the last report was that the landings were still going on against moderate opposition.

Guam Island is about 1,200 miles east of Japan, and is a stepping-stone to the Philippines. It has been bombarded for 17 days in succession, and yesterday saw the longest and heaviest attack any Pacific Island has been given in preparation for a landing.

returned to their bases safely.

Other American aerial units carried on raids on enemy installations in the Marshall Islands.

General Douglas MacArthur's communique, issued from the advance Allied Headquarters in New Guinea, announced today that Allied ground forces carried out a series of counter-attacks which offset Japanese attempts to penetrate the southern flank of the Allied line.

American troops fought hard and successfully to hold their line along the river, about 13 miles east of the Aitape airstrips. Small Japanese groups which crossed the river did considerable sniping in the dense foliage, but they are being steadily mopped up by American forces, the communique added.

Thirty-four tons of bombs were dropped on the harbor areas of Rabaul. In New Ireland, U. S. planes attacked coastal targets.

Allied medium bombers attacked enemy installations in the Dili township of Timor, and also harbor shipping there, sinking a small freighter and damaging a larger one.

In the Tanimbar Islands, Allied patrol planes bombed the Selaroe airdrome. (PWB - Reuter)

HENGYANG HOLDS FIRM

CHUNGKING, July 21 — The Chinese garrison at Hengyang continued to hold firm today after a three-week siege, while American planes, supporting the Chinese ground forces, carried out a series of devastating raids on Japanese installations and supply columns, it was announced here.

Lieutenant General Stilwell's headquarters announced in a communique that the American planes scored direct hits on enemy warehouses, bombed and strafed enemy troop columns, and destroyed Japanese water supply craft on the Siang River.

Hengyang, which is 270 miles southwest of Canton, has been threatened for three weeks, but hard-fighting Chinese forces have repelled the enemy with heavy losses.

Meanwhile, other ground units continued their offensive in central Hunan Province, at a point 21 miles north of Hengyang, in what appears to be a major effort to relieve the Chinese garrison of that city, the Chinese High Command announced in a communique.

The communique also stated that Chinese troops have routed Japanese units sent to the relief of the besieged Pingka garrison in western Yunan Province. The announcement said that the Japanese rearguard was attacked 10 miles west of Pingka, while attacks on the Pingka garrison itself were being pressed. The Japanese garrison is reported to be greatly weakened by heavy casualties suffered in futile efforts to penetrate the Chinese siege. (PWB - Reuter)

CONFLICT IN REICH - HIMMLER TO COMMAND

LONDON, July 21 — Conflict between the Nazi regime and Hitler's former military leaders, recently relieved of their commands, has broken out in Germany following the attempt on Hitler's life yesterday. Heinrich Himmler has been named commander-in-chief of the armed forces within the Reich to suppress the anti-Nazi uprising. The Gestapo has taken over in the crisis.

Reports from within Germany have been contradictory, and the Goebbels machine itself has issued conflicting accounts, but the following facts emerge:

1. The abortive attempt to assassinate Hitler was an organized movement under high-ranking German generals and field marshals who had recently broken with the Nazis.

2. This anti-Nazi military organization has directly asked the people for support, and has issued independent orders to the armed forces.

3. Following Hitler's extraordinary address to the people early today, both Marshal Goering and Admiral Doenitz ar-dressed appeals for loyalty to the Air Force and the Navy, respectively.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 765021

4. A special air force operating inside Germany has been established under Colonel General Stumpf, who has been ordered by Goering to place himself at the disposal of Himmler.

5. The chief of staff, Colonel General Zeitsler, has been dismissed and replaced by Colonel General Guderian, who has been named chief of the forces inside Germany under Himmler.

The most explicit details were contained in Goering's desperate appeal to the Luftwaffe.

The Air Reichsmarshal, long a bulwark in the Nazi hierarchy, said that the «military clique» responsible for the attempt on Hitler's life was spreading «confusion» throughout the country by issuing false orders to the Army and Air Force. He decreed that henceforth all flight orders to the air forces inside Germany must come either from himself or Stumpf. He admitted that the uprising was led by former members of the German High Command who had recently broken with the Nazis. Such a list of generals would include the once-favored names of Brauchitsch, Rundstedt, Falkenhausen, Manstein, Bock, Leeb and Kleist.

The extent of the crisis was indicated in a remark by Nazi leader Alfred Rosenburg, quoted by DNB, who said:

«The attempt to assassinate Hitler represents the opening of hostilities on a fifth front — the head and heart of the German war commands.»

Reuter's military correspondent in London reported that evidence was accumulating that Hitler had planned another Stalingrad in the Baltic theater, and that the military was in revolt against another blood bath.

«The northern army groups,» he wrote, «are disengaging in Latvia and Estonia, but they are staying in the Baltic; 30 divisions of the 15th and 18th Armies have been ordered to hold on. This decision is certainly linked with the revolt of the German generals.»

Details of the actual assassination attempt were lacking. The official announcement said high explosives were used, and that several members of Hitler's entourage had received varying degrees of injury. One of them was reported to have died since. Hitler himself, the announcement said, received burns and contusions, but of a minor nature. That the attempt was well-organized and planned on high levels was beyond doubt. Hitler is one of the best-guarded individuals of all time.

Shortly after the attempt, a broadcast by a German officer was heard in which he called upon the German military to avenge the crimes that have been committed in the name of Hitler. The unnamed officer, who spoke on a Hamburg wavelength, said this was a time for courageous action, and called for a complete revolt against the Nazi regime.

HULL ON GERMAN CRISIS

WASHINGTON, July 21 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull, commenting on the developments inside Germany, said at his press conference today that it was apparent that «Many German generals believe that Germany has lost the war.»

In a prepared statement, Hull said that «The attack on Hitler, and his explanatory speech, clearly indicate that a realization of Germany's impending defeat is spreading in the Reich.»

The Hull statement added: «Hitler and two of his most important military advisors have now denounced as criminal traitors a "clique of former generals who had to be chased from their post for a leadership as cowardly as it was

The order stated:

«There will be, as far as we are concerned, neither a recurrence of 1918 nor of the example which Italy has given. There is only one watchword for us here in the West: To come victoriously out of this struggle against the enemy with determination which is unshakeable, and with loyalty to the Fuehrer which is absolute.

«Long live the Fuehrer! Long live Germany!»

The German news agency said that the soldiers received the news of this plot with «indignation and wrath,» and added that German formations and units in Normandy paraded today giving «spontaneous manifestations of loyalty to Hitler.»

GERMANY TO BECOME MORE TOTALITARIAN

LONDON, July 21 — The German overseas news agency announced tonight that following the attempt on Hitler's life, the government will become more totalitarian.

«Certain consequences of the miscarried attempt on the life of the Fuehrer are inevitable. In particular, the totalitarian principle of government will be developed still further. The ruthless extermination of all assassins, saboteurs, and defeatists, no matter who they are or from where they come, is demanded by national self preservation.»

GENERAL BECK DEAD, SAYS BERLIN

LONDON, July 21 — The German news agency today reported the death of Colonel General Ludwig Beck, in the following statement issued by Deputy Press Chief Suendermann to the foreign press: «Colonel General Beck, who was implicated in the plot (to kill Hitler), is no longer alive. General Beck's name has often been mentioned in foreign press reports concerning imminent plots in Germany. NAZIS TAKE MEASURES IN BERLIN

LONDON, July 21 — The German overseas news agency said today: «Certain precautionary measures» were undertaken in the center of Berlin last night.

A later dispatch from the agency said: «The mass of the German people, and of Berliners in particular, saw nothing of events because the orders given by the conspirators to military formations were stopped in time. Certain precautionary measures in the center of Berlin some time last evening were all that could be seen by an outsider.

«A few generals and colonels, stationed at important keypoints in the Home Army, organized the attempt (on Hitler's life) which was carried out by Colonel Count Stauffenberg. Claiming that the Fuehrer was dead, the conspirators attempted to issue orders which, however, were nowhere effective.

«Reichminister Himmler has taken over command of the Home Army from General Fromm. The change in the post of the General Staff of the Army, however, has its reason, as pointed out by the Fuehrer, in the illness of General Zeitzler, who has been in poor health for some weeks. He has now been replaced by General Guderian, one of Germany's most famous Panzer Generals.»

«These frantic attempts to restore the apparent unity of the German command illustrated the divergenues of views between the Army and the Party, which have developed as a result of the steadily deteriorating military position of Germany. But no amount of internal reshuffling or repression by Himmler can conceal from the German people the fact that many German generals believe that Germany has lost the war.

JAP RESIGNATIONS NEEDN'T MEAN PEACE

WASHINGTON, July 21 — Reports that the resignation of the Tojo Government of Japan is a forerunner of peace moves by Japan are discounted by informed quarters in New York and Washington.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said that it would be a mistake not to assume that the Japanese would put forward the best possible military plan, although there had evidently been substantial reversals in the Japanese military situation.

An authoritative source in the State Department said that the resignation of the Tojo Cabinet was an admission that the Japanese realize their uncomfortable position, but warned against too optimistic speculation.

The cabinet change is largely a demonstration of the Japanese habit of making someone take the responsibility

PATTERSON WARNS AGAINST OVER OPTIMISM

WASHINGTON, July 21 — The Acting U. S. Secretary of War, Robert Patterson, cautioned the press yesterday, during his weekly military review, against over optimism over the Allied successes in Normandy, although Allied forces have broken the German pivotal defenses at Caen. He said that, thus far, the Germans have engaged only one-third of their forces in France and the Lowlands, adding that the large scale fighting around the Caen area requires much equipment.

Mr. Patterson said that the Allies have captured 60,000 Germans in France, and the number of enemy killed and wounded is large. He stated that the Germans have been obliged to put into battle every unit immediately upon its arrival, losing many troops and tanks in local counter-attacks.

Mr. Patterson paid high tribute to the French and Belgian underground, stating that in certain sections of France, the Nazis are compelled to utilize artillery and planes against the Patriots, who are now part of the organized military forces. He said that Brittany Patriots alone have killed 1,000 Germans in sporadic fighting since the invasion, and that Belgian Patriots are reported to have destroyed 15 locomotives, 10 railway bridges, and cut railway lines in over 100 places.

The situation in Italy was reviewed by Mr. Patterson, who said that the Germans there are suffering from a serious lack of manpower, and were compelled to withdraw three newly-arrived divisions because of heavy losses in the Leghorn and Arno areas. He added that the Germans' 28 divisions in Italy have been reduced to the equivalent of about 14, because of losses and lack of replacements. The principal advantages, now held by the Germans are mountain positions and shortened supply lines.

Mr. Patterson reported that 5th Army casualties since the landings in Italy and until July 12 are 12,999 killed, 49,561 wounded, and 16,606 missing. (PWB - Tass)

170,000 EVACUATED FROM LONDON AREA

LONDON, July 21 — The British Health Minister, Henry Willink, told the House of Commons today that more than 170,000 women and children have been evacuated from London in organized parties since July 2 to keep them safely out of the range of the German flying bombs.

When a member of the House suggested that announcement of the number of evacuees would help the Germans, Prime Minister Churchill intervened to say: "The general figure of 170,000 evacuated from London would have no effect, other than to disappoint the enemy, who would have expected more." AMG TAKES OVER IN DESOLATED LEGHORN

ROME, July 21 — Only 35,000 of the normal population of 138,000 remained in Leghorn during the last days of the Nazi-Fascist domination, according to first-hand reports from correspondents with the liberating forces of the 5th Army.

Brig. General Edgar Erskine Hume, chief of the military government section of 5th Army, has moved in with his experts to bring about emergency restoration of public services, all of which had suffered tremendously, particulary in the port area. He reported that the so-called black zone in the harbor area was the worst so far encountered in the way of mines and booby traps.

One of the important buildings severely damaged is the cathedral.

The Germans had pillaged the center of the city. Although the large Ciano Hospital was found intact, all of its bed linen and medicines had been taken away.

Telephone service had ceased, there was no supply of electricity, and the banks and postoffice had been closed for 20 days before the entry of the Allies. The water system has been destroyed, but there is a minimum of water available from wells. AMG is chlorinating water from these wells, and it is hoped that part of the normal water distribution system may be restored within a few days.

AMG authorities said that the condition of the city is such that those previously evacuated will not be allowed to return until a more normal course of city life is possible.

For citizens found in the city, there is no serious lack of food, although when the Allied troops arrived there was only a three-day's supply on hand. There was enough grain for 10-day's supply, and a local saw mill is being converted to grind the wheat into flour.

The work of the Committee of Liberation, particularly in planning ahead of the entry into Leghorn, was commended by AMG officials. The AMG of 5th Army set up an administration board in advance, and discussions went on for some days at Quercinella with leading citizens who had escaped from the city.

Notices in both Italian and English had been printed secretly, ready for posting immediately upon entry. A detachment of Carabinieri, headed by an Allied officer, were taken into the city to aid in law enforcement.

Reports also indicated that the Germans had mined the harbor area in expectation of an Allied landing there. Many citizens had left the city as long ago as last November. Leading Fascists had left Leghorn some days before its fall to the Allies, leaving Republican Fascist police in control. (PWB - PRO)

LIBERATED ITALY

PROGRAM FOR PATRIOT RECOGNITION ADOPTED

ROME, July 21 — A broad program of practical steps to recognize the contribution of Italian Patriots to the Allied advance in Italy was announced today by the Allied Control Commission.

The plan is designed to ensure that true Patriots receive recognition of their valuable services to the common cause, and that fake Patriots — those who never fought the Germans but pose as Patriots when their towns are liberated — shall be discovered.

The program also provides that the weapons used by Patriot bands shall be collected in newly-liberated territory, so they can be reissued as speedily as possible to Patriot bands still fighting north of the battle lines.

The steps the Allies are taking to aid Patriots include: Plans for employment of Patriots. Patriot representation on communal councils of newly-liberated towns, and special certificates of honor for Patriots who have fought the enemy. (PWB - PRO)

UNITED NATIONS

ROOSEVELT ACCEPTS NOMINATION

CHICAGO, July 21 — President Roosevelt last night accepted the nomination of the Democratic Party to run for President of the United States for a fourth term. The President spoke by radio to the convention delegates from a Pacific Coast naval base, where he went to inspect elements of the world's most powerful naval force.

In accepting the nomination which had been conferred on him without a dissenting vote, and amid 30 minutes of wild cheers, the President said:

"It seems likely that, within the next four years, our armed forces and those of our Allies will have gained complete victory over Germany and Japan and that the world once more will be at peace — under a system, we hope, which will prevent a new world war."

President Roosevelt stated that his decision to run for a fourth term "is based solely on the sense of obligation to serve, if called upon to do so by the people of the United States."

The President, who under the Constitution of the United States is also Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces of the nation, told the convention:

"In these days of tragic sorrow, I do not consider it fitting to campaign, in the usual sense, for office."

He declared that "isolationists and ostriches" are becoming extinct, and added:

"Americans now know that all nations of the world will have to play their appropriate part in keeping peace by force, and in deciding peacefully disputes which might lead to war. What is the job before us in 1944? To win the war — win it fast, and to win it overpoweringly. Second, to form a world-wide international organization and to arrange to use the armed forces of sovereign nations of the world to make another war impossible within the forseeable future. Third, to build an economy for our returning veterans and for all Americans that should provide jobs and a decent standard of living.

Senator Alben Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader of the United States Senate, who led a revolt against President Roosevelt's veto of the tax bill a few months ago, said in his speech nominating the President, that President Roosevelt's «leadership has been unsurpassed, if ever equalled, in the annals of American history.» He referred to the President as a man «whose name among millions of dejected and disheartened men stands today as the symbol of freedom and deliverance.»

The nomination of President Roosevelt was seconded by Vice President Henry Wallace, who is a candidate for the vice presidential nomination. His strongest opponent is United States Senator Harry Truman, of Missouri. The nomination of the Democratic Party's vice presidential candidate will be held today as the convention's last order of business.

Before President Roosevelt's renomination, the party delegates adopted a platform which pledges the party, if elected, to lead the United States into an association of nations to maintain peace — with force of arms, if necessary. Other important parts of the platform include a pledge for a «world free press» to facilitate free and untrammeled interchange of news between nations. The declaration added: «We believe in the world right to all men to write, send, and publish news at uniform communication rates and without interference by governmental or private monopoly, and that this right should be protected by treaty.»

Promising «peace by force» if necessary, the party platform declared: «That the world may not again be drenched in blood by international outlaws and criminals, we pledge: to join with the other United Nations in the establishment of an international organization, based on principles of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, and open membership by all such states large and small for the prevention of aggression, and maintenance of an international force for the prevention of aggression and the maintenance of international peace and security.»

The platform pledges to make all necessary arrangements to prevent war by making it impossible for agressor nations to prepare for war, and to employ armed forces, when necessary, to prevent aggression and preserve the peace. The party also declared itself in favor of the maintenance of an international court of justice, of which the United States will be a member, and to employ diplomacy, conciliation, and arbitration in settlement of international disputes.

BANK WILL AID WAR-TORN COUNTRIES

BRETTON WOODS, NEW HAMPSHIRE, July 21 — The 8,000 million dollar international fund which the United Nations Monetary Conference is drafting for post-war reconstruction will operate with special concern toward «expediting the lightening of the burden» of countries which have been devastated by war. This vital purpose, reemphasized at a committee meeting, was made a provision of the bank charter's being drafted by the conference.

In addition, the committee decided that countries which have suffered great physical damage shall be given special consideration in the payment of their subscriptions. The subscription payment provision states that each member country will be required to deposit with the bank, before it is put into operation, 20 per cent of its total subscription. Ten per cent of the initial payment is to be made in gold;

It is expected that this strong attitude of the conference will affect the attitude of neutral nations, who will now realize that any aid they might give such enemy schemings will meet with the united disapproval of the 44 nations subscribing to the conference's action.

It was recommended to the conference that nations seeking membership in either the proposed monetary fund or the international bank must first terminate, or indicate their intention of terminating, their membership in the Bank for International Settlements at Basle, Switzerland. It was pointed out that this would virtually insure early liquidation of that bank.

It has been decided that there are to be 12 directors of the international bank for reconstruction, of whom five are to be named by the five nations making the largest subscriptions, and seven will be chosen by other member nations through a system of proportionate voting.

The international monetary fund also will have 12 executive directors, with five members representing the five nations with the largest quotas. However, two of the remaining seven are to be chosen by Latin American countries.

The voting power in the international bank will be related directly to the subscriptions - as in the international fund - with each member having 250 votes, plus votes earned by virte of its subscription. The formula for these subscription votes has not been determined.

The Russian delegation is said to have accepted, in committee, their share of 1,000 million dollars in the international bank, a compromise between the figure of 1,200 million suggested by the United States and 900 million suggested by the Russians. (OWI)

REPRISAL SHOOTING OF MANDEL REPORTED

LONDON, July 21 — A dispatch from Berne to the Stockholm AFTONTIDNINGEN on Tuesday said that George Mandel, Minister of the Interior in the pre-occupation cabinet of Premier Paul Reynaud, was shot in reprisal for the Underground execution of Philippe Henriot, Vichy Propaganda Minister.

News of Mandel's death was first reported by Radio Vichy on July 14. The AFTONTIDNINGEN dispatch said: «Men who were prominent in France before the war, such as Daladier, Leon Blum, Poncet, and General Gamelin, are threatened with the same fate. These men are evidently regarded as hostages, but Darnand, Vichy Minister of the Interior, is mistaken if he believes that this will keep the French Underground from further acts of resistance.»

The Swedish radio reported that there have been further arrests by the Gestapo, following recent attacks against the railways at Jutland.

Radio Stockholm stated that Jurt Johan Bock, Danish informer, had recently been shot by Patriots. In Dyrehaven, north of Copenhagen, several German sentries were wounded when Danish saboteurs attacked the Taarbaek fort, which the Germans were using as an arsenal. (PWB)

FRENCH PRODUCTION FOR NAZIS DWINDLES

ALGIERS, July 21 — All French industry is now fighting, in various ways, against the Germans.

Vichy's Commissioner General for Manpower has appealed for increased French labour to aid German war production, following dwindling of output in all French factories, due to Allied bombing, resistance of French workers, and sabotage by the Forces of the Interior, it was learned here today.

According to the July 15 issue of STOCKHOLM INDUSTRIA, organ of the Swedish Industrialists Association,

Before President Roosevelt's renomination, the party delegates adopted a platform which pledges the party, if elected, to lead the United States into an association of nations to maintain peace — with force of arms, if necessary. Other important parts of the platform include a pledge for a «world free press» to facilitate free and unhampered interchange of news between nations. The declaration added: «We believe in the world right to all men to write, send, and publish news at uniform communication rates and without interference by governmental or private monopoly, and that this right should be protected by treaty.»

Promising «peace by force» if necessary, the party platform declared: «That the world may not again be drenched in blood by international outlaws and criminals, we pledge: to join with the other United Nations in the establishment of an international organization, based on principles of sovereign equality of all peace-loving states, and open membership by all such states large and small, for the prevention of aggression, and maintenance of an international force for the prevention of aggression and the maintenance of international peace and security.»

The platform pledges to make all necessary arrangements to prevent war by making it impossible for agressor nations to prepare for war, and to employ armed forces, when necessary, to prevent aggression and preserve the peace. The party also declared itself in favor of the maintenance of an international court of justice, of which the United States will be a member, and to employ diplomacy, conciliation, and arbitration in settlement of international disputes.

BANK WILL AID WAR-TORN COUNTRIES

BRETTON WOODS, NEW HAMPSHIRE, July 21 — The 8,000 million dollar international fund which the United Nations Monetary Conference is drafting for post-war reconstruction will operate with special concern toward «expediting the lightening of the burden» of countries which have been devastated by war. This vital purpose, reemphasized at a committee meeting, was made a provision of the bank charter's being drafted by the conference.

The subscription payment provision states that each member country will be required to deposit with the bank, before it is put into operation, 20 per cent of its total subscription. Ten per cent of the initial payment is to be made in gold; but a clause has been adopted permitting such nations to defer one-quarter of their gold payments for five years.

The adoption of the clause signified the concensus of the conference that although war sacrifices of the United Nations are indivisible, reconstruction must begin with nations most gravely in need of it.

The last remaining important item of the bank charter, the table of subscriptions of member nations, is being studied by the committee. The committee's decision that the total liabilities of the bank shall not exceed 100 per cent of its capital is being reviewed by a special committee.

The 44 nations represented agreed in committee sessions to cooperate in prohibiting the possibility of profit by enemy leaders from their looting in occupied countries and hiding such assets in other parts of the world.

A spokesman said that there was a great deal of information showing two procedures used by enemy leaders. The first is the simple process of looting the assets of occupied countries for the governmental use of the aggressor nation, or for the personal enrichment of its leaders. Secondly, enemy industry, particularly in Germany, is making strong, though skillfully hidden, efforts either to transfer assets abroad or, by devious means, to acquire ownership of corporations outside Germany so as to reestablish itself after Germany's defeat.

Vichy's Commissioner General for Manpower has appealed for increased French labour to aid German war production, following dwindling of output in all French factories, due to Allied bombing, resistance of French workers, and sabotage by the Forces of the Interior, it was learned here today.

According to the July 15 issue of STOCKHOLM INDUSTRIA, organ of the Swedish Industrialists Association, the Germans are getting only half the deliveries they expected from French industry this year. In June, said the publication, production fell still further, despite severe Gestapo measures on Himmler's orders, aimed at improving quantity and quality of output.

Comparing production totals for this year's first five months with the corresponding period last year, the article cited reductions of 25 per cent in aircraft output, and 50 per cent in ammunition, explosives, and nitro-cellulose manufacture. Of the reduction in nitro-cellulose, 20 per cent was rejected as being inferior.

Locomotive, rolling stock, and motor vehicle production fell sharply. Of new automobiles leaving French factories, hardly 50 per cent were usable, and many had time bombs installed in them by French workers before delivery. (PWB)

HOLLAND MAY ANNEX PART OF GERMANY

LONDON, July 21 — Since the damage caused by flooding Holland may prove irreparable, the Dutch may be forced to annex part of Germany, said VRIJ NEDERLAND, the Dutch newspaper published in London.

The paper added: «We have always been against the annexation of foreign territory for any length of time, but if they continue to flood our country, the Germans may force us to change our minds."

The German population of part of Germany would have to be evacuated permanently, and Dutch people put in their place. (PWB - Reuter)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 21 — Today's communique:

LAND: With improved weather conditions, the Allied Armies in Italy have kept up their pressure against the enemy. In the Adriatic sector, Polish troops of the 8th Army, driving northwest from the Esino River, have made good progress in difficult mountain country.

In the upper Tiber Valley, other troops of the 8th Army are closing in around the town of Città di Castello, which has been stubbornly defended by the enemy for some time.

West of Arezzo, along Highway 69, further progress has been made north of Montevarchi, while, in the mountainous area north of Radda, Allied infantry have taken Monte Quercianella and Monte San Michele, which is the dominating height in this area.

In the 5th Army sector, advances have been made to the outskirts of Castel Fiorentino. Enemy resistance is still being encountered north of Highway 67.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday struck at a number of targets in southern Germany for the third consecutive day. Two aircraft components factories and an aerodrome at Friedrichshafen were attacked, as well as Memmingen aerodrome, southeast of Munich.

Tactical aircraft attacked enemy supply lines and other objectives in the north of Italy and over the battle area. Other fighters carried out sweeps over Yugoslavia. In these operations, 17 enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 15 Allied planes are missing. MAAF flew about 1,400 sorties.

