WAR FRONTS

CAPITAL OF TRANSYLVANIA FALLS TO RED ARMY SOVIETS AND YUGOSLAVS SURROUND BELGRADE

MOSCOW, October 11 — Cluj, Transylvanian capital and an important railway and communications city, fell to Marshal Malinovsky's Red Army troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front today, Marshal Stalin announced in an order of the day.

The order also announced the capture of Szeged, which it described as an "important political, economic, and administrative center of Hungary," by troops of the same

Cluj's fall leaves German and Hungarian troops to the east only a secondary and roundabout railway for their escape route to Hungary—unless Red Air Force elements have already bombed it out. This railway runs from Cluj to Satu Mare in Rumania, and Czap on the Czecho-Slovak border.

Cluj is about 250 miles northwest of Bucharest, and is the hub of a network of railroads fanning out toward Budapest, Belgrade, and Bucharest.

The momentum of the Red Army advance in Hungary is increasing daily, the Moscow correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph reported. He said that more than 5,000 square miles of territory east of the Tisa River have been cleared of enemy troops in the five days since the Red Army crossed the frontier. The correspondent pointed out that the average advance of 1,000 square miles a day was achieved in the face of strong forces of German-Hungarian troops, well supported by tanks and artillery. The level nature of the Hungarian terrain is facilitating the Red Army's work, it was said.

From Debreczen to the northeast, another Hungarian center, where Red Army troops were announced yesterday to be battling in the suburbs, there were no new reports. No changes were reported in the fighting from surrounded Riga, but tonight's Soviet communique announced new gains on the southern tip of the island of Saaremaa, where the Red Army has been mopping up. This island dominates the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, astride the seaward escape route from the city. Two small adjacent islands have also been taken, the communique said. (OWI - Reuter)

BULGARIA ACCEPTS PRELIMINARY TERMS

MOSCOW, October 11 — Bulgaria has accepted the preliminary armistice terms of the Allies, Radio Moscow said tonight.

A preliminary condition is that all Bulgarian troops in Greece and Yugoslavia must be evacuated within a fortnight, the broadcast said.

The Soviet news agency, TASS, said that Bulgaria today asked the governments of the Soviet Union, Great Britain, and The United States for an armistice, and that the Allied governments replied with the terms of evacuation to be concluded in 15 days.

To control the evacuation, the three governments will send to Bulgaria representatives acting on behalf of the Allied Military Commission, under the chairmanship of the Soviet representative. (TASS-Reuter)

CAPITAL OF TRANSYLVANIA FALLS TO RED ARMY SOVIETS AND YUGOSLAVS SURROUND BELGRADE

MOSCOW, October 11 — Cluj, Transylvanian capital and an important railway and communications city, fell to Marshal Malinovsky's Red Army troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front today, Marshal Stalin announced in an order of the day.

The order also announced the capture of Szeged, which it described as an «important political, economic, and administrative center of Hungary,» by troops of the same front.

In the latter action, the Soviet soldiers forced the River Tisa, according to the order.

In the Baltic sector, the Red Army maintained its swift advance and pushed its way to within seven miles of the German-held seaport of Memel, and to within 15 miles of the East Prussian rail center of Tilsit, the Associated Press reported.

Tilsit Bombarded by Soviets

Tilsit, in fact, was under a Soviet artillery barrage. Smaller Red Army guns were raining shells on German labor battalions which had been rushed up to repair broken fortifications in the area.

The Finns reported capture of the village of Tertola, on the east bank of the Kemi River, and advances on the west bank, while headquarters of the Yugoslav Liberation Army reported that Belgrade has now been encircled by Red Army troops and Marshal Tito's Partisans. Soviet and Yugoslav forces effected a juncture at Velika Plana, whose capture was announced yesterday, after the Red Army had driven across the Morava River from eastern Serbia.

With the Soviet capture of Cluj and Szeged, the battle for Hungary swept toward a climax as Red Army tanks and cavalry drove, according to one front-line dispatch, within 42 miles of the capital city of Budapest.

MADRID ADMITS UNCONTROLLABLE CLASHES

MADRID, October 11 — Government-controlled Spanish newspapers admitted today that «uncontrollable bands» of what were described as «Spanish émigrés» have in part disrupted communications over the Franco-Spanish border.

The controlled newspapers further described the guerrilla fighters as «Spanish Reds,» saying that they were operating in a wide area along the frontier, around St. Jean Pau and Toulouse.

The Spanish guerrillas were said to be under command of two prominent figures in the Loyalist ranks during the Spanish Civil War.

The dispatches to Madrid described the clashes as violent, and said that fighting had carried over the frontier into Spain. Strong government forces were said to be ready to quell «rebel centers.» (Reuter)

AMERICAN PLANES HIT JAP OIL CENTER

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 12 — Heavy American bombers have struck again at the Japanese-held oil producing center of Balikpapan, on the Netherlands Indies island of Borneo.

General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters said the attack was carried out Sunday, by waves of heavy bombers which swept in over a period of four hours.

Other aircraft dropped 74 tons of explosives on Japanese oil storages areas on Ceram and Amboina islands, causing large fires and explosions. (OWI)

NEW RED ARMY CROSSING OF RIVER TISA

LONDON, October 11 — Red Army troops have made a new crossing of the Tisa River in Yugoslavia and are advancing toward the Danube, Marshal Tito's communique said today.

The advance has cut off the northward withdrawal of the German troops from Serbia, the communique said.

In northern Dalmatia, a four-day battle resulted in the liberation of the German stronghold of Benkovac. Over 250 Germans were killed and 50 captured in the fighting.

During September, the communique said, widespread operations in east Serbia resulted in 11,700 enemy troops being killed, wounded, or captured. In addition, large quantities of equipment were captured. (YTA)

BRITISH MEMBERS OF A.C.C. IN BUCHAREST

LONDON, October 11 — The first members of the British section of the Allied Control Commission in Rumania, including the head of the mission, Air Vice Marshal D. F. Stevenson, have arrived in Bucharest to take up their duties, the British Foreign Office and War Office announced jointly tonight. (OWI)

SOVIETS PREDICT EARLY ENTRY INTO BERLIN

MOSCOW, October 11 — "The day is not far distant when the Red Army will smash Hitler's forces and enter Berlin, there to shake hands with our brothers-in-arms, the Dough boys of America and the Tommies of Britain," Radio Moscow predicted today.

"History is repeating itself," the broadcast said, and recalled that 184 years ago, on 10 October 1760, Russian forces entered Berlin.

"In those years, the Russian Army, then little known to Europe, showed its superiority to the strongest army of the Prussian King, Frederick II, who, like Hitler, usurped the title of 'invincible general'". (OWI)

HEAVY ASSAULT LAUNCHED AGAINST AACHEN

SHAEF, October 11 — Seventy minutes following the expiration of the unconditional surrender terms given to the commander of the isolated German garrison at Aachen, American 1st Army ground troops, in close cooperation with the Allied air forces, launched a terrific assault against the besieged city.

The bombing was begun at 1300 hours today by American fighter-bombers which dive-bombed the city in flights of six to 12 planes, dropping high explosives and fire bombs. The aerial attack was still going on in clear weather at 1630 hours. The whole face of the city is clouded in smoke, which intermittently clears away.

Over 200 heavy guns began their bombardment early this evening after the Thunderbolt attacks. Artillery gunners loosed the first salvoes from 155 mm. "Long Toms" and 105 mm. rifles, in an obliterating barrage, but the bombardment is still not fully under way.

The furious bombardment to break the will of the German defenders of Aachen began on the western edge of the industrial city and traversed across its center to the eastern end, in a carefully worked out schedule of shelling.

Germans Attempt Reinforcement

The Germans made a desperate attempt to reinforce the original garrison of 1,500 SS men by sending in two relief columns, estimated at one division, from west of the city, in the vicinity of Eschweiler. Bellowing 240-mm. guns, 155-mm. "Long Toms," and 105-mm. howitzers slowly 4th Armored Division, which made the landing, have widened their Scheldt beachhead to four miles from Hoofdplaat to just east of Breskens.

Amphibious craft operating a shuttle service of men and supplies to the beachhead are running a gauntlet of Nazi shellfire from three sides.

Canadians are still holding their positions north of the Leopold Canal against very strong German opposition. They now hold a base 6,000 yards wide, with penetrations of 400 to 700 yards.

The British 2nd Army in the Holland corridor is still massing its forces in the Arnhem-Nijmegen-Hertogenbosch triangle for an expected grand assault which will probably be launched soon.

American 3rd Army troops are reported in house-to-house fighting in Malroves les Metz, five miles north of the fortress city of Metz.

American troops fighting in the tunnel of Fort Driant to the west of Metz are using rifles, machine guns, and bazookas in an effort to blast out the Germans at the opposite end of the tunnel. Opposing sides are so close together that they can hear each other's orders.

West of Belfort, where the American 7th Army and the French 1st Army are striving to close the gap between the Vosges and the Alps, some progress has been reported, and Allied troops are now within eight miles of the town.

A substantial bridgehead was established across the Moselotte River in the Le Thillot sector, it was reported tonight. (OWI-Reuter-INS-AP)

GERMANS RAZING DUNKIRK

WITH CANADIAN 1ST ARMY, October 11 — The Germans are razing the port city of Dunkirk, a British United Press correspondent reported. They started the burning of the town before the evacuation of civilians, and one evacuee stated: "It is sheer and wanton destruction, as none of the houses had any military significance."

The Germans are also continuing to destroy port installations, the report said.

COLOGNE AND COBLENZ AREAS BOMBED

LONDON, October 11 — Flying Fortresses of 8th USAAF, escorted by Thunderbolt and Mustang fighters, attacked military targets today in the Cologne and Coblenz areas in the Rhineland.

Cologne had been bombed only a few hours earlier by a force of RAF night bombers, which also raided other objectives in western Germany. No British aircraft is missing from these forays.

American fighter-bombers roared over Aachen shortly after noon today when the 24-hour surrender ultimatum to the city expired. They joined with American artillery in a shattering bombardment of Aachen.

During the night, the enemy directed flying bombs against southern England, including the London area, for the sixth consecutive night. (Reuter)

HIMMLER CRITICIZES GERMAN OFFICERS

LONDON, October 11 — Gestapo Chief Heinrich Himmler urgently demanded increased discipline and sense of duty in a recent speech made to officer recruits near Metz, it was reported here.

Bitterly critical of the behavior of German Army officers, the Gestapo chief revealed that some units had run away from the front lines, and warned that, in the future, the commanders of such units would be court-martialed, the report said.

Lightnings on their way to the city dive-bombed and strafed them.

Over 250 German soldiers have so far come over to American lines, including the staff officer and his men, and the guides, who led the American ultimatum party into the city yesterday.

A fairly heavy German counter-attack in the Haaren area was beaten off by well dug-in infantry troops. Artillery support inflicted heavy losses on the Germans.

For the first time a German city has been surrounded with a steel ring, and has become a target for massed air and artillery bombardment.

The German garrison of 20,000 on the islands of Walcheren and Beveland have been cut off from the mainland by Canadian troops who captured the road and rail junction leading from the Beveland Peninsula. In this new assault to clear the approaches to the great port of Antwerp, Canadian troops advancing toward Bergen op Zoom suddenly wheeled west and struck into south Beveland. The only escape route open to the Germans is by ferry to the islands to the north.

The Canadian beachhead on the southern side of the Schelde Estuary is now only five miles from the Canadian bridgehead over the Leopold Canal to the south. The Canadian 9th Infantry Brigade and parts of the Canadian French 1st Army are striving to close the gap between the Vosges and the Alps, some progress has been reported, and Allied troops are now within eight miles of the town.

Himmler admitted ill feeling between the Army and the SS. He demanded that Army officers halt any sign of retreat, even by shooting those who turned back. The most brutal officers of the division were to be sent out for this task, said Himmler. He said he would undertake to protect every such action, "even if it seemed to be a bit too drastic." (OWI)

5TH ARMY MAKES LIMITED GAINS ON 15-MILE FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — American troops of the 5th Army, battling slowly northward through the Apennines on a 15-mile wide front in heavy, wintry rains, yesterday made limited gains, which placed them within 11 miles of Bologna and within 8½ miles of the Po Valley highway at Castel San Pietro, it was announced here today.

Principal American advance was the capture of the village of Gesso, high up in the hills separating the Sillaro and the Santerno River Valleys, and more than a mile north of the village of Apollinare, reported captured yesterday. These infantrymen, although not the northernmost American forces, are the closest of any 5th Army elements to the Valley of the Po, only 8½ miles to the northeast.

Heavy enemy counter-attacks contested practically every gain made by the American forces in the crucial sector south of Bologna, and after fierce fighting to gain their objectives, the American infantrymen were faced with equally bitter battles to hold their forward positions against the determined enemy.

Some nine miles southeast of the American advances, British forces on the right flank of the 5th Army yesterday captured the key height of Monte Cece, on the sixth day of a bitter contest for this summit dominating the upper reaches of the Sintria River Valley and 13 miles southwest of Castel Bolognese on the Po Valley Highway. Still another important height, Montefreddo, 12 miles further southeast, was reported under attack by British forces of 5th Army. Leading elements were already on the slopes of this feature, likewise 13 miles from the Emilia Highway, in the vicinity of Faenza.

American forces have reached the southern edge of the village of Livergnano, 11 miles south of Bologna, in their advance northward along the Florence-Bologna Highway, it was reported today. The two small hamlets of Maceratoio, 2½ miles southeast of Livergnano, and Campagne, three miles southeast of this highway community, were also taken by American forces.

To the west of Livergnano, American troops neared the hamlet of Vado, on the Setta River 13 miles southwest of Bologna.

Battle for Livergnano

German forces were fighting savagely to stop the American forces short of Livergnano, a mountain village located at nearly 1,700 feet elevation along Highway 65. American elements had actually penetrated into the southern end of the village, only to be met by heavy German counter-attacks. By late afternoon yesterday, heavy fighting was still in progress for the town and its immediate approaches, reports said.

On the Adriatic front, 8th Army forces — now established along a six-mile ridge running from Montigallo southwest to Monte Farneto, and facing the German stronghold of Longiano, main outpost defense of Cesena and the Emilia Highway leading northwest to Bologna and Milan — captured a rocky pinnacle only one mile east of the German-held village. These troops, pushing westward through the hill fringes of the Po Plain to outflank German positions along the western banks of the swollen Fiumicino River, are now within 6½ miles of Cesena, first important town on the Emilia Highway west of Rimini.

Little change was reported on the central or coastal sectors of the 5th Army front yesterday. South African troops still battled for Monte Stanco, mountain feature dominating the Rono River Valley, 19 miles southwest of Bologna. On the coastal sector, a slight improvement of forward positions was made north of Serravezza, some nine miles north of Viareggio. (PRO)

SARANDE IN ALBANIA CAPTURED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic yesterday captured the southern Albanian port town of Sarande, after a full-scale attack with artillery support, a special communique of the Balkan Air Force declared today.

About 500 enemy prisoners were captured in the assault on the small port town, only five miles from where the Allied Commando forces first landed in Albania in late September. Sarande was being used by the Germans to ferry supplies to their strong garrison forces on the Isle of Corfu, only 10 miles offshore, and was stubbornly defended against the ground and airborne forces which began the final attack on it on Monday.

British ground forces first penetrated the western edge of the small port after a fierce battle at its outskirts, today's and bri[illegible] north of Venice, on the main German communication lines from northeastern Italy into the Balkans, it was announced here today.

In night attacks directed against the supply lines of the German divisions battling to hold the Allied armies at the southern edge of the Po Plain, RAF medium and heavy bombers struck at the Verona railyards, where large concentrations of military stores were piling up for the front.

The railyards attacked in northeastern Italy were those at Mestre, five miles northeast of Venice, and Treviso, 15 miles northwest of this important Adriatic port. The two bridges which were bombed were located at Susegana, 25 miles north of Venice, and at San Donà del Piave 15 miles northeast.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, although bad weather cut down their operations to less than 200 sorties, made these count heavily in attacks on German guns, defense positions, and supply links northwest and north of Bologna.

Bad weather also curtailed missions of the Balkan Air Force, but attacks were carried out against German barracks at Kriz, 30 miles southwest of Zagreb, Yugoslavia, and against shipping at Senj, on the Dalmatian coast 35 miles southeast of Fiume. (PRO)

R. N. DESTROYER SHELLS ALBANIAN MAINLAND

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — The British destroyer Wilton, supported by British landing craft guns, shelled German troop concentrations and gun positions on the Albanian mainland north of the Island of Corfu on Sunday, it was announced here today.

The naval bombardment was apparently carried out just before the attack on the Albanian Port of Sarande, known during the Fascist occupation of Albania as Porto Edda, was undertaken. (PRO)

GERMAN DESERTERS AID ITALIAN PARTISANS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — Deserters from the German Army aid Italian Patriots behind the German lines, according to a German order captured on the 8th Army front, it was revealed here today.

The order, signed by the commanding officer of the 305th Infantry Division, warned German troops that their lives are threatened by Partisan actions everywhere in the rear areas, and cautioned them never to ride or walk alone in Patriot territory, not even to doze off or sleep.

The German order cited a case which occurred four miles north of Civitella early in the morning of September 3, in which 25 Patriots surrounded a German-held house on the main road to the front. Four of the armed Patriots were wearing German tropical uniforms and helmets, and spoke fluent German when they approached the sentries under the ruse of entering into conversation with them. They overpowered the sentries, but the latter subsequently made good their escape.

The German commander concluded that the incident clearly proved that "German deserters are screening Patriots." (PRO)

CAPTURED DIARY REVEALS NAZI MASSACRE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — A captured German diary revealed today that German officers gave their men leave to kill Italian children in retaliation for Patriot activity.

The diary told how a village was looted and razed in retaliation for death of Nazi troops who were ambushed by Partisan forces in northern Italy.

After the village was destroyed, the German commander is quoted as having said: "Even children may be

SARANDE, IN ALBANIA, CAPTURED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic yesterday captured the southern Albanian port town of Sarande, after a full-scale attack with artillery support, a special communique of the Balkan Air Force declared today.

About 500 enemy prisoners were captured in the assault on the small port town, only five miles from where the Allied Commando forces first landed in Albania in late September. British ground forces first penetrated the western edge of the small port after a fierce battle at its outskirts, today's reports said. As these forces moved into the town against stiff resistance, other forces, supported by an artillery barrage, closed in on the town and the hillsides walling the port. Remaining resistance was quickly overcome, and the British forces reported all fighting done by 1060 hours yesterday.

Some resistance continued in the area of Gjashdie, two miles east of Sarande, but final mopping up was in progress in this inland sector as well, the reports said.

The total count of prisoners taken in the attack on Sarande and its environs has not yet been made, and the figure of 500 is only tentative, reports indicated. British troops took 60 prisoners in the final stage of the assault on Sarande, it was said.

No further developments in Greece, where British forces, aided by Greek Patriots, have freed most of the Peloponnese and taken its main port city of Corinth, were reported today. The Balkan Air Force communique merely stated that "in Greece, patrolling is active." (PRO)

CAPTURED DIARY REVEALS NAZI MASSACRE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — A captured German diary revealed today that German officers gave their men leave to kill Italian children in retaliation for Patriot activity.

The diary told how a village was looted and razed in retaliation for death of Nazi troops who were ambushed by Partisan forces in northern Italy.

After the village was destroyed, the German commander is quoted as having said: "Even children may be killed — as they will grow up to be like their parents."

Of six men seized — in the unnamed locality wiped out by the Germans — two, father and son, were shot in the course of the struggle which ensued when the first search by the enemy troops was undertaken.

One other man, second son of the father killed, was executed later, and all the bodies were put next to the destroyed German trucks, the prisoner's diary stated.

Three Schutz Staffel troopers had been killed and a wireless van destroyed in the Partisan ambush, the prisoner wrote. (PRO)

RYUKYU RAID SANK OR DAMAGED 40 JAP SHIPS

PEARL HARBOR, October 11 — Headquarters of the United States Pacific Fleet released details today on damage done to Japanese shipping in the carrier-based air raid on the Ryukyu Islands on Monday:

Sunk: 1 destroyer; 1 minesweeper; 1 submarine; 2 medium cargo ships; 2 small cargo ships; 5 coastal cargo ships.

Probably sunk: 2 medium cargo ships; 4 small cargo ships; 1 medium oil tanker; 7 coastal cargo ships.

Damaged: 3 medium cargo ships; 6 small cargo ships; 1 destroyer; 2 small oil tankers.

In addition, more than 29 luggers and other small craft were sunk or damaged.

(A Japanese Imperial Headquarters communique today said that the Ryukyu raid was carried out by more than 400 American planes, coming to attack in four large waves over a period of more than eight hours. Radio Tokyo said one of the islands hit was Amami-Shima, northernmost of the Ryukyus, and only a few miles from the Japanese mainland.)

This American strike at the island chain of the Ryukyus is, thus far, the closest naval penetration of Japanese inner defenses. The islands lie across the entrance to the East China Sea, between the southern tip of Japan's mainland island of Kyushu, and Formosa.

The islands were described by the American communique as being of little economic importance to Japan, but as being of great strategic importance to the battle of the Pacific. The Japanese maintain strong defenses on the islands, and have airbases there from which they could attempt to control the waters off the coast of China, northward of Foochow. More than 75 of their aircraft were destroyed on the ground by the attacking American planes, and 14 others were shot down.

News from other areas of the Pacific and Asiatic battle fronts was scanty. The Chinese High Command communique made no mention of the Japanese offensive against the cities of Foochow, in Fukien Province, and Kweilin in Kwangsi.

Japs Advance from Wuchow

Chungking said Japanese troops moving westward from Wuchow, one of the bases from which they launched their attacks on Kwangsi, had made further progress along the West River.

Planes of the 14th USAAF carried out widespread attacks against Japanese positions and communications. They struck at airfields at Amoy and Taochuk, sank a tug boat and four large barges on the Yangtse, and shot down nine Japanese fighter planes and one bomber. Barges and other shipping were strafed and bombed in a USAAF sweep off the coast of French Indo-China.

On the land front in Burma, Allied troops fighting around Tiddim made gains of about 40 yards in the last 24 hours through the densest, most difficult country. They were closing in on the base in the Chin Hills from which the Japanese launched their unsuccessful invasion of India.

Patrol action continued on the Arakan front. Aircraft of the Southeast Asia Command struck at rail and road communications over a wide area of central and northern Burma.

Troops of the British 14th Army, who are cleaning the Japanese out of northern Burma, were commended today by their commander, Lieut. Gen. W. J. Slim. He told them the 14th Army has inflicted the greatest defeat thus far suffered by the Japanese. (OWI)

GARAKAYO ISLET SECURED

PEARL HARBOR, October 11 — American forces have completely secured Garakayo Islet, in the southern Palau Group, north of Peleliu, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced here today.

The islet was secured 24 hours after the initial landings. (OWI)

JAP-INTERNED BRITISH TO CABLE HOME

LONDON, October 11 — British prisoners-of-war and [illegible] until the termination of the war, the Minister of State, Richard Law, told the House of Commons today.

No decision relative to this African state will be made by the United Nations before then, he said. (Reuter)

ITALY TO RECEIVE MORE FOOD AND CLOTHING

WASHINGTON, October 11 — Increased supplies scheduled for civilian relief in liberated Italy include 35,000 bales of salvaged clothing, 49,000 cases of new clothing, 172,200 crates of shoes, 312,800 cases of vitamins and food supplements, and 17,000 cases of medical supplies.

This announcement yesterday by the War Department explained that the increased supplies will be shipped to Italy in Army vessels as space becomes available.

The cargoes, collected by American Relief For Italy, Inc., are in addition to shipments of Army-procured clothing and supplies which previously have been sent to liberated territories.

American Relief For Italy, Inc., is recognized by the President's War Relief Control Board and draws financial assistance from the national war funds.

Its chairman, Myron C. Taylor, has named the Italian committee which will be in charge of warehousing and distributing the goods.

Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley announced here yesterday, according to an American news agency, that food shipments to Italy had been stepped up for September and October. Further increases, particularly in shipments of dried milk, are scheduled for November and December, Crowley said.

Crowley disclosed that 87,000 tons of wheat and flour and 5,000 tons of sugar were scheduled for arrival in Italy during September and October. During October, November, and December, eight million two hundred thousand pounds of dried milk are scheduled for delivery.

The weight of clothing, shoes, and other supplies collected by American Relief for Italy, Inc. was three million pounds, Crowley said.

Crowley was reported to have said also that arrangements were being made for shipping a limited number of gift packages to Italy without export licenses.

Dollar Credits for Italy

President Roosevelt reported yesterday that the United States government will make available to the Italian Government dollars equivalent to the Italian lire issued up to now, and hereafter as pay to U.S. troops. The President also said:

"The dollar proceeds of remittances made by individuals in this country to friends and relatives in Italy are also being made available to the Italian Government, as are the dollar proceeds of any products exported by Italy to this country.

"The dollars made available to Italy will be issued by the Italian Government to pay for essential civilian supplies purchased in this country for use in liberated Italy. The U.S. Army has supplied substantial amounts of certain essential civilian goods such as food, clothing, and medical supplies as a necessary part of military operations in Italy.

"The funds which I am now making available will enable the Italian Government, under control of appropriate Allied authorities, to obtain in this country other essential civilian supplies and to continue to obtain essential supplies after the U.S. Army program ceases.

"This step has been taken after consultation with the British Government, which has also been providing essential civilian supplies to the Italians and will continue to provide its share of an agreed program of such supplies, but under different financial arrangements.

JAP-INTERNED BRITISH TO CABLE HOME

LONDON, October 11 — British prisoners-of-war and civilians interned by the Japanese will be permitted to send cables to their families under terms of an agreement announced in Commons today by Richard Law, Minister of State.

One 10-word cablegram, exclusive of the address and signature, will be allowed each prisoner and internee without charge.

Mr. Law also announced that details are being worked out to enable next-of-kin to send messages to prisoners-of-war and interned civilians. (Reuter)

TESTIMONY IN AZZOLINI TRIAL COMPLETED

ROME, October 11 — Testimony in the case of Vincenzo Azzolini, former director of the Bank of Italy in Rome, was concluded today with the statements of nine witnesses for the defence.

Azzolini faces a possible death penalty if found guilty by the special eight-man court in the Palazzo Corsini of a charge of turning over to the Nazis 117 tons of gold.

The court recessed until tomorrow morning, when Sinibaldo Tino, attorney for the Bank of Italy, will make his closing address in the civil action against Azzolini.

Before the first defence witness took the stand, Public Prosecutor Cristoforo De Villa placed in evidence a letter from Benito Mussolini, which gave to his son, Vittorio Mussolini, 10,073,341 lire of state funds on deposit in two accounts with the Bank of Italy in Rome. In addition, De Villa presented two checks drawn on the accounts by Vittorio Mussolini, and a reply by Azzolini to the letter written by the ex-Italian dictator.

De Villa asserted that the letters and the two checks showed that the accused was hand-in-glove with high Fascist circles.

Benito Mussolini's letter referring to the two accounts said: « ... It is necessary to provide for the liquidation of the two accounts, and therefore I decree that the accounts ... plus accrued interest ... be turned over to Dr. Vittorio Mussolini... »

The Azzolini letter, presented by De Villa to the court, ordered the Central Depository of the Bank of Italy to turn over the funds to Vittorio Mussolini.

The Public Prosecutor also introduced a letter written by a former member of the Italian bar, Adelchi Falconi, who offered to testify to the guilt of the defendant. After a brief recess, the court rejected the offer of Falconi's testimony and also offers of three other prosecution witnesses now in northern Italy.

Defense Witnesses Heard

First defense witness was Francesco Terruzzani, member of the board of directors of the Bank of Italy, who testified that after a meeting of the Board on 29 September 1943, Azzolini told him that the Board had decided it was no longer possible to resist Nazi pressure for the shipment of the gold to Germany. Terruzzani also testified that Azzolini had used every means possible to prevent the transfer to the north of the bank's Rome personnel, a move on which the Nazis and Fascists had insisted.

Azzolini was responsible for the transfer of only a minimum of the Bank's personnel to the north, Terruzzani said, and had refused to fire those who refused to comply with the transfer order. The witness asserted that Azzolini's preoccupation with the personnel question was for the purpose of having an operating banking system ready for the Allied liberation of Rome.

Dr. Mario Pennacchio, and Dr. Giuseppe Nathan, former representatives of the bank in Switzerland, London, and Paris, testified that Azzolini was greatly respected in banking circles in those cities.

Bernardino Nogara, member of a special commission of the Holy See, testified that he had never spoken directly with Azzolini concerning the gold, but had asked through a third party whether the gold could be stored in Vatican vaults for safekeeping. Nogara said the Vatican had no facilities for storing the gold. He also testified that Azzolini was highly respected in international banking circles.

In an attempt to show that Azzolini was unable to prevent the removal of the gold to Germany, Rev. Clemente Bardaui Libanese of the Greek Catholic Church testified that a close friend of Azzolini asked him:

« What could Azzolini have done in view of the fact that the Germans were fully acquainted with the presence of the gold in the Bank of Italy and had taken possession of all the documents pertaining to it? »

Rev. Fr. Libanese added that Azzolini had given him more than 10,000 lire on the eve of the liberation of Rome for the purpose of aiding political victims of the Fascist

GERM[illegible] BARBARISM IN AQUILA PROVINCE

ROME, October 11 — Acts of barbarity and vandalism against churches in the province of Aquila — carried out by the Germans during the winter months of last year, when the battle line south of the Sangro was more or less stable — were disclosed in a special report to the ACC Monuments and Fine Arts Sub-Commission, it was announced here today.

The report is the result of an inquiry carried out by Captain F.H.J. Maxse of the Sub-Commission, and is based on the testimony of reliable witnesses. All the instances of vandalism cited are described as « cases in which there was no military advantage to be gained. »

Describing five incidents, Captain Maxse stated that they were « but a few of the many acts of cruelty perpetrated. »

He stated that in the village of Trone, the parish priest was dragged from his bed at midnight by the Germans and made to witness the burning of the fine Gothic church of Santa Maria del Ponte. This was done by a group of men from the German 1st Parachute Regiment, under the direction of two officers, Lieutenants Schuster and Yonge. Part of the church roof was destroyed and a bonfire made from the organ and the pulpit. The parish priest was forced to watch while the high altar was profaned, the tombs inside the church broken open, and smashed bones of corpses strewn about.

The priest, who, stated Captain Maxse, had not yet recovered from the results of German ill-treatment, said that the Germans also spent much time at pistol-firing practice using the crucifixes for targets.

Similar incendiarism accompanied by irreligious behavior was reported to Captain Maxse at Rocca Pia, where the parish church, the village's only church, was burned by German troops quartered in it on the night of Christmas Eve, 1943. The inhabitants were forced to watch the building burn, and were prevented from saving relics and sacred vessels.

Five miles from Sulmona, following a fruitless search for escaped British prisoners, the Germans used the famous Convent and Chapel of St. Onofrio as a target for artillery practice from the plain. Some 50 shells were fired, stated Captain Maxse, which damaged the chapel roof and destroyed the former monks' cells.

Hermit Arrested

The Convent, well-known as the hermitage of Pietro da Morrone, who later became Pope Celestine V and was canonized as Saint Peter Celestino, was founded by the Saint and contained 13th Century frescoes by Gentile da Sulmona. On 17 October 1943, when the incident described by Captain Maxse took place, the convent was tenanted by a hermit, who at various times had fed and given shelter to British prisoners escaped from a concentration camp in the plain below. When the Germans made their search, they found no prisoners. They took the hermit away, but after they had retired he was able to go back.

At Pescocostanzo, stated the report, the Germans, during their winter occupation of the township, « diverted themselves » with the random destruction of private dwellings and the explosion of mines. This town did not suffer from bombardment of battle, and its ruined buildings can, therefore, be traced directly to the Germans. The church was spared, but the blast from exploding mines did some damage to the roof, which the parish priest, the mayor, and the inhabitants later repaired by sacrificing tiles from their own homes.

Here, too, the Germans destroyed the private library of Professor Gaetano Sabatini, who had devoted a life's work to the collection of historical material. Comprising some 20,000 volumes, many of the library's books were in manuscript form, dating back to the 15th-Century and earlier.

Rev. Fr. Libanese added that Azzolini had given him more than 10,000 lire on the eve of the liberation of Rome for the purpose of aiding political victims of the Fascist Regime, English prisoners of war, and Jewish refugees.

Testimony regarding the building of a wall around a subterranean depository in the bank in an attempt to hide the gold was given by Edoardo Phister, functionary of the Bank of Italy in Rome. In answer to a question by Lorenzo Maroni, president of the court, Phister asserted that the wall had been built in such a manner that it could not be detected as a shield for the vault. He said only eight trusted workmen and three bank officials knew of the existence of the cache.

The question of how many persons were aware that the shielding wall had been built was the subject of a brief but bitter controversy between the defense attorney and the attorney for the bank, which was halted only by a severe admonition by the presiding judge.

Other witnesses testified to Azzolini's attempt to prevent the removal of the gold. One subterfuge that had been tried, it was testified, was securing the opinion of an Italian engineer, who told the Nazis that it would be physically impossible to remove the gold.

At this point, defense attorney Annibale Angelucci arose to insist that Commissioner Cambi, Count Calvi di Bergolo and other witnesses now in northern Italy be given an opportunity to testify. The motion was denied and the court was recessed until 1000 hours tomorrow. (UNN)

Captain Maxse saw all that was left of "this collection — which the professor had intended to bequeath to the Italian nation as an invaluable contribution to the history of the Abruzzi.

"All that remained," said Captain Maxse, "was about two dozen books, and the rest turned into waste paper fit only for salvage." (UNN)

UNDER SECRETARIAT FOR FOOD SET UP

ROME, October 11 — The Council of Ministers, at a meeting this morning, approved a bill for the formation of an Under Secretariat of State for Food, which will come under the jurisdiction of the Minister for Agriculture.

This measure is intended, among other things, to provide a central and regional administration capable of ensuring prompt and efficient distribution of all available produce. (UNN)

WOMEN ACCUSED OF COLLABORATION ARRESTED

NAPLES, October 11 — Mobile squads of the Questura here yesterday arrested the sisters Giuseppina and Beatrice D'Amato, accused of collaborating with the Germans and Republican Fascists.

In September, 1943, when the German raids to seize Italians for labor service were at their height, the two women are said to have disclosed the hiding places of many young Neapolitans, thus causing their arrest and deportation. (UNN)

MATTEO MATTEOTTI PRAISES ITALIAN YOUTH

ROME, October 11 — Speaking over Radio Rome this evening, Matteo Matteotti, son of Giacomo Matteotti, murdered by the Fascists in 1924, warned against attempts to impose too great educational restrictions on Italian youth. He said that, in spite of the evil influences to which they had been subjected under Fascist domination, young Italians of today showed signs of new vigor which gave great promise for the future. STALIN URGES CONTINUED ALLIED COOPERATION

MOSCOW, October 11 — Marshal Joseph Stalin, speaking at the state banquet for Prime Minister Winston Churchill here yesterday, said that continued collaboration of the Allied powers is necessary for maintenance of a peaceful world.

The Soviet Premier twice delivered toasts to the future cooperation of peace-loving nations. He said that the Allies must be prepared for peace, as well as for the maintenance of peace-time forces large enough to thwart aggression and the threat of aggression.

Referring to the recently-concluded Dumbarton Oaks conference in Washington, Marshal Stalin said that it had brought favorable results. He also paid tribute to the contributions toward a United Nations victory made by Britain and the United States.

Mr. Churchill, in his reply, toasted the Red Army and Marshal Stalin. U. S. Ambassador Averell Harriman, also present at the luncheon, recalled that yesterday marked the third anniversary of the signing here of the Lend-Lease agreement with Russia. (OWI - Reuter)

POLISH PREMIER TO JOIN MOSCOW TALKS

LONDON, October 11 — Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who has received an invitation to join the conference between Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, will leave here at the earliest possible moment, it was said today.

He will be accompanied by the President of the Council Stanislaw Grabski, Minister of Foreign Affairs Tadeusz Romer, and several other members of the Polish Government in London.

Premier Mikolajczyk last conferred with Soviet leaders in Moscow on 2 August 1944. He returned here for instructions from his government, and subsequently drew up proposals for an all-party government, which were forwarded to Soviet officials. (OWI)

10 PER CENT OF U. S. FORCES OF ITALIAN DESCENT

NEW YORK October 11 — Ten per cent of the armed forces of the United States are composed of Americans of Italian descent, although Italian-American citizens make up only four per cent of the population, Thomas Dewey, Republican Party Presidential candidate and Governor of New York State, said yesterday in a Columbus Day proclamation.

Dewey said that Italian people have given proof of their stand for freedom and decency against the Germans. (OWI)

U. S. PREPARES TO OBSERVE COLUMBUS DAY

NEW YORK, October 11 — The 452nd anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus will be observed by Americans tomorrow in celebrations throughout the nation.

President Roosevelt will make a Columbus Day radio address to the other American republics. Representatives in Washington of all Latin-American countries, except Argentina, have been invited to attend the broadcast.

Largest of the group celebrations will be the annual observance in New York City, including a parade led by Mayor LaGuardia and speeches by city and state officials. Throughout the country there will be observances under the auspices of patriotic groups, labor organizations, churches, schools, and municipalities.

President Roosevelt's proclamation of the holiday said:

"The discoveries of Christopher Columbus and the long line of explorers who followed him have served to bring the continents and the peoples of the world into an ever-narrowing circle of geographic interest. We, the heirs to the discoveries of Columbus, have come to realize that civilized peoples can live safely and develop fully in such an interrelated world only through association for peace and the common good."

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, said Argentina had not been invited to send a representative to the President's broadcast "because we have no relations with the present Argentine Regime."

Luigi Antonini, President of the Italian-American Labor Council, will report to members on his recent trip to Italy, as that organization holds Columbus Day observances.

George Baldanzi, Executive Vice President of the Textile Workers Union of America, and Secretary of the American Labor Council for a Free Italy, who returned from Italy recently with Antonini, will speak at a Columbus Day dinner in New York. (OWI)

CHINA ANNOUNCES RELIEF PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, October 11 — The Chinese Government today announced a program for relief and rehabilitation in China, calling for the import of 10 million tons of supplies. In addition, internal expenditure estimated at more than 2,000 million dollars is planned.

Of the total import requirements, 37 per cent is requested from UNRRA.

Relief and rehabilitation operations will be conducted primarily in areas now under Japanese occupation, and only to a relatively small extent in Free China. (OWI)

LONDON, October 11 — Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk, who has received an invitation to join the conference between Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin, will leave here at the earliest possible moment, it was said today.

He will be accompanied by the President of the Council, Stanislaw Grabski, Minister of Foreign Affairs Tadeusz Romer, and several other members of the Polish Government in London.

Premier Mikolajczyk last conferred with Soviet leaders in Moscow on 2 August 1944. He returned here for instructions from his government and subsequently drew up proposals for an all-party government, which were forwarded to Soviet officials. (OWI)

EDEN AND MOLOTOV CONTINUE CONFERENCE

MOSCOW, October 11 — British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and Vyacheslav Molotov, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Affairs, continued conferences here today.

They met last night for two hours, and then resumed their talks this morning.

Reuter said it was believed that economic and social rehabilitation of Europe had a top position in their discussions. (OWI-Reuter)

«RED STAR» PRAISES DUMBARTON OAKS PLAN

MOSCOW, October 11 — The Soviet Army newspaper, Red Star, said today that the great democracies — The United States, the Soviet Union, and Great Britain — have shown by the Dumbarton Oaks plan that they are capable of setting up a security organization which would justify its name by deeds, and «not by words.» (OWI)

EGYPTIAN PREMIER PLEDGES AID TO ALLIES

CAIRO, October 11 — Ahmed Maher Pasha, the new Egyptian premier, told a Reuter correspondent today that Egypt will place at the disposal of the Allies all assistance required until the war ends not only in Europe, but in the Pacific. (OWI)

Mayor LaGuardia and speeches by city and state officials. Throughout the country there will be observances under the auspices of patriotic groups, labor organizations, churches, schools, and municipalities.

President Roosevelt's proclamation of the holiday said:

"The discoveries of Christopher Columbus and the long line of explorers who followed him have served to bring the continents and the peoples of the world into an ever-narrowing circle of geographic interest. We, the heirs to the discoveries of Columbus, have come to realize that civilized peoples can live safely and develop fully in such an interrelated world only through association for peace and the common good."

Stephen Early, Presidential secretary, said Argentina had not been invited to send a representative to the President's broadcast "because we have no relations with the present Argentine Régime."

Luigi Antonini, President of the Italian-American Labor Council, will report to members on his recent trip to Italy, as that organization holds Columbus Day observances.

George Baldanzi, Executive Vice President of the Textile Workers Union of America, and Secretary of the American Labor Council for a Free Italy who returned from Italy recently with Antonini, will speak at a Columbus Day dinner in New York. (OWI)

CHINA ANNOUNCES RELIEF PROGRAM

WASHINGTON, October 11 — The Chinese Government today announced a program for relief and rehabilitation in China, calling for the import of 10 million tons of supplies. In addition, internal expenditure estimated at more than 2,000 million dollars is planned.

Of the total import requirements, 37 per cent is requested from UNRRA.

Relief and rehabilitation operations will be conducted primarily in areas now under Japanese occupation, and only to a relatively small extent in Free China. (OWI)

NAZIS FAIL TO BREAK DUTCH RAIL STRIKE

LONDON, October 11 — The German offer to 1,000 striking railway workers in Utrecht 35 miles northwest of Arnhem to double wages and rations if they returned to work brought a response from only four men, Radio Orange said last night.

A New York Times dispatch from Berne Monday said that the general railroad strike in the Netherlands is tying up German troop movements, and that all attempts of the Germans to break the strike have been in vain.

The German mobilization of Hollanders between the ages of 17 and 50 has also failed, according to reports reaching Dutch circles here.

Following the refusal to work by the population of Walcheren, recently flooded after the breaching of the sea wall, the Germans declared martial law.

In an effort to compel the inhabitants to work on fortifications, the Germans surrounded Utrecht.

Seventeen miles north of Arnhem, at Apeldoorn, the Germans called up 4,000 men. Three turned up, two of whom were quislings. (OWI)

DANISH POLICE REFUSE TO COLLABORATE

LONDON, October 11 — Danish police under arrest in Copenhagen have refused to cooperate with the Germans, the Swedish Radio said yesterday. The Germans offered to set free all Danish police who have been deported to Germany if the request for cooperation were accepted, the broadcast said. (PWB)

SWEDEN CANCELS INSURANCE ON REICH IMPORTS

STOCKHOLM, October 11 — A decision of the Swedish War Insurance Board to cancel insurance on certain imports from Germany to Sweden has dealt another blow at German-Swedish trade, the BBC said last night.

The imports involved are the consumer goods by the sale of which Germany built up reserves of foreign currency.

This blow follows Sweden's recent cancellation of insurance on Swedish ships trading with Germany, and her ban of foreign merchant shipping in Swedish southern and eastern territorial waters. These restrictions had already reduced German-Swedish trade by 90 per cent. (OWI)

PORTUGAL WILL NOT HARBOR WAR CRIMINALS

LONDON, October 11 — The Portuguese Government has informed the British Government that it will not, by granting asylum in its territory, permit war criminals to escape the decision of national or international tribunals competent to try them, said Richard Law, Minister of State at the Foreign Office in a statement in Commons today. WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 11 — Today's communique:

The Allied force which landed on the south bank of the Schelde Estuary has improved its position east of Breskens.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked enemy strong points in the area yesterday. Elsewhere air operations were restricted by weather. Heavy fighting continues in the area of the Leopold Canal bridgehead.

North of Antwerp, we cut the main road leading from the mainland to Zuid Beveland. A sharp enemy attack near Dodewaard, on the Waal, was repulsed yesterday morning.

A 24-hour ultimatum to surrender was served on the German forces in Aachen at 1050 hours Tuesday. Earlier, units of the northern arm of our encircling movement captured Schaufenburg and Bardenberg, and advanced to [illegible] Other units moving up from the south and east

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 11 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Bad weather on the front of the Allied armies in Italy limited gains.

In the central sector, British troops of the 5th Army, after several days of heavy fighting, have captured Mount Cece, a height dominating the road running into the Po Valley from Palazzuolo. On their left, American troops of the 5th Army have made progress, despite strong resistance in the high ground west of the Imola Road.

On the 8th Army sector, British and Indian troops have improved their positions in the Monte Farneto area.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Although adverse weather restricted operations yesterday, heavy bombers attacked enemy communications and supply lines in northern Italy.

Light bombers, fighter-bombers, and fighters were also active in north Italy, attacking rail lines, bridges, and close-support targets.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the north Adriatic, while other aircraft carried out offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia, striking at enemy supply lines, shipping, and other military targets.

Last night, our bombers attacked the rail yard at Verona, in northern Italy.

In these operations, three enemy aircraft were destroyed and five of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 800 sorties.

Navy:

It is reported from the south of France that on 8 October the USS Eberle shelled an ammunition dump, enemy-occupied buildings, and a railroad bridge, while supporting the Army near the Franco-Italian frontier. Direct hits were obtained and fires started.

On 8 October H. M. Destroyer Wilton and L.C.G.'s shelled German troop concentrations and gun positions on the mainland of Albania north of Corfu. Very good results were reported. (PRO)

Earlier, units of the northern arm of our encircling movement captured Schaufenburg and Bardenberg, and advanced to Würselen. Other units moving up from the south and east had reached Haaren, and had cut the main Aachen-Cologne Highway.

By noon, the enemy was being mopped up in the northern part of Haaren.

German counter-attacks were repulsed at Crucifix Hill, southeast of Haaren and in the area of Bardenberg.

Hard fighting is in progress southwest of Hurtgen, and our troops made gains.

Patrol activity and sporadic artillery fire are reported along the frontier in the area of Monschau.

House-to-house fighting is in progress in Malzieres Les Metz.

East of Luneville, our troops in the Forêt de Parroy advanced about 1,500 yards. East of Epinal, our positions were improved despite increased enemy artillery fire.

After hard fighting in the Le Thillot sector, our troops established a substantial bridgehead across the Moselotte River. Heavy losses were inflicted on the enemy. Several strongpoints near Le Thillot have been taken against stiff resistance.

The Forest of Longegoutte and Gelon has been largely mopped up.

Progress has been made in the Champagney region, west of Belfort. (Reuter)

Troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front, developing their successful offensive, today captured by storm the capital of Transylvania, the city of Cluj. Simultaneously, troops of this front forced the River Tissa, and captured large economic, political, and administrative centre of Hungary, the city of Szeged.

On Yugoslavian territory, northeast of Nis, our troops, operating jointly with units of People's Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, captured the town and railway station of Knjazevac.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 10, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 145 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 62 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of October 10-11, our long-range Air Force again subjected to bombardment German transports at the ports of Liepaja (Libau) and Riga. As a result of attacks on both ports, large fires were started followed by huge explosions.

At the time of the raid on the German city of Tilsit, our fliers noted a concentration of troops and motor transports at the northeast part of the town by the railway station and crossings of the River Neman. By bombardment of this area, losses were inflicted upon German troops.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 11 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The enemy is being forced to employ increasing numbers of troops and resources to check the activities of Patriots. Though the Nazi-Fascists gain a few partial and temporary successes, the number of forces diverted from the front lines constitutes for them a negative element in a general view of the war.

On the shores of Lake Maggiore, the enemy landed 600 men of the San Marco Battalion, making use of 14 boats and of a steamboat. The landing, which took place on the west bank, was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage from a place near Luino, and by a bombardment from the steamboat to cover landing operations. After inflicting serious losses on the Nazi-Fascists, the Patriots took to the mountains to avoid being cut off by superior forces. The enemy took no prisoners.

The Germans retook a guard post on the Swiss frontier and the Fascists seized hostages from among the civilian population. In another sector, Patriots won a victorious engagement, capturing a detachment of the Fascist Folgore Parachute Division.

In order to prevent the menace of a Patriot descent on Turin, and to oppose the frequent disturbing acts of the Patriots, the Nazi-Fascists despatched about 6,000 soldiers supported by artillery northwest of Turin. Fascist militiamen armed with automatic weapons were commanded by German officers and non-commissioned officers. A violent encounter took place in the Canavesano sector.

After eight days of fighting near Corio and Piano Audi, a Garibaldi Division, after exhausting its supply of ammunition, was compelled to abandon its positions to avoid encirclement. The Nazi-Fascists suffered losses of 250 dead and 350 wounded. While a Garibaldi Division was taking up a new position in Val Grande, the enemy in Pessinetto began the bombardment of Ceres, which is the key to the Grande and Ala Valleys. Elements of the Garibaldi Divisions strenuously defended Ceres and the surrounding mountains, but were finally compelled to yield through lack of munitions.

The Nazi-Fascists later attacked the Viu Valley. Here Patriots succeeded in inflicting heavy losses on the enemy, who was supported by armored forces.

The Garibaldi Divisions, after carrying out their missions, reorganized in the Canavesano sector and in the Lanzo Valley. They resumed their attacks and acts of sabotage against enemy columns.

Patriots of the sector southeast of Parma continued to carry out nuisance activities against German traffic on the Borgo di Taro-Fornovo di Taro railway. The railway is at present unserviceable. Patriots inflicted losses on enemy columns on Highway 62. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 11 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Aix la Chapelle sector, the Americans, despite their high losses suffered during the previous days, stubbornly continued their attempts at encircling the town. Our troops opposed grim resistance to the strong enemy forces. Southeast of the city, in the Roetgen Forest, grim fighting is in progress.

On the other parts of the western front, northeast of Nancy, in the Parroy Forest and on both sides of Remiremont, grim fighting is in progress.

No important changes are reported from the strongpoints and the fortresses on the Channel and Atlantic coast.

In southern Hungary, German and Hungarian troops frustrated enemy attempts at crossing the Theiss.

Mopping-up operations on the western banks of the river south of Szongrad make good progress.

Southwest of Debrecen, a big tank battle developed. In the course of this battle, on October 8 and 9, 162 enemy tanks were destroyed.

West of Grosswardein, 26 out of a force of 50 attacking tanks were destroyed during the frustration of enemy attacks.

On the passes of the Forest Carpathians, the enemy launched only minor and unsuccessful attacks.

North of Warsaw and south of Rozan, the Bolsheviks attacked after a fierce artillery preparation. They were, in general, repulsed, and infiltrations were cleared up or narrowed down in immediate counter-attacks.

North of the Memel and at the Prussian frontiers, as well as at the Memel corner, fresh Soviet attempts at breaking through were frustrated by the determined resistance of our divisions. Tauroggen was evacuated after grim fighting.

Southeast of Libau, in the Riga bridgehead and in the Isthmus of the Sworbe Peninsula, the enemy unsuccessfully attacked our positions. He lost 46 tanks in the course of the fighting.

On the southern front of Finland, Finnish attempts at cutting our retreat, which were being made continually during the last few days, were frustrated.

On the Arctic Front, the Soviets launched fierce attacks to break through our positions in the Petsamo sector. Grim fighting is in progress.

In the Isthmus of the Fisher Peninsula, our mountain troops are engaged in fighting with enemy forces which made a landing.

SURRENDER OF AACHEN DEMANDED CANADIANS CONSOLIDATE GAINS

SHAEF, October 10 — An unconditional-surrender ultimatum was issued to the German garrison commander at Aachen this morning. Destruction of the city by Allied air forces, heavy artillery fire, and ground troops is threatened if the ultimatum will not have been accepted by 1050 hours tomorrow.

Aachen is tactically encircled with an 1,800-yard gap under machine-gun fire from the north and south. The Germans counter-attacked in a futile effort to break the pincers movement, and one slight penetration north of Aachen was thrown back. The city is being bitterly defended tonight by

The Canadian push north of Antwerp toward the narrow neck of causeway to Beveland and Walcheren has been held up by vigorous German shelling. German forces who still hold the escape junction have been reinforced. The spreading flood waters on Walcheren have swamped many of the German defenses of Flushing and have reached the outskirts of Middleburg, the main town on the Island.

On the northwestern tip of the British 2nd Army corridor in Holland, German troops penetrated Allied positions on the southern bank of the Lower Rhine and have established a bridgehead at Driel. German attempts to expand the penetration were frustrated by Allied mortar and artillery fire.

Farther to the west, a German counter-attack at Dodewaard, 10 miles west of Nijmegen on the northern bank of the Waal, was repulsed. Directly north of Dodewaard, British troops are engaged in house-to-house fighting in Opheusden.

On the American 3rd Army sector, troops have eliminated the German bulge in the line between Nancy and Metz by their capture of Letricourt. They have occupied new positions running from Cheminot to Fresnes en Saulnois, to the southeast of Pont a Mousson.

There is no change in the situation within Fort Driant. American artillery heavily shelled Fort Marival, north of Driant, to knock out German batteries firing on troops within Driant. (OWI - Reuter - AP)

LONDON, October 10 — General Dwight Eisenhower and his staff today moved their base headquarters to Paris after completing 125 days of operation here since the Normandy landings, it was reported tonight.

Four planes carried the headquarters staff, crates of maps, and reference books to Paris.

A SHAEF official stated that moving closer to the front will shorten lines of communication and should considerably speed up the relay of official news. (OWI)

Unfavorable Weather Continues

Weather over the 25-mile-wide and six-mile deep front was unfavorable. Close support by fighter-bombers was restricted to a minimum. American troops slowly pushing eastward made a slight advance in the direction of Eschweiler, on the main road to Duren.

The two bridgeheads established yesterday by Canadian and British troops in the German pocket south of the Scheldt have been linked to form one bridgehead two miles deep and three miles wide. It was expanded under mortar and machine-gun fire from Germans in the pocket, and from heavy artillery fire from German positions to the north on Walcheren and Beveland Islands. Rocket-firing Typhoons struck at these island batteries and stopped their shelling for an hour and a half.

The Bridgehead forces are being opposed by light German forces consisting mainly of communications troops but there are many good-class units in the pocket which have not yet been committed. Allied reinforcements of men and material continue to be unloaded in the bridgehead.

The Canadian bridgehead over the Leopold Canal has been firmly consolidated in an area 400 to 600 yards deep. Thirty German counter-attacks have been held to expand the penetration were frustrated by Allied mortar and artillery fire.

Farther to the west, a German counter-attack at Dodewaard, 10 miles west of Nijmegen on the northern bank of the Waal, was repulsed. Directly north of Dodewaard, British troops are engaged in house-to-house fighting in Opheusden.

On the American 3rd Army sector, troops have eliminated the German bulge in the line between Nancy and Metz by their capture of Letricourt. They have occupied new positions running from Cheminot to Fresnes en Saulnois, to the southeast of Pont a Mousson.

There is no change in the situation within Fort Driant. American artillery heavily shelled Fort Marival, north of Driant, to knock out German batteries firing on troops within Driant. (OWI–Reuter–AP)

S.H.A.E.F. MOVES TO PARIS

LONDON, October 10 — General Dwight Eisenhower and his staff today moved their base headquarters to Paris after completing 125 days of operation here since the Normandy landings, it was reported tonight.

Four planes carried the headquarters staff, crates of maps, and reference books to Paris.

A SHAEF official stated that moving closer to the front will shorten lines of communication and should considerably speed up the relay of official news. (OWI)

R.A.F. GAVE BOCHUM "SATURATION ATTACK"

LONDON, October 10 — Bochum, a German industrial and mining center in the heart of the Ruhr, was a smoking ruin today following an R.A.F. "saturation attack" last night, when thousands of fire bombs and high explosives were dropped.

The city, 65 miles northeast of surrounded Aachen, is in the center of a region where one-third of the Reich's coal is mined. It was last bombed on 29 September 1943, and, according to the Associated Press, the Germans had spent

U. S. TO EXCHANGE "OCCUPATION LIRE"

WASHINGTON, October 10 — President Roosevelt announced tonight that the United States Government is making available to the Italian Government, credits equal to the amount of lire issued to pay American troops in Italy.

The credits will be dollar credits equivalent to the total value of issued lire, and will be used for purchasing essential civilian supplies in the United States.

Mr. Roosevelt said the exchange credit arrangement with Italy differs from the procedure to be adopted in redeeming local currency issued to troops in "friendly western European countries" because of special terms in connection with the final Italian peace settlement. (OWI)

WHEAT EXPORT MARKET TO BE DIVIDED

KANSAS CITY October 10 — The four great wheat producing nations have agreed to divide the wheat export market after the war, Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard declared today. The United States will allocate approximately 72 million bushels yearly for export trade.

Canada, Australia, and Argentina have agreed to the program. The allocation can be changed by mutual agreement, the announcement said, adding that a price agreement will be reached. (Reuter) the intervening year putting its industries in working order again.

Wilhelmshafen also was hit in the night's operations. Seven British planes failed to return.

Weather over the battlefields was reported so unfavorable yesterday that even fighter-bombers' close support was restricted to a minimum — and the outlook today was not much brighter.

Evidence of diminishing Luftwaffe resistance to Allied air raids on the Reich was shown by the fact that of the 2,000 planes of the 8th and 9th USAAF which attacked Coblenz, Schweinfurt, and Mainz yesterday, only five bombers and three fighters are missing. This is believed to be a record low in losses for an attacking force of this size.

Allied air attacks have also completely disorganized German transport throughout the Ruhr and the Rhineland, according to British economic intelligence experts.

Photographic evidence shows heavy damage at Karlsruhe, Darmstadt, Frankfort, Cologne, Soest, Schwerte, Hamm, Münster, München-Gladbach, Rheydt, Bochum, and other places, despite desperate German efforts to repair the damage.

To the actual damage to railway installations may be added the destruction of military stores in the areas under attack, and the evacuation of essential equipment.

The British economic reports conclude that Allied air attacks on transport facilities of all kinds, as well as the pressure of evacuation movements, must have completely disrupted railways throughout western Germany and must have had direct repercussions on traffic working over a much wider area.

Flying bombs were sent over London and southern England for the fifth consecutive night. At least 16 persons were killed, and widespread damage was caused.

ALLIES CAPTURE 563,928 PRISONERS

SHAEF, October 10 — The six Allied armies in western Europe have captured at least 563,928 prisoners since the Normandy landings, it was officially disclosed there today. The figures are:

American 1st Army — 192,016; American 3rd Army — 92,800; American 7th Army — 90,080; American 9th Army — 19,312; British 2nd Army — 78,681.

The Canadian 1st Army and the French Forces of the Interior captured the balance of the total. (OWI)

ATTACK ON NORWEGIAN COAST SHIPPING ORDERED

LONDON, October 10 — All shipping off the Norwegian Coast is to be attacked, General Eisenhower announced today, in view of the importance of sea communication between Norway and Germany.

General Eisenhower's announcement that all shipping off the Norwegian coast would be attacked henceforward cited two reasons for the decision: that the U-boats driven from the Bay of Biscay by the Allies are now using Norwegian ports, and that the Germans are now returning from Norway to Germany every man who can be spared, in every available craft. hamlet of Barbarolo. Both of these positions had been reported cleared of the enemy on Sunday.

Taking advantage of the observation permitted by momentary clearing of the weather, 5th Army heavy artillery has begun the systematic shelling of the Emilia Highway, the main traffic link along the Southern edge of the Po Valley between Rimini, Bologna and industrial Milan to the northwest. At one point, 5th Army troops are within 10 miles of this highway, and nowhere along the 25-mile stretch of the road southeast of Bologna to Castel Bolognese are forward elements more than 15 miles distant.

The northernmost position reported captured in the American advance yesterday, the village of La Valle, is 12 miles from Bologna. Although official reports yesterday spoke of a two-mile advance north of Monte Castellazi, which would have placed forward American elements near Livernagno, this village was not mentioned in today's information.

On the right flank of the 5th Army advance, British troops made slight gains in their five-day-old battle to seize Monte Cece, overlooking the Sintria River Valley 14 miles southwest of Castel Bolognese. In renewed attacks yesterday, British forces achieved most of their initial objectives, although enemy counter-attacks continued.

On the Adriatic sector, British troops made local gains of up to a half-mile in their battle toward Longiano, a strongly-held German village at the hill fringe of the Po Valley west of the upper Fiumicino River.

Along the lower Fiumicino, now flowing at flood pace, action was restricted to patrolling. Only one 8th Army patrol made its way across the swollen stream. It returned safely. No enemy patrols were reported out.

Eighth Army troops now hold a six-mile long front west of the upper Fiumicino River, and stretching from a mile and a half south of the Emilia Highway southwest to Monte Formeto. For most of this stretch, the forward positions run along a low ridge lying between the Savio and the Fiumicino Rivers. (PRO)

BRITISH ENTER CORINTH WITHOUT OPPOSITION

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 10 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic entered Corinth yesterday without opposition, it was announced here today in a special communique by the Balkan Air Force.

The British troops encountered no German forces in their entry into the large port city at the extreme northeastern end of the Peloponnesian Peninsula, it was said. The only enemy troops in the vicinity were approximately 250 members of the Greek puppet government's German-sponsored «security battalions.» These troops surrendered without firing a shot.

No details of the advance that brought the Commando troops to the chief city of the Peloponnese were given, but it seemed likely that they had pushed along the coast road skirting the Gulf of Corinth from Rion, which was reported captured on October 5, to reach the port. The Germans were reported to have demolished bridges along this road before their evacuation.

The special announcement today declared the port of Sarande in Albania, five miles from where British troops originally landed in Albania in late September, is now under intensive attack.

Parachute forces, Partisans, and two formations of ground forces were converging on the tiny port across the channel from Corfu Island at the southern end of Albania, with leading elements already at the western outskirts of the town. The parachutists, of company strength, were landed to silence one of the enemy batteries defending the approaches to the port, used by the Germans to supply their garrison on Corfu.