YUGOSLAV

ALGIERS, July 21 — Today's communique from the headquarters of Marshal Tito:

Yugoslav forces have captured an enemy stronghold in the Valley of the Breznica River in the Gorsi Kotar district, exterminating the enemy and capturing war material.

At Cikalnica and Ogulin in Croatia, enemy columns have been defeated and prisoners taken.

In Slovenia, successful attacks have been carried out against the Belgrade-Zagreb railway, destroying it at 82 points and stopping traffic as a result. The Zagreb-Karlovac railway has also been attacked, as has the Bihac-Bosnaski line.

The enemy suffered great losses.

In western Bosnia, partisan units successfully attacked enemy transport on the Drvar-Petrovac highway. An enemy column moving from Banjaluca to Pazarac was attacked also, and suffered heavy losses, 134 enemy soldiers and officers being killed.

German and quisling units were forced to shorten lines in the Livno Cilica sector, following partisan attacks.

Yugoslav units continue to clear the enemy from eastern Bosnia, where a German state police column was defeated and dispersed in the Spreca River Valley. Fighting continues in Serbia, in the Toplica area. (PWB)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 21 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Po Valley section, action by the patriots increases, either by sabotage or direct attacks against the German troops and transport. Some groups descended into the Asiago zone and from the Trentine Alps as far as Vicenza, one of the main supply centers of Kesselring's army, and captured arms and warehouses reserved by the German Army.

The patriot resistance movement in this region reaches as far as the Adriatic.

In the Como area, patriots attacked the Nazi-Fascist garrison of Lecco. One hundred and fifty political prisoners were liberated from the Como prison, and the guards were taken as hostages.

The patriots have occupied a mountain between Como and Chiasso, less than a mile from the Swiss border. Besides, they now control the western arm of Lake Como.

In the Varese zone, the patriots, after having suffered the loss of 75 prisoners, withdrew to the mountains near Luino and Porto Ceresio.

After violent fighting in Novara Province, the patriots, in spite of the heavy losses they have suffered, succeeded in holding many positions. Actually, they control the whole region between Biella and Lake Maggiore, including the town of Borgosesia.

The patriots have reported that Allied Air Forces bombed and destroyed a bridge in the Umbertide region.

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 21 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Southeast and south of Caen, the enemy with major infantry and tank forces continued his attacks without being able to achieve substantial territorial gains. In the area northwest of St. Lô, our troops also smashed all attacking enemy groups. In the fighting on July 18 and 19 in Normandy, 200 enemy tanks were destroyed.

German bombers sank one enemy destroyer and heavily damaged two others in the waters west of Brest.

In mopping up operations in France, 285 terrorists were killed in fighting.

Heavy V-1 retaliatory fire continued on the area of Greater London.

In Italy, there were major fighting operations yesterday only in the Adriatic coastal sector, where the enemy succeeded in gaining slight territorial gains. On the remainder of the front, the enemy at many points made local unsuccessful attacks. The 16th S.S. Panzer Grenadier Division «Reichsfuehrer S.S.» under the command of S.S. Group-leader and Lieut. General of the Waffen S.S. Simon, distinguished itself in the heavy fighting on the Ligurian coast by particular steadfastness and gallantry. Torpedo boats damaged two British E-boats in the Gulf of Genoa.

In the East, fighting with unabated intensity continues in the area of Lvov and on the upper Bug. Our divisions continued to offer stiff resistance to the Soviets, inflicting heavy losses on them.

One Panzer Grenadier division alone destroyed there 101 enemy tanks within the past few days. North of Brest-Litovsk, troops of the army and the Waffen S.S. threw back the Soviets in a counter-attack. Several enemy spearheads were encircled and wiped out. East of Bialystok, the enemy broke into our positions. Here, embittered fighting is in progress. Northwest of Grodno, Soviet fighting units were thrown back in a counter-attack. On the Kaunas-Dvinsk road, as well as between Dvinsk and Lake Peipus, the Bolsheviks, strongly supported by tanks and battle planes, attacked at numerous points. They were repulsed or checked with a great number of tanks shot up. In the northern sector, the 255th Silesian Infantry Division, under the command of Lieut. General Meizer, and the 32nd Grenadier Regiment, under the command of Colonel von Werner, distinguished themselves by particular gallantry.

Battle plane formations dispersed Soviet tank formations and supply columns, and destroyed 58 enemy tanks and more than 600 vehicles. The enemy lost 55 planes in aerial battles.

Patrol vessels of our Navy shot down five Soviet bombers over the Gulf of Finland. Last night, strong German bomber formations also made heavy attacks against the supply railway stations of Minsk and Molodeczno.

U. S. bomber formations attacked localities in western, southwestern, and central Germany from the south and west. Damage was caused, particularly in Friedrichshafen, Wetzlar, and Leipzig.

Air defense forces shot down 47 enemy planes, including 45 bombers.

Last night, a formation of British planes attacked localities in the Rhenish-Westphalian area. Besides, nuisance planes dropped bombs on the metropolitan area of Hamburg. Thirty-nine four-engined bombers were shot down.

Heavy German bombers attacked targets in southeastern England.

ASSASSINATION OF HITLER FAILS. HITLER ACCUSES OFFICERS IN BROADCAST. HIMMLER NAMED CHIEF OF HOME ARMY

LONDON, July 21 — Following an attempt to assassinate Adolf Hitler Thursday, the German radio at 0110 hours this morning broadcast a speech by Hitler in which he said he was speaking so that the German people could hear his voice. This was the third attempt on his life, he added, and had been planned by a small clique of officers.

He said that one of the people who was present and was wounded during the attempted assassination had since died, the 1918 stab in the back. But this time they have made a bad mistake.

«The circle of these conspirators is very small, and has no connexion with the German Wehrmacht and, above all, none with the German people. It is a miniature group of criminal elements, who will now be ruthlessly exterminated.

«I therefore now order that no military authority, no leader of any unit, no private in the field, is to obey any orders emanating from these groups of usurpers. I also order that it is everyone's duty to arrest or, if they resist, to kill at sight anyone issuing such orders.

«I have, therefore, to create order once and for all, nominated Reichsminister Himmler to be Commander-in-Chief of the Home Army.

«I have summoned Colonel General Guderian to lead my general staff, and to replace the Chief of the General Staff, who has been taken to hospital.

«Another proved Eastern Front commander has been called in by me to assist him. There has been no change in any other office in the Reich...

«This time we shall get quits with them in the way that Nationalist Socialists are accustomed. I am convinced that every decent officer, every gallant soldier, will comprehend this at this hour. What fate would have been in store for the Germans, had this attempt on my life succeeded, is too horrible to think of.

«I praise Providence, not because it has saved my own life; my life is only one of care and labor for my people. I thank Providence only because it has allowed me to go on bearing these cares, and to continue with my labor to act according to the dictates of my conscience.

«Every German, therefore, quite irrespective of who he may be, has the duty ruthlessly to call to book these elements at once, either to arrest them promptly or, if they offer resistance of any kind, to wipe them out.

«It has again been granted to me that I should again escape a doom which would have been terrible not, for me, but for the German people. They see in this, however, again the pointing finger of Providence that I must carry on with my work.»

Hitler said the bomb was placed by Colonel von Stauffenberg.

The text of yesterday's announcement of the attempted assassination, as carried by the German Transocean News Agency, is as follows:

«An attempt on the life of the Fuehrer was made with high explosives today. The following persons of his entourage were severely injured: Lieut. General Schmundt, Colonel

« The officers responsible wanted to prepare for Germany the same fate as in 1918, but they have made a big mistake. All criminal elements will be ruthlessly exterminated.

« For the third time, an attempt on my life has been planned and carried out. If I speak to you today it is, first, in order that you should hear my voice, and know that I myself am unhurt and well; secondly, that you should know about a crime unparalleled in German history.

« A very small clique of ambitious, irresponsible and, at the same time, senseless and criminally stupid officers have formed a plot to eliminate me and, with me, the State.

« A bomb exploded two metres to my right. One of those with me has since died.

« I regard this as a confirmation of the task imposed on me by Providence to continue on the road of my life as I have done. For I may confess to the nation that, since the days when I moved into the Wilhelmstrasse, I had only one thought — to dedicate my life — ever since I realised that the war could no longer be postponed. I have lived for worry, work, and worry only.

« Suddenly, at the moment when the German armies are engaged in a bitter struggle, a small group emerged in Italy and Germany in the belief that they could repeat order that it is everyone's duty to arrest or, if they resist, to kill at sight anyone issuing such orders.

« I have, therefore, to create order once and for all, nominated Reichminister Himmler to be Commander-in-Chief of the Home Army.

« I have summoned Colonel General Guderian to lead my general staff, and to replace the Chief of the General Staff, who has been taken to hospital.

« Another proved Eastern Front commander has been called in by me to assist him. There has been no change in any other office in the Reich...

« This time we shall get quits with them in the way that Nationalist Socialists are accustomed. I am convinced that every decent officer, every gallant soldier, will comprehend this at this hour. What fate would have been in store for the Germans, had this attempt on my life succeeded, is too horrible to think of.

« I praise Providence, not because it has saved my own life; my life is only one of care and labor for my people. I thank Providence only because it has allowed me to go on bearing these cares, and to continue with my labor to act according to the dictates of my conscience.

« Every German, therefore, quite irrespective of who he may be, has the duty ruthlessly to call to book these elements at once, either to arrest them promptly or, if they offer resistance of any kind, to wipe them out.

« It has again been granted to me that I should again escape a doom which would have been terrible not, for me, but for the German people. They see in this, however, again the pointing finger of Providence that I must carry on with my work. »

Hitler said the bomb was placed by Colonel von Stauffenberg.

The text of yesterday's announcement of the attempted assassination, as carried by the German Transocean News Agency, is as follows:

« An attempt on the life of the Fuehrer was made with high explosives today. The following persons of his entourage were severely injured: Lieut. General Schmundt, Colonel

Brandt, Lieut. Colonel Borgmann, and Collaborator Berger.

« Slighter injuries were suffered by Colonel General Jodl, as well as by Generals Korten, Buhl, Bodenschatz, Heusinger, and Scherff, and Admirals Voss and Von Puttkamer.

« Hitler received light burns and contusions, but no injuries. He at once began to work again. He then received Mussolini for a long meeting, as previously arranged.

« Shortly after the attempt, Marshal Goering came to see Hitler. »

Lieut. General Schmundt is chief of the personnel department of the German Army, and has been chief military aide-de-camp to Hitler for several years. He is responsible for advising Hitler on promotions and appointments.

Colonel General Alfred Jodl is chief of Hitler's personal military staff, and is a professional officer.

Lieut. General Buhl has for several years been a member of Hitler's personal military staff. Air Force General Gunther Korten is Chief of Staff of the Luftwaffe.

Rear Admiral von Puttkamer has been Hitler's naval aide-de-camp since 1939.

Air Force General Karl Bodenschatz is chief of Goering's personal staff.

The German radio later corrected the list of injured given in the announcement from Hitler's headquarters, Reuter reported. The German broadcast stated that the name of Lieut. Colonel Borgmann should be deleted from the list of those gravely injured, and added to the list of slightly injured. The broadcast also stated that after the name of von Puttkamer, the names of naval Captain Assmann and Lieut. Colonel Borgmann, should be inserted in the list as slightly injured.

Definite information about previous attempts on Hitler's life is scarce, but one of the last known attempts was on 9 November 1939, when a powerful time-bomb exploded in the Burger Brau beer cellar at Munich a few minutes after Hitler had left the building.

Himmler discovered a plot to assassinate Hitler during a tour of the Polish battlefields in 1939, when Ernest Nieckisch, well-known German nationalist writer, was charged with the plot to kill Hitler and other high Nazi officials and was sentenced to penal servitude with 20 others.

NEW SOVIET OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED FROM KOVEL SECTOR

MOSCOW, July 20 — A new Soviet offensive was launched by troops of the White Russian Front from the Kovel sector, Marshal Joseph Stalin announced in a special order of the day to Marshal Rokossovsky. The Red Army broke through the strong enemy defense system and penetrated to a depth of 30 miles, which enlarged the breach to a breadth of 90 miles, and has brought the Soviet troops to the western reaches of the Bug River.

In a second order of the day to Marshal Koniev, Marshal Stalin announced the capture of two important railway junctions and centers of the western Ukraine, Vladimir-Volinsky, northwest of Lutsk, and Rava Russkaya, northwest of Lvov, by troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front.

In the northern sector, the Red Army was stated by a Berlin military spokesman to have reached Augustov, eight miles from the East Prussia border. Civilian morale in East Prussia is already being put to test by sleets, as endless Stormaviks sweep the roads between Tilsit, Gumbinnen, Rastenburg, and Allenstein during daylight hours, a Reuter correspondent wrote.

In the same dispatch, it was reported that Lvov is slipping from the German's grasp as Marshal Koniev's [illegible] and massive air the threat to Bialystok was increased by the capture of the railway station of Krynki, 28 miles to the southwest.

To the south, Russian troops are on the outskirts of Brest-Litovsk, and are now only about 100 miles from Warsaw.

Added to the worries and destruction thrust on the German Army by the Russian forces, is the choking of supply roads by tens of thousands of German settlers who are attempting to flee to Germany from stolen Russian and Polish farms. The German News Agency stated that already 350,000 have returned home under the most hazardous conditions, a grim reminder of Russian and Polish Partisan activities.

Another German general was taken prisoner, Lieut. General Ochner, commander of the 31st German Infantry Division.

GENERAL DISCLOSES RIFT IN NAZI COMMAND

MOSCOW, July 20 — Writing from a country house near Moscow, where he is held prisoner by the Russians, Lieutenant General E. M. Hofmeister, former commander of the German 41st Tank Corps, has confirmed, in a document of highest importance, what has long been suspected to be the cause of the Nazi disasters in the east.

The document is in Hofmeister's own handwriting. At the bottom he wrote: « I have no objection to this being published. » Russian newspapers published photostatic copies of pages from the document.

His statement, published by the Russian press yesterday, is a long catalogue of events which led to tension between the cold, level-headed, older German generals, and the fanatical younger ones who gave support to the grandiose military strategy of one-time corporal, Adolph Hitler.

After listing the causes for the series of great reverses which followed Stalingrad and extended to the present rout, General Hofmeister reached the following conclusion:

« Germany will have to find an answer to the question as to which way she can create the basis for carrying out peace negotiations with other states. These states will not negotiate with Hitler. It is, consequently, necessary to create other prerequisites. »

General Hofmeister began with a criticism of Hitler's policy which, by virtue of its insistence on holding ground until bludgeoned from positions, was "costing a great deal in lives and prisoners." He then wrote of an interview with Field Marshal Ernst Busch, commander of the central front between the Pripet Marshes and the Baltic States — the area of the most spectacular current Russian advances of some 300 miles.

"Field Marshal Busch told me," he wrote, "that Hitler forbade any retreat. Hitler ordered every inch of occupied country to be defended. Marshal Busch said: "I consider the order wrong. I had to obey."

General Hofmeister then asserted: « I want to say that the defeat in white Russia is an example of the talentless command of Hitler. When Von Brauchitsch, Leeb, List, Von Rundstedt, Bock, Halder, and others tried to point out errors, they were discharged.

« Hitler's strategy brought about the defeat at Stalingrad, and shocked the German people and the German Army's faith in Hitler's leadership. This faith was especially shaken by the dismissal of Colonel General Halder because he disapproved of the strategy. At the time when the German troops were at Stalingrad, and had penetrated deep into the Caucasus, Germany lacked adequate reserves to hold this territory. Hitler should have withdrawn troops, in order to maintain a shorter front. But he ordered the holding of the entire line.

« The older generals, who had had long military experience and proper military education, saw this mistake. The younger generals, however, such as Rommel, Dietl,

In the same dispatch, it was reported that Lvov is slipping from the German's grasp as Marshal Koniev's army, with powerful armored spearheads and massive air support blasting the way are attacking the arc of German fortifications guarding the city. Earlier today, the Red Army was within nine miles of the city. In tonight's dispatch it was reported that Soviet tanks are around the outskirts of Lvov, crushing German pillboxes within their defense ring, and are attacking solid stone houses on suburban roads.

At the approaches to Lvov, the Germans have thrown in the biggest panzer forces they can muster in an attempt to hold off the Soviet armored drive.

The imminent fall of Lvov will open the road for an uninterrupted drive to the San, next river to the west, and Soviet troops will probably soon be striking for the fortress city of Przemysl.

The new Russian offensive on the Baltic front is continuing, with Russian troops making an advance of 25 miles and tearing a gap of 40 miles in the German defenses around Ostrov, on the Latvian border.

In southern Latvia, the Red Army is fighting well within the border, and inflicting such heavy losses on the Germans that public and other buildings in Riga have been requisitioned to serve as hospitals for German wounded. The fighting in Latvia resulted yesterday in the liberation of more than 100 inhabited localities.

Red Army bridgeheads across the Niemen River were enlarged in the direction of Kovno, south of Grodno, while Hitler should have withdrawn troops, in order to maintain a shorter front. But he ordered the holding of the entire line.

«The older generals, who had had long military experience and proper military education, saw this mistake. The younger generals, however, such as Rommel, Dietl, Scherner, Keitel, and others, who had not had such schooling, failed to perceive this mistake.

«It would seem that Stalingrad was a good lesson. Nevertheless, such mistakes were repeated. Among them is included the offensive on the Orel-Kursk arc in July 1943 against large Russian forces of which the German command was not aware. Another was the attempt to make a stand on the Lower Dnieper which ended in the encirclement of the German troops. Finally came the disaster in White Russia.

«Naturally, this evokes discontent among experienced German generals, and fans the mistrust in Hitlerite leadership. But Germans who resent such a situation are compelled to keep quiet, as Field Marshal Keitel has declared that all criticism of German leadership would be punished by death.»

General Hofmeister said that the most typical of all the Nazi «yes men» was Keitel.

The most remarkable story the general had to tell was of a meeting to which Hitler summoned 150 generals in May this year at Sonthofen, where they were coaxed, lectured, harangued, and wheedled by Himmler, Goebbels, and Keitel. The gist of these lectures was, that they should have stronger faith in National Socialism.

«They assured us,» General Hofmeister wrote, «that we should win the war but they didn't say by what means.»

After Sonthofen, the generals were taken to Berchtesgaden, where they were treated by Hitler personally to a 1 1/2 hour speech.

« Hitler looked ill. He had a swollen face. His voice was soft, and his speech incoherent. He said that Germany had been attacked by Poland, England, and France, and had started the war against Russia only to prevent her attacking, too. He said we should have to 'stick it out' for the final victory, which would come. But he didn't say how. He spoke of the 'great successes' which resulted from his activities in liberation of the Rhineland and the restoration of the German Army. »

The most remarkable phase of Hitler's address to his generals was when he spoke of his personal difficulties. He repeatedly mentioned the trials of the period when the National Socialist Party came into power. Then he said that he personally had wanted to become an architect and an artist, but that, as a result of the disastrous outcome of the first World War and the Treaty of Versailles, he had been compelled to become a statesman.

« As was to be expected, » wrote Hofmeister, « the younger generals admired Hitler's speech, while the old and experienced generals treated it skeptically. Each of us had come to the conclusion that empty words about the State, about victory, and about faith in National Socialism, would not save the situation at the front.

STALIN'S SON AIR FORCE COLONEL

MOSCOW, July 20 — Colonel Vasily J. Stalin, the son of Marshal Josef Stalin, is commanding a group of fighter aircraft furnishing an air umbrella for tanks advancing in the hottest fighting on the White Russian front. Colonel Stalin's command has destroyed at least 20 German planes.

A dispatch from Colonel Stalin some days ago said, « My flyers escort tanks on the ground as well as in the air, » and pointed out that when the aircraft were not protecting the tanks in action, they were employed in moving forward mechanics and ground crews. BRITISH DRIVE EAST AND SOUTH OF CAEN

SHAEF, July 20 — Strong British armored forces, with infantry following up, are driving forward in a 12-mile arc east and south of Caen, overrunning grimly-held German strongpoints in the farms and villages dotted over the plain.

Latest front line dispatches reported street fighting in Bourguebus, the most southerly point reached in General Montgomery's breakthrough. British armor was also reported in villages to the east and west of this important road junction, which is five miles south east of Caen, while other forces reached a point four miles east of Caen.

Meanwhile, trainloads of German tanks were being attacked by Allied planes 100 miles to the east. Fighter-bombers sighted them near Amiens, and immediately went in to attack.

Rommel has lined up at least 5 1/2 German divisions, including the newly-identified 272nd Infantry Division, against the new offensive, but the Allies are now well established on an arc sweeping from the Orne on a radius of about four miles to the region of Troarn. Progress was described here tonight as « quite encouraging, » according to a Reuter correspondent.

Canadian troops, after taking Fleury-sur-Orne, two miles southwest of Caen, pushed on 2,000 yards and now hold Hill 67, an important commanding feature overlooking the Orne.

Despite strong resistance, another Allied column thrusting southeast of the now firmly held Vaucelles captured Urville and pushed on to take Hubert Folie, four miles from Caen, have been gained with the capture of Hill 67. The German pocket which has Maltot as its hinge now faces the threat of being cut off as the Allied scissors close.

The deepest penetration so far announced by General Montgomery is to Cagny and Grentheville, about 5 miles south of the line from which the attack started. An armored clash has been reported at these two points, and the road leading southeast from Caen to Mezidon has been cut.

To the west of Caen, British forces have gained more ground south of Vendes and in the same area they have captured the village of Landelle, driving a small wedge into the German lines one mile northwest of Noyers, which is still in German hands.

North of Villers Bocage, the Germans continue to reduce their salient.

Last night's communique announced that 1,250 prisoners were captured on Tuesday, the first day of the British assault. This brings the total number of prisoners taken in Normandy to over 60,000.

Allied warships through Tuesday and Wednesday engaged enemy batteries northeast of Caen in support of the army advance.

It was announced yesterday that Lieut. Gen. Sir Richard Nugent O'Connor, a hero of the British campaigns in Libya, was the commander of the tank formations which spearheaded the break-through on the Caen front. General O'Connor was captured near Derna in April, 1942, and transferred to a prison camp in Italy. In January of this year, it was announced that he had escaped.

On the American sector of the front, mopping-up continues in Saint Lô, where German artillery fire from the high ground southwest of the town is harassing the American troops. No German counter-attack to try to regain the town has so far been reported. Further ground has been won along the Saint Lô-Periers road, which is now definitely cut south of Amigny.

In the area of Remilly sur Lozon, three more villages have been captured by American forces. They are Lo Varde, Thiebois, and Lange, all close to the banks of an unnamed tributary of the Lozon.

Intense German activity on the main railway line from southwestern France to the Normandy battlefield has been observed by Mosquitoes and Spitfires sweeping as far south as Bordeaux on armed reconnaissance, it was disclosed here today.

In an operation described as of considerable significance, RAF fighter-bombers particularly concentrated their attacks on Saint Jean Dangley, 75 miles north of Bordeaux, where German movement was greatest, and damaged and set on fire at least 20 locomotives and 200 goods wagons. Some of the latter were observed to be carrying armored vehicles northward.

Taken with yesterday's attack by 250 medium bombers on choke points across the Loire, these far-flung reconnaissance and bombing sorties would seem to indicate that Rommel is attempting to bring some of the panzers he is known to have in the south of France up to relieve his hard-pressed troops round Caen.

Other Spitfires and Mosquitoes flew as far east as Paris, and went westward from the battle zone to carry out the first armed reconnaissance over Brest Peninsula for many weeks.

Sixty-two German planes were shot down, and 78 Allied planes were lost in yesterday's widespread operations on the Normandy front. (PWB - Reuter - BBC)

Farther northeast, Cagny, around which armored clashes were reported earlier, is now occupied. Almost due north, infantry is firmly established above Emieville, but the Germans still have a strong anti-tank screen covering the village and running some 2 1/2 miles to the region of Frenouville.

Northwest and southwest of Troarn, the Germans are resisting very strongly.

There is no stabilization of the front in this battle of movement. So far, there is no report of a large-scale tank battle, and routine German counter-attacks have not met with any success.

The British and Americans now have a total of about 40 divisions in Normandy. The Allied penetration is 13 miles deep at its furthest point.

On the west of the line the Germans have pulled back between 1,000 and 2,000 yards to try to form a new front between Saint Germain and Noyers. Adjustment of this line was forced on the Germans by British attacks and by the number of casualties they have suffered. A British officer told a Reuter correspondent that commanding positions overlooking the German garrison in Maltot, north of the Orne, Brigadier Kenneth Exton, Lieutenant General Sir Richard O'Connor, a hero of the North African campaigns, was the commander of the tank formations which spearheaded the break-through on the Caen front. BREMEN ATTACKED BY RAF

LONDON, July 20 — More than 1,200 strongly-escorted Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF made simultaneous attacks this morning upon a number of airplane engine factories, fighter assembly factories, synthetic oil plants, and other targets in central Germany in the Leipzig area, it was announced at U.S. air headquarters.

Weather was generally clear, and the bombing visual, with few exceptions.

Among the targets listed in the attack were an airplane engine factory at Dessau, which makes Junker engines; factories at Eisenach, about 120 miles west southwest of Leipzig, which makes engines for FW 190's; ball bearing factories at Leipzig, and a Messerschmitt 109 assembly plant in the same city; another assembly plant at Gotha, 90 miles southwest of Leipzig, an aircraft components and motor transport factory at Susselsheim, near Frankfort; and synthetic oil plants, including one at Merseburg.

The Associated Press reported that up to 750 fighter-escorted RAF heavy bombers attacked flying-bomb installations in northern France today.

Last night, a strong force of RAF Mosquitoes attacked Bremen, in northwest Germany, and laid mines in enemy waters. All the Allied planes returned.

The German news agency reported today that American heavy bombers based on Britain and Italy this morning attacked several targets in central and southern Germany.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 798021

Yesterday evening, Marauders, Havocs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings of the U. S. 9th Air Force struck hard at enemy communications in France. A force of 250 Marauders and Havocs bombed rail and road bridges over the Seine and the Loire, choke points for German troops and supply movements in Normandy. Later yesterday evening, Thunderbolts and Lightnings were over France, destroying rolling stock.

In daylight yesterday, targets in southern Germany were attacked by 1,700 American heavy bombers based on Britain and Italy, of which 1,200 from Britain carried out visual bombing in good weather, despite considerable German fighter opposition. The enemy lost 59 fighter planes, 24 of them in aerial combat. From Italy, 500 U.S. heavy bombers with fighter escort struck at rail zones and ordnance depots in the Munich area. These attacks continued an air assault on Germany that had not ceased for 24 hours.

In the afternoon, RAF Lancasters attacked flying-bomb installations in Northern France, which they had already hit the night before, and a flying-bomb depot at Thiverny, about 30 miles northeast of Paris, said an Air Ministry communique. All the planes returned safely.

The Germans again sent flying bombs over southern England in daylight today. A.A. guns have been very active since daybreak. The barrage was the heaviest and most concentrated yet put up against raiders. Many flying bombs launched both last night and yesterday were destroyed by combined air ground defenses. Others caused casualties and damage. (PWB - Reuter)

NEW AIR BLOWS LIKE FEBRUARY ATTACKS

SHAEF, July 20 — An Allied spokesman here stated tonight that a great air offensive, comparable to that carried out in February, which dealt the Luftwaffe a crushing blow, has been carried out this week by the 8th USAAF, based in England, and the 15th USAAF, based in Italy.

The main targets of this assault were in Germany and Austria. Yesterday, both the 8th and the 15th USAAF attacked the Munich area, one group coming from the north and the other from the south. (PWB - Reuter)

CAPTURED STORES HELP REBUILD CHERBOURG

LONDON, July 20 — U. S. Army engineers who are rebuilding demolished Cherbourg are finding material and machinery, captured at the gigantic flying bomb launching platforms taken in Normandy, of inestimable value, stated an official report.

Trucks, timber, concrete, portable concrete mixers, steam shovels, and piling, all taken from rocket sites, are being used in the reconstruction work.

One day after the capture of the launching platforms, Allied engineers had Nazi trucks repainted and reconditioned, and they are now hauling cement and lumber into the huge port, where the quays are being rebuilt.

The filling-in of the huge quay faces was one of the biggest jobs and was carried out with broken concrete tank obstacles, which the Germans had carefully stored in large quantities in Cherbourg warehouses.

Scarcely an engineer regiment is using less than three German steam shovels, a crane or two, and a whole fleet of captured trucks, while most of the explosives used by our troops up to now have been involuntary gifts of the Nazis. (PWB - Reuter) of the Esino River for a distance of 10 miles from its mouth, and Polish armor was reported to have crossed the stream to establish a bridgehead on its north bank at a distance 10 miles west of the port of Ancona.

Ancona was left heavily mined by the retreating enemy. Demolitions blocked the streets and rendered useless many of its commercial facilities. Its port, lying between two promontories jutting out into the Adriatic, was clogged with the debris of smashed ships, among them the hulk of King Victor Emanuel III's yacht.

It was announced today that elements of the United States 34th Division, formerly a National Guard unit recruited from Iowa and Minnesota, were the first 5th Army troops to enter Leghorn yesterday.

The official announcement praised the 100th Infantry Battalion, part of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team of Japanese-Americans, as having achieved «one of the proudest records» of a 5th Army unit in the final assault on the city.

These forces are now engaged in clearing up the tangled debris left behind by the retreating enemy in an effort to delay the use of Leghorn as a port of supply for the Allied Armies. The remainder of the 442nd Regimental Combat Team protected the right flank of the American units which actually entered the city.

American patrol forces were reported to be «probing enemy strength along the Arno River» in the left sector of the 5th Army, but whether this was meant to indicate an approach to Pisa closer than the high ground occupied at Colle Salvetti, 8 1/2 miles south of the stream, was not clear from the official announcement. Nor was the precise location of the 25-mile stretch of the Arno River, along which American forces had occupied the southern banks, defined in official reports. The Arno, from the seacoast to Florence, makes a number of twists and bends, so that its length is considerably greater than the 50 airline miles from Tuscany's chief city to the sea.

Two main roads lead to Pisa across the low, fertile plain south of the Arno near the coast. One of these is coastal Highway 1, which passes through the heart of Leghorn, and the other is a secondary road by-passing the port and paralleling the railway line further inland. Heavy enemy demolitions have been reported in this area, including all the main bridges which connect the port area of Leghorn with the mainland. German heavy guns emplaced on the Monte Pisano hill mass, north of Pisa, dominate these approaches.

The retreating Germans have left sniping parties throughout this low region, to cover by their fire the blown bridges and other demolitions.

Further inland, although the German forces apparently suffered heavily from casualties due to the isolation of certain of their units, resistance was more substantial, and in one sector, at Pontedera, on the Arno River, an enemy patrol attack was staged. Other forces, which for the past several days have withstood heavy German counter-attacks around Poggibonsi, yesterday moved both northwest and north from this road center in the Elsa River Valley to capture the town of Varna, only 13 miles south of the Arno, and Certaide, on the Elsa River eight miles northwest of Poggibonsi.

Other localities in the Elsa Valley occupied yesterday included Vico d'Elsa, Poppaiana, Linari, and San Appiano, all within a radius of three or four miles north and northwest of Poggibonsi.

Eighth Army forces pushing along the Arno Valley to approach Florence from the southeast were still meeting heavy opposition in Montevarchi, a town 22 miles from Tuscany's chief city, and in the vicinity of Castiglion and Laterina, seven and eight miles northwest of Arezzo, where British forces have established a bridgehead across the Arno.

NEW AIR BLOWS LIKE FEBRUARY ATTACKS

SHAEF, July 20 — An Allied spokesman here stated tonight that a great air offensive, comparable to that carried out in February, which dealt the Luftwaffe a crushing blow, has been carried out this week by the 8th USAAF, based in England, and the 15th USAAF, based in Italy.

The main targets of this assault were in Germany and Austria. Yesterday, both the 8th and the 15th USAAF attacked the Munich area, one group coming from the north and the other from the south. (PWB - Reuter)

5TH REACHES ARNO ALONG 25-MILE STRETCH

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 20 — American troops of the 5th Army, with the capture of Leghorn, have reached the southern banks of the Arno River for a distance of 25 miles from the sea halfway to Florence.

As torrential rains swept the entire battlefront, the 5th Army reported for the first time in nearly three weeks « only minor contact with the enemy. »

German forces, reported by prisoners to be « bewildered » by the swift American break-through to the Arno through the Era Valley, are now offering only scattered resistance south of the river. American forces have occupied all the dominating terrain on the southern rim of the valley, and forward elements were reported yesterday to hold Colle Salvetti, seven miles northeast of Leghorn and only 3 1/2 miles, by a straight level road, from historic Pisa.

French troops on the right flank of the 5th Army yesterday pushed along the Elsa and the Pesa river valleys for gains of three to four miles which resulted in the capture of San Donato, 16 miles south of Florence.

On the Adriatic coast, Polish and Italian troops of the 8th Army swept forward to occupy the southern banks which actually [illegible]

West of Arezzo, the town of Rubbio was occupied after considerable fighting, and forward troops had advanced two or three miles north and west of this locality when enemy shelling brought them to a halt. In the Tiber Valley, the northwestern thrust of 8th Army forces continued slowly, against stubborn enemy resistance.

As a result of the swift Polish break-through southwest of Ancona, which led to the fall of this port and the disorganization of German defenses south of the Esino River, considerable valuable enemy material has been captured, it was announced today. Mopping up continues along the upper reaches of the Esino River and Italian forces yesterday occupied the town of Santa Maria Nuova, and were approaching Iesi, 10 miles from the coast, on the northern banks of the stream.

Heavies Strike Reich

Formations of up to 500 heavy bombers crossed the Alps today to bomb targets in southern Germany for the third successive day.

The Italy-based planes met only slight enemy fighter opposition, for the second day straight, after the enemy had lost 66 fighters in large-scale attacks against the Allied formations on Tuesday.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Liberator bombers attacked the Zeppelin and Maybach works and a nearby airfield at Friedrichshafen, on Lake Constance, while Fortresses struck at the big Memmingen airdrome, 70 miles southwest of Munich, where twin-engined fighters are based to repel attacks on German targets. Both Friedrichshafen and Memmingen have been attacked once before in the past three days.

The Zeppelin plant, which formerly had produced the big lighter-than-air craft which the Germans had hoped to develop into commercial passenger and freight craft, was being used to turn out light metal pressings and castings for planes, locomotive, and tank engines.

Good results were reported at the targets. Intense flak was encountered.

Intense Flak Over Munich

After losing 66 fighters in futile attempts to ward off the first of two successive days' attacks on southern Germany by Italy-based bombers, the enemy relied almost entirely on record heavy anti-aircraft fire yesterday in desperate attempts to protect aircraft factories and airdromes in the Munich area.

Fortresses and Liberators, which bombed with good results the vital Milbertshofen ordnance depot, the Neuaubing and Allach aircraft factories, and an adjacent airfield on Munich's outskirts, met with only a fraction of the enemy interceptor planes encountered the previous day. But savage anti-aircraft fire put a screen of high explosive bursts around Bavaria's capital, and 20 heavy bombers were reported missing out of the force of up to 500 planes which participated. Escorting fighters strafed rail yards in the vicinity, in the absence of enemy fighter planes.

Huge fires and explosions in the ordnance plant, a supply and storage point for arms and ammunitions within the city limits, rocked the birthplace of the Nazi Party for hours after the bombers had left.

Tactical Air Force bombers and fighters-bombers yesterday continued their slashing attacks on Po Valley communications, to maintain the almost complete isolation of the German forces fighting south of this river. Rail lines were torn up, bridges and approaches smashed, and German transport columns in the Pontassieve-Florence-Bologna area, where the enemy is working frantically to finish and man the Goth Line across Italy, were struck.

Two oil refineries and oil storage areas at Fiume and Trieste, on the Adriatic, were attacked by Fortresses and RAF heavy and medium bombers yesterday and in early morning hours today. Fighter planes in offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia took considerable toll of railway rolling stock.

Fierce Air Battle

The crews of 11 Italy-based Flying Fortresses which survived a savage air battle over Memmingen airdrome in southern Germany, which was bombed again today, told today how they carried out the attack on the big enemy twin-engine-fighter base despite the fact that they had become separated from their protecting fighters and went into the target area alone.

Nearly 200 German fighters tore at the formation of 20 Fortresses in a dreadful, eight-minute long conflict. The bombers were subjected to a series of close-range attacks, in which almost solid screens of rocket projectiles were hurled against them. The action ended only when 12 Lightning fighters rushed into the enemy pack to disperse them.

Over half of the formation of Fortresses — 15 planes and their crews — was downed in the unequal attack, but the formation carried out its bomb run and dropped its high explosives on the target. The gunners of the surviving planes reported that they had shot down 25 enemy interceptors, and it is believed that the Fortresses which were cessful attempt to break from the Allied trap in the Wewak-Siape sector of New Guinea, Thursday's communique from General MacArthur's headquarters stated.

The Japs tried to bypass the American right flank in seeking to escape through the mountain foothills, the communique added. Allied ground forces reported that an additional 582 of the enemy were killed in these operations.

Allied forces had both air and naval support. Medium bombers and fighters harassed the enemy's rear areas, while naval units shelled coastal traffic.

More successful attacks on enemy shipping off northwest Dutch New Guinea were reported by Generale MacArthur's communique. Off Morotai Island, Allied air patrols sunk a 2,000-ton enemy freighter, and further north heavily damaged two trawlers.

Palau, Yap, and Woleai Island in the Carolines have again been pounded. In the attack on Yap, made at midday Tuesday, heavy air units dropped 23 tons of bombs. One of the eight Japanese planes which attempted interception was shot down, and two others were probably destroyed.

Continuing their softening up operations, Allied forces have made additional attacks on Guam Island, south of Saipan in the Marianas, Admiral Nimitz's communique from Pearl Harbor said Wednesday night. More than 320 tons of bombs were dropped Monday by carrier aircraft from a strong task force, severely damaging the island's defense positions.

On the same day, Allied battleships, cruisers, and destroyers laid down an intensive barrage.

The offensive was followed up Tuesday with further bombardment by surface craft. The carrier aircraft dropped 148 tons of bombs on anti-aircraft guns, supply areas, and defense works.

Reconnaissance photographs indicate enormous damage to the capital town of Rota Island, which lies north of Guam. It is believed to be virtually destroyed, the communique said. Eighty tons of bombs were dropped in the attack on Rota Monday.

ENTIRE JAPANESE CABINET RESIGNS

WASHINGTON, July 20 — The entire Japanese cabinet resigned Tuesday.

Domei, the official Japanese news agency, reported that Emperor Hirohitoh has ordered Marquis Koichi Kido, who was Minister of Home Affairs, to form a new cabinet.

The resignation of General Tojo's cabinet came a day after the Premier had been removed from his post as army Chief of Staff. Shortly after Tojo's dismissal from the general staff, he made a broadcast in which the Japanese people were told for the first time of the loss of Saipan Island, the nearest point to Tokyo yet reached by the Allies. In his broadcast, Tojo spoke of the «deep anxiety that has been caused to his Imperial Majesty,» adding that «Japan is faced by the greatest crisis in her history.»

The Japanese people and Japanese-occupied areas first heard the news of the resignation of the Japanese cabinet from American and Allied broadcasts. Domei transmitted the story in Morse code with a «hold for release» note, and then ordered its clients to kill the story, indicating the uneasiness of Japanese officials over the effect the news would have on the people of the Far East. The Domei English transmissions to the United States, however, carried the news.

Explaining the reasons for the resignations of the cabinet, Domei said, in part:

«In the face of the grave situation, and realizing the necessity of strengthened personnel in time of urgency for the prosecution of the war, it has been decided to strengthen the cabinet by a wider selection of personnel.

«By utilizing all means available, the present cabinet was not able to achieve its objective; here, then, the

YUGOSLAV HIGH COMMAND REORGANIZED

LONDON, July 20 — Marshal Tito, head of the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation, has reorganized his high command, according to the Free Yugoslav Radio.

Lieut. General Koca Popovitch becomes commander of the supreme headquarters of the National Liberation Army of Serbia. He was formerly commander of the celebrated 1st Corps. Col. Rudo Vitkovitch has been made assistant commander, and Major General Rudolf Primorac chief of staff. The former Chetnik commander, Major Radoslav Djuric who, with a large number of officers and over a thousand men, came over to the National Liberation Army last June, has been appointed assistant chief of staff. Col. Miodrag Grozdic, former military attache of the Yugoslav Government in Moscow, has been made chief of the air force. (PWB - Reuter)

TRAPPED JAPS SUFFER MORE LOSSES

ADVANCED ALLIED HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, June 20 — Heavy losses were inflicted on troops of the Japanese 17th Army, numbering about 45,000, in an unsuccessful attempt to break out of the Aitape area, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

Allied troops have killed 7,000 Japanese and captured 1,000 since the enemy began its attempt to break out of the area, in which they have been trapped since the Allied landings at Aitape and Hollandia on April 22.

Allied losses have been light, Gen. MacArthur said. (PWB - Reuter)

«At this time of decisive war, to have reached the stage existing today is causing the Emperor much concern, because of which the present cabinet is filled with trepidation and, in apologizing for the Government's meagre power to the men on the fighting front and the people of Japan, it has been decided that this cabinet should be dissolved.»

MORE HIGH JAP OFFICIALS RESIGN

WASHINGTON, July 20 — The Japanese news agency said today that the three chief secretaries of the Japanese cabinet, including Eiwi Amau, President of the Information Board and the Japanese equivalent of Joseph Goebbels, had resigned along with the cabinet. The agency said that three high officials of the Home Ministry, the Vice Minister of Home Affairs, the Chief of the Police Bureau, and the Chief of the Metropolitan Police Board, had resigned also.

PATTERSON ON CHANGE OF JAP GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, July 20 — Acting U. S. Secretary of War Robert Patterson, at his news conference today, said that the fall of the Tojo Government is proof that the Japanese people are becoming aware of the serious defeats their forces are suffering.

Regardless of the personalities appearing in the Japanese government, however, he declared, the character of the nation and its armed forces remains the same. Regardless of any window dressing, the desperate group that controls Japan will see to it that the toughest and most ruthless commanders are brought out to occupy the hazardous army and navy posts.

Just as local Japanese commanders try to keep their men fighting to the end, we can take it for granted that the military chiefs in Tokyo will try to keep their empire, whose central forces have not yet been met in battle, by fighting to the bitter end.

Patterson concluded: « The Japanese need not think that because they change leaders, we will forget what happened at Pearl Harbor and thereafter ». (OWI).

JAPS SAY THEY AWAIT ALLIED LANDINGS

WASHINGTON, July 20 — The Japanese indicated today that they expect the Allies to land on the Japanese mainland. Radio Tokyo said that 100 million Japanese await the Allies on Japanese soil. (At the closest point, on Saipan, Allied forces are 1,500 miles from the enemy mainland).

Japanese propagandists made it clear that even they do not expect the Allied drive will be stopped before it reaches the mainland. In commenting on the resignation of the Tojo cabinet, the broadcast said that it will be possible to deal the Allies a crushing blow when they land on Japan. (PWB)

RELIEF FORCES 2 1/2 MILES FROM HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 20 — Chinese forces are advancing to relieve the besieged city of Hengyang, 230 miles south of Canton, and are now within 2 1/2 miles of the defenders, the Chinese High Command communique announced yesterday. The garrison which has been threatened for the past three weeks, is making strong counter-attacks against the Japanese. Allied air forces have been operating over the Canton, Hengyang, and Tungting lake areas.

On the Indo-Burmese frontier, there is no organized resistance from the Japanese who are fleeing down the Tiddim road. Allied troops have advanced some eight miles below Bishenpur, and have made a two-mile advance per day since the beginning of the Japanese retreat, the Southeast Asia communique stated yesterday.

Pushing southwest from Imphal, other Allied troops have forced the Japanese back 30 miles from the road junction which was a prime objective in the enemy's attempt to invade India.

Chindits have engaged stiffly-resisting enemy troops at points nine miles west and south of Mogaung, former Japanese-held strongpoint.

The Southeast Asia communique reported that American planes over northern Burma have again hit targets along the Myitkyina-Mandalay railway, southwest of Mogaung. They also struck at two airfields southeast of Bhamo, which were declared unserviceable after the attack. No Allied planes were lost in the actions.

Alun Humphreys, Reuter correspondent at Allied headquarters in Kandy, Ceylon, discussing the Imphal fighting, stated that the battle for Imphal ended with a victory for the 14th Army and a complete defeat for the Japanese 33rd Division, the best fighters in Lieut. General [illegible] "invade India" army. Humphreys stated that

The soldiers of the unit are entitled by the award to wear distinctive badges commemorating the action, which took place in the vicinity of Belvedere and Sassetta, on June 26-27.

In the announcement of the citation, General Clark said that the battalion, now employed in clearing away debris left by German demolitions in the port of Leghorn, had « one of the most outstanding combat records » in the theater. (PWB - PRO)

U. S. SOLDIERS TO VOTE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 20 — A total of 500 officers, representing all major commands in the Mediterranean theater, will see to it that every qualifying American soldier is given the opportunity to register his choice in the coming national elections, it was announced here today.

Regardless of where he may be stationed, whether in an isolated post or in combat at the front, the American soldier will be provided with an application for a ballot from his state on August 1, and, upon its receipt, will be provided with top priority air mail to speed his choice back to the United States to be counted on November 7. Only where personal mail cannot be received or dispatched at any time during this period by a soldier because of some exceptional assignment, will he fail to receive the necessary forms.

To insure that the ballot shall be secret and free from pressure, the envelopes containing both the application for the ballot and the ballot form itself will not be subjected to army or other censorship. All these envelopes will be clearly distinguished by prominent red stripes printed across their face. (PWB - PRO)

LIBERATED ITALY

ONE-THIRD ITALY RETURNED TO GOVERNMENT

ROME, July 20 — The Allied Control Commission today handed to the Italian Government all territory in the provinces of Foggia, Campobasso, Benevento, Avellino, and Naples, with the exception of the Commune of Naples.

On August 15, said an ACC announcement, the province of Rome, including the City of Rome, and the provinces of Frosinone and Littoria, will be handed over to the Government of Italy.

By August 15, one-third of Italy will have been returned to Italian jurisdiction, said the official announcement. ACC declared that the transfer of territory has been made possible « by the victorious advance of the Allied Armies in Italy. »

Recalling that only two months have elapsed since the start of the attack on the Gustav Line, the ACC declared « the United Nations are thus fulfilling with the utmost speed their declared intention that the Italian people should be given the earliest opportunity after their liberation to enjoy the free institutions which are an inherent part of political democracy.

February 14, 1944, the provinces of Salerno and Potenza, and the compartments of Lucania and Calabria, together with the Island of Sicily, were handed back to the Italian Government. The provinces of Bari, Brindisi, Lecce, and Taranto, and the Island of Sardinia, were never under Allied Military Government. Some 46,000 square miles of Italian territory, with a population of 15,000,000, have now been returned to Italian rule. (PWB)

AMERICANS OF JAPANESE DESCENT CITED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 20 — Lieutenant General Mark Clark announced in 5th Army orders today the soldier will be provided with an application for a ballot from his state on August 1, and, upon its receipt, will be provided with top priority air mail to speed his choice back to the United States to be counted on November 7. Only where personal mail cannot be received or dispatched at any time during this period by a soldier because of some exceptional assignment, will he fail to receive the necessary forms.

To insure that the ballot shall be secret and free from pressure, the envelopes containing both the application for the ballot and the ballot form itself will not be subjected to army or other censorship. All these envelopes will be clearly distinguished by prominent red stripes printed across their face. (PWB - PRO)

LIBERATED ITALY

ONE-THIRD ITALY RETURNED TO GOVERNMENT

ROME, July 20 — The Allied Control Commission today handed to the Italian Government all territory in the provinces of Foggia, Campobasso, Benevento, Avellino, and Naples, with the exception of the Commune of Naples.

On August 15, said an ACC announcement, the province of Rome, including the City of Rome, and the provinces of Frosinone and Littoria, will be handed over to the Government of Italy.

By August 15, one-third of Italy will have been returned to Italian jurisdiction, said the official announcement. ACC declared that the transfer of territory has been made possible "by the victorious advance of the Allied Armies in Italy."

Recalling that only two months have elapsed since the start of the attack on the Gustav Line, the ACC declared "the United Nations are thus fulfilling with the utmost speed their declared intention that the Italian people should be given the earliest opportunity after their liberation to enjoy the free institutions which are an inherent part of political democracy.

February 11, 1944, the provinces of Salerno and Potenza, and the compartments of Lucania and Calabria, together with the island of Sicily, were handed back to the Italian Government. The provinces of Bari, Brindisi, Lecce, and Taranto, and the island of Sardinia, were never under Allied Military Government. Some 46,000 square miles of Italian territory, with a population of 15,000,000, have now been returned to Italian rule. (PWB)

MACFARLANE RESIGNS AS HEAD OF ACC

LONDON, July 20 — Lieutenant General Sir Noel Mason Macfarlane has relinquished the post of Chief Commissioner of the Allied Control Commission in Italy, to undergo a prolonged course of medical treatment, it was announced today.

Pending the appointment of his successor, the post of Acting Chief Commissioner will be held by Captain Ellery Stone, United States Navy. (PWB - Reuter)

ROME CHIEF CIVIL AFFAIRS OFFICER REPORTS

ROME, July 20 — The Allied Forces prepared for the civil administration of Rome by planning for 5 1/2 months prior to the actual liberation of the city, Brigadier General Edgar Erskine Hume, Chief of the Allied Military Government for the 5th Army, said in a report issued by 5th Army Headquarters.

General Hume entered the city on Monday, June 5, upon its formal investment, and remained as Chief Affairs Officer until the 5th Army moved northward. He said that, without this planning, it would not have been possible to effect emergency restoration of public services in Rome, including the feeding of the population.

This review of the first 10 days of the liberation of the city from the Fascists and Germans points out that every primary objective of the military government divisions of the 5th Army were realized days before the time called for them in the planned schedule.

Banks, for instance, were opened within one week of the Allied entry — an achievement unprecedented in the previous history of Allied Military Government operations.

The report added that black market outlets were halted or greatly curtailed, and that seven AMG courts were ready to function within 24 hours after the Allies' arrival.

The purging of Fascists began during these initial 10 days, the report continued, with 350 Fascists and Fascist sympathizers arrested. The ultra-Fascist police body, African Italian Police, was disbanded.

A total of 2,976 tons of foodstuffs was brought into the city by the Allies in this same 10-day period. Most of this quantity was flour. More than 1,000 truck loads were required to move this amount into the city. By means of these, and other steps taken, it was possible to provide emergency feeding for 100,000 people.