More than 100 prisoners were reported taken in the

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS ON MUDDY ITALIAN FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 10 — With heavy, intermittent rains bogging down the Italian front, local improvements in forward positions were the only gains reported by either the 5th or 8th Armies yesterday.

American troops of the 5th Army reported the capture of the upland villages of Anconella, two miles north of Loiano, and La Valle, three miles north of this small town on the Florence-Bologna Road.

Today's reports also mentioned the capture yesterday of the 2,100-foothigh Monte Castellazi and the companion height across the Bologna Road topped by the mountain

More than 100 prisoners were reported taken in the attack, and a Siebel ferry, a fast freight and troop-carrying craft used by the Germans on coastal supply routes were taken intact.

In a successful action inland in Albania, 80 Germans were killed, a tank damaged, and three trucks destroyed when a British patrol guarding a road block surprised two German companies trying to escape northward. The Allied force suffered no casualties, the report said, although the trapped Germans put in two heavy ground attacks.

Partisan forces were reported actively to be supporting the British drive in attacks near Delvine, a larger town northwest of Sarande and at the upper end of the Bistrica River Valley.

Other Balkan Air Force reports were that Spitfire and Hurricane fighters were giving close support to the British forces in Albania, bombing and strafing enemy gun positions.

A victory parade, celebrating the liberation of Patras and most of the Peloponnese, was held at that northern port on Saturday. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. WELLINGTONS HIT ATHENS AIRFIELDS

Tactical Air Force planes scored hits on roads leading northward across the Po Valley from Bologna, and struck a bridge southwest of Modena during the course of attacks supporting the 5th Army.

Balkan Air Force planes, besides carrying out close-support operations in Albania, attacked harbor installations at Zara, Yugoslavia, and German garrison buildings in Preko, on the island of Ulljah. A 500-ton ship was hit in the Zara harbor. (PRO)

WILSON ADDRESSES GREEK PEOPLE

AFHQ, ITALY, October 10 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of Allied Forces in the Mediterranean Theater, today sent the following message to the Greek people:

«Under the pressure of the combined Allied attack on the west, south, and east of what was Hitler's 'Fortress of Europe,' the enemy finds himself compelled to loosen his hold on Greece. Everywhere his retreat is being harassed, night and day, by the joint forces of heroic Greeks and picked British raiding troops.

«From the sky and on the sea, our aircraft and our ships are leaving him no rest. Greece, which suffered so much during the years of occupation but never ceased to fight, now, armed and aided by her friends, is shaking off the enemy without the destruction and misery of a long campaign on Greek soil. The gallant contribution of Greek Resistance to the cause of Greece and her Allies will never be forgotten.

«A last united effort is needed from the whole nation. Leaders of all parties have joined in one national movement whose aim is the final liberation and restoration of Greece. Your military leaders have pledged their faith to the Allied Command in the final fight against the common enemy. At this historic moment, Greece and Britain are, as ever, side by side.

«To those who have been liberated, greetings and congratulations. We rejoice with you to see Greek soil freed from the oppressor. Rally behind your national government, obey and aid its official representatives. Help us to help you, by advising and aiding the British military representatives. Work with them for the full restoration of Greece.

«To those who have not yet been liberated, wait patiently for the moment of your liberation. Do not, by unconsidered action, give the enemy an excuse to strike a blow at you. Obey the instructions of your Government and your Allies, as and when they are given to you. Welcome and help our troops as they reach you. Let us work together for the restoration of Greek freedom and prosperity.

15,000 ITALIANS JOIN BRITISH FORCES

NEW YORK, October 10 — Hundreds of anti-Nazi Italian soldiers who have been hiding in the mountains of Greece, fighting with Greek Patriots since Italy's surrender, have been pouring into British camps following the landing in the Peloponnese Islands, an International News Service dispatch said yesterday.

Between 15,000 and 20,000 of the Italians escaped capture by the Germans, and either turned over their weapons to Patriot forces or joined the Greeks in fighting, the dispatch said. (OWI)

GERMAN DESPOILING OF GREECE DESCRIBED

NEW YORK, October 10 — Greece today is a country of old people, looted and burned villages, impoverished soil, and a wrecked economy, an American correspondent said today in a dispatch from Patras, Greece. The dispatch added:

The Swiss agency quoted the quisling press as reporting discovery of an important anti-Fascist organization in Turin by a new puppet-Fascist «Black Brigade.» The anti-Fascists were said to have been surrounded in one district, where they barricaded themselves in houses and defended themselves vigorously. Both sides suffered losses, and mass arrests were made, it was said. (OWI)

RED ARMY REACHES BALTIC FIGHTS IN SUBURBS OF DEBRECEN

MOSCOW, October 10 — Red Army troops in Lithuania have emerged on the Baltic coast south of Libau, cutting the line of retreat to East Prussia of 150,000 Germans in Latvia and Lithuania.

Tonight's Soviet communique also reported that Soviet forces were fighting in the suburbs of Debrecen, important rail junction in east-central Hungary, and told of advances elsewhere in Hungary and Lithuania, and in Transylvania and Yugoslavia.

The surge to the Baltic was accompanied by offensive action all along the Lithuanian line and more than 350 inhabited localities were liberated, as well as several rail centers.

Soviet long-range air units carried out heavy attacks on the ports of Libau and Riga, reporting heavy damage to German shipping and harbor facilities.

Front dispatches said that thus far in the new Soviet push in Lithuania, five German divisions, totaling 50,000 men, have been routed, and huge stores of German equipment wrecked. The concentrated artillery bombardment which preceded the attack was so effective that on one 10 mile sector only two German guns continued to fire.

The communique supplement said the advances were achieved after Soviet tanks and infantry smashed a German defense line southeast of the Lithuanian town of Shavli. The line consisted of several tiers of trenches with ferro-concrete pillboxes, anti-tank ditches, minefields, and barbed-wire entanglements.

West of Kovno, on the southern sector of the Lithuanian front, the Red Army advance continued, with a number of populated places having been captured near the East Prussian border.

In Northern Transylvania, Red Army and Rumanian troops fought their way into more than 50 inhabited localities in mopping-up operations and occupied a town three miles south of Cluj. Cluj is about 85 miles southeast of Debrecen. The communique gave no news of the Red Army troops reported in dispatches yesterday to be in Szolnok, midway between Debrecen and Budapest and about 55 miles from the capital.

South and southeast of the Bozarov region of Yugoslavia, the Red Army and units of the Yugoslav National Army of Liberation took the rail junction of Velika-Plana, cutting the railroad and highway between Nis and Belgrade.

The communique reported 3,300 Germans captured during Sunday and yesterday, while 186 tanks were destroyed and 78 planes shot down yesterday. Eighteen German craft, including a tanker and three transports, were reported destroyed by the Red Banner Baltic Fleet Air Arm in the Gulf of Riga in the three days ending October 8.

NEW YORK, October 10 — Greece today is a country of old people, looted and burned villages, impoverished soil, and a wrecked economy, an American correspondent said today in a dispatch from Patras, Greece. The dispatch added:

"The death rate among Greek children has been appalling. Children still surviving are tragic, emaciated little waifs with matchstick legs, scrawny arms, and patchwork clothes. They lived mostly on grapes, tomatoes, and berries during the German occupation, and their teeth are black from lack of calcium, while the rate of tuberculosis and malaria has been extremely high.

"The tragedy of the death of the good earth is almost as heartbreaking. U.S.N. AIRCRAFT STRIKE OFF JAP MAINLAND

PEARL HARBOR, October 10 — American carrier-based aircraft, striking within patrol range of the Japanese mainland, yesterday sank 12 Nipponese ships, probably sank 14 others, and damaged another 12.

The attack, described as heavy by a United States Navy communique tonight, was carried out in waters surrounding the Ryukyu Islands, which lie across the entrance to the East China Sea between Formosa and the Japanese mainland island of Kyushu.

The attack was a complete surprise to the Japanese, whose defense installations were severely bombed and strafed. More than 75 Japanese aircraft were destroyed on the ground, and 14 others were shot down.

The communique said American surface craft suffered no damage, and that American carrier plane losses were light. The forces which carried out the attack were part of Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet.

In the Palaus, eastward of the Philippines, American forces made another landing on Sunday, establishing a beachhead on the small island of Garakayo, about two miles north of the already invested island of Peleliu. This new invasion was said tonight to be moving inland against relatively light resistance.

Far to the south, General Douglas MacArthur's air arm destroyed 18 barges loaded with Japanese troops attempting to reinforce the small pocket of resistance still holding out on the American-controlled island of Morotai, in the Moluccas.

Other aircraft of the Southwest Pacific command dropped 66 tons of explosives on the southern coast of Timor Island, half-Portugese, half-Dutch land mass lying about 300 miles north of the Australian coast. The target was the harbor of Koepang. (OWI)

RADIO TOKYO ON U. S. OFFENSIVES

WASHINGTON, October 10 — « The enemy has dared to plunge into our basic sea area, » Radio Tokyo said in a weekly summary of the war situation. But Japan has « absolute air and naval supremacy » in this area, the broadcast asserted, because she can use land-based airplanes and shorter supply lines than the United States has.

Another Radio Tokyo broadcast warned the Japanese people that, while their attention was centered on Admiral Nimitz's offensive from the central Pacific and on General MacArthur's offensive from the southwest Pacific, « great heed » should also be paid to « the enemy's northern offensive route » from the Aleutians as « northern Japan would be within flying range of the B-29's. » (OWI)

CHIANG SEES VICTORY IN 1945

CHUNGKING, October 10 — Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, speaking today on the anniversary of China's independence, said that victory over the Japanese might be expected next year.

The Generalissimo said fighting would be fierce along the seacoast and along China's railway lines, but that the Chinese nation was fully prepared to meet developments.

Chiang said there were 5,000,000 of his troops in the field, and that 80 per cent of Chinese territory rests in Chinese hands, despite deep infiltrations of Japanese offensives.

The chief Japanese offensives were still pressing on the Kwangsi Province city of Kweilin tonight, and on the Fukien Province harbor of Foochow. No major changes were reported around either city.

Meanwhile, American aircraft of the 14th USAAF continued bombing and strafing of Japanese airfields and river shipping over wide areas of China. General Josep Stilwell's headquarters said today that one large steamer was sunk on Saturday in the Yangtse, and that another was damaged.

Other aircraft of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing attacked enemy convoys and tank concentrations. Two Japanese bombers were shot down, and two others were damaged.

ITALIAN GOLD IN BERLIN, WITNESS SAYS

ROME, October 10 — Berlin is now the repository of gold given the Germans from the vaults of the Bank of Italy in Rome, it was revealed today by Professor Nicola Introna, director of the bank, during his testimony on the second day of the trial of Vincenzo Azzolini, former director of the bank, before a special eight-man court in the Palazzo Corsini.

It found guilty of the charge of turning over the gold to the Germans and collaborating with the Italian puppet « Fascist Republicans, » Azzolini faces a possible death penalty.

Aside from disclosing the present location of the gold, the trial largely dissolved the picture which Azzolini painted of himself yesterday. That picture was of a man who used great persuasive powers and deep patriotism in an attempt to stall and dissuade the Germans from taking the gold.

Today's picture, painted in even deeper colors by others, was that of a man who readily handed over the gold to the Germans; who made bank employees wear Fascist uniforms when Hitler visited Rome, who refused to listen to plans to transport and hide the gold in Sardinia; who ordered two bank employees accused of anti-Fascist activity dispossessed from their homes on bank property; and who passed out money to persons who helped him move the gold to the north, where the Germans took it over.

Professor Introna reported that 50½ tons of the 117 tons taken from the bank's vaults in Rome were moved to Germany on 25 February 1944, from Fortezza. This shipment, the first, was worth 141 million reichmarks, he added.

RADIO TOKYO ON U. S. OFFENSIVES

WASHINGTON, October 10 — «The enemy has dared to plunge into our basic sea area,» Radio Tokyo said in a weekly summary of the war situation. But Japan has «absolute air and naval supremacy» in this area, the broadcast asserted, because she can use land-based airplanes and shorter supply lines than the United States has.

Another Radio Tokyo broadcast warned the Japanese people that while their attention was centered on Admiral Nimitz's offensive from the central Pacific and on General MacArthur's offensive from the southwest Pacific, «great heed» should also be paid to «the enemy's northern offensive route» from the Aleutians as «northern Japan would be within flying range of the B-29's.» (OWI)

CHUNGKING, October 10 — Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, speaking today on the anniversary of China's independence, said that victory over the Japanese might be expected next year.

The Generalissimo said fighting would be fierce along the seacoast and along China's railway lines, but that the Chinese nation was fully prepared to meet developments.

Chiang said there were 5,000,000 of his troops in the field, and that 60 per cent of Chinese territory rests in Chinese hands, despite deep infiltrations of Japanese offensives.

The chief Japanese offensives were still pressing on the Kwangsi Province city of Kweilin tonight, and on the Fukien Province harbor of Foochow. No major changes were reported around either city.

Meanwhile, American aircraft of the 14th USAAF continued bombing and strafing of Japanese airfields and river shipping over wide areas of China. General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters said today that one large steamer was sunk on Saturday in the Yangtse, and that another was damaged.

Other aircraft of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing attacked enemy convoys and tank concentrations. Two Japanese bombers were shot down, and two others were damaged.

On the Burma front, British troops were said today to be within 400 yards of the Japanese base at Tiddim, in the Chin Hills. Aircraft of the Southeast Asia Command attacked rail and road communications, and bombed Japanese-held bridges over a wide area of the northern Burma and Arakan fronts. (PWB)

U. K., U. S. WARN NAZIS ON ATROCITIES

WASHINGTON, October 10 — The British Foreign Office and the United States Department of State today issued simultaneous warnings to the Nazis against carrying through contemplated mass murder in concentration camps.

The State Department statement said:

«The United States Government has been informed by the Polish Government that it had received reliable information that German officials in Poland are making plans for the extermination of tens of thousands of innocent persons of Polish and other United Nations nationalities, as well as Jewish deportees from areas under German control, who are now held in concentration camps, particularly those at Brzezinki and Oswiecim.

«The United States Government takes this occasion to warn again the German Government and Nazi officials that, if these plans are carried out, those guilty of such murderous acts will be brought to justice and will pay the penalty for their heinous crimes.»

RIO DE JANEIRO, October 10 — The Brazilian Navy will soon take over complete patrol duties in the entire Southern Atlantic, releasing units of the United States Navy for Pacific duty, it was announced here today.

LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN GOLD IN BERLIN, WITNESS SAYS

ROME, October 10 — Berlin is now the repository of gold given the Germans from the vaults of the Bank of Italy in Rome, it was revealed today by Professor Nicola Introna, director of the bank, during his testimony on the second day of the trial of Vincenzo Azzolini, former director of the bank, before a special eight-man court in the Palazzo Corsini.

It found guilty of the charge of turning over the gold to the Germans and collaborating with the Italian puppet «Fascist Republicans,» Azzolini faces a possible death penalty.

Aside from disclosing the present location of the gold, the trial largely dissolved the picture which Azzolini painted of himself yesterday. That picture was of a man who used great persuasive powers and deep patriotism in an attempt to stall and dissuade the Germans from taking the gold.

Today's picture, painted in even deeper colors by others, was that of a man who readily handed over the gold to the Germans; who made bank employees wear Fascist uniforms when Hitler visited Rome; who refused to listen to plans to transport and hide the gold in Sardinia; who ordered two bank employees accused of anti-Fascist activity dispossessed from their homes on bank property; and who passed out money to persons who helped him move the gold to the north, where the Germans took it over.

Professor Introna reported that 50½ tons of the 117 tons taken from the bank's vaults in Rome were moved to Germany on 25 February 1944, from Fortezza. This shipment, the first of two, was worth 141 million reichmarks, he added.

The second shipment, he said, was made from Fortezza in June, 1944. Thus, all of the gold taken from the bank's vaults, except the 24 tons which reached Switzerland, is now in Germany.

Azzolini's Testimony Contradicted

Sharply contradicting the testimony Azzolini had given yesterday that no matter what precautions had been taken, the Germans would have found the gold, Professor Introna said this was not true. He cited as evidence the building of a wall in the bank's subterranean vaults.

He described in detail the walling up of the secret subterranean vault, where the gold was hidden under the bank's building on Via Nazionale, Rome. Trusted workmen, he added, completed the job before 0600 hours 20 September 1943.

«It was a perfect job,» Professor Introna reported. «Even the workmen who performed the task could not tell the place where they had worked from the rest of the wall.»

Later, this was confirmed by another witness, Dr. Ugo Zinnini, the bank's office manager, who said that two hours after the wall was completed, it was impossible to distinguish the new from the old.

Professor Introna also flatly contradicted Azzolini's insistence that the two false letters prepared by bank officials to fool the Germans into believing the gold had been moved to southern Italy were risky business.

"The false letters were foolproof," Professor Introna told the court, pointing out that copies had been spread throughout the files to make it appear that the letters were written in the ordinary course of the bank's business.

Carlo Platter, private secretary to Professor Introna, testified that he had provided excellent copies of the letters and had put them in their proper places throughout the bank's files.

Azzolini's protestations of innocence received a strong blow from Professor Introna's testimony. About nine hours after the gold had been walled, he said, Azzolini returned from a visit to the Ministry of Finance and ordered the wall broken down and the gold prepared for shipment to the north and Germany. The witness quoted Azzolini as saying that Finance Minister Cambi had decided it was no use trying to fool the Germans, adding that the Germans wanted five tons of gold each day until the gold had been emptied from the vault. The cleaning-out process took place during the next five days.

Payment to Mussolini

At this point, Sinibaldo Tino, who represents the bank in the case in a civil action, interjected a question aimed at Azzolini about the bank's payment of 10,550,000 lire to Vittorio Mussolini on 9 October 1943, at the Palazzo Venezia. Azzolini said the bank's records would speak for themselves on that point.

Azzolini's word was again questioned in the testimony of Giovanni Acanfora, former bank officer and former Minister of Currency and Exchange, who denied discussing with Azzolini the amount of gold the bank held, and whether the Germans knew where the gold was hidden. Azzolini rose from the prisoner's box to repeat what he had previously said on both subjects.

Gastone Paretti, a bank accountant, threw some light on Azzolini's political leanings when he recalled that Azzolini ordered all the bank's employees to dress up in Fascist uniforms for Hitler's visit to Rome. In yesterday's testimony, Azzolini said he belonged to that school of thought which believed in Fascism only as a means toward a job, rather than as an end.

The witness told also of Azzolini's action when the Nazi-Fascist court convicted two of the bank's employees for distributing anti-Fascist propaganda in the form of speeches by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill. Azzolini, the witness said, ordered the bank's attorney to dispossess the two men and their families from homes on bank property. Azzolini's explanation for this move was that he "had to defend the bank from accusations by the Fascists that it was a hive of anti-Fascist activity."

Still another blow to Azzolini's protestations of innocence came from Captain Renato Montezemolo, who told the court that his brother, Colonel Giuseppe Montezemolo, had told him of plans presented to Azzolini for the transfer of the gold to Sardinia, but Azzolini had ignored the suggestion. This was confirmed by another witness, General Guido Arisio.

Still another witness who damaged Azzolini's position was Rocco Quattrone, chief inspector of the Bank of Italy, who said that after the gold had been moved, following hasty and insistent orders from Azzolini, the latter had sent him an envelope with 9,000 lire. Quattrone returned the money to the bank after the Allies liberated Rome. He quoted himself as saying to the bank's secretary, Gaetano Giacomelli:

"I cannot accept a reward from a nation in defeat."

Azzolini will begin his defense tomorrow morning. (UNN)

FASCIST COLLABORATORS DISMISSED

ROME, October 10 — By order of the Deputy High Commissioner for Sanctions Against Fascism, 114 Public Security officers, noncommissioned officers, and agents have been removed from their posts for commanding or taking part in firing squads during the German occupation.

Santorre Vezzari, Rodolfo Stoeckeber, and Emilio Basili were arrested today for collaborating with the Germans. (UNN)

TARASOV PRAISES ITALIAN WORKERS' UNITY

NAPLES, October 10 — The Soviet Trade Union delegation yesterday visited the headquarters of the Federation of Socialist and Communist Parties. They were accompanied by Giuseppe di Vittorio and Oreste Lizzardi, two of the general secretaries of the Italian General Confederation of Labor.

Michael Tarasov, delegation head, stated that Fascism had employed its forces to destroy the supporters of the anti-Fascist cause, but that the result of their efforts was the contrary to that expected.

He expressed his satisfaction with the degree of unity attained by Italian workers in spite of their diverse political beliefs — unity being an indispensable condition for the solution of their problems, he added.

It was reported today that the Soviet delegation had arrived in Foggia. (UNN)

REQUIEM MASS FOR WARSAW DEAD

ROME, October 10 — A requiem mass for the 200,000 soldiers and civilians who died in the defense of Warsaw was said here today in the Church of San Stanislao, Via delle Botteghe Oscure.

Among those present were the representatives of the Vatican of Poland, the Netherlands, and Brazil, the Polish Commander in Rome, the British Liaison Officer, and many Polish and Yugoslav soldiers. (UNN)

ROME PREFECT PRAISES GRAIN DELIVERIES

ROME, October 10 — Rome Prefect Giovanni Persico, announcing today that by October 15 grain deliveries in Rome province would total 150,000 quintals, said the people of this area, so sorely tried by war, had once more given proof of their patriotism and national solidarity.

The prefect recently completed a tour of the Granai del Popolo in Rome Province.

The High Commissioner for Sardinia, General Pinna, today reminded a gathering of officials at Sassari that persons guilty of illegally hoarding grain could still avoid the extreme penalty by voluntarily contributing to the People's Granaries all wheat and barley in their possession. For those who persisted, he added, the penalties would be much severer than before. (UNN)

SPELLMAN SAYS MASS FOR ALFRED E. SMITH

ROME, October 10 — Monsignor Francis Spellman, Roman Catholic Primate of New York and Vicar General of the U. S. armed forces, this morning said a Pontifical Requiem Mass here for Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State, who died last Wednesday after a brief illness.

PRESS COMMENTS ON AZZOLINI TRIAL

ROME, October 10 — Referring to the trial of Vincenzo Azzolini, the newspaper Unità stated that the Roman people have realized that justice is in progress, and have consequently refrained from staging any demonstration which might impede its course. The judges alone will be responsible for their decision before the nation, whose enemies they are called upon to punish according to the laws, and whose future they are duty-bound to protect against the recurrence of crimes which have dragged it down to ruin.

Il Tempo today said that the High Court wants to find out the truth, whatever it may be. The public must follow the trial with faith in the judgement of the Supreme Magistrature set up for the punishment of Fascist crimes, composed of four expert and unimpeachable magistrates, and by five popular members who are the expression of the forces which have fought and suffered for the liberation of Italy, the newspaper added. FIRST TALKS AT MOSCOW LENGTHY

MOSCOW, October 10 — The talks here among Premier Stalin, Prime Minister Churchill, Foreign Commissar Molotov, and Foreign Secretary Eden appear to have settled down to a normal routine with meetings during the evenings and late at night, and staff work during the day, a Reuter dispatch said late today.

Marshal Stalin was host today at a luncheon lasting more than five hours. The dispatch said Churchill and Stalin were in high spirits at the luncheon and that the Prime Minister «was at the top of his form.»

Guests included Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, heads of the British and United States military missions to Moscow; the ambassadors of the two countries, Molotov, Admiral Kuznetsov, and Vice Comenssar for Foreign Affairs Vyshinsky.

The meeting between British Foreign Secretary Eden and Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov last night lasted for three hours and forty minutes, according to Reuter. Stalin and Churchill met later for three hours—until 0400 hours.

The Prime Minister paid a glowing tribute to the Red Army in a brief statement on his arrival here at the airport, TASS reported. He said:

«This is the second time I have landed on this airfield during the progress of this fearful and bloody war. More than two years have passed since I was last here. But they have been two years of unbroken victory. From our different quarters of this globe, we have all marched steadfastly forward against the common foe, who destroyed the treasure and peace of mankind, and who has stained every step with cruel deeds and horrible atrocities, and upon whom the combined vengeance of the United Nations is now closing. During this famous period of victory, attained with so much sacrifice and devotion, the Armies of the Soviet Union have struck enormous blows.

«They were the first to break the spirit and the structure of the German Army. We, too, for our part — the United States and the British Commonwealth of Nations — have exerted ourselves to the utmost. It shall be for you to say whether we have struck heavy blows or not.

«I have come here on the tide of hope, on the tide of assurance that victory will be won, and with the hope that when it is won, we shall endeavor to make the world a better place for the great mass of human beings to live in.»

In Washington, a State Department spokesman announced that at present the United States is not participating in the Moscow conversations. He added, however, that the U. S. Ambassador to Moscow, Averill Harriman, will be available for consultation.

Izvestia Hails Dumbarton Oaks

Meanwhile, Izvestia, organ of the Praesidium of the Supreme Council of the U.S.S.R., published an editorial hailing the progress made at Dumbarton Oaks toward international security.

The newspaper said the text of the proposals, published by the Soviet press, demonstrated that «an accord of views was attained by the leading powers of the anti-Hitlerite coalition.»

Explaining the position taken by the Soviet delegation at Dumbarton Oaks, Izvestia said that the Security Council «will be unable to fulfill the task assigned to it» unless it operates under a system by which it «can adopt no measures without the agreement of its permanent members.» The newspaper said that an important lesson was to be drawn from the failure of the League of Nations. It added:

«This lesson tells us that, without a stable agreement and collective action of the leading peace-loving powers, the safeguarding of peace and the prevention of aggression — and especially the crushing of aggression — are nothing but an illusion capable of bringing harm to peace-loving people, lulling them into complacency...» (OWI-Reuter)

CHINA SHOULD BE DOMINATING PACIFIC POWER

CHICAGO, October 10 — Donald Nelson, former chairman of the War Production Board, declared here today that it was to the advantage of the entire world to see China replace Japan as the dominating industrial power in the Pacific.

Speaking before the United China Relief Association, Nelson said:

«The situation in China is serious, but not hopeless, and it is a situation which must gravely concern not only the Chinese. Every day of continued impoverishment and suffering for China means a delay in establishing a healthy world economy.» (OWI)

FRANCE MAY JOIN ADVISORY COMMISSION

FRENCH SET UP PURGE COMMISSION

PARIS, October 10 — The French Foreign Office has set up a committee to rid the Government of any Vichyites, the British United Press reported today. The committee will be headed by Paul Emile Naggiar, Ambassador to the Soviet Union in 1939.

Proposals will be submitted to George Bidault, the Foreign Minister, for the placing of Vichy officials of the Interior and Foreign departments on the retired list, or to suspend or discharge them.

Radio Paris announced the arrest of five more prominent French collaborators, including Commandant Gaudillere, who is charged by Air Minister Charles Tillon of declaring in the Ministry: «I am the Marshal's servant, and shall remain so.»

The other arrests include General Colson, Vichy Under Secretary for War; Robert Gibrat, former Under Secretary for Communications; Jeff Musard, responsible for several pro-German propaganda films; and Lucien Combelle, editor of the newspaper Revolution Nationale. (OWI-BUP)

ROOSEVELT PAYS TRIBUTE TO CHINESE

WASHINGTON, October 10 — President Roosevelt paid tribute to the Chinese people on the 33rd anniversary of the Chinese Revolution, and expressed his confident hope that «the day is near when the Japanese will be driven out of China.»

«The anniversary is essentially a Chinese one,» the President said, «but it is also an anniversary of importance to the whole world. It marks the day on which one-fifth of the world's population threw off a reactionary and oppressive alien yoke, and started anew on the path of democracy.

«The Chinese people are now in their eighth year of resistance to Japanese aggression. The American people salute them, and pay tribute to their courage and fortitude.»

In a message to Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek, the President said: «China's sacrifices to frustrate the aggressors' last desperate endeavors will play an important part in hastening Allied victory. America welcomes the even closer association pledged for the common task of creating a just and stable peace among nations.»

Speaking in Chungking, Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek declared that fighting will be difficult along the seacoast railways, but that today's situation has long been anticipated, and China is fully prepared to meet the developments. He said that five-million Chinese soldiers are fighting at the front, and that 60 per cent of Chinese territory remains in Chinese hands. (OWI)

He admits that he will not obey the order to return. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 10 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

With the continued bad weather and the waterlogged state of ground, activity in the 8th Army sector has been confined to patrols.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No: 785021

In the 5th Army sector, some local improvements to the forward positions have been made.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium bombers last night attacked airfields in the Athens area.

Light bombers and fighter-bombers yesterday attacked close-support and communications targets north of the battle area.

Other light and fighter-bombers attacked shipping in the Adriatic, and enemy targets along the Dalmatian coast.

From these operations, five of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 300 sorties.

Balkan Air Force:

British forward troops are in Corinth and have met no opposition. Our forces are now in control of many key points and communication centers in the Peloponnese Peninsula. Operations continue.

In Albania, the port of Saronde is under attack. Partisan forces have been actively in support near Delvine. Farther inland, 80 Germans were killed during a recent mountain encounter with troops of Land Forces Adriatic.

It is reported from the Aegean that, in addition to the enemy destroyer already reported as sunk by H. M. Destroyer Termagant near the entrance to the Gulf of Salonica, on the night of 6-7 October an armed trawler and a large caique were sunk in the same area. H. M. Destroyer Tuscan was in company with the Termagant.

On 7 October, naval aircraft sank one caique and damaged another, besides driving an enemy minesweeper on shore in the Euripo Channel between the east coast of Greece and Euboea. They also sank a merchant vessel to the westward of Lemnos. On the same day, H. M. Cruiser Black Prince and H. M. Destroyer Terpsichore sank a passenger ship, a large caique, and an enemy landing craft, north of Skiathos. On the night of 7-8 October, British light coastal forces destroyed two enemy motor craft and engaged a small enemy merchant vessel, chasing her into the Mandari Channel to the south of the Gulf of Petali.

On 8 October, light coastal craft sank one merchant vessel and a lighter off Psara, west of Chios. On the night of October 8-9, light coastal craft met and engaged a convoy off Gaidaro Island, on the west side of the entrance to the Gulf of Athens. An enemy tanker of about 750 tons was hit with the first burst of fire and left blazing from stem to stern.

Light coastal forces operating in the northern Adriatic on the night of October 8-9 engaged a south-bound enemy coastal convoy off Maestra, 30 miles south of Venice. One schooner blew up, another sank, and two were damaged. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 10 — Today's communique:

Heavy fighting continues in the Allied bridgehead over the Leopold Canal. Enemy attempts to eliminate the bridgehead were repulsed.

Our troops which made the landing early Monday morning on the south shore of the Schelde Estuary have made good progress.

North of Antwerp, local gains were made.

There has been little change in position in the Aachen area.

In the vicinity of Ofden, north of Aachen, we made an advance of about 800 yards, and later continued a counter-attack by enemy tanks.

Our forces advancing from the south in the area east of Aachen held their positions against several counter-at-

in Frankfort, Coblenz, and Mainz regions. Bombing was made by instrument through heavy clouds.

In the course of these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed. Five bombers and three fighters are missing.

Last night Boehum, in the Ruhr, was strongly attacked by heavy bombers. Objectives in Wilhelmshafen also were bombed. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, October 10 — Tonight's communique:

During today, on the Island of Saaremaa (Oesel), our troops continued operations to clear the enemy off the southern end of the island.

In Riga direction, our troops continued advance fighting, in the course of which they occupied over 60 populated localities, including Dikseru, Iltell, Garkalne, Ropazhi, Chapat, Hoskali, Melkartsi, Topili, Blankazh, and Dupak, and the railway stations of Leuatse, Garyu, Ropazhi, Ishtkile, and Taukene.

North and southeast of Siaipeta (Memel), our troops, developing their successful offensive, captured the regional centers of the Lithuanian SSR, the town and railway junction Kretinga; the town and large railway station of Taurage; and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including Vainobe, Alexandria, Moteh, Lenkimai, Starie-Henki, Bruslavki, Salankai, Tarpenai, Gorshi, Dzechni, Gordani, Alexandrovtse, Begute, Kravshany, Priahkonty, and Taurai, and the railway stations of Vainobe, Tauple, Medementy, Maretaszhai, Dardonai, Tubarte, Sasulki, Dureyani, Vaverute, and Kilby.

Our troops reached the coast of the Baltic Sea south of Liepaja (Libau), and occupied the town of Palanga. Thus, our troops cut the retreat roads to East Prussia for the groups of German-Fascist troops which are in the area of Riga, Libau, and Vindava (Ventspils).

West of Kaunas, as a result of fighting, our troops captured the regional center of the Lithuanian SSR, the town of Sakiai.

In northern Transylvania, west and southwest of Regen, our troops, operating jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting over 50 populated localities, including Goreny, Debrash, Mezeerngesh, Mezethochia, Mezekalchi, Segareny, Anton, Seichun (5 kilometers to the south of Cluj), Vlaha, and Pomeshuaryeche.

In Hungary, south of Debrecen, our troops, continuing their offensive, occupied in fighting the town and railway station of Derecske, and the populated localities of Konjar, Bochay, Estar, and Henchedar.

Our troops approached Debrecen and engaged the enemy in its outskirts.

On Yugoslavian territory, south and southeast of Pozarevac, our troops, operating jointly with units of the Yugoslav People's Liberation Army, occupied in fighting the populated localities of Tankova, Zhabari, Velika-Plana, Izbacitsa, Ravna-Reka, Lukovo, Golevac, and the railway junction of Velika-Plana. Thus, our troops cut the railway line and highway of Nix-Belgrade. During October 8-9 on this sector of the front, our troops captured 3,200 German officers and men.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 9, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 106 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft, 78 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of October 9-10, our long-range Air Force carried out massive raids on the port of Liepaja (Libau) and the port of Riga. German transports at the ports were subjected to bombardment, and also military warehouses and trains on the railway stations. At the time of the raid on Liepaja, there were 12 German transports there. As a result of the bombardment, large fires were started at the

It is reported from the Aegean that, in addition to the enemy destroyer already reported as sunk by H. M. Destroyer Termagant near the entrance to the Gulf of Salonica, on the night of 6-7 October an armed trawler and a large caique were sunk in the same area. H. M. Destroyer Tuscan was in company with the Termagant.

On 7 October, naval aircraft sank one caique and damaged another, besides driving an enemy minesweeper on shore in the Euripo Channel between the east coast of Greece and Euboea. They also sank a merchant vessel to the westward of Lemnos. On the same day, H. Ms. Cruiser Black Prince and H. M. Destroyer Terpsichore sank a passenger ship, a large caique, and an enemy landing craft, north of Skiathos. On the night of 7-8 October, British light coastal forces destroyed two enemy motor craft and engaged a small enemy merchant vessel, chasing her into the Mandari Channel to the south of the Gulf of Petali.

On 8 October, light coastal craft sunk one merchant vessel and a lighter off Psara, west of Chios. On the night of October 8-9, light coastal craft met and engaged a convoy off Gaidaro Island, on the west side of the entrance to the Gulf of Athens. An enemy tanker of about 750 tons was hit with the first burst of fire and left blazing from stem to stern.

SHAEF, October 10 — Today's communique:

Heavy fighting continues in the Allied bridgehead over the Leopold Canal. Enemy attempts to eliminate the bridgehead were repulsed.

Our troops which made the landing early Monday morning on the south shore of the Schelde Estuary have made good progress.

North of Antwerp, local gains were made.

There has been little change in position in the Aachen area.

In the vicinity of Orden, north of Aachen, we made an advance of about 600 yards, and later contained a counter-attack by enemy tanks.

Our forces advancing from the south in the area east of Aachen held their positions against several counter-attacks near Verlautenheide.

In the Hürtgen area we made slight gains southwest of the town against very heavy resistance.

Weather curtailed air operations over the battle area. A small force of medium bombers attacked the railway bridge at Euskirchen. Armed reconnaissance was flown by fighters and fighter-bombers.

North of Metz, an enemy counter-attack was repulsed at Maizières.

Advances in the area north of Nancy reached Letricourt.

Bois de la Fourasse, two miles west of Letricourt, is being cleared of the enemy. Several more towns in this sector, including Sivry, Lixières, and Serrières, have been liberated.

In the Vosges foothills, our advance freed more villages.

Hard fighting continues, particularly in Le Thillot sector, where a number of strongpoints were overcome. Heavy losses were inflicted and several hundred prisoners taken.

East of Epinal, the enemy was forced from Laveline and Herp-Elmont.

More than 1,100 heavy bombers, escorted by very strong forces of fighters, yesterday attacked military targets in southwest Germany. Most of the bombing was concentrated Taurage, and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including Vainobe, Alexandria, Motedi, Lenkimai, Starie-Ilenki, Bruslavki, Salankai, Tarpenni, Gorshi, Dvechni, Gordani, Alexandrovtse, Begute, Kravzhany, Irishkonty, and Taurai, and the railway stations of Vainobe, Tauple, Medementy, Maretaszhai, Dardonai, Tubarte, Sasulki, Derevani, Vaveraite, and Kilby.

Our troops reached the coast of the Baltic Sea south of Liepaja (Libau), and occupied the town of Palanga. Thus, our troops cut the retreat roads to East Prussia for the groups of German-Fascist troops which are in the area of Riga, Libau, and Vindava (Ventspils).

On the night of October 9-10, our long-range Air Force carried out massive raids on the port of Liepaja (Libau) and the port of Riga. German transports at the ports were subjected to bombardment, and also military warehouses and trains on the railway stations. At the time of the raid on Liepaja, there were 12 German transports there. As a result of the bombardment, large fires were started at the port, followed by huge explosions; one explosion of high magnitude was noted in the area of the railway station.

Our fliers observed fires and explosions, on leaving the objective, from 200 kilometers.

At the port of Riga, a large number of fires were started by bombardment. Huge fires were started at the export harbour, where at its piers were three German transports.

Yesterday, October 9, fliers of the «Red Banner» Baltic Fleet sunk in Gulf of Riga two German transports, one minesweeper, an escort cutter, and other enemy vessels. Several German transports suffered heavy damages.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 10 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots are completing the liberation of the Ossola Valley region. Garibaldi Brigades from the mountains have brought other centers of the Novarese area under their control. At Cannobio, on Lake Maggiore, a new clash resulting in heavy losses on both sides has taken place. German transport columns, operating between Novara and Turin, have been decimated. Attacks on enemy transports were also carried out by Patriots in the Aosta Valley.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

In Liguria, the situation is becoming increasingly more difficult for the Nazi-Fascists. Many industrial establishments are in the hands of workers. Twenty-one Germans were killed in the vicinity of Spezia. Enemy motor transports were attacked in several localities and suffered losses. Pavia Patriots, after liberating the town of Gravellona, burned requisition and army call-up lists, after which they distributed foodstuffs, taken from the Germans among the town's hungry inhabitants. It is confirmed that in the clashes which took place near Lesignano, in Parma Province, 40 Germans were killed.

Officers and men of the « Black Brigades » were killed at Genoa, Aosta, Pallanza, Varallo, Chiavari, Sondrio, Bellagio, and other localities.

Numerous acts of sabotage were carried out in almost all regions of northern Italy. The Vicenza-Padua rail line was disrupted four times, the Padua-Bassano line 22 times, and the Vicenza-Verona line 21 times. On the lines between Vicenza and Treviso and Vicenza and Padua, a train was derailed and one engine destroyed. On the Vicenza-Verona line another train was derailed. The engine and 10 carriages were destroyed and the track blocked for 10 days. German attempts to repair the destroyed bridges and disrupted rail lines were hindered by rains which swelled the river, as well as by the Patriots.

Near Avigliana, in Turin Province, a patrol of a Garibaldi Brigade disrupted the rail line for a length of 150 meters. Another Patriot patrol blocked the Po rail line. On the road leading to the Cesa Pass, German motor transports were constantly obstructed.

The situation at Turin continues to be extremely confused. The Patriots are observing and hindering German measures for the capture of further workers to be deported to Germany. After the departure of the German commanders Von Klass and Von Lagen, German police units which left Turin earlier have returned. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 10 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In Holland, the focal point of the fighting moved toward our bridgehead south of the Westerscheldt and toward the access to the South Beveriand Island.

At the Leopold Canal, enemy attacks failed.

Southeast of Breskens our troops are engaged in fierce fighting with the enemy who landed. A Canadian infiltration was sealed off at the approaches to the South Beverland Island.

In the Aix la Chapelle sector, the situation was consolidated by our counter-attacks. The southern border of the town was cleared from the enemy.

Northeast of Nancy, on both sides of Nomeny, our troops halted further American attacks and destroyed 31 enemy tanks and armoured reconnaissance cars.

In the Parroy Forest and in the foothills of the western Vosges, the long lasting fighting, for forest land, villages, and high ground positions continues. The encounters are grim, and the enemy suffers heavy losses.

Bitter artillery duels and successful encounter with a superior enemy are reported from Dunkirk and St. Nazaire. The garrisons of La Rochelle and Gironde Nord made other sorties carrying them deeply into the approaches to the fortress.

In several nightly encounters off the Dutch coast, security vessels of the Navy scored other successes, not mentioned in yesterday's communique, by sinking three British motor assault boats and damaging two other boats, one of which [illegible]

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, on the old Bulgarian frontiers, we were several times engaged by Bulgarian troops. In the Zahecar sector, as well as at Belgrade, German formations, particularly mountain troops of the Army and the Waffen SS, after a difficult time of defensive fighting, launched successful counter-attacks. They smashed strong Soviet formations.

In southern Hungary, the Bolsheviks succeeded at some points in getting a foothold on the western banks of the Theiss. Counter-attacks of German and Hungarian troops eliminated most of the enemy bridgeheads.

Southwest of Debrecen, grim offensive and defensive fighting is in progress.

In the Forest Carpathians, all Soviet efforts to capture the important passes were frustrated.

At Novograd and Wilkowishken, numerous enemy attacks failed. North of Memel, our stubbornly fighting divisions halted the enemy off the frontiers of East Prussia. South of Libau, at Mosheiken and the Riga bridgehead, strong Bolshevist attacks were frustrated.

On the Island of Osel, the garrison of the Sworde Peninsula resisted fierce Soviet attacks, and destroyed seven tanks in fighting at close quarters.

In Finland, south of Rovaniemi, a Finnish battalion was wiped out when it attempted unsuccessfully to strike at the flank of our withdrawing troops.

On the front of the Arctic Sea, mountain troops, effectively supported by the Air Force, frustrated Soviet attempts at an encirclement.

At the focal points of the eastern front, German bombers effectively struck at enemy spearheads and communications. The Soviets lost 110 planes, 85 of them in the Petsamo sector alone, in grim dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force.

Anglo-American terror bombers, under the cover of an overcast sky, made daylight attacks on Frankfurt, Mainz and Koblenz. In the night, they struck at Bochum, Wilhelmshaven, and several localities in the Rhenish-Westphalian industrial area. Sixteen planes were shot down despite unfavourable weather conditions. In central Italy, particularly east of the Florence-Bologna Road, the Americans, despite bad weather conditions, continued their attempts at breaking through. CANADIANS LAND ON SCHELDE COAST AMERICANS CLOSE IN ON AACHEN

SHAEF, October 9 — The Canadian 1st Army launched a seaborne assault on the southern side of the Schelde Estuary in the area of Hoofdplatt, five miles west of Terneuzen, under cover of a heavy smokescreen this morning. Late reports tonight indicate that the operation is proceeding satisfactorily behind German lines.

The initial landing of troops, anti-tank guns, mortars, and gun carriers, met with little opposition, but shells from gun batteries on Walcheren Island are now falling on the Canadian beachhead. The German positions are on high ground, and may lie above the newly flooded area.

The operation is designed to relieve pressure on the Canadian bridgehead over the Leopold Canal which has [illegible] German mortar fire.

The Germans have recovered from their initial surprise, and American infantry and tanks are meeting stiffer resistance.

The northern thrust from Ellendorf carried the important height of Crucifix Hill, despite three German counter-attacks. Allied fighter-bombers darted in formations of four above the American column which advanced two miles northward from Verlautenheide to the hill, just east of Haaren. The planes bombed German tanks concentrating for a counter-attack north of Haaren.

American 3rd Army troops, who gained six miles yesterday in their new offensive between Metz and Nancy, reached Letricourt, 12 miles from Pont à Mousson on the main road to Dieuze. Street fighting was reported in the town late tonight.

At Fort Driant, west of Metz, American troops advanced 300 yards in an underground tunnel after cutting their way through five steel bulkheads with acetylene torches.

On the American 7th Army sector, artillery and fighter bombers are blasting the outer defenses of the Belfort Pass and have silenced a number of heavy German batteries. (OWI-Reuter-AP)

HEAVIES HIT SCHWEINFURT, COBLENZ, MAINZ

LONDON, October 9 — The Reich areas of Schweinfurt, Coblenz, and Mainz in the Rhine Valley, were the objectives of 8th and 9th USAAF aircraft today. More than 1,100 Fortresses and Liberators, escorted by fighters, dumped their bomb-loads through heavy clouds. Targets included an aircraft assembly plant and communications points.

Poor flying conditions curtailed other air activities today, according to an Associated Press dispatch, but in the early daylight hours of this morning RAF Mosquitoes and Beaufighters of Coastal Command attacked an enemy convoy of three merchant ships and eight escort vessels off the Norwegian coast.

The planes attacked with torpedoes, rocket projectiles, and cannon fire in the face of heavy flak from the eight escorting vessels, and are believed to have sunk two merchantmen and one escort ship. Other escort vessels were damaged. None of the Allied planes is missing.

132 Gun Positions Destroyed

In yesterday's continued aerial offensive against Siegfried Line defences, American bombers destroyed 132 heavy gun positions that had been impeding the advance of the American 1st and 3rd Armies. Flying about 1,500 sorties in an area from Saarbrücken to Düsseldorf, they also attacked German communications and supply depots, and dive-bombed and strafed a score of German airfields.

At least 64 German planes were destroyed on the ground and 49 severely damaged. The airfields attacked included those at Würtzburg, Frankfurt, Badenhausen, Grossenhaim, Giessen, Bad Neuheim, Bonn, and Coblenz. Returning pilots reported installations wrecked at the fields, and said the assaults were [illegible] by the Luftwaffe, though flak opposition was

The operation is designed to relieve pressure on the Canadian bridgehead over the Leopold Canal which has been still futher compressed by heavy German mortar fire. The attention of the 5,000 German troops opposing the northward advance will now have to be diverted. The German patrol which penetrated Canadian positions on the southern bank of the canal have been wiped out.

Escape Route Taped

To the east, the Canadian thrust to cut the escape route of the 11,000 German troops on Walcheren and Beveland has been temporarily halted by a German concentration of paratroops and SS units. Rocket-firing Typhoons in strength attacked these concentrations last night. The escape route is not physically cut, but Allied artillery on high ground 1,500 yards to the south dominate the road junction.

On the American 1st Army front, troops have narrowed the Aachen escape road to 1½ miles in twin drives from the north and south. The southern drive toward Aachen and the beginning of the great Adolf Hitler multi-lane speedway to Cologne, began at Alsdorf and swept into Allied hands the towns of Schaufenberg, slightly to the east, Bardenberg and Würselen, to the south on the road to München-Gladbach.

The towns of Broich and Weiden, on a parallel road leading northward from Aachen to Düsseldorf, were also captured.

As a result of the direct hits scored on the Kembs Dam across the Rhine, in Upper Alsace by RAF bombers Saturday, the level of the river has dropped more than 10 feet, according to eye-witness reports from Basel quoted by British United Press today. The Swiss radio said it is doubtful if river navigation can be continued.

A New York Times correspondent reported that bombing had paralyzed the power supply of the whole Province of Baden for many months, bringing important war industries to a standstill.

The dam was a strong defense weapon for the Germans holding the Belfort Gap, for as long as it was intact they could have destroyed it at a favorable moment to delay an Allied advance to the Rhine River.

Flying bombs fell on London and southern England again last night for the fourth straight night, causing damage and casualties.

To frustrate these attacks, Associated Press reported today that fast Mosquitoes are now equipped with secret detecting devices which enable them to catch the German launching planes by surprise. As a result, the Mosquitoes shot down at least three planes and destroyed at least six bombs during the recent raids. (OWI-Reuter)

LAST BATTLE HAS COMMENCED, SAYS MODEL

WITH U.S. 1ST ARMY, October 9 — Field Marshal Walther Model, commander of the German armies in the west, addressed a special order to all German troops telling them that «the last battle has commenced,» a Herald Tribune correspondent reported.

The captured message, which addressed the individual German soldier as «Comrade», stated:

«The enemy is on our native soil. The last battle has commenced. It depends upon every soldier whether this battle will turn in our favor.» (OWI)

5TH ARMY ADVANCES TOWARD BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 9 — American troops of the 5th Army, battling northward along the Florence-Bologna Road in heavy rains, yesterday drove the Germans from their positions atop Monte Castellaro and the mountain village of Barbarolo, flanking the winding highway, to push forward nearly two miles to within little more than 10 miles of Bologna and the Valley of the Po.

The American thrust directly through the Apennines toward Bologna came as British and Indian troops crossed the slightly-subsided flood waters of the Fiumicino River and captured the village of Montiglio and a nearby height in a move which threatened to cut the main Po Valley highway a mile and a half behind the German forces entrenched in the stronghold town of Savignano. The leading British forces were reported to be within seven miles of Cesena, first of the important towns strung along the Emilia Highway on the southern edge of the Po Plain.

Fierce enemy counter-attacks followed the Allied gains on both the central and the Adriatic sectors of the front, and fresh German troops, as well as numbers of heavy guns, were massed on the mountain approaches to Bologna and Imola. Enemy positions defending Monte Castellaro and Barbarolo, a mile to the east, had been strongly reinforced to gain Monte Cece, dominating the lower end of the Sintria River Valley 13 miles southwest of Castel Bolognese and the Po Plain, reported no change in this days' old struggle. In the center of the 5th Army, American forces captured the hamlets of Montemaggiore, Poggio del Falchetto, and San Apollinare, the latter within 10 miles of Castel San Pietro on the Rimini-Bologna road. All three villages lie along a three-mile diagonal between the Sillaro and the Santerno River Valleys.

South African forces of the 5th Army, who had advanced nearly two miles to the north of their positions on Monte Collina to reach Monte Stanco, a high peak overlooking the Pistoia-Bologna road only two miles southeast of Vergato, were forced to retire yesterday to new positions further south, when German forces counter-attacked heavily. On the coastal flank of the 5th Army, American Negro troops of the 92nd Infantry Division were reported to have entered the village of Seravezza, and to have captured nearby Ripa, both communities roughly nine miles north of Viareggio. WEATHER CUTS M.A.A.F. OPERATIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 9 — Bad weather yesterday restricted operations of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force to little more than 100 sorties, most of which were concentrated in small-scale attacks on enemy shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and the northern Adriatic.

Balkan Air Force planes were also able to fly a few attack missions against German airfields, shipping and gun positions in Albania and Greece.

Hurricanes and Spitfires operating from fields in Greece flew offensive sweeps over the Corinth Canal, to set afire an enemy tug boat in this chasm-like waterway. (PRO)

RUSSIANS CRASHING THROUGH TO EAST PRUSSIA

MOSCOW, October 9 — Russian armies advancing along the Neimen River in southern Lithuania were within 12 miles of the East Prussian frontier tonight. The Soviet communique said also that advanced Red Army elements were within 12 miles of the Lithuanian Baltic port of Memel.

Battle-line dispatches said the Baltic trap, within which there are believed to be no less than 150,000 German combat troops, is shrinking «catastrophically,» and that a new Russian break-through 40 miles east of the Prussian city of Tilsit was threatening the rear of German divisions to the north.

These divisions were said to be falling back in routed haste on Memel and on the southern Latvian port of Libau. The moving front of this Baltic Russian offensive was said to be 120 miles wide.

The Russian communique said of the drive on Budapest only that 8,229 prisoners had been taken in three days of fighting. But from Reuter and from German sources came news that the Red Army was storming Szolnok, large rail and highway junction, only 55 miles from the Hungarian capital. Reuter said this advance means that the Russians have pushed forward a distance of 25 miles in 24 hours.

The Soviet communique said 140 Nazi aircraft were captured on over-run airfields yesterday, that 202 German tanks were disabled or destroyed, and that 26 planes were shot down by Russian pilots.

On the island of Saaremaa, off the coast of Estonia, fleeing Germans were pressed closer into a pocket as the Russians swept through 50 more small villages and towns. Around the isolated Latvian capital of Riga, several more villages were taken as the Russians continued their hard push against the dug-in German garrison.

More German counter-attacks were beaten off in the sector north of Warsaw, and 94 German tanks were destroyed

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 9 — American troops of the 5th Army, battling northward along the Florence-Bologna Road in heavy rains, yesterday drove the Germans from their positions atop Monte Castellaro and the mountain village of Barbarolo, flanking the winding highway, to push forward nearly two miles to within little more than 10 miles of Bologna and the Valley of the Po.

The American thrust directly through the Apennines toward Bologna came as British and Indian troops crossed the slightly-subsided flood waters of the Fiumicino River and captured the village of Montgallo and a nearby height in a move which threatened to cut the main Po Valley highway 2 mile and a half behind the German forces entrenched in the stronghold town of Savignano. The leading British forces were reported to be within seven miles of Cesena, first of the important towns strung along the Emilia Highway on the southern edge of the Po Plain.

Fierce enemy counter attacks followed the Allied gains on both the central and the Adriatic sectors of the front, and fresh German troops, as well as numbers of heavy guns, were massed on the mountain approaches to Bologna and Imola. Enemy positions defending Monte Castellazi and Barbarolo, a mile to the east, had been strongly reinforced in an attempt to stem the American drive toward Bologna, it was reported.

20 Miles West of Rimini

The 8th Army's thrust westward along the hilly fringe of the Po Valley has now carried it nearly 20 miles west of Rimini, and within three miles of the Savio River and Highway 71 following the river's course to Cesena on the Plain of the Po. General Sir Oliver Leese's forces built Monte Farneto, just west of the upper Fiumicino, and part of a broken ridge line forming the eastern rim of the Savio Valley approach to the plains to the north. Despite heavy enemy counter-attacks yesterday, these 8th Army troops held firmly to this advanced position. The more direct threat to the German forces holding the line of the lower Fiumicino was represented by crossings further north, where British troops captured the village of Montgallo, only a mile and a half south of the Emilia Highway at a point the same distance west of the strongly held enemy town of Savignano, southern «anchor» of enemy positions along the Fiumicino River to the coast. Indian division troops stormed and captured Monte Guttona, a mile and a half southwest, and only a mile from Longiano, another strongly held German town.

Elsewhere along the Italian front, front-line positions remained virtually unchanged. British troops, fighting fiercely yesterday restricted operations of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force to little more than 100 sorties, most of which were concentrated in small-scale attacks on enemy shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and the northern Adriatic.

Balkan Air Force planes were also able to fly a few attack missions against German airfields, shipping and gun positions in Albania and Greece.

FINNS CLEAN OUT GULF OF BOTHNIA COAST

HELSINKI, October 9 — German forces have been cleaned out of the whole coastal region of the Gulf of Bothnia, as far north as the Finnish-Swedish frontier, an official statement said tonight.

Finnish troops east of Tornio, at the head of the gulf, broke enemy resistance and joined with other Finnish forces advancing northward from Kemi along the Kemi River yesterday.

The Finns said their communique tonight, swept up 400 Germans before them in this juncture of forces and took many guns and motor vehicles. Finnish air forces supported the operations. (PWB)

YUGOSLAV-BULGARIAN PACT SIGNED

WASHINGTON, October 9 — A Yugoslav-Bulgarian agreement between Marshall Tito and a Bulgarian delegation has been signed in Sofia, pledging «military cooperation in the fight against the common enemy, the German invader,» Radio Sofia announced today.

The signatories also agreed that all questions arising from «neighborly relations and friendly cooperation between Bulgaria and Yugoslavia will be decided in the spirit of brotherhood and in the common interests of the Bulgarian and Yugoslav nations.»

Delegates representing the Bulgarian Government expressed their readiness to do everything to repair injustices done to the Yugoslav nation by Fascist elements of the Bulgarian Army.

The Bulgarian delegation was headed by Dobri Terpeshev, minister without portfolio, who signed the pact for Bulgaria. Marshal Tito signed for Yugoslavia. (OWI)

GERMANS FACE THREAT FROM SOUTHEAST

ZURICH, October 9 — While Allied armies are pressing the Germans on their western frontiers, a danger just as great faces the Nazi command in the southeast, where 16 Soviet armies are poised on the edge of the Hungarian plain, Jan Kimche, Reuter military commentator, said today.

«A successful break-through into the northern German plain or into the valley of the Main may decide the war,» Kimche wrote. «But during the next three weeks, it is more likely that Germany's fate rests in the hands of three Soviet marshals, Petrov, Malinovski, and Tolbukhin. «Twenty divisions of the Hungarian Army have been mustered in strength, and exceptionally large numbers of German troops have been brought south from Poland to act as stoppers along the defensive passes. The Russians are now moving to attack.

«Armies numbering probably twice as many as those engaged in the west are going into action. Berlin official circles seem to be conscious of the peril.

MARCUS ISLANDS SHELLED

PEARL HARBOR, October 9 — Battleships of Admiral William Halsey's United States 3rd Fleet have inflicted heavy damage on Japanese defense installations in the Marcus Islands, vital Japanese outpost 1,135 miles from Tokyo.

The bombardment, carried out yesterday, was said to have destroyed the greater part of all Japanese coastal gun batteries.

A Navy communique said many buildings were hit, and many fires started. Neither the American announcement, nor the disclosure of the attack by Radio Tokyo, mentioned any aerial action.

An early communique from General MacArthur's headquarters reported widespread air activity in the south Pacific area, and said that 50 more tons of bombs were dropped on Rabaul defenses and troops concentrations. It also announced destruction or damage of 23 Japanese coastal vessels and small craft in new attacks on enemy shipping near Ceram and Halmahera in the Moluccs Group. A single heavy patrol plane swooped in over the Philippines at dawn on Saturday, attacking an airfield and a seaplane base. Four float planes were destroyed, a bomber was damaged, and hangar and ramp installations hit.

From somewhere in New Guinea, U. S. Lieutenant General George Kenney, Far East Air Force commander, told an International News Service correspondent that the Allies, by their overwhelming air victories in the Pacific, have won «a decisive battle.» It will take the Japanese years to recover from the set-backs of the past six months, Kenney said, pointing out that they have been «bled white» by the combined teamwork of General MacArthur and Admiral Halsey in their southwest Pacific campaign. He set enemy losses in the period at 5,000 airplanes destroyed and 2,000,000 tons of shipping eliminated. (OWI)

CHINESE TAKE TWO MORE TOWNS

CHUNGKING, October 9 — Two more towns have been recaptured by Chinese troops who today continued their counter-offensive against the Japanese drive on the Kwangsi capital city of Kweilin.

The captured towns were taken from the Japanese forces advancing westward from Wuchow. The towns fell to Chinese troops who cut in to the rear of the Japanese drive at a point near the Kwangtung-Kwangsi border.

A second Japanese column which started out to assault Kweilin, the hub of southern China's defense system, and one-time American air base, was still halted tonight along the Hunan-Kwangsi railway. Bitter fighting was in progress, according to the Chinese High Command.

On the Fukien Province front, the Chinese communique said Japanese forces have penetrated into the harbor area of Foochow, last important ocean-going port remaining in Chinese hands.

The Japanese were described as making strong efforts to take Foochow, although Chinese troops were said to be holding out within the city, as well as in the northwestern suburbs where fighting has been going on for several days.

On the Burma front, the attack against the Japanese base in the Chin Hills made further progress with strong aerial support. On the high spots in the hills the Japanese were said to be fairly firmly ensconced in bunker positions. (OWI)

GERMANS FACE THREAT FROM SOUTHEAST

ZURICH, October 9 — While Allied armies are pressing the Germans on their western frontiers, a danger just as great faces the Nazi command in the southeast, where 16 Soviet armies are poised on the edge of the Hungarian plain, Jon Kimche, Reuter military commentator, said today.

"A successful break-through into the northern German plain or into the valley of the Main may decide the war," Kimche wrote. "But during the next three weeks, it is more likely that Germany's fate rests in the hands of three Soviet marshals, Petrov, Malinovski, and Tolbukhin. "The Allies are attacking just enough to make a redisposition of German forces impossible. So long as the attack lasts north of Aachen, there will be no troops available to reinforce the Arnhem force, and the same is happening farther south, around Metz, where Patton is pinning down Germans and preventing their removal to the more threatened front. This also has been happening on the Hungarian front. It explains the mystery of why the German High Command did not send troops from east to west. They could not do so, because in its way the situation in the southeast was in no way less perilous than that in the west.

"What had to be spared had to be moved to the protection of Budapest. Once any one of the 16 Russian armies has broken through in strength, the whole German defence plan falls. There are then no lines on which they can fall back, and the combined weight of the Rumanian, Bulgarian, and Yugoslav troops could pass across the open plain en route for Budapest and Vienna and beyond.

"Such a Russian break-through not only promises immense territorial gains for the Allies, but threatens complete destruction of every vestige of the plan that the German High Command has husbanded for the final stage of the war. Kesselring's 27 divisions in Italy would be lost, Von Weich and his remaining 22 divisions would also be lost, and all remaining occupied and satellite states would be over-run in less than a week. Germany would be left alone with her southeastern flank open, with 70 divisions isolated from the main battlefield and with the defenses built up with so much effort in Poland turned by the advance through Slovakia and Bohemia." DISPOSITION OF U.S.A.A.F. COMPLETED

12TH ARMY GROUP HQ, October 9 — The full disposition of United States air strength throughout the world has been completed, and the allocation of ground forces is rapidly nearing completion, General George C. Marshall, U. S. Army Chief of Staff, declared here today.