The abolition of the old Fascist Governatorato, or Federal District Government of Rome, and substitution of a city government headed by Prince Doria Pamphili were also cited as achievements of the same period. The advisory City Council, composed of representatives of the six anti-Fascist parties, was also established.

The housing of as many as 50,000 refugees in Cinema City, and the care of many more dispossessed, is another part of the record. The entire story is contained in a 146-page book written by General Hume, entitled ALLIED MILITARY GOVERNMENT OF ROME UNDER THE 5TH ARMY, 5 to 15 June 1944, Report to the Army Commander. The first copy was presented to Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark at 5th Army Headquarters by General Hume.

NEW ELECTRICITY RATIONING ANNOUNCED

ROME, July 20 — A new system of rationing the limited amount of electrical power available in the city of Rome was approved today and will go into effect Monday, July 24. It is designed to give a fair amount of electrical current to all civilian consumers, after the military and civilian institutions with priorities, such as hospitals and bakeries, have been taken care of.

Under the new plan, the present system of four geographical divisions of the city will be retained, but instead of each division's getting four hours of current every two days, each division will get 16 hours of continous electrical service every four days. On the day on which each division is to be served, current will be available from 1400 hours until 0600 hours the following morning.

The new distribution plan enables the power companies to switch on and off those non-essential users who happen to be on priority military and civilian circuits, so taht such users will get only the 16 hours every four days allotted to all others.

Those few non-essential users on priority circuits who have been disconnected will be restored to power lines to get their allotted 16 hours every four days.

The plan was advanced jointly by the SRE and the ACEA, the power companies, and was approved during the day by the Electrical Power Committee of the Rome Area Allied Command. The announcement was made by Lt. Col. Henry Ortlip, Chairman of the Power Committee.

The necessity for city-wide cooperation on the part of citizens in saving as much electricity as possible was stressed by officials. The new plan is not based on any additional power for distribution, but solely on the desire to provide as fair a distribution as possible. (PWB - RAAC)

NAZIS TORTURED, SHOT SIX AREZZO HOSTAGES

ROME, July 20 — An investigation carried out yesterday in Staggiano, a suburb of Arezzo, disclosed that the Germans shot and tortured six hostages, whose bodies have been found in a single grave in the garden of a villa formerly occupied by a notorious Fascist, Secchitti.

The bodies were found Sunday night by a Staggiano man, who said they were about 1 1/8 Feet below ground, unrecognisable, and scantily clothed. They showed signs of having been tortured before being shot. Relatives identified the bodies Monday, by their clothes. (PWB)

MASS IN SIENA FOR FRENCH, ALLIED DEAD

SIENA, July 20 — General Alphonse Juin, commander of the French Expeditionary Corps, with all other French Corps generals in the region, French and American officers and enlisted men, attended a solemn military Mass celebrated in Siena Cathedral on Monday for all men and women of the French Expeditionary Corps, and Allied troops attached to it, who had lost their lives in the Italian campaign. Many Italian townspeople were also present at the service.

The mass was said by the chief chaplain of the Corps, Father Louis Jarraux, who said in his discourse that the mass was offered "for all our soldiers" who had given their lives for the cause of liberty, whether Catholic, Protestant, or Mussulmen, Allied as well as French.

Father Jarraux was assisted by other priests of the Corps, chaplains of divisions, regiments, and hospitals. The choir was formed by French soldiers and by members of the Corps Feminins. The traditional bugle notes were sounded at the appropriate points in the mass. (PWB)

ROOSEVELT'S NAME RECEIVES OVATION

CHICAGO, July 20 — President Roosevelt received a tremendous ovation last night from the delegates of the Democratic National Convention meeting here to choose the party's candidate for President of the United States.

The delegates' cheers for the President came during the convention's keynote speech by Governor Kerr of Colorado, when he rebutted the charge by Governor Dewey of New York, the Republican presidential candidate, that the Roosevelt administration was one of «tired old men.» Governor Kerr pointed to the achievements of such tired «old men» as 69-year old Winston Churchill, Josef Stalin, and Chiang Kai-shek and finally 62-year old President Roosevelt.

United States Senator Scott Lucas of Illinois, in a speech of welcome to the delegates, praised President Roosevelt's war leadership stating, «no man in America understands the enemy's evil and duplicity better than President Roosevelt.» Senator Lucas declared that the American people expect the Democrats to approve a clear, unequivocal program regarding war and peace, adding that only the reelection of President Roosevelt can fulfill America's aspiration of a durable peace.

War Mobilization Director James Byrnes of South Carolina announced that he was withdrawing as a candidate for nomination as vice presidential candidate. The race for second place on the party's ticket is now being contested between Vice President Henry Wallace and United States Senator Truman of Missouri. (PWB)

PRACTICE AIR RAID ALERT IN ROME

ROME, July 20 — Allied officials announced that a practice air alert will be held next Wednesday evening, July 26, at 2230 hours in the city of Rome.

The signals for the air alert are as follows:
Alert — Six blasts — One every 15 seconds.

All-Clear — One continuous blast lasting two minutes.

During the alert, vehicles must pull to the curb, stop, and extinguish all lights for the duration of the alert.

If a real air raid should occur during the practise, cancellation of the practice alert will be indicated by the all-clear signal, followed by the regular warning signal.

LAX ROME BLACKOUT DEPLORED

ROME, July 20 — AMG Police Chief Lt. Col. J. R. Pollock today deplored the laxity of citizens of Rome in observing the rigid blackout regulations promulgated by the Allied Command in the first days of the liberation of the city.

A total blackout will be observed during the hours of darkness, the AMG ordinance said. This same ordinance provides court penalties for violations.

The only exception is on vehicles of civilians authorized to circulate after the curfew. Special blackout regulations, however, cover even these vehicles.

TWO TO THREE NAZI DIVISIONS QUIT NORWAY

WASHINGTON, July 20 — Two or three divisions of German troops have been evacuated from Norway, and the garrison in this country is now «weaker than at any time since the invasion,» the Norwegian Embassy here reported Wednesday night.

Five trainloads of German troops are evacuated daily, said the report, and a ban has been imposed on all civilian traffic on the main Trondheim and Oslo railway.

The Embassy further reported: «There has been a curtailment of work on German coastal fortifications in Norway.» (OWI)

ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 20 — Today's communique:

LAND: Following the capture of Leghorn, American troops of the 5th Army have reached the River Arno on a front of about 25 miles, and there is now only scattered enemy resistance south of the river in this sector. Farther east, troops of the 5th Army have been engaged with enemy rear guards and have advanced between two and three miles, having cleared the towns of Varnia, Certaldo, and San Donato.

West of Arezzo, troops of the 8th Army have been engaged in heavy fighting in the area of Montevarchi and in the hills around Radda, which has been captured, and from which further progress has been made to the north.

In the Adriatic sector of the 8th Army, Polish and Italian troops are now meeting enemy resistance on the general line of the River Esino, eight miles west of Ancona. Italian troops have cleared the town of Santa Maria Nuova.

AIR: Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked two aircraft component factories, an ordnance depot, and rail yards at Munich. Fighter escort aircraft also conducted offensive sweeps over the target area. Other heavy bombers struck at oil storage facilities in Trieste. Enemy communications and other objectives in northern Italy and the battle area, as well as in Yugoslavia, were attacked by tactical aircraft.

Last night, our bombers attacked an oil refinery at Fiume. In these operations, seven enemy aircraft were destroyed, and 25 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,400 sorties.

The battle south and east of Caen continues. Allied troops striking towards Troarn have reached the railway half a mile from the town, while other forces, which had Cuen has steadily extended the [illegible] which is firmly in our hands.

Bourguebus and Frenouville have been freed of the enemy, and we are in possession of the villages of Bras and Hubert Follie, and the ridge to the north of St. Andre-sur-Orne.

Enemy attempts to counter-attack were repelled, and our threat to Troarn was increased by an advance toward St. Pair, on high ground to the south of the town.

Northwest of St. Lô, Allied troops advanced to the line of the Vire, and also improved their positions to the south of the town.

Visibility limited air operations over the immediate battle area from midnight until noon, but several successful attacks were made in northeast France. Near Amiens, two trains loaded with enemy tanks were effectively bombed by our fighter-bombers, which also damaged a bridge over the Somme and destroyed rolling stock at Abancourt and at Sable-sur-Sarthe, northeast of Angers.

A highway bridge at Gissors was attacked, and railway lines were cut in several places north of Laval and Le Mans, and southwest of Dreux.

Escorted light bombers hit the rail center at Chaulnes near Amiens, destroying much rolling stock.

Coastal aircraft attacked enemy surface craft in the Channel. One enemy aircraft was shot down near St. Quentin. Two of our fighters are missing. (PWB - Reuter)

FRENCH FORCES OF THE INTERIOR

SHAEF, July 20 — General Eisenhower tonight issued the following special communique:

During the period July 4 to 15, French Resistance Forces continued their operations in face of violent German attacks, which were frequently supported by tanks, artillery, and aircraft.

In the majority of the attacks, either the enemy was repelled with serious losses, or the French Forces of the Interior were able to retire successfully. As a result of these activities, the movement of enemy troops and supplies to Normandy has been effectively delayed.

In the Ain Department, important zones remain liberated, though Resistance Forces have been forced temporarily to abandon three towns. In two departments of central France, where repeated assaults of the enemy have been repelled, the Germans have suffered many casualties.

Enemy losses are also considerable in Saone-et-Loire in Brittany, and in the region of Paris. A panzer division moving toward Normandy was detained for 30 hours, and lost 80 killed and 300 wounded.

On the whole railway system, but particularly on the more important lines, traffic has been considerably slowed down and often completely suspended by the cutting of tracks. Many derailments have resulted, and at several points immobilized trains have been attacked. The number of locomotives, coaches, troops, and material destroyed is considerable. A train carrying flying bombs in eastern France has been completely destroyed. Twentysix bridges, most of which were on strategic routes, were cut or seriously damaged between June 24 and July 6.

Canals through which the Germans attempt to move part of their traffic have also been dealt with efficiently. Traffic has been interrupted by destroying locks of numerous canals, including the Marne and Rhine canals. Electric power grids have been frequently attacked. High-tension lines supplying railroad systems in the south have been cut. Transformers and converters supplying important war factories have been destroyed.

The enemy system of telecommunications has also suffered serious disturbance. The Paris-Berlin cable, and many underground long distance lines in departments of the east, center, and south have been cut periodically.

The battle south and east of Caen continues. Allied troops striking towards Troarn have reached the railway half a mile from the town, while other forces, which had taken part in the clearing of Louvigny and Vaucelles, have driven the enemy from the village of Cormelles.

To the south and east, our armor has been in action against the enemy armor and anti-tank defense bases on villages and farmsteads. Further west, a systematic advance has been made along the front between Grainville and Saint Germain Dectot.

Seven bridges and enemy fuel dumps at Orleans were the principal objectives for our medium bombers yesterday. Loire River bridges at Tours la Riche, La Poissoniere, and Nantes, and other bridges at Mantes Gassicourt, Combourg, and Saint Hilaire du Harcouet were attacked. Results could not be observed in all cases, but three of the bridges are believed to have been made impassable.

Armed reconnaissance patrols ranged southward to Bordeaux, and eastward from Normandy to the Paris area, to attack rail traffic. Many locomotives and goods wagons were damaged during widespread strafing and bombing of trains and railyards. (PWB-Reuter)

The enemy system of telecommunications has also suffered serious disturbance. The Paris-Berlin cable, and many underground long distance lines in departments of the east, center, and south have been cut periodically.

The activity of the French Forces of the Interior is also employed against German war industry in France. In the Mediterranean, regional railroad machine shops had to abandon work for at least a month. An engine depot has been set on fire in the Jura area. Leather warehouses have been destroyed in the Alps. A surprise attack by French Forces of the Interior liberated interned Patriots in a camp at Evaux les Bains.

Resistance groups in Belgium since the Allied landings have been engaged in the systematic destruction of railways, road bridges, telecommunications, railway turntables, and signalling apparatus throughout the entire country. Results obtained have been highly satisfactory. The Belgian network of rail and road communications has been largely disrupted, and this contributed substantially to delaying the movement of enemy reinforcements to the battle area.

North and west of Utena, our troops occupied with fighting over 80 populated localities, including Kayamai, Urkutyai, Shatesknyai, Bayarai, Rymshani Shvedosai, Mechani, Sloviani, and the railway stations of Kanemuli, Kliakurishki, and Sopishkis. Our troops have cut the railway line of Dvinsk-Ponevezhesk.

West of Volkovysk, our troops occupied with fighting a number of populated localities, including Krubliaki, Strashevo, Gorodok, Meleski, Podozerani, and Oziabli.

In the direction of Brest, our troops, developing their offensive, captured the town and important railway junction of Kobrin, the railway junction of Cheremkha, and also occupied with fighting over 50 other populated localities, including Makhnata, Oriya, Cheremkha, Verkhovichi, Legati, Borisovo, and the railway stations of Naritsa, Gnizets, and Grigorovtsi.

Troops of the 1st white Russian Front, having gone on the offensive, from the area of Kovel, broke through the strongly-fortified German defenses, and during the three days' offensive advanced forward up to 50 kilometers, widening the break-through up to 150 kilometers along the front.

In the course of the offensive, troops of the front captured the following district centers of the Volynsk Region: the towns of Liuboml, Ratno, Turik, Matsecv, Zabolotie, Golovno, and also occupied with fighting over 400 other populated localities, including Makrani, Malorita, Gutа-Ratninska, Liubokhini, Gutner, Gorany, Zadubie, Bereztsi, Benduka, Koritni, Nikitichi, and the railway stations of Malorita, Otislav, Zabolotie, Krimno, Vizhva, Misovo, Moschenoye, Turik, Ovatno, Cherkassi, Matseikov, Podgorodnya, and Liuboml.

Our troops have reached the River Zapadny Bug.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainain Front, developing their successful offensive, captured by storm the towns and important railway junctions of Vladimir-Volinsky and Rava Russkava, and also occupied with fighting over 300 other populated localities, including the following district centers of Lvov Region: Glinyani and Peremishlyani; and the following important localities: Trepalichi Ushkovi, Lisovich, Ulche, Domashev, Kulikov, Doroshev, (within 8 kilometers north of Lvov), Zapita, Goloburie, Remizovtsi, Khabarovtsi, Glinna Olesish, Galenkov, Viktorovka, and the railway stations of Bubnov, Zinevichi, Ulgubets, Zapitok, Pustoglavi, and Yarkovtsi.

West of Brody, our troops were engaged in the annihilation of encircled enemy groups and, tightening the ring of encirclement, occupied the following populated localities: Adami, Sokolovka, Kontsi, Yushkovitsi, and Olesko.

Our troops have repelled all attempts of the enemy to break through the encirclement, and inflicted on him heavy losses in men and material.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 19, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 91 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 53 enemy planes were shot down.

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 20 — Today's Italian Resistance Front Communique:

The reopening of the Allied advance has caused the patriots to intensify their attacks against German supply

Piaventine Appenines, the patriots attacked Nazi-Fascist garrisons with marked success.

In Umbria, a German transport unit, comprising two vehicles loaded with petrol and three others loaded with S.S. troops, was attacked by patriots. The enemy suffered severe losses.

Near the Rieti airport, the bodies of 15 patriots have been exhumed. The dead were killed by the Germans, following a Fascist denunciation. (PWB)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 20 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, the enemy throughout the day continued his attacks with strong tank, artillery, and air support, in the area east and southeast of Caen, but failed to achieve the attempted break-through. After embittered fighting raging all day long in St. Lô, the ruins of the town were evacuated. Enemy thrusts made from the town towards the south, as well as strong American local attacks farther to the northwest, collapsed with heavy losses to the enemy. Battle planes supported the defensive fighting of the ground troops in effective low-level attacks, and destroyed 10 enemy tanks. Sixteen enemy planes were shot down in aerial battles. Last night, German bombers and night-fighter planes successfully attacked enemy prepared positions north of Caen. Damage and explosions were caused in ammunition and fuel depots. During the night of July 18, night-fighters shot down 30 four-engined British bombers over northern France.

Batteries of the Channel Island of Alderny set one enemy escorting destroyer afire. The destroyer sank after heavy explosions.

In France, 151 terrorists were annihilated in fighting.

The retaliatory fire on London continued throughout the night.

In Italy, the enemy in embittered fighting in the course of which he suffered particularly heavy losses, entered the southern part of the town of Leghorn, and penetrated into the completely destroyed harbor installations, where fierce street fighting developed. In the evening, our troops were withdrawn to positions north of the town.

Northwest of Poggibonsi, numerous enemy attacks were frustrated. West of Ancona, the enemy, after embittered fighting, succeeded in gaining a foothold with minor forces on the northern bank of the Esino River. However, all enemy attacks, launched with particular intensity along the coastal road, collapsed.

In the southern sector of the Eastern Front, our divisions are engaged in heavy defensive fighting in the area east of Lvov. Enemy attempts at breaking through toward the direction of the town itself were checked. Strong Soviet forces advancing from Kovel were brought to a standstill on the Bug. In the central sector, fierce fighting continues north of Brest. Soviet fighting groups who had crossed the western bank of the Niemen in the Grodno area were repulsed in counter-thrusts. In the lake region northwest and north of Vilna, and between the Dvina and Ostrov, strong Soviet attacks were smashed in fluctuating fighting, and some penetrations were sealed off. In the sector held by a single German corps, 215 enemy tanks were destroyed within the past seven days.

Sergeant Ungerot of a tank destroying unit destroyed yesterday with his gun 11 heavy Soviet tanks.

The Air Force made numerous low-level attacks on enemy prepared positions and columns, again destroying a great number of tanks, and more than 230 motorized and horse-drawn vehicles.

In air combats and by anti-aircraft artillery, 56 enemy

Troops of the 1st white Russian Front, having gone on the offensive, from the area of Kovel, broke through the strongly-fortified German defenses, and during the three days' offensive advanced forward up to 50 kilometers, widening the break-through up to 150 kilometers along the front.

In the course of the offensive, troops of the front captured the following district centers of the Volynsk Region: the towns of Liuboml, Ratno, Turik, Matseev, Zabolotie, Golovno, and also occupied with fighting over 400 other populated localities, including Makrani, Malorita, Guta-Ratninska, Liubokhini, Gutner, Gorany, Zadubie, Bereztsi, Benduka, Koritni, Nikitichi, and the railway stations of Malorita, Otislav, Zabolotie, Krimno, Vizhva, Misovo, Moschenoye, Turik, Ovatno, Cherkassi, Matseikov, Podgorodnya, and Liuboml.

Our troops have reached the River Zapadny Bug.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainain Front, developing their successful offensive, captured by storm the towns and important railway junctions of Vladimir-Volinsky and Rava Russkava, and also occupied with fighting over 300 other populated localities, including the following district centers of Lvov Region: Glinyani and Peremishlyani; and the following important localities: Trepalichi Ushakovi, Lisovich, Uiche, Domashev, Kulikov, Doroshev, (within 8 kilometers north of Lvov), Zapita, Goloburie, Remizovtsi, Khabarovtsi, Glinna Olesish, Galenkov, Viktorovka, and the railway stations of Bubnov, Zinevichi, Ulgubets, Zapitok, Pustoglavi, and Yarkovtsi.

West of Brody, our troops were engaged in the annihilation of encircled enemy groups and, tightening the ring of encirclement, occupied the following populated localities: Adami, Sokolovka, Kontsi, Yushkovitsi, and Olesko.

Our troops have repelled all attempts of the enemy to break through the encirclement, and inflicted on him heavy losses in men and material.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 19, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 91 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 53 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 20 — Today's Italian Resistance Front Communique:

The reopening of the Allied advance has caused the patriots to intensify their attacks against German supply lines and the work in progress on the Goth Line. Along an important part of that German defensive line, north of Florence, the continous attacks of the patriots have forced work on the fortifications to be suspended for one week.

Nazi-Fascist operations against the patriots in Val Sesia continue. Despite their use of large forces, the enemy did not succeed in gaining their objectives. Instead, the Germans suffered heavy losses exceeding those of the patriots. German troops, aided by the Fascists, have carried on cruel reprisals against civilians, forcing the inhabitants of some villages to abandon their homes and to take shelter in the mountains and woods. There, such refugees have been joined by the patriots.

"MAD GENERALS" ATTEMPT ON HITLER'S LIFE MAY BE MAJOR CRISIS

London, July 21--Following the German news agency's brief announcement last night of an attempted assassination of Adolf Hitler the Reichsfuehrer himself made a remarkable six-minute speech to the German nation at midnight in which he admitted that the conspiracy against his life was led by officers of the German Army. This and other evidence coming from Germany today has led observers to believe that there is a possibility that this first sign of organized revolt in Germany may be the beginning of a real revolution.

"Hitler's sensational midnight speech revealed that behind the bare announcement of the attempt on his life is a major internal crisis in the Reich, if not a wide revolution against Hitler," wrote Reuters' foreign observer today.

High explosives were used in the attempt on Hitler's life yesterday. Several members of his staff were severely injured and one later died. Hitler escaped with light burns and concussions but no injuries. He continued his work after the explosion and later received his old friend, Mussolini.

Shortly after midnight the German radio opened up with Hitler's six-minute speech: Said Hitler--"For the third time an attempt on my life has been planned and carried out. If I speak to you today it is first in order that you should hear my voice and that you should know that I myself am unhurt and well. Secondly, in order that you should know about a crime unparalleled in German history. A very small clique of ambitious, irresponsible, and at the same time senseless and criminally stupid officers have formed a plot to eliminate me and with me the State. A bomb exploded two metres to my right. One of those with me has died. I myself am completely unhurt. I regard this as a confirmation of the task imposed on me by Providence to continue on the road of my life as I have done hitherto. The bomb was laid by Colonel Count Von Stauffenberg. Suddenly at the moment when the German Army is engaged in a bitter struggle a small group has emerged in Italy and Germany in the belief that they could repeat the 1918 stab in the back. But this time they have made a bad mistake. The circle of these conspirators is very small and has no connection with the spirit of the German Wehrmacht and above all none with the German people. It is a miniature group of criminal elements who will now be ruthlessly exterminated. I therefore order that no military authority, no leader of any unit, no private in the field is to obey any orders emanating from this group of usurpers. I also order that it is everyone's duty to arrest or, if they resist, to kill at sight anyone issuing or handing out such orders. The claim made by these usurpers that I am no longer alive is being contradicted as this very moment not that I, my dear compatriots, am speaking to you. It has again been granted to me that I should escape a doom which would have been terrible not for me but for the German people. They see in this, however, again the pointing finger of Providence that I must and will carry on with my work."

The German news agency later stated that the conspiracy had completely collapsed adding that the ringleaders "have either been shot or committed suicide." Hitler announced last night that Himmler, the ruthless chief of the Gestapo, had been appointed commander of home armed forces. This left little doubt that the Nazi chief is rallying his followers for a fight to the bitter end. There was ample evidence of confusion in Germany today, however. In a special broadcast Goering ordered German officers to confirm all orders by telephone and to obey only orders emanating from Himmler and himself. In another broadcast Admiral Doenitz spoke of his "holy rage and measureless wrath" against the "mad generals" who made the attempt on "our beloved Fuehrer." From Stockholm came the report that tele-

-phone connections with Berlin had been cut since 7:40 last night. Early this morning a German radium wave station operating on the Frankfurt wavelength was picked up by the Reuters radio listening post and a speaker describing himself as an officer of the Wehrmacht made this appeal to his fellow officers: "We have instances of single officers, aware of higher duties to the Fatherland, taking courageous actions and refusing to act on the criminal orders of their superiors. But now only a united host of such courageous, fearless officers can save our cause." The broadcast was faded out in the middle of a sentence but during the few minutes that the officer spoke he said: "We have committed our crimes in fear of the Gestapo and this cowardice no one will never forgive ourselves. One man bears the supreme blame and his name is Hitler. By comrades we shall tolerate the Gestapo no longer..."

GERMAN DEFENSES CRUMBLE AS RED ARMY ROLLS AHEAD - NEW OFFENSIVE OPENED: Moscow, July 21--The whole central Russian front today was a series of great jagged lines as the Red Army punched new holes in the German Army's tattered defense line and surged forward into 300 new towns. A new offensive has been launched west of Kovel and Soviet troops have driven all the way to the Bug River, 42 miles northwest of Kovel, capturing more than 450 towns. Another large dent in German lines northwest of Lvov has outflanked that closely-pressed city by as much as 25 miles. In the north, Soviet troops driving deep into Lithuania northwest of Utena have cut the Dvinsk - Ponevezh railway line. The German news agency reports that Russian troops have reached Augustow, northwest of Grodno, which is only eight miles from the East Prussia border. Soviet accounts of the fighting in this area are still vague and unspecific. Near Brest-Litovsk the town of Kobryn and 50 other localities were captured. Among the towns captured west of Kovel was Lubomi, some 10 miles east of the Bug and 25 miles west of Kovel. The city of Lvov is partially surrounded with the capture of a town some eight miles north of the town. Northwest of Lvov Soviet troops have made a deep salient to capture Rawa Ruska.

BATTLE FOR TROARN: London, July 21--German Tiger tanks were battling desperately for Troarn (seven miles east of Caen) key to the valley of the River Dives and the ground to the west. The intensity of the battle decreased yesterday, with the Allies consolidating and strengthening their grip on the 30 square miles they have already won since the start of the assault. Considerably more than the first day's 1500 prisoners have been accepted into Allied cages. One of the main links in the anti-tank screen southeast of Caen has been overrun with the capture of Franqueville. A new German infantry division has been identified on the battle field. It was brought in from the east. The American sector of the front is still comparatively quiet though German counterattacks have pushed General Bradley's troops slightly back from one of their positions which dominates the Saint Lo-Periers road. The weather kept the airforces relatively inactive yesterday but tactical planes were able to fly 500 sorties.

ALLIES MOVE UP ON GOTHIC LINE IN TORRENTIAL RAIN: Allied Headquarters, July 20--Today's communique reports that a torrential rain has delayed the forward march of the Fifth and Eighth Armies but, nevertheless, the Fifth Army has reached the Arno on a 25 mile front and is now only nine miles from Pisa. To the east the towns of Certaldo, and Sandonato have been captured by the Fifth Army in a two or three mile advance. On the central front the Eighth Army has captured Rocca and advanced beyond it, while on the Adriatic coast the line has generally moved up to the River Esino, eight miles west of Ancona.

ROOSEVELT NOMINATED AS DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE: A Pacific Coast Naval Base, July 20--President Roosevelt in a broadcast tonight accepted nomination for a fourth term. His speech from this naval base came as a climax to a cross-country trip shrouded in war-time secrecy.

LEGHORN AND ANCONA LIBERATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 19 — American forces of the 5th Army today captured the great port city of Leghorn, after cutting off the city by a brilliant flanking move which bypassed the large scale German defenses to the south and entered the port from the east.

The enemy forces, disposed for a frontal assault on the city from the south, where they had manned massive defenses, originally erected to protect Leghorn from a possible surprise Allied landing, were completely outmanoeuvered by the 5th Army's thrust along the network of inland roads bordering the Era River Valley.

It was announced today that virtually all the port facilities in Leghorn, normally capable of handling 17,500 tons per day, have been destroyed. The city's many bridges, crossing the skein of canals through the lowlands east and River Valley to reach the River Arno at Pontedera have now cut in two the enemy troops fighting south of the Arno. They were reported today to have consolidated their positions along the southern bank of this broad stream, and to be extending their grip on Highway 67, the main road from Florence to both Leghorn and Pisa. Pontedera, which the Americans now occupy, is only three miles east of the road fork where the lateral road branches westward to the two big cities.

East of the Era River Valley, and some 23 miles inland, other American forces were fighting their way along the narrow, mine sown valleys of the Chiencinella and Chiecina rivers, two minor tributaries of the Arno. Leading elements were less than a half mile south of the village of Montopoli, itself 1 1/2 miles south of the Arno at a point 25 miles west of Florence.

Despite devastating mortar and machine gun fire, and a tremendous enemy artillery barrage, American forces pushed the Germans back some two miles during the 24-hour period up to noon yesterday. The enemy forces, hard pressed, were attempting to reach the northern banks of the Arno in this sector before they should be cut off. More than 100 prisoners were taken in mopping up operations in this vicinity.

In the tedious advance through the mountain terrain east of Leghorn, American forces yesterday occupied the villages of Luciana, eight miles east of the Tuscan port, and Badalucco and Fauglia Ponsacco, both about two miles further northeast. In the savage fighting which marked all progress in this area, the troops of the 442 Regimental Combat Team, Americans of Japanese descent, played an important part. These soldiers are all volunteer troops, many of whom entered the armed forces from relocation centers to which Japanese-Americans resident on the west coast of the United States were removed shortly after America's entry into the war.

The brilliant conclusion of the campaign waged by the Polish Corps to capture Ancona was described as a «great success,» and the official announcment of its fall predicted that the port «will greatly assist future operations» of the Allied Armies in Italy.

Ancona was taken by a flanking maneuvre similar to that executed by the American forces on the west coast to encircle Leghorn. Polish forces pushed rapidly forward inland yesterday to reach the coast at Torette di Ancona, three miles west of the port, and then closed in on the city. Still other forces, pushing toward the slanting coastline from further inland, were within two miles of the Esima River, which flows into the Adriatic some eight miles northwest

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 19 — American forces of the 5th Army today captured the great port city of Leghorn, after cutting off the city by a brilliant flanking move which bypassed the large scale German defenses to the south and entered the port from the east.

The enemy forces, disposed for a frontal assault on the city from the south, where they had manned massive defenses, originally erected to protect Leghorn from a possible surprise Allied landing, were completely outmaneuvered by the 5th Army's thrust along the network of inland roads bordering the Era River Valley.

It was announced today that virtually all the port facilities in Leghorn, normally capable of handling 17,500 tons per day, have been destroyed. The city's many bridges, crossing the skein of canals through the lowlands east and north of the port, have also been destroyed, it was said.

The retreating Germans have already brought the big port, Italy's third largest in time of peace, under heavy shellfire from their positions atop Monte Pisano, a great hill between Pisa and Lucca. However, Allied engineers are already at work to restore the harbour facilities, which consist of 60 docks, 21 large warehouses, and 35 big power cranes.

Allied bombing and German demolitions combined to wreck this great supply center, which the Germans battled 17 days to save. Its capture is, nonetheless, «a prize which in time will be of enormous value as a supply center for the 5th Army,» an official statement here declared.

Poles Take Ancona

Extensive demolitions were also reported at Ancona, which was captured by the Poles at 1430 hours yesterday afternoon, after a hard fought campaign in which General Anders' veterans advanced 75 miles in the course of a few weeks. More than 2,000 prisoners were taken by the Polish Corps in this period, and the two German divisions assigned to defend the Adriatic port were badly battered, especially in the final smashing assault which began Monday morning and quickly broke through to the coast to isolate the port.

Leading elements were less than a half mile south of the village of Montopoli, itself 1 1/2 miles south of the Arno at a point 25 miles west of Florence.

LATE BULLETINS

BRITISH ARMOR ACROSS CAEN-VIMONT ROAD

SHAEF, July 20 — Leading elements of British armor are across the Caen-Vimont road with infantry following up. British and German armor has been in contact around Cagny, five miles southeast of Caen and at Grentheville, south of the Caen-Vimont road.

Canadian troops played a prominent part in the capture of Faubourg Vaucelles.

There are still isolated pockets of resistance in Cormelles, two miles southeast of Caen, but Allied troops have by-passed it. (PWB - Reuter)

U. S. PLANES DESTROY 59 PLANES

LONDON, July 19 — American bombers and fighters which raided Germany today destroyed a total of 59 German aircraft. Six were shot down by bombers, 17 by fighters in air combat, and 36 were destroyed on the ground by fighters, said an Air Force communique.

of Ancona. The Polish troops were spearheaded by armored units, which captured the town of Offagna, seven miles southwest of the port. Also occupied in the early stages of the drive into Ancona were the towns of Camerano, six miles south and 3 1/2 miles in from the coast, and Paterno d'Ancona, six miles southwest of the Adriatic harbour. Agugliano and Polverigi, further inland, were by-passed by the advancing forces.

In the central sector of the front, 8th Army forces yesterday entered Montevarchi, some 22 miles southeast of Florence on the Arezzo-Florence road along the south banks of the Arno River. Other forces were nearing Radda, 20 miles south of Tuscany's chief city.

Everywhere along the front, the Germans were being relentlessly forced to withdraw north of the Arno River. Strong rear guard forces were being left behind, however, to check the Allied advance, and gain time for the main bodies of the beaten German forces to retreat to their hardly finished defenses on the Goth Line. Before each new withdrawal, the enemy put in savage local counter-attacks, and then retreated behind minefields.

According to recent studies of the Goth Line, vaunted enemy positions following the great bend of the Apennines from somewhere north of Pisa across to north of Rimini on the Adriatic, artificial defenses have not yet been completed. But the Germans have utilized the time gained in their costly delaying actions to the south to build a chain of massive steel and reinforced-concrete pillboxes across the steep passes leading through the Apennines. Some of these huge pillboxes are emplaced in 30-foot-deep rock excavations, and are shielded with steel armour and eight-foot-thick layers of reinforced concrete. These interconnecting defenses are constructed to a depth of five miles in the more vulnerable approaches.

The enemy has worked over eight months on these formidable defenses, impressing some 40,000 to 50,000 Italian laborers to carry out the construction. Work on the 100-mile-long line has been interrupted often by the action of Italian patriots who have harassed supply columns and shot up groups working on isolated emplacements. Operations in the key Futa Pass, north of Florence, was at one point held up for a week because of Italian patriot activity.

Of late, when the German defenses to the south began to show signs of crumbling, the work on the line has been speeded up to feverish pitch.

Heavies Strike Munich Area

Up to 500 heavy bombers today attacked two aircraft factories, an aerodrome, and an ordnance depot in the Munich area in southern Germany.

This was the second successive day in which Liberators and Fortresses have crossed the Alps to attack military targets within the boundaries of the Reich.

The targets attacked today included the Milbuntshofen ordnance depot, the Allach and Neuaubing aircraft factories, and the aerodrome at Schleissheim, all within a seven-mile radius of Munich.

A small formation of Liberators attacked the main yards at Munich. Moderate to intense flak was encountered, but only a small number of enemy aircraft attempted to intercept the formation.

Riviera Coasters Harried

Light Allied naval forces have been engaged in "harrying" enemy coastwise craft west of Genoa and along the Riviera, and have sunk one German lighter, forced another enemy craft ashore, and have possibly sunk another lighter in night attacks from June 12 to 16, it was announced here today. SOVIET BREAK-THROUGH SOUTH OF OSTROV

MOSCOW, July 19 — Marshal Stalin tonight in an order of the day announced a break-through south of Ostrov, 30 miles south of Pskov.

The order said that forces of the 3rd Baltic Front, having forced the River Velikaya, broke through powerful and deeply-staggered German defenses south of Ostrov.

In two days' fighting, the Russians advanced up to 24 miles, extending the break through to 42 miles in breadth.

Seven hundred inhabited localities, including Shanino Elenevo and Krasnogorodskaya, were occupied.

Red Army Crosses Bug

Russian armies are pounding westward through great gaps in the German defenses from the western Ukraine to the Latvian frontier, press dispatches announced today.

The heralded break-through toward Lvov now spread to a 120-mile front, and Marshal Koniev's tanks and infantry, with massive artillery support, have pushed across the Bug River. In their four-day offensive, they have captured more than 800 towns and villages. Lvov, commanding the main rail route into southern Germany, central Europe, and the Carpathian Mountains, is comparable to Warsaw in strategic importance.

Launching of the new offensive follows elaborate preparation, which has been going on for weeks. Fuel, ammunition, and tanks were sent forward by night. The Red Army gradually drove three wedges into the enemy defenses, thus forcing them to open up until the Soviet units merged in the great break-through.

Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian correspondent, said today in RED STAR that the German Army in White Russia has been destroyed beyond hope of reorganization. This is the first time such a definite statement on the status of the enemy forces in White Russia has come from a responsible source.

A Reuter correspondent said that the last German defenses before Lvov are crumbling, and the Red Army's heavy guns have now been brought within range of the city. Over 125 miles of the countryside, General Koniev's tank forces, screened by powerful air fleets, are striking toward the city's approaches, while cavalry units aim ahead into the German rear.

Like arms of a giant pincers, Koniev's forces at Lvov, and Rokossovsky's at Brest-Litovsk and Bialystok, are now reaching out in thrusts toward a meeting behind Warsaw.

Rokossovsky's forces are almost in the outskirts of Brest-Litovsk, and have sharply increased their pressure from the southeast upon Bialystok.

Beyond Gaynovka, captured yesterday, they have already crossed the Curzon Line. North of Lvov, they are fighting on the 1941 Soviet-Polish border, which runs a few miles east of the Curzon Line at this point. Two main thrusts from the northeast and east are being pushed through to Lvov with all the force Koniev can muster. The arc of strategic roads around the city has already been chopped up at many points, and the Germans have little possibility for free maneuver except toward the southeast.

Of late, when the German defenses to the south began to show signs of crumbling, the work on the line has been speeded up to feverish pitch.

Heavies Strike Munich Area

Up to 500 heavy bombers today attacked two aircraft factories, an aerodrome, and an ordnance depot in the Munich area in southern Germany.

This was the second successive day in which Liberators and Fortresses have crossed the Alps to attack military targets within the boundaries of the Reich.

The targets attacked today included the Milburtshofen ordnance depot, the Allach and Neuaubing aircraft factories, and the aerodrome at Schleissheim, all within a seven-mile radius of Munich.

A small formation of Liberators attacked the main yards at Munich. Moderate to intense flak was encountered, but only a small number of enemy aircraft attempted to intercept the formation.

66 Enemy Fighters Downed

Italy-based heavy bombers and their escorting fighters, which penetrated into southern Germany yesterday, to smash a big fighter plant and an airdrome, shot down 66 out of the 250 enemy aircraft which attempted to intercept them, it was announced here today.

In the bitter air battles, a Negro fighter group alone shot down 11 German planes from the swarms which arose to protect the vital Manzell-Dornier aircraft works at Friedrichshafen, and the fighter airdrome at Memmingen, some 70 miles west of Munich. The Allied formations lost 15 heavy bombers and four other aircraft in the course of the day's operations.

Adverse weather restricted operations of the Tactical Air Force's medium, light, and fighter-bombers, usually concentrated on communications and battle area targets in Italy.

Reconnaissance photographs showed that foundry and forge buildings, an electrolysis shop, and the entire eastern wing of the main factory at Friedrichshafen were severely hit, while at Memmingen, two large hangars were completely destroyed, and four others hit.

In an attack on the Casarsa double-track railway over the Tagliamente River on the lines from Austria south to Venice, hits were made on the east and west approaches, and a section of the eastern end of the span was blown up.

It was announced today that rocket-firing Hurricanes had recently destroyed the 5,000 ton luxury liner ITALIA in a daring attack on the ship near Trieste. The vessel had once been used for passenger travel, but had been converted into a cargo carrier to haul supplies between Trieste and Dalmatian ports.

Russian armies are pounding westward through great gaps in the German defenses from the western Ukraine to the Latvian frontier, press dispatches announced today.

The heralded break-through toward Lvov now spread to a 120-mile front, and Marshal Koniev's tanks and infantry, with massive artillery support, have pushed across the Bug River. In their four-day offensive, they have captured more than 600 towns and villages. Lvov, commanding the main rail route into southern Germany, central Europe, and the Carpathian Mountains, is comparable to Warsaw in strategic importance.

Launching of the new offensive follows elaborate preparation, which has been going on for weeks. Fuel, ammunition, and tanks were sent forward by night. The Red Army gradually drove three wedges into the enemy defenses, thus forcing them to open up until the Soviet units merged in the great break-through.

Ilya Ehrenburg, Russian correspondent, said today in RED STAR that the German Army in White Russia has been destroyed beyond hope of reorganization. This is the first time such a definite statement on the status of the enemy forces in White Russia has come from a responsible source.

A Reuter correspondent said that the last German defenses before Lvov are crumbling, and the Red Army's heavy guns have now been brought within range of the city. Over 125 miles of the countryside, General Koniev's tank forces, screened by powerful air fleets, are striking toward the city's approaches, while cavalry units aim ahead into the German rear.

Like arms of a giant pincers, Koniev's forces at Lvov, and Rokossovsky's at Brest-Litovsk and Bialystok, are now reaching out in thrusts toward a meeting behind Warsaw.

Rokossovsky's forces are almost in the outskirts of Brest-Litovsk, and have sharply increased their pressure from the southeast upon Bialystok.

Beyond Gaynovka, captured yesterday, they have already crossed the Curzon Line. North of Lvov, they are fighting on the 1941 Soviet-Polish border, which runs a few miles east of the Curzon Line at this point. Two main thrusts from the northeast and east are being pushed through to Lvov with all the force Koniev can muster. The arc of strategic roads around the city has already been chopped up at many points, and the Germans have little possibility for free maneuver except toward the southeast.

Advancing on a 48-mile front along Latvia's eastern border, another Russian Army has driven 18 miles across the frontier and has freed another 100 places.

Greatest Soviet Offensive Poised

There is every reason to believe in Moscow today, cabled a correspondent, that the Red Army is ready to hurl the greatest offensive in three years of war against the staggering Germans — an offensive which may throw the whole front into violent activity from the Far North to the South.

With their backs against the East Prussian border, giving ground fast in the middle Baltics, and with a new push developing between Bialystok and Brest-Litovsk in the direction of the Bug and Warsaw, the Wehrmacht is in its most desperate situation of the war.

The Red Army's thrust toward the Baltic, from the Latvian frontier and northwest of Grodno, is presenting the Germans with the possibility shortly of facing a small-scale Dunkirk in order to attempt to extricate troops from Estonia, Latvia, and the northern portion of Lithuania.

The supplement to last night's Soviet communique gave details of the fierce fighting which led up to the great Russian break-through at Lvov, in the center of the front. Troops of the 1st Ukrainian Army went into the offensive three days ago. The enemy defences were subjected to very heavy air and artillery barrages.

Soviet infantry then moved forward and broke through the first line of enemy fortifications. Developing their success, the Russians reached the second line of defences, called by the Germans the «Prince Eugene Line.» Fierce fighting developed along a wide front.

In some sectors, from 100 to 200 tanks were thrown into the fighting. By the use of an immense number of machines, the Germans relied on being able to halt the Russian advance. But to no purpose, and front line reports said that the Red Army went through without a pause, forced the western side of the Bug River, and occupied the town of Kamionka. They cut the Vladimar-Volynsk-Lvov railway line in several places. Continuing their swift advance, the Red Army captured the town of Zolochev, the town and railway junction of Krasnoye, the towns of Busk and Brody, and over 600 other populated localities.

Duncan Hooper, Reuter correspondent, cabled today that Marshal Rokossovsky's forces are now in the outer suburbs of Brest-Litovsk, gateway to Warsaw and the main bastion of the Curzon Line. It is the 1939 demarcation between Germany and Russia.

Observers in Moscow view this advance, together with that of Marshal Koniev at Lvov, as the initial phase of a vast pincer movement, the claws of which are stretching out towards central Germany.

Further north, General Yeremenko's troops are pushing towards Latvia after storming the key position, Sebezh. The Russians there were last reported to be within striking distances, varying from nine to ten miles from the Latvian border, over a front of nearly 50 miles.

Correspondents said that a kind of «Stalingrad desperation» is entering into the German resistance at the present stage. IZVESTIA said soberly: «The dimensions of the catastrophe which has befallen the German Army on the White Russian front cannot be concealed. Hundreds of thousands of Germans who have fought and retreated before, can now see that this is the crisis.» IZVESTIA pledged that the whole of Soviet territory will soon be cleared, and gave a call to arms for the task of finishing off the Germans.

The Soviet communique stated that west and southwest of Opochka, in the Latvian border area, the Russians took Krasnogorodsk, 19 miles northwest of Opochka and 11 miles inside Latvia. West of Idritsa, more than 150 places were taken.

Marshal Stalin's order-of-the-day yesterday disclosed that Marshal Koniev has taken over from Marshal Zhukov, the command of the 1st Ukrainian Army. Koniev, as commander of the 2nd Ukrainian Army, led the Russian armies over the first of the Soviet state frontiers, the border of Rumania. His troops entered Rumania on April 2, after a lightning offensive. Six weeks earlier, Koniev had been promoted marshal after his liquidation of the German divisions encircled at Korsun.

Other achievemnts of the Red Army were the shooting down of 128 German planes, the sinking of a 10,000-ton German transport in the Baltic, and the capture of the Island of Vuoratsunsseri, in the northwestern part of Lake Ladoga. PWB - Reuter - BBC)

RUSH ON EAST PRUSSIAN BANKS

STOCKHOLM, July 19 — A rush on the banks was started last Saturday in many parts of East Prussia, but the banks closed down.

The Stockholm newspaper SVENSKA DAGBLADET reported Tuesday that the scene on the refugee-packed roads of East Prussia rivals that of the French highways in 1940.

Meanwhile, Radio Moscow Tuesday appealed to German soldiers to lay down their arms, saying: «The Russians are already fighting in the approaches to Prussia. The positions around Noyers, but the town is not yet firmly held.

American troops on the Allied right have advanced 2 1/2 miles and wiped out a German salient north of St. Lô. General Bradley's forces are on the east bank of the Vire, all along that sector.

Details of the fighting are as yet meagre, but one correspondent said that the preparation for General Montgomery's new attack was one of the best kept secrets of the war, in spite of the vast amount of equipment that had to be assembled. The first armor was assembled more than a week ago. At zero hour yesterday morning, the front was packed with tanks, guns, and munitions.

Frank Gillard, of the BBC, said that the Allied tanks rumbled into position at 0700 hours yesterday. Half an hour later, the hill on which they formed up was thick with tanks and self-propelled guns.

Soon after the Allied artillery barrage had died away, the tanks went in in a steady stream. Their crews carried hand grenades to deal with the snipers who lay in the slit trenches until after the tanks should have passed, then to open on the following infantry.

Reports this morning said that the Germans were fighting hard in the area between the Odon and the Orne. Noyeux, between Cuen and Villers Boccage, was still in German hands. British troops twice got into the outskirts of Noyeux and twice withdrew.

The air attack in the Cuen battle made a new page in the history of aerial bombardment. The Allied planes that kept prying eyes from the growing concentration of armor for the attack, dropped 7,000 tons of bombs on the German positions south and southeast of Caen. Not a single German plane appeared.

More than 2,200 Allied aircraft went into the attack, and from the entire operation only nine bombers failed to get back. One thousand Lancasters and Halifaxes flew over the battle area, and Spitfires escorting the heavy bombers had a grandstand view of the bombardment.

Within 12 hours of the main assault, Bomber Command sent another force of Halifaxes over to look for German reserves and supplies.

The air attack in the morning continued for almost four hours, with the Normandy skies filled with the roar of Allied planes. The bombline moved gradually southward ahead of the Allied troops.

In the Evrecy sector, to the west, the British cleared the enemy from the north bank of the Guigne River, between Cahir and Bougey. The Allied command also reported a mile-deep advance south of Le Mesnil Durand, on the Vire River's west bank, and the liberation of the villages of La Samsonerie and Labbaye. Martinville, on the approaches to St. Lô, was also taken with Haut des Forges, in fighting North of Noyers and Evrecy.

St. Lô was taken yesterday by the Americans after a night of bitter fighting in which they were at one stage compelled slightly to withdraw. It was apparent later that, while the Germans were pushing savagely at the American line, they were at the same time pulling out of St. Lô. The Americans took the town in a whirlwind drive in the dawn. There was much last-minute confusion among German units before St. Lô, and many of them did not know where their supporting troops were.

American troops captured a messenger bearing retreat orders to one encircled unit trying to hold out.

St. Lô is 15 miles from the southwest corner of the bay of the Seine, and is near the threshold of the highlands of Normandy. It is difficult fighting country. Within 15 miles to the south are hills 1,000 or more feet above sea level. To the southwest are heights of nearly 600 feet. Because of its natural defenses, St. Lô was an important fortified point during the Middle Ages.

ADVANCE SOUTH OF CAEN DESPITE RESISTANCE

SHAEF, July 19 — The battle following General Montgomery's furious break-through south of Caen is going «extraordinarily well,» according to headquarter sources quoted by a Reuter corresponent. This progress is being maintained despite surprisingly strong German resistance.

Fuller deails of the battle are withheld for the time being, as there is evidence that the Germans do not yet know exactly what are the intentions of the British field commanders.

The initial advantage of surprise is being fully exploited, and full details of progress must wait until that advantage no longer applies.

British forces attacking in the central sector liberated Hottot les Bagnes, 2 1/2 miles southwest of Tilly. North of the Orne, other British forces have widened their Noyeux, between Caen and Villers Boccage, was still in German hands. British troops twice got into the outskirts of Noyeux and twice withdrew.

The air attack in the Caen battle made a new page in the history of aerial bombardment. Because of its natural defences, St. Lô was an important fortified point during the Middle Ages.

The town is on the high right bank of the Vire River, and holds a commanding position over the Vire Valley.

Three railways meet at St. Lô. Main roads lead northwest to Carentan, westward to Periers, westward and slightly south to Coutances, northeast to Bayeaux, east to Caumont and Caen, and south to Vire.

German Communications Disrupted

The German communications systems are completely disrupted following the terrific air bombardment yesterday which preceded the break-through by General Alexander's British and Canadian forces, it was reported here this morning.

It was also announced here that British cuisers, a monitor, and landing craft armed with heavy guns participated in the bombardment of the German positions before the new offensive was launced.

R-Boats Mauled in Channel

Groups of German minelaying R-boats sneaking northward along the French coast have been badly mauled in a series of brisk gun duels with Allied light coastal forces.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

An hour after midnight on Monday, three R-boats were intercepted by an Allied patrol and two of them were set on fire in the ensuing gun action.

An hour later, three R-boats or E-boats were sighted by a patrol of the Royal Netherlands Navy south of Cap Gris Nez. The enemy fled after a brisk exchange of gunfire. Turning to the east, these Dutch naval units found and engaged two groups of armed trawlers. The Dutch boats were illuminated by star shells from shore batteries and came under heavy fire from the enemy trawlers. Hits were observed on the enemy before the Dutch ships withdrew.

At about the same time, a third Allied patrol engaged seven R-boats northbound off the Authie River. The enemy received severe punishment in the close-range gun action which followed. Only superficial damage and few casualties were sustained by the Allied forces.

NORMANDY POSITION « EXTREMELY GOOD »

21ST ARMY GROUP HQ, July 19 — Referring to operations east of the Orne at a press conference today, General Sir Bernard Law Montgomery said: « Yesterday was an extremely good day. We have gained tactical surprise, and the present situation down that way is that we have very strong armor and mobile forces away to the south and southwest of Caen, an due east of Caen. In winning this area, we have undoubtedly written off a good deal of enemy stuff. Our own casualties in personnel and equipment have been extremely light — in fact, almost negligible so far. That is excellent. But there is a lot to be done yet on the western flank and on the eastern flank. »

60,000 Germans Captured

The Allies have captured 60,000 Germans, and killed 8,000 in Normandy, General Montgomery said.