The general said that there were adequate replacements for all ground force personnel wherever the war was being conducted.

General Marshall, who spent the morning in Holland with Lieut. Gen. Omar Bradley, 12th Army Group commander, also conferred with Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery, commander of the 21st Army Group.

Discussing the war in the Pacific, General Marshall said "we are along way ahead of schedule." He declared that

BONOMI COMMENT ON EDEN STATEMENT

ROME, October 9 — Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi, in an interview given Saturday to New York Times correspondent Herbert Matthews, said that in order for a new democratic Italy to arise, Allied understanding, as well as material aid, was necessary.

The Prime Minister said that until British Foreign Secretary Eden's statement on the Italian colonies had been amplified by further official Allied statements, he was not able to express an opinion on this question. Referring, however, to the effect that Eden's statement had produced on the Italian people, Bonomi emphasized that Italy's position today is not in reality what it might have become on July 25 of last year.

"Let us suppose," he continued, "that immediately after that date, anti-Fascist Italy, democratic Italy, almost all the Italians, had denounced the pact of alliance with Germany and had faced the inevitable German attack, which was then less to be feared than the more powerful one launched in September.

"An Italy fighting the Germans would have been supported by the Anglo-American armies for the same military reasons for which Russian armies immediately ranged themselves with Rumanian forces. We should have attained co-belligerency without passing through surrender."

This did not occur, said the Prime Minister, because the Italian leaders of the time were not equal to the situation. He added:

"As soon as Italy was freed from Mussolini's yoke, which prevented Italians from manifesting any form of will, she ranged herself instantly at the side of the Allies, at one with their war aims, striving for their ideals, intimately linked with their fortunes. To use the expression of my great friend Benedetto Croce, we at once felt ourselves to be ... by the victory."

he settled down to explaining his actions in sending the gold to Milan, from where most of it is believed to have been transported to Berlin.

The story of the gold begins with a conference Azzolini said he had with Mussolini long before the Italian armistice. Mussolini suggested then that the gold be sent to Verona or Bolzano so that it could be near Germany. Azzolini pictured himself as a smooth persuader who allayed Mussolini's fears by insisting that the gold was safer in Rome.

In the meantime, he said, the vaults in Rome were prepared to receive the gold. All during this time, he added, he had been subjected to pressure from the Germans and was in mortal fear that German intelligence agents would find out the gold's exact location.

He insisted that he stalled the Germans with long explanations of how the gold must be packed so that the weight of the shipment is double the weight of the gold. He had even prepared two false letters to show that the gold had already been shipped to Potenza, but he wasn't sure that this was a good trick because Mussolini knew that the gold was still in Rome.

Just before the Italian armistice, he was again asked about the gold, by Badoglio. Azzolini told the court that he didn't carry out Badoglio's orders because the Germans had precise knowledge of the gold.

Received Telephone Call

Azzolini said that sometime after 10 September 1943, he and one Cambi, a functionary for the Ministry of Finance, received a telephone call from the German Embassy. A Nazi official ordered them to turn the gold over to the Germans at once. He quoted Cambi as saying:

"If we don't turn over the gold, they'll kill us and get the gold anyway. We can do nothing."

Azzolini maintained that he told Cambi other people should be consulted before the gold was turned over to the Germans. But the gold was finally shipped from Rome by train and plane; about 20 tons were carried by air.

In Milan, Azzolini testified, he met two officials of the Reichsbank who insisted that the gold go to Berlin at once. Azzolini said he used his persuasive powers on these officials, who assented to 23 tons being sent to Switzerland in payment of Italian debts.

In the total gold shipment was also some gold taken by the Italian Army in Yugoslavia, Azzolini revealed.

Lorenzo Maroni, president of the special court, asked Azzolini why he had been so hasty in getting the gold out of the vaults in Rome to ship north, even forcing the Bank employees to work all night to get the gold out.

Azzolini, weighing his words very carefully, insisted that such haste was precipitated by the Germans, who were continually pressing him to move the gold. He added that no matter what steps he could or would have taken, the Germans would have obtained the gold. He cited the Littoria incident, when the Germans blew up the local bank vaults when they could not find the keys.

During his recital of the sparring game he said he was playing with the Germans to delay shipment of the gold, Azzolini testified that it was he who saved the Crown Jewels from the Germans. He explained that he transferred the jewels from the main vaults of the Bank of Italy to safe deposit boxes which he secured in the vaults of a subsidiary bank unknown to the Germans.

In explaining the transactions which took place after he reached Milan, he said the Germans were primarily interested in getting back what they called "German gold." By this, they meant gold which the Germans had given to the Italians in exchange for dollars and the gold of the National Bank of Yugoslavia.

"Among other things, Azzolini pictured himself to the and cargo liner, and later converted to a troopship and then to a floating military command headquarters. The Ancon participated in landings in French Morocco, Sicily, Salerno and Normandy.

«As soon as Italy was freed from Mussolini's yoke, which prevented Italians from manifesting any form of will, she ranged herself instantly at the side of the Allies, at one with their war aims, striving for their ideals, intimately linked with their fortunes. To use the expression of my great friend Benedetto Croce, we at once felt ourselves to be among the victors.»

Emphasizing the necessity for democratic Italy to be received as a sister nation by the great world democracies, he concluded:

«Italy must feel that the sorrows through which she has passed, and is still passing, have washed away the 20 years of Fascist domination; that, free from shame, she may today look in the face those by whose side she fights, with the heartfelt desire, some day not far off, to become their ally. I believe that the American people .... will understand and value this, our unanimous feeling. I am confident that the great democracies of the world will appreciate the profound justice underlying our needs and requests.»

AZZOLINI TRIAL OPENS IN ROME

ROME, October 9 — The trial of Vincenzo Azzolini, former Governor of the Banca d'Italia, charged with turning over approximately 120 tons of gold to the Germans and collaborating with Mussolini's Republican Fascists, opened this morning before an eight-man special court in the Palazzo Corsini.

Azzolini faces a death penalty if found guilty.

Azzolini's testimony began with loud and impassioned protestations of his innocence and his patriotism. Then he didn't carry out Badoglio's orders because the Germans had precise knowledge of the gold.

Received Telephone Call

Azzolini said that sometime after 10 September 1943, he and one Cambi, a functionary for the Ministry of Finance, received a telephone call from the German Embassy. A Nazi official ordered them to turn the gold over to the Germans at once. He quoted Cambi as saying:

«If we don't turn over the gold, they'll kill us and get the gold anyway. We can do nothing.»

Azzolini maintained that he told Cambi other people should be consulted before the gold was turned over to the Germans. But the gold was finally shipped from Rome by train and plane; about 30 tons were carried by air.

In Milan, Azzolini testified, he met two officials of the Reichsbank who insisted that the gold go to Berlin at once. Azzolini said he used his persuasive powers on these officials, who assented to 23 tons" being sent to Switzerland in payment of Italian debts.

In the total gold shipment was also some gold taken by the Italian Army in Yugoslavia, Azzolini revealed.

Lorenzo Marroni, president of the special court, asked Azzolini why he had been so hasty in getting the gold out of the vaults in Rome to ship north, even forcing the Bank employees to work all night to get the gold out.

Azzolini, weighing his words very carefully, insisted that such haste was precipitated by the Germans, who were continually pressing him to move the gold. He added that no matter what steps he could or would have taken, the Germans would have obtained the gold. He cited the Littoria incident, when the Germans blew up the local bank vaults when they could not find the keys.

During his recital of the sparring game he said he was playing with the Germans to delay shipment of the gold, Azzolini testified that it was he who saved the Crown Jewels from the Germans. He explained that he transferred the jewels from the main vaults of the Bank of Italy to safe deposit boxes which he secreted in the vaults of a subsidiary bank unknown to the Germans.

In explaining the transactions which took place after he reached Milan, he said the Germans were primarily interested in getting back what they called «German gold.» By this, they meant gold which the Germans had given to the Italians in exchange for dollars and the gold of the National Bank of Yugoslavia.

Among other things, Azzolini pictured himself to the court as the man who talked the Germans out of printing more paper money; as the man who hid the bank note engraving plates so that the Germans could print only 200,000 bank notes a day, instead of 900,000 notes; as the man who persuaded the Germans not to print Italian money in Leipzig and Stuttgart; as a man who never wore a Fascist uniform when he could wear an army officers' uniform, and as a man whose name was on the German list of those to be shot sooner or later.

Azzolini denied that he gave the order for the government bank note printing plant to be moved to Aquila. He said it was Mussolini's idea, after the Duce decided at the close of the 1937 and 1938 military maneuvers, that the plant's chimney was an easy target.

The trial will continue tomorrow morning. (UNN)

SOVIET DELEGATION AT NAPLES T. U. CONGRESS

NAPLES, October 9 — Speaking before a large gathering of trade union representatives in Naples yesterday morning, Michael Tarasov, leader of the Soviet T.U. Delegation, said that in Russia a distinction had always been made between Fascism and the Italian people.

They were the first to free themselves from the German alliance and range themselves at the side of the Allies.»

Tarasov then spoke of his pride in the daring and valor of the Italian Patriots, and concluded by reaffirming the friendship of the Soviet people for Italian workers.

Speeches made by three secretaries of the CGIL, Oreste Lizzadri, Achille Grandi, and Giuseppe Di Vittorio, all stressed the solidarity of the Italian trade union movement with Russia and the Allies.

Expressing admiration for Russian successes, Grandi emphasized the strength of Soviet ideology which, although international, had inspired such love of country in the Russian people. He contrasted it with Nazi-Fascism which had forced Italians into actions opposed to their sentiments.

Lizzadri said the Soviet delegates had been able, during their stay in Italy, to observe the futility of the Fascist propaganda attempt to hide from the Italian worker the true face of Russia.

The gratitude of Italian workers for Allied aid was expressed by Di Vittorio, who reaffirmed their pledge to intensify the struggle for the liberation and reconstruction of Italy. (UNN)

UNITED NATIONS

CHURCHILL AND EDEN ARRIVE IN MOSCOW

MOSCOW, October 9 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden arrived here today, it was announced early tonight.

The Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary will confer with Marshal Joseph Stalin and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov. Ambassador Averell Harriman will represent the United States Government.

Marshal Stalin, who was unable to accept the invitation to go to Quebec, welcomed the opportunity to meet the Prime Minister so soon after the Canadian conference, Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, said in his announcement to the House of Commons.

Accompanying the Prime Minister were Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and General Sir Hastings Ismay, Chief of Staff to the Minister of Defence, together with other military advisors.

The Prime Minister and his Foreign Secretary were met at the airport by Molotov and Under Secretary Andrei Vishinski, and by Vice Foreign Affairs Commissar Ivan Maisky.

A group spokesman said the visit was a sequel to the recent meeting between President Roosevelt and Churchill in Quebec.

including the United States, to be used against aggressors as the council might direct.

Commenting on the Dumbarton Oaks agreement, President Roosevelt said today that his first impression «is one of extreme satisfaction and surprise that so much could have been accomplished on so difficult a subject in so short a time.»

The new organization, the President said, will make it possible for peace-loving nations «through unity of desire, unity of will, and unity of strength, to be in a position to assure that no other aggressor or conqueror shall even get started.»

President Roosevelt emphasized that the new organization will be concerned not only with the use of force to put down aggression, but also with quieting economic and social unrest of the world.

The announcement came as United Nations diplomats foresaw the possibility of an early four-power meeting «at the highest level» to tighten war-end relations and to complete the security organizations.

The security plan, which also provides detailed proposals for peaceful settlement of disputes, is tentative because it has not been formally accepted by any of the governments involved. Drawn up at the Dumbarton Oaks conferences which ended last Saturday, it was issued textually here today by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who described it as «an effort to make permanent a victory purchased at so heavy a cost in blood, in tragic suffering, and in treasure.»

Secretary Hull warned in an accompanying statement that the road to establishment of the proposed organization «will be long — and difficult,» adding that «much work remains to be done before a set of completed proposals can be laid down for a full dress United Nations conference to bring the organization into being.»

Under Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, chairman of the Dumbarton Oaks sessions, said in his report to Secretary Hull that none of the gaps in the plan is «in any sense insuperable.» He added:

«I am happy to report that the conversations throughout were characterized by a spirit of complete cooperation... the proof of which is evident in the wide area of agreement covered in the proposals...

«It is my opinion, which I believe is shared by all participants, that the agreed proposals constitute an advance over the tentative and preliminary proposals presented by each delegation. This has resulted from a single-minded effort of all the delegations at Dumbarton Oaks to reach a common understanding as to the most effective international organization capable of fulfilling the hopes of all peoples everywhere.»

Blueprint of Plan

The blueprint of the plan calls for:

1. A general international organization to be known as «The United Nations.» Each of the agencies proposed would be part of this organization.

2. General assembly. All member nations to be members of the assembly each having one vote. The assembly would debate broad problems of peace and security, control of armaments, and the like. It could admit or expel members and make recommendations for action to the security council by a two-thirds vote. It would meet at least once a year.

3. Security council. The United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China and, «in due course, France,» would compose permanently five of the 11 members. The assembly would elect the other six for two-year terms. By a system of voting still undecided, the council would have power to order the use of force, economic measures, political isolation, for any other steps considered necessary to put down

MOSCOW, October 9 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden arrived here today, it was announced early tonight.

The Prime Minister and the Foreign Secretary will confer with Marshal Joseph Stalin and Foreign Commissar Vyacheslav Molotov. Ambassador Averell Harriman will represent the United States Government.

Marshal Stalin, who was unable to accept the invitation to go to Quebec, welcomed the opportunity to meet the Prime Minister so soon after the Canadian conference. Clement Attlee, Deputy Prime Minister, said in his announcement to the House of Commons.

The Prime Minister and his Foreign Secretary were met at the airport by Molotov and Under Secretary Andrei Vishinski, and by Vice Foreign Affairs Commissar Ivan Maisky.

A group spokesman said the visit was a sequel to the recent meeting between President Roosevelt and Churchill in Quebec.

It was recalled that Mr. Churchill, in his speech to the Commons 11 days ago, indicated that he considered a new meeting between Marshal Stalin and himself — and with President Roosevelt — essential before peace plans are revealed.

This is Mr. Churchill's second trip to Moscow. He went to the Russian capital in August 1942 at the invitation of Marshal Stalin. It will be his third meeting with the Russian Premier, the last having been at Teheran in November 1943. (OWI)

FOUR POWERS DISCLOSE PLAN FOR LASTING PEACE

WASHINGTON, October 9 — The United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China disclosed a tentative and incomplete plan today, designed to convert the forces of the United Nations into an organization to maintain the peace of the world.

The plan calls for using, if necessary, powerful armed forces, including special air detachments capable of inflicting swift and smashing blows against any future aggressors.

Authority to use these forces would be vested in a United Nations Security Council of 11 members, on which the four powers and France would hold permanent seats.

The armed forces would be assigned by all nations, governments involved. Drawn up at the Dumbarton Oaks conference which ended last Saturday, it was issued textually here today by Secretary of State Cordell Hull who described it as «an effort to make permanent a victory purchased at so heavy a cost in blood, in tragic suffering, and in treasure.»

Secretary Hull warned in an accompanying statement that the road to establishment of the proposed organization «will be long ... and difficult,» adding that «much work remains to be done before a set of completed proposals can be laid down for a full dress United Nations conference to bring the organization into being.»

Under Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, chairman of the Dumbarton Oaks sessions, said in his report to Secretary Hull that none of the gaps in the plan is «in any sense insuperable.» He added:

«I am happy to report that the conversations throughout were characterized by a spirit of complete cooperation ... the proof of which is evident in the wide area of agreement covered in the proposals...

This has resulted from a single-minded effort of all the delegations at Dumbarton Oaks to reach a common understanding as to the most effective international organization capable of fulfilling the hopes of all peoples everywhere.»

The blueprint of the plan calls for:

1. A general international organization to be known as «The United Nations.» Each of the agencies proposed would be part of this organization.

2. General assembly. All member nations to be members of the assembly each having one vote. The assembly would debate broad problems of peace and security, control of armaments, and the like. It could admit or expel members and make recommendations for action to the security council by a two-thirds vote. It would meet at least once a year.

3. Security council. The United States, Great Britain, Russia, and China and, «in due course, France,» would compose permanently five of the 11 members. The assembly would elect the other six for two-year terms. By a system of voting still undecided, the council would have power to order the use of force, economic measures, political isolation, for any other steps considered necessary to put down an aggressor state.

First, however, it would try peaceful means, such as negotiation and arbitration. It would recommend to the Assembly the suspension or expulsion of any member nation found violating the principles of peace and security.

4. An international court of justice. Details of this still are to be worked out; it would be a continuation of the «permanent Court of International Justice» still in existence at The Hague.

5. Economic and social council. It would consist of 15 member nations, none of them permanent, holding three-year terms. Its purpose would be to promote international economic stability and humanitarian activities designed to remove the causes of war. Linked with it would be such already-established organizations as the International Labor Office, founded by the old League of Nations.

In addition to these large units, the plan proposes the creation of a «Military Staff Committee,» which in effect would be a high command for the organization. To be made up of the military leaders of the big staffs, it could add temporarily the staffs of other nations which are contributing forces for a specific operation.

The «Military Staff Committee» would advise the council on all military questions, and be responsible for the strategic direction of any forces actually sent into action.

The plan specifically provides for continued operation of such regional groups of nations as the Pan-American Union in the Western Hemisphere. In line with this, the plan calls for the settlement of local disputes among nations on a regional basis, in accordance with the directions of the Security Council.

It also covers specifically the problem of dealing with Germany after victory in Europe, stating that nothing in the proposed charter should preclude action by the Allies in handling enemy states.

The documentary plan produced by the delegates at Dumbarton Oaks is the product of deliberations which began August 21, and ended October 7, with the U. S., England and the Soviet Union participating until September 28, and China taking the place of Russia in the phase starting on September 29. (OWI)

U. S. TO RECEIVE RUBBER FROM BRITAIN

WASHINGTON, October 9 — The United States will receive 78,000 tons of crude rubber this year as reverse lend-lease from the British Commonwealth, the U.S. Foreign Economic Administration announced today.

The FEA said the supply by the British to America of so much of their crude rubber supplies is an important complementary step, since natural rubber is essential to the use of synthetic rubber in most production programs.

The agency said the British Empire is sending to the United States more than half of its total crude rubber production. (OWI)

BULGARIANS KILL 15,000 GREEKS

LONDON, October 9 — Bulgarians are charged with killing at least 15,000 Greeks in a list of Bulgarian crimes compiled at Adriatic Land Forces headquarters, a Daily Herald correspondent said yesterday.

The correspondent wrote that thousands more Greek men and women have been driven into Bulgaria for slave labor, and that Bulgarian soldiers threw the whole of Macedonia and Thrace into two years of terror.

He added that in the whole of Greece, over 400,000 people have died from malnutrition and disease or have been executed since the German-Bulgarian occupation began. The number of Greek villages burned has reached a total of 1,650. (OWI)

SEYDLITZ APPEALS FOR OVERTHROW OF NAZISM

MOSCOW, October 9 — Major General Walter von Seydlitz broadcast an appeal over Radio Moscow to German troops and civilians to overthrow National Socialism and spare the German nation further useless sacrifice.

Von Seydlitz, president of the Soviet-sponsored German officers union and vice president of the Free Germany National Committee, stated that Hitler and his National Socialism must be exterminated.

«The German people,» he said, «still have a choice as to whether they prefer to oppose this world pest on the side of humanity or whether they are ready to let themselves be misused by Hitler to the last man. The sooner National Socialism is wiped out, the sooner we shall have laid the foundations for the reconstruction of our Fatherland.»

Warning the German nation that Allied military occupation is inevitable, von Seydlitz stated that it would depend in a high degree upon the German people whether the conditions of occupation would be hard or easy.

«Drastic measures will necessarily have to be taken by the occupying forces,» the German general said, «if the National Socialist leaders succeed in carrying out criminal plots to provoke tension and open enmity between the population and the occupying forces. If the population lends a hand in discovering and preventing such provocations, their mutual relations will be correct and irreproachable.»

Von Seydlitz placed the responsibility, not only for the inevitable occupation but for the war itself, squarely on Hitler and the German people by saying:

«We can blame no one but ourselves, however, hard and bitter it may seem to us, and we must thank Hitler for this, and those supporters who in the past helped him to power, and still stand behind him today.»

«Up to now,» he said, «the German people have been incapable of establishing order in their own house. They have been unable to put a stop to the activities of war criminals in Germany. They did not muster sufficient will power and strength to create a democratic government.»

The German general reassured the German people that «according to the declarations of responsible statesmen of the Allied powers, the aims of the occupation forces are: first, the destruction of the National Socialist regime, and, second, the creation of an unimpeachable, truly democratic government which will guarantee that there will be no repetition of Germany's aggression.» (OWI)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 9 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Very heavy and continued rain has again seriously restricted large-scale operations all along the front.

Despite the adverse weather conditions, troops of the 8th Army have driven off determined enemy counter-attacks on Monte Farneto, have advanced across the Fiumicino River, and have cleared the enemy from Montigallo and Monte Gattona.

American troops of the 5th Army have cleared the enemy from Barbarolo and Monte Castellaro, and have advanced nearly two miles on the Bologna road. Elsewhere, positions remain virtually unchanged.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Operations yesterday were greatly restricted by bad weather, which forced the cancellation of most missions.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the North Adriatic and Gulf of Genoa, while other aircraft attacked enemy communications and other military objectives in Albania.

MAAF flew approximately 100 sorties. Three of our aircraft are missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 8 — Today's communique:

Our forces have attacked north and northeast of Nancy, and have liberated the town of Moivrons Ajoncourt, Jandelaincourt, and Chenicourt.

In the Vosges foothills, we have taken prisoners and gained more ground against stubborn resistance around Le Thillot. The village of Ramonchant was taken after hard fighting.

Fighter-bombers attacked troops and gun positions yesterday. In addition, locomotives, rail cars, and airfields were strafed and rails cut in western Germany. Three enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground.

Medium and light bombers attacked railway bridges at Bad Munster, Euskirchen, and Ahrweiler railway junction at Nohfelden, and enemy strongpoints at Metz Julich and Boal. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, October 9 — Tonight's communique:

During October 9 on the Island Saaremaa (Osel), our troops occupied in fighting over 50 populated localities, including Unde, Metse, Tiriste, Kurevere, Ibinicoma, Pedrupe, Parala, Lunanda, Tomalaushe, Metallushe, Tehumarvi, and Udobe.

In the direction of Riga, our troops fought advance engagements, in the course of which they occupied the following populated localities: Iedkazh, Jaunzemenyeke, Taltine, Grigorgord, Reypak, Launsk, Rusenezh, and Kligo, and the railway station Vangazhi.

West and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops, continuing their offensive, occupied in fighting over 300 populated localities, including the town of Jurbarkas (Jurburg), Tervay, Parchipay, Tarvare, Altdpiny, Platelbay, Ulli, Perhaitse, 20 kilometers east of Memel, Brozhe, Bivirzhai, Ubrany, Pourzhe, Dolori, Telkovini, Saplitse, and Glivri, and the railway stations of Taivornezh, Bataklai, and Udetepray.

On the right bank of the River Narev, south of Pultusku, our troops successfully beat back all enemy infantry and tank attacks. In fighting during October 8, in this area, 64 German tanks were damaged or destroyed.

In northern Transylvania, west and southwest of Regen, our troops, operating jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting the populated localities of Sintjol, Parago, Erchel, Kala, Moyaka, Simpenitse, Mezekialosh, Tergelye, Huer, Kutchosh, Titelnik, and Panesh-Berg.

On the Hungarian territory west of Debrecen, our troops, continuing their offensive, captured the towns and large railway stations of Nagyuvar, Puspokladany, Deravanya, Turkeve, Karcag, and Hajduszovat, 10 kilometers southwest of Debrecen, and also occupied in fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Kaba, Barand, Rakoshtsi, and Echel, and the railway stations of Kaba, Patsoechiek, Senye Kendyel, Marque, and Isateldvak.

In the airfields in the areas of Nagyuvar and Rakoshtsi, our troops seized 140 German planes.

During October 8, our troops captured 4,220 German and Hungarian officers and men. Altogether, in three days of battle, they captured 8,220 German and Hungarian officers and men.

In Yugoslavia, west of Velika-Kikinda, our troops forced the River Tisa and captured, on its western bank, the town and railway junction of Senta; the town and railway junction of Stari-Becej; and also occupied the large populated localities of Stara-Kanjiza, Ada, and Mol.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 8, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 202 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 26 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 9 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Very heavy and continued rain has again seriously restricted large-scale operations all along the front.

Despite the adverse weather conditions, troops of the 8th Army have driven off determined enemy counter-attacks on Monte Farneto, have advanced across the Fiumicino River, and have cleared the enemy from Montilgallo and Monte Gallona.

American troops of the 5th Army have cleared the enemy from Barbarolo and Monte Castellazi, and have advanced nearly two miles on the Bologna road. Elsewhere positions remain virtually unchanged.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Operations yesterday were greatly restricted by bad weather, which forced the cancellation of most missions.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the North Adriatic and Gulf of Genoa, while other aircraft attacked enemy communications and other military objectives in Albania.

MAAF flew approximately 100 sorties. Three of our aircraft are missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 9 — Today's communique:

In an advance around the Scheldt Estuary, our troops north of Antwerp have freed Hoogerheide and Calmpthout.

To the south of the estuary, there has been very heavy fighting in the bridgehead over the Leopold Canal.

On the west side of our salient there was some local fighting east of Hertigenbosch.

Allied forces have closed the gap northeast of Aachen to about four miles.

Troops moving from the north have gained about a mile southwest and southeast of Osbet, and units which advanced northwards on Sunday morning after preliminary air bombardment advanced 3,000 yards to Verlautenheide three miles northeast of Aachen, and to a hill a half-mile east of Hauren.

North of this area, our forces have overcome stubborn enemy resistance to seize Oidtweiler, 1 1/2 miles northwest of Alsdorf, which was captured earlier.

Throughout the Aachen sector we are encountering considerable enemy artillery, small arms, and machine-gun fire.

Southwest of Hertgen we renewed our advance in rugged terrain meeting stubborn opposition from German field defenses. An enemy counter-attack was repulsed.

In the Metz sector we cleared the enemy from the northern half of Malroy les Metz. Hard fighting continues in Fort Driant.

In the direction of Riga, our troops fought advance engagements, in the course of which they occupied the following populated localities: Ieulkezh, Jaunzemenyeke, Taltine, Grigorgord, Reypak, Laimaki, Rusenezh, and Kluge, and the railway station Vangazhi.

West and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), our troops, continuing their offensive, occupied in fighting over 300 populated localities, including the town of Jurbarkas (Jurburg), Tervay, Perchipay, Tervare, Altelpiay, Plateliay, Ulli, Pezhaitse, 26 kilometers east of Memel, Brozhe, Bivarzhai, Ubrany, Poorzhe, Polurs, Telkoviai, Sapiitse, and Gavri, and the railway stations of Tauvornezh, Butaikiai, and Udeteptiay.

On the right bank of the River Narev, south of Poltusku, our troops successfully beat back all enemy infantry and tank attacks. In fighting during October 8, in this area, 94 German tanks were damaged or destroyed.

In northern Transylvania, west and southwest of Regen, our troops, operating jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting the populated localities of Santal, Porago, Erchel, Kala, Moysha, Sinpeatse, Mezekiaiosh, Tergelye, Huer, Karchosh, Tilelnik, and Panezh-Bergi.

On the Hungarian territory west of Debrecen, our troops, continuing their offensive, captured the towns and large railway stations of Nagyuvar, Puspokladany, Derevarea, Turkeve, Karcag, and Hajduszovat, 18 kilometers southwest of Debrecen, and also occupied in fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Kabo, Barand, Itakoshtsi, and Echet, and the railway stations of Kala, Putsochek, Senye, Kendyel, Marque, and Isatoldvak.

In the airfields in the areas of Nagyuvar and Rukoshtsi, our troops seized 140 German planes.

During October 8, our troops captured 4,220 German and Hungarian officers and men. Altogether, in three days of battle, they captured 8,220 German and Hungarian officers and men.

In Yugoslavia, west of Velika-Kikinda, our troops forced the River Tisa and captured, on its western bank, the town and railway junction of Senta, the town and railway junction of Stari-Becej; and also occupied the large populated localities of Stara-Kanjiza, Ada, and Mol.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 8, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 202 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 26 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 9 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Following a lively engagement, Patriots of the "Green Flames" Brigade liberated Ponte di Legno, in Brescia Province, thus cutting one of the enemy's main roads through the Canonica Valley.

In the nearby hamlet of Pezzo, Patriots also attacked German troops preparing fortifications. The entire enemy garrison at Borno was captured, and attacks carried out by reinforcements which tried to relieve it were repulsed. German losses in this area were heavy. Three more Patriot groups surrounded the Fascist garrison at Bienno, also in Brescia Province, and captured 21 prisoners and considerable arms and ammunition.

Other losses were inflicted on the enemy at Capo di Ponte in the Canonica Valley, where clashes are occurring continuously. Patriots stopped a train near Niardo on September 22 and took prisoner a score of Nazi-Fascists. Sabotage activities were carried out against enemy fortified positions in this region between September 19 and 21.

Attacks by Patriots are continuing against the enemy's rear in the Aemilia region. Many tanks and armored cars were damaged or immobilized in the Cortemaggiore, Fiorenzuola, and Cadeo sector, in the Province of Piacenza.

Patriots offered strenuous resistance to the German offensive against Ligonchio, in Reggio Emilia Province, and the offensive was resumed by the enemy only after two days of bitter clashes.

The Fascist garrison at Ciano d'Enza was compelled to withdraw from the village after it had suffered heavy losses. A number of motor vehicles were destroyed on the road north of Felina.

Many clashes are taking place in the vicinity of Bologna between Patriots and Nazi-Fascists, and skirmishes are taking place in the streets of the city itself. Some localities in the province are controlled by Patriots. At Budrio, near Bologna, bitter fighting has taken place. The rail network around Bologna is almost completely paralyzed.

The Germans are using air power in their attempt to eliminate Patriot activity in the Bologna area. Recent fighting in the Bologna area has cost the Germans 400 men.

On September 25, Patriots ambushed 15 transports carrying Fascists to Gavello, in Turin Province, where they were to carry out requisitions, and dispersed them after a sharp battle. The trucks were escorted by four tanks and two armored cars. The enemy lost about 20 men in dead and wounded.

The Frejus Tunnel was blocked by a mine explosion. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 9 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

On the western front, yesterday, the enemy attacks were extended to other sectors of the front.

On the Belgian-Dutch borders and in central Holland the battle in the Geilenkirchen-Stolberg sector is growing in fierceness, while the local fighting continues.

Enemy tank units aiming at encircling Aix la Chapelle on both sides were stopped in extremely grim fighting.

North of Nancy, grim fighting is in progress at a front bulge which the enemy has been fiercely attacking since yesterday morning.

On both sides of Remiremont, the fighting with American and French infantry, as well as tanks, continues with undiminished fury.

Dunkirk again was fiercely shelled by the enemy artillery. At St. Nazaire, Lorient, and the approaches to La Rochelle, enemy attacks were frustrated.

Security vessels of the Navy sank a British motor assault boat off the Dutch coast. A German vessel was lost in the course of further encounters.

London continues to be held under harassing fire with «V-1.»

Italy:

In central Italy, the German troops which for many days have been engaged in grim fighting south of Bologna, achieved another great defensive success. At some points the enemy succeeded in penetrating our forward lines at the expense of heavy losses, but was beaten back or stopped in immediate counter-attacks.

In the Adriatic coastal sector, the grim fighting continued, moving more toward the high ground west of the Adriatic coast.

Eastern Front:

In the Banat and in Serbia, south of the Danube, the stubborn resistance of our troops and counter-attacks of German counter-attacks are in progress with good success. Thus far, 25 tanks were destroyed.

German bombers and fighter-bombers struck at enemy spearheads and Bolshevist supplies with good success.

On the pass roads of the Forest Carpathians, German and Hungarian troops repelled Bolshevist attacks, partly in counter thrusts.

Proceeding from their Vistula bridgeheads southeast of Warka and north of Sieroc, the Soviets attacked unsuccessfully. Between Memel and the Windau, our troops are engaged in a grim battle with strong enemy forces.

North of the Duena, the enemy lost 25 tanks in unsuccessful attacks on the Riga bridgehead.

In Oesel, the Sworbe Peninsula was held in face of strong enemy pressure.

In Finland, our troops retreated northward from the Torneo sector. At the line of strongpoints on the Soviet-Finnish border, southwest of Murmansk, the strong enemy attacks which were reported yesterday were arrested.

Bombers joined in the ground fighting, despite poor weather conditions. The accompanying fighters brought down 14 Soviet planes without losses.

The Anglo-Americans continued their terror on the civilians in western and southwestern Germany by low-level attacks. Localities and passenger trains particularly were attacked with bombs and guns. Twelve fighter-bombers were brought down. (Radio Berlin)

AMERICANS DRIVE TO CLOSE AACHEN GAP
THIRD ARMY LAUNCHES NEW OFFENSIVE

SHAEF, October 8 — The American 1st Army launched a new assault east of Aachen in a northwest direction today to link with American troops holding the bridgehead through the Siegfried Line between Mechlern and Gelsenkirchen. The gap is now only four miles wide, and the German garrison of 1500 SS troops inside Aachen is almost sealed off as American guns cover the gap from commanding positions.

Verlautenheide, three miles northeast of Aachen in the Eilendorf area, was taken, and American troops are meeting still resistance in rolling, difficult terrain studded with German mortars, dug-in guns, machine-gun nests and well-placed pillboxes. The attack was preceded by a heavy artillery barrage.

To the north, American troops are operating east of Alsdorf. Drying winds have made the ground fit for tanks again and American armor is swinging into action to exploit this new Siegfried Line breach, last reported to be six miles square. Over 2,500 prisoners have been taken since

The only escape road left open is by ferry to the north and this area is under constant attack by Allied aircraft.

The sea dikes on Walcheren Island were hit again by RAF Lancasters, opening eight new breaches east and west of Flushing. Large areas of the island are now under water and several heavy German batteries have been flooded.

A local German attack north of Nijmegen was repulsed by American airborne troops operating with the British 2nd Army. The Germans are reinforcing their positions in the Arnhem area, bringing in elements of two panzer divisions not previously identified there.

The Germans continued to send planes over the Netherlands corridor and antipersonnel bombs were dropped in the Grave area. Harassing action was attempted near Eindhoven. (OWI-Reuter)

FIRES STILL BURN IN REICH
AFTER WARS BIGGEST AIR ASSAULT

LONDON, October 8 — Fires were still burning today at a score of important war plants in Germany after yesterday's tremendous air blows by more than 5,000 Allied planes from bases in Britain, France and Italy, ranging over the Reich from the Baltic to Austria and from the Ruhr to Poland.

About 7,500 sorties were flown during the day which saw the most devastating co-ordinated assault of the war on German-occupied territory.

Yesterday's blows came as a climax to 60 hours of bombing, in which an estimated 30,000 tons of bombs fell on German oil plants, airplane factories, explosives plants, and communications points, as well as road, rail and river transportation.

Two of Germany's largest tank producing plants were heavily hit and seriously damaged by the American heavies, according to photographs taken during the bombing. Liberators attacking Kassel's Henschel plant, which is believed to manufacture nearly all of Germany's heavy Tiger tanks, covered every building but one with high explosives and incendiaries. At Magdeburg-Fuchan they left the whole big Krupp Mark VI tank works burning, and hit 21 out of 23 large buildings.

The day's attacks cost the 8th USAAF 51 bombers and 15 fighters out of a force of 1400 escorted bombers, while the RAF lost seven bombers. The U. S. heavies shot down 43 enemy aircraft, including four jet-propelled fighters, and destroyed 16 other planes on the ground.

Eight American Flying Fortresses made forced landings or crashed in southern Sweden yesterday. Six airmen were killed and ten injured.

One of the most sensational of RAF operations yesterday was a low-level attack on the big Kembs Dam on the French side of the Rhine 8½ miles from Basle, and ten miles southeast of Mulhouse. Thirteen fighter-escorted Lancasters dropped 12,000-pound bombs on the sluices to trap German forces and wipe out a strategic enemy weapon. The Germans were believed to be planning to destroy the dam and loose the water to halt an advance across the Rhine.

Half an hour later a Mosquito pilot on reconnaissance saw two of the charges explode and water surge through

Over 2,000 prisoners have been taken since the attack began yesterday morning.

Infantry and armor of the American 3rd Army today launched an offensive on a 20 mile front between Nancy and Metz. They were supported by a heavy artillery barrage and covered by artificial fog. Gains of six miles have been made at some points and Ajoncourt, 12 miles southeast of Pont a Mousson has been captured.

The Germans are counter-attacking along the whole 7th Army front northeast of Belfort. One attack made with tanks and heavy artillery northeast of Epinal cost the Germans considerable losses before it was repelled.

The Germans counter-attacked at Fort Driant in the Metz area and wiped out half the American gain of yesterday. Concealed in pillboxes, the Germans permit the troops to advance, then spray them with machine-gun fire from behind.

The Canadian 1st Army bridgehead over the Leopold Canal has been strengthened but Allied troops are continuing to fall back under heavy German mortar fire. Last night German patrols crossed the canal and penetrated Canadian positions on the south bank. The position of the Allied bridgehead is approaching a critical stage.

To the east, Canadian troops have cut the main German escape road from the islands north of the Schelde Estuary after a two-mile advance north of Hoogerheide [illegible] errands corridor and [illegible] in the Grave area. Harassing action was attempted near Eindhoven. (OWI-Reuter)

Eight separate breaches were made in the sea dyke on the southern edge of the island of Walcheren in yesterday's second attack by RAF Lancasters. The breaches are on each side of Flushing, and by yesterday evening sea water had reached half a mile inland and had surrounded a large fort in German hands.

LATE BULLETIN

RUSSIANS BOMB BRESLAU

MOSCOW, October 8 — Long-range Russian aircraft carried out a massive raid on Breslau, Germany, last night, Radio Moscow announced. Fires broke out at the railway junction, and complete trains and warehouses were left burning. Explosions and fires were observed to the south of Breslau in gas and metallurgic plants. The fires could be seen for more than 120 miles by returning Russian pilots. (Moscow Radio)

Allied Air Assault Continues

The Allied assault on German targets continued today, despite heavy fog over western Europe with medium, light and fighter-bombers attacking German communications and supply depots. Switching from yesterday's record strategical bombing to tactical offense, more than 300 9th USAAF Marauders and Havocs raked German communications and supply depots in the Rhineland and Ruhr servicing the German armies opposing American forces.

Fighter-bombers flew their way through more than 200 German fighters to bomb and strafe airfields, military positions, and water and rail transport in the Rhine valley and from Saarbrucken to Duesseldorf.

The scope of the 2nd TAF in yesterday's operations northeast of Arnhem was 16 locomotives destroyed or damaged, and 230 rail trucks destroyed with a further 110 damaged.

Wellingtons bombed five E-boats off The Hague, and a group of vessels off Den Helder.

The Germans shot more flying bombs into southern England last night for the third consecutive night, causing some damage and casualties. (Reuter-OWI)

CRUCIAL STAGE REACHED ON WESTERN FRONT

LONDON, October 8 — General George C. Marshall's conference with General Eisenhower and his staff indicates that the crucial stage has now been reached on the western front, the Sunday Observer's Paris correspondent stated in a dispatch to day.

The question underlying their discussions, the correspondent said, is whether the battle of Germany can be won this autumn, and if not, what alterations in Allied strategic plans will be necessary.

The dispatch said:

"The problem of the western front at present is whether the Normandy ogle can be repeated. Now as then, the Allies' principal task is to overcome communications handicaps in building up sufficiently strong forces to crash German defenses. In Normandy, the main obstacle was the Channel and the absence of port facilities.

"The major problem now is long land communications. In Normandy the Allies had the advantage of interior lines. The Germans now have this advantage.

"So far Allied strategy has been the opposite of the plan which succeeded so well in Normandy. Instead of concentrating Allied strength at one or two points, dispersal seems to be the plan. Attacks have been scattered all the way from Antwerp across Holland, and down through Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and France to Belfort.

"Whether General Marshall's talks with General Eisenhower will lead to a reversal of this strategy and return to the system of one or two concentrated drives, only time and the future course of battle will tell." (Reuter)

GERMAN AGENT HANGED IN FRANCE

PARIS, October 8 — A German agent was hanged last night after being convicted by U. S. Army military commission in accordance with the rules of war, it was announced here today.

The agent, a soldier in the German Army, was found in civilian clothes behind Allied lines on August 10, by [illegible] U. S. 2nd Armored Division. (OWI) any German troops were caught in the enveloping movement.

The nearest American forces, directly south of Bologna, were located today as having reached the southern slopes of Monte Castellazi, little over a mile and a half North of Loiano, and not quite a mile west of the Florence-Bologna road. This point is 12-1/2 miles airline from the southern outskirts of Bologna. By actual road miles through the twisting Apennine defiles, the distance is nearly nine miles greater.

Three miles to the east of the American forces at Monte Castellazi, other American infantrymen reached the village of Castelnuovo, flanking the Bologna highway to the east; west of Monte Castellazi, American forces were reported to have captured the hamlet of Guiletto. The left flank of the American advance, which swung northwest to cut the Prato-Bologna road some seven miles to the west of the main approach route, was located at the village of San Biagio, on the Setta River, 15 miles southwest of Bologna.

On the extreme right flank, American troops had thrust from Monte Binele to near Poggio del Falchetto, six miles north of Castel del Rio, and only ten miles from Castel San Pietro and the Valley of the Po, along the Sillaro River Valley.

On the coastal sector of the 5th Army front, elements of the 92nd Infantry Division, an American Negro unit, captured the two important features of Monte Costa and Monte Canala, some nine miles north of Viareggio and three to four miles in from the Ligurian seacoast.

8th Army Crosses Fiumicino

Eighth Army forces yesterday took advantage of a slight drop in the upper stretches of the flooded Fiumicino River to cross the deep-banked stream and push up to 1,500 yards westward to capture key Monte Farneto, 15 miles west of Rimini. In the lower reaches of the swift running stream, flooded by unseasonable heavy rains, German forces entrenched on the west bank reacted sharply to all attempts at passage by Allied patrol forces. One German patrol force that crossed the stream was encircled by an 8th Army patrol and then driven in toward the Allied positions where many of its number were taken prisoner. (PRO)

DAF FIGHTER-BOMBERS HIT CESENA AREA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 8 — From dawn until dusk yesterday, fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force maintained a 15-minute-interval schedule to bomb enemy troops concentrations and gun positions south and southeast of the town of Cesena, on the Rimini-Bologna highway near where 8th Army troops are thrusting along the south-eastern edge of the Valley of the Po.

The attacks, made against German forces forming up for counter-attack or concentrating in various villages at the fringe of the mountains rimming the southern edge of the Po Plain, represented the most intensive operation of the close-support aircraft within the past two weeks. Almost 300 sorties were flown by the Kittyhawk and Thunderbolt planes. (PRO)

BRITISH TROOPS NEAR OUTSKIRTS OF CORINTH

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 8 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic yesterday were nearing the outskirts of Corinth, chief city of the Peloponnesian Peninsula, in the latest phase of a campaign that has liberated nearly one-third of Greece in no less than two weeks.

A special communique of the Balkan Air Force, which has coordinated the air, land and sea forces employed in the operations, declared today that the port of Nauplion, at the head of the Gulf of Nauplia and one of the small [illegible] had sur-group of vessels on the Rhine.

The Germans shot more flying bombs into southern England last night, for the third consecutive night, causing some damage and casualties. (Reuter-OWI)

Now as then, the Allies' principal task is to overcome communications handicaps in building up sufficiently strong forces to crash German defenses. In Normandy, the main obstacle was the Channel and the absence of port facilities.

"The major problem now is long land communications. In Normandy the Allies had the advantage of interior lines. The Germans now have this advantage.

"So far Allied strategy has been the opposite of the plan which succeeded so well in Normandy. Instead of concentrating Allied strength at one or two points, dispersal seems to be the plan. Attacks have been scattered all the way from Antwerp across Holland, and down through Germany, Belgium, Luxembourg and France to Belfort.

"Whether General Marshall's talks with General Eisenhower will lead to a reversal of this strategy and return to the system of one or two concentrated drives, only time and the future course of battle will tell." (Reuter)

GERMAN AGENT HANGED IN FRANCE

PARIS, October 8 — A German agent was hanged last night after being convicted by U. S. Army military commission in accordance with the rules of war, it was announced here today.

The agent, a soldier in the German Army, was found in civilian clothes behind Allied lines on August 10, by troops of the U. S. 2nd Armored Division. (OWI)

5TH ARMY WIDENS ADVANCE FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 8 — American forces of the 5th Army, pressing forward in wintry rains and mist, yesterday executed a surprise left wheel to widen to 20 miles their advance front south of Bologna, and to cut the Prato-Bologna road at a point five miles to the north of the South African forces on their left flank, it was announced here today.

The American advance, now within little over 12 miles of Bologna at its closest point, is moving northward toward the Valley of the Po astride three main roads leading along the Setta, the Savena and the Idice River Valleys.

No indication was given in official reports today whether the surprise move had trapped any sizeable German forces along the five miles stretch southward to Lagaro, occupied by South African elements in their advance.

Further west, South African forces of the 5th Army appeared to be executing a similar maneuver, thrusting northwestward to threaten the Prato-Bologna road along the Reno River Valley at a point some 23 miles southwest of Bologna, while other 5th Army forces pushed northward along the road in the vicinity of Cabello, six miles to the south. Here again official reports gave no indication whether of the 92nd Infantry Division, have captured the two important features of Monte Costa and Monte Casola, some nine miles north of Viareggio and three to four miles in from the Ligurian seacoast.

Eighth Army forces yesterday took advantage of a slight drop in the upper stretches of the flooded Fiumicino River to cross the steep-banked stream and push up to 1,500 yards westward to capture key Monte Farneto, 13 miles west of Rimini. In the lower reaches of the swift running stream, flooded by unseasonable heavy rains, German forces entrenched on the west bank reacted sharply to all attempts at passage by Allied patrol forces. One German patrol force that crossed the stream was encircled by an 8th Army patrol and then driven in toward the Allied positions where many of its number were taken prisoner. (PRO)

DAF FIGHTER-BOMBERS HIT CESENA AREA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 8 — From dawn until dusk yesterday, fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force maintained a 15-minute-interval schedule to bomb enemy troops concentrations and gun positions south and southeast of the town of Cesena, on the Rimini-Bologna highway near where 8th Army troops are thrusting along the south-eastern edge of the Valley of the Po.

The attacks, made against German forces forming up for counter-attack or concentrating in various villages at the fringe of the mountains rimming the southern edge of the Po Plain, represented the most intensive operation of the close-support aircraft within the past two weeks. Almost 300 sorties were flown by the Kittyhawk and Thunderbolt planes. (PRO)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 8 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic yesterday were nearing the outskirts of Corinth, chief city of the Peloponnesian Peninsula, in the latest phase of a campaign that has liberated nearly one-third of Greece in less than two weeks.

A special communique of the Balkan Air Force, which has coordinated the air, land and sea forces employed in the operations, declared today that the port of Nauplion, at the head of the Gulf of Nauplia and one of the small ports on the southern fringes of the peninsula, had surrendered.

No details were contained in today's announcements about the action in either the Corinth or the Nauplion areas. The forces approaching Corinth were not pin pointed at any particular spot, nor was the direction from which they were pressing on toward this chief port indicated. British forces were last reported at Itea on October 5, a Gulf of Corinth harbor some 90 miles distant from Corinth along a winding coast road.

Sink Enemy Destroyer

In naval action in the Aegean, the British destroyer Termagant met and engaged an enemy force near the entrance to the Gulf of Salonika on the night of October 07, and sank one enemy destroyer and seriously damaged a second of the hostile flotilla. Mine-sweepers of the Royal Navy were also operating among the Aegean Islands, sweeping enemy minefields to allow larger craft to penetrate into these waters.

On the Adriatic shores of Greece, British Landing Craft Guns, heavily-armed shore assault craft, bombarded German positions on the mainland just north of Corfu. Minesweepers were active among the southern Dalmatian Islands.

25 German Divisions «Pinned Down» in Balkans

It was revealed today that 25 German divisions have been «pinned down» in the Balkans during the past month, with at least 14 of them on or near the Adriatic coast or on the outlying islands.

Details were released today for the first time on the exact nature of the Land Forces Adriatic engaged against these enemy forces now in Greece and Albania. «Small as compared with the huge armies fighting elsewhere,» the statement said that the force «has nevertheless harried the enemy on a front measured from the Baltic to the Black Sea or big as the Russian.»

The recent central Dalmatian Islands battle spread over an area half the extent of the Goth Line, the report said.

What it lacks in size, the announcement said, the Land Force Adriatic makes up in training, specialisation and versatility of its elements. Besides the normal infantry and support units, there are several highly-specialised regiments whose personnel is probably unique in the British Army as being equally expert on skis, in small sea-going craft and with parachutes.

Surprise has played the principle role in the successful encounters of these small forces with the larger enemy garrisoning forces many of which are divisions of the highest order and have indicated a determined intent to retain their hold on the Balkan conquered nations. To achieve this surprise, assault troops have landed in small coves difficult to approach, or even on rocky cliff shores themselves. They have scaled precipitous cliff faces, and pushed inland over boulder strewn countryside.

These small, hard-striking forces have leaned heavily upon the cooperation and aid of the Partisans wherever they land. Partisan forces are often incorporated into the initial assault troops as a result of joint planning and command, it was said.

Once launched into action, the assault forces are necessarily self-supporting. The problems imposed by this complete independence of operation over a considerable period of time are enormous. Just the evacuation of rare of wounded, in an area where transport over almost vertical mountain country is being undertaken, taxes all the forces' resources and ingenuity. (PIB)

RED ARMY CAPTURES ZAGUBICA SAYS TITO'S HQ

LONDON, October 8 — Last night's communique from the headquarters of Marshal Tito said that in East Serbia, units of the Red Army, thrusting toward the Morava river, captured Zagubica, while German garrisons in Dolnji, Milanovac and Zajecar were completely encircled and being annihilated.

In the Leskovac-Nis sector, Partisan units made strong attacks from the east and south, Tito announced. In Slavonia, near Topola, a German column was routed.

In Dalmatia, Biograd on sea has been liberated. In Lika, the town of Sincka Kula was captured after a short battle, and one Ustashi battalion was routed.

In Slavonia, after two days of fierce battle, Yugoslav units captured Virovitica and reached the Hungarian frontier along a stretch of 18 miles, Tito said. In Bosnia, in the Banjaluka sector, fierce fighting continues. (OWI-Reuter)

RUSSIAN LITHUANIAN OFFENSIVE MAKES BIG GAINS

MOSCOW, October 8 — Russian forces crashing down through Lithuania toward the frontiers of East Prussia have advanced more than 62 miles in four days.

This crushing break-through of German northern defenses was revealed tonight in an order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin.

Kedainy, southwest of Dotnuva, along behind German and Magyar units defending the eastern regions of Hungary.

The Soviet communique said Russian forces captured the important rail and road junction town of Koreladany, on the route of the Orient Express to Budapest. More than 300 towns and villages in the area have been overrun. Red Army reports said all enemy attempts to hold out along the many canals bisecting the plains in the Koreladany region were fruitless.

Yugoslav communiques declared that Russian and Yugoslav troops have begun the final assault on the city of Belgrade. The German rail line between the Yugoslav capital and Zagreb was said to have been cut, thus completely breaking all but air communications for the German garrison within the beleaguered capital.

Belgrade is now isolated, said a Yugoslav broadcast — with Russian and Yugoslav troops surrounding the city.

On the island of Saaremaa, off the Estonian coast, the Russian offensive continued, with the last Germans being pushed to the far northern area. At Riga, Soviet dispatches said, the bitter fight for the Latvian capital was not yet over. (Reuter)

BITTER FIGHTING BETWEEN FINNS AND GERMANS

STOCKHOLM, October 8 — Bitter fighting continues between Finns and Germans on the islands of the River Tornea, forming the Finnish-Swedish frontier, said British United Press today. (PW)

KEMI FALLS

LONDON, October 8 — Finnish troops have forced the Germans to retreat from Kemi, port town on the Gulf of Bothnia near the Swedish border, the Finnish communique announced. Finnish units have advanced through the town, and heavy fighting is in progress.

The Germans are resisting strongly east of Tornio, to the northwest of Kemi, and their attempts to break through northeast of Tornio have been repelled.

The Finnish radio reported tonight that the Germans had declared martial law in northern Finland and that any Finns who commit acts of sabotage will be tried by a German court martial and sentenced to death. (OWI)

OVER 12,000 JAPS KILLED ON PALAUS

PEARL HARBOR, October 8 — United States Marines and soldiers invading the Palaus Islands have killed 12,211 Japanese and captured 224 since the day of the landings, September 15, the Navy announced today.

On the air-base island of Peleliu 11,083 Japanese have been slain and 214 captured, but the enemy still clings to one pocket of resistance at Umorbrogol mountain.

However, today's communique said that American tanks and artillery had reduced that pocket in action yesterday.

The other 1128 Japanese slain and 10 captured fell victim to the U.S. forces on Angaur, south of Peleliu in the Palaus.

Operating from Peleliu on Friday, Marine Corsair planes ranged north in the Palaus to the big island of Babelthaup, damaging 16 supply dumps, two buildings and 28 trucks, and strafing three boats and seven barges.

Air action was continued against the Kuriles, north of Japan.

Today's Southwest Pacific communique said that medium and dive-bombers in strength dropped 103 tons of bombs on the Japanese defense and supply facilities in the Halmahera area. A raid was also reported on the Macassar docks, Kendari airdrome in the Celebes, Amboin township

RED ARMY CAPTURES ZAGUBICA SAYS TITO'S HQ

LONDON, October 8 — Last night's communique from the headquarters of Marshal Tito said that in East Serbia units of the Red Army, thrusting toward the Morava river, captured Zagubica, while German garrisons in Donja, Mislodjevac and Zajecar were completely encircled and being annihilated.

In the Leskovac-Nis sector, Partisan units made strong attacks from the east and south, Tito announced. In Sumadija, near Topola, a German column was routed.

In Dalmatia, Biograd on sea has been liberated. In Lika, the town of Sinska Kula was captured after a short battle, and one Ustasha battalion was routed.

RUSSIAN LITHUANIAN OFFENSIVE MAKES BIG GAINS

MOSCOW, October 8 — Russian forces crashing down through Lithuania toward the frontiers of East Prussia have advanced more than 62 miles in four days.

This crushing break-through of German northern defenses was revealed tonight in an order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin.

The order, addressed to General Bagramyan's troops of the First Baltic Front, said German defenses had been smashed over a 175-mile front and that more than 2,000 small towns and villages had been taken.

American press service dispatches sent from here said that Russian troops had reached within 15 miles of the East Prussian frontier late today.

The drive, which was begun west of Shavli by troops of the 1st and 3rd Baltic Fronts, was said to be aimed at Memel and Tilsit.

Advance elements of General Bagramyan's forces were said to be within 56 miles of the East Prussian rail junction city of Tilsit, and within 40 miles of the German-held Lithuanian city of Memel, on the Baltic coast.

On the central salient of the long Russo-German front, Soviet dispatches said tonight that wedges had been driven into German defenses north of Warsaw, and that the Red Army has gained ground on the west bank of the Narew River.

Reuter said large battles were raging in the area.

Other dispatches said the Russians driving through Hungary had crossed the Koros River, and were advancing less than 70 miles from Budapest.

Their forward elements were said to be less than 30 miles from the important rail junctions of Kurcag and Puspok-

"The 7th Fleet's 'Lone Wolf' air raiders — the pilots of the Black Cats and Liberators who are courageously collecting a heavy toll of Japanese shipping off the Philippines — were singled out for praise today by General MacArthur.

JAPS HALTED IN CHINA DRIVES

CHUNGKING, October 8 — The Chinese High Command said tonight that the Japanese offensives in Fukien and Kwangsi provinces have been stopped.

The Jap column moving westward from Wuchow on the Kwangsi capital city of Kweilin has been forced to retreat under intense Chinese pressure.

The enemy, said the Chinese High Command, suffered considerable losses.

The second strong Jap column moving on Kweilin has been stopped in the face of bitter resistance, 12 miles west of Hingan, on the Hunan-Kwangsi railway.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Around the Fukien Province harbor of Foochow, Jap troops were dislodged yesterday from a large area at the mouth of the Min Kiang River, and were forced to retreat to the south.

Other Jap forces were held to a standstill in the northwest suburbs of the Foochow city — the last major harbor still in Chinese hands.

General Joseph Stilwell's 14th USAAF supported Chinese ground forces in the counter-attack near Wuchow, destroying 150 Jap cavalrymen in a single strafing assault on enemy columns.

Other American aircraft destroyed 10 river boats, damaged 40 others, and started new fires in Pingnam, on the West River. Airfields at Canton, Samshui and Wuchow were also struck. Bombing and strafing of Jap supply lines north of Kweilin continued.

Stilwell's headquarters said the 14th USAAF sank 110,000 tons of Japanese shipping during September, in attacks off the coast of China and on Jap-held harbors along the coast.

A Southeast Asia Command communique said tonight that Jap forces who had penetrated the India frontier in southeastern Bengal have begun to withdraw. The force was estimated at about 4,000 men.

At Tiddim, the battle for the Jap base in the Chin Hills continued, with Jap defenses under heavy air assault. Other aircraft of Lord Louis Mountbatten's command struck at Jap positions as far east as Bangkok, Thailand. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

MEDICAL SUPPLIES FOR CIVILIANS ARRIVE

ROME, October 8 — Six hundred tons of medical supplies exclusively for civilian use have arrived in liberated Italy, it was announced tonight by the Public Health Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission.

The medical supplies include a variety of items, such as 775,000 units of insulin, 18,000 pounds of ether, 8,000,000 sulfa tablets, 60,000 sulfa powder packets, 14,520 ampules of quinine and millions of atabrine tablets.

Turned over immediately to the Italian government, the medical supplies will be distributed throughout Liberated Italy by a national wholesale druggists' association, formed under the Government's auspices.

The quinine shipment is an exchange for unprocessed quinine found by the 5th Army in a warehouse at Salina di Volterra. Of the approximately 8,000 kilograms of quinine found by the 5th Army, 4,270 kilograms were turned over for immediate Italian use, including that by the Italian Army, while the other 3,726 kilograms were shipped to the United States for processing and use by Allied military and naval forces in the Pacific theatre.

In addition to the quinine, 16 million atabrine tablets have arrived to date in Italy for civilian use. Of this amount, nine million tablets have been distributed to Italian civilians or are in the hands of Italian health authorities. The remaining seven million tablets have been stockpiled for future use.

The use of the quinine and atabrine from the United States, the ACC reported, prevented a rise in malaria cases after the Germans had deliberately flooded 12,000 hectares of the Pontine bonifiche marsh reclamation area to increase the malaria potential among Italian civilians and Allied soldiers. Speedy action by ACC, AMG and Allied army medical corpsmen frustrated the German plans. The area as a sovereign nation. It is now a matter of seeing how the declaration will be applied, he said.

The Italian government, he added, should make more energetic use of the greater power invested in it.

In conclusion La Guardia said President Roosevelt is desirous of doing all that is compatible with military exigencies in order to give strength to the declaration. (OWI)

UNITED NATIONS

CHINESE ACCEPT DUMBARTON OAKS AGREEMENT

DUMBARTON OAKS, October 8 — When the Russian phase of the Dumbarton Oaks talks ended a week ago it was revealed that about a 90 per cent agreement had been reached — an agreement which remains as effective today, now that the Chinese have decided to accept the document drawn up in concurrence with the Russians.

The text of this document is expected to be released early next week, after which, according to the United States Chairman, Edward Stettinius, Jr., «the peace loving people of the world will have the opportunity to judge what we have accomplished here.»

Stettinius added that he was fully confident that the proposals agreed upon will meet the test of their scrutiny.

The other chairmen, Lord Halifax for the British, and Dr. Wellington Koo for the Chinese, shared his optimism and looked forward to an early conference representing all United Nations to agree upon a final formula.

Dr. Koo said at yesterday's final session, «I believe that this important series of conversations has accomplished its purpose.»

Lord Halifax said that, if the delegates had not solved all the issues, it «is because some of them require more prolonged, intense study than we have been able to give here, but a great deal has been accomplished. I can frankly say that when the suggestion was first made that these conversations should take place, I had no expectation that we should have been able to go so far at this stage.»

Stettinius said that warmakers destroy in days that which has taken generations to build and «I sincerely hope it may sometime be said that the men of peace who have sat around this table have in a few days reached agreement upon principles which strengthen the promise of security and peace for generations.»

Stettinius urged the four nations who have participated in the talks to call «in the not too distant future» a general conference for the establishment of the organization projected at Dumbarton Oaks. (OWI)

WENDELL WILLKIE DIES

WASHINGTON, October 8 — Wendell Lewis Willkie, lawyer and 1940 candidate for the United States Presidency, who died this morning in New York following a heart attack at the age of 52, was one of the most important and most publicized men in America.

He occupied no national position in the American political scene. The sale of his book «One World» has run to nearly 2,000,000 copies. He wrote it as the result of observations while acting as a personal emissary for President Roosevelt on all or four of the world's fighting fronts.