« It is reasonable to conjecture that we have wiped out 156,000 Germans, » the general added. (PWB - Reuter)

O'CONNOR LEADS ALLIED TANKS IN CAEN

LONDON, July 19 — General Rory O'Connor, it can now be disclosed, is in command of the Allied tank formations operating in the Caen area, a Press Association correspondent reported today.

General O'Connor, who is a leading British authority on tank warfare, was captured in the front line in North Africa and remained a prisoner of war in Italian hands for two years, until he succeeded in escaping back to the Allied forces through the enemy lines, following the initial landings in Italy last year. HITLER APPOINTS NEW GENERAL.

BELGIUM, July 19 — Hitler has appointed General Grase as new commander-in-chief for Belgium and Northern France, announced a German news agency report.

He will hold an appointment subsidiary to Field Marshal von Kluge, the German supreme commander in the west. It is believed that he will be concerned mainly with static troops, as opposed to field forces.

The German military government in Belgium has been changed by Hitler's decree into a civilian administration under Gauleiter Josef Grohe, a 42-year-old, high-ranking SS officer, formerly gauleiter of Cologne and Aachen, and a Nazi since 1921. (PWB-Reuter)

6,000 Planes Strike Enemy

About 6,000 Allied aircraft were over targets in German-held Europe yesterday in assaults that did great damage to three regions of the Continent. The planes, based in Britain, Italy, and Normandy, dropped about 11,000 tons of bombs on their objectives.

The Air Ministry communique today reported a variety of operations carried out by the RAF yesterday afternoon and night. The communique said that, shortly before dusk last night, a strong force of rocket and torpedo-carrying Beaufighters of Coastal Command attacked an enemy convoy southeast of Heligoland. The Beaufighters pressed home the attack with great determination, in spite of intense light flak from the convoy. One merchant ship was left burning, another had a starboard side blown out. Five escort ships were hit. One of them blew up and another was left on fire.

Last night, the communique continued, aircraft of Bomber Command resumed the offensive against Germany's synthetic oil supply with heavy attacks on plants at Scholven-Buer and Wesselring. Large explosions, followed by fires, were seen in both plants.

A force of Mosquitoes attacked Berlin, and Cologne was bombed.

Halifaxes attacked flying bomb installation in northern France and mines were laid in enemy waters. From all these operations, two Beaufighters and eight bombers are missing.

A Reuter cable said that throughout last night the Germans sent flying bombs directed against the southern counties, including the London area. Damage and casualties were caused.

Allied planes yesterday struck at communications, airfields, supply dumps, and transport from Amiens, northwestern France and the west coast of the Cotentin Peninsula. First reports show that 15 enemy aircraft were shot down and a number destroyed on the ground. Twenty-four Allied planes are missing.

In the evening, the railway yards at Vaires, on the eastern outskirts of Paris, were successfully attacked by escorted heavy bombers. Two bombers are missing.

During the night, heavy bombers, 29 of which are missing, attacked the railway junction at Revigny, about 100 miles due east of Paris, and Sulnoye, about 20 miles west of the France-Belgium frontier. Preliminary reports indicate that both attacks were well concentrated.

Two enemy aircraft were destroyed over the battle area, and one by Allied intruders over Germany during the night.

A Reuter correspondent at SHAEF said that hundreds of Allied bombers yesterday afternoon blasted German communications ahead of General Montgomery's advancing armies, in a series of concentrated attacks on bridges and railways in the Rouen area. It was a spectacular sequel, the correspondent cabled, to the morning's massive onslaught on German positions southeast of Caen.

Rouen is the junction for four railway lines and six main roads, and is of vital importance to the Germans in rushing in reinforcements from northwestern France to meet General Montgomery's British and Canadian breakthrough.

A correspondent of the Associated Press said that British-based planes struck at targets in the Kiel area and elsewhere in north Germany. Furious opposition was encountered over Germany — the most since July 7. The correspondent said that Berlin was still reeling when the new air attack started today. Last night, RAF planes dropped two-ton blockbusters on the German Capital.

Air Chief Marshal Trafford Leigh-Mallory, commander of the Allied Expeditionary Air Force, flew over the battle area while the air attacks were in progress yesterday.

Early yesterday morning, light coastal forces fought three brief gun actions close to the enemy coast between Cap Gris Nez and the mouth of the River Authie. The enemy

GREAT FORCE OF BOMBERS ATTACKS GERMANY

LONDON, July 19 — A great force of more than 1,200 American heavy bombers attacked at least six war-production and railway centers in an area of south and southwest Germany, ranging from Strasbourg to Munich, today.

Among the targets attacked was a factory making hydrogen peroxide on the outskirts of Munich. A Reuter correspondent said it was probable that this attack was linked with that made yesterday on flying-bomb and long-range rocket experimental stations at Peenemunde and Zinnowitz, where, according to photographs released today, three hydrogen peroxide plants were heavily hit and another is believed to have been damaged. Hydrogen peroxide is used in launching flying-bombs.

Other targets were a Messerschmitt factory at Kempton, southeast of Augsburg; a ballbearing plant at Schweinfurt; railway yards at Coblenz, Saarbruecken, and Strasbourg; and three Luftwaffe stations in the vicinity of Augsburg.

An estimated 500 to 750 U. S. fighters escorted the heavy bombers.

Todays raid on Munich was the fifth made there in daylight in eight days.

Lancasters of RAF Bomber Command, with fighter cover, this afternoon attacked flying-bomb installations in northern France.

Halifaxes attacked flying bomb installation in northern France and mines were laid in enemy waters. From all these operations, two Beaufighters and eight bombers are missing.

VIOLENT FIGHTING IN SERBIA

ALGIERS, July 19 — Violent fighting continues in Serbia, with the Yugoslavs inflicting losses on the enemy and repulsing counter-attacks, said Marshal Tito's communique to-day.

One enemy column, which attempted to break through in the direction of Jablanica, was defeated by the 22nd Serbian Division. In the Sandjak, the communique said, there is fighting in the vicinity of Pljevlja and Gorozde, and it is reported that one German group, which had succeeded in crossing the River Drina, was annihilated.

In Dalmatia, after the Germans had been defeated in the mountains of Jonesica, Yugoslav units continued to clear the enemy, «who suffered great losses,» from this sector.

Once again, the communique told of Allied air cooperation on this occasion in the Dika sector, and added that a further attack on the Zagreb-Karlovac railway line had resulted in its being cut at 15 points.

A London message stated that the new Yugoslav Cabinet, with four of its six members already there, started work today. The two other members are expected soon from the United States and Canada.

Reuter said the new government would concentrate on economic and social problems connected with the prosecution of the war and the reconstruction of Yugoslavia. Many changes are expected in the administration, particularly in the diplomatic service, and in all Yugoslav military matters, the Yugoslav Premier, Ivan Subasic, will have the assistance of General Vladimir Velebit, head of Marshal Tito's military mission in London.

The Yugoslav Premier told Reuter that he was pleased with his recent journey to the Mediterranean theater of war, where he saw the Allied Supreme Commander.

MORE APPOINTMENTS IN JAP SHUFFLE

TOKYO, July 19 — Following yesterday's announcements of General Tojo's removal from the post of Chief of the Japanese General Staff to give place to General Yoshijiro Umzu, the Japanese Domei news agency today reported more new appointments. Admiral Yorio Sawamoto, former Vice Minister of the Navy, becomes Commander-in-Chief of the Kure Naval Station in place of Admiral Nomura, whose appointment as Minister of the Navy was announced yesterday. Suwamoto's former post as Vice Minister has been filled by Vice Admiral Keiujum Oka, Acting Chief of the Navy Ministry's Bureau of Naval Affairs, which bureau he will continue to manage in addition to his new duties.

In its announcement today of Tojo's replacement by Umzu, the Domei agency linked the change with Nomura's new appointment, saying:

"Both appointments were made in order to establish firmly the structure for guidance of the war, and in view of the unprecedentedly grave war situation."

Another Domei report today said that Umzu's successor as Commander of the Kwantung Army will be General Otozo Yamada, Inspector General of Military Education, who will also serve as Ambassador to Manchuria, in the Chinese northeastern provinces.

All the Japanese broadcasts referred to Tojo only as "General," and made no reference to him as Premier.

Lieutenant General Prince Tsunenori, a member of one of Japan's royal families, was appointed, according to Domei, "to be attached to the Army Aviation Headquarters, concurrently a member of the Supreme War Council and Vice Chief of the Military General Staff." Katzuo Okazaki, Japanese Foreign Office spokesman, has denied reports that Ken Harada, Japanese Representative at the Vatican, informed the Pope that under certain conditions Japan was ready for peace negotiations, stated a Domei broadcast today.

ALLIED ADVANCE HEADQUARTERS, NEW GUINEA, July 19 — Allied ground forces continue to mop up units of the trapped Japanese 18th Army between Wewak and Aitape, in north British New Guinea, stated General MacArthur's communique today.

West of the Driniumor River, an additional 175 Japanese have been killed and 25 prisoners taken. The ground forces are being supported by naval units shelling coastal targets and by medium bombers.

The communique announced that off Flores Island lying to the northwest of Timor, and further westward in Sumbawa Island, heavy bombers sank or damaged two 1,000-in an attempt to halt the pursuit. This withdrawal, which has already progressed beyond a point nine miles south of Bishenpur, leaves no organized Japanese resistance within 24 miles of Imphal.

In the Paidl sector, the Japanese are putting up stiff resistance. They made one counter-attack, which was quickly broken.

South of Ukhrul, demoralization is spreading among the Japanese divisions holding out there, the communique added.

An announcement from General Stilwell's headquarters in north Burma said Tuesday that the General had received a visit from Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Supreme Commander in Southeast Asia, who was accompanied by the Chindit Commander, General Lentaigne.

FURIOUS HENGYANG BATTLES CONTINUE

CHUNGKING, July 19 — Fighting continued with "unabated fury" in the Hengyang area throughout the night of July 16 and yesterday, said a communique issued here by the Chinese High Command. The Chinese are still holding on in the city of Hengyang, which is an important point on the Canton-Hankow railway, but the Japanese have seized some points in the southern suburbs.

While Mitchells dropped medical supplies to the Chinese in the city, continued the Chungking announcement, Warhawks bombed Japanese positions to the south and the Hengyang aerodrome.

In the area south of Leiyang, the enemy sustained "immense losses and have shown signs of collapse."

Chinese troops have made further progress in the Chaling sector, and are continuing to push eastward from Liling, east of the Siang River, though in this area, according to the communique, they have been checked.

Of 35 Japanese fighters that on July 14 raided the Anton air base, four were shot down and four were damaged, and the enemy missed the target completely, stated a communique issued from General Stilwell's headquarters yesterday. Six out of 16 Japanese fighters engaged in another sector were destroyed. Liberators on Monday attacked targets on the Salween front, and on the China coast, and at Changsha, in the Hunan Province, 400 miles east of Chungking. Off the China coast, a supply ship was sunk. All the Allied planes returned safely.

BRAZILIAN COMMANDER NAMED

RIO DE JANEIRO, July 19 — The Brazilian expeditionary force now in Italy for service with the Allied armies is commanded by Major General João Batista Majearenhas de Morais, stated a Brazilian Government announcement. These are the first troops from Latin America sent to participate directly in the European war.

Since she declared war in August 1942, Brazil has been reinforcing her army by conscription and the calling up of reserves. The Brazilian Air Forces have been greatly strengthened, and have participated successfully with U. S. Air Forces in the South Atlantic anti-submarine war.

In the MacCluer Gulf, Dutch New Guinea, medium bombers sank a 1,000-ton cargo ship, a coastal vessel, and two barges.

Further attacks have been made, said the communique, on Palau, Yap, and Woleai, in the Carolines; on New Ireland; on Rabaul in New Britain, and Bougainville, in the Solomons.

A Pacific Fleet Headquarters communique, issued from Pearl Harbour yesterday, told of a further attack on heavily-bombed Guam. Guam, which lies south of Saipan, has been subjected to bombing and shelling for 14 consecutive days, a softening up process which leads observers to believe that it is next on the invasion list.

On Saipan, Allied forces have captured 1,062 enemy troops, and interned 13,800 civilian residents, the majority of them Japanese. (PWB)

BRITISH DISSOCIATED FROM MIHAILOVITCH

LONDON, July 19 — The British have dissociated themselves from General Mihailovitch, former Yugoslav war minister, Prime Minister Winston Churchill repeated in the House of Commons today.

Following a similar statement to Commons yesterday, Churchill told a questioner today: «As has already been stated, the British liaison officers attached to General Mihailovitch's mission were withdrawn when it became clear that he was not engaged in operations against the enemy, and that some of his lieutenants were directing their efforts against the Partisans.»

He added: «I have followed with the closest attention, as far as is humanly possible, what is taking place in Yugoslavia, and I am certainly inclined to consider that the decision which we made some time ago to dissociate ourselves from General Mihailovitch was in every way justified.»

Specific evidence of contact between General Mihailovitch and the pro-German Chetniks in Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Montenegro, said a Reuter dispatch tonight, was discovered in documents covering German-Chetnik collaboration by John Talbot, Reuter correspondent, and Steyan Pribichevich, American journalist, two days before their capture at Drval on May 25.

This is disclosed by Pribichevich who succeded in escaping from his captors, in a combined press dispatch dated July 11, which has just been released by Allied authorities in Rome.

A documentary file captured by Partisans included a letter exchanged between the Chetnik command and the German liaison official containing battle orders for cooperating with the Germans and Italians. Chetnik information turned over to the Germans, and receipts for food and money obtained from the Germans.

A letter from the Bosnia and Herzegovina commander to the local commander stated: « The organization is in touch with General Mihailovitch, though this must be kept secret. » A similar letter from the Montenegrin Chetnik commander admitted that « the war minister » maintained « a delegate » in Montenegro.

Continuing, Pribichevich said: « I have not yet visited Serbia, where Mihailovitch resides. In so far as Bosnia, Herzegovina, Croatia, and Montenegro are concerned, there are no others but pro-German Chetniks. » (PWB-Reuter)

EDEN SAYS ALLIED POST-WAR PLANS READY

LONDON, July 19 — The Allies will be ready with post-war proposals, no matter when the Germans are beaten, the British Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden told the House of Commons yesterday.

« Victory cannot come too quickly, » he said, « and when it comes, we shall be ready with these proposals. »

Mr. Eden was replying to criticism in the House that the war might end before the Allies were ready.

Asked if the House could be told the proposals, he answered, « Not at this stage. »

He reminded the House of a recent statement in which Prime Minister Winston Churchill said, « Unconditional surrender means that the victors have a free hand. It does not mean that they are entitled to behave in a barbarous manner, nor that they wish to blot out Germany from among the nations. »

Asked if he believed the rise of Hitler was the result of poverty and unemployment in Germany, the Foreign Secretary said:

« Anybody who really believes that Hitler does not represent a certain dominant German mentality, is living in a most dangerous world of dreams. Our first duty is to see that power never passes into such hands again. »

Speaking of the effectiveness of Allied psychological warfare on the Germans, he told the House: « Our propaganda to the Germans has not by any means been unsuccessful in this war period. We find that 77 per cent of German prisoners captured since the landing in Northern France, admit having read our pamphlets or listened to our propaganda; but more interesting still, 40 per cent had our leaflets in their possession when they were captured. Many of them regard them as something in the nature of a passport, if and when they have to surrender. » (OWI)

NEW ELECTRICITY RATIONING PLAN

ROMA, July 19 — Regional Commissioner Charles Poletti tonight informed the citizens of Rome in his weekly talk over Radio Rome that a new plan of rationing of electric current is being evolved for their benefit.

« This rationing to provide equal distribution may not be perfect, » he told the Romans, « but it will at least provide a certain security in regard to the turns of service and the periods in which the current will be on during those turns. »

The speaker discussed the electric power situation frankly, and pointed out that the havoc wrought by the Germans to the main hydro-electric power plants beyond the city has gravely impaired the normal supply of electric power for a considerable length of time to come.

Regarding public health conditions, the speaker said that there has been an increase in deaths among children under one year of age and that the Allies have provided 90 tons of powdered milk in an effort to improve the artificial feeding of infants. He added that there is no shadow of an epidemic of any sort over the city, and that the birth rate, like the death rate, remains normal. He urged druggists to bring necessary medicines onto the market, and warned both wholesalers and retailers of drugs to put public interest above private gain. He reassured his audience that city water is safe, telling them that the taste in the water is a sign of purity, since it comes from the purification process.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 19 — Today's communique:

LAND: Following the break-through to the west, Polish troops of the 8th Army captured the important port and city of Ancona yesterday, taking a large number of prisoners and a considerable amount of material. There, infantry, supported by armour, are still relentlessly pursuing the retreating enemy. In a day's advance, Polish troops have captured, among other towns, Abugliano and Camerano.

In the central sector, British troops of the 8th Army, to the west of Arezzo, have now crossed the Arno on a front of six miles. Further west, they have captured the town of Monte Varchi, 15 miles west of Arezzo.

American troops of the 5th Army, in a swift advance, have reached the Arno and captured the town of Pontedera. The capture of this town places the 5th Army troops across the direct Pisa-Florence road, thereby dividing the German forces south of the Arno.

AIR: Targets in Southern Germany were attacked yesterday by heavy bombers which struck at an aircraft factory at Friedrichshafen, and an aerodrome at Memmingen. Other heavy bombers attacked Casarsa, a rail bridge in Northern Italy, while fighter aircraft carried out sweeps over the Bologna and Udine areas.

Although the operations by tactical aircraft were restricted by weather, enemy communications, gun positions, and motor transport were attacked north of the battle area. Other aircraft attacked objectives in Yugoslavia.

In these operations, 66 enemy aircraft were destroyed and 19 Allied planes are missing. The MAAF flew about 2,000 sorties. (PWB - Reuter)

SHAEF, July 19 — Today's communique:

Fierce fighting is going on in Faubourg de Vaucelles and in the plains south and east of Caen. Enemy armored formations have been thrown in, in an attempt to block the breach made in the German positions in this area.

In the Juvigny area, south of Tilly, our troops have advanced about half a mile, and the enemy is fighting desperately to retain his hold on Noyers.

Saint Lô was finally cleared of the enemy during yesterday evening. The road from Saint Lô to Periers has been cut between the Taute and Vire rivers south of the village of Amigny, which is in our hands.

Allied aircraft in great strength continued their support of our ground forces throughout yesterday afternoon. Bridges across the rivers Seine and Eure, and railway lines in the Rouen area, were attacked during the afternoon by medium and light bombers. Fighters and fighter bombers in great force attacked enemy batteries and mortar positions, strongpoints, and troop concentrations near the battle zone. Further afield, they struck at communications, airfield supply dumps, and transport from Amiens, in northeastern France, to the west coast of the Cotentin Peninsula.

During the day, first reports show that 13 enemy aircraft were shot down and a number destroyed on the ground. Twenty-four of our aircraft are missing. In the evening, rail yards at Valres, on the eastern outskirts of Paris, were successfully attacked by Allied aircraft in great strength continued their support of our ground forces throughout yesterday afternoon. Bridges across the rivers Seine and Eure, and railway lines in the Rouen area, were attacked during the afternoon by medium and light bombers. Fighters and fighter bombers in great force attacked enemy batteries and mortar positions, strongpoints, and troop concentrations near the battle zone. Farther afield, they struck at communications, airfield supply dumps, and transport from Amiens, in northeastern France, to the west coast of the Cotentin Peninsula.

During the day, first reports show that 13 enemy aircraft were shot down and a number destroyed on the ground. Twenty-four of our aircraft are missing. In the evening, rail yards at Vaires, on the eastern outskirts of Paris, were successfully attacked by escorted heavy bombers. Two bombers are missing. During the night, heavy bombers, 29 of which are missing, attacked the railway junction of Revigny, about 100 miles due east of Paris, and Aulnoye, about 20 miles west of the Franco-Belgian frontier. Preliminary reports indicate that both attacks were well concentrated.

Two enemy aircraft were destroyed over the battle area, and one by our intruders over Germany during the night.

Early Tuesday morning, light coastal forces fought three brief gun actions close to the enemy coast between Cap Gris Nez and the mouth of the River Authie. The enemy received considerable punishment. Two of his craft were last seen on fire. (PWB-Reuter)

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 19 — Tonight's communique:

Fierce armored and infantry fighting continued this morning in the area south and east of Caen. Faubourg de Vaucelles is now entirely in our hands, and the enemy has been cleared from the villages of Louvigny on the west bank, and Fleury on the east bank of the Rive Orne.

The breach in the enemy defences has been widened, and Allied troops have occupied the villages of Touffreville Demouville, and Giberville. Pockets of enemy resistance which had been by-passed have been eliminated. Progress continues, in spite of stubborn enemy opposition.

Throughout yesterday and today, Allied warships and landing craft have been engaging enemy forward batteries on the eastern flank in support of the army. Allied aircraft based in Normandy maintained their patrols and close support of our troops this morning.

One thousand two hundred and fifty prisoners were taken yesterday in the Caen area, and the total taken since the beginning of the campaign is now over 60,000.

Allied troops have made local advances in the Hottot area, and north of Remilly sur Lozon. (PWB-Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, July 19 — Wednesday night's Soviet communique:

Troops of the 3rd Pre-Baltic Front, having forced the River Velikaya, broke through the deeply-echeloned German defense south of Ostrov and, during two days' offensive, advanced forward up to 40 kilometers, widening the break through up to 70 kilometers along the front. In the course of the offensive, troops of the front occupied over 700 populated localities, including Zabolotie, Chertovidovo, Terukhovo, Yermolkino, Shanino, Bolie, Zelonovo, Pustoye Voskresenye, Skadino, Losi, and Radoski.

West and southwest of Opochka, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied over 100 populated localities, including Zherebino, Velkovo, Rogatkino, Deblevo, Fedorinki, Yat-Sloboda, Yaglevo, and the railway stations of Merza and Ozentali.

Northwest and west of Drissa, our troops occupied with fighting over 80 populated localities, including Veterovtsi, Skvortsi, Indra, Strudali, Baldusha, Slobodka, and the railway station of Indra.

North and south of Alytus, our troops, repelling counter-attacks of infantry and tank forces of the enemy, continued fighting for the enlargement of their bridgeheads on the western bank of the River Niemen.

West of Volkovysk, our troops, having forced the River Svisloch, occupied with fighting a number of populated localities, including Lukashevichi, Rusmenyani, Khomentovtsi, Zhubri, Dubliani, and the railway station of Krinki.

The Commander of the 31st German Infantry Division, Lieutenant General Oksner, surrendered to our troops.

In the direction of Brest, our troops, advancing with fighting, occupied the town and important railway junction, and a district center of Brest Region, Kleschchi; and also occupied over 50 other populated localities, including Bereza, Imenin, Gorodets, Nefedovichi, Kamen Kruglelski, Kamen Kratetski, Korielisi, and the railway station of Gorodets.

In the direction of Lvov, our troops, continuing their offensive, captured the following district centers of Lvov Region: the town of Sopel, the town of Mosty Velikye, and also occupied with fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Boretyn, Krestinopol, Ostrov, Brusilov, Polichkov, Derevnya, Dzibulki, Zhultantsi, Romanov (within 14 kilometers northwest of Lvov), Yablunovka, Toporov, Zablotsi, Podgortsi, and the railway stations of Sokal, Krestinopol, Rudiantsi, and Zablotsi.

North and south of Sokal, our troops have forced the River Zapadny Bug.

Our troops have accomplished the encirclement of an enemy group consisting of four to five divisions in the area west of Brody.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 18, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 96 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 34 enemy planes were shot down.

transport and ambushed enemy groups working around artillery positions. As a result of patriot activity, traffic through the Futa Pass was interupted for some time.

During the two months preceding the liberation of Umbria, the patriots carried on guerrilla activities, especially in the Terni and Foligno zones. It is estimated that one strong group of patriots killed about 500 Germans.

Near the village of San Martino Buon Albergo, in the Province of Verona, Patriots have captured about 40 Fascist soldiers with their arms and ammunition.

Following the killing of three Fascist soldiers at Prosecco, near Trieste, 15 hostages were hanged in the main square. More than 100 workers were forced to watch the execution. A few days later, 40 of them managed to escape from the concentration camp and join a patriot group.

Surprise attacks were carried out by patriots at Monza and Sesto San Giovanni. Prisoners and booty were captured.

In Udine, the patriots attacked a German gasoline dump. They captured 4,000 liters of gasoline and other war material. (PWB)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 19 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, the enemy, after a several hours' gun fire barrage and violent air attacks, has now launched a largescale attack also west of the Orne. Only after heavy fighting, and after having suffered severe losses, did the enemy succeed in penetrating into our positions, where he was checked after having lost 40 tanks by our counter-attacks. Southwest of Caen, all enemy attacks were repulsed.

Also in the St. Lô area, bitter fighting was going on yesterday. While all enemy attacks on St. Lô were repelled during the day, in the evening hours the enemy entered the city with tanks where furious street fighting is in progress. In aerial combats the enemy lost 22 aircraft; another two enemy planes were destroyed on the ground.

In mopping-up operations in the French area, 70 terrorists were killed.

Heavy fire of V-1 is continuing on London and its outskirts.

In Italy, the enemy continued his large-scale attack from the coast of the Ligurian Sea to the Arezzo area, as well as in the Adriatic coastal sector. While south and south east of Leghorn the enemy attacks were repelled, our troops withdrew eastward to the northern bank of the Arno. Major enemy attacks on both sides of Poggibonsi and east of Arezzo were unsuccessful.

Southwest of Ancona, the enemy attacked with strong tank forces on a narrow front and achieved a deep dent, after having suffered heavy casualties. The severe fighting, in which the enemy lost 18 tanks, increased in intensity during the evening hours. Thereupon, the completely destroyed harbour of Ancona was evacuated, and the front was withdrawn behind the Esino sector immediately north of Ancona.

In the East, the big defensive battle is continuing on the entire front between Galicia and Lake Peipus. In the southern sector, the intensity of the enemy attacks was increased, especially east of the upper Bug. Here, heavy fighting is raging with the enemy attacking in the direction of Lemberg; 431 Soviet tanks were destroyed in this sector since July 14.

West of Kowel, the Soviets renewed their attacks. Here also, heavy fighting is in progress. On the western bank of the Niemen, our troops smashed enemy forces which had crossed the river in the area of Grodno and Olita. North-west of Vilna, all enemy attacks were repulsed.

In the lake district south of Dvina, our troops offered

North and south of Sokal, our troops have forced the River Zapadny Bug.

Our troops have accomplished the encirclement of an enemy group consisting of four to five divisions in the area west of Brody.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 13, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 66 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 34 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of July 18-19, our Air Force bombed enemy troop trains and military stores on the railway junctions of Dvinsk, Lvov, and Sedlits. During the raid on Dvinsk, numerous fires were started, some nine echelons were smashed or set afire. Heavy explosions were observed. On the freight station especially, large fires were observed, which were followed by heavy explosions.

On the railway junction of Lvov, two enemy echelons were blown up by direct hits. Large fires were started which were followed by heavy explosions. Two explosions were of a huge magnitude.

On the railway junction of Sedlits, southwest of Warsaw, large fires were started, railway cars, flatcars, and numerous military stores were set afire.

North of the Dvina, up to Lake Peipus, attacks of major Soviet forces were smashed and a considerable number of enemy tanks were destroyed. Only in some penetration points is fighting still in progress.

Battle plane formations again destroyed a number of Soviet tanks, guns, and hundreds of vehicles. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft artillery, 57 enemy planes were shot down.

A strong U. S. bomber formation attacked the Baltic area. Damage and casualties were caused in residential quarters, especially in Kiel.

Another bomber formation attacked places in South Germany.

Last night, minor attacks against the Cologne area, the Ruhr district, and Berlin were made. In the course of all these attacks, 39 enemy planes were shot down in air combats and by anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe, among them 69 four-engine bombers.

The 4th Assault Group of the 3rd Fighter Squadron, under command of Captain Moritz, alone shot down 49 four-engine planes. (PWB - Radio Berlin)

AMERICAN TROOPS CAPTURE ST. LO

SHAEF, July 18 — St. Lô, vital communications center and source of power for a large part of Normandy, fell tonight to American troops of Lieut. General Omar Bradley's 1st U. S. Army after a week of bitter fighting.

The German forces withdrew between 1 1/2 and 2 1/2 miles in the St. Lô area. They were observed digging in on the high ground south of the city after carrying out a general local withdrawal in depth along the entire left flank.

The village of St. Croix, about a mile east of St. Lô, has also been captured by American troops.

As the Americans drove through the German defenses in the northeast sector to the outskirts of the city from the [illegible] artillery and have made terrific efforts to fortify this highway center.

Northwest of the town, the Americans turned the tables on the Germans, who had earlier inundated the Vire River Valley and hampered the Americans around Carentan. American engineers locked the river so that it rose over the bridges used by the Germans south of Pont Hebert.

On the eastern side of the town, American forces have captured the village of Martinville, some 2,000 yards from Saint Lô on a secondary road. The village has changed hands several times.

On the British sector of the front, a fierce struggle is raging north of Noyers on the road and railway from Caen to Villers Bocage.

In the town of Noyers itself a Reuter correspondent reported that a swaying battle is raging in the streets, with neither side giving ground. Infantry units are continuing their hand-to-hand fighting, as the Germans seek to regain the Noyers railroad station, now in British hands.

Bitter fighting is still going on to decide the fate of Evrecy, which guards Rommel's line to the River Orne. Guns, tanks, and infantry have been poured into the attack by the British 2nd Army. This village has been turned into a strongpoint between the rivers Odon and Orne. British troops are in the outskirts, but the last news reported the village still in German hands.

Along the north bank of the River Odon, Rommel's men have been cleared from several high positions in the areas of Cahier and Bougy, and the general line consolidated. Northeast of Evrecy, the line of the Guigny River has been reached on a fairly wide front, and Allied positions there consolidated.

In close support of Allied ground forces, fighters and fighter bombers hit many pin point targets in the path of American troops near Saint Lô. Others successfully attacked guns and an ammunition dump near Periers. Airfields at Le Mans, and at Corne and Valade on the outskirts of Angers, were bombed and strafed with good results.

Fighters attacked an enemy headquarters south of Caen, destroyed motor transport south of Hottot, and made numbers of sweeps deep into France. Defensive patrols were carried out over beach areas.

The Luftwaffe left its hangars behind the German lines early this morning to bomb and strafe British positions at Fontenay le Pesnil. Thousands of troops watched the brilliant firework display which lit up a wide area of the bridgehead as dozens of anti aircraft guns unloosed a terrific concentration of fire at the raiders.

It was disclosed here last night that the famous American 2nd Infantry Division — the "Indian Head" division which was decorated by the French in the last war — is fighting in Normandy under the command of Major General Walter Robertson.

AMERICAN TROOPS CAPTURE ST. LO

SHAEF, July 18 — St. Lô, vital communications center and source of power for a large part of Normandy, fell tonight to American troops of Lieut. General Omar Bradley's 1st U. S. Army after a week of bitter fighting.

The German forces withdrew between 1 1/2 and 2 1/2 miles in the St. Lô area. They were observed digging in on the high ground south of the city after carrying out a general local withdrawal in depth along the entire left flank.

The village of St. Croix, about a mile east of St. Lô, has also been captured by American troops.

As the Americans drove through the German defenses in the northeast sector to the outskirts of the city from the east, northeast, and north, fires started by U. S. artillery burned in the town throughout the night.

Organized German resistance was collapsing this morning to the north and northeast, leaving only a rearguard composed of strongpoints to fight a delaying action.

Elements of Hitler's crack paratroopers began to withdraw from St. Lô last night, and the evacuation of the town and its northern and northeastern outskirts was begun under heavy American artillery fire.

Aerial reconnaissance over the area has revealed that at least two of the key bridges across the Vire River have been severed, virtually cutting in two the entire German forces on the Normandy front. Only one bridge now remains intact.

This important success followed a temporary withdrawal last night from the eastern limits of the town, after two heavy German counter-attacks supported by armor.

The Saint Lô-Periers road was severed by artillery and small-arms fire at a point about four miles west and slightly south of Pont Hebert, and an American spearhead drove almost to the important highway artery. Advanced elements were reported within 500 yards of the highway itself.

Rommel has hurled in reinforcements to try to hold Saint Lô. These include paratroops who defended Cassino. Front-line despatches this morning stated that the Germans had dug subterranean forts and tunnels under the town, raging north of Noyers on the road and railway from Caen to Villers Bocage.

In the town of Noyers itself a Reuter correspondent reported that a swaying battle is raging in the streets, with neither side giving ground. Infantry units are continuing their hand-to-hand fighting, as the Germans seek to regain the Noyers railroad station, now in British hands.

Heaviest Air Support

The most concentrated air attack in history supported General Montgomery's breakthrough across the Orne, it was announced tonight.

Sixteen hundred British and American heavy bombers, more than 500 medium and light bombers, and hundreds of fighter-bombers operated over the battle area between 0600 and 0900 hours.

One thousand British Halifaxes and Lancasters alone dropped 5,000 tons of bombs in 45 minutes. Six hundred American Liberators dropped 1,400 tons of bombs only 300 yards ahead of British and Canadian positions. Medium and light bombers dropped 550 tons between 0700 and 1000 hours, in an area covering approximately 73 square miles.

MONTGOMERY BREAKS THROUGH EAST OF ORNE

SHAEF, July 18 — Backed by the most concentrated air bombardment yet known, Montgomery broke through the German defenses east of the Orne. His armor is now operating in ideal tank country southeast of Caen. A decisive battle with the pick of the German panzer divisions is imminent. (PWB - Reuter) personally flew over the battle area while the attacks were being made.

Between 500 and 750 United States bombers struck German experimental stations at Peenemunde and Zinnowitz on the Baltic Coast in sunlight today, it was announced at American headquarters. The bombers were escorted by medium-sized forces of Mustangs and Lightnings. Peenemunde was first bombed several months ago by RAF bombers. It was in this experimental station, Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons a fortnight ago, that the flying bomb and long-range rocket were developed. In the same attack, other military targets in western Germany received attention.

Today also, Halifaxes and Stirlings of RAF Bomber Command, covered by Spitfires, attacked flying bomb installations in northern France, British headquarters announced.

So great was the passage of aircraft between midnight and 0300 hours this morning over the south coast of England, and so many the explosions heard coming from the French coast, that residents long inured to these sounds were awakened.

During Monday night RAF Mosquitos bombed Berlin again. Mines were also laid in enemy waters. From these operations, one fighter is missing. The pilot is safe.

On Monday, Allied air operations totalled 3,000 sorties, of which 2,000 were strategic and 1,000 tactical. Two thousand bombers and fighters of the United States Army Air Force struck from Britain and Italy at rail targets around Paris and in Southern France. Among those attacked were bridges over the Loire, Ailette, Yvonne, and the Somme. Other formations hit the great railway center at Metz, near the German border, and Belfort, near the Swiss border.

The warplanes encountered flak but no fighters. One bomber and one fighter failed to return.

Flying bombs fell on southern England at intervals during 24 hours ending 1900 hours Monday, the Ministry of Home Security announced. There was then a lull until shortly after midnight. Early this morning, flying bombs again fell on southern England, including London. They caused damage and casualties.

The Associated Press said today that Stockholm dispatches indicated the importance of the four United States raids on Munich and other southern German points during the past week. A target which was three-fourths destroyed, said one dispatch, was a motor works making engines for flying bombs. (PWB - Reuter - AP)

LUFTWAFFE UP IN FORCE

LONDON, July 18 — The German Luftwaffe, for the first time since the landings in Normandy, sent into aerial combat a force of over 100 Messerschmitt 109.s. Nineteen American Thunderbolts and Mustangs engaged them in a vicious dogfight over Argentan which lasted 15 minutes and ranged from 10,000 feet down to tree level. The Americans shot down 15 enemy planes with a loss of five aircraft.

The appearance of more than 100 German fighters in one formation coincided with the heaviest German anti-aircraft fire in the battle sector since the invasion.

Although outnumbered two to one, Lightning fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF in another engagement, were attacked over France by a force of more than 50 German fighters. Ten enemy planes were destroyed, six were probably destroyed, and 14 were damaged. Three Lightnings were lost.

Over northern Germany today, Mustangs of the 8th USAAF, which were escorting heavy bombers, shot down 21 enemy intercepting planes out of a force of 60. The engagement which took place north of Warnemunde, raged for 30 minutes from 20,000 feet to tree level. Those not shot

In three days' fighting, our troops have advanced up to 30 miles, widening the breach up to 125 miles along the front.

The Order added that during their offensive, the Red Army troops captured more than 600 inhabited localities.

Bialystok, Brest-Litovsk Threatened

The Red Army's double assault on Bialystok and Brest-Litovsk, fortress gateways of German-held Poland, is gathering weight, said a Reuter correspondent.

Some 30 miles from Bialystok and 20 from Brest-Litovsk, the two main Soviet wedges are driving straight for their objectives. Other spearheads are threatening the two cities from the flanks, while in the center, men and supplies are massing for a breakthrough to the railway linking Bialystok and Brest-Litovsk, from which the nearest Russian force is only 16 miles.

The Germans are switching troops, tanks, and planes to the Polish front, in a bid to hold the drive on the two cities.

There have been many and sustained clashes during the past 24 hours and in the north, latest reports indicated that a drive on East Prussia may be developing in the sector west of Grodno toward Sulvak and Augustov.

In his attack on Brest-Litovsk, Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army yesterday overran some 200 towns and villages. He is attacking it from two directions: one column, driving through the Pripet Marshes, has taken Drogichin, 62 miles to the east of the city, while another column is fighting along the Minsk highway and has liberated Shereshov, only 30 miles to the northeast of Brest-Litovsk.

General Zakharov's troops, advancing on Bialystok, yesterday took the town of Svisloch, 42 miles to the east.

Last reports from the front place the Soviet armies only 120 miles east of Warsaw itself and still rolling on. The Russians can now do three things: turn north to outflank Bialystok from the southwest; turn south and outflank Brest-Litovsk from the northwest, or carry straight on to Warsaw.

The Niemen line has been left behind, the BBC reported, and there is very little Russian territory now in the hands of the Germans. Huge armored forces are smashing through, widening the gap, followed by the streaming columns of infantry.

Messages from the Polish Underground received by the Polish authorities in London reported that the Germans have conscripted 100,000 Poles and set them to work rushing new defence works, while Russian planes flash across the German skies heralding the approach of the victorious Red Army.

The Germans yesterday threw in a new tank division which fought a bloody battle before heavy losses compelled it to withdraw. It was not permitted to disengage, however, without taking a heavy beating on the way out.

Kaunas is ringed with Russian steel in the usual overwhelming and encircling tactics of the Soviet forces.

German resistance is not expected quickly to dissipate because of the importance of Kaunas. This part of the front covers the straight, classic road to Koenigsberg, through Insterburg. Along this route the terrain is pretty good, while the fall of Kaunas would also open the way for a drive on Tilsit, in northern East Prussia and close to the Baltic. But this is a difficult route which leads through the Masurian Lakes area. It is possible, therefore, that the forces which took Grodno will continue their advance southwestward towards Bialystok and Warsaw, in an outflanking drive round East Prussia, while the real invasion is undertaken by the

The warplanes encountered flak but no fighters. One bomber and one fighter failed to return.

Flying bombs fell on southern England at intervals during 24 hours ending 1900 hours Monday, the Ministry of Home Security announced. There was then a lull until shortly after midnight. Early this morning, flying bombs again fell on southern England, including London. They caused damage and casualties.

The Associated Press said today that Stockholm dispatches indicated the importance of the four United States raids on Munich and other southern German points during the past week. A target which was three-fourths destroyed, said one dispatch, was a motor works making engines for flying bombs. (PWB - Reuter - AP)

LUFTWAFFE UP IN FORCE

LONDON, July 18 — The German Luftwaffe, for the first time since the landings in Normandy, sent into aerial combat a force of over 100 Messerschmitt 109.s. Nineteen American Thunderbolts and Mustangs engaged them in a vicious dogfight over Argentan which lasted 15 minutes and ranged from 10,000 feet down to tree level. The Americans shot down 15 enemy planes with a loss of five aircraft.

The appearance of more than 100 German fighters in one formation coincided with the heaviest German anti-aircraft fire in the battle sector since the invasion.

Although outnumbered two to one, Lightning fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF in another engagement, were attacked over France by a force of more than 50 German fighters. Ten enemy planes were destroyed, six were probably destroyed, and 14 were damaged. Three Lightnings were lost.

Over northern Germany today, Mustangs of the 8th USAAF, which were escorting heavy bombers, shot down 21 enemy intercepting planes out of a force of 60. The engagement which took place north of Warnemunde, raged for 30 minutes from 30,000 feet to tree level. Those not shot down were dispersed, the announcement said.

DE GAULLE CALLS FRENCH OFFICERS JOIN FFI

ALGIERS, July 18 — General Charles de Gaulle's headquarters broadcast an appeal to all French officers and non-commissioned officers in metropolitan France to join units of the French Forces of the Interior immediately. The message stated:

« Wherever you may be at present, and whatever your personal situation, or your attitude since the 1940 Armistice, your duty is to fight. Your military experience is indispensable to the French Forces of the Interior. » (OWI)

RUSSIANS BREAK THROUGH LWOW DEFENSES

MOSCOW, July 18 — A new offensive by Marshal Koniev was announced in an Order of the Day from Marshal Stalin. The Order said:

« Troops of the 1st Ukranian Front, having launched an offensive with the support of massed blows by artillery and aircraft, have broken through the powerful and deeply-staggered German defenses in the Lwow direction.

past 24 hours and in the north, latest reports indicated that a drive on East Prussia may be developing in the sector west of Grodno toward Sulvak and Augustov.

In his attack on Brest-Litovsk, Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Army yesterday overran some 200 towns and villages. He is attacking it from two directions: one column, driving through the Pripet Marshes, has taken Drogichin, 62 miles to the east of the city, while another column is fighting along the Minsk highway and has liberated Shereshov, only 30 miles to the northeast of Brest-Litovsk.

General Zakharov's troops, advancing on Bialystok, yesterday took the town of Svisloch, 42 miles to the east.

Last reports from the front place the Soviet armies only 120 miles east of Warsaw itself and still rolling on. The Russians can now do three things: turn north to outflank Bialystok from the southwest; turn south and outflank Brest-Litovsk from the northwest, or carry straight on to Warsaw.

The Niemen line has been left behind, the BBC reported, and there is very little Russian territory now in the hands of the Germans. Huge armored forces are smashing through, widening the gap, followed by the streaming columns of infantry.

Messages from the Polish Underground received by the Polish authorities in London reported that the Germans have conscripted 100,000 Poles and set them to work rushing new defence works, while Russian planes flash across the German skies heralding the approach of the victorious Red Army.

The Germans yesterday threw in a new tank division which fought a bloody battle before heavy losses compelled it to withdraw. It was not permitted to disengage, however, without taking a heavy beating on the way out.

Kaunas is ringed with Russian steel in the usual overwhelming and encircling tactics of the Soviet forces.

German resistance is not expected quickly to dissipate because of the importance of Kaunas. This part of the front covers the straight, classic road to Koenigsberg, through Insterburg. Along this route the terrain is pretty good, while the fall of Kaunas would also open the way for a drive on Tilsit, in northern East Prussia and close to the Baltic. But this is a difficult route which leads through the Masurian Lakes area. It is possible, therefore, that the forces which took Grodno will continue their advance southwestward towards Bialystok and Warsaw, in an outflanking drive round East Prussia, while the real invasion is undertaken by the Kaunas group.

Correspondents said that the Russians found only 50,000 civilians left in Vilna when they finally crushed the German resistance there. More than 100,000 had been murdered during the occupation, and tens of thousands more driven off to slave labour in Germany.

Vilna had been marked out by the Nazi planners as one of the principal trading centers of the Greater Germany of the Future. German civilians had migrated to Vilna in larger numbers than to any other city occupied since the start of the German-Russian war.

The most valuable cultural treasures of Vilna's museums and libraries were shipped off to Germany. Books and manuscripts from the libraries were sold to the paper mills.

The artillery salvos that announced the liberation of Vilna were greeted in Moscow with the greatest enthusiasm since the retaking of Kiev. A common remark in the streets was — « Koenigsberg next! ».

Refugees who have just reached Sweden report that the Germans in East Prussia are bewildered by the speed of the Russian advance. They always thought they were safe in East Prussia, and now they hardly know what to do. So far, no official evacuation scheme has been outlined to them. The result is that thousands of families, some of whom have lived all their lives in East Prussia, and others who moved there to escape the Allied bombing of Germany, are now trying desperately to make their way back to the Reich.

The railways from Koenigsberg are packed, although no travel is now allowed without a permit. Fantastic prices are being paid for small boats able to make the voyage down the coast to Danzig and Stettin. Many big East Prussian families are collecting their art treasures from their great villas and castles and rushing them to Germany.

The Stockholm correspondent of the London DAILY EXPRESS said that the Baltic ports are crammed with shouting German officials and civilians trying to hasten the great evacuation which is now in full swing. German engineers are preparing to blow up vital bridges and destroy factories and rail trucks as they withdraw.

AMERICANS OF 5TH REACH ARNO, NEAR LEGHORN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, July 18 — American forces of the 5th Army smashed through difficult mountain terrain today to reach the Arno River east of Leghorn at Pontedera, and are «closing in» on the great Tuscan port against stubborn enemy opposition.

The announcement early this evening said that the River Valley to by-pass the formidable German coastal defenses south of Leghorn coincided with a «complete breakthrough» of the German position southwest of Ancona on the Adriatic by Polish troops of the 8th Army. The announcement early this evening said that the Adriatic port town was now «gravely threatened» from both the west and the south.

It is now apparent that General Sir Harold Alexander has employed an almost identical strategy on both the Italian east and west coasts to secure the two ports, which are the immediate objectives of the Allied drive northward through Italy.

In each case, the Allied forces have by-passed heavy coastal defenses to strike inland in a wide flanking move which has threatened to envelope the two ports. On both the Ligurian and the Adriatic coasts, the Germans have fought savagely against these Allied thrusts, massing artillery and men, and resorting to heavy demolitions and treacherous minefields.

The town of Pontedera, entered by the American troops this morning, is at the junction point of the Arno River and its tributary, the Era. The town is 12 miles upriver from Pisa, and is 17 miles northeast of Leghorn. The northernmost point reached in the Allied advance in Italy, Pontedera represents a thrust six miles north of a line drawn due east from Leghorn.

8th Holds Bridgehead

British troops of the 8th Army yesterday held fast to their bridgehead across the Arno River northwest of Arezzo, despite German attempts to infiltrate, and heavy artillery fire.

The British foothold across the stream which the enemy had hoped to employ as a water barrier to the approaches to the Goth Line, now less than 30 miles to the north at its nearest point, was coupled with the seizure of a 12-mile stretch of Highway 69, along the south bank of the Arno west of Arezzo.

The spectacular British advance northwest of Arezzo along the Arno Valley came as a result of a sudden breakthrough by 8th Army tanks and infantry at the German strongpoint of Quarata, it was announced today. With the fall of this key enemy position between the Arno River and the Chiana Canal, the 8th Army assault forces moved forward rapidly to seize intact one of the key bridges over the Arno River, and were reported to have pushed north to near Cincelli, a village a little over a mile northeast of Leading elements of the American forces have now fought their way through the last of the hill masses south of the river and are approaching the three to six-mile-wide Arno Plain, on which both Leghorn and Pisa are situated. This advance has been made only at the cost of the heaviest fighting, and the American gains have been slowed to an average of less than a mile a day since the capture of Cecina on July 1.

The Germans have exploited to the utmost their formidable defenses erected south of Leghorn to repel a possible Allied landing from the sea. It was to flank these fixed defenses, comprising concrete pillboxes, heavy defense guns, and minefields, that the 5th Army undertook a sweeping drive inland, along the network of roads four or five miles in from the coast, and through the three valleys of the Arno's main tributaries, the Era, Elsa, and Pesa rivers.

The enemy has bitterly contested this move, which threatens to cut off Italy's third-largest west coast port from the east. Demolitions have been frequent, and the Germans have sown minefields all along the valley approaches. All bridges across the Arno in this area have been blown up, either by the enemy or by American air bombardment. The Germans are using pontoon bridges to transport troops and supplies to the battle area.

American forces were reported yesterday to have reached the outskirts of Ponsacco, three miles south of the Arno where it is joined by the Era at Pontedera. These forces were heavily counter-attacked Sunday night and early Monday morning in an engagement in which two Mark VI (Tiger) tanks and a Mark IV tank were destroyed.

Between the Era River and Leghorn, six small communities were reported captured by American forces, and some four others were mentioned as threatened or by-passed, but the official announcement declared that «little actual progress» had been made toward the port itself.

The nearest of the villages mentioned in the official reports was Popogna, 4 1/2 miles southeast of Leghorn. American forces in a mile advance had occupied a high point north of this village, it was said.

Another American formation was reported within a half-mile of Fauglia, 11 miles east of Leghorn, and about the same distance from Pisa. American forces were also within a half-mile of Crocino, seven miles east of Leghorn. Tripalle, near Fauglia, was reported to have been by-passed.

Among the small communities reported to have been captured were Pieve Vecchia, 8 1/2 miles southeast of Leghorn; Orciano, 10 miles southeast of Leghorn; Piazza, Crespina, and Borgo, all about 12 miles east of Leghorn, and Lari, 13 miles to the east of the port.

East of the Era River, American forces battling toward Palaia cut the road connecting this town with nearby Colleoli, but, despite heavy fighting, had not yet been able to enter the town late yesterday afternoon.

French troops of the 5th Army, which have been subjected to savage enemy counter-attacks in the Poggibonsi area, in the Elsa River Valley, were reported yesterday afternoon still to be holding firm to this key road and rail town. Enemy artillery has kept up a constant shelling of Allied positions in this district.

On the Adriatic front yesterday, Italian and Polish troops fighting with General Sir Oliver Leese's 8th Army made advances of between two and three miles to threaten the port of Ancona.

The villages of San Paterniano, about eight miles southwest of Ancona, and Monte Bogo, about 10 miles southwest, were occupied in an attack which moved northwestward toward Offagna and the Esima River, emptying into the Adriatic north of Ancona. An important lateral road, Highway 76, follows the north bank of the Troops fanning out north and northeast of Arezzo met with considerable delays, due to extensive minefields, and had penetrated only to the vicinity of Antria, two miles northeast of Arezzo.