In 1919, he joined his father's village law firm of Elwood, Indiana specializing in cases of penniless clients. The last war interrupted his law career and he went to France

Speedy action by ACC, AMG and Allied army medical corpsmen frustrated the German plans. The area was partially drained and fully sprayed, and the medicine distributed before a serious increase in malaria cases could occur. Only one death from malaria resulted in this area.

In Sardinia, one of the world's worst malaria spots, ACC measures reduced the number of cases from 4,065 for the first six months of 1943 to 1,852 for the same period this year. Similar measures in Sassari Province cut malaria cases from 921, as reported in August, 1943, to only 167, for August, 1944.

The ACC also announced that Italian biological laboratories, established with Allied assistance, are prepared to take care of all needs in liberated Italy for anti-toxins, serums and vaccines. The three laboratories, set up under ACC direction, are at Palermo, Naples and Siena, the last being the largest and most recent addition. (PRO)

LA GUARDIA SPEAKS TO ITALIAN PEOPLE

NEW YORK, October 8 — Mayor Fiorello La Guardia spoke tonight to the Italian people over the Voice of America on the recent Roosevelt-Churchill joint statement regarding Italy.

La Guardia stated that the invitation extended to the Italian government to send diplomatic representatives to Washington and London signifies the recognition of Italy

WENDELL WILLKIE DIES

WASHINGTON, October 8 — Wendell Lewis Willkie, lawyer and 1940 candidate for the United States Presidency, who died this morning in New York following a heart attack at the age of 52, was one of the most important and most publicized men in America.

He occupied an unusual position in the American political scene. The sale of his book «One World» has run to nearly 2,000,000 copies. He wrote it as the result of observations while acting as a personal emissary for President Roosevelt on an air tour of the world's fighting fronts.

In 1913, he joined his father's village law firm at Elwood, Indiana specializing in cases of penniless clients. The last war interrupted his law career and he went to France as a captain of infantry.

After the armistice, he marched upward from small-town legal practice to New York City and corporation law. He later became president of the Commonwealth and Southern Utility Company, which held vast electric power franchises in Tennessee and other states.

By a U. S. Supreme Court decision, he lost a long fight to keep the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation operating as a private enterprise, and it was sold to the Government as part of the Tennessee Valley project.

But the legal battle focused national attention on Willkie and led to the nearly spontaneous decision of the Republican Party to name him as its Presidential candidate in 1940.

He was a ceaseless worker for the rights of the «little man» and defended supporters of unpopular causes when he thought an important principle was at stake.

In April of this year Willkie withdrew as candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination after defeat in the Wisconsin primary.

Leading the nation in tribute to the man who had been his political opponent in the presidential campaign of 1940, President Roosevelt said:

«The nation will long remember Wendell Willkie as a forthright American. Earnest, honest and whole-souled, he also had tremendous courage.

Former President Herbert Hoover said:

«His death deprives the nation of a great and deeply patriotic citizen. His colorful personality, his indomitable energy and his active mind have stirred national consideration and understanding of the difficult problems of our times. His passing will be a great loss in finding their solution.»

Governor Thomas E. Dewey of New York, Republican candidate for President, said:

«His passing is a loss not only to the Republican Party, whose presidential nominee he was in 1940, but to all of us — Americans of both parties who shared his faith in representative government and in his earnest hope for world peace.» (OWI)

UNRRA SEEKS EXPERIENCED RELIEF WORKERS

NEW YORK, October 8 — UNRRA will seek the aid of persons who have already had experience in relief work in liberated countries, Miss Craig McGeachy, UNRRA director of welfare, told the United States Foreign Policy Association yesterday.

«We shall want the assistance of people who have lived through the occupation in Norway, Holland or France to take part in relief in each other's countries,» she declared.

Miss McGeachy also disclosed that study had been made of the social welfare needs of mothers, their children, and unaccompanied children, as well as among misplaced person. An international group of psychologists — experienced in the social readaptation of prisoners of war — is now studying the social readaptation of displaced persons. (OWI)

FORM LEAGUE FOR INDEPENDENT ARAB COUNTRIES

LONDON, October 8 — Preliminary agreements have been reached for a league of independent Arab countries, the Egyptian Prime Minister, Mustapha El Nahas Pasha, announced today.

Its purpose will be to foster cooperation among them, and to safeguard their independence, the Prime Minister said.

This decision follows a fortnight's work by representatives of five countries: Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Trans-Jordan, who formed the preparatory committee for a general Arab congress to be held later. A protocol signed by these representatives proposes that the league should be governed by a council. Members of the league will agree not to resort to force in the settlement of disputes, and not to pursue foreign policies that would be harmful to the league as a whole or to individual members.

One part of the protocol says that Palestine constitutes one of the most important elements of the Arab countries, and the rights of the Arabs there could not be harmed without danger to the peace and stability of the Arab world as a whole. (PWB-FW)

HUNGARIANS TOLD TO DRIVE GERMANS OUT

LONDON, October 8 — Hungarian university students, workers and peasants were asked to drive the Germans out of Hungary, in an article appearing recently in a Hungarian underground newspaper. The article said:

«In the first world war, German politics pushed us, with our governing traitors' help, into mad bloodshed. Now we've again been pushed into the war for the sake of lunatic German dreams.» (OWI)

TASS REPORTS INCREASING UNREST IN HUNGARY

GENEVA, October 8 — It is pointed out here that the anti-German movement continues to grow in Hungary, prompting the Hungarian press and radio to launch an extensive propaganda campaign against so-called «whisperers,» reported the Soviet news agency, Tass, today.

Regent Horthy's pro-Hitler policy is condemned in the most diverse sections of the public and, according to the Hungarian Radio, «many alarmist and outlawed leaflets have been circulated of late.» «Large anti-German demonstrations took place in Budapest and elsewhere, while disturbances among the workers continue in industrial towns such as Csepel, Gyor and Pec.

Tass said that the Hungarian authorities are trying to suppress this anti-German movement by terrorism, and that, according to the Hungarian News Agency, mass arrests have been made for «incitement to disorders» and «for circulation of panicky rumors.»

The Hungarian Radio threatened with death those «who circulate or read leaflets.» Special tribunals composed of reactionaries and Fascists function in all large towns, speeding up the procedure of trying cases of anti-Government and anti-German activities. In fact, the number of arrested

«We shall want the assistance of people who have lived through the occupation in Norway, Holland or France to take part in relief in each other's countries,» she declared.

Miss McGeachy also disclosed that study had been made of the social welfare needs of mothers, their children, and unaccompanied children, as well as among misplaced persons. An international group of psychologists — experienced in the social readaptation of prisoners of war — is now studying the social readaptation of displaced persons. (OWI)

FORM LEAGUE FOR INDEPENDENT ARAB COUNTRIES

LONDON, October 8 — Preliminary agreements have been reached for a league of independent Arab countries, the Egyptian Prime Minister, Mustapha El Nahas Pasha, announced today.

Its purpose will be to foster cooperation among them, and to safeguard their independence, the Prime Minister said.

The decision follows a fortnight's work by representatives of five countries: Egypt, Iraq, Syria, Lebanon and Trans-Jordan, who formed the preparatory committee for a general Arab congress to be held later. A protocol signed by these representatives proposes that the league should be governed by a council. Members of the league will agree not to resort to force in the settlement of disputes, and not to pursue foreign policies that would be harmful to the league as a whole, or to individual members.

One part of the protocol says that Palestine constitutes one of the most important elements of the Arab countries, and the rights of the Arabs there could not be harmed without danger to the peace and stability of the Arab world as a whole. (PWB-FW)

INVITE 50 NATIONS TO AVIATION CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, October 8 — More than 50 nations have been invited to send delegates to the International Aviation Conference, which will open at the Stevens Hotel in Chicago, Illinois, on November 1, the State Department announced last night.

The conference will plan a tentative system of international air transport routes and take steps toward the formation of an international air commission. (OWI)

TO NATIONALIZE FRENCH AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY

PARIS, October 8 — The French Air Minister, Charles Tillon, announced that the French aircraft industry will be nationalized at the first step toward total reorganization.

Addressing the personnel of the Amiot aircraft factory, Tillon said:

«We shall begin by requisitioning the entire industry and at the head of each factory we shall place an honest and patriotic worker. No pressure by private interests will be tolerated. All traces of the odious Vichy regime must disappear.»

Tillon stated that he intended to meet all justifiable claims and to maintain close and friendly contact with the unions. (OWI)

TASS REPORTS INCREASING UNREST IN HUNGARY

GENEVA, October 8 — It is pointed out here that the anti-German movement continues to grow in Hungary, prompting the Hungarian press and radio to launch an extensive propaganda campaign against so-called «whimperers,» reported the Soviet news agency Tass, today.

Regent Horthy's pro-Hitler policy is condemned in the most diverse sections of the public and, according to the Hungarian Radio, «many alarmist and malicious leaflets have been circulated of late.» Large anti-German demonstrations took place in Budapest and elsewhere, while disturbances among the workers continue in industrial towns such as Csepel Gjoer and Pec.

Tass said that the Hungarian authorities are trying to suppress this anti-German movement by terrorism, and that, according to the Hungarian News Agency, mass arrests have been made for «incitement to disorders» and «for circulation of panicky rumors.»

The Hungarian Radio threatened with death those «who circulate or read leaflets.» Special tribunals composed of reactionaries and Fascists function in all large towns, speeding up the procedure of trying cases of anti-Government and anti-German activities. In fact, the number of arrested is so great that the Hungarian authorities have been compelled to set up more concentration camps, in particular one near Budapest.

Special detachments of the so-called «National Guard» are being formed to carry out measures, and particularly in a desperate effort to quell the widely-ramified secret anti-German organization.

Up to now all efforts of the Gestapo and Hungarian police have failed to get on the track of this organization, which is headed by a militant central body.

Evidence of the Government's growing panic is shown in the Budapest Radio's urgent plea to the people «not to lose hope» — «to preserve faith in their own strength.»

Meanwhile, the newspaper Esti Ujsag, in an article entitled «Hope,» tried to convince the «weakhearted» that their conduct does not correspond to Hungary's role in southeastern Europe. (PWB-Tass)

GERMANS TAKE MEASURES IN DENMARK

LONDON, October 8 — In the future, arrested Danish saboteurs will be carried on all German troop trains in Denmark, the Danish Radio said last night in a broadcast for the German authorities.

NAZIS INUNDATING BEST OF DUTCH LANDS

London, October 8 — Ruthless German flooding of Netherlands areas was destroying valuable sections of the country's best farm lands, an official Netherlands spokesman said here yesterday, according to ANEP, official Dutch news agency.

The spokesman said the traditional Dutch policy of flooding for defense was limited to a specially prepared belt of inundation separating the central part of the country from the rest, and that it had affected only soil of minor agricultural value.

He accused the Germans of now destroying the complicated age-old system of land reclamation by inundating extensive, valuable areas of the best agricultural land with complete disregard for people and property, both in the country and in the towns.

CONDITIONS GRIM IN GERMAN-OCCUPIED HOLLAND

LONDON, October 8 — Living and working conditions throughout the German-occupied Netherlands are daily becoming grimmer, reported Aneta today.

The Dutch news agency dispatch said that there are large concentrations of German Elite Guard troops and Gestapo officials throughout German-occupied Holland. They have murdered many people, and a third of the male population between the ages of 18 and 50, in the Achterhoek eastern region of Gelderland province, has been forced to dig trench fortifications.

Several thousand men ordered to present themselves for labor on German defence works in Apeldoorn, 17 miles north of Arnhem, refused to appear, and 21 Dutch Patriots were murdered on the streets of the former town when the Germans attempted to press-gang the workers into service.

The agency dispatch adds that the Germans have restricted all traffic on the Zuider Zee for military purposes.

PUNISHMENT OF NAZI CRIMINALS

LONDON, October 8 — The Netherlands government has pledged itself to punish the Nazis responsible for the death of 450 Netherlands Patriots in a mass execution at the Vught prison camp in occupied Netherlands, Dr. J. E. Van Heuvan Goedhart, Dutch Minister of Justice, said here yesterday.

Reading the Government's statement to the people of the Netherlands over Radio Orange, Goedhart called on his people to collect all the facts of the executions and to note marks of identity of the Germans responsible.

"The Netherlands government knows that most recently hundreds of prisoners — both men and women — from the Vught concentration camp have been transported to Germany crammed in freight cars shut off with barbed wire," he said. "The Government also knows that almost 500 Dutchmen from this concentration camp have been executed without hearing and without any form of trial by the German military court.

"The Netherlands Government," he stated, "knowing how terribly our people are suffering under the murderous yoke of the oppressor, has firmly resolved to spare no efforts to catch the criminals, and is determined to trace the culprits of all these horrors and try them with unremitting severity.

LUXEMBOURG ECONOMY WRECKED

LUXEMBOURG, October 8 — The German occupation of the city of Luxembourg has completely wrecked its economy, Richard Johnston, correspondent for the New York Times said in a dispatch today.

The blight of the German soldier buying with worthless Reichmarks is everywhere, Johnston said.

In order to make purchases in Luxembourg, one must be an international financier or accountant, the correspondent added, as there is now in practice a three-sided monetary system involving French francs, Belgian francs and Reichmarks. The purchaser warily refuses to take the Reichmarks in change, whereas the shopkeepers are anxious to get rid of them.

To add to the confusion, the exchange rate fluctuates hourly. Everyone hopes that this will soon be rectified with the currency stabilization of a fixed rate of exchange promised by the Allied authorities in cooperation with the Luxembourg Government — Johnston said.

HITLER STAYS AWAY FROM ADVISER'S FUNERAL

WASHINGTON, October 8 — It was disclosed today by DNB, Nazi news agency, that Hitler and some of his former high commanders were absent from the state funeral of General Rudolf Schmundt.

It was claimed that Hitler had ordered a special state funeral at the Tannenberg Memorial for General Schmundt, his former military adviser.

Schmundt was the third Nazi to die in the attempt on Hitler's life on July 20. The others were collaborator Rudolf Berges — Hitler's double — and General Guenther Korten, Chief of Staff of the German Air Force.

The Tannenberg Memorial, where Field Marshal Paul von Hindenburg is buried with 20 unknown German soldiers who fell in the 1914 battle of Tannenberg, has now been turned by the Nazis into a burying place for Nazi career officers.

GERMANS SLAUGHTER 40 MEMBERS OF FFI

PORRENTRUY, France-Swiss Frontier, October 8 — News of the slaughter of 40 members of the French Forces of the Interior, ten of whom were mown down by the Germans as they sang the Marseillaise, has just reached Switzerland.

The Germans surrounded FFI headquarters at Etobon, seized 40 hostages and took them in groups of ten to the neighboring village of Chenebier, near Belfort.

The first group was lined up outside the Protestant church and shot.

The second group was then ordered to kneel on the still warm bodies of their comrades. They refused, and instead stood defiantly singing the Marseillaise. They sang until a burst of fire aimed at their thighs brought them down. They were finished off with revolvers.

The third and fourth group were shot roped together so that they fell into a hole and were left to die.

The entire male population of Etobon has been exterminated or, in the case of those over 40, deported. (Reuter)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 8 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy.

North of the Rubicon, Indian troops of the 8th Army have crossed the river Fiumicino and captured the important height of Monte Farneto.

In the central sector, American, British and South African troops of the 5th Army continue to advance against very determined resistance.

On the west coast, American Negro troops have seized two high features, Monte Costa and Monte Canale.

Allied Armies in Greece:

Troops of Land Forces Adriatic in Greece progressed towards the outskirts of Corinth.

The port of Nauplion has surrendered.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of fighter-escorted heavy bombers yesterday operated against oil installations, rail yards and airdrome in Austria and Hungary.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Fighter-bombers and fighters attacked gun positions and strong points in the battle area. Other fighters and fighter-bombers attacked shipping in the Adriatic and targets in the Balkans.

During these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed. Eighteen of our planes are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1500 sorties.

Navy:

On the night of October 6-7, H.M. Ship Termagant met and engaged an enemy force near the entrance to the Gulf of Salonika. One enemy destroyer was sunk and a second seriously damaged.

On October 7 the French cruiser Emile Bertin and the U.S. destroyer Eberle bombarded enemy vessels near Porto Maurizio. Hits were obtained on an "F" lighter and a large merchant vessel.

On October 5, while supporting the army, LCG's bombarded enemy positions on the mainland of Greece, north of Corfu.

The target area was well covered.

For many days past, mine-sweepers of the Royal Navy have been employed in sweeping channels through the numerous enemy minefields in the Aegean Islands and among the southern Dalmatian Islands. Their work has been carried out with persistence in the face of difficulties. Many mines have been accounted for. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 8 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied troops moving toward the southern bank of the Scheldt Estuary from our bridgehead over the Leopold Canal are engaged in heavy fighting.

North of Antwerp, further progress has been made toward the roads leading to the island of Walcheren where the sea dikes at Flushing were attacked yesterday without loss by a strong force of escorted heavy bombers.

North of Nijmegen we have freed the village of Halbern. Fighting continues in the area of Opnemeden. Fighters and fighter-bombers closely supported our ground forces in Holland and western Germany. Rocket-firing fighters sank a medium-sized coastal vessel near the Hook of Holland.

Medium bombers struck at bridges in the Arnhem area and a railway yard at Hengelo. Heavy bombers in very great strength, with escort fighters, struck at enemy supplies and communications at Emmerich and Kleve. Five bombers are missing.

In the Aachen sector our troops have captured Beggendert and Busweiler, east and south of Eilach. Forces which advanced to the outskirts of Alsdorf encountered decreasing resistance and lessening artillery fire. On the northern fringe of this advance we have occupied Waldenrath.

Good progress in the forest of Hurtgen has taken our troops to within less than two miles of the village of Hurtgen. In Luxembourg we have cleared the enemy from Echternach and Wormeldingen.

North of Metz our troops have entered Moncreves Les Metz. Heavy fighting continued in Fort Driant, where we hold the northeast and southeast corners of the fort.

Along the whole front from Aachen to Nancy fighter-bombers in strength supported our troops and attacked transportation targets behind the enemy lines. Medium bombers hit railway targets at Euskirchen, Cam, Trier and Dillingen.

In the Riga direction, our troops captured the town and large railway station of Ogre, and also occupied in fighting over 60 other populated localities.

Troops of the First Pre-Baltic Front, with the cooperation of the troops of 3rd White-Russian Front, launched an offensive from the area northwest and southwest of Siauliai (Shavli), broke through strongly fortified enemy defenses, and in four days of fighting advanced up to 100 kilometers, expanding the break-through up to 280 kilometers in frontage. In the course of the offensive, our troops seized important strong-points of the German defense — Telsiai, Kiumgiane, Maizhekiai, Trishkiai, Kirshkiai, Seda, Vorny, and Kelmi, — and also occupied in fighting over 2,000 other populated localities.

On the right bank of River Narev, in the area south of Poltask, our troops successfully beat back enemy infantry and tank attacks.

On Hungarian territory, northwest of Beleszcaba, our troops, developing their successful offensive, seized the towns and railway junctions of Mezotur, Szentes, and Hodmezovasarhely, and the town of Szarvas, and also occupied in fighting over 150 other populated localities.

During October 6-7, our troops captured over 4,000 officers and men of the enemy.

Southwest of Rumanian city of Turnu-Severin, our troops, operating jointly with the units of People's Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, occupied in fighting the following populated localities: Petrovac, Leskovac, Zlotrello, Karapelin, Jauzhanitsa, Nelakovcak, Zlot, Pozhgorac, and Ilogolina.

Our troops completed liquidation of the encircled enemy groups in the area of Kishchevak and Zaichar.

During October 7, our troops have damaged or destroyed, on all fronts, a total of 156 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 31 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 8 — Patriot activity has been intensified in all northern Italy.

In Piedmont, in the Monferrato area, a large extension of territory, including the centers of Moncalvo, Vignale and Ottiglio, has been liberated. German attacks near Sezzolengo, in Alessandria province, were repulsed. Two companies of the Fascist Montezosa division were put to flight in the province of Cuneo. Aosta Valley Patriots are guarding the Little Saint Bernard Pass, the Saint Bernard highway, Colle di Seigne and Colle del Monte. French members of the Maquis stationed at Colle del Monte entrusted control of this position to Italian Patriots.

Ligurian Patriots are holding the Tende Pass under the protection of their artillery fire. They attacked and dispersed Fascist units withdrawing along the western Riviera coast.

While Allied armies are advancing on Bologna, Patriots operating north of the city are engaging the Germans in bitter clashes. In other areas of the Aemilia region the enemy is being subjected to continuous attacks. Since September 19 some 100 Germans were killed in the Parma district, besides many wounded and dispersed. Patriots are in control of the roads in the quadrilateral formed by the towns of Berceto, Calestano, Langhirano and Ripon, all in Parma province. On the night of September 8-9 the Germans attempted to penetrate the area near Langhirano held by Patriots, but the enemy was repulsed with the loss of 60 dead and many wounded.

The enemy launched another attack against Lesignano on September 10. Fifty German dead were left on the field. Other Patriot groups continued their sorties against enemy transport columns on the road between Fidenza and Casal

Aix-la-Chapelle. The Americans, yesterday, continued their attacks following fierce artillery preparation and supported by strong battle-plane formations, however, they were checked in the fighting for pillboxes and fortified strongpoints which are stubbornly defended by our troops. Heavy fighting for some penetration points is continuing.

The Parroy Forest continues to be cleared of the enemy. North-east of Epinal, an enemy fighting unit was encircled. Enemy pressure increased on both sides of Remiremont.

Artillery fire and infantry activity increased off our coastal strong-points.

The V-1 harassing fire continues on London.

Italy:

In the Etruscan Apennines, the 5th American Army after heavy artillery preparation resumed its attacks. Paratroops and grenadiers in a counter-thrust drove back the enemy attacking units to their original positions. An enemy penetration in the mountains west of Rocca Casciano was sealed off. A hill position on the source of the Rubicon exchanged hands several times.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, fierce fighting flared up with attacking Bolshevist units, especially for the crossings of the Kriesch.

In the passroads of the Carpathians, the Bolshevists continued their attacks which were repulsed in a counter-thrust. In the battle for the passroads of the eastern Beskides, troops, fighting gallantly under the command of Col. General Henrici and effectively supported by our Luftwaffe, frustrated all Bolshevist attempts at breaking through in the Slovak area. Since September 8th, in the course of fierce fighting, 442 enemy tanks and assault guns were destroyed or captured and in addition to that 3200 prisoners were taken.

Between the Memel and the upper reaches of the Windau, our troops are engaged in heavy defensive fighting with advancing Soviet infantry and tank forces. Since October 5th, in the course of this fighting, 180 enemy tanks were shot up.

Between Dvina and the Bight of Riga, disengaging movements as ordered proceeded according to plan.

On the island of Oesel, Arensburg was evacuated after the complete destruction of all military installations. In the waters off Oesel and in the eastern Baltic Sea, patrol vessels of our Navy shot down 11 enemy bombers.

Finnish regiments under Bolshevist pressure attempted to harass our disengaging movements in northern Carelia and Lapland. Heavy clashes occurred on the Swedish-Finnish frontier when the Finnish opened up hostilities.

West of Murmansk, the Bolshevists with strong forces launched an attack. Heavy fighting flared up for our strongpoints on the Soviet-Finnish frontier.

During attacks made by American terror bombers on central Germany, the towns of Kassel, Magdeburg, Merseburg and Bielefeld were particularly hit. British bombers attacked Emmerich, Breslau and other localities in Silesia were also the target of enemy air attacks. Over the Reich area and the western area, 121 enemy planes including 75 four-engined bombers, were shot down by flak artillery of the Luftwaffe and in the course of fierce aerial battles.

Eastern Front: Correspondent Walter Plato writes: «The Soviets with at least 75 divisions are trying to break down the northern and southern wing of the European bulwark in the East. Thirty of these divisions are engaged in the sector Siauliai-Rasseniai on a thrust in the direction of the Riga Bay and the northern corner of East Prussia, while at least 45 tank and infantry divisions are operating in the southern sector with the aim of breaking through the defence in south-eastern Europe into the Hungarian plain. In Lithuania, the German Army Command, expecting an enemy large-scale attack, had left in the foremost line comparatively thin rearguards and assembled the main force in defensive positions further in the rear. Fighting in the Balkans, if seen as a whole, is of a serious character. Generally speaking, the situation has not been decisively unchanged by Sunday's fighting. Between the rivers Theiss and Kriesch, the Soviets were able to make further headway but German-Hungarian defences greatly impeded the pace of the Soviet advance by stubborn defence and frequent counter-thrusts.»

Western Front: Military correspondent Alexander Schmalfuss reports: «While in the Flemish-Dutch area and on the entire southern wing of the Western Front fighting was of hardly more than local nature for some time, operations north of Aix-la-Chapelle are adopting the character of a large-scale attack. During the past 48 hours Americans brought up here two fresh tank divisions which, yesterday, attacked from the penetration point at Geilenkirchen to east, north-east, and north. It was chiefly German batteries and anti-tank fire which threw back the attackers again and again. Hand-to-hand fighting developed at some points, in the course of which Panzergrenadiers attacked the enemy with new short-range weapons.

New German Volksgrenadier Divisions in Action: Correspondent Guenther Weber writes on the newly established Volksgrenadier divisions which are equipped on modern lines and which in the past ten days are said to have successfully repelled more than half a dozen American attacks and thus proved the necessity of their existence. The Volksgrenadier divisions, that much may be said already, lost a decisive share in arresting the assault of Allied armies in the West. It is furthermore said that the soldiers of the new divisions are generally young men between 18 and 20. They underwent a thorough training. The commander of a division which the correspondent visited declared: «Our men are like young lions who want to measure their strength against a strong opponent. They fight, if need be, with sword and bayonet against tanks.»

German Police Raid in Copenhagen: It was announced Sunday morning that the German Police on Thursday and Friday raided numerous restaurants and hideouts of illegal elements. Four hundred persons among whom are several Communist functionaries were detained.

Finnish Divisions Adopt Hostile Attitude Against German Troops: Regarding the situation in Finland, it has been learned now that the Finnish divisions which are under Soviet command are adopting a hostile attitude against German troops. This attitude is obviously appreciated by the Finnish High Command.

Roman Press Indignant at Eden's Statement Concerning Italian Colonies: The statement made by the British Foreign Minister Eden that the return of Italian colonies to Italy is out of question, is said to have aroused great indignation among the public and in the Roman press. The newspapers stress that the people of Italy numbering 42.000.000, without the resources of the colonies, is unable to secure the necessary food and raw material for its existence.

Eastern Front:

In southern Hungary, fierce fighting flared up with attacking Bolshevist units, especially for the crossings of the Kveich.

In the passroads of the Carpathians, the Bolshevists continued their attacks which were repulsed in a counter-thrust. In the battle for the passroads of the eastern Beskides, troops fighting gallantly under the command of Col. General Henrici and effectively supported by our Luftwaffe, frustrated all Bolshevist attempts at breaking through in the Slovak area. Since September 8th, in the course of fierce fighting, 142 enemy tanks and assault guns were destroyed or captured and in addition to that 3200 prisoners were taken.

Between the Memel and the upper reaches of the Windau, our troops are engaged in heavy defensive fighting with advancing Soviet infantry and tank forces. Since October 5th, in the course of this fighting, 180 enemy tanks were shot up.

Between Dvina and the Right of Riga, disengaging movements as ordered proceeded according to plan.

On the island of Oesel, Arensburg was evacuated after the complete destruction of all military installations. In the waters off Oesel and in the eastern Baltic Sea, patrol vessels of our Navy shot down 11 enemy bombers.

Finnish regiments under Bolshevist pressure attempted to harass our disengaging movements in northern Carelia and Lapland. Heavy clashes occurred on the Swedish-Finnish frontier when the Finnish opened up hostilities.

On the Eastern Front, during the past few days, German fighter planes, suffering only minor losses shot down 75 Soviet planes.

During attacks made by American terror bombers on central Germany, the towns of Kassel, Magdeburg, Merseburg and Bielefeld were particularly hit. British bombers attacked Emmerich. Breslau and other localities in Silesia were also the target of enemy air attacks. Over the Reich area and the western area, 121 enemy planes, including 75 four-engined bombers were shot down by flak artillery of the Luftwaffe and in the course of fierce aerial battles.

AMERICANS MAKE MAJOR BREAK-THROUGH NEW OFFENSIVE LAUNCHED TOWARD COLOGNE

SHAEF, October 7 — American 1st Army troops broke through the Siegfried Line today east of Aachen as German resistance suddenly collapsed. A 1st Army staff officer stated that the advance was definitely a break-through, and not a German withdrawal. American forces have driven through the main line of resistance in this sector, and have captured Meckstein, Hopstadt, Asdorf, Rothaeh, and Baswellen.

American tanks and infantry are six miles within [illegible] Bergendorf. The staff officer declared that positions along the Canal is now roughly 400 yards, with its base on the north bank of the canal stretching 6,000 yards. Canadian forces made several crossings between Bruges and Eeloo, and these units have now linked.

The isolated German garrison at Dunkirk is under continuous bombardment by Allied artillery and planes, but no land attack has yet been launched.

North of Antwerp, the Germans have thrown tanks into the line in an effort to save the escape route of troops on the islands north of the Scheldt Estuary. Canadian troops, however, have advanced to within three miles of Woensdecht, which dominates the escape route, and have reached Ossendrecht.

Farther to the east, stiffening German resistance is being met south of Tilburg, where British and Polish troops of the Canadian 1st Army have fought their way to within a few thousand yards of this vital communications center.

German attempts to enlarge their bridgehead over the lower Rhine west of Arnhem were held by British 2nd Army troops. The Germans have not yet abandoned hope of driving the Allies back over the Waal River and recapturing the vital bridges spanning it. They are attempting to mass sufficient forces to launch a decisive attack, and have been shelling the salient almost ceaselessly for days.

American 3rd Army forces gained 100 yards in savage fighting in the battle for Fort Driant, five miles southwest of Metz. Allied troops have a solid hold on the northwest and southwest corners of the fort. They are fighting in underground tunnels after blasting their way through its steel doors.

The attack was preceded by a bombardment of surrounding forts by Thunderbolts which also were reported to have knocked out a heavy gun mounted on a railway track 20 miles northeast of Metz. The Americans have been under heavy shell-fire from neighboring forts.

5,000 ALLIED PLANES DEAL HEAVIEST BLOW OF WAR TO REICH

LONDON, October 7 — Germany took its greatest pounding of the war today, when more than 5,000 British and American bombers and fighters made a three-way attack on Reich industrial centers and communications points from Britain, France, and Italy.

This gigantic Allied air force — the greatest ever thrown against Germany in a single day — consisted of 3,100 heavy bombers of 8th USAAF, 15th USAAF, and RAF Bomber Command, and was supported by about 2,000 fighters.

The American bombers from Britain concentrated on six synthetic oil plants at Politz (a suburb of Stettin), Ruhland, Magdeburg, Bohlen Merseburg, and Lützendorf, near Leipzig. They also struck at a Krupp tank factory at Magdeburg, another tank works at Kassel, where Tigers and Panthers are made, and an airplane engine and locomotive plant also at Kassel. Other targets were chemical and explosive factories south of Brunswick, and a Focke-Wulf 190 aerodrome and plant at Zwickau, south of Leipzig.

A 1st Army staff officer stated that the advance was definitely a break-through, and not a German withdrawal. American forces have driven through the main line of resistance in this sector, and have captured Mecksteln, Holstadt, Alsdorf, Herbach, and Baswellen.

American tanks and infantry are six miles within Germany, east of Beggendorf. The staff officer declared that the Americans now have the elbow-room necessary to carry out operations. It is doubted if the Germans will be able to muster sufficient strength to halt the Allied surge to the east.

25 Enemy Planes Downed

The German defenses gave way this morning after being subjected to a heavy concentration of artillery fire. Out of a force of 50 German planes sent out to delay the advance, 25 were shot down by artillery and anti-aircraft fire.

South of Aachen a new offensive was launched eastward toward Cologne by the American 1st Army, which drove through the first of the German anti-tank traps, mines, and concrete obstacles in the Monschau Forest, 20 miles southeast of Aachen. Clearing weather enabled Allied aircraft to give close support to the ground troops.

To the north of the new drive, other 1st Army troops pushed on through the Hürtgen Forest to within six miles of Düren, a large road and rail junction. One column advancing to the southeast reached the village of Vossenack, between Rötgen and Düren.

On the Channel coast, Canadian troops, who established a bridgehead over the Leopold Canal yesterday, were pushed back under fierce German mortar fire tonight. The farthest point of penetration northward through German defense, however, have advanced to within three miles of [illegible] decht, which dominates the escape route, and have reached Ossendrecht.

Farther to the east, stiffening German resistance is being met south of Tilburg, where British and Polish troops of the Canadian 1st Army have fought their way to within a few thousand yards of this vital communications center.

Simultaneously, a force of 800 bombers of the 15th USAAF, with 400 fighters, attacked targets in southern Germany, Austria, and Hungary.

The Royal Air Force contributed a force of 700 Halifax and Lancasters, escorted by Spitfires. Half of this force attacked Emmerich, and the other Kleve — two vital communications targets within 13 miles of each other, in-

RUSSIANS SMASHING TOWARD BUDAPEST

MOSCOW, October 7 — Battle area dispatches said tonight that Russian troops have reached to within 44 miles of the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

Pushing ahead on a 70-mile front over the level plains country, the Red Army is said to have smashed through German-Hungarian defenses for a spectacular advance of 29 miles.

The Russians were reported almost to have reached the eastern banks of the Kuros River, first of two water barriers lying across the approaches to Budapest. (Reuter) mediately behind the Nijmegen-Arnhem front, which the Germans are using to build up and supply their forces opposing the British 2nd Army's Dutch salient.

Yet another RAF bomber force, numbering 200 planes, with fighter escort, this afternoon made a second attack on the dikes protecting Walcheren Island from the sea. This time the object was to let in water from the south to join with the floods spreading over the western parts of the first attack. Dikes on either side of Flushing were bombed repeatedly, in face of strong opposition from heavy guns, and waves of Lancasters kept up the attack for 40 minutes from comparatively low level.

Most of today's bombing was visual, but the Germans laid smoke screens around the oil plants and crews were not able to see results accurately. At other targets, results were reported accurate in most cases.

Last night, too, Allied bombers crowded the skies over Germany in good weather, dropping their bombs in the wake of more than 4,000 daylight sorties by bombers and fighters yesterday.

Mounting the largest single operation since D-day, wave after wave of bombers was in the air from 1500 hours until after midnight, in what the Air Ministry described as the beginning of a new offensive against Germany.

1,500 Tons on Dortmund

Nearly 1,000 RAF heavy bombers carried out their major concentrated attacks on Dortmund and Bremen, where very large areas of fire were left burning. They dropped over 1,500 tons of bombs on Dortmund, and 1,000 tons on a new industrial area at Bremen. The railways through Dortmund are of greater importance than ever to the Germans, now that the RAF has drained 18 miles of the Dortmund-Ems Canal where over 100 barges lie stranded.

The night's operations also included attacks on Berlin — the third in 24 hours — and on Ludwigshaven, and mine-laying in enemy waters. Night fighters accompanying the bombers attacked airfields well behind the enemy lines.

Escorting ADGB Mosquitoes destroyed three enemy aircraft over the Low Countries. Twelve bombers are missing from these operations.

Thunderbolts of 9th USAAF this morning destroyed or damaged 28 barges taking reinforcements up the Rhine-Marne Canal to the German forces confronting the American 3rd Army. All the planes returned safely, despite intense flak. The enemy appears to be making increasing use of waterways since the Allied fighter-bomber attacks severely damaged the available railways.

Mosquitoes of the 2nd TAF, train-busting over Germany and Holland during the night, hit five trains, bringing the score for six consecutive nights up to 151 trains.

While the RAF night assaults were in progress, the Germans again launched flying bombs from aircraft against southern England and the London area. Two of the bombs were destroyed in flight, and a British Mosquito shot down a German Heinkel only a few seconds after it had launched its flying bomb.

Severe damage was caused in yesterday's heavy bomber raids by 8th USAAF, according to interpretation of photographs taken during and after the attacks on aircraft plants, ordnance depots, and oil refineries in northern Germany.

Tactical Air Forces were also active yesterday, and pounded enemy targets in the battle area, including trains, fuel dumps, barges, and motor transport.

Virtually every type of Allied plane participated in yesterday's sorties: fighters, fighter-bombers, light, medium, and heavy bombers. At least 45 enemy planes were destroyed in the air. Another 36 warplanes were destroyed in Baltic enemy bases, and three other planes were destroyed on the ground.

Forty Allied bombers and 10 fighters are missing from yesterday's operations. (OWI - Reuter)

VON KLUGE'S REMOVAL CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, October 7 — The removal of Field Marshal Guenther von Kluge, who lost the Battle of France, has been confirmed by a German war correspondent for the Nazi news agency, DNB.

The dispatch failed to mention Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, who was once pictured by the Nazis as the field commander who would drive any Allied force landing in Western Europe back into the sea.

It added: "In the west, apart from Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt and Colonel General Johannes Blaskowitz, Field Marshal Walter Model and General Hermann Balck are also commanding troops." (OWI)

NAZIS MASSACRE DUTCH PATRIOTS

WASHINGTON, October 7 — Four hundred and 50 Dutch Patriots have been massacred by the Nazis at the notorious Vught concentration camp, near the outskirts of Herrogenbosch, Aneta, the Netherlands news agency, reported today. (OWI)

ALLIED MAPS OF SIEGFRIED LINE SUPERIOR

PARIS, October 7 — Allied maps of the Siegfried Line are so precise, detailed, and well-informed that they show the range and traverse of pillbox guns and the blind spots by which demolition engineers can approach to knock them out, Maj. Gen. Ceal Ray Moore, Chief Engineer in the European Theater, disclosed today.

An American News Service dispatch reported today that 500,000 maps, about as large as a newspaper sheet and weighing a total of 30 tons, are delivered daily to the U. S. 12th Army Group now before the Siegfried Line.

The maps, based on aerial photography, and anything else available in the way of information, are tacitly admitted by even the German High Command to be superior to the enemy's own. This became apparent when the German High Command reproduced some captured maps without change, beyond superimposing on them the Germans' own grid lines, General Moore said.

American forces alone used 125 million maps in the first 90 days of the operations in France. Some 500 tons of them were delivered by plane.

Moore said that in the fall of 1942, the Allies had nothing except outdated Napoleonic maps of Western France. Preparation of maps was placed in the hands of Colonel Herbert Milwit, chief of the Intelligence Division of the Office of Chief Engineer, who came to England in June, 1942. An aerial survey of 50,000 square miles was undertaken and completed so successfully, according to the American News Service, that long before D-day SHAEF was able to lay out airstrips in France on soil which the engineers had not yet touched.

Printing began in earnest only five months before D-day, so that they would show the latest changes. (OWI)

GERMANS REFUSE TO DESTROY COAL MINE

URACH, GERMANY, October 7 — Local residents of this frontier mining town ignored Nazi orders to apply the torch to a rich coal mine in their community, and had it in perfect working order when Allied troops arrived, International News Correspondent Richard Tregaskis reported yesterday.

Refusal to obey Goebbels' scorched earth instructions made an amazing story of a group of 100 women and children and 92 men who took shelter deep inside the mine as the battle for the town raged over their heads, Tregaskis said.

U. S. INFANTRY BLASTING GERMANS FROM METZ

NEW YORK, October 7 — New York Herald Tribune Correspondent Joseph Driscoll, in a dispatch yesterday, said that the U.S. infantry alone is slowly and systematically blasting the Germans out of the French fortress city of Metz.

Driscoll said: "The siege of Metz is about to enter its second month, with the end not quite in sight, though daily progress is recorded.

"When the history of the French campaign is written, Metz should be listed with Brest and the Normandy hedgerow country as the toughest nuts Allied forces had to crack.

"The September and October operation in the Metz area is close to the trench warfare of 1914-18. It is the foot soldier who is taking the Metz forts one-by-one. Against heavy fire from automatic weapons, he creeps up to trenches, and on bunkers and pillboxes. He carries hand grenades, flamethrowers, and long poles charged with dynamite, which he pokes into the slits of the fortifications.

"It is not an easy task. It has settled down to a war of extermination, and once again many Germans are doomed to die on foreign soil." (OWI)

UBACH, GERMANY, October 7 — Local residents of this frontier mining town ignored Nazi orders to apply the torch to a rich coal mine in their community, and had it in perfect working order when Allied troops arrived, International News Correspondent Richard Tregaskis reported yesterday.

Refusal to obey Goebbels' "scorched earth" instructions made an amazing story of a group of 160 women and children and 92 men who took shelter deep inside the mine as the battle for the town raged over their heads, Tregaskis said.

Some members of this group started straggling out of the huge underground chamber, where they lived for three weeks, even though Ubach still was being hotly contested by giant German guns firing shells into the American-held German town where Lieutenant General Courtney Hodges' U. S. 1st Army penetrated the Siegfried Line, Tregaskis said.

Explaining why they deliberately failed to carry out Joseph Goebbels' "scorched earth" orders, these people said that the big Ubach mine had been their "bread and butter" for themselves and their families for decades. The mine — one of the 16 coal producers in the "Little Ruhr" of the Worm River Valley — still is safe and intact. Thus, production of about 3,000 tons of coal at Ubach daily is assured.

Describing a trip through the newly captured German areas, the correspondent told how German resistance is paving the way for destruction of hundreds of German towns and villages in the path of the Allies. "Beyond the frontier town of Palenberg — where no house I had seen was untouched by shell or bomb — we entered Ubach, the next place in this belt of mining towns," he wrote. "We found its modern housing projects reduced to heaps of wreckage interspersed with pyramid-shaped piles of black slag and blackened coal mine derricks.

"Ubach, like other towns in the Reich's Worm Province, is an object lesson to the Germans that the cost of their continuing resistance is ... ing to be high. In rows of new brick houses there is not one with a roof. Gaping shell holes perforate most of the walls, and through them you can see piles of junk in the interiors...» (OWI)

STARK AWARDED D. S. M.

SHAEF, October 7 — General Eisenhower has awarded the U.S. Distinguished Service Medal to Admiral Harold Stark, Commander of U.S. Naval Forces in Europe, it was announced here today. The citation accompanying the medal said:

«For exceptionally meritorious service in a position of great responsibility during the planning and launching of the campaign of invasion of the continent of Europe, Admiral Stark cooperated wholeheartedly and effectively with the various agencies involved, and made noteworthy contribution to the success of the United States naval efforts.» (Reuter)

AMERICANS WITHIN 12 MILES OF BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 7 — American troops of the 5th Army, battling northward through the Apennines despite already wintry weather and increased enemy resistance, yesterday stepped up their rate of advance to break through strongly-held German positions north of Livano, and thrust to within 12 miles of Bologna, it was announced here today.

Taking advantage of the momentum of their offensive which dislodged the reinforced German mountain divisions from the towns of Livano and Monzuno, little over two miles to the west, the American troops, supported by tanks, prevented the enemy from stabilizing his positions, and drove a full two miles northward along the axis of Highway 65, main Florence-Bologna Road.

The two-mile advance, double that of recent days' gains along the Bologna Road is the biggest progress reported on the center of the 5th Army front for up to a month. Gains of 2½ miles were reported yesterday in flank positions, but the distance between 5th Army leading troops and Bologna was lessened by only a single airline mile.

Official reports indicated that the enemy is attempting to bolster his mountain defense line south of Bologna by «side-slipping» reinforcements from the eastern part of the front to the center, as the forward American elements of the 5th approached the last hill and mountain features guarding the Valley of the Po. Marshal Kesselring has now concentrated eight German divisions against the 5th Army, hoping to gain time for the preparation of defensive positions further north, and also, official reports suggested, for the hasty shipment from North Italy of all possible war materials which can be confiscated. One report alleged that even steel rails from Italian railroad lines are being ripped up to furnish scrap steel for the hard-pressed German munitions industry.

Advancing on a four-mile-wide front from the main Florence-Bologna Highway westward to the edge of the Setta River Valley, American forces are now within 12 and 14 airline miles of Bologna along two of the main approach roads through the Setta and the Savena River Valleys.

On the west of this most advanced sector, American infantrymen were just south of San Niccolo, some six miles from the road junction town of San Polomese, located at the confluence of the Setta and the Reno Rivers.

South African troops of the 5th Army were reported to have captured Monte Vigese, important peak dominating the center stretches of the Pistoia-Bologna road, following the Reno River Valley, 10 miles southwest of the American line near San Niccolo.

To the east of the main American advance, American forces were reported to have taken Monte Bibele, three miles east of Loiano, after hard fighting, while other 5th Army forces pushed to a point 1,000 yards north of the Gard[illegible] evacuation of Greece was hastened by the capitulation of Rumania, the statement said, and after this date troops of the Greek Security battalions, composed of Axis sympathizers, were the only forces left behind to subjugate the Greek population. These native collaborationist forces, erroneously reported yesterday to be German guard forces, surrendered to British troops on October 2 without firing a shot.

It was announced today that armed parties from the British cruiser Aurora and from HMS Ceterick, landed on October 5 on the Island of Levitha, lying in the Aegean between the Dodecanese and the Cyclades Group, and by nightfall had forced its German garrison to surrender. A heavy bombardment preceded the landing, which was screened by naval gunfire and by strafing attacks by fighter aircraft. Pounded mercilessly by the six-inch rifles of the Aurora, the German garrison fled to the western end of the island and by dusk capitulated, the reports said.

In other naval action in the Aegean, the British cruiser Colombo bombarded enemy installations at Atrakhion, in Crete, on the night of October 3-4, while on the day of October 4 fighter aircraft from the British carrier Emperor shot down a German transport plane over Maleme, and the British cruiser Rosalie fired on and scored direct hits on a beached enemy coaster and enemy battery on the Isle of Melos.

No further news of land operations in Greece was available today.

Today's announcement from the Balkan Air Force indicated that the Greek mainland ports of Monemvasia, Gytheion, and Kalamata had been evacuated first by the Germans, with demolitions preparatory to departure being reported at Kalamata on September 5. Monemvasia was definitely known to be clear of enemy forces by September 24, today's report stated.

The German garrison of the Island of Kythera, 10 miles south of the extreme southernmost tip of the Peloponnesus, had been evacuated in its entirety when Land Forces Adriatic disembarked there on the night of September 16-17. (PRO)

PUPPET «SECURITY BATTALIONS» IN GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 7 — The Greek «security battalions,» of which some 2,000 members surrendered to British troops at Tripolis and elsewhere in the Peloponnesian Peninsula, were recruited by the Greek puppet government, collaborating with the German occupation authorities, an official explanation issued here today said.

The mercenary troops, operating closely with the Germans, have been used chiefly in fighting Greek Patriot guerrillas and as garrisoning forces, it was said. The security battalions have been employed by the Germans mainly in combatting ELAS forces. Partisans units of the EAM (Communist section of the Greek Liberation movement.) The security battalions are believed to have suffered considerable losses in these clashes, it was said.

Although most of the security-battalion troops in the Peloponnesus have now surrendered, other forces are believed to be concentrated in the Athens and Salonika area, the official report stated. Their position is considered precarious, since the withdrawing Germans have left them without support. (PRO) resistance, yesterday stepped up their rate of advance to break through strongly-held German positions north of Loiano, and thrust to within 12 miles of Bologna, it was announced here today.

Taking advantage of the momentum of their offensive which dislodged the reinforced German mountain divisions from the towns of Loiano and Monzuno, little over two miles to the west, the American troops, supported by tanks, prevented the enemy from stabilizing his positions, and drove a full two miles northward along the axis of Highway 65, main Florence-Bologna Road.

The two-mile advance, double that of recent days' gains along the Bologna Road, is the biggest progress recorded in the center of the 5th Army front for up to a month. Gains of 2½ miles were reported yesterday, in flank positions, but the distance between 5th Army leading troops and Bologna was lessened by only a single airline mile.

Official reports indicated that the enemy is attempting to bolster his mountain defense line south of Bologna by «side-slipping» reinforcements from the eastern part of the front to the center, as the forward American elements of the 5th approached the last hill and mountain features guarding the Valley of the Po. Marshal Kesselring has now concentrated eight German divisions against the 5th Army, hoping to gain time for the preparation of defensive positions farther north, and also, official reports suggested, for the hasty shipment from North Italy of all possible war materials which can be confiscated. On the 8th Army front, troops of an Indian division captured the two heavily-disputed towns of San Martino di Bagnolo and Sogliano al Rubicone, and pushed on to take a high ridge 2,000 yards southwest of the latter village. After repulsing several heavy enemy counter-attacks, these troops advanced under concentrated enemy shell-fire to within a few hundred yards of Strigara, a hamlet some 16 miles southwest of Rimini.

In the 8th Army's mountain sector, some 24 miles southwest of Rimini, Allied troops pushed a mile farther northwest from the village of Tezzo, capturing 60 prisoners in sharp fighting. (PRO)

SCORE OF ENEMY PLANES DOWNED IN GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 7 — Mustang and Lightning fighters of the Strategic Air Force yesterday damaged or destroyed more than a score of enemy planes in attacks on six German-held airfields in Greece, it was announced here today.

Pilots of an all-Negro American Mustang fighter group strafed four of the Greek airdromes, at Eleusis, Tatoi, Kalamaki, and Megara, within a 12-mile radius of Athens. The other two fields hit were at Sedes and Mikra, both south of Salonika. Although no enemy aircraft were encountered, intense flak was met at all targets, and 11 planes were lost in the day's operations.

SECRET SURRENDER OF QUISLINGS AT PATRAS

PATRAS, October 7 — An eye-witness account of how Greek quisling troops secretly surrendered to the British Army without the Germans' knowing anything about it was given in a dispatch from a London Daily Express correspondent at Patras.

"After four days negotiations the Greek Security Brigade — about 1,500 strong and bitterest enemies of the Partisans — came out en masse and surrendered to the British," wrote the correspondent.

"Three assembly points had been arranged for the surrender, and it was a nerve game of hide-and-seek in the dark. The Greeks had to slip away without the Germans' finding out.

"The bright moonlight night was chequered with black, swiftly-moving figures. A few minutes before zero hour, Colonel Courcoulakos, commander of the Greek quislings, still hovered between the devil and the deep sea.

"Then, out of a period of temporary blackness into full moonlight, appeared the little, pale-faced, bespectacled man smartly dressed in the uniform of the regular Greek Army. He was panting from nerves, and running. With him were his staff, and about 50 soldiers.

"They were disarmed and shepherded into an enclosure behind a small house. We waited another chilly 30 minutes — no one came and it looked like it would be a flop. Then, an officer on Courcoulakos' staff was ordered back into the enemy lines to find out what was happening.

"After 15 minutes, long lines of men came out of the black shadows. Some were smartly dressed in regular Greek uniforms — others in a motley of German and Italian tunic and pants — still others just in ragged civilian clothes.

"These were boys of 12 and 14, and old greybeards. There were generals and colonels all jumbled up in the same jostling stream. For four hours, the few British troops toiled and sweated as they relieved this motley mob of an arsenal of weapons which could have blown us sky high. There was everything there from muzzle-loaders to the latest patern of automatics.

"The strangest thing of this night was the obliviousness of the Germans as to what was happening." (Reuter)

HULL HAILS LANDINGS IN GREECE

WASHINGTON, October 7 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull today issued the following statement on the Allied landings in Greece:

"The present military action to liberate Greece and Seventeen Patriot newspapers, daily of them dailies, were published and distributed clandestinely.

In the highlands, open and organized warfare was waged by the anti-Nazis. To these areas retreated the remains of the Greek armies and of the British Expeditionary Force after the defeat. Patriots interrupted German communications, attacked German garrisons, and executed traitors, but their main success was in pinning large numbers of Germans in Greece who were badly needed on other fronts.

In November, 1942, when Rommel, then retreating before the British in North Africa, depended for supplies on the Greek communication system, Greek Patriots blew up the important Gorgopotamos Bridge on the Salonika-Athens railway. Most of the 42 tunnels of the communication system were dynamited, scores of German supply and troop trains were derailed, and 113 German-operated metal works were sabotaged.

In the summer of 1943, Greek Patriot forces moved back to the Olympus area from which they had retreated that spring. The Germans, mistaking the move as preparation for Allied landings in Greece, shipped a large number of troops there while the Allies actually landed in Sicily.

In January of 1943, the Patriots defeated seven Italian battalions in western Greece. The Italian surrender brought appeals from the puppet Greek government urging the population to return captured Italian arms and equipment, but this material was kept and used by Patriots.

Last August, it was reported that Patriots had started a general rising, and had assisted Albanian Patriots on a 200-mile front in southern Yugoslavia, Albania, and northern Greece.

Greek sailors in small boats attacked German coastal traffic, boarding enemy vessels with grappling irons and carrying off arms and food supplies.

There were three Patriot organizations — the EAM (Nation Liberation Front), the ELAS (Greek Popular Liberation Army), and the EKKA (National Social Liberation), all operating on a coordinated plan. (OWI)

BREAK-THROUGH TOWARD EAST PRUSSIA

MOSCOW, October 7 — Great battles were raging tonight in Lithuania as the Red Army's offensive on East Prussia got under way. The Soviet communique said the push toward the Reich frontier was begun west of Shavli.

The military commentator Colonel Ernst von Hammer of the official German news agency said that deep breaches have been made in German lines at several points on the Lithuanian salient near the East Prussian border.

Colonel von Hammer said that several Soviet tank armies and about 15 rifle divisions, supported by motorized formations and thick flights of Red Air Force battle planes, were carrying the offensive forward.

At the same time, Reuter dispatches said strong Soviet tank and mobile artillery units were rolling across the plains of Hungary toward the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

Light Cossack elements and motorized infantry units were said to be spearheading behind the German and Hungarian forces, "attacking like a whirlwind, and sowing panic and death in the camp of the enemy."

The news of fighting in Lithuania is the first report of major action in a Soviet communique in several weeks. Earlier today, Radio Moscow, referring to a front which was considered almost static, had this to say:

"This is a lull before a terrible storm which will break out along the whole front. The whirlwind of coming offensives will sweep away German defenses, and lead to a complete rout of Hitlerite armed forces."

The Russian drive on Budapest was reported tonight to have widened into a 50-mile breach of the Hungarian border, with advanced elements of the Red Army less than 100

WASHINGTON, October 7 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull today issued the following statement on the Allied landings in Greece:

"The present military action to liberate Greece and release the Greek people from the martyrdom which they have suffered for 3½ long years comes as welcome news to the American Government and people.

GREEK PATRIOTS ACTIVE SINCE 1941

NEW YORK, October 7 — The Greek Resistance Movement began in April, 1941, with the German victory over the Greek armies.

Labor resistance has been particularly effective. Five general strikes, taking in industrial workers, public utilities, postal, and other administration workers, occurred during the past two years.

In June, 1943, a riot involving 100,000 workers resulted in the burning of the Athens registration office where Greek workers were being drafted for forced labor in Germany.

Drive on Budapest

The Russian drive on Budapest was reported tonight to have widened into a 50-mile breach of the Hungarian border, with advanced elements of the Red Army less than 100 miles from the capital at several points. Reuter dispatches said there was "every prospect" that the battleline will have been carried forward to the Tisa River late tomorrow, as the Russians speeded up their pursuit of retreating German forces.

The Tisa forms the last big natural barrier east of Budapest. Bridging the river would put the Russians about 60 miles from the Hungarian capital.

Other Reuter dispatches said Russian guns were pounding German positions on the immediate approaches to Belgrade, and that Red Army infantry was massed east and northeast of the city for imminent assault. A midday report said the battle for the city was believed to have begun.

On the Baltic front, the Soviet communique announced the capture of the port of Kuressare, largest town on the Estonian Island of Saaremaa, where the Red Army established bridgeheads two days ago.

Russian forces northeast of the Latvian capital of Riga were closing on the German-held city tonight as more than 100 small towns and villages fell to the continued Red Army push.

North of Warsaw, the Germans thrust another counter-attack at the Russian bridgehead across the Narew River.

Russian dispatches said the attack failed, and that the Nazis lost 200 tanks in two engagements as they battered vainly against dug-in Soviet troops.

Meanwhile, Polish sources said tonight that the Germans have ordered the civilians of Warsaw to evacuate the city. The Polish Telegraph Agency said there was reason to believe that many Warsaw Poles would be shipped to concentration and labor camps. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS JOIN FINNISH BATTLE

LONDON, October 7 — Two Russian destroyers and formations of Russian bombers and fighters joined the Finns in their battle at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia today.

Stockholm dispatches said the Red Air Force attacked German concentrations north of Tornio while the destroyers used their guns in support of Finnish troops operating the coastal area.

Late reports indicated that the Tornio battle was fluctuating. Early today, the Germans succeeded in driving the Finns back to within a half mile of the town, but these gains were lost to them by a Finnish encircling maneuver. (Reuter)

SOVIETS OPEN VAST FAR EAST AIR NETWORK

MOSCOW, October 7 — A vast network of Far Eastern airlines is operating from permanent all-weather airfields between Soviet Sakhalin Island, the Kamchatka Peninsula, and Kolyma, it was officially announced here today.

The system gives the Soviets strong air protection for the Far East. According to the Associated Press, the fields could be converted almost immediately for military operations. The press association said the area in which the line was established is flanked on one side by Alaska, and on the other by Japan. (OWI)

JAPS BACK IN INDIA; LAND TROOPS AT FOOCHOW

SOUTHEAST ASIA COMMAND HQ, October 7 — Japanese forces were found to have penetrated two miles inside the extreme southeast frontier of India tonight.

At the same time, they had landed reinforcements on the Chinese coast, southeast of Foochow, in Fukien Province.

At Kweilin, Kwangsi Province capital city, Chinese troops were razing some sections of the city to open lanes of fire for defense of its streets, house by house.

The Japanese penetration of India, in eastern Bengal, was the first officially disclosed enemy incursion since last March. Forward elements of the invading forces were in contact with British West African patrols. The area was described as "very difficult country."

Dispatches from Chungking said the city of Kweilin — one-time important air base for American warplanes, and hub of China's southern defense system — was being turned into a sea of flame tonight as Chinese demolition squads cleared a field of fire through which they hope to hold off several Japanese columns advancing from the south, the east, and the north.

The closest of these columns was earlier reported to have reached within a few miles of the city.

The new enemy landings southeast of Foochow were reported tonight by the Chinese High Command Chungking said the columns which landed on September 27 to open the assault on the important Min River port, were being held to a standstill in the northwest suburbs of the city.

LIBERATED ITALY

DON STURZO HAILS NEW PHASE

ROME, October 7 — Speaking to Italy in the Voice of America program this morning, Don Luigi Sturzo, former Secretary of the pre-Fascist Popular (Catholic) Party, welcomed Italian diplomatic representation in London and Washington as evidence that a new phase had opened in Italy's relations with the Allies.

He pointed out, however, that the real beginning of Italy's new status was marked by her contribution to the war, a contribution to which the Allies were now giving recognition and economic support.

Commenting on the Roosevelt-Churchill declaration, September 27, on Allied relations with Italy, Don Sturzo emphasized that the three spheres of Allied aid to Italy — military, economic, and commercial — were closely linked.

Don Sturzo called for publication of the complete armistice terms and the release of Italian prisoners by the Allies. These two steps, he said, would be of great assistance in enabling a unified Italy to carry out the task of national reconstruction by her own efforts. (UNN)

SCHOOLS IN LIBERATED ITALY REOPEN MONDAY

ROME, October 7 — Between four and five million children in liberated Italy will resume their studies Monday, when most of the elementary and secondary schools open for the fall sessions with a new, defascistized course of instruction devised by Italian educators. The school children will study from 3,573,000 new textbooks printed in Italy on paper and ink brought from the United States at the urgent request of the Allied Control Commission.

Some of the schools are already open. Those not opening Monday will reopen on their own schedules within the next two weeks. Schools in liberated territory close to the battle zone will be reopened by Allied Military Government officers as soon as the safety of the children is assured.

Straight, factual teaching has been substituted in the new Italian educational curriculum and in the new textbooks. Fascist elements which had been injected into every Italian schoolroom and textbook, whether the subject was mathematics or agriculture, have been eliminated. The texts were rewritten by Italian educators.

The new curriculum is directed by Dr. Guido De Ruggiero, Italian Minister of Public Instruction and former Rector of the University of Rome.

Few Teachers Purged

ACC officials reported that most of those discharged for Fascist activity were administrative and supervisory officials, while only three per cent of the total number of classroom teachers were dismissed.

Officials of the ACC Sub-Commission on Education said that when the schools reopen Monday, Italian students will have teachers who will use facts as a basis for their instruction. There will be no political propaganda of any kind, either in the new texts or in the oral teaching. The only

The Japanese attack on Foochow is aimed at gaining solid control of the eastern coast area to prevent establishment of air bases within striking distance of Japan itself — and to ward off an Allied invasion of the China coast, which the Japanese admittedly believed was imminent.

MIGHTY BRITISH FLEET IN INDIAN OCEAN

LONDON, October 7 — The Royal Navy already has a mighty fleet gathered in the Indian Ocean, the First Lord of the Admiralty, A. V. Alexander, revealed today.

The First Lord pointed out that to place in the Pacific the enormous fleet of which the Prime Minister spoke a few days ago is a tremendous undertaking, probably never equalled in the history of the Royal Navy.

The school children will study from 3,573,000 new textbooks printed in Italy on paper and ink brought from the United States at the urgent request of the Allied Control Commission.

Some of the schools are already open. Those not opening Monday will reopen on their own schedules within the next two weeks. Schools in liberated territory close to the battle zone will be reopened by Allied Military Government officers as soon as the safety of the children is assured.

Straight, factual teaching has been substituted in the new Italian educational curriculum and in the new textbooks Fascist elements, which had been injected into every Italian schoolroom and textbook, whether the subject was mathematics or agriculture, have been eliminated. The texts were rewritten by Italian educators.