In the region west of Arezzo, where the 8th Army broke out of the Chiana Valley after 13 days of bitter fighting, enemy forces caught south of the Arno were apparently attempting to effect a quick withdrawal. Forward elements of the 8th Army found the town of Pergine Valdarno, on the main road to Florence and nine miles west of Arezzo, clear of the enemy, and pushed three miles further west, to the village of Levane.

In the Pesa River Valley, South African armored columns pushed to within a mile of Radda, 25 miles west of Arezzo. Here they met enemy fire. These troops were erroneously reported yesterday to have effected a crossing of the Arno River in this vicinity, after having seized one of its bridges intact. The bridge was identified today as one over the Pesa River, one of the tributaries of the Arno.

Fifth Army forces approaching the Arno near its mouth had yesterday moved to within four miles of this broad stream along a six-mile front which has moved inland to hem in the great port of Leghorn and threaten Pisa.

In the region of the upper Tiber Valley, fighting was reported around Gubbio, and Monte Cedrone, north of Città di Castello, was occupied.

In advances southeast of Arezzo, a feature known as Alpe di Poti, four miles east of Arezzo and north of the Cerfone River and lateral Highway 73, was occupied. Palazzo del Pero, on the Cerfone River itself, and five miles southeast of Arezzo on Route 73, was by-passed by the 8th Army advance.

MAAF Hits Reich

Italy-based heavy bombers today crossed the Alps to bomb the great Manzell-Dornier aircraft factory at Friedrichshafen on the shores of Lake Constance in Germany.

The airdrome at Memmingen, 60 miles southwest of Munich, was also bombed.

Long-range Mustangs and Lightnings provided continuous protection to the Flying Fortresses and Liberators in their penetration to and withdrawal from southern Germany. A considerable number of enemy aircraft were encountered, as well as intense flak. Several enemy interceptors were shot down.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Early reports indicated good results at both targets.

Memmingen airdrome is used as a large twin-engined fighter base. It was last attacked by 8th United States Army Air Force planes flying from England on March 19.

TAF Strikes North Italy

Medium bombers of the 1st Tactical Air Force yesterday concentrated on rail and road lines through northwestern Italy into France, while Italy-based heavy bombers struck at three of the main bridges across the lower Rhone River in southern France.

Eleven railway bridges were attacked in yesterday's operations, including four west of Genoa, three on the Alessandria-Turin-Nice rail line, and one on the main Riviera line into France.

Light and fighter-bombers struck at enemy ammunition dumps, bridges in the Pisa-Florence area, and railway trackage around Bologna, Faenza, and Argenta. Coastal Air Force planes attacked a coastwise freighter in the Gulf of Quarnaro in the north Adriatic, and the big shipyards at Sestri Levante. In west coast forays, a barracks north of La Spezia and oil tanks at Marina di Carrara were hit.

FRENCH WOMEN CITED

WITH FRENCH EXPEDITIONARY CORPS, ITALY, July 18 — A section of the Bataillon Medicale des Corps Feminins, serving with the French Expeditionary Corps in Italy, has been collectively cited for its work, which includes the evacuation of nearly 4,000 wounded to military hospitals since it landed in Italy last November 23, it was announced here.

The Croix de Guerre has been awarded to the section leader, a young French woman holding the rank of lieutenant. The citation records her «inspiring and efficient leadership.» She was formerly professor of physics at a school for young women in Morocco.

Her section operates wherever called upon to do so, often over roads under enemy fire and observation. Nearly all its nurses and drivers have been decorated personally, the slim, dark-haired lieutenant said.

She praised the courage of wounded Moroccan troops and their consideration for ambulance personnel.

American, as well as French soldiers owe their lives to this section's work. When the medical station to which it was attached was only 1,200 meters from the front lines at one stage of the advance it received a plaque from 5th Army Command for its excellent performance.

The Ambulance Section is now encamped near Siena.

CLARK RECEIVES FRENCH RESIDENT GENERAL

FIFTH ARMY HQ, ITALY, July 18 — General Mast, Resident General of France in Tunisia, called on General Clark here yesterday and reviewed a guard of honour of United States troops. Military attaches from five countries, accredited to the French Committee in Algiers, also called on the 5th Army Commander. The attaches, who were on a front line tour of Italy, were Lieutenant Colonel Ebbeson (Norway); Major Montjole (Belgium); Lieutenant Colonel Pumunes (Mexico); Major Coyo (Peru); and Colonel Colocotronis (Greece).

YUGOSLAVS REPULSE BOSNIA ATTACK

ALGIERS, July 18 — A German counter-attack in central Bosnia, aimed at the recapture of the city of Teslic, was thrown back into the Bosna Valley, the Germans losing 1500 killed in the two-day battle, stated Marshal Tito's communique quoted by the Free Yugoslav radio today.

The news of Tojo's removal as Chief of Staff followed the receipt in Washington of a Domei dispatch which said that Nomura admitted at a press conference in Tokyo that the Japanese Navy had undergone a reorganization.

An Allied naval spokesman said that this was a strong indication that Admiral Shimada had been ousted from office because of repeated naval defeats which have continued in an unbroken string, beginning with the great defeat in the battle of Midway in June 1942.

Earlier today, Domei quoted Tojo himself as admitting the seriousness of Japan's predicament. In reporting the loss of Saipan, Tojo said: «Our enemies the United States and Great Britain, especially the United States, have gradually increased the intensity of their counteroffensives, and have advanced into the Marianas. I am moved by great trepidation by the thought that deep anxiety has been caused His Imperial Majesty.»

Domei also quoted a Japanese High Command communique as admitting that all Japanese troops on Saipan, including a lieutenant general and two admirals, were killed when the Americans made their final assault on July 7th.

COUNTER-ATTACK BY JAP 18TH ARMY REPULSED

ALLIED SOUTHWEST PACIFIC HEADQUARTERS, July 18 — Troops of the Japanese 18th Army, trapped in the Wewak-Aitape area of north New Guinea, smashed against the Americans but were repulsed, General MacArthur's communique reported today. Enemy rear units were blasted by Allied naval forces along the whole length of the coast.

Allied bombers dropped a heavy tonnage of bombs on the Japanese island outpost of Yap in the western Carolines, causing fires and explosions. Japanese planes intercepted the bombers, but eight of them were shot down for the loss of two Allied planes.

Other planes attacked Rabaul in New Britain, dropping tons of bombs on supply areas, destroying gun positions, and exploding one fuel dump.

Saipan Island in the Marianas and Hollandia, the first bit of the Dutch territory to be liberated from the Japanese, are now regular stops for transport planes in the Pacific.

A despatch from the Associated Press said that Saipan has joined the evergrowing list of Pacific island terminals for American transport planes. The official Netherlands news agency, ANETA, in a despatch from Melbourne, said that Hollandia is now included in the regular schedule of the Netherlands East Indies air transport service to Netherlands centers in Australia and Dutch New Guinea.

A United Press correspondent, commenting on the Allied fleet attack on Guam Island on Saturday, said that this was the greatest softening-up offensive of the Pacific war. It was the first mention of battleships participating in attack on an enemy position in the central Pacific since the bombardment and capture of Saipan, 175 miles to the north.

CHINESE STAND FIRM IN HENGYANG

CHUNGKING, July 18 — Chinese forces are still holding the key city of Kengyang, despite repeated Japanese attacks, said a communique issued here last night.

Fighting is particularly severe in the suburbs; the municipal hospital in the northern suburbs has been recaptured.

Hengyang, which has already cost the Japanese 14,000 men in the last three weeks, lies some 280 miles southwest of Canton, and was formerly the main air base for the 14th USAAF.

The Chinese High Command announced that fighting continues in the Leiyang sector, and that struggles are going on east and south of Liling.

Progress has been made by Chinese troops in the Siangsiang sector. Other Chinese forces made advances in the neighbourhood of Yungfeng. Enemy attacks were repulsed in the Kwantung region.

GOVERNMENT REVISES PURGE MACHINERY

ROME, July 18 — The Bonomi Government today completely overhauled and streamlined the machinery previously set up to liquidate Fascists and Fascism.

The new law adopted during a session of the Council of Ministers retains most of the features of the various laws passed by the Badoglio Ministries, which dealt with ousting of Fascist officeholders, punishment of those who committed crimes under Fascism, and the recovery of Fascist gains for the benefit of the state.

The main difference is that all phases of the Fascist officeholders. This will be done by a series of local or provincial commissions, rather than by a central body. (PWB)

ROME COMMITTEE CONSIDERS PARTISANS

ROME, July 18 — The Rome Committee of Liberation today urged a proper evaluation of the work carried out by Italian Partisans and the strengthening of their organization « for their prompt re-employment in the fight. »

The Committee endorsed the plan for a single, nation-wide organization of partisans and called for definition of the qualifications of a partisan to the end of « an early naming and selection of those who have effectively fought, and continue to fight, in the war of national liberation. »

Moral and material aid to the partisans and to the families of those who have fallen in the fight against Nazism was likewise advocated by the Committee. (PWB)

BELATED EASTER MASS IN ROME JAIL

ROME, July 18 — The annual Easter communion for inmates of Regina Coeli Prison, which could not be held this past season on account of the Nazi-Fascist terror, was celebrated today by Archbishop Cortesi, Papal Nuncio to Poland.

Many of the political victims lodged in the prison last Easter are now free, while a number of officials who placed them there are now residents of Regina Coeli. (PWB)

NEAPOLITANS CELEBRATE FALL OF FASCISM

NAPLES, July 18 — The Naples Committee of National Liberation announced plans for a celebration of the first anniversary of the overthrow of the Fascist regime. The program, to be held in a large city square, will take place on Sunday, July 30, rather than on the anniversary itself, July 25. The celebration was transferred from the weekday to prevent any interruption of war production in local factories. (PWB)

ROME YOUTHS RESPOND TO ARMY CALL

ROME, July 18 — The size of the response of Roman youths in the military classes of 1923 and 1924 to the army's call caught Italian Army officials off guard today.

Several thousand more young men than were expected crowded around the Ministry of War in Via Nomentana, and registration took much longer than was expected as a result. This was in marked contrast to the attempted call-up of the Fascist Republicans under the German domination, when threats and bribes failed to evoke enthusiasm.

Other age groups will be called up shortly, in accordance with the Government's program to give the fighting generation a chance to participate in the liberation of their country.

Many of those showing up today are veterans of the fight by Italian Patriots against the Nazis and Fascists. A great many others successfully eluded the Nazi-Fascist impressments by hiding. (PWB)

AMERICAN PROTESTANT CHURCH REOPENED

ROME, July 18 — St. Paul's American Episcopal Church, long known in Rome among the American colony as the Embassy Church, has been reopened after two years. It is now open to all Allied troops.

Upon declaration of war upon America, the Fascists closed the church. It is located at the corner of Via Nazionale and Via Napoli. Father Joseph Brown of the Rome Area Allied Command is temporarily in charge, pending the arrival of a resident clergyman. (PWB - PRO)

GOVERNMENT REVISES PURGE MACHINERY

ROME, July 18 — The Bonomi Government today completely overhauled and streamlined the machinery previously set up to liquidate Fascists and Fascism.

The new law adopted during a session of the Council of Ministers retains most of the features of the various laws passed by the Badoglio Ministries, which dealt with ousting of Fascist officeholders, punishment of those who committed crimes under Fascism, and the recovery of Fascist gains for the benefit of the state.

The main difference is that all phases of the Fascist liquidation program are coordinated under a single High Commissioner, with Deputy Commissioners charged with the respective branches of the job. The new law also cures the complaint that previous measures were retroactive in nature. This is done by using penalties and procedures under Fascist criminal codes existent at the time such crimes against the state were committed.

In the matter of trial of the graver cases of crime committed under Fascism, a High Court composed of leading jurists and citizens will be set up. Less grave cases will be heard by the regular Italian judiciary.

Civilians, as well as military persons who have collaborated with the Fascists and Germans since October 8 last, will be tried under Italian military law concerning treason.

Public officials in previously German-occupied territory who can prove they have aided the common cause of the United Nations and Italy since last October 8 will be given consideration in extenuation. Such public servants in areas still under the invader are assured fair treatment if they now help the Partisans and otherwise aid in the common war effort.

The new law recognizes the slowness with which de-Fascistization of the public service has proceeded, and sets up a decentralized system for eliminating Fascist

Poland.

Many of the political victims lodged in the prison last Easter are now free, while a number of officials who placed them there are now residents of Regina Coeli. (PWB)

MINISTER SPEAKS ON GRANAI DEL POPOLO

SALERNO, July 18 — The Granaries of the People has the extremely important aim of making certain that the people of Italy will have enough bread this year for their sustenance, Minister of Agriculture Fausto Gullo told a large gathering of farmers of this area meeting in the Verdi Theater.

The speaker denounced certain "obscure, tendentious, and sabotaging", forces, which he said have been set in motion with the idea of retarding the success of the grain harvesting plan. He outlined the differences between the old Fascist amassi, with its complicated bureaucracy, and the new Granai del Popolo with its democratic features,

TREASURY, FINANCE MINISTRIES DEFINED

ROME, July 18 — The allocation of departments between the Ministry of the Treasury and the Ministry of Finance has been worked out by the Government.

The Ministry of the Treasury will have charge of the treasury itself, the public debt management, and matters affecting banks of deposit and credit extension. This Ministry will also have charge of movable property of the State, as well as direct the general accounting office of the Government.

The Ministry of Finance, on the other hand, will have charge of direct and indirect taxes, fixed property of the State, customs and tariffs, and local tax assessing. The General Supply Office is also placed under this Ministry.

A special Commissariat to deal with all war pension matters is being set up under the Ministry of Finance. (PWB)

PEROSI MAKES FIRST PUBLIC APPEARANCE

ROME, July 18 — Don Lorenzo Perosi, 72-year-old world-famous composer and conductor, and permanent director of music in the Sistine Chapel, conducted a performance of his oratorio « The Resurrection of Christ » here yesterday. Before the performance, he told the Rome Christian Democrat newspaper POPOLO that it would be his first public appearance in Rome since the advent of Fascism.

In his interview with POPOLO before today's performance, Perosi said: « For various reasons — not very pleasant ones — I have not met the Roman public while conducting my oratorios for about 20 years. Now I come back to the platform here in Rome after a long absence, and I know that the Roman public will join with Allied soldiers in receiving me. »

He recalled how years ago he spent some months in London, and said: « One of my works preserves the memory of one of my London visits. It is the mass I composed in 1938 for the Centenary of St. Charles Borromeo, in which there is a recurrent motif of the carillon of Westminster Hall. It has been perfomed at the Duomo in Milan, but Fascist censors forbade a broadcast simply because there was an English motif. » (PWB)

SPAIN SENDS IRON ORE TO OCCUPIED EUROPE

LONDON, July 18 — Spain has been sending 45,000 tons of iron ore a month to German-occupied territory recently, said Mr. Dingle Foot, the Parliamentary Secretary to the British Ministry of Economic Warfare, yesterday.

Replying to a question in the House of Commons, Mr. Foot added, « By far the greater part of this quantity is carried in enemy-controlled ships sailing from Spain to French Biscay or Mediterranean ports. Successful naval and air operations have been undertaken against this enemy traffic, which considerably affected the quantity of supplies reaching the enemy.

« If the ships enter our prohibited lines, they are liable to be sunk, and this is what has happened on a number of occasions. In other cases, if they can be intercepted at sea, they are sent under armed guard to Gibraltar and, in cases like these, cargoes and ships are placed in prize.

« A number of ships which were concerned in this traffic some time ago were ships sailing under the Spanish flag, but belonging to enemy-controlled countries. As a result of some of the measures to which I referred, there are now only three small ships under the Spanish flag engaged in this particular trade. »

Replying to a further question, Mr. Foot said that, from recollection, he thought the ships sailing under the Spanish flag had been sunk. (PWB)

NORWAY HAS 2.000 UNDERGROUND PAPERS

LONDON, July 18 —Clandestine news sheets are as numerous today as free newspapers were before the Nazi occupation, said an unnamed Norwegian printer at the Monday opening here of « Out of the Darkness, » an exhibition of the Underground press in Europe.

Underground papers now number about 2,000, he said.

Underground newspapers from 10 occupied countries are represented at the exhibition. Of special interest are a faked edition of the Nazi-controlled LE SOIR, which was circulated for some time before the German authorities detected the falsification; and a duplicator used for the printing of a clandestine Norwegian paper.

Underground papers have been the backbone of the Resistance Movement in Europe, the speaker said. (OWI)

WORLD SECURITY CONFERENCE PLANNED

WASHINGTON, July 18 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull announced last night that the exploratory conferences on the organisation of a world security agency will be held in Washington, probably in August.

Hull said that the first phase of the conversations will be between representatives of the United States, United Kingdom, and the Soviet Union, and that conversations on the same subject between representatives of the U. S., U. K., and China will be carried on either at the same time or shortly afterwards.

These conversations will be followed by discussions with the other United Nations.

President Roosevelt has already announced the broad outlines of the American plan. It would call for an organis-

American troops of the 5th Army to the east of Leghorn have met determined resistance but, in heavy fighting, have captured a number of towns and villages and are now within four miles of the Arno and on a front of some six miles.

AIR: Three rail bridges and a rail yard in the lower Rhone Valley were attacked yesterday by heavy bombers.

Tactical aircraft concentrated their attacks against enemy communications, tank concentrations, gun positions, and other objectives in northern Italy, the battle area, and Yugoslavia.

In these operations, four enemy aircraft were destroyed and seven of ours are missing. Two bombers are missing from night operations of July 16/17.

MAAF flew approximately 1700 sorties. (PWB)

WESTERN FRONT (1)

SHAEF, July 18 — Today's communique:

Sporadic fighting from Lessay to Noyers has brought gains of important and commanding ground for the Allies. North of Remilly sur Lozon, we overran the villages of La Samsonnerie and Lahbaye, and they are now firmly in our hands. On the west bank of the Vire River, there was a mile-deep advance south of Le Mesnil Durand.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Martinville, on one of the approaches to Saint Lô, has been taken. There has been heavy fighting north of Noyers and Evrecy. Haut des Forges has been captured.

Airfields, troops, gun positions, rail centers, and fuel and ammunition dumps were targets yesterday afternoon and evening for Allied aircraft which ranged through comparatively clear skies southward to the Loire and eastward to the Somme.

In close support of our ground forces, fighters and fighter-bombers hit many pinpoint targets in the path of our troops near Saint Lô and blocked the highway in use by the enemy south of the town. Others successfully attacked guns and an ammunition dump near Periers. Airfields at Le Mans, and at Corne and Valade on the outskirts of Angers, were bombed and strafed with good results. Railway tracks were cut at Sable sur Sarthe and near Chartres, and a railway bridge northeast of Maners was severed.

Our fighters attacked an enemy headquarters south of Caen, destroyed motor transport south of Hottot and made a number of sweeps deep into France. Medium bombers in the afternoon attacked a fuel dump on the outskirts of Alençon, and bombed trains and transformer stations near Argentan. Our intruders were over Germany during the night, and defensive patrols were carried out over the beach areas.

During the day's operations, 14 enemy aircraft were destroyed. Seven of ours are missing.

WESTERN FRONT (II)

SHAEF, July 18 — Tonight's communique:

Allied forces have broken through enemy positions east of the River Orne. In an attack which commenced early this morning, supported by terrific and accurate air bombardment, our troops have driven along the east bank of the river into open country, southeast of Caen, where armored and mobile forces are now in action against strong enemy forces.

Along the Orne, our troops are steadily clearing the enemy out of the area, including the town of Vaucelles on the south bank of the river opposite Caen. Heavy fighting continues.

In preparation for the advance, the massive weight of Allied air power was concentrated in the heavily-defended Caen sector at dawn today. Waves of escorted heavy, medium, and light bombers, numbering more than 2,200, showered enemy troops, artillery, and strongpoints south and southeast of Caen with 8,000 tons of high explosive and fragmentation bombs.

The attack continued for almost four hours, with the bomb line moving gradually southward ahead of our troops on a prearranged schedule. Fighter-bombers, operating in great strength in even more direct support of our advancing troops, sought out individual targets which might have impeded their progress. Others stabbed to the east and southeast of the target area, to interfere with enemy air and ground movement.

No enemy aircraft appeared during the entire bombardment. Nine of our bombers are missing.

On the western sector, Allied troops have made another important advance on Saint Lô. High ground to the east of the town was captured by our forces this morning after very stiff resistance. Fighting continues in the vicinity of Saint Lô itself.

MOSCOW, July 18 — Tuesday night's Soviet communique:

During July 18, west and southwest of Opochka, our Torudichi, Osipovichi, the railway station of Zhavinka, and the station of Antopol.

Troops of the 1st Ukrainian Front, having gone on the offensive, with the massed support of artillery and the Air Force, broke through the deeply-echeloned German defenses in the direction of Lvov, and, during a three days' offensive, advanced forward up to 50 kilometers, enlarging the break- through up to 200 kilometers along the front.

In the course of the offensive, troops of the front captured the following district centers of Volynsk Region: the town of Politsk, the town of Gorokhov, Lokachi, the following district centers of Lvov Region: the town of Radzekhov, the town of Brodi, the town of Zolochev, Gutsk, Kamenka, Krasnoye, an important railway junction; and also occupied with fighting over 600 other populated localities, including Khobulkov, Skomorokhi, Tartakov, Stoyanov, Khaloiev, Polonichka, Golokhi Skvarzhevo, Kniazhe, Perepelniki, Yaroslavitsi, Yazerna, and the railway stations of Voynitsa, Khabulka, Gorokhov, Brani, Stoyanov, Radzekhov, Khaloiev, Merushka, Kamenka, Brodi, Zablotsi, and Yazerna.

There are no material changes on other sectors of the front.

During July 17, our troops destroyed or damaged on all fronts a total of 76 German tanks. In air combat and by anti-aircraft fire, 42 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, July 18 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Marche, another group of patriots, consisting of about 100 men, has joined the vanguard of the Allied Army. Contact between the respective parties was made on July 9. The first advanced elements of patriots crossed the lines, bringing with them 11 German prisoners and three Fascist militia. This active group of patriots, through January, was commanded by an Italian officer known under the name of « General, the Horseman. »

At Como, Fascists and Germans feel more insecure each day because of patriot activity. Enemy officers at night have to remain in barricaded zones where specially-protected barracks permit them to maintain watch over strategic approaches.

At Arquà Petrarca, Province of Padua, a nucleus of patriots, helped by the population, surrounded the City Hall and commanded the Council to turn over rationing cards. After German and Fascist reinforcement troops arrived, the village was blockaded. Brisk fighting ensued, with losses on both sides.

At Bergamo, some Carabinieri have joined the Clandestine Resistance Movement.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, July 18 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In Normandy, in the area southwest of Caen and northeast of St.Lô, the defensive battle reached its greatest scale through the employment of fresh forces on both sides. Southwest of Caen, all enemy large-scale attacks were halted. Wherever the enemy succeeded in penetrating temporarily our positions, he was repulsed in immediate counterthrusts. Enemy attempts at breaking through, supported by very heavy artillery fire, were particularly fierce in the area north of St. Lô, where the enemy, after heavy losses, succeeded in pushing back our lines to the northern edge of the town. Bomber planes supported the defensive fighting of our army units in the beachhead. Last night, enemy troop concentrations and artillery positions were successfully attacked.

Southwest of Caen, all enemy large-scale attacks were halted. Wherever the enemy succeeded in penetrating temporarily our positions, he was repulsed in immediate counterthrusts. Enemy attempts at breaking through, supported by very heavy artillery fire, were particularly fierce in the area north of St. Lô, where the enemy, after heavy losses, succeeded in pushing back our lines to the northern edge of the town. Bomber planes supported the defensive fighting of our army units in the beachhead. Last night, enemy troop concentrations and artillery positions were successfully attacked.

In France, 67 terrorists and bandits were annihilated in fighting.

The sinking of enemy warships, as frequently reported in the War Communique, is caused by new weapons of our Navy. These are torpedoes operated by one man against the enemy. In these actions, Leading Seaman Walter Gerold particularly distinguished himself.

The retaliatory fire against London continues.

In Italy, defensive fighting at the focal points continues to increase in vehemence. Particularly southeast of Livorno, north and northwest of Volterra, in the area on both sides of Arezzo and south of Ancona, the enemy made numerous attacks; however, he achieved only small territorial gains.

In the southern sector of the Eastern Front, the Soviets attacked with strong forces to the east of the Upper Bug. Our divisions in counter-thrusts smashed all enemy attempts at breaking through.

In the central sector, our troops at several points threw back the enemy, who had advanced across the Niemen River.

West of Vilna, in the lake region south of Duenaburg, north of the Dvina, in the penetration area of Opochka as well as south of Ostrov, the Soviets yesterday attempted to penetrate our front. However, all attacks collapsed in bloody fighting.

In the sector north of the Dvina alone, 62 enemy tanks were destroyed. Fighter-bombers destroyed 37 enemy tanks and more than 300 planes.

Naval artillery gunboats damaged three Soviet gunboats on Lake Peipus.

In the fighting on the Eastern Front, in the southern sector, the 68th Franconian-Sudeten German Infantry Division, under the command of Major General Count von Rittberg, and in the northern sector, the 329th Rhenish-Westphalian Infantry Division, under the command of Lieut General Meyer, repeatedly distinguished themselves by exceptional resistance.

Last night, during an enemy air attack on Kirkines, 37 Soviet planes were shot down in aerial battles and thus one-third of the attacking enemy planes were destroyed.

Last night, British planes dropped bombs on Berlin.