Few Teachers Purged

ACC officials reported that most of those discharged for Fascist activity were administrative and supervisory officials, while only three per cent of the total number of classroom teachers were dismissed.

Officials of the ACC Sub-Commission on Education said that when the schools reopen Monday, Italian students will have teachers who will use facts as a basis for their instruction. There will be no political propaganda of any kind, either in the new texts or in the oral teaching. The only parts of the textbooks not rewritten were those sections dealing with religious instruction in strict adherence to the Lateran Treaty of 1929 between the Vatican and the Italian Governments.

Allied officials have arranged for school sessions to be held even in those areas where the school buildings have been destroyed by enemy action. Although some schools will have to run on double and triple sessions, every child will receive instruction. Schools will be held in such places as Army tents donated by the Allied armies, church sacristies, cinema houses, teachers' apartments, and athletic buildings.

In 25 southern provinces of liberated Italy, 104 elementary schools were destroyed by enemy action. In one instance, the Germans for no reason other than anger at being forced to retreat, ripped out all the school desks and benches in the town of Mentana, and made a huge bonfire of the furniture in the town square. Partially destroyed schools totaled 447, while 1,148 classrooms were destroyed, and 2,932 were partially destroyed by war action.

Among secondary schools of liberated Italy, Allied officials found that 32 had been completely destroyed, and 111 partially destroyed. Secondary school classrooms destroyed totaled 510, and partially destroyed numbered 540.

ACC officials have arranged for each Italian school child to have a bowl of hot soup and a plate of vegetables each day throughout the school session. Six pounds of dehydrated food, transported from the United States, have been allotted to each child every month. Six pounds of dehydrated food equals about 30 pounds of solid food.

Summer sessions were held in all elementary and secondary schools in the Frosinone and Littoria provinces and in 32 communes of the Rome province, the ACC reported. Some of the new textbooks and notebooks were distributed here, and a total of 8,757 school lunches were distributed to kindergarten children alone.

Of the total number of textbooks printed, 375,000 were printed in Palermo for Sicily; 1,120,000 in Naples for that region; and 1,039,000 in Rome for Regions IV and V, which include Rome and the area immediately to the north and east. An additional 1,039,000 were printed for Region VIII, which includes Florence and Siena, and for Region IX, where the schools will be reopened and the new textbooks distributed as soon as the region is liberated.

Arrangements for the new textbooks and the new school curricula were made by the ACC's Sub-Commission on Education, of which Mayor Carleton Washburne, superintendent of schools of the city of Winnetka, Illinois near Chicago, is acting director. Mayor Washburne, an outstanding American educator, has been Visiting Professor of Education at Northwestern University, Chicago and has made surveys of schools in both Europe and South America for the United States Office of Education and for the Department of State. SOVIET T. U. DELEGATION VISITS NAPLES

NAPLES, October 7 — The Soviet Trade Union Delegation, headed by Michael Tarasov, which is touring liberated Italy to establish contact with Italian trade unions, arrived here yesterday afternoon on a three-day visit.

The Soviet delegates, accompanied by IGCI, secretaries Giuseppe Di Vittorio and Oreste Lizzadri, first visited the offices of La Voce official organ of the Neapolitan Socialist and Communist parties.

Expressing his satisfaction with the visit to Italy, Tarasov said that among the Partisans of various countries now fighting side-by-side with the Allied and Soviet armies, a high place was due the Italian Patriots. (UNN)

ITALIAN RED CROSS DIRECTOR DISMISSED

ROME, October 7 — Oscar Davanti, Director General of the Italian Red Cross, has been dismissed by order of the Deputy High Commissioner for Sanctions Against Fascism, it was announced today.

Other officials dismissed were Massimo Magistri, Minister Plenipotentiary; Blasco Lanza d'Ajeta, Legation Counsellor; Riccardo Vadalà, Vice Prefect of Caltanissetta; Arduino Oberdan Albanesi, Professor of the Dante Alighieri Lyceum; and Angelo Silvi, physician and surgeon of Pescopennataro. (UNN)

CONFISCATED PROPERTY GIVEN TO COOPERATIVES

ROME, October 7 — A decree providing for the granting of concessions to farmers' cooperatives of all confiscated Fascist property was approved at a meeting of the Italian Council of Ministers yesterday.

It was also decided that all privately or publicly owned farm land which is inadequately cultivated will be similarly disposed of. A special commission will determine the indemnity to be paid to the property owners. (UNN)

GOVERNMENT TO CONSIDER VOTE FOR WOMEN

ROME, October 7 — Prime Minister Bonomi today told [redacted] and other feminine

Gilmore further quoted the [redacted]ficial, Arnold Veimer, as saying:

"If the Estonians do not want collective farms, they will not have them, but the Communist Party, really believing in collective farming, will campaign for it in the press and on the radio."

In answer to a question on the nationalization of stores and businesses, he said:

"Small enterprises of less than 10 employees will remain in private hands."

Veimer was asked how many hired hands a peasant may employ, and how many cows he might own. He replied:

"There is no limit to the number of persons he might employ, and he may have as many cows as he can maintain."

The council president said he did not know what system would prevail in the other Baltic Soviet republics, Latvia and Lithuania, but added there seems reason for believing there will be no forced collectivization or nationalization.

Veimer said the Estonian Republic faced a tremendous task of reconstruction, especially with winter coming and stores depleted of almost everything by the Germans. (OWI)

RESISTANCE MOVEMENT HOLDS PARIS MEETING

PARIS, October 7 — About 25,000 people were present today at the first big political meeting of the Resistance Movement in Paris, held in the great Velodrome d'Hiver, where for four years the Gestapo had herded French patriots rounded up for deportation.

Louis Saillant, President of the National Council of Resistance, demanded prompt reestablishment of universal suffrage. The Resistance Movement, he said, "would never tolerate personal power."

Emanuel D'Astier, former Minister of Interior, demanded the "abolition of privileged classes," and said that the nation could support the Government by demanding death for traitors, confiscation of the property of collaborationists, and the bringing to heel of capitalism as represented by big trusts. MORE FRENCH COLLABORATIONISTS INTERNED

MARSEILLES, October 7 — Pierre Etienne Flandin, one-time French Premier and for three months Petain's Foreign Minister, who was detained in Algiers, has been dispatched by plane to Paris and interned in the Sante Prison, said Radio Marseilles today.

With him went Marcel Peyrouton, former Vichy Minister of the Interior and Governor General of Algeria until eight months after the Allies landed in North Africa, and General Bergeret, former Vichy Under-Secretary of Air, who were also detained in Algiers. (Reuter)

FRENCH CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY ENLARGED

PARIS, October 7 — The French Consultative Assembly is to be increased to 246 members by a decree of the French Cabinet adopted at a meeting over which General De Gaulle presided yesterday, Radio Paris said today.

The announcer added that the Assembly will consist of 149 representatives of the Resistance Movement in Metropolitan France; 25 Resistance members outside of Metropolitan France; 60 senators and deputies elected before the armistice; and 12 representatives of overseas territories.

Members of the French Parliament who voted against the delegation of absolute powers to Petain at the last meeting of the Chamber, in 1940, will be represented in the Consultative Assembly, the French National Radio announced today.

The 80 members who voted against Petain will meet to

ROME, October 7 — Prime Minister Bonomi today told delegates of the Union of Italian Women and other feminine organizations that their request for voting rights in the forthcoming administrative and subsequent political elections would be given full consideration.

The delegates presented a petition for the extension of the vote to women on the grounds that Italian women had acquired the right to participate fully in the public life of the nation through their sufferings under Fascism and, above all, for their courageous part in the struggle for liberation.

«The exclusion of women from the suffrage,» said the petition, «would be in blatant contradiction to democratic principles as interpreted by all civilised countries.» (UNN)

Domei said that the step was taken in order "to meet with the recent international situation." (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE, AFHQ, ITALY, October 7 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

The enemy has again failed to stabilize his front in the central sector, where American troops of the 5th Army continue to make methodical progress.

The enemy has now been driven from his Lidarno positions, and American troops are fighting two miles north of this place.

On their left, British and South African troops of the 5th Army have kept abreast with the American thrust, and have occupied Mount Vigese, which dominates the Pistoia-Bologna Road.

Indian troops of the 8th Army have made further advances in the high ground north of the Rubicon, and have captured the town of Sogliano and have cleared the village of San Martino di Bagnolo against strong opposition.

Further west, in the valley of the upper Savio, British troops, having captured the village of Tezzo after a sharp engagement, took more than 80 prisoners.

The weather continues to hamper operations all along the front.

Navy:

Gunfire support from the sea continues to be given on the right flank of the Army in the neighborhood of the Franco-Italian frontier.

On 4/5 October, USS Niblack and the Plunkett were in action against enemy artillery and a railway yard. All areas were well covered.

At dusk on 4 October, an enemy battery off Corfu was successfully bombarded by HMS Wilton.

It is reported from the Aegean that on the night of 3/4 October Atrakion in Crete was bombarded by HMS Colombo. On 4 October, fighters from HMS Emperor shot down one JU-52 over Milenie.

On the same day, observing boat activity around a coaster beached off the Island of Melos, HMS Royalist opened fire and obtained direct hits. She also successfully bombarded an enemy battery.

On 5 October the Island of Levitha was bombarded by HMS Aurora and Canterbury. Armed parties from both ships [illegible] after close support fire and strafing fighter aircraft.

Progress has also been made north of Poppel and Hilvarenbeek.

Northwest of Nijmegen, there has been heavy local fighting between the Neder Rhine and Waal.

Our forces in the Uhoch area, north of Aachen, have gained ground to the north and northeast, reaching a point a half-mile north of Beggendorf.

We also advanced 1½ miles along the road running southeast of Uhoch.

A counter-attack in strength by enemy infantry and tanks was repulsed during the morning near Herhoch, with no material change in the line. Out of nearly 50 enemy planes over the Uhoch area, an estimated 25 were destroyed by our anti-aircraft and artillery.

Our troops within Fort Driant continued to meet stubborn resistance, and have been subjected to heavy artillery fire.

Near Sivry, north of Nancy, the enemy regained some ground in a counter-attack.

To the east of Nancy, sporadic artillery fire has been directed against our forces.

Allied troops advanced more than halfway through the Forêt de Parroy, east of Lunéville, against stubborn resistance. A counter-attack by the enemy infantry was repulsed.

In the southeastern part of the forest, Anglemont, southwest of Bactoral, has been freed after bitter fighting.

Southeast of Epinal, in the vicinity of Chaine, the enemy has been driven from a heavily fortified stone quarry which was delaying our advance.

Elsewhere, resistance to our progress is stiff.

In the Vosges foothills, our troops are now on three sides of the town of Thillot.

West of Belfort, further progress has been made through the wooded terrain.

A fuel dump at Amesfoort, railway targets at Hengelo and Duren, an airfield and barracks at Duren, and communications at Arnhem were attacked by medium and light bombers yesterday.

Fighters and fighter-bombers also attacked locomotives, barges, and motor transport in Holland and Western Germany.

After dark, light bombers attacked railway yards at Amesfoort and trains and barges in northern Holland and Western Germany.

Air:

Very strong forces of escorted heavy bombers in daylight yesterday attacked oil plants at Scholve, Boer, Sterkade, and Hamburg; an aircraft engine plant and ordnance depot in Hamburg; a tank assembly plant, military depot, ordnance depot, and aircraft engine plant in Berlin; airfields at Stargard and Wenzendorf, and a fighter assembly plant at Neubrandenburg.

In the course of these operations, 29 enemy aircraft were shot down, 38 seaplanes destroyed at Baltic stations, and three enemy aircraft destroyed on the ground by fighters which had provided part of the escort.

Twenty-eight bombers and 10 fighters are missing.

Last night, heavy bombers in great strength attacked Dortmund and Bremen.

Berlin was also bombed. (Reuter)

On Yugoslavian territory, our troops in fighting captured the town and railway junction of Velika-Kikinda, and also occupied over 40 populated localities, including Nakovo, Sharil, Zayen, Idosh, Bochar, Dragutinovo, and Beudre, and the railway stations of Nakovo, Sinhubert, Berik, Dragutinovo, and Beudra.

On other fronts, patrolling and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During October 6, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 126 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 34 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of October 6/7, our long-range Air Force raided Port Memel. As a result of bombardment, large fires broke out, followed by explosions. German military warehouses were left burning. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 7. — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Groups of Italian Patriots are once again fighting alongside Allied forces in the mountain sector held by the 5th Army. It is estimated that in northern Italy 200,000 Patriots are engaging eight Nazi-Fascist divisions.

The Osoppo Division, which is one of the Garibaldi divisions, carried out 24 attacks against enemy motor columns on the principal highway running from Trieste to Venice.

On secondary highways, Patriots killed 32 German soldiers, wounded 22, and captured 12. In addition, eight locomotives were put out of action, 12 trains were burned, and two freight cars destroyed.

During the last week of August, 36 acts of sabotage were carried out on the railway lines in the Veneto and particularly in the Friuli sectors.

The German garrison of Trieste was attacked by Patriots. Nineteen Germans were killed in the northern part of the city. Descending from the surrounding heights, Patriots broke into two hotels, killing four German officers and executing three important Fascists.

In Padua Province, at Tesio, a column of 200 German soldiers was ambushed.

In Piedmont, the Langhe, Alba, and Mondovi sectors are under the control of Patriots. They built a concentration camp which now has 250 Nazi-Fascist prisoners. The repeated efforts made by the enemy to regain control of the Mondovi sector resulted in failure. The Germans left 370 dead on the field. One hundred and eight prisoners fell into the hands of Patriots, including a German major.

Important acts of sabotage were carried out in the Imola and Bologna sectors. In Brescia Province, near Brione and along the Emilia highway, clashes took place. In the Imperia sector, Patriots are attacking the German garrisons and are concentrating their efforts on the highway leading to the Tenda Pass.

Other Patriot formations are attacking enemy installations along the western Ligurian coastal sector. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 7. — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

At the Leopold Canal, northeast of Bruges, several Canadian attacks failed. At the Belgian-Dutch frontier, the Successful operations of German shock detachments and artillery duels are reported from the fortresses and strongpoints in the Atlantic.

Yesterday, London was again bombed with « V-1 »

Italy:

In central Italy, the intensity of the fighting abated, owing to the worsening of the weather conditions. On both sides of the Florence-Bologna Road, local enemy attacks on our mountain positions were frustrated by the concentrated fire of all arms.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, the fighting against the Partisans continues.

Soviet spearheads reached the Theiss Estuary, but were repelled in the sector east of Belgrade. In this sector and at Zajecar, our grenadiers are engaged in grim fighting with the enemy, who continues to attack.

In the Hungarian frontier area, the enemy, proceeding from the area north of Arad, launched a major attack with strong forces. His spearheads reached the Kreisch after fierce fighting. Our bombers struck effectively at enemy columns. Other counter-measures are in preparation.

Northwest of Thorenburg and at the Maros, numerous Bolshevist attacks failed.

In the passes of the Forest Carpathians, the fighting flared up.

On the lower reaches of the Narew, north of Berrek, the enemy bridgehead was further narrowed down by our attacks.

South of Rozan, the enemy launched only isolated attacks, owing to his high losses.

Between the Memel and the upper reaches of the Windau, a grim defensive battle is in progress. Our divisions oppose a bitter resistance to the enemy, who advanced with strong forces supported by tanks and bomber formations. Our troops destroyed numerous tanks.

Air:

USAAF terror bombers, protected by a fighter screen, made terror attacks on the Reich capital, Hamburg, Stralsund and Stettin.

British formations dropped bombs on the Rhenish-Westphalian territory, and, in night attacks, destroyed residential districts in Dortmund and Bremen.

Last night, a weak formation of British planes launched another attack on Berlin. Seventy-two enemy planes, 54 of which were four-engined bombers, were brought down in grim dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries over the Reich territory. (Radio Berlin)

The repeated efforts made by the enemy to regain control of the Monregalio sectors resulted in failure. The Germans left 270 dead on the field. One hundred and eight prisoners fell into the hands of Patriots, including a German major.

Important acts of sabotage were carried out in the Imola and Bologna sectors. In Brescia Province, near Brione and along the Emilia highway, clashes took place. In the Imperia sector, Patriots are attacking the German garrisons and are concentrating their efforts on the highway leading to the Tenda Pass.

Other Patriot formations are attacking enemy installations along the western Ligurian coastal sector. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 7 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

At the Leopold Canal, northeast of Bruges, several Canadian attacks failed. At the Belgian-Dutch frontier, the enemy, owing to his losses and the destruction of more than 300 tanks and armoured reconnaissance cars by our troops from September 29 to October 6, resumed his attacks with diminished energy.

North of Antwerp, the enemy maintains his pressure.

North of Baarle-Nassau, enemy spearheads which tried to advance were repulsed in a counter-attack and numerous tanks destroyed.

Southeast of Wageningen, German attacks on the enemy bridgehead gained further ground. English counter-attacks failed. At the infiltration, south of Geilenkirchen, the power of the enemy attacks increased. The enemy, despite our grim resistance, was able to punch some local gaps into our lines. He lost 69 tanks.

Last night our bombers, attacking in waves, struck at enemy troops in the Aix la Chapelle sector.

The garrison of the Fort Driant, on the banks of the Moselle, repulsed fierce enemy attacks.

Additional parts of the Parroy Forest were cleared of the enemy.

On both sides of Remiremont, the Americans were reinforced by Moroccan and Algerian units. Particularly for the access to the valleys east of Remiremont, grim fighting is in progress.

Northwest of Thorenburg and at the Maros, numerous Bolshevist attacks failed.

In the passes of the Forest Carpathians, the fighting flared up.

On the lower reaches of the Narew, north of Berzek, the enemy bridgehead was further narrowed down by our attacks.

South of Rozan, the enemy launched only isolated attacks, owing to his high losses.

Between the Memel and the upper reaches of the Windau, a grim defensive battle is in progress. Our divisions oppose a bitter resistance to the enemy, who advanced with strong forces supported by armour formations. Our troops destroyed numerous tanks.

Air:

USAAF terror bombers, protected by a fighter screen, made terror attacks on the Reich capital, Hamburg, Stralsund and Stettin.

British formations dropped bombs on the Rhenish-Westphalian territory, and, in night attacks, destroyed residential districts in Dortmund and Bremen.

Last night, a weak formation of British planes launched another attack on Berlin. Seventy-two enemy planes, 54 of which were four-engined bombers, were brought down in grim dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries over the Reich territory. (Radio Berlin)

GERMAN HOME SERVICE

Women Will Release Men For Military Service: «The fateful struggle of the German people renders it necessary to replace as many soldiers as possible inside the Fatherland by women, and thus to free them for the war effort. In order to execute these measures, the Reich labor leader of young women has been assigned new war tasks. To fulfil these tasks, so indispensable for the defence of the country, all women, formerly members of the compulsory labor groups, have been enrolled.»

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Western Front: Alex. Schmalfuss reports: «Friday's heavy fighting in the area north of Aachen was marked by an increased use of tank forces on both sides. Several hours of tank battles developed, particularly in the area south of Geilenkirchen, in the course of which 69 Sherman tanks were knocked out. American relief attempts were frustrated, although the enemy was able to make slight advances at some points. The area south of Aachen again remained quiet.»

Eastern Front: «The present result of the grim struggle west of Siauliai is: deep penetrations into German positions, but not that break-through to the Baltic which is the objective of the new major Soviet offensive in Lithuania. Fifteen Soviet rifle divisions failed to rip open the German defence system, despite penetrations.»

FASCIST RADIO

Bad Weather in Italy: Bad weather in Italy hampers the Allied offensive. The serious losses suffered by the Anglo-Americans and their mercenaries during the last few days compelled the Allied Command to start another regrouping. Allied thrusts against the two main roads from Florence to Imola were repulsed by German artillery. Other fruitless attacks were launched by the enemy in the sector between Santerno and Reno. In the Adriatic sector, the 8th Army made only a very limited advance.

The Future of Italy: In the event of an Allied victory, Italy would be divided into four parts; Sicily would become a part of the British Empire, while Sardinia would come under American rule. All southern and central Italy would be administered by an Allied Commission, and all northern Italy, with the exception of Piedmont and Liguria, would be incorporated into Yugoslavia.

AMERICANS CONSOLIDATING IN UBACH AREA

SHAEF, October 4 — American 1st Army troops are now fighting clear of the formal fortifications of the Siegfried Line north of Aachen and have enlarged their wedge in the Ubach area. Allied troops are fanning out against improvised German positions on highways leading from the Ubach road-junction. They are being slowed by intense fire from heavy artillery and mortar batteries.

Polish and Canadian troops in the area of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal have made steady gains. Baarle Nassau was captured, and troops have entered Poppel, to the east. After recapturing Rousel, Welsh troops advanced three miles to the north and have taken Lage Mierde. It is estimated that 50,000 German troops are opposing the Canadian 2nd Army on a front from the Scheldt Estuary to the base of the British supply corridor in Holland.

At the extreme northeastern flank of the British 2nd Army corridor, American airborne troops advanced along the north bank of the Meuse (Maas) River to Middelaar, near the edge of the Reichswald Forest.

To the northwest, British troops operating between the Meuse and the Waal Rivers have cleared Wamel and Dreumel of German troops. Other British assault troops destroyed a factory in the Renkum area, which the Germans had been using as a strongpoint.

In the Nijmegen area, a small-scale German counter-attack was beaten off. The Germans are trying to destroy the Allied-controlled bridge across the Meuse at Nijmegen, using dive-bombers and infiltrating sappers.

Overloon Liberated

American armored units operating with the British 2nd Army yesterday captured the town of Overloon, south-east of Nijmegen, and are driving back the Germans. They are advancing steadily through extensive road blocks on the edge of marshes and swampland to the west of the Meuse.

American 3rd Army troops, who began their assault on Fort Driant yesterday, broke into the fort guarding Metz on the west bank of the Moselle today. They set fire to crude oil sprayed into the tunnels of the underground fortifications in an effort to burn out the Germans. A late press dispatch stated that the Americans are clinging to surface positions in the fort against furious enemy resistance.

American troops seized concrete barracks and other installations to the northeast, and took machine-gun emplacements to the south which had been causing much trouble. The Germans blasted American troops with artillery and mortar fire from Fort Mareville to the north and from Fort Moselle, part of the Driant fortifications.

The American 7th Army continued to edge farther into the valley entrance of the Belfort Gap, and to the north and east of Epinal the towns of Grandvillers, Deycimont, and Le Pouges were captured.

R.A.F. STRIKES U-BOAT PENS AT BERGEN

LONDON, October 4 — Royal Air Force bombers made a concentrated attack this morning on enemy submarines and submarine pens at Bergen, Norway, now the Germans' main advance U-boat base since the isolation of their principal bases at Brest, Saint Nazaire, and Lorient.

Allied troops are fanning out against improvised German positions on highways leading from the Ubach road-junction. They are being slowed by intense fire from heavy artillery and mortar batteries.

The Germans are reforming all available stragglers into new battle groups to try to stem the advance. They attempted three counter-attacks this morning in the Ubach area, but all were thrown back after severe fighting. Incendiary shells are being thrown into the town of Geilenkirchen by the Germans, and the town is ablaze.

In the Rimburg area, across the Wurm River, severe fighting was in progress with the Germans defending their positions from a 12th-century castle. American infantry fought across the moat after five hours, and reached the walls of the castle.

Truce at Dunkirk

It was announced here that a 60-hours truce had been effected at Dunkirk today to permit the evacuation of over 20,000 French civilians. The time will include 12 hours for clearing mines and other defenses from the road leading into the last German-held French port; 36 hours for the evacuation of civilians; and an additional 12 hours during which the road will be re-mined by the Germans before hostilities are resumed at 1800 hours on Friday.

Canadian troops are clearing the dock area of Antwerp after the capture of Merxem. The Germans are still holding out at Schooten, two miles to the east. The Canadians have advanced eight miles on the road to Breda in Holland, and are reported to be in Wittehof, just north of Marin te Heide.

TANKS SUPPORT INFANTRY AT UBACH

SHAEF, October 4 — American tanks have joined infantry troops on a three-mile front in the Ubach area north of Aachen, press dispatches reported late tonight. An advance of 1½ miles has been made east of the town, despite mud and heavy German artillery fire.

In an attempt to a create a diversion, the Germans launched a series of strong counter-attacks farther south in the Stolberg area, which were repulsed. (Reuter)

10 JAP FREIGHTERS SUNK OR DAMAGED

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 5 (Thursday) — Ten more Jap freighters have been smashed by American bombers in sweeps off the Philippines, the Celebes, and the Moluccas.

Not all of them were sunk, said the communique issued early today by General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, but those not sent to the bottom were badly damaged by direct bomb hits. (OWI)

Submarine pens, some of them still under construction, as well as submarines in the basin, were accurately bombed, the Air Ministry stated, and one fairly large ship was hit. Air crews reported seeing many types of vessels scuttling away in all directions, as they came in over the target. Several large fires, including oil fires, were started. One bomber is missing.

The attack on Bergen was one of the longest flights ever made in daylight by RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes, the round trip involving 1,300 miles. They were covered all the way to the target by Mustangs and Mosquitoes. The only defenses encountered were varying degrees of flak. This is believed to be the first occasion on which RAF Mosquitoes have escorted bombers in daylight.

Air photographs taken over Walcheren today show that the sea is flowing freely through the 120-yard gap made in the dike yesterday by RAF bombers dropping 12,000-pound bombs. German defense positions and guns blocking the waterway to Antwerp have been swamped, and extensive flooding has resulted from the attack.

Meanwhile Allied air forces continued their pressure on German transportation systems and industrial objectives in western Germany by night and by day.

Last night, a large force of Mosquitoes attacked Kassel, an industrial center turning out locomotives, Panzer tanks, and nearly all Germany's Tiger tanks. The Henschel tank works were already badly damaged in an earlier raid. The Mosquitoes also bombed and strafed 31 trains, 29 barges and 25 motor transports in Germany and Holland. This brings to 116 the number of trains attacked by Mosquitoes in three successive nights. All these operations were carried out without the loss of a single plane.

Fifty Thunderbolts of the 9th USAAF, supporting the advancing 1st Army, bombed four German gun positions northeast of Aachen today. Others destroyed a fortified building near Zulpich, disabled a locomotive, and damaged staff cars and railroad tracks in the same area. The American planes also silenced a six-gun anti-aircraft battery near Düren.

Similar support was given to U.S. 3rd Army ground troops yesterday by aircraft of the 19th TAF. Flying 300 sorties yesterday, they destroyed 35 locomotives, 38 wagons, one viaduct, and one gun position, and cut rail tracks in more than 30 places.

Ruhr Valley Paralyzed

An Associated Press dispatch said that already the Ruhr Valley has paralyzed and cut off from many of the main rail and water connections with the rest of the Reich, as a result of incessant attacks on railway targets and the recent blow which drained the Dortmund-Ems Canal.

It was announced today that yesterday's attacks on Nürnberg tank factories and a truck plant at Gaggenau cost the 8th USAAF 11 bombers and 13 fighters.

The 8th USAAF has put 8,000 bombers into seven attacks during the past nine days, an American news service reported. Most of these attacks were delivered within 150 miles of the Siegfried Line.

An official review of September operations by the U.S. Strategic Air Force revealed that the 8th USAAF sent more than 10,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators to attack vital industrial and railroad centers in Germany — which dropped more than 40,000 tons of bombs on enemy synthetic oil plants and refineries, tank and truck factories, aircraft plants, ordnance depots, and marshalling yards. More than 14,000 Mustangs, Thunderbolts, and Lightnings were also utilized, most of them as escorts for the heavy bombers.

The I. G. Farben synthetic oil plant at Ludwigshafen has been knocked out of production, temporarily by the heavy-bomber attacks in September. (OWI-Reuter)

PERMANENT 9TH U.S.A.A.F. BASES MOVED TO FRANCE

9TH USAAF HQ, October 4 — All planes of the 9th USAAF are now operating from France within fighter range of Germany, it was announced here today.

Previously, the planes operated from temporary air strips constructed in the early days of the French landings, as well as from English bases, but now all their permanent installations have been moved to the European Continent.

Major repair jobs and supplies are still located in England.

The shift to the Continent has been going on for some time. Most of the ground personnel and all heavy equipment crossed the Channel in the last few weeks. Skeleton crews remained behind to help with the last missions flying from English bases.

The 9th's first complete operation from the Continental fields exclusively was made yesterday, when Marauders and Havocs joined fighter-bombers to batter German strongpoints in the Aachen area ahead of the new push by the U. S. 1st Army.

The 9th is the largest tactical air force in the world, and includes Marauder medium bombers, Havoc dive-bombers, Black Widow night-fighters, and Mustang, Lightning, and Thunderbolt fighters. (OWI)

AMERICAN TROOPS ROUND UP NAZI CIVILIANS

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Hundreds of German civilians, most of them from trusted Nazi families, are being rounded up by troops of the American 3rd Army, Pierre Huss, International News Service correspondent, reported yesterday.

Most of these families, said his dispatch, had been transplanted to areas west of the Moselle River under Hitler's plan to Germanize Alsace-Lorraine.

The dispatch continued, in part:

6,000 AIRCRAFT IN HOLLAND LANDING

LONDON, October 4 — U. S. Troop-Carrier Headquarters in Britain disclosed today that approximately 6,000 aircraft and gliders took part in the recent Allied airborne landings in Holland.

With losses held down to less than three per cent, it was revealed that supplies and equipment carried to the American and British paratroops totalled almost 6,000,000 pounds, including ammunition, jeeps, artillery, and motorcycles. In other words, the official report stated, about 760 pounds of materiel were dropped for each parachutist and glider infantryman landed.

The landings, the report stated, took troop-carrier pilots through some of the stiffest opposition they have faced in five airborne thrusts in Europe. Yet all but 2.25 per cent of the Dakota carrier-planes returned to their bases.

«EARTHQUAKE BOMBS» DROPPED ON «TIRPITZ»

LONDON, October 4 — RAF Lancasters in a recent attack on the Tirpitz scored a direct hit on the German battleship with a 12,000-bomb.

The Lancasters first carried their 12,000-pound bomb-loads 2,000 miles from bases in England to an airdrome in Russia in order to make the attack from a landward direction and achieve surprise. Most previous attacks on the Tirpitz had been made from the sea. They flew the 2,000 miles in 12 hours, a great feat in itself.

Upon arrival at the Russian base after the outward flight, they refuelled and flew another 600 miles northwest to Alten Fiord, where the Tirpitz lay at anchor. After dropping their bombs, they returned to Archangel to refuel a second time for the homeward trip.

A proof that the element of surprise was attained was the fact that no flak or fighters disturbed the Lancasters as they flew over sea and forest. The whole trip was described as a triumph of planning and organisation, as well as of navigational skill and timing. No planes were lost during the operation.

The «earthquake bombs» that hit the Tirpitz burst with an explosive force comparable at least to one of the battleship's own magazines blowing up, the Air Ministry stated tonight. Permanent repairs cannot be carried out where she lies. (Reuter)

ALSACE-LORRAINE, October 4 — Major Charles Carpenter, known as «Bazooka Charlie,» is rapidly becoming a legendary figure in General George Patton's army.

Carpenter has armed a reconnaissance Cub aircraft with six bazookas, the rocket-firing tubes with which American soldiers have fought with devastating effect against heavy German tanks.

Assigned to reconnaissance work, the major said he wanted to be able to shoot back when shot at. He rigged up his armament so that all six tubes can be fired by a trigger in the cockpit.

He is already credited with destroying two tanks, several armored cars, and many German troops. «Bazooka Charlie» is called a one-man air force. (OWI)

5TH ARMY DRIVES MILE CLOSER TO BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 4 — American infantrymen of the 5th Army, spearheading a hard-fought advance along a 15 miles sector spanning four river valleys leading through the Apennines into the Plain of the Po, yesterday battled within 15 miles of Bologna, capital of Emilia Province, and one of Italy's oldest and most prosperous cities, it was announced here today.

The leading elements of the American forces were reported to have reached a point just south of the village of Boschi, 15 miles south of Bologna, and dominating the southern entrance into the Idice River Valley. The advance represents a forward thrust of a mile and a half over difficult mountain terrain northwest of Casoni di Romagna, reported captured yesterday.

American troops of the 5th Army also pushed north from Monghidoro, on the main Florence-Bologna highway, for a two-mile gain which placed them within 16 miles of Bologna at this point. The village of Campeggio, one mile east of Monghidoro, was occupied, and American forces in this sector thrust 1,000 yards farther north. On the right flank of the 5th Army advance, still other American infantrymen overlied the vicinity of the village of Santa Maria Maddalena, just west of the Santerno River and little over 15 miles southwest of Imola.

For the first time in five days, no enemy counter-attacks were reported against Monte Battaglia, four miles east of Castel del Rio, road junction town from which fork highways leading along the Sillaro and the Santerno River Valleys to Castel San Pietro and Imola on the Plain of the Po.

On the left flank of the 15-mile-wide front along which the 5th Army is thrusting through the Apennines defiles, other 5th Army forces, including South Africans, liberated two villages and captured several heights among a seven-mile sector between the main Florence-Bologna road and the parallel route from Prato to Bologna.

South African forces captured Monte Catarelto, five miles north of Castiglione, and dominating the southern end of the Setta River Valley. This is a tributary stream of the Reno River, which flows into the Po Plain just west of Bologna. British and American forces to the east of these troops liberated the villages of SantAndrea, five miles west of the road, and captured the peak of Monte del Galletto one mile north of San Benedetto.

High ground 1,500 yards to the north of Monte del Galletto was also taken in this advance.

Southeast of the main 5th Army advance, British troops reported small gains along the 10-mile diagonal running from Monte Battaglia southeast to Scarzana, a hamlet just west of the mountain road leading to Faenza.

In this mountain area, pierced by four river valleys leading into the Po Plain, the British repulsed several German counter-attacks, the most severe against positions 1,000 yards north of Scarzana, at the head of the Tramazzo River Valley.

Rains Delay 8th

On the 8th Army front, heavy rains, which have flooded the brooks and streams on the Adriatic coastal edge of the Po Plain, again prevented major action yesterday.

The Fiumicino River was more swollen than ever, and even patrols found difficulty in crossing the swift-flowing stream. Clashes occurred between 8th Army forces and German troops in the village of Borghi, seven miles west of Rimini, but the village remained in Allied hands.

On the Ligurian coastal front, 5th Army's Brazilian forces were reported to be maintaining pressure on German forces in the general area of the Serchio River Valley, but the situation along most of this front was described as generally unchanged. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES STRIKE MUNICH RAIL YARDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 4 — Up to 750 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF struck rail yards at Munich and other points on the Brenner Pass rail line today, in the first mission in eight days of stormy weather, it was announced here this afternoon.

Despite an intense flak barrage over the targets, good coverage was obtained, the reports stated.

Fighters escorted the planes to the Munich area, but other heavy bombers which struck rail points in Italy were unescorted.

ITALY: PILOTS IN ACTION WITH ALLIED PLANES

ROME, October 4 — Pilots of the Italian Air Force have for the first time gone into action in Allied-built aircraft, carrying out successful attacks on enemy objectives, the Italian Ministry of Information announced today.

On their return, the pilots expressed great satisfaction with the high manoeuvrability and combat efficiency of the planes.

The Italian flyers completed their training in a very brief period. Allied experts are full of praise for their skill, and the rapidity with which they mastered the various types of aircraft. (UNN)

LAST OF ALLIED AIRMEN IN BULGARIA FREED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 4 — The last Allied airmen imprisoned in Bulgaria were released yesterday when 24 wounded American and British fliers were landed at a south Italian base after an air trip from Cairo, it was announced here today.

All of the fliers were wounded, and represented the last of a group of 347 Allied airmen who were released from Bulgarian prisoner-of-war camps after the Russian declaration of war on the Nazi satellite state. (PRO)

INQUIRY INTO BULGARIA'S TREATMENT OF P.W.

LONDON, October 4 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, when questioned in the House of Commons today about statements that Allied prisoners of war recently liberated in Bulgaria had been treated with exceptional severity, declared: "All such statements will certainly be fully investigated, so that appropriate action may be taken." (OWI)

BRAZILIAN WAR MINISTER RETURNS TO ROME

ROME, October 4 — Major General Enrico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War, who was appointed to a temporary command over American, Brazilian, and British troops on the left flank of the 5th Army by Lieutenant General Mark Clark on Monday, returned here from the front this afternoon, it was learned here today.

General Dutra has conducted intensive inspection of the troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, and important gains have been announced from the sector of the 5th Army front under his command since he assumed authority.

General Dutra, questioned at his hotel in Rome, did not disclose the purpose of his visit, but declared that he expected to receive Allied correspondents tomorrow. (PRO)

5TH ARMY'S EXPLOITS PRAISED

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Colonel Wiley Carter, War Department observer, recently returned from Italy, told the press that the 5th Army has been outwitting the Germans by striking through Italian terrain which the enemy regarded as impregnable.

"At one time, a whole company of tanks got over a trail that would have looked difficult to a mountain goat," Carter said. "They took the enemy completely by surprise, and captured a height that otherwise might have cost many lives."

Carter said American engineers in Italy had been able to rebuild roads, bridges, airfields, and communications systems about as fast as the Germans can destroy them. (OWI)

Reno River, which flows into the Po Plain just west of Bologna. British and American forces to the east of these troops liberated the villages of Sant'Andrea, five miles west of the road, and captured the peak of Monte del Galletto one mile north of San Benedetto.

High ground 1,300 yards to the north of Monte del Gallello was also taken in this advance.

Southeast of the main 5th Army advance, British troops reported small gains along the 10-mile diagonal running from Monte Battaglia southeast to Scarpana, a hamlet just west of the mountain road leading to Faenza.

In this mountain area, pierced by four river valleys leading into the Po Plain, the British repulsed several German counter-attacks, the most severe against positions 1,000 yards north of Scarpana, at the head of the Tramazzo River Valley.

Rains Delay 8th

On the 8th Army front, heavy rains, which have flooded the brooks and streams on the Adriatic coastal edge of the Po Plain, again prevented major action yesterday.

The Fiumicino River was more swollen than ever, and even patrols found difficulty in crossing the swift-flowing stream. Clashes occurred between 8th Army forces and German troops in the village of Borghi, seven miles west of Rimini, but the village remained in Allied hands.

On the Ligurian coastal front, 5th Army's Brazilian forces were reported to be maintaining pressure on German forces in the general area of the Serchio River Valley. But the situation along most of this front was described as generally unchanged. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. HEAVIES STRIKE MUNICH RAIL YARDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 4 — Up to 250 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF struck rail yards at Munich and other points on the Brenner Pass rail line today, in the first mission in eight days of stormy weather, it was announced here this afternoon.

Despite an intense flak barrage over the targets, good coverage was obtained, the reports stated.

Fighters escorted the planes to the Munich area, but other heavy bombers, which struck rail points in Italy, were unescorted.

Fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked supply and transport concentrations in the Mantua area and operated in close support of Allied ground forces approaching the Po Plain. (PRO)

T.A.F. RESUMES CLOSE-SUPPORT IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 4 — Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force resumed operations yesterday after being grounded by stormy weather on Monday, to bomb 10 road and rail bridges in the Milan and Padua area, and to give close support to 5th Army troops at Loiano and Vergato, it was announced here today.

In addition, the planes cut enemy rail lines in 17 places, and inflicted considerable damage on rolling stock. Airdromes at Villafranca and Ghedi, southeast and southwest of Lake Garda, were also strafed, with good results.

Mosquitoes and Beaufighters of the Coastal Air Force, on night intruding operations in the Po Plain, shot up railways, trains, motor transport, a small factory, and coastal shipping at Trieste, Marano, and in the Gulf of Venice.

Heavy bombers were grounded for the eighth successive day by unfavorable weather. (PRO)

INQUIRY INTO BULGARIA'S TREATMENT OF P.W.

LONDON, October 4 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, when questioned in the House of Commons today about statements that Allied prisoners of war recently liberated in Bulgaria had been treated with exceptional severity, declared: "All such statements will certainly be fully investigated, so that appropriate action may be taken." BRAZILIAN WAR MINISTER RETURNS TO ROME

ROME, October 4 — Major General Enrico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War, who was appointed to a temporary command over American, Brazilian, and British troops on the left flank of the 5th Army by Lieutenant General Mark Clark on Monday, returned here from the front this afternoon, it was learned here today.

General Dutra has conducted intensive inspection of the troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, and important gains have been announced from the sector of the 5th Army front under his command since he assumed authority.

General Dutra, questioned at his hotel in Rome, did not disclose the purpose of his visit, but declared that he expected to receive Allied correspondents tomorrow. (UP0)

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Colonel Wiley Carter, War Department observer, recently returned from Italy, told the press that the 5th Army has been outwitting the Germans by striking through Italian terrain which the enemy regarded as impregnable.

"At one time, a whole company of tanks got over a trail that would have looked difficult to a mountain goat," Carter said. "They took the enemy completely by surprise, and captured a height that otherwise might have cost many lives."

Carter said American engineers in Italy had been able to rebuild roads, bridges, airfields, and communications systems about as fast as the Germans can destroy them. (OWI)

RIGA SEA ESCAPE LANE ALL BUT CUT

MOSCOW, October 4 — Russian troops were moving into position tonight for an attack on the last German-held island off the Gulf of Riga.

Operating from newly established bases on the island of Hiiumaa, Red Army troops and marines prepared to attack the larger island of Saaremaa, and thus completely cut off all hope of Nazi retreat by sea from the besieged Latvian capital.

Except for the capture of several towns in the continued push against the Germans in Yugoslavia, the Russian communique tonight spoke only of patrol activity and fighting of local importance on the long Russo-German front.

The communique said Russian troops had merged with Marshal Tito's forces, and had over-run several towns in the areas south of Negotin, south of Turnu-Severin, in Rumania, and south of Belgrade. One of the captured towns was put at less than 15 miles from the Yugoslav capital city.

Russian dispatches said also that Red Army forces had taken the Yugoslav town of Novo Selo, 19 miles northeast of Belgrade. Front line dispatches said the Russians took a railway station six miles north of Pancevo, a junction city just outside of the capital, and on the north bank of the Danube. Capture of the station cuts off all rail escape routes for the threatened German garrison in Belgrade, except those on the south bank of the river.

Meanwhile, Czech Forces of the Interior reported heavy fighting in the region of Jehova Lehota, as the Germans opened with expected counter-attacks. The Czech communique tonight said that four German tanks were destroyed in the course of fierce battling.

The new German attacks, in which the Nazis were said to be losing heavily, were aimed at the vital rail junction town of Svaty Kriz, which controls lines running north, south, and east through Slovakia. (Reuter)

GERMANS RETREATING INTO LAPLAND

HELSINKI, October 4 — The German armies in northern Finland were said tonight to be retreating into the Arctic wastes of northern Lapland as Finnish reinforcements arrived hourly to add crushing weight to the bloody battle north of Tornio.

The heaviest fighting was said tonight to be taking place northeast of the Gulf of Bothnia city of Tornio, where the Germans had held out for several days. A full division of SS troops was reported to be facing the Finns on this front, with added men going up to brace a stiff rearguard action.

The Germans are said to be burning every village as they go. The Russian Armistice Commission was reported to have given the Finns permission to use their planes and naval ships to aid the offensive, although the terms call for their immobilization. (PWB) ing swiftly from the beachhead he established on the coast on September 27, when he landed cavalry from seven transports.

Foochow was captured once before, in April, 1939, but was retaken by the Chinese. Its fall again would give the Japanese complete control of the militarily useful harbors of China.

To Allied observers looking in, the fall of Foochow would be relatively unimportant. Its position just across the Strait of Formosa from strong Japanese bases leaves it useless as a supply port for goods from overseas. Allied naval forces would not base there. No installations eventually to be used for the offensive against the Japanese mainland are threatened.

But the fall of Foochow gives the Japanese a hold just that much tighter on the long coastal area behind the shores of which American air forces have been edging closer and closer to permanent bases from which to strike at Kyushu and Honshu and Shikoku — the mainland islands of the Japanese Empire.

A still tighter control, as a result of successes farther inland from Foochow, could deprive Allied forces of the support of land-based aircraft for any invasion they may make along the coast of China. That, apparently, is the defensive strategy of the current Japanese offensive.

Japs Approach Kweilin

Coupled with the Foochow attack is the continuing Japanese drive on the Kwangsi capital city of Kweilin, communications hub and fortress city upon which the Chinese based all their plans for defense of southern China.

The Chinese were fighting grimly tonight to hold the Japanese push from overwhelming the approaches of Kweilin, and finally, the city itself.

The Chinese High Command said tonight that the rail town of Hinga, 31 miles northeast of Kweilin, has been captured, indicating still another Japanese column driving on the Kwangsi capital city.

One of the strongest columns beating southward had all but taken the Hunan Province city of Paoching tonight. The Japanese bombed the city repeatedly today, and their shelling, according to the Chinese High Command, destroyed all defensive installations within the city.

Still another Chinese city has fallen in the Kweilin drive. Changning, a stronghold on the left flank of the Japanese advance, 37 miles south of Hengyang, was captured Saturday.

Advanced enemy elements were within a few miles of Kweilin tonight. Allied aircraft bombed roads and bridges just five miles northeast of the city today, in an effort to impede the advance. Close up and far to the rear, the aerial attack gave the Japanese heavy blows, hitting convoys and concentration areas, and strafing moving troops.

Attack bombers of the 14th USAAF also struck at Japanese push from overwhelming the approaches of warehouses. They also bombed Japanese forces moving westward from the Kwangsi-Kwangtung border city of Wuchow, as well as other Japanese troops moving southwest from Lingling, in upper Hunan.

American bombers hit Samshui, Pingnam, Heinganshun, Fengyun Tanchuk — smashing Japanese river boats and blowing up trucks. They damaged 45 launches and 22 camouflaged troop barges, they blew up bridges and strafed steamers along the coast; they probably sank a large freighter in Formosa Strait, and they shot up barges along the rivers of Indo-China.

Although the Americans have had complete air superiority during the entire period of the Japanese east-China drive which began last May, they have had to abandon field after field as the Japanese advanced.

Instead of having a string of bases in eastern China, said an Associated Press dispatch today, the Americans

JAPS DRIVE ON LAST BIG CHINA SEAPORT

CHUNGKING, October 4 — The Japanese, whose defensive fleet is outnumbered, and whose defensive aircraft are outmatched, were moving swiftly tonight to take control of the entire coast of China in an effort to forestall the establishment of American airbases on the Chinese mainland within striking distance of Tokyo.

Foochow, the capital of Fukien Province, on the lower shore of the East China Sea, and in the heart of the coastal region whereon the Japanese have expected an Allied invasion, was threatened by a Japanese offensive tonight.

Foochow is the last big seaport still in Chinese hands. Late reports put Japanese troops six miles east of the city, which lies a short distance inland on the left bank of the Min Kiang River. The enemy was said to be advancing from the east in a flanking movement, a typical defensive strategy of the current Japanese offensive.

Coupled with the Foochow attack is the continuing Japanese drive on the Kwangsi capital city of Kweilin, communications hub and fortress city upon which the Chinese based all their plans for defense of southern China.

They damaged 45 luggers and 22 camouflaged troop barges; they blew up bridges and strafed steamers along the coast; they probably sank a large freighter in Formosa Strait, and they shot up barges along the rivers of Indo-China.

Although the Americans have had complete air superiority during the entire period of the Japanese east-China drive which began last May, they have had to abandon field after field as the Japanese advanced.

Instead of having a string of bases in eastern China, said an Associated Press dispatch today, the Americans now have full use of only one base. Difs is being bombed almost every night. (OWI)

ALLIED AIRCRAFT BOMB BURMA ROAD

KANDY, CEYLON, October 4 — Allied aircraft heavily bombed Japanese positions along the old Burma Road today, in the area of Lungling, where the Japanese are holding out on the last stretches of the old supply line into China.

Meantime, the British 14th Army in Burma continued to close in on the Japanese near their base at Tiddim, advancing over what headquarters here described as particularly tough country.

The main attack was moving up the «Chocolate Staircase,» the brown dirt, slippery-when-wet, winding, bending, twisting highway that leads up into the heights of the Chin Hills toward the Japanese hideout. (OWI)

JAP BORNEO BASE HIT HARD

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 4 — General Douglas MacArthur's air arm has struck the Japanese with one of the hardest blows of the campaign in the Netherlands Indies.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789221

On Saturday, heavy bombers dropped 74 tons of bombs on the oil port of Balikpapan, on the east coast of Dutch Borneo. Large fires were started, sending up thick billows of black smoke as hits were made on the large refinery plant. A 2,000-ton ship in Balikpapan harbor was also struck. Seven Japanese planes were shot down. Three heavy bombers failed to return.

The Borneo oil reserves were second in importance only to those on Sumatra and Java, for the Japanese war machine. (OWI)

19 JAP ADMIRALS DIE IN LAST MONTH

NEW YORK, October 4 — The Japanese news agency announced the death of seven more admirals today, bringing to 19 the number who have died in the last month.

The latest funerals were held for Admirals Kaneki Hashiura, Surokuro Morino, Tosaburo Ogura, Fuji Arimura, Shizuo Akasawa, Ryo Mori, and Seiko Miyamoto.

Radio Tokyo gave no details of where or how they died. (OWI)

ROOSEVELT ON U. S. AID TO CHINA

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Twenty thousand tons of American Lend-Lease supplies are now being flown into China every month, compared to only 2,000 tons per month a year and a half ago, President Roosevelt said yesterday in a report to Congress.

These supplies, the President said, are playing an increasingly important part in the Allied campaign to wrest additional sea and land bases from the Japanese invaders in order to make possible a still further increase in shipments to China. (OWI)

ROOSEVELT ANNOUNCES ITALIAN AID PLANS

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Plans were announced today by President Roosevelt for the use of substantial Allied supplies for help to rebuild Italy.

The President summoned today a delegation of supply officers from Italy to review measures for preventing civilian «hunger, sickness and fear» during the coming winter.

Steps have been taken, the President said, to enable the Italian people to throw their full weight of resources into the fight against Germany and Japan, Mr. Roosevelt said:

«In accordance with the policies with respect to Italy which were outlined jointly by Prime Minister Churchill and me, in a statement issued to the press on September 26, measures are now being taken to provide Italy with supplies necessary to prevent civilian hunger, sickness, and fear during the forthcoming winter. Steps are also being taken to restore the damaged transportation and electrical generating facilities of Italy to the extent necessary to enable the Italian people to throw their full resources into the fight against Germany and Japan.

«A delegation of supply officers has been called from Italy to Washington to review the needs and requirements of the Italian civilian population.

«In addition to the substantial quantities of food and clothing which are now being dropped and have for some time been shipped into Italy, 150,000 tons of wheat and flour are now scheduled for shipment.

«Steps are being taken to increase the bread ration in those areas of Italy where food supplies are below the standard necessary to maintain full health and efficiency.

«Through these, and other measures of assistance which are now in preparation, the Italian people will be enabled to increase their already significant contribution toward the defeat of the enemy.

«By doing these things, this country is serving the military aims and objectives of the United Nations, which require the greatest possible contribution from the manpower, and resources of every nation in the final overthrow of Germany and Japan.» (OWI)

EDEN ON ITALIAN COLONIES

LONDON, October 4 — Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said today in the House of Commons that the British Government are opposed to returning colonies to Italy. He said the British Government will adhere to their declaration that Italy's Empire in Africa is irrevocably lost.

Eden made the statement in reply to a question by Labor Member Percy Barstow, who sought assurance that Britain would stick to its policy. (OWI)

FLORENTINE PAINTINGS STOLEN BY GERMANS

FLORENCE, October 4 — It was disclosed here today that between 400 and 500 works of art belonging to the Uffizi Gallery and other Florentine collections have been stolen by the Germans from the Tuscany villas in which, on Mussolini's orders, they had been placed on the pretext of saving them from Allied bombing.

Although about half of the stolen canvases are of secondary importance, there are many of considerable artistic value. Among the latter are such masterpieces as Raphael's Veiled Woman, Botticelli's Minerva and Centaur, Donatello's Saint George, Michaelangelo's Bacchus, and Rembrandt's Portrait of an Old Man. 1,700 Trucks to Italy

«The distribution of food and essential supplies within the country has been seriously impeded by the damage done to the transportation system and by the wholesale commandeering of trucks by the enemy.

«To meet this emergency, it is planned to send 1,700 additional trucks to Italy.

«In addition, preparations are under way to supply substantial quantities of generating equipment, including temporary power facilities, to furnish electricity to essential industries and public utilities in central Italy which have been brought to a standstill by the almost complete destruction by the Germans of the power plants.

«The aid which the Allies have already given to Italy has been substantial. Since the invasion of Sicily to the end of this year, 2,300,000 long tons of civilian supplies will have been shipped to Italy. Of this total, 1,107,000 tons were food, and the balance consisted of coal, fertilizer, seeds, medical and sanitary supplies, and clothing.

«As an integral part of military operations, the Army has done a great deal to repair roads and bridges and railroads, and to repair water and power systems and motor transport.

CHURCHILL ON WAR CRIMINALS

LONDON, October 4 — Hitler, Goering, Goebbels, and Himmler, already on the British list of war criminals, will not necessarily undergo a trial.

In answer to a question in the House of Commons today, as to whether these men are on the British or United Nations list of war criminals for trial in due course, Prime Minister Churchill said, in part: «It should not be assumed that procedure of trial will necessarily be adopted.»

Samuel Silverman, a Labor member, asked: «Is Mr. Churchill aware that under the present terms of reference of the War Crimes Commission, none of these gentlemen would be indictable for any act committed against German nationals in Germany?»

Mr. Churchill replied: «We have to consider a lot of countries, and we are working with a great many countries. I was asked a question which I was not particularly looking for, because all this is very severed at the present time.» (Reuter)

U.K.-U.S.-U.S.S.R. ALLIANCE TO CONTINUE

MOSCOW, October 4 — British, American, and Soviet solidarity will endure for a long time, the Soviet newspaper Izvestia declared in an editorial recently.

It is an association intended not only to achieve complete victory over the common foe, the paper asserted, but to establish a stable lasting peace, and economic, political, and cultural cooperation among nations.

The paper said that the object of Soviet foreign policy is to smash Hitler Germany in the shortest possible time, to secure the interests of the Soviet Union to eliminate war aggression, to arrange peaceful, friendly relations with all neighboring states, and to secure close cooperation with all democratic states.

In countries in which the Red Army is now operating, Radio Moscow said Sunday, it is not the aim of the Soviet Union to interfere with their social structure. The independence of nations is a basic principle of the Soviet Union's program. (OWI)

PIERLOT WINS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

BRUSSELS, October 4 — The Belgian Parliament yesterday passed a vote of confidence in the Government by 131 to six. The vote followed Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot's presentation of a declaration of policy in which he said the Government would resign when King Leopold, now retained in Germany, returns to Belgium.

Pierlot said the Belgian Government would continue to fight at the side of the Allies until complete victory is obtained. He said the Government is studying the incorporation of the Belgian Forces of the Interior into the regular Army.

Pierlot also said that there would be no indulgence for collaborators with the enemy, and that the Government would not tolerate the formation of armed political groups which impose their views illegally. Resistance groups will be maintained where their assistance is still necessary. (OWI)

R.A.F. TO CONTRIBUTE FOR FRENCH CHILDREN

LONDON, October 4 — The RAF Bomber Command has made plans to raise two million francs for French children who have suffered through RAF bombing of France. Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris stated in a letter to all units requesting voluntary contributions.

The letter said:

"An inescapable consequence of bombing at times has led to the death of innocent people of France. Nevertheless, no one who has visited France in RAF uniform can fail to be impressed by the lack of rancor shown even by those who have directly suffered.

"The French people have aided in the escapes of RAF airmen, fully understanding that the penalty of discovery was death."

Air Marshall Harris suggested that the RAF Bomber Command forward its contributions to General Charles de Gaulle to provide a home where French children who have suffered from the bombings may receive proper care and protection. (OWI)

ALFRED E. SMITH DIES

NEW YORK, October 4 — Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State and Democratic presidential candidate in 1928, died today at Rockefeller Institute Hospital.

Born 30 December 1873 of humble circumstances in New York City, lower East Side, Smith became an outstanding exponent of the new type of American success story — not in accumulation of wealth, but in service to "even when his espousal of unpopular causes invited the enmity of powerful adversaries" and that he was "honest as the noonday sun." ASSAULT SHIP PRODUCTION GIVEN PRIORITY

WASHINGTON, October 4 — Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal said today that new types of assault ships, designed to carry fighting forces and their supplies directly to the invasion shore, have been given top priority in the Navy production program.

Forrestal said the vessels were a vital link in any operation conducted in the Pacific.

Recent launchings include a 24,000-ton oil tanker, said to be the largest ship in her class. Thirty-four cargo ships, three submarines, and a 2,200-ton destroyer, designed to outmatch the Japanese cruiser-destroyers, have also been launched recently.

Rubber Shortage Passes

The United States Rubber Reserve Company announced today that the danger of a rubber shortage in the United States for war purposes has been eliminated by a sharp upturn in production of synthetic rubber.

The 1944 production of synthetic rubber is expected to total 995,000 tons, 3½ times the 1943 production. (OWI)

FIAT MACHINERY MOVED TO GERMANY

LONDON, October 4 — The Swiss newspaper Gazette de Lausanne said today that the machinery of the Fiat, Ste Aeronautic d'Italia, and Ferriere-Fiat plants at Turin has been stolen by the Germans and is being moved to Germany.

The paper also said that the Germans, who recently blew up the Ali d'Italia Aeronautical plant in Turin, first surrounded the buildings and brought numerous machine guns into position to prevent Patriot opposition. (OWI)

FASCIST OFFENSIVE AGAINST PATRIOTS LOOMS

WASHINGTON, October 4 — A recent dispatch from Switzerland said that puppet Fascist troops are being concentrated in the Novara area, and that a large-scale offensive against Patriots of that area and in the Ossola Valley is seen in the very near future.

The dispatch said that puppet Fascist officers claim six German units will participate. (OWI)

NAZI POLICE ACTIVE IN DENMARK

LONDON, October 4 — Reports from Denmark indicate the increasing activity by Nazi security police as their position grows more insecure.

These police carried out an extensive hunt in Copenhagen for Danish laborers who had been employed in Germany and escaped back to Denmark. They arrested hundreds of workmen in cafes and on the streets, the Swedish radio said today.

Several prominent Danes have been interned in a concentration camp in Jutland — among them the head surgeon of the Copenhagen Municipal Hospital and the Chairman of the Danish-Polish Association. (OWI) by 131 to six. The vote followed Prime Minister Hubert Pierlot's presentation of a declaration of policy in which he said the Government would resign when King Leopold, now retained in Germany, returns to Belgium.

Pierlot said the Belgian Government would continue to fight at the side of the Allies until complete victory is obtained. He said the Government is studying the incorporation of the Belgian Forces of the Interior into the regular Army.

Pierlot also said that there would be no indulgence for collaborators with the enemy, and that the Government would not tolerate the formation of armed political groups which impose their views illegally. Resistance groups will be maintained where their assistance is still necessary. (OWI)

R.A.F. TO CONTRIBUTE FOR FRENCH CHILDREN

LONDON, October 4 — The RAF Bomber Command has made plans to raise two million francs for French children who have suffered through RAF bombing of France. Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, stated in a letter to all ranks requesting voluntary contributions.

The letter said:

"An inescapable consequence of bombing at times has led to the death of innocent people of France. Nevertheless, no one who has visited France in RAF uniform can fail to be impressed by the lack of rancor shown even by those who have directly suffered.

"The French people have aided in the escapes of RAF airmen, fully understanding that the penalty of discovery was death."

Air Marshall Harris suggested that the RAF Bomber Command forward its contributions to General Charles de Gaulle to provide a home where French children who have suffered from the bombings may receive proper care and protection. (OWI)

ALFRED E. SMITH DIES

NEW YORK, October 4 — Alfred E. Smith, former Governor of New York State and Democratic presidential candidate in 1928, died today at Rockefeller Institute Hospital.

Born 30 December 1873, of humble circumstances in New York City's lower East Side, Smith became an outstanding exponent of the new type of American success story — not in accumulation of wealth, but in service to his fellow men.

Although his formal schooling ended when he was 13, when his father's death left him the only support of the family, and although he never attended high school or college, he held honorary degrees from many large universities, among them Dublin (Ireland) University.

One of the most prominent Catholic laymen in America, Smith was honored a few years ago with appointment as a Papal Chamberlain.

During his four terms as Governor of America's most populous state he instigated much social legislation to improve the living standards of New York's working men and women. In later years he retired from public life, devoting his time largely to management of the Empire State Building, the world's tallest office building, and also to several corporations of which he was a director. NEUTRAL

U.S., U.K. ASK NEUTRALS TO BLOCK AXIS FUNDS

WASHINGTON, October 4 — The United States and Great Britain have requested neutral nations to prevent Axis leaders from "retaining their loot" or "finding safe haven" for their wealth in neutral nations, the State Department announced today.

These representations, also made by the British Government, were made in keeping with a resolution at the Bretton Woods Conference and were directed at objectives similar to those of the United Nations declaration of 5 January 1943, with respect to looted property, the announcement said. They are also similar to the declaration of 22 February 1944, concerning looted gold.

The State Department announcement said:

"The problem of uncovering and disentangling enemy and looted property is one of international character, which can be most effectively handled in cooperation with neutral countries."

SANCTIONS AGAINST ARGENTINA URGED

NEW YORK, October 4 — A former member of the faculty of Tucuman University (Argentina), Felix Cernuschi, who described himself as a leader of an extensive Underground Movement in Argentina, urged today that economic sanctions be applied against Argentina by all democratic nations.

Cernuschi said that he favored an immediate embargo on shipments to Argentina of raw materials, machinery, and industrial products, because as long as the democratic countries trade with Dictator Peron [Colonel Juan D. Peron, Vice President of Argentina] they strengthen his hand and delay the overthrow of his Government.

He said that he considered the Peron Government a direct agency of Nazi-Germany.

Cernuschi declared that 90 per cent of the Argentine people are opposed to the Peron Regime, and, although economic sanction would mean additional hardship and sacrifice, «such action would be welcomed, as our country is sick and we would appreciate the medicine we need.»

He added that Argentine nationals, anticipating the defeat of Germany, have entered into exchanges of property with Germans. They have exchanged Argentine holdings for far more valuable properties in the Reich, in the belief that the occupying forces will permit their retention by non-Germans.

Cernuschi also said that the democratic Underground Movement had established headquarters in Montevideo, Uruguay, under the name of the Junta of National Liberation. It comprises members of all political parties, as well as members of the Army, Navy, and clergy. (OWI)

60 KILLED IN VIENNA RIOTING

BERNE, October 4 — At least 60 persons were killed, several hundred wounded, and hundreds arrested in Vienna during rioting that broke out in the city and spread to other parts of the country after a nation-wide announcement curtailing food rations roughly 10 per cent, according to a dispatch to the New York Times today.

The fighting is continuing sporadically in certain quarters of Vienna, reports said, despite the most energetic measures taken by the Gestapo and the Elite Guard, which claim to have virtually mastered the situation.

In the industrial southeastern section of Vienna, however, where the rioters are supported by the outlawed Red Eagle Patriot movement, the strikers are reported to have overpowered an Elite Guard garrison, and carried out a considerable amount of sabotage in Graz, before a threat their attacks against enemy communications, troop concentrations, and supply centers in northern Italy.

Other fighters attacked shipping and gun positions in the Adriatic sector.

MAAF flew approximately 800 sorties.

From these operations, six of our aircraft are missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 4 — Today's communique:

Allied troops advancing north of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal have reached a point about eight miles northeast of Antwerp on the road to Breda.

North of Turnhout, we have taken Baarle Nassau.

East of Turnhout, our forces are in the village of Reusel.

Between the Maas and Waal, the villages of Wamel and Dreumel have been freed. In the area of Overloon, a German counter-attack was repulsed by our troops with an estimated 50 per cent loss to the enemy.

Allied forces attacking in the area north of Aachen are advancing slowly against varying resistance from German artillery and small arms and from pillboxes. Our troops have penetrated to Ubach, three miles south of Geilenkirchen, and have advanced against heavy resistance in the area immediately southwest of Ubach.

Gains have been made in the vicinity of Meckstein, north of Kerkrad.

Just south of Aachen, intense tank and mortar fire now been directed against our units, and in the area west of Hurtgen, small enemy counter-attacks were repulsed at three points.

Fighters and fighter-bombers supported ground forces and attacked transport targets in Holland and the Rhineland.

In southeastern Luxembourg, our troops gained high ground just west of Echternach and Grevenmacher. Farther south, high ground was taken in the vicinity of Mazieres Les Metz, on the west side of the Moselle northwest of Metz.

Five miles southwest of Metz, our forces entered Fort Driant after a successful assault. East of Nancy, the enemy has been forced back in the Foret de Parroy by our advance, which gained more than a mile in some sectors. Our armored elements repulsed a counter-attack by enemy infantry and tanks in the vicinity of Anglemont, five miles southwest of Baccarat.

Northeast of Epinal, our troops, favored by clearing weather, made new gains and occupied several villages. These included Grandvillers, Deyvillmont, and Lepanges.

Farther south, resistance was more stubborn and enemy counter-attacks have been more frequent.

Limited progress was made in one area northwest of Belfort.

A sea dyke near West Kapelle, on the Dutch Island of Walcheren, was breached yesterday in a two-hour attack by waves of heavy bombers escorted by fighters. A gap 120 yards wide was made in the dyke, and extensive flooding of enemy positions resulted.

None of our aircraft is missing from this operation.

More than 1,000 heavy bombers with strong fighter escort attacked the Daimler Benz factory at Gaggenau, a tank works at Nurnberg, and airfields at Lachen Speyerdorf and Giebelstadt. Escorting fighters also strafed airfields in Germany.

Eleven bombers are missing. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, October 4 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in Yugoslavia, west of Vrashets, our troops seized the towns and railway stations of Alibunar and Vladimirovat, and the populated localities and railway stations of Debelyache, Tresnyat, Banatsko-Kroleviche, and Banatsko-Novoselo.

Southwest of the Rumanian city of Turnu-Severin, our troops in fighting continued to advance, and on the Yugoslavian territory seized the following populated localities: Shtubik, Jasenitsa, Dopla, Oshtreli, Bar, Brestovat, Nikolechivo, Zvezdla, Velik-Izor, Gorlyane, and Vrotarnitsa, and the railway stations of Brestovat and Vrotarnitsa.

Our troops made contact with the units of People's Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, and jointly engaged in operation for annihilation of German troops, in the area west of Negotin.

On other sectors, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During October 3, five enemy planes were shot down in aerial combats.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 4 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Piedmont continues to be the region in which Patriot activity is most intense.

declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

A clash took place near Vayes, in Turin Province, on September 29. Two vehicles full of enemy troops were attacked and destroyed. The Germans lost seven dead and 31 wounded. The next day, in a clash near Rivoli, five Germans were killed.

A column of German troops were resolutely met by Patriots in Valle Sagona. Forty-three Germans were killed and 25 wounded.

Among the most important acts of sabotage carried out by Patriots in Piedmont are the disruption of the Rivoli-Rosta line for a stretch of 500 meters; the destruction of 100 meters of railway tracks near Avigliana; the capture of a large quantity of explosives from a dynamite depot; the capture of machinery and gasoline from the Fiat works at Miraflore.

In the Spezia sector, 10 bridges were blown up. A few enemy vehicles were attacked and destroyed.

In the Fucecchio Marshes, in northern Tuscany, the Germans massacred 314 persons residing in the towns of Monsummano, Ponte Buggianese, Fucecchio, and Farciano. Seventy-five per cent of the victims were women and children. They were herded together by the German garrison at Chiesina and machine-gunned.

A few children who had been wounded were finished off by bayonet thrusts.

At Cossola, the Germans crowded their victims into little rooms and killed them with hand grenades.

At Pietrasanta, 30 persons were massacred.

At Forte dei Marmi, the Germans blew up the largest civilian hospital. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 4 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

At Antwerp and the Belgian-Dutch frontier north of Turnhout, the Canadian Army continues to exert pressure. In this sector, grim fighting is in progress.

North of Nijmegen and on the banks of the Maas, the Anglo-Americans launched fierce attacks and suffered serious losses. Their attacks were frustrated by the stubborn resistance and powerful counter-attacks of our grenadiers and tanks.

At the German-Dutch frontier, south of Gellenkirchen, a fresh American division, which had been thrown into the battle punched a local gap into our lines in grim fluctuating fighting.

Over the Dutch theater of war and the Vosges, German fighters protected our attacks and supported the defensive ground operations by warding off enemy low-level attacks.

Yesterday, in the Parroy Forest and on the mountain slopes east of Epinal and Remiremont, stubborn attacks of U.S. formations in general broke down in our fire, or resulted only in the capture of some villages or forest ground.

An armistice allowing the evacuation of the civilians is reported from Dunkirk.

In the glacis of our fortified strongpoints on the Atlantic Coast, there were artillery activity and local encounters.

Italy:

In the mountains of the Etruscan Apennines, our grenadier divisions continued steadfastly to check American attacks launched on a broad front with extremely large quantities of material. They frustrated for the time being all enemy attempts at breaking through in grim fighting for certain summits partly from new positions.

On the Adriatic coast, attacking British companies were

South of the big bend of the Danube, grim fighting also is in progress.

West of Arad, German-Hungarian formations launched successful attacks.

Southwest of Grosswardein, our tank forces threw back Soviet rifle divisions and tank formations in a powerful counter-attack, and destroyed 24 tanks.

West of Torenberg and at the Maros, heavy enemy attacks were frustrated by our troops. The enemy made but unconsiderable progress.

In the eastern Beskides, south of Dukla, the grim fighting for the pass roads continues. Having repelled all Soviet attacks and carried away all weapons and material, our rear-guards supported by security vessels and warships of the Navy, evacuated the bridgeheads in the southern part of the Dago Island.

In Finland, our troops reached the ordered objectives in their retreat northward.

In the Norwegian waters, German minesweepers damaged three Soviet motor assault boats, hitting one of them so seriously that her loss must be reckoned with.

Air:

USAAF bombers launched terror raids on Nurnberg without ground visibility. Damage was caused to residential quarters and cultural institutions.

The regions of Cologne and the Rhineland also were targets of the enemy terror bombers. Last night, British planes dropped bombs on Kassel and Aschaffenburg.

In some localities of southern and southwestern Germany, tenements were destroyed by isolated bombs and gunfire.

Air defense forces brought down 31 enemy planes, 13 of which were four-engined bombers. (Radio Berlin)

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW DRIVE ON ARNHEM CANADIANS GAIN ON ALL SECTORS

SHAEF, October 5 — The British 2nd Army launched a new drive today northward toward the Arnhem bridge, and late dispatches tonight reported gains of two miles along a six-mile front.

Preceded by a shattering artillery barrage, British troops probed the new and hastily-prepared German lines north eight miles downstream from Antwerp. The capture of Capellen and Stabroek, to the west of Lillo, placed Allied troops within 10 miles of the only road and rail-junction linking the Dutch islands with the mainland. The thrust to Woensdrecht would maroon a large number of Germans whose only hope of escape would be by ferry to the islands further north.

In Holland, Allied troops have regained lost ground at Baarle Nassau, and have advanced farther north. Another drive to the northeast of Poppel has placed British troops with the Canadian 1st Army three miles south of Tilburg, at Voort.

An additional truce of four hours has been granted to the Germans at Dunkirk. Hostilities will be resumed at 1600 hours tomorrow.

The flooding of Walcheren Island, on the northern side of the Scheldt Estuary, now covers an area of 25 square miles, and it is reported that German supply lines are now under eight feet of water.

Break-Through Exploited

Tanks, guns, and infantry are pouring through the Siegfried Line break-through north of Aachen and American 1st Army troops have advanced beyond Utsch to capture Beggendorf. American forces are now across the Aachen-Gelenkirchen highway, and within a mile of the main highway leading to Munchen and Gladbach. Following the capture of Beggendorf, tanks fanned out to exploit the break-through.

An overcast sky and fog kept Allied planes from supporting Allied infantry, tanks, and artillery.

The Americans are meeting an extremely heavy concentration of artillery fire. German troops are being taken from positions north and south of the break-through and are being put into the line at Utsch, in an effort to stem the Allied advance. One American commander stated that the progress was slowed by the number of German dead on the roads.

East and southeast of Stolberg, American patrols met strong resistance, and a German counter-attack was repelled. Another counter-attack against American positions north of Rotgen was also repulsed.

American 3rd Army infantry troops have penetrated the subterranean tunnels of Fort Driant, guarding Metz, despite shelling from adjacent forts and heavy opposition from ground forces. Tanks have been moved into the fort and are firing point-blank at German strongpoints. The Germans are systematically being driven out of their surface emplacements by bulldozer tanks, which have plowed dirt over their positions.

Farther south, in the Epinal area, Allied artillery barrages are increasing against prepared German positions which have been reinforced and improved.

BRITISH LAUNCH NEW DRIVE ON ARNHEM CANADIANS GAIN ON ALL SECTORS

SHAEF, October 5 — The British 2nd Army launched a new drive today northward toward the Arnhem bridge, and late dispatches tonight reported gains of two miles along a six-mile front.

Preceded by a shattering artillery barrage, British troops probed the new and hastily-prepared German lines north of Elst, and their initial drive brought them within two miles of the lower Rhine and of Arnhem.

The Germans are resisting stubbornly, throwing in armor supported by artillery, self-propelled guns, and mortars.

Another British force is striking eastward toward the Pannerdensch Canal. General Miles Dempsey has been building up his strength between the Waal and the lower Rhine, and holds fairly powerful positions northeast of Nijmegen. His forces are also established in strength along large stretches of the south bank of the lower Rhine, west of Arnhem.

Counter-Attack Beat Off

Along the eastern flank of the Allied corridor, British troops have cleared the north bank of the Nooter Canal along a nine-mile stretch between Weert and south of Meyel. To the north, American tanks and infantry beat off a fierce German counter-attack in the Overloon sector during the night, and they are fighting hard in the mud and swamps.

The Germans continue to hold a firm line along the western flank of the corridor, but British armored patrols are pushing out aggressively toward Hertogenbosch.

Along the Channel coast, Canadian units have cleared the east bank of the Scheldt River as far north as Lillo, with the Canadian 1st Army three miles south of Antwerp at Voort.

An additional truce of four hours has been granted to the Germans at Dunkirk. Hostilities will be resumed at 1000 hours tomorrow.

The flooding of Walcheren Island, on the northern side of the Scheldt Estuary, now covers an area of 25 square miles, and it is reported that German supply lines are now under eight feet of water.

Break-Through Exploited

Tanks, guns, and infantry are pouring through the Siegfried Line break-through north of Aachen and American 1st Army troops have advanced beyond Ubach to capture Beggendorf. American forces are now across the Aachen-Gellenkirchen highway, and within a mile of the main highway leading to München and Gladbach. Following the capture of Beggendorf, tanks fanned out to exploit the break-through.

An overcast sky and fog kept Allied planes from supporting Allied infantry, tanks, and artillery.

The Americans are meeting an extremely heavy concentration of artillery fire. German troops are being taken from positions north and south of the break-through and are being put into the line at Ubach, in an effort to stem the Allied advance. One American commander stated that the progress was slowed by the number of German dead on the roads.

East and southeast of Stolberg, American patrols met strong resistance, and a German counter-attack was repelled. Another counter-attack against American positions north of Rötgen was also repulsed.

American 3rd Army infantry troops have penetrated the subterranean tunnels of Fort Driant, guarding Metz, despite shelling from adjacent forts and heavy opposition from ground forces. Tanks have been moved into the fort and are firing point-blank at German strongpoints. The Germans are systematically being driven out of their surface emplacements by bulldozer tanks, which have plowed dirt over their positions.

Farther south, in the Epinal area, Allied artillery barrages are increasing against prepared German positions which have been reinforced and improved.

OBJECTIVES ACHIEVED AT ARNHEM TANK BATTLE AT UBACH

SHAEF, October 5 — The British 2nd Army attack south of Arnhem has achieved its objectives and action has been temporarily concluded, late dispatches reported tonight.

A tank battle is raging between American armor and German panzers east of the Ubach. The Germans are fighting hard to keep the Americans from exploiting their breakthrough. (Reuter)

BALIKPAPAN REFINERIES STRUCK

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 5 — Forty tons of bombs were dropped yesterday on the important Japanese oil center at Balikpapan, in Dutch Borneo.

The raid was the second heavy attack in five days, and the sixth attack of the war, on that vital Japanese fuel-production center.

General Douglas MacArthur's communique said that 19 Jap fighters were shot down. Seven American heavy bombers failed to return. (OWI)

GERMAN RAIL AND AIR CENTERS BOMBED AGAIN

LONDON, October 5 — German airfields and marshalling yards at Cologne, Rheine, Handorf, Lippstadt, Paderborn, and Munster were bombed today by more than 1,000 American Flying Fortresses and Liberators, while RAF Lancasters attacked the big German port of Wilhelmshafen.

Two main forces of American heavies, with a strong fighter escort, dropped their bombs on the choked rail terminals at Cologne and Rheine, while smaller formations struck at airfields in the other centers. The RAF lost one bomber in their attack on industrial objectives at Wilhelmshafen, where clouds obscured the immediate observation of results.

RAF Mosquitoes maintained their attacks on enemy rail targets and stopped 18 trains in Germany and Holland last night. This brings to 134 the total number of trains attacked by Mosquitoes in four nights.

Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF, which yesterday maintained their bombing of German road, river, and rail communications ahead of the advancing American armies, shot down five enemy planes for the loss of one. They were particularly active in the network in the Deventer area, near Zuider Zee. Lightnings attacked 10 Focke Wulf 190's and damaged three. Nine Thunderbolts are missing from yesterday's operations. Bad weather limited similar operations today.

Bombers attached to the Royal Navy attacked German shipping off the Dutch coast last night.

Reconnaissance photographs of the German submarine base at Bergen revealed that four German submarines — three of them in floating docks — were hit in yesterday's attacks by a Canadian group of the RAF Bomber Command. One floating dock, containing one submarine, was sunk. In another dock, a submarine is partly submerged. Yet another dock is itself partly submerged, and a submarine is leaning against the north side of it. The fourth submarine, elsewhere, is damaged, and a vessel beside the jetty has been sunk.

Submarine pens under construction were hit, and a floating crane has disappeared. Machine shops and the main engineering and boiler shops have been damaged. (OWI - Reuter)

GENERALS PLAN WINTER CAMPAIGN

WITH BRITISH 2ND ARMY, HOLLAND, October 5 — "A winter campaign now seems inevitable, and tonight we are allowed to go further, and say that Eisenhower and Montgomery are preparing for it."

Thus wrote Daily Express correspondent Alan Moorehead on his return to the front after a week's leave.

"The advance on Germany has stopped," said Moorehead. "Here and there, the armies fight into new towns and keypoints along the border, but the broad onward sweep is finished.

"All this was becoming apparent last week when the advance began to dissipate in a series of German counter-attacks right along the line.

"The new campaign is bound to include at least one major, all-out battle along the Rhine, and this of course may be coordinated with Russian plans. Meanwhile, these wet, dreary weeks of October are a time of building up and capturing a network of ports and springboards for the great assault when it comes.

"It would be unfair to the fighting troops to say that thrusts like the one General Hodges is carrying out around Aachen are not important. They are. But they are not the big thing. The big thing is the preparation for the winter campaign."

Moorehead said that the Germans were fighting with the utmost fanaticism. Their counter-attacks were launched with the greatest determination, and the Germans were prepared to lose any number of men to gain their objectives.

"Yesterday," he said, "I saw a German counter-attack be sent into the attack, only one company got across the starting line.

"Actions flare up suddenly here and there from day to day. You might compare the whole scene to a volcano that keeps fretting and building until the inevitable eruption begins." (Reuter)

HARD, BITTER FIGHT AHEAD, SAYS STIMSON

WASHINGTON, October 5 — Secretary of War Henry Stimson said today that the Germans have been sufficiently successful in raising additional recruits and in rehabilitating their withdrawing armies to put up a stiff and bitter defense of their West Wall.

The Secretary added that the fight in Europe will be extremely hard, saying that German organization and discipline have thus far held up.

However, declared Stimson, the signs of German decay are obvious. He pointed to the easy success of British operations in Greece as the latest sign of broken German power.

Reviewing developments during the past week, Stimson said the great port of Antwerp had been taken almost unharmed. He predicted, that the German fight for Amsterdam and Rotterdam would be vigorous. (Reuter)

5TH ARMY SEIZES RIDGE SOUTH OF MONTERENZIO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 5 — American forces of the 5th Army, pushing doggedly northward through the Apennines defiles toward the Plain of the Po, yesterday fought their way forward against reinforced forces to seize a key ridge midway between the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys, and only 14 airline-miles from Bologna.

The advance, described in official reports as the greatest advance in the preceding 24 hours, gave American troops possession of high ground within 11 miles of the Emilia Highway, running from Rimini through Bologna on to Milan, and the principal road link of the rich and fertile Lombardy Plain. It is more than two miles north of Casoni di Romagna, captured by American forces Monday, and 1½ miles northeast of the village of Boschi, which American infantrymen were reported to be approaching yesterday.

Other American infantrymen leading the advance through the mountain valleys toward the Plain of the Po, yesterday thrust to within 1,000 yards of the town of Loiano, 14½ miles south of Bologna on the main approach road from Florence.

Monte Venere Taken

Farther east, still other American troops stormed and took lofty Monte Venere, roughly three miles west of Loiano, and dominating both the main highway through this town and the secondary road to Bologna from Prato along the Setta River Valley.

The American forces, driving northward along a 15 mile wide front spanning four river valleys leading down to the Po Plain, thrust deeper into the Santerno River Valley yesterday to seize positions just short of the village of Monterenzio, 12 miles southwest of Imola and the Po Valley Highway. Other troops penetrated into the Sillaro Valley to reach the village of Castelo, where German forces were fighting fiercely to block further American advance. Castelo is only 11 miles southwest of Castel San Pietro, a town on the Rimini-Bologna Highway, and northwest of Imola.

Still further west on the American front, but not as far north as the key-ridge south of Monterenzio, and dominating the southern stretches of the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys, American troops pushed several hundred

WITH BRITISH 2ND ARMY, HOLLAND, October 5 — «A winter campaign now seems inevitable, and tonight we are allowed to go further, and say that Eisenhower and Montgomery are preparing for it.»

Thus wrote Daily Express correspondent Alan Moorehead on his return to the front after a week's leave.

«The advance on Germany has stopped,» said Moorehead. «Here and there, the armies fight into new towns and keypoints along the border, but the broad onward sweep is finished.

«All this was becoming apparent last week when the advance began to dissipate in a series of German counter-attacks right along the line.

«The new campaign is bound to include at least one major, all-out battle along the Rhine, and this of course may be coordinated with Russian plans. Meanwhile, these wet, dreary weeks of October are a time of building up and capturing a network of ports and springboards for the great assault when it comes.

«It would be unfair to the fighting troops to say that thrusts like the one General Hodges is carrying out around Aachen are a full-scale invasion of Germany.

«The invasion, when it comes, will be a much bigger thing — very much bigger — as the Germans are perfectly aware. They hold and counter-attack now all the way to the Channel from Switzerland, in order to delay our preparations, and to gain time to regroup their new patchwork armies along the Rhine.

«Hitler is committing himself to a winter campaign as much as we are. If you ask what stopped us, there are probably three main answers. One, lack of nearby ports. Two, renewed passionate German resistance once they were back on their own soil. Three, weather.

«In Normandy, we fought close to our supply dumps and kept the Germans dancing round our perimeter at the end of long lines of supply. Now, the position is reversed.

«Last week, the Germans planned to follow the breaking of our airborne division at Arnhem with the reconquest of Nijmegen. But now we are very strong around the town, and the enemy falls back to sporadic bombing and mine-laying attacks upon the great, single-span bridge.

«Another Normandy is being made along these flat plains — if anything, worse because of the mud. You can judge the desperate nature of the fighting by the fact that one German commander reported that of three battalions dam and Rotterdam would be vigorous. (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 5 — American forces of the 5th Army, picking doggedly northward through the Apennines defiles toward the Plain of the Po, yesterday fought their way forward against reinforced forces to seize a key ridge midway between the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys, and only 14 airline-miles from Bologna.

Still farther west on the American front, but not so far north as the key-ridge south of Monterenzio, and dominating the southern stretches of the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys, American troops pushed several hundred yards north of the village of Lagune, in a gain of a mile from positions held south of Boschi yesterday.

Other American troops on their left flank took the village of Quinzano, on the other side of the Idice River and ½ mile south of the village of San Benedetto, captured several days ago.

South African forces, operating on the left of the American troops, yesterday entered the village of Lagaro, 20 miles south of Bologna, on the Prato-Bologna road, and some five miles southwest of American infantrymen on Monte Venere, overlooking the road and the Setta River Valley through which it runs. Other 5th Army troops four miles to the west fought to seize Monte Vigese, affording observation over the Pistoia-Bologna Road along the Reno River Valley.

On the 8th Army's Adriatic front, troops of an Indian division took the village of San Donato, 15 miles southwest of Rimini, and located on the west bank of the upper waters of the Rubicon River, in the only gain reported.

It was revealed today that German forces are desperately attempting to throw up hasty entrenchments and earthworks to hold the 5th Army drive toward Bologna and the Po Plain. Artillery fire of all calibers is being employed to harass the advancing Allied troops. (PRO)

PATRIOTS RECEIVE SWIFT ALLIED AIR SUPPORT

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 5 — Italian Patriots, operating behind the German lines, recently received fighter-bomber close support in an engagement with the Germans only 15 minutes after they radioed for Allied help from the air, it was revealed here today.

The Italian Patriots were unable to liberate a small mountain village because of the heavy fire from a German gun battery, but when it was silenced by the Allied planes, the Patriot forces entered the hamlet that night. (PRO)

MUNICH RAIL YARDS DAMAGED.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 5 — Rail yards at Munich, Germany, suffered extensive damage to station buildings, trackage, rolling stock, and storage facilities yesterday, as the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, with the first favorable weather in eight days, returned to nearly full strength operation figures of more than 2,000 sorties, it was announced here today.

Good results were also reported at three key viaducts along the Brenner pass route into Germany and against five bridges along rail lines leading into northeastern Italy.

Although weather conditions held all but two formations of Mitchell medium bombers to the ground, fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out nearly 500 sorties against enemy communications in the immediate battle area, and in close support of advancing Allied ground forces.

An attack by rocket-firing Beaufighters of the Coastal Air Force resulted in the destruction of a 2,000-3,000-ton oil tanker at the port of Grado, northwest of Trieste in the Adriatic.

Spitfires of the Desert Air Force hit German gun turrets concealed in ecclesiastical buildings near Montevenzio, just in advance of American troops of the 5th Army.

Balkan Air Force planes struck at rail yards and shipping at Zara, Yugoslavia, which also attacked rail and motor transport, ammunition dumps, and gun positions in Yugoslavia. (PRO)

ALLIES WELCOMED IN GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 5. — Allied troops are now on some Greek islands, as well as on the mainland of Greece, and are in Albania, today's announcement said.

The Allied troops are in contact with the enemy in both countries, the statement said.

These landings were effected by parachute, by sea, and by transport aircraft.

Meanwhile, Allied artillery on the liberated Dalmatian island of Brac continued to harass enemy communications to the north along the Yugoslav mainland, and are engaging enemy batteries, the report stated.

In Albania, Land Forces Adriatic troops in close cooperation with Albanian Resistance Forces, are harassing German units attempting to maintain their communications with the Isle of Corfu.

The focal point of these operations is the little south Albanian port of Sarande, just across the straits from the Ionian Island of Corfu.

Allied forces received a "wild enthusiastic" welcome from the people of Patras, located at the extreme northern end of the Peloponnese Peninsula, at the entrance to the Gulf of Corinth, it was announced today.

Patriots Gave Assistance

Greek Patriots are aiding the Allied forces in the operations on the Greek mainland, it was stated.

The British forces entered Patras on the night of October 4, in welcome to the British troops. Tremendous cheers greeted the unloading of each troop craft, and church bells rang out in the villages all along the coast.

The landings were made just two hours before darkness fell, in the twilight period of a stormy day, the reports stated.

RAF regiment troops worked furiously to unload trucks, cars, and stores before the waning light should fail, while peasant girls crowded about them with wreathes of roses and lilies, it was said.

As the troops pushed inland through the night, the word of their advance spread like wildfire, and the villages came to life to the joyful clangor of the church bells, so that when the troops arrived, the streets were lined with people, waving torches, and holding their children in their arms to witness the liberation on their homeland.

The establishment of landing grounds for the RAF planes, returned to the Greek mainland after three years, began immediately after the first RAF personnel landed on September 26, the official announcement today said.

The retreating Germans had cratered the airfields with high explosive blasts, and had blown up all buildings and strewn the ground with anti-personnel mines. In the wreckage of one building, Allied pamphlets, telling of the plot against Hitler three months ago and of disaffection in Germany, were found among the rubble of these blasted buildings.

Greek Patriots, called into service by the Greek National Army of Liberation, aided the RAF to reconstruct their fields and make them ready for the first planes.

As soon as news of the arrival of the British troops spread, Italian soldiers, who had been deserted by the retreating Germans, wandered into the liberated areas, to give themselves up. They were said to be ragged and bootless, and to have stated that the Germans had stolen all their underclothing before turning them adrift in the hill country.

Bombings Preceding Landings

The Allied landing at the Greek mainland was preceded by a two-weeks long bombardment by British and American bombers of Greek airfields, ports, and rail centers, to paralize German efforts to evacuate their forces on the Aegean islands and the mainland. More than 1,100 bombers were employed in the air assaults, and more than 2,000 tons of bombs were dropped on enemy targets in the area.

The airfields attacked were those at Eleusis, Tatoi, and Kalamaki, in the Athens area, where the Germans had assembled JU-52 transport planes to evacuate key personnel and Nazi higher-ups from Crete and the other islands into Greece and thence northward.

Salonika, second-largest Greek city and port, and terminal of the main lines leading to Belgrade and Budapest, and Larissa, key rail hub 150 miles north of Athens, were both heavily hit by medium and heavy bombers of the 15th AAF.

German submarine bases at Skaramanga and Salamis, both near Piraeus, the port of Athens, were also attacked.

Allied naval operations in the Aegean Sea have been carried on at the same time as the land and air force operations against the Ionian coast of Greece.

British ships bombarded the Maleme airdrome in Crete, while aircraft from a force of escort carriers, under command of Rear Admiral Thomas Troubridge, attacked the Isle of Leathos, just northwest of Kos, and attacked Porto Largo on the Island of Leros.

Six German assault vessels were engaged by two British destroyers and sunk off Psropi, northwest of the Isle of Rhodes.

Large fires were reported burning at Rhodes on the night of October 2-3. (PRO)

Greek Patriots are aiding the Allied forces in the operations on the Greek mainland, it was stated.

The British forces entered Patras on the night of October 3/4 after being landed by sea.

Paratroops, dropped in daylight by British troop-carrying planes, had already made landings on the Greek mainland some days before, it was revealed.

These paratroops were followed by other forces landed on airfields seized by the airborne troops, and by D-day, when the British regular troops were landed, Spitfire fighters, flying from Greek mainland fields, provided cover.

No opposition was encountered by any of these forces in the early stages of the operation, it was reported.

The entire operation on the Greek mainland was coordinated by the Balkan Air Force, commanded by Air Vice Marshal W. Elrd, C. B., with Land Forces Adriatic in charge of the actual execution of the campaign.

Official reports stated that hundreds of people from mainland villages crowded about the quay at Patras as the fleet of landing craft for infantry and tanks berthed after a two-day-long sea voyage, during which the ships narrowly avoided destruction in a violent gale, in which huge waterspouts swirled across the wind-lashed waters of the Ionian Sea.

BRAZILIAN 5TH ARMY FORCES TO BE STRENGTHENED

ROME, October 5 — Major General Enrico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War who, during his tour of inspection of Brazilian troops, was given command of an important sector of the 5th Army front comprising British and American, as well as Brazilian troops, declared today that the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, now only a contingent, will be materially strengthened as quickly as opportunity presents.

The War Minister, who held a press conference here tonight, said that he had found the « Morale, health, and combat efficiency of the Brazilian troops already engaged in Italy of the highest possible order. »

He stated that the Brazilian forces and their commanders had been received in the best possible manner by the American officers and soldiers of the 5th Army.

General Dutra said that, although progress along the Italian front was not so rapid as some might desire, due to the difficulties of the terrain, of weather, and enemy demolitions, he was confident that the 5th Army would soon be « masters of the Valley of the Po. »

General Dutra expressed great satisfaction at his audience with the Pope, not only as a Roman Catholic, but as a Brazilian whose country had been visited and studied by Pope Pius XII before his accession to the Papal throne.

The Brazilian War Minister said that he hoped to return later to witness the arrival of other Brazilian troops in Italy, and also hoped to go to England and to inspect the French theater of operations.

His plans for the immediate future were not altogether settled, the Minister said, but he indicated that the main purpose of his visit, to examine the needs and the conditions of the Brazilian troops in actual combat, had been achieved. (PRO)

U. S. CASUALTIES IN ITALY TOTAL 82,111

WASHINGTON, October 5 — Secretary of War Henry Stimson announced at a press conference today that American casualties in the Italian theater totalled 82,111 up to September 25.

Of the total, which does not include air force personnel, 13,889 were killed, 58,178 wounded, and 10,044 missing.

Army casualties on all fronts were put at 351,295, of which 68,568 have been killed, 195,921 wounded, 45,489 missing, and 51,316 taken prisoner.

The new figures are an increase of 13,550 over the figures released two weeks ago. They cover the period up to September 21.

The latest U. S. casualty figures put Navy dead at 25,963, wounded at 25,588, missing 9,761, prisoners, 4,480, for a total of 65,792. (OWI)

RUSSIANS CLOSING ON BELGRADE

MOSCOW, October 5 — Russian and Yugoslav troops took the Yugoslav rail junction city of Pancevo today, eight miles east of Belgrade.

They pushed onward beyond Pancevo, and tonight were probing forward into the outskirts of the Yugoslav capital.

The Soviet communique said 76 German aircraft were captured in the swift drive which overwhelmed Nazi forces in the Pancevo area.

The communique said nothing but patrol activity was reported from other areas of the Iraq front. But German Overseas News Agency broadcasts told of a strong Russian offensive begun along the borders of East Prussia.

The Germans said also that strong Russian artillery barrages were laid down in the triangle of the confluence of the Bug and Narew rivers, north of Warsaw.

From the Baltic front, Reuter dispatches said tonight that Red Fleet forces were concentrating for an attack on the island of Saaremaa, a large land mass which commands the entrance to the Gulf of Riga — and the escape route by sea, of Nazi forces trapped in the Latvian capital. (Reuter)

TORNIO LIBERATED

HELSINKI, October 5 — Battle line dispatches said tonight that nothing but two German field hospitals remain of enemy forces that had been holding out in Tornio, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia. The town was said to be completely in Finnish hands.

A slight Finnish withdrawal in the face of a heavily reinforced German attack east of Kemi was reported tonight. On another sector of this northern front, Finnish troops have taken two more towns, Ranua and Simo. (OWI)

ALL NAZI SHIPS IN BLACK SEA DESTROYED

LONDON, October 5 — All German ships in the Black Sea which were too big to sail up the Danube have either been blown up or scuttled, the German Overseas News Agency said today, quoting the naval correspondent of the Volkischer Beobachter.

The report said that nearly 100 small vessels, such as armed ferries, naval tugs, and R-boats, had been mobilized as a river force for the Iron Gate battle.

Crews of the destroyed ships, returning by land to their bases, have been engaged in battle, the correspondent reported. (PWB)

ALLIED LEADERS HONORED BY RUSSIA

MOSCOW, October 5 — The Soviet Order of Suvorov and other Soviet decorations have been awarded to Allied war leaders for outstanding services rendered in the struggle against the common enemy, Hitlerite Germany.

Lieutenant General Mark Clark, Commander of the U.S. 5th Army in Italy, was similarly honored for "outstanding military operations of the Allied troops in Italy."

For the direction of operations on the west front, and the liberation of a considerable part of French and Belgian territory with their capitals, Paris and Brussels, and entering Luxemburg and Holland, the Order of Suvorov was also awarded to Field Marshal Sir Bernard Law Montgomery. Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay received the Order of Ushakov, First Class, while Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford Leigh-Mallory and Lieutenant General Omar Bradley have been awarded the Order of Kutuzov, First Class. RUSSIA GIVES GRAIN TO YUGOSLAVIA

LONDON, October 5 — The Soviet Government has placed at the disposal of the Yugoslav National Committee of Liberation half a million tons of grain, reported a Yugoslav broadcast today.

The Yugoslav Committee will distribute the grain in all parts of Yugoslavia threatened with famine, the broadcast added. (PWB)

JAPS HALTED EAST OF FOOCHOW

CHUNGKING, October 5 — Strong Chinese forces have halted the Japanese drive on Foochow, last major seaport remaining in Chinese hands, against which the enemy launched an attack on September 27.

The Chinese High Command said tonight that the Japanese column is six miles east of the city, on the left bank of the Min Kiang River.

Fall of this Fukien Province river port would bring every large militarily useful harbor on the Chinese coast into Japanese control. (OWI)

The new figures are an increase of 13,559 over the figures released two weeks ago. They cover the period up to September 21.

The latest U. S. casualty figures put Navy dead at 25,963, wounded at 25,598, missing 9,761, prisoners, 4,480, for a total of 65,702. (OWI)

RUSSIANS CLOSING ON BELGRADE

MOSCOW, October 5 — Russian and Yugoslav troops took the Yugoslav rail junction city of Panevo today, eight miles east of Belgrade.

They pushed onward beyond Panevo, and tonight were probing forward into the outskirts of the Yugoslav capital.

The Soviet communique said 76 German aircraft were captured in the swift drive which overwhelmed Nazi forces in the Panevo area.

The communique said nothing but patrol activity was reported from other areas of the long front. But German Overseas News Agency broadcasts told of a strong Russian offensive begun along the borders of East Prussia.

The Germans said also that strong Russian artillery barrages were laid down in the triangle of the confluence of the Bug and Narew rivers, north of Warsaw.

From the Baltic front, Reuter dispatches said tonight that Red Fleet forces were concentrating for an attack on the island of Saaremaa, a large land mass which commands the entrance to the Gulf of Riga — and the escape route by sea of Nazi forces trapped in the Latvian capital. (Reuter)

TORNIO LIBERATED

HELSINKI, October 5 — Battle line dispatches said tonight that nothing but two German field hospitals remain of enemy forces that had been holding out in Tornio, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia. The town was said to be completely in Finnish hands.

A slight Finnish withdrawal in the face of a heavily reinforced German attack east of Kemi was reported tonight. On another sector of this northern front, Finnish troops have taken two more towns, Rannu and Simo. (OWI)

GENERAL BOR CAPTURED AT WARSAW

LONDON, October 5 — Polish President Wladyslaw Raczkiewicz announced here early tonight that General Tadeus Komorowski (Bor) had been captured by the Germans during the final stages of the fighting inside the capital of Warsaw.

CHURCHILL ON DEFENCE OF WARSAW

LONDON, October 5 — The fall of Warsaw at a time when the Allied armies are everywhere victorious must come as a very bitter blow to all Poles, said Prime Minister Winston Churchill in the House of Commons today.

Mr. Churchill said Warsaw's heroic population had undergone suffering and privation unsurpassed among the miseries of this war.

Expressing British sympathy with the Polish nation and Britain's confidence that its days of tribulation were rapidly ending, Mr. Churchill said:

"When final victory is achieved, the epic of Warsaw will not be forgotten. It will remain a deathless memory against the common enemy.

U. S. SUBS SINK 11 JAP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, October 5 — Eleven more Japanese vessels, including three warcraft, have been sunk in the latest operational period of American submarines.

The Navy Department said tonight that three of these 11 were warships — a destroyer, an escort vessel, and a seaplane tender.

Also included was a large oil tanker, the numbers of which are rapidly dwindling in the fleet of Japanese fuel-carrying ships. Six of the vessels were loaded cargo ships. The last was not identified.

These latest sinkings bring to 924 the number of Japanese vessels sent to the bottom or severely damaged by American submarines. Of this number, 772 were sunk, 37 probably were sunk, and 115 were crippled by torpedoes. Of those sunk, 67 were combat craft of the Japanese Navy. (OWI)

JAP SHIP HIT AT CHICHI JIMA

PEARL HARBOR, October 5 — Heavy bombers struck Japanese installations in and around the harbor at Chichi Jima, in the Bonin Islands group yesterday, scoring a direct hit on a large enemy cargo vessel.

Meanwhile, other bombers of General Douglas MacArthur's command in the southwest Pacific unloaded 35 tons of bombs on Makassar, one-time Netherlands Indies naval base on the southern shores of Celebes Island. Large fires were started.

In the Palaus, mopping up operations continued, with total Japanese dead put at 16,977 on Peleliu and Angaur

PAOCHING COMMUNICATIONS CUT

CHUNGKING, October 5 — The Chinese High Command said tonight that communications with the Chinese defenders of the Hunan Province city of Paoching have been cut by the Japanese.

Late reports last night indicated that Chinese forces had withdrawn from the important fortress town, which defended the approaches to closely threatened Kweilin in lower Kwangsi.

Chiang Kai Shek's headquarters had nothing to say tonight of fighting near Kweilin, but 14th USAAF communiques said American aircraft strafed and bombed Japanese columns north of the city.

Other aircraft struck at the three enemy columns moving on the Kwangsi capital as far north as Paoching and as far east as Wuchow. River shipping — the constant targets of opportunity for American and Chinese airmen — was shot up as far south as Samshui, up-river from Canton, where the airfields received another blasting.

Shipping in Fort Bayard harbor, on Luichow Peninsula in southern Kwangtung, was also attacked and heavy damage was done to harbor installations. (OWI)

JAPS BURNING TIDDIM

KANDY, CEYLON, October 5 — The Japanese are apparently evacuating Tiddim, their one-time secure base of operations in Burma, from which they launched their ill-advised invasion of India.

India troops pressing toward the Chin Hills stronghold reported large fires burning in the Tiddim area, indicating that the enemy was destroying his non-portable supplies. (OWI)

U.N.R.R.A. AID TO ITALY TO BEGIN SOON

LONDON, October 5 — The probability that UNRRA relief activities will begin in Italy soon, and will shortly thereafter begin in liberated countries of western Europe, was indicated today by a high official of UNRRA.

The decision to aid Italy, he said, was influenced by the stirring appeal of the Greek and Ethiopian delegates, who spoke for the measure despite the hardships caused in their own countries by Italy.

The agreement to aid Italy to the extent of 50 million dollars will be carried out to supplement produce obtainable locally, and will include such supplies as milk and cereals. (OWI)

U. S. LABOR LEADER ASKS AID FOR ITALY

ATLANTIC CITY, October 5 — Luigi Antonini, official of the American Federation of Labor, said here today that current plans for the aid of Italy are not enough, that Italy needs immediate rehabilitation of her industrial resources to escape from starvation and riot. He said that speedy action is necessary.

Antonini, who returned to the United States yesterday from a survey of Italian labor movement developments and Italian agricultural and industrial resources, declared that Italy's economic plight is marked by mass unemployment, hunger, despair, prostitution, delinquency — and painful disappointment in the failure of the Allies to help the Italian people help themselves.

The labor leader said that the 30,000,000 dollars appropriated by UNRRA for Italian relief was not "a drop in the bucket" in relation to the needs of the nation.

Antonini, who said that transportation was badly needed, failed to mention that 1,700 trucks have been allocated to Italian use, as revealed in a statement from President Roosevelt, issued last night.

He declared that Italian industry was at a standstill, that agriculture and trade were paralyzed, and that Italian people living in areas liberated by the Allies are existing largely on money spent by Allied troops. The labor leader declared that inflation was rampant, that the black market flourishes, and that poverty and misery are universal.

The hopeful element, said Antonini, is that American authorities in Italy now realize that speedy action is necessary to rehabilitate the industries, agriculture, and trade of Italy.

He added that many industrial plants remain idle without any reason apparent to the Italian people — ostensibly for military reason. Antonini urged that machinery, coal, and seeds be sent to the Italians, adding that he understood plans for such shipments were underway. (OWI)

MANY ITALIAN WORKS OF ART SAVED

WASHINGTON, October 5 — The great buildings and art treasures of Italy suffered much less war damage than had been expected, it was said here today by Francis Taylor, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and member of the American commission for the protection and salvage of artistic monuments in war areas.

Taylor — who personally surveyed the art damage in France and England, and received the complete official report on the damage done in Italy — paid tribute to the aid given to Allied Fine Arts officers by the Italians and members of the Apostolic Household Vatican, who have been largely responsible for the quick location and recovery of Italy's works of art. He also credited the cooperation of military officials with helping to preserve many of these irreplaceable works.

Among the important collections recovered are some of the depositories of Florentine art, the Art Director said. Of 23 depositories, nine had been secured by August of this year without loss or damage. The collection stored at Castello di Montegufoni included all of Michelangelo's Medici Chapel sculptures, Donatello's and Luca Della Robbia's "Singing Gallery," all of Donatello's statues, and all of the reliefs of Andrea Pisano from the Florence Campanile.

However, there are 15 cases of art treasures missing from the Cassino Monastery, and, among the other items unaccounted for are Titian's Danae in a Shower of Gold, Peter Breughel's famous Blind Leading the Blind, and works by Raphael, Luini, and Claude Lorraine.

Taylor reported that other damages by the Germans included: rifling the Etruscan tombs; damages to new Pompeii excavations; shelling San Gangiano, which damaged paintings and frescoes; razing the church of San Francesco at Viterbo; and numerous other acts of vandalism, such as the blowing up of the Palazzo Pretorio at Certona before they evacuated the city.

The Siena art treasures were saved through the cooperation of the Allied Fine Arts officers and a French general. The Germans mined the city before they left, but the Allies found the plan and removed the mines before any damage was done.

Taylor said that repairs on the church of San Lorenzo — the only one damaged in Rome — are almost completed under the direction of the officers of the fine arts archieves. (OWI)

NAPLES MUSEUM LISTS LOOTED ART TREASURES

NAPLES, October 5 — The Naples Museum has drawn up a list of the art treasures which the Germans looted from the city's collections.

Sixteen cases of art treasures which were entrusted to the care of German troops of the Hermann Goering Division were missing in the consignment which reached the Vatican. The complete suit of armor which at one time belonged to Charles V can no longer be found. Other famous paintings stolen by the Germans include Tiepolo's Neptune and Venice, Titian's Danae and Lucrezia, Filippino Lippi's Annunciation, and Luini's Madonna. (UNN)

GERMANS SACKED PISA

PISA, October 5 — The deplorable condition in which the Germans left the city of Pisa was described today, by Professor Russo, Rector of Pisa University.

One half of the dwellings were destroyed by the Germans prior to the withdrawal, he said, while all the animals not carried off, died for lack of proper feeding. The Filettois aqueduct is unserviceable, and water must, consequently, be drawn from wells. Electric power is unavailable because the Germans destroyed the electric installations.

The historical part of Pisa suffered notable damage. The cemetery is almost entirely destroyed, and the churches of St. Paul and Michael, the Palazzo della Giornata, the [illegible] and the monuments were demolished.

JEWISH BOOKS BACK IN CIRCULATION

ROME, October 5 — Books by Jewish authors, and those considered non-conformist by the Fascist Regime, will again be accessible in all public libraries.

PISTOIA ON WAY TO RECOVERY

ROME, October 5 — The Italian town of Pistoia, which was first entered by Allied troops four weeks ago, is a classic example of what cooperation between Allied Military Government and local officials can accomplish, according to a dispatch from a United Nations News correspondent.

The correspondent said that although shelling of the town ceased only five days ago, AMG restoration of facilities has been going on for several weeks. Food has been distributed and an aqueduct, which was blown up by the Germans, has been repaired. Power equipment which had been hidden from the Germans by the Partisans has been restored, the correspondent said. A civilian hospital in the town is operating efficiently, and the AMG has moved in hospital supplies and equipment.

Carabinieri and civilian police are back on duty, and a Partisan leader in the area, who greatly assisted the Allies in taking the town, has been named for an important administrative post. (UNN)

SHAEF, October 5 — Today's communique:

North of Antwerp, the enemy is being driven from the perimeter forts. Cappellen and Stabroek are in our hands.

Further progress has been made north and northeast of Turnhout, and we are advancing north of Poppel and Baarle Nassau.

The capture of Hilvarenbeek has brought us to within five miles of Tilburg.

South of Arnhem, our troops have gained some ground in heavy fighting.

On the east of the salient in the area of Overloon, we are moving ahead slowly, hindered by marshy terrain and enemy mines.

Allied infantry supported by armor is making slow progress near Uberh, north of Aachen, against heavy opposition from small arms, mortars, anti-tank guns, and artillery. A German tank attack was repulsed by our infantry in the vicinity of Herbach.

Fighters and fighter-bombers supported ground forces during the day, and went for transportation targets in western Germany. Night bombers attacked trains and barges in Holland and northwestern Germany.

Southwest of Metz, our troops, fighting within Fort Driant, are meeting stubborn resistance from the enemy, who is defending from duz in positions and pillboxes. Further south, an enemy counter-attack was repulsed in the vicinity of Sivry, north of Nancy.

In the Epinal sector, we made slight local gains southeast of Saint Ame.

Elsewhere, strong enemy resistance was encountered.

West of Belfort, a pocket of resistance has been mopped up in the Ronchamp area, where the enemy continues to fight stubbornly.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 5 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communiqué:

Following the liberation of Sappada, in Belluno Province, it was learned that after two days of hard fighting, Patriots succeeded in annihilating the local garrison. One hundred twenty-seven Germans, including officers and non-commissioned officers, surrendered. Others were killed during clashes. Patriots captured a notable quantity of war booty, which included 12 machine guns, 130 rifles, many hand grenades, and ammunition.

An enemy attempt to dislodge Patriots from the Casanova sector which they control ended in failure after a day of fighting.

In Northeast Italy, Patriots attacked an enemy command post, taking 53 German prisoners. They also captured three heavy machine guns and 50 rifles.

In another clash, the Nazi-Fascists lost 450 men: 200 killed, and 250 wounded.

In Reggio Emilia Province, near Ceredolo, Patriots attacked German pioneer corpsmen who were reconstructing a bridge. Thirty-five enemy soldiers were killed.

In the Spezia sector, seven small bridges were demolished and three damaged.

In the course of a battle which dragged out for four hours, the enemy lost 29 men.

In the Veneto sector the successes of the Garibaldi Brigades continue. Near Valdagno di Trento, the enemy left 170 dead on the field.

In the Friuli sector, in an attempt at mopping up operations, the Republican Fascist Guard lost 30 men.

In Carnia, it is estimated that the sector at present occupied by Patriots comprises a population of 30,000 inhabitants.

In Piedmont, the enemy suffered losses in mopping up operations.

One hundred and sixty SS Fascist troops, together with the German commanders, were captured in the Canevese sector.

Much war material fell into Patriot hands.

The machinery of the Fiat and Spa works, of an airplane plant and of the Fiat steel works of Turin, has been stolen face of numerous attacks of formations of the U. S. 5th army. They repelled the enemy, who had penetrated into our lines, in vigorous counter-attacks.

Our strongpoints on the Adriatic struck effectively at enemy troop concentrations, and repelled reconnaissance thrusts.

Italy:

In central Italy, yesterday, the grim attacks of the US 5th Army were checked in front of the mountain positions in the Etruscan Apennines, which are stubbornly defended by our grenadiers and paracadutists.

On the Adriatic coast, several enemy thrusts were frustrated.

Eastern Front:

In the big bend of the Danube, at Cajecar and north of it, fierce fighting with advancing formations is in progress.

In the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier area, at Maros, Rumanian troops made local progress.

South of Grosswardein, our grenadiers repelled enemy forces in brilliant counter-attacks. The enemy suffered heavy losses in the course of the fighting.

In the Thorenburg area and in the Szekl corner, other Soviet attacks were, in general, frustrated. Fighting at one point of infiltration is still in progress.

In the Forest Carpathians, grim Bolshevist attacks broke down in our defensive fire. On the passes of the eastern Beskides fresh attempts of Soviet divisions at breaking through also remained unsuccessful. Most of the unsuccessful attacks broke down in front of our positions by the fire of our artillery.

At the Narev, north of Warsaw, some local attacks were successful.

Northwest of Schaulen, a Soviet infiltration into our positions was sealed off.

Air:

Yesterday, USAAF bombers attacked Munich. Damage was caused to tenements, cultural institutions, and public buildings. Also destroyed or seriously damaged were several hospitals and seven churches.

Yesterday, anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force and fighters brought down 21 Anglo-American planes.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 5 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

At the Belgian-Dutch frontier, southwest of Arnhem and on the banks of the Maas, grim fighting is in progress with Anglo-Canadian units who are being gradually reinforced.

North of Turnhout, the enemy again gained ground. His attempts at breaking through toward Tilburg were frustrated, and 25 tanks were destroyed.

At Ubach, the Americans, after concentrated attacks on both sides of Geilenkirchen, were able to broaden their infiltration. They lost in a counter-attack of our grenadiers some hundred prisoners and several tanks.

In the Metz sector, local fighting was in progress. There is still fighting at some points of infiltration.

In the Parroy Forest and in the foothills of the western Vosges, our corps held their positions in grim fighting in. Soviet attacks were, in general, frustrated. Fighting at one point of infiltration is still in progress.

In the Forest Carpathians, grim Bolshevist attacks broke down in our defensive fire. Fluctuating Fighting in Italy: Fluctuating fighting continued all day long in the central sector of the Italian front, where the Allies are trying to gain possession of an important road near Firenzuola. Determined German defense prevented the enemy from achieving any success of importance. Strong enemy reinforcements are reported to have arrived in the Adriatic sector, where it is believed that the enemy will shortly resume a large-scale offensive.

Western Front: The present fighting in the west creates the impression that the Allies have begun a new all-out offensive against German positions.

Prince Humbert's Smile: During his visit to Florence, Prince Humbert greeted the Partisans with the same charming smile, which before the 25th of July was reserved for Fascist delegations. Many things have changed since the time the Prince shook hands with Italian pilots leaving Munich on a mission against Britain, but the famous smile has remained.

AMERICANS LAUNCH NEW ATTACK EAST OF AACHEN CANADIANS CROSS LEOPOLD CANAL

SHAEF, October 6 — The American 1st Army has launched a new attack against Siegfried Line defenses southeast of Aachen, in the Hürtgen Forest. Allied troops are now within six miles of Düren, an important road and rail junction 20 miles west of Cologne. The attack was supported by hundreds of fighter-bombers, while light, medium, and heavy artillery laid down a barrage on the Hürtgen Forest. The fighter-bombers not only bombarded the forest, but battered strongpoints in the second belt of the Siegfried Line defenses.

North of Aachen, the Germans threw sizeable armored [illegible] and hundreds of guns into counter-attacks [illegible] and fortified houses. Shelfire from German batteries on Walcheren Island was less than expected, as they were blinded by a heavy smokescreen laid over the Scheldt Estuary. One-third of Walcheren is reported to be flooded, and German convoys were seen clearing out eastward in front of the flood.

Canadian troops have crossed the Dutch border north of Antwerp, in the area of Hulte, in a drive to cut off German troops in the islands north of the Scheldt. Another column of Allied troops is within six miles of the main road and railroad between Breda and Tilburg, part of the principal escape-route for Germans in Zeeland.

Driving north from Baarle Nassau, Canadian troops advanced four miles and captured Alphen, while others, to the east, are within three miles of Tilburg, where they are meeting heavy resistance.

Hostilities Resumed at Dunkirk

On the British 2nd Army front west of Arnhem, the Germans launched an attack in strength at Opheusden, south of the Lower Rhine, forcing Allied units back a short distance. The British launched a counter-attack, which restored their positions — killing or capturing a third of the attacking German force.

On the east flank of the Allied Nijmegen salient, a German attack in the vicinity of Mook was made from the Reichswald Forest. The attack was repulsed easily. To the southeast, three German counter-attacks were made in the Overloon area. They were thrown back but they slowed down Allied progress over the marshy land to the Meuse River.

Fierce hand-to-hand fighting developed at Fort Driant, key outpost of Metz. Prisoners taken by American 3rd Army forces stated that every man in the fort had been forced to sign a document saying he would not surrender, and that if he did his family would be arrested.

Hostilities were resumed at Dunkirk at 1000 hours today. At 1100 hours, Allied fighter-bombers roared in to pound German positions, but as yet no major attack has been launched by Canadian troops. (OWI - Reuter - AP)

The attack was supported by hundreds of fighter-bombers, while light, medium, and heavy artillery laid down a barrage on the Hürtgen Forest. The fighter-bombers not only bombarded the forest, but battered strongpoints in the second belt of the Siegfried Line defenses.

North of Aachen, the Germans threw sizeable armored forces, with infantry and hundreds of guns, into assaults on the American wedge in the Siegfried Line east of Uhach, in fierce determination to block the road to the Rhine. American troops were forced to pull back from Beggendorf and from the top of a pillbox ridge. They are holding on to the lower slopes of the ridge.

«Solid Sheet of Flame»

American artillery blasted away at German gun and mortar positions which had pinpointed every yard in the Americans' path. The tide of battle was turned early today when Allied planes poured an avalanche of bombs on a German fortified garrison which was a focal point of resistance. It was the first time since the break-through of the Siegfried Line that the weather cleared, permitting Allied planes to support ground forces.

American tanks have blasted their way to within 1,000 yards of the outskirts of Gellenkirchen to the north in an attempt to widen the Uhach gap. Strong German resistance was immediately met.

On the Channel coast the Canadians launched a sudden offensive against German positions south of the Scheldt Estuary. Moving behind a solid sheet of flame, Allied troops crossed the Leopold Canal north of Maldegem. Strong resistance is being met from German concrete strongpoints advanced four miles and captured Alphen, while others, to the east, are within three miles of Tilburg, where they are meeting heavy resistance.

Hostilities Resumed at Dunkirk

On the British 2nd Army front west of Arnhem, the Germans launched an attack in strength at Oosterbeek, south of the Lower Rhine, forcing Allied units back a short distance. The British launched a counter-attack, which restored their positions — killing or capturing a third of the attacking German force.

On the east flank of the Allied Nijmegen salient, a German attack in the vicinity of Mook was made from the Reichswald Forest. The attack was repulsed easily. CANADIANS ADVANCE NORTHEAST OF SCHELDT

SHAEF, October 6 — Canadian troops have advanced 3½ miles north of Lillo on the eastern bank of the Scheldt River to the vicinity of Santvliet, it was reported late tonight.

American 1st Army troops are east of Beggendorf and are on both flanks. They do not hold the city. (Reuter)

SMYRNA, AIVALI DAMAGED BY EARTHQUAKE

ISTANBUL, October 6 — Half of the town of Aivali, on the Aegean coast of Turkey, was destroyed by today's earthquake, while Izmir (Smyrna) was seriously damaged.

It is feared that the population of Aivali suffered heavy losses.

The epicenter of the earthquake, recorded by the Istanbul seismograph at 0335 hours today, was about 117 miles from here — probably in the area of Aivali, in the Gulf of Edreimid on the Aegean coast. (Reuter)

the critically important German rail center of Saarbrücken, less than 50 miles ahead of the American lines on the west front.

Today's targets took the American bombers with their Mustang and Thunderbolt escort on a 1,400-mile round trip. They bombed four objectives in Berlin: a tank assembly plant, a military depôt, an ordnance depôt and an aircraft engine plant. In Hamburg they struck at three targets: the Rehania and Ebano Oil Refinery, an aircraft engine plant, and an ordnance depôt. Airdromes at Stargard, Neubrandenburg, and Wenscendorf, near Hamburg, were also bombed.

The attacks were made under favorable weather conditions with a good to excellent results.

In last night's Saarbrücken raid RAF bombers dropped more than 350,000 incendiaries, as well as 4,000-pound bombs, the Air Ministry announced. Flak was heavy and German fighters were up in considerable numbers, but they arrived too late to engage the main bomber stream and defend this important advance supply town for their west front armies.

Three aircraft are missing from the night missions, which included mine-laying in enemy waters.

Other RAF planes were out last night on forays against enemy ships and trains. Rocket-firing Beaufighters of Coastal Command attacked without loss a convoy of 15 vessels off The Hague in Holland, hitting two minesweepers. Mosquitoes attacked 12 trains in the Hamm area, bringing to 146 the number of trains damaged or destroyed in Germany's already inadequate transportation system.

Spitfires of the Tactical Air Force shot down six Messerschmitts yesterday — one of them a jet-propelled craft. The German planes were encountered at 15,000 feet, and the Allied score was made without loss.

40 Barges Sunk

In a separate attack yesterday, Mosquitoes hit a group of 50 barges on the Rhine, south of Emmerich, and sank 40 of them.

Another 33 barges are stranded along a stretch of at least eight miles of the Dortmund-Ems Canal, as a result of the RAF raid on the canal nearly two weeks ago. The Air Ministry announced tonight that possibly a much longer distance has been drained, or so reduced in level that it is impassable to shipping.

Throughout yesterday, Allied medium and fighter-bombers operated in support of the ground forces on the west front, striking at enemy troops, fortified buildings, railway stations, and all kinds of transport.

In yesterday's heavy-bomber raids on rail and air targets at Cologne, Rheine, Handorf, Lippstadt, Paderborn, and Münster, 15 bombers and five fighters are missing out of a force of over 1,000 bombers, strongly escorted. The escorting fighters destroyed 15 enemy aircraft on the ground and one in the air, besides strafing locomotives and goods trucks.

Flying bombs caused some casualties and damage to property in southern England today after a lull in the London area since last Saturday.

At least two of the bombs were destroyed, and one of the German planes, after launching its bomb, was shot into the sea by a night fighter. (OWI - Reuter)

RETREATING GERMANS DEVASTATING HOLLAND

LONDON, October 6 — The Germans in Holland are deliberately devastating the country and putting the population of seven million in a "desperate plight" by blowing up grain elevators, wrecking docks and industrial and military installations, and confiscating food, the Prime Minister of Holland, Dr. Gerbrandy, said today.

Holland's largest paper mills at Ymuiden have been prepared for destruction. In Rotterdam, 6,000 special demolition troops are carefully wrecking docks, cranes and other planes in each direction, and that the running time under best conditions will be from 12 to 13 hours.

The flight on which General Marshall arrived today took 18 hours and 45 minutes, and was the first non-stop run from an American field to Paris since Lindbergh's flight in 1927.

With General Marshall was James Byrnes, Director of the Office of War Mobilization. They were scheduled to make a tour of the fighting fronts in France.

The plane in which they made the run was a C-54, a large, four-motored transport craft. The American Chief of Staff was met at the field by General Dwight Eisenhower and Lieut. General Omar Bradley, and members of their staffs. (OWI)

U. S. TROOPS ADVANCE MILE TOWARD BOLOGNA AS SNOWS SET IN ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 6 — American troops of the 5th Army yesterday thrust a mile closer to Bologna and the Valley of the Po, to reach a point 13 miles from this old and prosperous city, as German forces sent experienced German and Austrian Alpine troops into the Mountain line, and the first snows of winter covered the lofty Apennine peaks through which the Americans are slowly battling forward.

Although the 5th Army troops were reported to have advanced as much as 2½ miles yesterday, the hard-won gains on the front immediately south of Bologna put them only a mile closer to the capital city of Emilia Province, and still some 2,000 yards short of the mountain town of Monterenzio, midway between the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys.

Some six miles southwest of these leading troops, other American infantrymen captured the town of Lojano, on the main Florence-Bologna road, 14 miles to the south of Bologna, while two miles farther west, American troops pushed forward over a mile and a half from their positions on Monte Venere to occupy the village of Monzuno, in the mountains between the main highway and the Setta River Valley.

The American troops in these advances were revealed today to be those of the United States 2nd Corps, under command of Major General Geoffrey Keyes.

Ripoli Liberated

South African troops with the 5th Army yesterday advanced to capture the village of Ripoli, on a secondary mountain road a mile and a half northeast of Lagaro and overlooking the Setta River Valley and the highway running along it from Prato to Bologna. These troops, five miles southwest of the American forces at Monzuno, reported two German counter-attacks, which were repulsed, yesterday.

On the British sector of the 5th Army front, the principal action yesterday was centered at the lower ends of the Santerno and the Senio River Valleys, some 13 or 14 miles from the edge of the Po Plain. Here, forward elements reached Monte della Valle, overlooking the Senio River, and Monte Cece, one mile to the southeast and giving observation along the Santerno Valley, only to be forced to withdraw by heavy enemy counter-attacks.

Some 10 miles farther southeast, Indian troops of the 5th Army reported the village of Scorzano and nearby Monte Calbano, at the head of the Tramazzo River Valley, clear of the enemy.

On the 8th Army's Adriatic front, the swollen torrent of the Pisciatello River still prevented Allied crossings and any further progress into the Plain of the Po.

However, in the mountain sector some 14 miles southwest of Rimini, Indian troops captured the village of Vignola and attacked the larger towns of Sogliano al Rubicone and San Martino di Bagnolo, one mile to the north. Heavy fighting was reported in both these towns.

Coastal Command attacked without loss a convoy of 15 vessels off The Hague in Holland, hitting two minesweepers. Mosquitoes attacked 12 trains in the Hamm area, bringing to 146 the number of trains damaged or destroyed in Germany's already inadequate transportation system.

Spitfires of the Tactical Air Force shot down six Messerschmitts yesterday — one of them a jet-propelled craft. The German planes were encountered at 15,000 feet, and the Allied score was made without loss.

40 Barges Sunk

In a separate attack yesterday, Mosquitoes hit a group of 50 barges on the Rhine, south of Emmerich, and sank 40 of them.

Another 23 barges are stranded along a stretch of at least eight miles of the Dortmund-Ems Canal, as a result of the RAF raid on the canal nearly two weeks ago. The Air Ministry announced tonight that possibly a much longer distance has been drained, or so reduced in level that it is impassable to shipping.

LONDON, October 6 — The Germans in Holland are deliberately devastating the country and putting the population of seven million in a «desperate plight» by blowing up grain elevators, wrecking docks and industrial and military installations, and confiscating food, the Prime Minister of Holland, Dr. Gerbrandy, said today.

Holland's largest paper mills at Ymuiden have been prepared for destruction. In Rotterdam, 6,000 special demolition troops are wilfully wrecking docks, wharves, and other port installations, blasting offices with hand grenades and destroying the grain elevators.

In Amsterdam and other towns in central and north Holland, the confiscation of small stocks of food has left the population without meat, bread, butter, sugar, and potatoes are sufficient for only three weeks. Fuel, gas, electricity, and power are expected to be cut off before the Nazis retreat.

The once prosperous town of Berkel, between Rotterdam and The Hague, was burned down by the Nazis as a reprisal, and the entire population of 60,000 was driven into desolate country, Gerbrandy revealed. Adding to the chaos, hundreds of thousands of other evacuees from flooded lands are causing tremendous overcrowding in reception centers.

MARSHALL FIRST ON U. S.-PARIS AIR ROUTE

PARIS, October 6 — General George Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, was among the first passengers to arrive here today on the newly begun Washington-to-Paris non-stop air service.

The French radio said tonight that the United States Army Transport Command will run daily flights, using eight battling forward.

Although the 5th Army troops were reported to have advanced as much as 2½ miles yesterday, the hard-won gains on the front immediately south of Bologna put them only a mile closer to the capital city of Emilia Province, and still some 2,000 yards short of the mountain town of Monterenzio, midway between the Idice and the Sillaro River Valleys.

It was reported today that Italian Patriots are again fighting alongside Allied troops in the central mountain sectors of the 8th Army front. (PHO)

PORT OF RION CAPTURED
GULF OF CORINTH NARROWS CLEARED

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, October 6 — British troops of Land Forces Adriatic yesterday advanced some five miles north of Patras, Greece, to capture the fortified port town of Rion, and to clear the entrance into the Gulf of Corinth, it was announced here today in a special communique from the headquarters of the Balkan Air Force.

At least 1,500 German prisoners, members of Security battalions used to guard lines of communication and maintain order, have been taken by the British forces, although the bulk of the German garrison at Patras, whose capture was announced yesterday, were enabled to make good their escape, today's reports said.

Allied air forces and ground troops are engaging the scores of enemy small craft being employed to ferry the fleeing German forces northward across the Gulf of Corinth, it was stated.

German forces offered little opposition either at Patras or at Rion, reports said, although there were 1,000 German soldiers in the garrison at Patras, and a considerable concentration of enemy troops in the Rion area. Patras, it was revealed today, was captured after a detachment of the RAF regiment with the Land Forces Adriatic had engaged the German troops in the port town throughout the night of October 3/4. After preliminary skirmishing, the German troops began a hasty withdrawal in small boats, including the four Siebel ferries, and used ships' guns to hold off the British and Partisan forces until their embarkation was completed early Wednesday morning.

So pressed was the German evacuation that the port facilities at Patras were left almost intact, although demolition charges had already been laid and needed only to be set off to have laid waste the harbor area.

The capture of Rion by the British troops of Land Forces Adriatic has cleared the entrance into the Gulf of Corinth which was controlled by German coastal batteries at Rion and the port of Andirrion, on the opposite shore.

Although the Allied forces in Rion were within easy range of the guns at Andirrion, no shelling took place yesterday, reports stated.

German guns captured at Patras, on the other hand, were employed by the Allied forces to shell enemy small craft in which German troops were attempting to make their escape.

Reinforcements have already been rushed to the British forces in the western Peloponnesus by air, it was announced today. Balkan Air Force Dakota transport planes were used to fly in infantry detachments to an airfield prepared largely by the aid of Greek volunteer labor, it was said.

It was revealed today that the original landings on the Greek mainland were made at Katakolon, a small Ionian seaport town some 50 miles southwest of Patras, and that the advance to this latter town had been made over difficult, swampy country. Patras had been the main staging port for supplying the west coast of Greece, it was reported today.

Stormy weather restricted operations in Albania yesterday to patrol clashes and artillery duels, it was reported. Allied forces had pushed some five miles along the coast from their original landings.

Farther north, Allied forces in the Dalmatian Islands continued their artillery fire on German communication routes and positions in Yugoslavia, it was said. (PRO)

KITHYRA, KALAMAS, AND TRIPOLIS FREED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 6 — Greek Prime Minister George Papandreou, at present in Italy, has issued a special statement that the Greek cities of Kithyra, Kalamas, and Tripolis have been freed, and that Greek Minister Kanellopoulos has already visited those liberated towns as a representative of the Greek Government, the Hellenic News Agency announced here today.

The Greek cities, in the southern and central Peloponnesus cover, with the northwestern corner of the peninsula occupied by Land Forces Adriatic, all but the extreme northeastern corner of the peninsula, apparently all that remains in German hands.

Tripolis, farthest inland, is only 44 miles southwest of Corinth, capital city of the Peloponnesus.

The Greek Prime Minister declared that the people of the Peloponnesus had accorded with enthusiasm the Greek Government's proclamation for fraternization and order, and that the ELAS Greek Partisan forces had stated that they would cooperate to achieve national unity.

The Greek Prime Minister's statement also revealed that German Security battalions, numbering 1,500 men, had surrendered without skirmish to British officers at Tripolis.

on the Greek mainland, a special announcement this evening declared.

Although no details were available on the strafing mission, carried out late in a day which had been stormy and had grounded heavy and medium bombers, the fact that the attacks were made the subject of a special announcement indicated that they were probably of considerable strength. (PRO)

GENERAL CANNON CREATED K.C.B.E.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 6 — Major General John Cannon, of the Mediterranean Allied Tactical Air Force, today was invested with the Order of the Knight Commander of the British Empire by General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Commander of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations.

The citation declared that «through the exceptional qualities of leadership, initiative, and determination», shown by General Cannon, the TAF played a historic part in the Italian campaigns of 1944, during which the enemy was driven from the air and decisively beaten on the ground. (PRO)

ROOSEVELT PRAISES GREEK INVINCIBILITY

WASHINGTON, October 6 — President Roosevelt today issued a statement declaring that he was deeply moved over the news that the British had landed and begun the liberation of Greece, although, in a truer sense, its enslavement had never been a fact.

«For nearly four years,» said the President, «an indomitable Greek nation has suffered the terrifying effects of aggression on an unprecedented scale.

«When many men, even stout-hearted men of goodwill, had almost lost hope, the Greek people challenged the invincibility of the mechanized Nazi monster, pitting against the inhuman engines of war . . . the spirit of freedom.

«Four years is a long time to starve and die, to see children massacred, to watch villages burn to rubble and ashes, but it is not a long enough time to extinguish the clear flame of the Hellenic heritage, which throughout centuries has taught the dignity of man.

«It is more than fitting, it is inevitable, that as hopeless darkness is engulfing the ideals of Nazi barbarism, the clear Greek air will once more be breathed by free men without fear of oppression, and that the Acropolis, for 25 centuries a symbol of man's accomplishment in an environment of human liberty, will again be a beacon of faith for the future.» (OWI)

BATTLE RAGES AT BELGRADE
RED ARMY CROSSES INTO HUNGARY

MOSCOW, October 6 — The Red Army crossed the Rumanian frontier into Hungary today, opening the offensive on the Hungarian capital of Budapest — with only a little more than 100 miles to go, over flat plains country ideally suited for tanks and mobile guns.

The Red Army also established a deep and wide bridgehead on the Estonian Island of Saaremaa, last hideout of the Nazis in the Baltic region, and a land mass which dominates the Germans' only escape route from the embattled Latvian capital of Riga.

The Red Army pushed closer to the Yugoslav capital of Belgrade, and tonight was pounding at German positions from emplacements on the north bank of the Danube, close to the city. Front-line dispatches said that routed German forces were abandoning large quantities of material, and that crack SS regiments defending the approaches to Bel-

BAD WEATHER GROUNDS M.A.A.F. BOMBERS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 6 — Bad weather, which has allowed full operation of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force on only one day out of the past 10, yesterday again forced cancellation of heavy and medium-bomber missions.

It also restricted operations of fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force to small-scale attacks on a bridge and on motor transport north of the Italian battle area.

Coastal Air Force planes carried out offensive sweeps of the Gulf of Venice and scored cannon hits on a 2,000-ton tanker, the second to be damaged in the past three days.

Mosquito planes yesterday shot down two enemy transport planes and an HE-111 in a sweep over the Salonika, Greece, area. (PRO)

Front-line dispatches said that routed German forces were abandoning large quantities of material, and that crack SS regiments defending the approaches to Belgrade had been smashed.

Russian aircraft and Yugoslav troops have so disrupted German rail communications, said the dispatches, that the Nazis have pressed JU-52's into service to evacuate Belgrade by air.

The Soviet communique said the Hungarian border was breached northward of the Rumanian city of Arad, and that the towns of Mako and Gyula, and more than 100 other inhabited localities, were overrun. Mako is about five miles over the frontier, Gyula about three.

From the German news agency, DNB, came broadcast accounts of heavy fighting north of Warsaw. The Germans said, also, that the Red Army has launched a twin offensive on East Prussia, attacking from the south west of Lomza, and from the east out of Lithuania. The news agency described the offensive as an attempt to encircle East Prussia.

Soviet dispatches said Russian troops were within 12 miles of the Czecho-Slovakian frontier tonight, in their drive out of southern Poland over the northern Carpathians. Fierce fighting was reported by the Czech communique in the area of Svaty Kriz.

Seven German planes and 90 tanks were destroyed by the Russians on all sectors of the front yesterday. (Reuter)

GERMANS AT TORNIO CUT OFF

LONDON, October 6 — Radio Sweden said tonight that Finnish tanks have cut off German forces in the Tornio area, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia.

The radio said fighting is now taking place within sight of Swedish soil, and that the German aerial threat to Tornio increased in violence since late yesterday.

Finnish refugees numbering more than 7,000, with horses and cattle, are said to have crossed the Swedish frontier since the battle gained its greatest height.

An American correspondent with the Finns said that the continued, merciless dive-bombing of Kemi has enraged the Finns — giving them unflinching determination to carry out the terms of the Russian-imposed armistice by fighting the Germans to the end.

The dispatch described the Finnish-German war as "a bitter feud between men who barely a fortnight ago were brothers-in-arms." (PWB)

RUSSO-FINNISH DISCUSSIONS BEGIN

MOSCOW, October 6 — Discussions by the Soviet and Finnish delegates on the question of the demarcation of the Purkkala area, in the vicinity of Helsinki, began in the Finnish capital yesterday, Radio Moscow announced today.

FOUR JAP SHIPS SMASHED IN INDIES WATERS

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 7 (Saturday) — Patrol bombers of General Douglas MacArthur's air arm sank or badly smashed four more Japanese ships off Celebes and Amboina Islands in the Netherlands Indies on Tuesday and Wednesday.

The MacArthur communique said one of these ships was a Japanese minelayer, and that two of them were fairly large cargo vessels.

Other aircraft bombed and strafed shipping targets over wide areas, and were said to have spread havoc among concentrations of small craft at several spots in Indies waters.

In new strikes against Halmahera Island, largest of the Moluccas, 50 tons of bombs were dropped on Japanese-held aerodromes. The fields hit were less than 12 miles across the narrow strait from American headquarters on Morotai. (OWI)

11,043 JAP CASUALTIES IN PALAU ISLANDS

WASHINGTON, October 6 — Ten days of campaigning in the southern Palau Islands against the Japanese cost U. S. forces 336 killed, 1,707 wounded, and eight missing, a U. S. Navy announcement said last night.

The casualties, announced in a communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz, covered the period from September 25 to October 5. In that period, 2,618 Japanese troops were killed on Peleliu and 137 on Angaur Island.

Since the invasion of the islands on September 15, American casualties have totalled 7,417, as against 11,043 Japanese casualties.

The Pacific Fleet communique also announced that Marine aircraft operating from the Airfield at Peleliu bombed Babelthaup Island in the Palau Group on October 4 hitting air strips and strafing truck concentrations. Warehouses at Koror in the Palaus were also bombed.

Eleventh Air Force Liberators ranged as far as the Kuriles, where they attacked enemy shipping.

At Pagan Island in the northern Marianas, Liberators on Wednesday dropped bombs and rockets on gun positions

Aircraft of the 14th USAAF, whose bases have been over-run by the Hunan-Kwangsi provinces offensive, continued hammering of enemy troops and supply columns and bases all over the wide area of operations.

The battle at Paoching, in Hunan, still raged tonight, as the Chinese High Command revealed that a unit of Chinese troops was still holding out within the city. They had been cut off from exterior communications for almost two days, but today were joined by reinforcing troops who beat their way into Paoching from the northeast.

American aircraft supported the Paoching defense by intensive strafing of Japanese troops concentrated along the western approaches to the city.

At Changning, Chinese troops have evacuated the city, and the Japanese have taken over. The Chinese said tonight that the enemy occupied the city Monday, after a steady drive down from Hengyang, on the Canton-Hankow rail line. (OWI)

PREMIER KOISO ADMITS JAP POSITION IS GRAVE

WASHINGTON, October 6 — Japanese Premier Kuniaki Koiso admitted over Radio Tokyo today that the rise or fall of Imperial Japan rests critically in the balance as Allied forces grow greater in the Pacific.

Saying that the war situation has become grave for Japan, Koiso warned that the American Admiral Chester Nimitz is waiting for a chance to strike at the Japanese homeland, and that General Douglas MacArthur's Allied forces were preparing to retake the Philippines.

At the same time, said Koiso, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten is eyeing the entire area of Burma and Malaya from the southern battle front around Yunnan Province in China.

The Japanese news agency Domei, said late today that Premier Koiso held a six-hour cabinet meeting, and that he berated his ministers for failing to enforce decisive wartime measures. He is said to have warned them to give fullest attention to their jobs from now on. (OWI)

R. N. USING ROCKET PROPULSION ON PLANES

LONDON, October 6 — The Royal Navy is using rocket propulsion to facilitate the take-off of carrier-borne planes, it was announced here today. The new method increases the speed of the take-off, and enables the aircraft to carry heavier loads and to take off in light winds.

Rocket units, fitted to the aircraft and fired by the pilot, are jettisoned after take-off. They have proved extremely valuable for aircraft operating from the comparatively small decks of escort carriers. (OWI)

JAPS CLOSING ON FOOCHOW, KWEILIN

CHUNGKING, October 6 — Two important Chinese cities were threatened with imminent assault tonight, as Japanese columns drove into the outskirts of Foochow and pressed still closer to the Kwangsi capital of Kweilin.

Foochow is a port near the estuary of the Min Kiang River in Fukien Province, just across the strait from the Japanese-owned island of Formosa, and the last major harbor remaining in Chinese hands.

The port is under attack by seven shiploads of Japanese cavalry, landed on the Fukien coast on September 27. The Chinese High Command said tonight that the Japanese have penetrated the northwestern suburbs of the city.

Earlier today the Chinese said Japanese troops were within 10 miles of Kweilin, on the southern approaches to the Kwangsi capital city. Another Japanese column coming down from the northeast was said to be less than 25 miles away.

Allied forces grow greater in the Pacific.

Saying that the war situation has become grave for Japan, Koiso warned that the American Admiral Chester Nimitz is waiting for a chance to strike at the Japanese homeland, and that General Douglas MacArthur's Allied forces were preparing to retake the Philippines.

R. N. USING ROCKET PROPULSION ON PLANES

LONDON, October 6 — The Royal Navy is using rocket propulsion to facilitate the take-off of carrier-borne planes, it was announced here today. The new method increases the speed of the take-off, and enables the aircraft to carry heavier loads and to take off in light winds.

Rocket units, fitted to the aircraft and fired by the pilot, are jettisoned after take-off. They have proved extremely valuable for aircraft operating from the comparatively small decks of escort carriers. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

A.C.I. EXAMINES EPURATION PROCEEDINGS

ROME, October 6 — The progress of epuration made by the Italian Government was examined here today by the Advisory Council for Italy at its 22nd meeting.

A report was given on the subject by Brigadier Upjohn, Deputy Chief of Staff, Civil Affairs Section, Allied Control Commission. The Council examined also the general political situation.

Sir Noel Charles, British representative on the Council, presided. The following representatives of five other Allied nations attended: Georges Exintaris, Greece; General Vassiliev, Russia; Alexander Kirk, United States; Couve de Murville, France; and Miloje Smiljanic, Yugoslavia.

Captain Ellery Stone, USNR, Acting Chief Commissioner of the Allied Control Commission, also took part. (UNN)

1,350 ACCUSED OF FASCIST CRIMES

ROME, October 6 — The Italian Under Secretary for Press and Information today announced that 1,350 persons in Liberated Italy have been accused of Fascist crimes. Eighty-seven of those accused are now being tried by the High Commissariat for Sanctions against Fascism. (UNN)

GENERALS CHARGED WITH ASSISTING NAZIS

ROME, October 6 — Riccardo Pentimalli and Angelo del Tetto, the Italian generals who were respectively in command of the Army corps and garrison of Naples before the liberation of the city, will be tried by the High Court of Justice here on the charges of collaboration with the German invader.

Specifically, the generals are accused of not taking proper measures for the defense of Naples against German destruction, and of impeding, by reprisals, popular action against the Germans.

It was also announced here today that the Questura of Rome has arrested the well-known Fascist journalist, Federico Ottolenghi. (UNN)

VATICAN CITY, October 6 — Monsignor Francis Spellman, Roman Catholic Primate of the United States and Vicar General of the U. S. armed forces, will say a Pontifical High Mass for Alfred E. Smith, former governor of New York State, next Tuesday at 0630 hours. Smith died last Wednesday after a brief illness.

The mass will be celebrated in the Church of Santa Susanna, Rome, and will be sung by the choir from the Vatican Sistine Chapel. (UNN)

«BARRETTS OF WIMPOLE STREET»

ROME, October 6 — A special performance of The Barretts of Wimpole Street will be given on Sunday morning at 1030 hours in the Eliseo Theater here in honor of the late Eleonora Duse and Italian actors by Katharine Cornell and Brian Aherne with their company, presently touring the Allied Armies in Italy under the auspices of the American Theater Wing.

Katharine Cornell, who gave outstanding performances in Candida and Romeo and Juliet, is one of the best-known of modern American actresses. Brian Aherne was chosen by her to play the role of Robert Browning in The Barretts of Wimpole Street.

The performance is given in aid of Fascist victims. Tickets will be on sale from 1000 hours tomorrow at the boxoffice of the Eliseo. Latecomers will not be admitted after the first interval. (UNN)

SOLDIERS BECOME U. S. CITIZENS

ROME, October 6 — Seven American soldiers born outside of America became citizens of the United States at 1730 hours today in an impressive ceremony in the Piazza Venezia.

Five of them were born in Italy. All seven are members of an Allied Control Commission regiment.

Brig. Gen. Theburn Brown, head of the Rome Allied [illegible] and Lieut. Col. Howard Dodge of the Eisenhower have waged, during the past four months, one of the most brilliant campaigns in military history.»

The President emphasized that although the American Navy task forces have advanced 5,000 miles west of Pearl Harbor to attack the Japanese, German and Japanese resistance remains as determined, as fanatical as ever.

«We shall have to fight our way across the Rhine — we may have to fight every inch of the way to Berlin,» the President declared. «But we Americans and our British, Russian, French, and Polish Allies — all the massed forces of the United Nations — will not stop short of our final goal.

«We will continue to be united with our Allies in a powerful world organization which is ready and able to keep the peace — if necessary by force. We owe it to our heritage of freedom — we owe it to our God — to devote the rest of our lives and all our capabilities to building a solid and durable structure of world peace.»

With reference to American relations with the Soviet Union, President Roosevelt said:

«The American people are glad and proud to be allied with the gallant people of Russia, not only in winning this war, but in laying foundations for a world peace which will follow the war and in keeping that peace.»

Discussing the American political situation, the President declared that the United States is now at the highest peak of its vitality, primarily because when the American people want a change of government they can raise the old electioneering battle-cry of «Throw the rascals out.» Free elections, he said, will always protect the American nation against the bogies of dictatorship.

«It is true there are many undemocratic defects in the voting laws in various states,» he said, «and some of these produce injustices which prevent full and free expression of public opinion. The right to vote must be open to our citizens irrespective of class or creed, without tax or artificial restriction of any kind. The sooner we get to that basis of political equality, the better it will be for the country as a whole.» (OWI)

CHURCHILL SAYS HEAVY FIGHTING EXPECTED

LONDON, October 6 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in an unexpected appearance in Parliament today, warned that heavy fighting is to be expected in the next few months.

He said: «We must not imagine that the situation is not grave because we feel an assurance of victory. A great deal of blood is going to be shed in the next few months — Liberal, Conservative, and Labor blood — and it is my duty above all to make sure that all is comfortable behind the troops, and no needless cause of difference should rise to an undue height or proportion.»

Mr. Churchill made his dramatic appearance in Commons, after a hurried trip from a meeting of the War Cabinet. He made the statement when opposition along political lines developed to a Government proposal for rebuilding blitzed areas.

In order to enable local authorities in Britain to make their rebuilding plans immediately, Mr. Churchill proposed that the controversial part of the bill under debate should be dropped and brought in as a separate bill later.

In proposing the postponement of the part of the bill referring to compensation which gave rise to contention, Mr. Churchill said: «We must keep our pugnacity, as far as possible, for export. The Government would be much to blame if it so handled public business as to bring about unnecessary, or at any rate premature schisms and disputes between those who have only one object — namely, our safe and victorious emergence from the horrible struggle with Germany.»

Eventually, the Prime Minister accepted a Labour Party compromise proposal that an attempt be made to reach agreement on the controversial clauses in time to incorporate them in the present bill. (Reuter)

UNITED NATIONS

- WE SHALL FIGHT ... TO BERLIN, - ROOSEVELT SAYS

WASHINGTON, October 6 — President Roosevelt stated last night that Allied forces may have to fight every inch of the way to Berlin, but that the United Nations would not stop short of their final goal of securing a lasting peace.

Addressing an audience of Democratic Party workers here, President Roosevelt said:

- It is my plain duty to reiterate that this war for the preservation of our civilization is not won yet. Our forces and those of our Allies are steadily and relentlessly carrying the attack to the enemy. The Allied armies under General [illegible] declared that the United States is now at the highest peak of its vitality, primarily because when the American people want a change of government, they can raise the old electioneering battle-cry of - Throw the rascals out -. AUSTRALIAN ASKS U. S. OCCUPATION OF BASES

MELBOURNE, October 6 — Sir Keith Murdock, Chairman of the Australian-American cooperation movement, in an address here today said Australia and Britain would be glad to see the American occupation of bases in the Pacific, though the United States has no territorial ambitions in the Pacific islands. He said he had no doubt that military leaders would recommend establishing bases there.

Murdock, who is also a leading Australian newspaper publisher, said Australia's strategic position demanded a barrier across the Japanese-mandated Carolines, Marianas, and Marshalls. (OWI)

AID FOR COOPERATIVES DISCUSSED

CHICAGO, October 6 — Aid for the reconstruction of cooperatives everywhere will be discussed at the Cooperative Centennial Congress, October 10 to 13, by members of American cooperatives and spokesmen for those in Colombia, Venezuela, Jamaica, British West Indies, Canada, Scotland, England, China, and Switzerland. It will also mark the 100th anniversary of the founding of the first consumer cooperative in Rochdale, England.

Over 3,000,000 Americans are members of 15,000 farm marketing and allied cooperatives. In addition, 2,500,000 American families belong to 17,000 consumer and purchasing cooperatives.

Over 3,000 cooperative stores supply a half-million families, while 1,300 cooperative service stations furnish oil and gasoline.

In the Midwest, cooperatives have established oil refineries and even own oil wells.

Cooperatives also function in the insurance field, credit unions, irrigation and water projects, and power plants.

Several thousand students also maintain cooperative dormitories, bookstores, eating clubs, and laundries. (OWI)

27,000-TON LINER SALVAGED

LONDON, October 6 — The 27,000-ton Cunard White Star liner George, set on fire by Axis aircraft at Suez in July, 1941, has been salvaged, it was announced last night.

The liner, Britain's largest motor vessel, was refloated with a cement box against her bomb-damaged hull and left the port under tow for Karachi, India. During heavy weather, the towing cables parted and the George developed a 10-degree list.

The vessel, after putting in at Port Sudan, left for Karachi, a journey which is believed to be a record run for a derelict passenger liner of such size.

After dry-docking and replating in Bombay, the liner sailed to Britain via Capetown. (Reuter)

NEW YORK, October 6 — The Chinese Government is now estimating what proportion of China's post-war needs it can meet without aid and what requests it will have to make, Eugene Staley, member of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration staff, said in an article appearing in the current issue of the magazine, Far Eastern Survey.

Staley, who went to China in April, said he found the Chinese working on their own problems of relief and rehabilitation, while looking forward to some assistance from the outside. The basic principle of UNRRA, Staley said, is to help people who help themselves. He said China is not expecting post-war needs to be met primarily by

SWISS PAPER ON NAZI PLUNDER

WASHINGTON, October 6 — German railway traffic netoured through Swiss frontier regions reveals the large-scale war of plunder which the Nazis waged in the countries formerly under their occupation, said the Swiss paper Schaffhausen Arbeiterzeitung Wednesday.

«One gains the impression that everything in the occupied countries that could possibly be carried away was taken,» wrote the paper. «There were carloads of machine tools and semi-manufactured products. A freight car loaded with hides — exposed to the weather — was followed by several carloads of French wine. Even cooking pots and bathtubs were not overlooked.

QUISLING REPRESSION IN NORWAY A FAILURE

WASHINGTON, October 6 — Young men have disappeared from the streets of Oslo, and have gone into hiding in the forests to escape German mobilization, Yngve Larsson, a Stockholm city official, quoted by the Stockholms Tidningen said yesterday.

Larsson was speaking at a meeting of the Swedish-Norwegian Club, and said that Nazi quisling repression, labor mobilization, and the nazification of Norwegian youth have failed.

«Nazi labor mobilization of the three age groups [men born in 1921, 1922, and 1923] has been a complete failure,» he said. «The German attempt [to march Norwegian students at the Mulhouse concentration camp in Alsace] has also been unsuccessful, and this camp has now been evacuated deep into Germany.»

Larsson went on to say that the Germans are now resigned to the fact that the Norwegians are united; their home front is so well organized that all Patriots can be contacted and the Germans are powerless to prevent Patriots fleeing to Sweden. «I have found no trace of cultural or moral deterioration among Norwegian youth,» said Larsson. «Nazi criminal acts against civilians haven't deterred Patriots from their sworn intention not to collaborate.»

There are now between 14,000 and 15,000 Norwegians held by the Germans as political prisoners, and about half of these have been deported to Germany, according to the Stockholm paper.

Meanwhile, Radio London reported yesterday that Gestapo saboteur experts surveying the damage done to an arms factory at Kongsberg during an explosion on September 17, «confirmed that the saboteurs have done an unbelievably fine piece of work.»

The broadcast said that Norwegian Waffen SS Guards at the factory and German garrison personnel nearby were so panic-stricken that they ran around in the darkness shooting at each other.

STOCKHOLM, October 6 — Danish Patriots are maintaining constant pressure on German transportation and supply lines, according to reports reaching Sweden this week.

Aarhus was shaken on Tuesday by a series of explosions which destroyed a train of 11 cars loaded with 22 trucks and three steam locomotives, the Stockholms Tidningen reported.

German patrols have been ordered to shoot anyone tarrying along or near the road from Trondheim to Trolla [a Trondheim suburb] during blackout hours, added the radio report.

Stockholms Tidningen also reported yesterday that the Germans' most important export harbor in southern Norway, at Kristiansund, has been useless for a week as a result of Allied military action. GESTAPO ROUNDING UP SUSPECTS IN STRASBOURG

ZURICH, October 6 — Doctors, lawyers, teachers — all men who might be leaders of organized opposition to the Germans — are being rounded up by the Gestapo in the French city of Strasbourg.

The approach of Allied armies to within 50 miles of the city has frantic Nazis conscripting everyone for trench digging. Days of the week are set aside for different types of workmen: on Mondays, the city's barbers swing the picks and shovels, and so on.

Refugee reports reaching Switzerland said about 400 of the rounded-up intellectuals of Strasbourg have already been deported to the Reich. (Reuter)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 6 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the central sector, American and British troops of the 5th Army, continue to make progress, despite heavy rain and strong resistance.

American troops captured Lajano, a commanding position on the main Bologna Highway, and have cleared the town of Monzuno.

Indian troops of the 8th Army have advanced in the high ground east of Rimini and captured the village of Vignola. In the lower ground activity is confined to patrols.

Adriatic:

Troops of Land Forces Adriatic [on 5 October] pushed along the coastal road of the northern Peloponnese and captured the fortified port of Rion.

In Albania, the original landings were made at a point about five miles from Sarande. The natural difficult hill terrain has been made more difficult still by the prevailing bad weather.

Enemy forces are still entrenched in Sarande, and maintain artillery position along the Sarande-Delvine Road.

Troops of Land Forces Adriatic pushing east from Patras have taken Rion and a few prisoners, and have engaged enemy craft in the Gulf of Corinth with satisfactory results. In other parts of the Peloponnese they have taken the surrender of Security battalions.

In Albania today, bad weather restricted movements, but there have been patrol clashes and artillery duels. In the Dalmatian Islands, our artillery continue to shell the mainland.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Air operations yesterday were again severely curtailed by weather.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked rail targets and motor transport north of the battle area, and shipping in the Adriatic.

Other fighters were active against targets in Greece, and elsewhere in the Balkans.

During these operations, three enemy aircraft were destroyed. Three of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 200 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 6 — Here is the text of today's communique:

Allied troops have crossed the Dutch frontier north of Antwerp, in the neighborhood of Putte.

We have continued to make progress north of Baarle, Nassau, and Poppel. Gains made along the Hilvarenbeek road have brought us within three miles of Tilburg.

Stubborn German resistance from strongpoints is impeding our forces in the area of Overloon. Two enemy counter-attacks southwest of the town were contained.

Fighters and fighter-bombers and a small force of medium bombers operating in close support of our ground forces attacked enemy troops and strongpoints and destroyed a number of locomotives, railway trucks, and barges in Holland and Germany.

According to reports so far received, six enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air.

North of Aachen, our forces advanced about a mile east of Herbach, against strong opposition.

Near Ubach, we have made progress against heavy artillery and anti-tank fire, and our troops have reached Beggendorf, 1½ miles to the east.

South of Aachen, patrol activity continues along the front, and considerable enemy artillery fire has been falling in and around Mauschau.

Our troops fighting in Fort Driant have been mortared and shelled by the enemy.

Fighting has been in progress near Sivry, north of Nancy, where earlier an enemy counter-attack was repulsed.

In support of our troops near Nancy, fighter-bombers attacked troops and fortified buildings. Other fighter-bombers hit a railway station at Saarburg and destroyed a number of motor vehicles in this same area, and struck at barges and canal installations on the Marne-Rhine Canal east of Nancy.

Heavy bombers in very great strength strongly escorted by fighters bombed railway yards at Cologne and Rheine, and German Air Force installations at Handorf, Lippstadt, Paderborn and Munster-Loddenheide. Escorting fighters destroyed 15 enemy aircraft on the ground and one in the

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the central sector, American and British troops of the 5th Army continue to make progress, despite heavy rain and strong resistance.

American troops captured Loiano, a commanding position on the main Bologna Highway, and have cleared the town of Monzuno.

Indian troops of the 8th Army have advanced in the high ground east of Rimini and captured the village of Vignolo. In the lower ground, activity is confined to patrols.

Adriatic:

Troops of Land Forces Adriatic [on 5 October] rushed along the coastal road of the northern Peloponnese and captured the fortified port of Rion.

The importance of Rion to the Germans was that, in conjunction with the port of Andirrion on the opposite shore, its coastal batteries were able to guard the narrows giving entrance to the gulf of Corinth proper.

There has been no enemy shelling from Andirrion [during 5 October].

With the capture of Patras, the Germans have lost their main staging port for supplies to the west coast of Greece. It was also valuable as denying the Allies a reasonable supply port for operations in the Peloponnese.

Hitherto, seaborne supplies have had to be offloaded at the much less satisfactory port of Katakolon. This has involved a difficult journey to the northern coastal road over swampy ground.

After 1,500 personnel of the Security battalions had surrendered, the position of the German garrison at Patras, about 1,000 strong, became untenable.

Similarly, at Rion, 16 miles from Corinth, the Germans fell back quicker before the British forces.

German guns captured at Patras were turned, with good results, on small craft in the Gulf of Corinth, across which the enemy was trying to escape.

Local Greek forces and civilians are cooperating with our troops.

During these operations three enemy aircraft were destroyed. Three of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 700 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, October 6 — Here is the text of today's communique:

Allied troops have crossed the Dutch frontier north of Antwerp, in the neighborhood of Putte.

We have continued to make progress north of Baarle, Nassau and Poppel. Gains made along the Hilvarenbeek road have brought us within three miles of Tilburg.

Stubborn German resistance from strongpoints is impeding our forces in the area of Overloon. Two enemy counter-attacks southwest of the town were contained.

Fighters and fighter-bombers and a small force of medium bombers operating in close support of our ground forces attacked enemy troops and strongpoints, and destroyed a number of locomotives, railway trucks, and barges in Holland and Germany.

According to reports so far received, six enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air.

North of Aachen, our forces advanced about a mile east of Herbach, against strong opposition.

Near Ubach, we have made progress against heavy artillery and anti-tank fire, and our troops have reached Beggendorf, 1½ miles to the east.

South of Aachen, patrol activity continues along the front, and considerable enemy artillery fire has been falling in and around Monschau.

Our troops fighting in Fort Driant have been mortared and shelled by the enemy.

Fighting has been in progress near Sivry, north of Nancy, where earlier an enemy counter-attack was repulsed.

In support of our troops near Nancy, fighter-bombers attacked troops and fortified buildings. Other fighter-bombers hit a railway station at Saarburg and destroyed a number of motor vehicles in this same area, and struck at barges and canal installations on the Marne-Rhine Canal east of Nancy.

Heavy bombers in very great strength strongly escorted by fighters bombed railway yards at Cologne and Ehrine, and German Air Force installations at Handorf, Lippstadt, Paderborn and Munster-Loddenheide. Escorting fighters destroyed 15 enemy aircraft on the ground and one in the air, and strafed locomotives and goods trucks. Thirteen bombers and five fighters are missing.

Wilhelmshaven was attacked by a strong force of heavy bombers with fighter cover. One bomber is missing.

Nineteen thousand civilians have been evacuated from Dunkirk under the truce arranged for that purpose. (OWI)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, October 6 — Tonight's communique:

During today, troops of the Leningrad Front, as a result of successfully executed landing operations on Saaremaa Island (Osel), surmounted enemy resistance and captured the eastern part of the island, a beachhead of 40 kilometers wide and 25 kilometers in depth, and occupied over 80 populated localities, including Torgare, Payde, Lalla, Ranakula, Kongase, Pagavere, Ridoma, Muskla, Saare, Samala, Mekskula, Parva, Parsona, Risdy, Rukla, Kinnu, Koksi, and Kaksla.

North and northwest of the Rumanian city of Arad, our troops crossed the Rumanian-Hungarian border, overwhelmed Hungarian-German troops, seized the Hungarian territory city and the large railway station of Gyula; the town and railway-junction of Kotegyhaza; the town and railway-junction of Mako; the town of Battonya; and also occupied in fighting over 100 other populated localities, including Dara, Zhadan, Gets, Ulovari, Elek, Makskamarad, Maulgalmak, Severne, Donhartozik, Semagotu, Magyarbanhegyes, Dehichhata, Meschegyes, Pitvarozh, Chanozhbeloth, Tirathegyes, and Ajastfalva.

On Yugoslavian territory, north of Petrovgrad, our troops occupied in fighting the following populated localities: Vovvoda-Stepa, Ruska-Selo, Novosernyak, Cherta, Homan, and Lava-Tochin.

Southwest of the Rumanian city of Turnu-Severin, our troops, operating jointly with units of the People's Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, occupied on Yugoslavian territory the following populated localities: Tapovitsa, Sernatko, Luka, Zagubitsa, Tarbanovak, Metovnitsa, Zamdigrad, Lubnitsa, Grishte, Lenovat, Rgovat, Vachelitsa, Zagrade, Varovat, Ratse, and Maly-Izbor.

Our troops, jointly with the units of the People's Liberation Army of Yugoslavia, encircled a considerable number of German troops in the Mlinlihovac, Klokocevac, and Zaechak areas, and conducted successful battles of annihilation.

On other fronts, patrolling and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During October 5, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 90 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, seven enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 6 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The Nazi-Fascists are now concentrating their efforts against the Garibaldi Brigades of the Veneto sector, in order to secure their communication lines across this region.

Large-scale operations against the Patriots were undertaken September 21 in the Val di Vin area. Early reports say the enemy has already suffered heavy losses here — about 300 dead and twice as many wounded.

The enemy also carried out an offensive against the Patriots in the Cansiglia Mountains in Belluno Province.

On the night of September 21, Patriots carried out numerous acts of sabotage on rail lines in the Veneto. The lines between Udine and Tarcento and Udine and Gorizia were disrupted.

Near Treceimo, 500 meters of track were removed. Damage was also inflicted on enemy military objectives near Pontebba, in Udine Province.

Emilian Patriots destroyed five bridges over secondary roads in Modena Province, in the region of Montefiorino. On September 4 they set 23 German armored vehicles afire. German troops replied by attacking the Patriots on September 10 and 11. Both sides suffered heavy losses; 90 German soldiers were killed. After the battle, the Partisan forces withdrew.

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 6 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

On the western front, north of Turnhout, the enemy resumed his attempts at breaking through toward Tilburg with fresh forces. His spearheads were repulsed, after small initial successes, in a counter-attack.

Particularly grim fighting developed in the sector of Wageningen, where our divisions attacked in an attempt at narrowing down the enemy bridgeheads. In this sector, the enemy conducts a grim resistance. He reinforced the penetrating into the Plain of the Po, on a broad front. Enemy attacks, which in some sectors were repeated several times, were frustrated in fierce fighting.

In the Adriatic coastal sector, all enemy attacks also were repulsed.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, south of the Iron Gate and in the Belgrade sector, grim fighting is in progress at the previous focal points.

West of Arad, counter-attacks of German and Hungarian troops, which were supported by bombers, gained further ground.

On the other parts of the front in the Hungarian-Rumanian borderland, southwest of Grosswardein and west of Torenburg, enemy attacks were frustrated.

In the Forest Carpathians, yesterday, the Soviet large-scale attack abated.

Minor attacks, which were launched in rainy weather with the first snow covering the ground, remained unsuccessful.

South of Rozan, the Bolsheviks launched an attack proceeding from their infiltration. They were repelled, and local infiltrations were sealed off in counter-attacks. In the course of the last two days, 78 enemy tanks were destroyed in the fighting on the banks of the Narew.

Southwest and northwest of Shaulen, the Soviets launched a major attack with strong forces, numerous tanks, and bombers. In this sector, grim fighting is in progress.

The German garrison of Oesel is engaged in grim fighting with the enemy, who landed in the northeastern part of the island.

Naval:

In the Aegean Sea, light German naval forces sank a British gunboat and captured a part of her crew.

Air:

Yesterday, Anglo-American terror bombers attacked Munster and Cologne and made other raids on Wilhelmshaven, Dortmund, Koblenz, and Rheine.

Last night, the town of Saarbrücken was the target of the British bombing terror. Isolated planes dropped bombs on Berlin.

Anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 16 planes, 14 of which were four-engined bombers.

AMERICANS BREAK THROUGH SIEGFRIED LINE IN FOUR MILE ADVANCE

SHAEF, October 3 — The new American offensive in the Gelsenkirchen sector north of Aachen carried infantry troops four miles deeper into Germany today, definitely breaking through the Siegfried Line and capturing Ubach. Fighting is still in progress north and northwest of Ubach, where the Germans are showing desperate resistance. Despite bad weather, Allied planes are blasting German positions back of the lines. Over 500 prisoners have been taken since yesterday morning.

Three miles to the south, progress has been made in the Merkstein area, but resistance is strong with the Germans entrenched in pillboxes and prepared fortifications. A Ger-

Heavy battles marked the Allied drive on the western and northern flanks of the corridor, particularly at Hertogenbosch, where the Germans are making a strong stand.

Within 24 hours of General Eisenhower's warning to Dutch islanders, strong forces of RAF Halifaxes bombed the sea wall protecting the island of Walcheren, main German escape route from Belgium and Holland. The sea was pouring into the island tonight, and unless the Germans are able to seal off the area where the wall has been breached, the entire island may be inundated.

Canadian, Polish, and British troops of the Canadian 1st Army now control three-fourths of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal. Polish troops have reached the Dutch border four miles north of Merxplas, and are meeting heavy opposition.

On the American 3rd Army sector, General Patton's troops launched a second attack against the inner defenses of Fort Driant, a key point of the defense system guarding Metz. Previously, Thunderbolts dive-bombed the fortifications and artillery laid down a heavy barrage. They are within five miles of Metz and good progress is reported.

For the first time in weeks, the Germans have failed to launch a single counter-attack in the American 3rd Army front.

Press dispatches reported that Allied troops have reached Chambrey, 15 miles northeast of Nancy, one of the German's main collecting points for tanks and other equipment for attacks in the direction of Gremecey Forest.

French troops with the American 7th Army are now within 10 miles of Belfort, after infiltrating through the woods to capture the village of Remchamps. German efforts in this sector to reinforce their hard-pressed troops were checked with heavy losses. (OWI-Reuter-AP-INS)

R.A.F. BOMBERS BREACH WALCHEREN SEA WALL

LONDON, October 3 — RAF bombers today breached the massive sea wall of the Island of Walcheren with 12,000 pound bombs, and torrents of water from the North Sea were tonight sweeping through the gaps and flooding the reclaimed Dutch island.

SHAEF, October 3 — The new American offensive in the Gellenkarchen sector north of Aachen carried infantry troops four miles deeper into Germany today, definitely breaking through the Siegfried Line and capturing Ubach. A German prisoner stated that line units were warned that if any man retreated he would be shot, and if a company retreated every fifth man would be shot.

Weather Impedes Operations

Bitter fighting is taking place between the wet, muddy troops of both sides in a heavy forest east of the Aachen-Duesseldorf railway. American troops have been gaining ground through the forest in a biting cold, drizzling rain which has turned the ground into a slippery pond.

Allied operations in Holland are being held up by appalling weather along the whole northern sector of the front. On the eastern flank of the British 2nd Army corridor, Allied troops advanced six miles southward from Deurne to capture Meyel, eight miles from the Meuse (Maas) River. Slightly to the north, an Allied armored column, which captured Overloon yesterday, smashed a German counter-attack made in moderate strength today. The Germans are estimated to have lost 50 per cent of their attacking force.

Bombers and fighters blasted German concentrations of tanks and infantry massing south of Arnhem in an effort to hold the Allied threat to the gateway of northern Germany. The German assembly areas were turned into «killing grounds» and they were forced to disperse.

Canadian, Polish and British troops of the Canadian 1st Army now control three-fourths of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal. Polish troops have reached the Dutch border four miles north of Merxplas, and are meeting heavy opposition.

GERMAN WALCHEREN GARRISON ENGULFED

LONDON, October 3 — The German garrison holding the island of Walcheren from behind long-established defensive positions was engulfed today by waters flowing through the gap made in the great dyke near West Kapelle by RAF Halifaxes today, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

The dyke was 200 feet thick at the base, but crews reported that a gap several hundred yards wide has been made. Photographs taken an hour after the attack showed that the flood already extended over an area 1,000 yards by 700 yards. (Reuter)

74 TONS ON DUTCH BORNEO

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 4 (Wednesday) — More than 80 Liberator bombers of the Far Eastern Air Force struck heavily on Saturday at Balik Papan, main oil port in Dutch Borneo, it was announced here early today.

Great fires were started by the 74 tons of bombs dropped on the port.

Seven out of 30 intercepting Japanese planes were shot down. Three Liberators are missing. (OWI)

a strong force of Halifaxes to swamp German long-range batteries on the island which bar the way to shipping which is moving up the Scheldt Estuary to Antwerp, and prevent the use of the port by the Allies.

The Bombers struck during high tide in the region of West Kapelle at the most westerly tip of the island, and crews reported that the sea was already pouring in as they headed for home.

Practically the whole of Walcheren, including its capital Middelburg, lies beneath sea level, and a dispatch from Holland said that, unless the Germans can quickly seal off the area where the sea wall has been breached, the entire island may be inundated. Walcheren is roughly eight miles by 10, with the port of Flushing at its southern corner. It has served as a stepping-stone for the Germans evacuating the south bank of the Scheldt.

General Eisenhower's warning to Dutch civilians to quit the islands around the Scheldt Estuary was repeated in leaflets dropped by RAF planes today.

While the Halifaxes flew on their Walcheren mission, a force of more than 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 8th USAAF, with more than 700 escorting fighters of the same force, attacked military transport, factories, and airdrome facilities in southern Germany.

Objectives included the Nürnberg tank works; the Daimler-Benz heavy truck factory at Gaggenau, about 40 miles south of Karlsruhe; and the German Air Force station at Giebelstadt, 53 miles west of Nürnberg.

Train-Busting Foray

These daylight blows followed night operations in which RAF Mosquitoes carried out one of the best moonlight train-busting forays in Germany and Holland, as well as attacking the German industrial city of Brunswick for the second night running.

The Mosquitoes attacked 51 trains, mainly in the Ruhr Valley area, destroying six of them, and leaving 15 more burning among others. They also strafed motor-transport barges. No Allied aircraft were lost.

Tactical Air Force activity, confined to areas nearer the front line, also wrought destruction to the German war machine. Planes of this arm operated in close support of the ground troops driving ahead near Aachen in the second day of the new offensive.

Aircraft of ADGB flying over the Baltic, Holland, and Germany, were reported to have destroyed 16 trains and 12 barges.

Despite the heavy toll Allied planes are taking of German transport, the Luftwaffe was not in evidence in any strength. Only a few German planes were encountered. Four were downed over Holland. Five others, Dornier flying boats, were destroyed at anchor in the Baltic.

Rocket-firing Typhoons of the 2nd TAF yesterday attacked and blew up an enemy ammunition ship of 200 tons in the canal at Maaslius, Holland, as well as a number of barges in Dutch waterways, and supply trains southeast of Utrecht. Spitfires bombed another ship of 700 tons and strafed ground traffic.

Spitfires also bombed the German garrison headquarters at Dunkirk.

American Thunderbolts near Saarlautern, in the Metz area, encountered two Mustangs, evidently captured ones, flown by German pilots in a head-on attack. They were driven off by the surprised pilots without loss to either side. (OWI-Reuter) the attack, bombs fell so as to make the gates useless, and let out water from both sides.

Reconnaissance photographs show a long line of barges lying on the bottom of the empty waterway.

When the embankments have been repaired, the Germans will be faced with the problem of pumping water from the lower level into the long stretch of canal now dry. (Reuter)

R.A.F. ATTACKS ENEMY CONVOYS

LONDON, October 3 — Wellingtons of RAF Coastal Command and Avengers of the British Navy attacked enemy convoys off the Dutch Coast and the Frisian Islands, it was announced today. One Wellington is missing. (OWI)

MARSEILLES PORT OPERATING DESPITE DEMOLITION

MARSEILLES, October 3 — The great port of Marseilles, which the Germans thought they had destroyed so thoroughly that it would take years to resume operations there, will rival Naples as a military harbor within the next few weeks, American engineers told a correspondent.

The correspondent said in a delayed dispatch, sent September 21:

"Within two weeks from the start of the task of getting some of the port facilities into shape to handle invasion supplies, the first Liberty ship was able to tie up and unload directly onto a quay. Today there are many full berths for Liberty ships operating, and the engineers promise a large number of Liberty ships will be able to discharge simultaneously by October 15. (PWB)

WILSON CONGRATULATES PATCH

7TH ARMY HQ, October 3 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, in a congratulatory message to Lieutenant General Alexander Patch, 7th Army commander, and to troops of the U.S. 7th Army and French 1st Army, said the Southern France campaign will go down in history as an outstanding example of tactical skill, according to a delayed dispatch from a United Nations News reporter.

The message was also addressed to French generals who commanded troops in the campaign. It said, in part:

"I wish to send you a personal message of congratulations and thanks for the magnificent part forces under your command played during the time they formed part of the forces of the Mediterranean Theater.

"It is my personal regret that circumstances prevent our working together longer for the complete and final destruction of the enemy's forces. The campaign wherein you fought in Southern France will give history an outstanding example of drive and tactical skill." (UNN)

U.S. DIVISION TRAPPED 40,000 GERMANS

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, October 3 — How the U. S. 3rd Armored Division spearheaded the entire 1st Army Forces from the Seine River to the Siegfried Line was told today in a front-line dispatch from Richard Tregaskis.

In its drive to Mons, this division moved so rapidly that it trapped close to 40,000 German troops attempting to reach the German border and man the Siegfried Line.

Most of the Germans never left Mons. Having cut off the enemy, the 3rd Armored Division left the business of rounding them up to the 1st Infantry Division, which was travelling behind. About 30,000 Germans were captured, and about 5,000 wounded or killed.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 759021

Aircraft of ADGB flying over the Baltic, Holland, and Germany were reported to have destroyed 16 trains and 12 barges.

Despite the heavy toll Allied planes are taking of German transport, the Luftwaffe was not in evidence in any strength. Only a few German planes were encountered. Four were downed over Holland. Five others, Dornier flying boats, were destroyed at anchor in the Baltic.

Rocket-firing Typhoons of the 2nd TAF yesterday attacked and blew up an enemy ammunition ship of 200 tons in the canal at Maaslus, Holland, as well as a number of barges in Dutch waterways, and supply trains southeast of Utrecht. Spitfires bombed another ship of 700 tons and strafed ground traffic.

Spitfires also bombed the German garrison headquarters at Dunkirk.

American Thunderbolts near Saarlautern, in the Metz area, encountered two Mustangs, evidently captured ones, flown by German pilots in a head-on attack. They were driven off by the surprised pilots without loss to either side. (OWI-Reuter)

BREACHED DORTMUND-EMS CANAL EMPTY

LONDON, October 3 — One of the most important air attacks on German communications so far — the breaching and draining of the Dortmund-Ems Canal in Germany — has been completely successful, an Air Ministry statement revealed tonight.

Reconnaissance photographs showed that both branches of the canal were drained dry and have been empty for 10 days along a stretch of many miles, after an attack by 96 RAF Lancasters on September 23.

As long as the Dortmund-Ems Canal is dry, the Ruhr is isolated, by water, both from the North Sea and from Berlin and eastern Germany. No Rhine traffic can now reach the North Sea, because the Rhine itself is cut at Nijmegen and almost certainly impassable for heavy traffic at Arnhem.

Thus, at one blow the main bottleneck in the vast and vital inland waterway system of Germany has been entirely severed. The economic and military effects of this will be enormous and far-reaching. So far, there is no sign that the Germans have begun the long and difficult task of repairing the damage.

The canal was attacked at a place where it was highly vulnerable, the Gleine by-pass point, where a stretch of the canal had been doubled and both sections flowed above the level of the surrounding country. Huge gaps in the embankments alongside both sections of the canal were made by 12,000-pound bombs.

Although safety gates had been built across both sections of the canal to prevent precisely what happened in American engineers told a correspondent.

The correspondent said in a delayed dispatch sent September 21:

Within two weeks from the start of the task of getting some of the port facilities into shape to handle invasion supplies, the first Liberty ship was able to tie up and unload directly onto a quay. Today there are many full berths for Liberty ships operating, and the engineers promise a large number of Liberty ships will be able to discharge simultaneously by October 15. (PWB)

WILSON CONGRATULATES PATCH

7TH ARMY HQ, October 3 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson in a congratulatory message to Lieutenant General Alexander Patch, 7th Army commander, and to troops of the U.S. 7th Army and French 1st Army, said the Southern France campaign will go down in history as an outstanding example of tactical skill, according to a delayed dispatch from a United Nations News reporter.

The message was also addressed to French generals who commanded troops in the campaign. It said, in part:

"I wish to send you a personal message of congratulations and thanks for the magnificent part forces under your command played during the time they formed part of the forces of the Mediterranean Theater.

"It is my personal regret that circumstances prevent our working together longer for the complete and final destruction of the enemy's forces. The campaign wherein you fought in Southern France will give history an outstanding example of drive and tactical skill." (UNN)

U.S. DIVISION TRAPPED 40,000 GERMANS

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, October 3 — How the U. S. 3rd Armored Division spearheaded the entire 1st Army Forces from the Seine River to the Siegfried Line was told today in a front-line dispatch from Richard Tregaskis.

In its drive to Mons, this division moved so rapidly that it trapped close to 40,000 German troops attempting to reach the German border and man the Siegfried Line.

Most of the Germans never left Mons. Having cut off the enemy, the 3rd Armored Division left the business of rounding them up to the 1st Infantry Division, which was travelling behind. About 30,000 Germans were captured, and about 5,000 wounded or killed.

The Division's armor, consisting of tanks, half-tracks, and self-propelled artillery, dashed across Belgium in several columns, bowling over the enemy.

In a drive which averaged about 16 airline miles a day and about 25 miles by road, this unit captured Charleroi, Namur, Liege, Eupen, and Rotgen. The pace never flagged — men and officers whipped themselves to continue unceasingly.

The most amazing thing in this chronicle of human endurance and persistance was the fact that the 3rd Armored Division still had the strength to be the first to carry on into the Siegfried Line and, with the aid of the 1st Infantry Division, to pass completely through that line, breaking the double fortifications south of Aachen, and penetrating further into Germany than any other outfit. 5TH ARMY WITHIN 18 MILES OF BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 3 — Fifth Army Forces, fighting their way along the Sillaro and the Santerno River Valleys toward the Plain of the Po, yesterday thrust northward to within 18 miles of Bologna, and northeastward to within 13 miles of Imola, center point of the enemy's remaining positions in the central Apennines, it was announced here today.

The Allied gains in this crucial eight-mile-wide sector spanning the two river valleys and their roads leading through the mountains into the Po Plain were made as American troops of the 5th Army, for the fifth successive day, beat back the savage enemy counter-attacks against Monte Battaglia, a key mountain height dominating the Santerno Valley road to Imola.

Farther west, other American forces of the 5th Army captured the mountain town of Monghidoro, 18 miles south of Bologna on the main Florence-Bologna road.

American troops, pushing more than two miles northwest of the town of Giugnola in the most important advance of the day, took the hamlet of Casoni di Romagna, in the mountains west of the Sillaro River, and overlooking the road leading northeast to the Po Plain at Castel San Pietro, 13 miles distant. Casoni di Romagna, northernmost point reached in the Allied advance in Italy, is just 16 airline miles southeast of Bologna. In thrusts along the Santerno River Valley, just a few miles east of the Sillaro at this point, other 5th Army troops fought their way into the village of Carseggio, two miles north of Castel del Rio and 13 miles from Imola, the "hinge" on which it is believed the German Army hopes to straighten its defense line along the southern edge of the Po Plain, now threatened from the south, as well as from the east.

Fierce Counter-Attacks

The heaviest fighting in this important sector, where Allied forces are threatening the rear of German troops holding to hold the 5th Army fanning out from the southeastern corner of the Valley of the Po, has been centered about Monte Battaglia, four miles east of Castel del Rio. This peak, captured by American forces on September 20, has undergone five (5) days of heavy counter-attacks.

German forces, strengthened to check the American threat at this edge of the vital sector, have employed both flame-throwers and tanks in these costly and fruitless assaults. Monte Capello, a peak two miles east of Castel del Rio and captured by American forces on September 30, has also been subject to heavy counter-attacks without avail.

At the extreme western end of the sector east and west of Castel del Rio, slight advances were reported yesterday in the vicinity of Sasso, one mile southwest of Casoni di Romagna.

The mountain town of Monghidoro, 3½ miles north of the Radicosa pass and 31 miles north of Florence, being American forces to the southern end of the Idice River Valley, and within a few miles of the head of the Savena River, which joins the Idice just east of Bologna on the edge of the Po Plain. Other 5th Army troops pushing northward three miles west of Monghidoro, yesterday captured the hamlet of Cedrecchia.

On the western end of the 5th Army front, in the mountain region north of Lucca and Pistoia, now under temporary command of Major-General Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War, American, British, and Brazilian troops yesterday made significant gains.

Despite difficult terrain made almost impassable by heavy rains, troops under General Dutra pushed up the Serchio River Valley to points just south of Pian della Rocca and Farnoli, 11 miles north of Lucca, and flanking the Serchio River just north of the narrow Pizzovne Gorges.

American troops of the 92nd Infantry Division, a Negro unit, were reported to be near Cutigliano, on the Pian-

Tactical Air Force planes bombed Imperia, a port on the Gulf of Genoa, and shipping in the Gulf of Trieste in the northern Adriatic, while Balkan Air Force planes were able to carry out attacks on enemy troops and guns, as well as shipping along the Dalmatian coast.

The "stand-down" for heavy bombers, now inactive for a week, is the longest on the record of the 15th, it was said. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. DROPS 310,000 TONS OF BOMBS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 3 — Aircraft of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force have dropped more than 310,000 tons of bombs in operations since 1 January 1944, it was announced here today.

In September alone, the air force dropped more than 40,000 tons of bombs as enemy fighter-opposition lessened and aircraft carried out almost unopposed assaults on enemy communications and other targets.

Only 14 enemy fighters were encountered by 15th AAF planes last month, it was said, and every one of these was shot down. Tactical aircraft encountered and destroyed 13 enemy planes, it was reported. (PRO)

There are five ships in the flotilla, composed of small steam-driven craft of 710 tons. (PRO)

BRITISH COMMANDOS LAND ON GREEK ISLANDS

LONDON, October 3 — British Commandos, supported by light forces of the Royal Navy and Canadian naval units, have landed without opposition on three Greek islands off the southern tip of the Peloponnesus.

The first of the landings was effected Sunday night on the island of Kythera, according to Press correspondents with the landing forces. Kythera, sometimes called Cerigo, is five miles south of the Peloponnesus. The names of the other two islands were not disclosed.

Dispatches said that the first assault-wave went ashore at Avlemonon, a fishing village on the east coast of Kythera. The Commandos were met by Greek Patriots, who assisted in unloading the landing-craft. The Patriots said the Germans had withdrawn from the island during the past week, but were still present in force across the narrow channel on the mainland.

The Patriots said they had artillery on the island, and recently sank a boatload of German troops returning to the mainland. (OWI)

GERMANS ATTEMPT TO BLOCK CORINTH CANAL

CAIRO, October 3 — The Germans are trying to block the Corinth Canal to make it unusable for the Allies, reliable reports from inside Greece stated today. The Corinth Canal cuts through the narrow isthmus linking the big Peloponnesus Peninsula to the Greek mainland near Athens.

While there are no indications of the methods the Germans may be employing to carry out this task, it is pointed out that they will possibly use blockships, wrote a Reuter correspondent.

These would be difficult to remove with demolition charges, which might cause the steep walls of the canal to cave in and increase the difficulties, rather than remove them.

The heaviest fighting in this important sector, where Allied forces are threatening the rear of German troops battling to hold the 8th Army fanning out from the southeastern corner of the Valley of the Po, has been centered about Monte Battaglia, four miles east of Castel del Rio. This peak, captured by American forces on September 28, has undergone five full days of heavy counter-attacks.

German forces, strengthened to check the American thrust at this edge of the vital sector, have employed both flame-throwers and tanks in these costly and fruitless assaults. Monte Capello, a peak two miles east of Castel del Rio and captured by American forces on September 30, has also been subject to heavy counter-attacks without avail.

At the extreme western end of the sector, east and west of Castel del Rio, slight advances were reported yesterday in the vicinity of Sapori, one mile southwest of Casone di Romagna.

American troops of the 92nd Infantry Division, a Negro unit, were reported to be near Cutigliano, on the Pisa-Modena Road, at a point 11 miles northeast of the troops in the Serchio Valley.

Stormy weather on the Adriatic coast yesterday prevented any major action on the 8th Army's front. The Fiumicino River is reported to have become so swollen that passage by any but patrol forces is now impossible.

Positions generally along the Arezzo front at the southeastern edge of the Po Plain remained the same. A slight advance to capture Monte Reggiano and the village of Borghi, some 10 miles west of Rimini, represented the only change in forward lines.

A New Zealand anti-aircraft unit reported the sinking of a light German coastal craft just north of Rimini, with three rounds of fire.

8th Army Forces have captured 8,300 prisoners since the start of their offensive August 26, it was said today.

The German evacuation of the Aegean islands is still going on. This is being done mainly by air under cover of night with fairly heavy losses, since 18 enemy planes have been shot down by Middle East Beaufighters in seven successive nights.

Evacuation by sea has practically stopped, owing to the unceasing attention of Allied warships and warplanes.

In the areas evacuated by the Germans, Greek civil authorities are reported to be taking over the normal functions of the local government with a minimum of trouble.

LONDON, October 3 — The Polish uprising in the city of Warsaw has failed Polish headquarters here confirmed today that Home Army troops have fled from the capital and have crossed the Vistula to join Polish General Berling's Corps, which is attached to the Red Army.

Earlier reports from Moscow and Berlin told of the end of the battle, saying that all resistance to German forces within the city had ceased. Red Army troops are no nearer to the city than the suburb of Praga, on the east bank of the Vistula.

The last shot of General Bor's Home Army forces was said to have been fired last night at 2230 hours. (OWI)

RUSSIAN PAUSE SEEN AS REGROUPING FOR AUTUMN BLOW

NEW YORK, October 3 — An American press correspondent recently returned from Russia said yesterday that Soviet announcements of little change on the fighting front may indicate a strategic pause during which the Red armies are regrouping their forces for a massive late autumn offensive against Germany.

The correspondent pointed out that the entire character of Russian supply problems has undergone a severe change as a result of the sweeping summer advances.

Heretofore, he wrote, the Red Army has had the advantage of short supply lines compared with those of the Germans, but the shoe is now on the other foot. Supply problems faced by the Russians in Yugoslavia and the Balkans are particularly difficult, he said, not only because munitions and reinforcements must be moved across thousands of miles, but because they must be moved over territory where the Germans carried out their scorched earth policies to the point of completely destroying many sections of highways and rail lines, which must be rebuilt.

On the other hand, the correspondent said, the Germans are now fighting in their own backyard, with their arms industries close at hand, and no need at all for movement of supplies over vast distances from bases of production. (OWI-Reuter)

GERMANS BLOWING UP RIGA

LONDON, October 3 — Radio Moscow said today that German forces within the Latvian capital city of Riga have begun to demolish Government buildings, preparatory to evacuating the city.

The Nazis are said to be destroying large sections of all roads leading into the city in an effort to gain time for escape of their last units by sea.

The bitter fight for the Latvian capital continued without let-up today, with the Russians battering at deeply-emplaced German positions on the outskirts. (OWI - Reuter)

RUSSIANS TAKE RIGA GULF ISLAND

MOSCOW, October 3 — Troops of the Russian Leningrad Front captured another island off the coast of Estonia today, at the mouth of the Gulf of Riga, thus further threatening to shut off all lanes of escape for German troops remaining in the Riga area of Latvia.

The island is Hiiumaa, which, with the neighboring island of Saaremaa, dominates the entrance to the Gulf. It was reported earlier that large bodies of German troops had sought refuge on these islands, hoping to hold out there until relief could come in by sea.

Gains were reported on three other salients of the Russo-German front in the Soviet communique. Russian

ITALO-YUGOSLAV RAIL CONNEXIONS BROKEN

LONDON, October 3 — Marshal Tito's forces have smashed German rail communications between Yugoslavia and Italy. The complete break was effected today after a serious of attacks carried out by Tito's demolition squads throughout Dalmatia. The Yugoslav communique said all lines were severed.

One of the broken railway lines was cut in 32 places. Two vital rail bridges, one near Trieste, were wrecked, and a rail viaduct was badly damaged.

In addition, more than six more occupied localities were freed from Nazi control, and more than 100 Germans were captured. Violent fighting was reported on many Yugoslav sectors.

In the attacks on the rails, two full trains were blown up, and more than 30 German trucks were destroyed on the highways. During the day more than 750 Germans were killed. (OWI)

D.N.B. ADMITS QUITTING YUGOSLAV TOWN

LONDON, October 3 — The German news agency, DNB, said tonight that German forces have evacuated the large junction city of Vrsac, about 40 miles northeast of Belgrade, in Yugoslavia.

The Bulgarians, said Stavnov, are committed to full and energetic cooperation with the Allies. He said the new status was assumed at the request of Moscow. (OWI - Reuter)

GERMANS PUSHED TO LAPLAND FRONTIER

HELSINKI, October 3 — Finnish troops, pushing the Germans northward in an effort to round them up in accordance with Russian armistice terms, have reached or crossed the borders of Lapland.

An official statement said tonight that the fight has grown into a hide-and-seek war, and that the Finns are determined to fight it out to comply rigidly with the terms of the armistice. Fighting in the Swedish border town of Tornio, at the head of the Gulf of Bothnia, continued. The Finnish Air Force is credited with giving effective support.

Soviet Army officers, members of the Armistice Control Commission, have set up an office in Finland and yesterday met formally with the Finnish command. They examined Finnish maps and details of operations against the Germans.

40,000 GERMAN TROOPS THREATENED IN BALKANS

LONDON, October 3 — Radio dispatches reaching here today estimated that 40,000 to 50,000 German troops are faced with entrapment if rail lines running northward out of Yugoslavia are effectively cut by Russian and Yugoslav troops.

CHUNGKING, October 3 — Hundreds of Japanese troops were blown to bits by American bombs and others were cut to shreds by strafing planes today as the 14th USAAF struck hard at the Japanese offensive rolling toward the Kwangsi Province capital of Kweilin.

Columns of moving troops, bivouac areas, river convoys, and 11 Japanese-held towns were the targets of heavy attacks. Bombs sank one river steamer, destroyed 17 other vessels, and damaged 126.

Airfields were hit at Waohow, river port on the Japanese supply route out of Indo-China, while other airfields as far east as Canton received direct hits that crippled landing strips. The enemy sent up no fighter oppositions. Only one American plane was lost from all these operations.

An official statement issued here said the attacks were being pressed home day and night to prevent the Japanese from over-running Chinese territory from which American aircraft now carry out their extensive operations.

The Chinese High Command said bitter street fighting continued in the Hunan Province city of Paoching, outpost bastion of Kweilin, the Kwangsi capital, which is the defensive keypoint for all of southern China. Late reports placed the Japs within 14 miles of Kweilin.

BURMA JAPS CALL FOR AID

KANDY, CEYLON, October 3 — An intercepted Japanese message today called for more guns to be sent into the Chin Hills in an effort to stop the British 14th Army.

The Southeast Asia Command communique earlier today said that an outflanking movement now threatens to close the main Japanese exit from the Chin Hills area to which they have been retreating steadily since they began their withdrawal out of India.

The Japanese were said to have been disconcerted by the outflanking tactics of the 5th Indian Division, and to have placed reinforcements along jungle trails in an effort to block capture of the Tiddim and Fort White road-junction. The jungle trails are described in the British communique as the inside doors to Tiddim.

LIBERATED ITALY

CRANBORNE ON RELATIONS WITH ITALY

LONDON, October 3 — Viscount Cranborne, speaking for the British Government in his capacity as leader of the House of Lords, told the House today that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt believed that the Italian people were at present working their passage leading to the family of freedom-loving nations.

Cranborne said that in view of this fact, and despite the Italian Government's indefensible policy in the years [illegible] governments had recognized which, he said, had accomplished with great speed the restoration of water and electric services to normal function.

During his three-day tour of military and civil units in Tuscany, His Royal Highness visited Italian soldiers in the field and praised the good relations between Allied troops and Italians.

The Prince said he was very pleased with President Roosevelt's recent statement on the future status of Italy and felt that the President's remarks had greatly clarified the situation.

Among the cities the Prince visited were Florence, Lucca, Pistoia, and Pisa. In these cities he conferred with civil and municipal officials and met townspeople in the streets. While in Florence he received Cardinal Archbishop Elia della Costa at the Pitti Palace and also conferred with local leaders in the city.

Umberto was accompanied by members of his military staff and, during parts of the tour, by the chief of the 5th Army, AMG.

FUCECCHIO SWAMPS SCENE OF MASSACRE

WITH 5TH ARMY, October 3 — The Fucecchio Swamps were the scene of a recent massacre of 314 persons by the Germans, a United Nations News correspondent was told today by residents of the communities of Monsummano, Ponte Buggianese, Fucecchio, and Fucecchio.

Seventy-five percent of the victims were women and children, the residents said. They were assembled at the command of the officer at the German garrison at Chiesina and machine-gunned to death. Some small children with machine-gun wounds were later bayoneted.

At Consuma, the Germans gathered people into tiny rooms and killed them with hand grenades. In this community, four Germans commanded by a non-commissioned officer entered the town on August 25 and asked the residents for food. After they were fed with bread, honey, and cheese, the Germans placed their tools in a bathroom on the first floor and threw six hand grenades into the room. The Germans then proceeded through the village throwing hand grenades into windows and firing machine guns.

The correspondent was told that residents of one house took refuge in a closet. They were found by the Germans and a housekeeper who pleaded for the lives of the children was bayoneted to death. A man who spoke in German asking that the children be spared was also killed.

Pietrasanta, which was liberated five days ago, was the scene of the massacre of 50 persons. They were found in groups of 10 and 15 in small houses along the river bank.

At Forte dei Marmi the Germans blew up the town's largest hospital.

GERMANS LOOT SANT'ARCANGELO

SANT'ARCANGELO, October 3 — The retreating Germans did a thorough job of pillaging and looting Sant'Arcangelo before they were driven from this key communications point, a United Nations News correspondent reported today.

Everything that could be carried was taken out of the town. The rest was destroyed. Even food supplies were snatched from the hungry civilians. Personal belongings were carried off, and there is hardly a building which does not bear the scars of the German occupation.

But there was at least one German officer in the town who was convinced of German defeat and who found his plight an unhappy one. He was billeted in a house owned by a local resident, who described him as "one of the most miserable persons I have ever seen. Often he confessed to me quite openly that he wished he could find a way how to desert to the Allies, but he dared not do so... He knew

The Southeast Asia Command communique earlier today said that an outflanking movement now threatens to close the main Japanese exit from the Chin Hills area to which they have been retreating steadily since they began their withdrawal out of India.

The Japanese were said to have been disconcerted by the outflanking tactics of the 5th Indian Division, and to have placed reinforcements along jungle trails in an effort to block capture of the Tiddim and Fort White road-junction. The jungle trails are described in the British communique as the "side doors to Tiddim." (OWI-Reuter)

AMBOINA FIRES SEEN FOR 60 MILES

AFHQ SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 3 — Fires started by General MacArthur's bombing planes on the one-time Dutch naval base at Amboina, were visible to outgoing pilots for more than 60 miles, it was said today.

Evidence that the bombs had hit vital oil dumps and piles of ammunition was seen in the billows of thick black smoke, and in the many violent explosions which followed the attack.

MacArthur's aircraft carried out other smashing attacks on Japanese installations at Halmahera, just south of the captured island of Morotai, against Japanese warehouses on the Dutch-Portuguese island of Timor, and on Japanese installations in New Guinea and Bougainville. (OWI-Reuter)

LIBERATED ITALY

CRANBORNE ON RELATIONS WITH ITALY

LONDON, October 3 — Viscount Cranborne, speaking for the British Government in his capacity as leader of the House of Lords, told the House today that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt believed that the Italian people were at present working their passage leading to the family of freedom-loving nations.

Cranborne said that in view of this fact, and despite the Italian Government's indefensible policy in the years preceding the war, the Allied governments had recognized the need for further improvement in relations with the Italian Government.

He pointed out that the days of Mussolini and the Fascist Grand Council were over, today Mussolini is Hitler's prisoner, and the Fascist Grand Council are dead, or scattered to the four winds.

Cranborne added that when the Germans are driven from northern Italy, the basis of the Italian Government would undoubtedly be further broadened. (OWI)

UMBERTO PRAISES ROOSEVELT STATEMENT

FLORENCE, October 3 — Praise for the part played by Italian Patriots in the liberation of northern Italy was expressed here yesterday by the Lieutenant General of the Realm, upon completion of a tour of the liberated areas of Tuscany.

The Prince said that Patriot troops greatly cooperated with the Allies and helped materially in the establishment of permanent good relations between the Italians and the Allies.

Umberto, likewise, commended favorably on the reconstruction work of the Allied Military Government

WITH 5TH ARMY, October 3 — The Fucecchio Swamp were the scene of a recent massacre of 314 persons by the Germans, a United Nations News correspondent was told today by residents of the communities of Monsummano, Ponte Buggianese, Fucecchio, and Farcinno.

Seventy-five percent of the victims were women and children, the residents said. They were assembled at the command of the officer at the German garrison at Chiesina and machine-gunned to death. Some small children with machine-gun wounds were later bayoneted.

ENGLISHWOMAN IN ITALY SHELTERS U.K. SOLDIER

SANT'ARCANGELO, October 3 — The story of how a British-born woman hid an escaped English prisoner-of-war in her home and later aided him to return to his unit was told today by a UNN correspondent who interviewed the woman.

Mrs. Minnie Ricci, who was born in Fulham, a suburb of London, sheltered the English soldier after he had escaped from a German troop train passing through the neighborhood on the way from Rimini to Bologna.

German officials billeted in her house never learned of the English soldier hidden in the basement.

Contact was finally made with Partisans, and the Englishman was guided back to his own lines, with the Germans in the house none the wiser for what was going on. (UNN)

SAN MARINO INSTALLS NEW REGENTS

SAN MARINO, October 3 — Two new Regents, who will hold office for six months, were installed in the neutral Republic of San Marino today, reported a UNN special correspondent with 8th Army.

The Urban Regent is Teodoro Lonfernini and the new Rural Regent is Professor Valli Leonida, stated the dispatch.

Professor Giacomini told the UNN correspondent that the Republic would maintain the democratic system inherited from its forefathers. The Regent said that San Marino fully realised that the violation of their neutrality came first from the Germans, and believed that if that had not happened, the Allies would have taken "another road" from that which led through San Marino in their advance against the Germans.

The Regent expressed feelings of friendship and understanding between the United Nations and San Marino, and said that ideas of liberalism and democracy were shared by both.

The Regent praised the work done by the Allied military authorities in helping to feed the thousands of refugees who had rushed to San Marino from the devastated areas. An acute food problem had arisen, but the Allies had given considerable help in providing them with supplies, he said.

After the traditional ceremony, the Regents received their official visitors and well-wishers. Several high-ranking Allied Army officers were present as official guests. (UNN)

LIMITED PEACE-TIME PRODUCTION IN U. K.

LONDON, October 3 — It was announced in the House of Commons today that facilities to make various preparations for peace-time production are now being granted in Britain, provided the work can be done without impeding the war effort.

Since July 18, applications have been received by the Board of Trade from about 160 manufacturers in a dozen different industries, and rather more than half have been granted permission to begin the move to peace-time work.

These facts were given in the Commons by Captain Charles Waterhouse, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, in reply to a question made by Quintin Hogg, Conservative. He wanted to know how many requests the Minister had received from British manufacturers for facilities similar to those now available to American manufacturers under Donald Nelson's declaration to prepare for peace-time production. F.F.I. ROLE IN NEW FRANCE DEBATED

PARIS, October 3 — Correspondent Harold Callender said in a dispatch to the New York Times that the question of what to do with the fighters of the French Forces of the Interior has arisen in France with the liberation of the country.

He said the young Patriots are accustomed to fighting and want to continue to fight, especially since, for many, there is nothing else to do in a disorganized country.

Callender continued:

«The government decides to merge some of the FFI into the regular Army, and three divisions are in formation. Difficulties are:

«1. Regular Army officers do not regard the FFI as trained soldiers, despite their Maquis experience.

«2. Creation of new divisions involves modern equipment beyond that supplied to the regular French Army through the Allied accord.

«3. Leaders of the FFI have a conception of their role which differs in marked degree from that of the Army.

«To summarize a complicated issue in a few words, the leaders say the FFI ought to be 'the core of a new popular army democratically inspired,' while the regular Army is inclined to regard them as new recruits to be shaped and fitted into the Army as it is now. Behind this divergence lies the fact that higher officers of the Army have long been regarded as anti-republican by the people. FFI leaders desire to seize the present opportunity to democratize the Army from top to bottom.

«There seems little doubt that a large proportion of the FFI will be put into uniform for the war period, but the full demands of their leaders will be impossible to realize, and hence the problem will be incompletely solved.» (PWB - OWI)

DE MENTHON SAYS PURGE IS NOT REPRESSION

PARIS, October 3 — The purge being carried out by the French Committee in Government offices is not an act of repression, François de Menthon, French Minister of Justice, said on the French National Radio last night.

Explaining the operation of the investigations, he said:

"A purge commission, attached to every ministry, submits its proposal to the minister. Pending an examination of the dossier, the person concerned is suspended from office. The same method is applied in the factories and in the workers' and employers' unions. ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 3 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In spite of continued strong resistance and adverse weather conditions, American and British troops of the 5th Army have made further progress in the central sector, and American troops have captured the town of Monghidoro, an important road junction on the main Bologna Road.

Bad weather on the Adriatic coast has prevented any major action by the 8th Army.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Bad weather yesterday prevented all strategic and tactical operations. During the night of October 1/2, light bombers attacked rail yards and other targets in the Po Valley.

Coastal aircraft attacked small shipping in the northern Adriatic and in the Gulf of Genoa.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force made attacks on troop concentrations and gun positions, as well as on shipping in the port of Zara.

MAAF flew approximately 125 sorties.

night, light bombers continued attacks on transportation targets in northwestern Germany.

Our ground forces in the Dutch salient advanced several miles towards Meijel, and other units freed Overloon in an advance against heavy resistance. Several enemy tanks and numerous anti-tank guns have been destroyed in this area, and we are in contact with strong bodies of the enemy.

Southeast of Arnhem, escorted medium bombers attacked strongpoints, and fighters and fighter-bombers gave close support to ground troops. On the west of the salient we extended our hold on the north bank of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal west of Saint Leonard. Progress was also made northwest of Turnhout.

In southeastern Luxembourg, our troops have reached the outskirts of Grevenmacher, on the Moselle River northeast of Nancy. The Forêt de Grimmey has been cleared. Our troops have pushed ahead at a number of places in the Epinal sector, encountering still opposition.

Farther south, Ronchamp, west of Belfort, was freed. German efforts to move reinforcements to advanced units were checked with heavy losses to the enemy. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 3 — In the Piedmont mountains and valleys, Patriots are valiantly reacting to the pressure of superior Nazi-Fascist forces.

On September 21, the enemy launched an attack in force against positions held by Patriots in the Vin Valley in an attempt to reopen the Authret to military traffic. Enemy losses so far number 100 dead and hundreds of wounded. Patriots captured considerable war material, including a 47-mm. cannon and two 81-mm. mortars. Patriot losses were small. The battle continues.

In the period from August 5 to September 9, Patriots disrupted the Turin-Bardonecchia railway line in 22 places by the use of mines. Many sections of the railway as long as 300 meters were blocked. It was confirmed that on the sections still in use, the Germans are compelled to use steam power, because the Patriots have cut high-tension power lines.

During the same period, Patriots destroyed eight electric locomotives and damaged three others. Highway 25 has been cut in 11 places.

There has been no estimation, as yet, of enemy losses suffered as a result of 19 Patriot attacks against troop-carrying trains and motor transports. Information at hand, however, says 85 Nazi-Fascists were killed, 52 were wounded, and 53 taken prisoner in 30 other actions against convoys, isolated vehicles, and enemy positions.

A victorious attack against an enemy convoy at Alpe Sevina, mentioned in a preceding communique, took place on August 26 and was made by a detachment of a Garibaldi Division and elements of the «Giustizia e Liberta» battalion. Two companies of Fascist SS were annihilated and four 81-mm. mortars were captured.

Patriots are also very active in other regions. The road between Montelungo and Pontremoli, in Massa Carrara Province, was cut at two points during the night of September 3. Padua Patriots blew up the road and railway bridges at Montelungo, south of Pieve di Sacco.

On the night of September 6/7, an interruption was caused in the Padova-Bassano line. On September 11, the highway bridge at Stigliano was dynamited. On the 12th, Venetian Patriots salvaged the machine guns of an enemy plane which crashed in the Tagliamento River and used them to kill 25 Germans.

The Germans committed more crimes before pulling out of Lucca Province. Nearly all the inhabitants of the little village of Sant'Anna, near Pietrasanta, were murdered following the Patriot killing of nine Germans near Bosi. Only 27 of the 600 inhabitants escaped. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, October 3 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Grim fighting at the previous focal points of the Western Front continues in progress, with the air forces on both sides joining on a growing scale in the battle.

Canadian units which had crossed the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal at some points, gained ground in face of grim resistance.

Between the lower reaches of the Rhine and the Waal, our troops improved the positions which they had reached yesterday and held them in face of strong British counter-attacks.

South of Dennep, enemy tank forces exert pressure on our front. They succeeded, however, only in punching two minor gaps into our lines. Between Maeseyk and Aachen, the fighting flared up.

Movements of U.S. divisions northward, which were reported by prisoners, are likely to forecast an enemy attack in northern Holland and in the Aachen sector.

A certain number of Anglo-American tanks were destroyed in fighting at close quarters in the course of local enemy attacks and unsuccessful reconnaissance thrusts.

West of Chateau Salins, a temporarily encircled German formation was extricated by German attacks. Some localities were recaptured.

In the Perroy Forest, resumed enemy attacks were repulsed. The enemy was routed in counter-attacks.

On both sides of the upper Mortagne and east of the upper reaches of the Moselle, attempts of U.S. regiments at penetrating our high ground positions resulted only in minor local successes. Fighting for some localities continues.

The last strongholds in Calais were lost in fierce fighting, after extremely strong enemy air attacks.

Dunkirk and our strongpoints on the shores of the Atlantic report unsuccessful enemy attacks.

Italy:

In the Elvisear Appenines, the U.S. 5th Army resumed its attacks.

Northwest of Firenzuola, our grenadiers repelled the enemy in stubborn fighting.

Further east, the enemy, who had broken through, was stopped in our deeply echeloned positions. On the Adriatic coast, British attacks were frustrated.

Eastern Front:

Southwest of Temesvar and in the Danube sector on both sides of the Iron Gate, our troops are engaged in grim fighting with attacking Soviet-Rumanian formations.

The Warsaw revolt broke down. The insurgents, left in the lurch by everybody, stopped the resistance and capitulated after weeks of fighting which resulted in the almost complete destruction of the city.

From the remaining parts of the Eastern Front, only the successful defence in face of enemy attacks northwest of Warsaw, and successful attacks of our grenadiers east of Mitau, are reported.

Strong enemy forces, supported by low-level attacks of bombers, landed on Dago Island and engaged our garrison in the southern part of the island.

Air:

Anglo-American bomber squadrons launched terror attacks on localities in western and central Germany. They struck particularly at residential quarters in Kassel and Hamm. Last night, British planes dropped bombs on Brunswick.

Thirty enemy planes were shot down over the Reich territory and the western theater of war.

In September, fighters and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force brought down 1,307 Anglo-American planes, 501 of which were four-engined bombers. Not included in this figure are more than 1,000 cargo gliders brought down in Holland. Forces of the Army and the Waffen SS brought down 140 enemy planes and cargo gliders within the same period.

On the Eastern Front, the Soviets lost 1,230 planes.

Warsaw Military Capitulation: - With today's announcement in the Wehrmacht communique that the rest of the rebels of Warsaw have given up all resistance after long weeks of struggle leading to the total destruction of the town, the fatal adventure of the Warsaw revolt has ended — an adventure which was instigated by Moscow's lures and Washington's empty promises. When the Warsaw Underground Movement passed to open rebellion in early August, the rebels hoped to get armored aid from the Soviets, as well as many deliveries of food and war material from the British. None of the promises made by the British and Soviets were realized. A new chapter of Anglo-American treason has thus been closed. -

Western Front: - Anglo-American reports about the start of an Allied offensive in Aachen are not true, it was declared today in Berlin by competent military circles. These circles added that the situation in the western front has since yesterday been marked by intensified fighting activity with the exception of the front sector of Luxemburg and Metz, where all is relatively quiet. -

Eastern Front: A late despatch received shortly after midnight declares: - From the northern wing of the eastern front, only reconnaissance activity and shock-troop attacks are reported. Soviet troops, which landed on the island of Dago, were involved in furious struggle all day long. -

AFTERNOON PAPERS

OSSERVATORE ROMANO

1. Urgent measures needed. In some parts of Rome Province as well as in Littoria, Sulmona, Velletri and Rocca di Papa the Moroccani are quartered and up to their usual acts of violence, says O. Military authorities recognize their inability to discipline these troops; for the sake of human justice and dignity they should be sent away.

QUOTIDIANO (Independent Catholic) - Niente di nuovo.

RICOSTRUZIONE (Labor Democrat)

1. War with Japan. Writer suggests Italian participation should be rewarded by full Allied status and to promise of certain material advantages to Italy. Manchukuo, Siam, the Philippines, the Dutch Indies could be outlets for emigration and commerce.

VOCE REPUBBLICANA (Republican)

1. Announces fusion of Partito Mazziniano with Partito Repubblicano. Pacciardi writes on this union, stating that the forces of Republicanism are uniting, sweeping away the program and stressing the point that the Republicans are not party-minded but anxious to enlist all who feel as they do for the same end.

2. Notes that, judging from Churchill's speech, the British forces are pleased that Italy got out of control and feel they must support the monarchy as the representative of order. Their mistake, says La V., is in thinking order is in the pro army. Order will come only with the republic.

3. The Lieutenant's tour. It is regrettable, says La V. that during the Prince's tour of Tuscany, the Parties of the C.L.N. have consented to pay their respects to him. Italy, mother and result of the collaborationist policy of this govt.

AVANTI (Socialist)

1. Meeting of the Executive Committee of CGIL with Russian Labor representatives. The latter described work of Labor in war-time Russia.

2. Problem of radio. Article of some length, describing history of radio under regime and its connection with SIP, making it part of a nationwide hydro-electric cartel with multifarious ramifications. AVANTI suggests that Russo, named Commissario of some of these interests, including ENAR, is not quite the man for the job. Makes two suggestions: that a commission be set up of three members, chosen from various parties, to consider some provisional solution for the radio, which should be freed from the type of control it suffered under Fascism, and that its administration should be moved back to the Sottosegretari.to della Stampa and away from Communications. How it ever got to the Communications is one of the mysteries of the Bonomi govt.

3. Article on the situation in the fuse factory of the R.Esercito. Part of the plant requisitioned but two thirds still available. Many old and experienced workers out of jobs. Why not re-activate it ? Or is it a plot to let the plant lie dormant until some profiteer can buy it up cheaply and use it to exploit the workers?

4. Grave situation in Littoria Province. The peasants are forbidden to grind their corn (maize). Further article on the increases. And lastly little has been done to improve the electricity service though in some cases only minor repairs would be necessary.

Therefore, it is to be hoped that the democratic parties will form a big republican concentration which will be the 'center of a new national policy'.

2. N. Romualdi gives a favourable account of the elections which took place at Atri (Abruzzo), through the initiative of an American officer. He says that elections are the best way of democratically educating the people; in many places the leading classes have simply disappeared, therefore new men must be found among the working classes and peasantry.

3. The separatist movement in Sicily is not a manoeuvre of the landowners only; it is also caused by the ill-governing of monarchist and fascist Italy. Sicilian separatists must not count on Washington's help.

Therefore, it is to be hoped that the democratic parties will form a big republican concentration which will be the 'center of a new national policy'.

6. Favourable comment on Viola's speech to the veterans.

7. It has been decided that the Giudici Popolari will not swear to the King.

ITALIA NUOVA (Democrat)

1. Enzo Selvaggi writes on the diplomatic service. In his opinion stress should be laid on technical qualifications and missions abroad should not be political prizes. That was one of the mistakes of Fascism; it would be a great mistake to carry on the tradition.

2. Problem of Naples. v. conclusion in grey. Consiglio takes up two matters in this last article. The growing isolation of Rome and Naples is an alarming matter, he feels. More regional autonomy is desired by all but it may well go too far. And finally he returns to the question of prostitution. He cites one figure: 4000 minor girls (many between 10 and 12) under treatment in Naples hospitals. Making all allowances for conditions - which he has described in previous articles - this is terrifying. And he places the blame on the Neapolitan authorities. Vigorous and courageous action with appeal for help of the Allies would do much and the authorities have been far too indifferent.

3. Somewhat mischievous allusion to the difference between the militant socialism of Nenni and the milder type of his comrade Saragat.

4. Notes the phrase now current "It's the fault of the Allies" whenever anything goes wrong. One would think the Allies had nothing to do but intervene to create difficulties for the Italians. Let us admit our own responsibilities, says the writer.

5. Sympathetic article on the CC RR. No doubt they can be destroyed but it might be well to have in preparation something to put in their place. And a force with their traditions cannot be created overnight. (Sertorius).

POPOLO (Christian Democrat)

1. Favourable comment on Spataro's speech in Venice; he has defined the task of Christian democracy in the reconstruction of Italy.

2. The allowance for the high cost of living will not solve the problem of so many families - what everybody needs is work. A stop must be put to the rise of prices.

RISORGIMENTO LIBERALE (Liberal)

1. Clear the schoolrooms. Detailed roll-call of school buildings or parts thereof occupied by various parties. Appeal to evacuate and leave the schools for the children.

2. Troubles of Catia. Following appeals (a) to the police to double their vigilance during this period when the buildings have been derequisitioned but the inhabitants not yet allowed to return; (b) to the proper authorities, asking them to find some way to link up Catia with main communication lines; (c) to the Allies to make some provision for telephone service and to see that at least some quantity of water gets into the town.

2. The situation in Sicily: Separatism is backed up by great landowners and Fascists who fear the new social order will mean serious loss to them. It is necessary to create a political class for the leading class does not correspond to the needs of the people. Measures must be taken against delinquency and smuggling.

3. TEMPO does not agree with A. Macchia's program of regional decentralization. There are still strong regional currents in Italy; either Italy will be remade in the same mould and be one, or it won't exist at all.

4. It is all very well to give precedence to political cases, (as the courts have indicated) but this might be taken as an encouragement by common offenders who are numerous enough as it is.

5. Complaints against the PTTI.

UNITA' (Communist)

1. Comment by Spano on the Grechi campaign. He finds it has been a success and this is due to the civic sense of the Italian peasant. Spano notes that collections have been good in the regions where democracy is strong; weak where reaction is still powerful. Sicily exemplifies this, the selfishness of the latifondisti has corrupted even some of the peasantry and some 10,000 arrests were necessary. This relationship between political faith and economic wisdom may be a source of some useful lessons... In general one may feel optimistic about the campaign; the peasants have shown a sense of national solidarity; the peasants and the workers will remake Italy.

2. Violent attack by Di Vittorio on the selfishness of the big land-owners. In the South they have refused to make any concession in spite of the intervention of the Minister. The democratic govt will now have to decide whether to remedy the situation by legal measures or to leave the adjustment to the "exasperated masses".

3. Union meeting in Sicily of labor representatives from all over the island proclaims solidarity with govt.

4. Report of Questura that 552 fascists have been arrested since 4 of June does not impress UNITA', which feels that many more must be at large and anyway only 8 have been worthy of being considered for the High Court.

GENERAL

Fold of Warsaw is notes in all papers and there are a number of articles, some dealing with Polish-Russian relations... Cranborne's speech in the House noted by all... Various comments on electricity as usual; some complaint that the circolare interna has been suppressed.

AMERICANS LAUNCH NEW ATTACK AT AACHEN GERMAN COUNTER-ATTACK SMASHED

SHAEF, October 2 — The American 1st Army, striking a great offensive blow against the Siegfried Line, today drove a wedge two miles deep on a six-mile front north of Aachen. The ground attack was preceded by a highly concentrated artillery barrage, after which 400 tactical bombers battered German fortifications for 90 minutes.

American infantry poured through the gap and pushed across the Wurm River. Late reports tonight stated that gains of over two miles had been made in some sectors. Other forces have reached a point 400 yards beyond the Aachen-Duesseldorf railway track on the east side of the river. These gains have placed Allied forces in the Siegfried Line where it narrows into one flank north of Aachen.

Two of the strongest German counter-attacks since the battles of Caen were smashed yesterday in the Nijmegen-Arnhem sector by British 2nd Army forces and rocket-firing Typhoons. The heaviest attack began with the massing of German tanks and infantry eight miles north of Nijmegen. Some units were able to cross the upper Rhine at Huissen, but Supreme Headquarters reported that the Supreme Headquarters announced tonight that the Germans appear to be withdrawing from the northern outskirts of Antwerp. Press dispatches also reported considerable movement northward from the Antwerp-Turnhout sector, but this withdrawal was described as a thinning-out of non-essential installations, rather than a general withdrawal.

On the southern flank of the Allied front, American 3rd Army troops drove through the Forest of Gremecey and seized strategic high ground 14 miles northeast of Nancy. American troops cleared the Germans from the forest and knocked out 19 tanks, bringing their total to 138 in the last four days.

Slight gains were reported from the American 7th Army front against stiff German opposition. In the Lure area, west of Belfort, an increasing number of German planes are aiding ground forces defend the western approaches of the Belfort Gap.

More than 7,000 German prisoners have been taken in Calais, where mopping-up operations have been completed.

The Germans holding out in Dunkirk were attacked yesterday by rocket-firing Typhoons, switched to support the Canadian ground forces after the fall of Calais. Radio Brussels said that the assault on Dunkirk began last night, and that Allied batteries were hammering the outer defenses of the town. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

S.H.A.E.F. OUTLINES WESTERN FRONT POSITIONS

SHAEF, October 2 — This is how the Allied line on the western front now runs:

From the Belgian coast at a point between Blankenberg and Zeebrugge, it follows the Leopold Canal to the southern end of the Scheldt Estuary, west of Terneuzen.

It is resumed along the west Scheldt Estuary north of Antwerp, and generally follows the Antewerp-Turnhout Canal through the village of Brecht, bulging north of the canal to a point three miles north of Merxplas.

From the Turnhout area, it runs northeast across the Dutch border, going through Best to positions from three to four miles east of the Dutch city of Hertogenbosch. From there it passes through Berlicum, Nuland and Oss to the Maas (Meuse) River.

From Nijmegen, it runs north to the Neder (lower) Rhine, north of Bemmel. Going back down to Nijmegen, the line barely penetrates Germany in the area east of Beek, and again enters Germany in the Reichswald east of Mook.

From there, the line moves south of Vierlingsbeek and then southwest to Duerne and Weert, and southeast to Maeseyck and Sittard. (OWI)

Some units were able to cross the upper Rhine at Huissen, but Supreme Headquarters reported that the drive was definitely broken. The second attack came from the Reichswald Forest, eight miles southeast of Nijmegen, and was directed toward recapturing the strategic Nijmegen bridge.

Enemy Bringing Reinforcements

Reconnaissance planes have reported New German reinforcements, both infantry and tanks, moving up to the Arnhem area. They also reported considerable rail movement.

The British broadened their hold along the Meuse (Maas) River with an advance of four miles north of the town of Oss, widening their corridor west of the important bridge town.

From positions east of the communications hub of Hertogenbosch, the Allies now dominate the Germans in the Nuland-Berlicum sector on the main German front.

Further progress was made by Canadian troops in the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal sector after crossing the Dutch frontier at Baer to Duc last night. Along the canal area they have advanced three miles beyond Merxplas. An official spokesman stated tonight that between 20 and 25 German battalions are resisting the Canadian advance along the 30-mile sector.

The Germans holding out in Dunkirk were attacked yesterday by rocket-firing Typhoons, switched to support the Canadian ground forces after the fall of Calais. Radio Brussels said that the assault on Dunkirk began last night, and that Allied batteries were hammering the outer defenses of the town. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

SHAEF OUTLINES WESTERN FRONT POSITIONS

SHAEF, October 2 — This is how the Allied line on the western front now runs:

From the Belgian coast at a point between Blankenberg and Zeebrugge, it follows the Leopold Canal to the southern end of the Scheldt Estuary, west of Terneuzen.

It is resumed along the west Scheldt Estuary north of Antwerp, and generally follows the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal through the village of Brecht, bulging north of the canal to a point three miles north of Merxplas.

From the Turnhout area, it runs northeast across the Dutch border, going through Best to positions from three to four miles east of the Dutch city of Hertogenbosch. From there, it passes through Berlicum Nuland and Oss to the Maas (Meuse) River.

From Nijmegen, it runs north to the Neder (lower) Rhine, north of Bemmel. Going back down to Nijmegen, the line barely penetrates Germany in the area east of there, and again enters Germany in the Reichswald east of Mook.

From there, the line moves south of Vlerlingsbeek and then southwest to Duerne and Weert, and southeast to Maeseyck and Sittard. (OWI)

LATE BULLETINS

ADVANCE THROUGH SIEGFRIED LINE CONTINUES

SHAEF, October 2 — The American 1st Army continued their advance through the Siegfried Line in the Gellenkirchen area, late dispatches reported tonight. They are meeting heavy opposition, and an official spokesman stated that the Allied advance would be hard won.

Allied forces of the British 2nd Army have occupied Overloon, 13 miles southeast of Nijmegen. Other units have advanced several miles on the road from Duerne to Meyel. (Reuter)

MORE JAP FREIGHTERS SUNK

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 2 — Nine more small Japanese freighters have been sunk or severely damaged in General Douglas MacArthur's continued aerial offensive against enemy shipping in the waters of the Netherlands Indies.

A MacArthur communique said tonight that the nine ships were blasted in southern Philippine and Celebes island areas. (OWI)

ALLIED AIR FORCES SUPPORT NEW OFFENSIVE

LONDON, October 2 — Nearly 3,000 Allied warplanes operated in close and deep support of the American offensive in the Aachen sector of northwest Germany today.

One bomber force of 1,000 8th USAAF Flying Fortresses, strongly escorted by fighters, attacked German industrial objectives in the Cologne and Kassel districts of Germany. Bombing was mostly through cloud, and results were not observed.

Another heavy-bomber force of 300 Liberators poured bombs into Germany's freight yards at Hanau, 90 miles northeast of Aachen, and a key point through which German reinforcements and supplies move towards the Dutch-German front.

Yet another 1,000 or more planes joined the U. S. 1st Army in assaulting the Siegfried Line near Aachen. While 9th USAAF Marauders smashed at enemy installations, Thunderbolts attacked rail and factory targets near Siegen and Bonn, despit poor weather. A factory in Wellerwist and a roll truck near Siegen received direct hits.

Front-line reports said that the ground shook for miles around Aachen with blows at pillboxes, gun positions, and troop concentrations. A tactical force of some 400 or more bombers struck for 90 minutes at one small section of the Siegfried Line itself. Fighter-bombers then went in to crush what enemy resistance remained in that section. Finally, American infantry poured into the gap created by air and artillery assaults. The combined assault was one of the greatest of the European campaign.

Dutch Islands Attacked

Concentrated attacks were carried out yesterday on the Dutch islands in the Scheldt Estuary, the gateway to the great port of Antwerp. Formations of Typhoons, carrying bombs as well as rockets, struck at German radar stations on these islands, and during the night, Mosquitoes and Avengers followed up by hitting enemy shipping.

RAF Mosquitoes struck at Brunswick last night and also subjected German troops and supplies moving from Germany to the Holland battle area to incessant attacks, concentrating particularly on the area between Arnhem and the sea, and as far east as Osnabrück.

They made more than 40 attacks on rail and canal targets, destroyed four trains, and damaged 22 others. The engine of one train "blew up like a bomb," the pilot said, and sent smoke and debris 1,000 feet into the air.

Three barges were destroyed, and 11 were damaged on various canals. Bombs were also dropped on a factory 30 miles from Hundorf.

No Allied planes were lost during the night's missions.

It was announced at 8th USAAF headquarters yesterday that American heavy bombers dropped 35,500 tons of bombs on Germany during September. This tonnage forms part of a total of more than 40,000 tons dropped on enemy truck plants, tank factories, oil and aircraft installations, and railroad yards throughout occupied Europe.

8th USAAF bombers flew more than 18,000 sorties in September, and its fighters 14,000 sorties. Losses were 265 bombers and 137 fighters. Against those losses, USAAF fighters accounted for 363 enemy planes in combat and 388 on the ground, while the bombers downed 53 enemy aircraft in combat.

RAF Bomber Command and the 2nd TAF dropped over 55,000 tons of bombs during September, the British Air Ministry disclosed today.

The rate of destruction of targets in Germany was increased by the use of comparatively small forces bombing with such accuracy that as much damage was caused as in much heavier raids of the past, it was revealed. Almost the whole of Darmstadt was destroyed by about 200 Lancasters.

With the removal of the flying-bomb menace early in

Air Force battle casualties, including dead, missing, prisoners, and wounded, and 5,300 non-battle casualties made up of dead, missing, sick, and injured.

Arnold added that over-all plane losses were approximately 42,000, of which about 17,500 planes were lost in the Continental United States.

USAAF planes overseas have flown nearly 14 million hours, consuming more than 2,000 million gallons of 100-octane gasoline. They used 238 million rounds of ammunition to destroy more than 27,000 enemy airplanes, and probably destroyed 6,000 more.

Of the total bomb tonnage dropped, approximately 175,000 tons were concentrated on aircraft factories and related plants and airfields, 140,000 on oil plants, ball-bearing works, and other industrial targets, and the remainder on shipping and on military installations in direct support of ground troops. STRONG OPPOSITION EARLY IN ARNHEM LANDINGS

SHAEF, October 2 — Strong opposition was met earlier than expected by the paratroops who landed in the Arnhem area, Major General Urquhart, commander of the 1st British Airborne Division, stated today.

Recounting the stand at Arnhem which enabled the British 2nd Army to secure its bridgehead across the Waal River, General Urquhart said:

"There were several considerations which affected the issue. The main one was that, due to anti-aircraft fire, the RAF could not land us closer than eight miles of the town. It was intended to get a complete division down in one movement, which would have had a marked effect on the outcome.

"We ran into opposition rather stronger and earlier than we expected. Things did not go according to plan anywhere near it in the early stage. At the end of the first day, one battalion was on the bridge, and the rest of the division on the outskirts of town. The battalion removed charges and the bridge was secure and ready for forces coming up from the south.

Perimeter Lost

"Another brigade was to hold the ring for other forces coming the next day. It was not long before we were separated. The second movement, because of weather, did not arrive until the evening of the second day. It became obvious that the chance of creating a perimeter around the town had gone.

"When we decided to form a perimeter on the river and hold the ferry crossing, the brigade recalled from the north of the railway ran into a column of Germans with tanks and suffered a tremendous number of casualties. By the time they got into the perimeter, they were the strength of approximately half a battalion.

"The Germans laid down an intense mortar and artillery barrage, General Urquhart said, and all divisional troops, including service command, electrical and mechanical engineers, and sappers, had to be put in. Each man had his particular task in the perimeter.

"We found the German infantry easy, and our men effectively dealt with them," the British commander said. "But the tanks were too difficult to compete with. We claimed a total of 25 tanks and self-propelled weapons.

"Our men were magnificent. Those who had never been in battle before settled down to it like old hands, and one never had a moment's doubt that they would to their damnedest.

"We could not have lasted another 24 hours. We got out most of those in the perimeter, and in the perimeter we had approximately one-third of the divisional strength landed." (Reuter)

U.S.A.A.F. DROPS MILLIONTH TON OF BOMBS

WASHINGTON, October 2 — The United States Army Air Force dropped its millionth ton of bombs on the Axis in an attack on Germany on September 28, it was disclosed today by General Henry Arnold, Commanding General of the USAAF. He said that bombs composing the millionth ton struck the Ammonia's Oil Refinery at Merseberg Leuna, close to Germany's geographic center. This synthetic oil plant once had a capacity equal to about 10 per cent of the total synthetic production available to the Reich and was the third-largest plant of its kind in Germany.

General Arnold said: "Dropping one million tons means that five million individual bombs have plummeted down on German and Japanese targets. Almost half the total, 430,000 tons to be exact, have been dropped since D-day, June 6.

"In a recent month, the rate was 4,400 tons per day, or three tons per minute around the clock."

Citing figures covering all bombings from 7 December 1941, to September 28 of this year in all theaters, General Arnold pointed out that hitting the enemy with this great tonnage had not been without cost. There have been 72,000

U. S. 3RD ARMORED DIVISION FIRST INTO REICH

SHAEF, October 2 — The American 3rd Armored Division was the first American unit to break through the Siegfried Line, it was officially announced today.

The division made one of the most spectacular advances of the whole campaign in the west, racing from the Seine River to the German border at Rotgen in 19 days. The division crossed Belgium in 10 days. (OWI)

R. N. FORCE ENGAGES GERMAN CONVOY

LONDON, October 2 — British light coastal forces attacked a German convoy of three or four strongly escorted supply ships off Ymuiden, Holland, yesterday. Two enemy trawlers were set on fire and a small coaster was damaged.

An Admiralty communique stated that after a torpedo attack on one trawler, a heavy explosion was heard and a pall of smoke rose, after which the trawler burst into flames.

During this action, the steering of one British motor-torpedo boat was damaged, and she turned in a circle which took her close to a German trawler, which she damaged by gunfire. (Reuter)

STRATEGIC VALUE OF CALAIS REVIEWED

LONDON, October 2 — Commenting on the surrender of the Nazi garrison in Calais to the Canadians on Saturday night The Times today reviewed some of the strategical value and history of the French coastal town.

«The name of no other French town has quite the same intonation for the English,» said the newspaper. «Calais has given to most English their first sight of France. To its ancient memories of English rule and war ... is now added the fame of the defense by Nicholson's Brigade ... in 1940, to win time for the escape of the main body of the [British] Army.

«Its recapture marks the end of a long ordeal for the people of the Kentish Coast ... for the final storming of the defenses was preceded by the silencing of the last of the Cap Gris Nez batteries with which the Germans had been able to fire across the Strait ...

The Times added: «The reduction of Calais after long and bitter resistance adds fresh laurels to Canadian arms, and its obstinate defense was part of the German plan to deny the Channel port till the last possible moment, and so to delay the shortening of the Allied lines of communication ... now among the most urgent needs of the liberating forces.

«The strategic plan is well calculated. At the same time it contributes to that dispersal of force which Mr Churchill described ... as one of Germany's conspicuous weaknesses — and the garrison of Calais and other ports may be found very much missing in the coming crisis. With St Malo, Cherbourg, Havre, Boulogne, Calais and Ostend in Allied hands, only Dunkirk, among the Channel ports, now remains to be recovered.» (PWB)

GERMANS CONVERT IRON MINE INTO PLANE PLANT

NEW YORK, October 2 — Pierre J. Huss, International News Service correspondent with the U.S. 3rd Army, reported today that the Germans had been converting 10 miles of iron mine tunnels into a bomb-proof underground plane factory when the rapid Allied advance in France forced them to abandon the undertaking.

Huss said that the plant, at Algrange, about 12 miles from the Luxembourg and German borders, was to have gone into production this month with a planned output of 1,000 Messerschmitt fighters monthly.

The plant was to have replaced the bombed-out factory at Augsburg, in southwestern Germany, and was given highest material priorities in view of the desperate German plane situation, Huss said. (OWI)

LEADER OF FRENCH COMMANDOS IDENTIFIED

LUNEVIL, October 2 — Associated Press Correspondent George Tucker, in a dispatch yesterday, identified the leader of the French Commando troops who preceded Allied forces in the D-day landings on the southern coast of France as Major Henri d'Astier de la Vigerie.

The Commando leader is the brother of the Minister of the Interior in the French Committee of National Liberation, Emmanuel d'Astier de la Vigerie, the correspondent said. (OWI)

There is no meeting of sides, except as military needs alone may require it. The burgomeisters have full responsibility for seeing that their people are fed and cared for. One of them said:

«We expected much worse. We expected we should be tortured and shot — and that the day after you came in our streets would be full of civilians with their throats cut. Although you are very strict with us, many of our people would not have fled further into Germany had they known what it was to be like.» (OWI)

LISBON, October 2 — Airliners of the British Overseas Airways Corporation have resumed daylight flights between Great Britain and this Portuguese capital city.

Since June, 1943, the line has been making only night flights. The normal daylight run, resumed today, was stopped after a passenger plane carrying the film star, Leslie Howard, was shot down. (PWB)

FIERCE ENEMY RESISTANCE ON 5TH ARMY FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 2 — American and British troops of the 5th Army, driving toward the Po Valley, encountered exceptionally strong enemy resistance along the entire front yesterday.

Only local advances were announced as 5th Army units fought against heavy small-arms fire, artillery fire, and thick mine fields.

American forces pushing forward toward Imola and occupying Monte Battaglia beat back still another strong enemy counter-attack yesterday morning, this being the third major enemy effort, and the third successive failure to dislodge our troops from this mountain. Beyond stopping the enemy attacks, the American troops succeeded in capturing Monte Ceopella, about two miles west, after bitter fighting, and now command these two important heights, both dominating terrain features in the drive toward the Po Valley along the Imola Road.

Imola is the axis of the enemy positions from the Adriatic westward to the 5th Army and back to Bologna. Enemy resistance has become increasingly sharp as the 5th Army continues to drive toward this important junction and seriously threatens the rear of the Germans facing the 8th Army.

Meanwhile, as the weather improved, Allied air forces operating in the 5th Army sector appeared in force yesterday over the battle areas and provided close support to our infantry. It was announced that at least one enemy counter-attack was broken up from the air, and other enemy concentrations and artillery positions were bombed successfully.

On the 5th Army front, Savignano was reported completely clear of the enemy, and advance troops across the Pisciatello River in this area found the enemy occupying the far bank in strength. Several hard-fought engagements resulted.

Active patrolling took place on both sides from the coast to S. Mauro di Romagna, and here, too, very heavy fighting occurred.

In the southwestern side of the 8th Army line, pushing on toward Imola, our troops made further gains. About a mile northwest of Montalbano, forward elements reached the Fluviciano River, while other forces pushed on southwest from Tribola to attack Monte Reggiano and Borani. Latest reports stated that fighting still continues there.

Reports from the central front disclosed active patrolling, with our troops taking prisoners and inflicting casualties. (PRO)

GERMAN CATHOLIC CIVILIANS BEHAVING WELL

KORNELUNUNSTER, October 2 — German civilians in this Roman Catholic-dominated area have been well-behaved under Allied occupation.

Allied Military Government officials told an Associated Press correspondent today that they have had no reports of civilian violence against American troops.

Thus far there have been only six civilians brought to trial by the AMG summary courts. Four of the defendants were women convicted of entering the forbidden combat zone. They were fined.

The other defendants were men accused of stealing coal belonging to the military forces. They were remanded to a higher court.

AMG officers said the Catholic population of this region has been less indoctrinated by the Nazis than the people of other areas of the Reich.

Despite the town's fairly clean record, there is a dusk-to-dawn curfew, and no one, other than doctors, nurses, midwives, and essential food handlers, is permitted to move more than a few yards from home at any time.

The AP correspondent said the Germans are adhering strictly to the regulations laid down for them, and that they are taking severe restrictions in very good spirit.

WITH 5TH ARMY, ITALY, October 2 — Lieutenant General Mark Clark, 5th Army commander, has assigned Major General Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Brazilian Minister of War, to a temporary command of an important sector of the 5th Army, it was announced today.

Brazilian, American, and British troops are in this sector.

General Dutra has been inspecting Brazilian troops of the 5th Army for several days. CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL AWARDED TO SERGEANT

WASHINGTON, October 2 — The United States War Department today announced the posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor to Sergeant John Charles Squires, who, single-handed, captured 14 German machine guns and 21 prisoners in his first combat action in Italy last April.

The award will be presented later to the sergeant's father, Leroy Squires, of Louisville, Kentucky.

Squires, who was a private first class at the time of the action, was promoted to sergeant the next month. A few days later he was killed in action on the Anzio beachhead.

In addition to capturing the machine-guns and prisoners, Sergeant Squires learned to use the captured guns, and trained them against the Germans, inflicting numerous casualties.

Acting as a messenger, he made many trips through furious enemy fire, and organized resistance when noncommissioned officers had been killed or wounded. His regimental commander said:

«He contributed immeasurably to the successful accomplishment of the mission to which he had been assigned.» (OWI)

YUGOSLAV AWARDS PRESENTED 15TH A.A.F. FLIERS

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 2 — Major General Nathan Twining, Commanding General of the Strategic Air Force, and 23 other American officers Saturday received the gold and silver wreath, crown, and wings of the Royal Yugoslav Air Force in a special ceremony, a United Nations News reporter wrote in a delayed dispatch.

Captain Vojislav Shukich, senior officer of a group of 21 veteran Royal Yugoslav Air Force fliers serving with the 15th AAF, presented the wings to the American commander and fliers.

The awards, made in behalf of King Peter of Yugoslavia, were presented in the compound of a Liberator bomber base in Italy, with the Yugoslav and American fliers drawn up in parade formation before the American and Royal Yugoslav emblems.

In addition to General Twining, the awards were presented to Brig. Gen. Charles Born, operations chief of the 15th AAF; Brig. Gen. Hugo P. Rush, commanding general of a bomb wing, and Colonel Reuben Kyle, chief of staff of the same bomb wing.

The group of Royal Yugoslav fliers, the surviving members of four crews which were presented with Liberator bombers by President Roosevelt on completion of their training in the United States on 6 October 1943, are veterans of some of the most important missions carried out in the Mediterranean theater.

One of the four bombers is still in service, the others having been shot down in the course of a year's service.

The high point of the Yugoslav fliers' tour of duty with the bombardment squadron occurred on September 24, when Captain Vojislav Shukich led the squadron over the Kalamaki, Athens, airfield in his orange-colored plane, marked with the blue, white, and red Maltese Cross and circle of the Royal Yugoslav Air Force. Flying with the Yugoslav was a crew of Americans.

The heaviest damage to Captain Shukich's plane was sustained in the attack on Wiener Neustadt on May 24, when it returned with 127 flak holes. A companion ship was lost on another mission over Austrian territory on December 16, during the attack on the German fighter-plane factory at Augsburg. The entire crew of nine Yugoslavs and one American are listed as missing.

«During October 1,» said the communique, «nine German tanks were destroyed or disabled in fighting of local importance. Seven enemy aircraft were shot down in air combat or by anti-aircraft fire.»

Dispatches from Moscow earlier today said the battle for Riga continued bitterly as the Russians fought their way closer to the outer entrenchments around the Latvian capital city.

Ferocious mountain fighting was reported in northern Transylvania, and in the Carpathian passes over which Russian troops are beating their way into Slovakia from southern Poland.

A Reuter cable from Moscow said that Yugoslav units today took the town of Sopot, 21 miles south of Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital. Elsewhere on that front, Reuter said German forces had drawn up strong artillery elements to stem the Russian advance.

The Rumanian communique today spoke only of local attacks in Transylvania, and said that Rumanian and Russian troops had withstood several Hungarian-German attacks just over the Hungarian frontier.

In the general area of the breached Hungarian frontier, the Russians — according to the German Overseas News Agency — have massed three divisions of infantry for an expected push.

A Czech broadcast said Patriot positions have been improved by Czech counter-attacks in Slovakia, and that German attacks in the central coal regions were repulsed, with the aid of the Czech Air Force.

Radio Helsinki said Finnish troops continued their hard battle to take the town of Tornio, on the Swedish frontier. In central Finland, a small Nazi force was captured.

ESTONIAN PUSH SURPRISED NAZIS

MOSCOW, October 2 — German prisoners, taken in the Leningrad Front offensive through Estonia, revealed today that both officers and men of Hitler's northern armies were taken by surprise.

Several prisoners said their forces were cut in halves in the first few hours of the terrific artillery hammering delivered by the attacking Red armies. One battalion is reported to have been cut down to 30 men within a few days. An infantry company reduced to nine men was fused with it.

Orders from officers who said to be conflicting. Some said to stand and fight it out. Others ordered a retreat. Widespread confusion resulted, described by one prisoner as «a hell of a muddle.» (BBC)

YUGOSLAV AWARDS PRESENTED 15TH A.A.F. FLIERS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 2 — Major General Nathan Twining, Commanding General of the Strategic Air Force, and 23 other American officers Saturday received the gold and silver wreath, crown, and wings of the Royal Yugoslav Air Force in a special ceremony, a United Nations News reporter wrote in a delayed dispatch.

Captain Vojislav Shakich, senior officer of a group of 31 veteran Royal Yugoslav Air Force fliers serving with the 15th AAF, presented the wings to the American commander and fliers.

The awards, made in behalf of King Peter of Yugoslavia, were presented in the compound of a Liberator bomber base in Italy, with the Yugoslav and American fliers drawn up in parade formation before the American and Royal Yugoslav emblems.

In addition to General Twining, the awards were presented to Brig. Gen. Charles Born, operations chief of the 15th AAF, Brig. Gen. Hugo P. Rush, commanding general of a bomb wing, and Colonel Reuben Kyle, chief of staff of the same bomb wing.

The group of Royal Yugoslav fliers, the surviving members of four crews which were presented with Liberator bombers by President Roosevelt on completion of their training in the United States on 6 October 1943, are veterans of some of the most important missions carried out in the Mediterranean theater.

One of the four bombers is still in service, the others having been shot down in the course of a year's service.

The high point of the Yugoslav fliers' tour of duty with the bombardment squadron occurred on September 24, when Captain Vojislav Shakich led the squadron over the Kalamaki, Athens, airfield in his orange-colored plane, marked with the blue, white, and red Maltese Cross and circle of the Royal Yugoslav Air Force. Flying with the Yugoslav was a crew of Americans.

The heaviest damage to Captain Shakich's plane was sustained in the attack on Wiener Neustadt on May 24, when it returned with 127 flak holes. A companion ship was lost on another mission over Austrian territory on December 19, during the attack on the German fighter-plane factory at Augsburg. The entire crew of nine Yugoslavs and one American are listed as missing.

The crew of the third of the four planes presented the Yugoslav fliers reached safety after landing in Yugoslav territory, following an attack on Ploesti.

Th bomb squadron is part of the famous 376th Heavy Bombardment Group, oldest American bombardment group overseas, credited with the first American raid on Axis-held Europe when, on 12 June 1942, they carried out an attack on Ploesti from Palestine. The group carried out missions throughout the North African campaign. (PRO)

BEAUFIGHTERS DOWN MORE ENEMY PLANES

CAIRO, October 2 — Beaufighters of the Middle East Air Command, operating from Mediterranean bases Sunday night, destroyed five enemy aircraft, the Middle East air communique announced today.

In six consecutive nights, the Beaufighters have shot down a total of 16 enemy aircraft over the Aegean.

From these and other operations, one Allied aircraft is missing. (PWB)

MOSCOW REPORTS STATIC FIGHTING

LONDON, October 2 — In one of the shortest communiques of the Russo-German war, Radio Moscow reported tonight that no material changes have taken place.

expected push.

A Czech broadcast said Patriot positions have been improved by Czech counter-attacks in Slovakia, and that German attacks in the central coal regions were repulsed, with the aid of the Czech Air Force.

ESTONIAN PUSH SURPRISED NAZIS

MOSCOW, October 2 — German prisoners, taken in the Leningrad Front offensive through Estonia, revealed today that both officers and men of Hitler's northern armies were taken by surprise.

Several prisoners said their forces were cut in halves in the first few hours of the terrific artillery hammering delivered by the attacking Red armies. One battalion is reported to have been cut down to 30 men within a few days. An infantry company reduced to nine men was found with it.

Orders from officers was said to be conflicting. Some said to stand and fight it out. Others ordered a retreat. Widespread confusion resulted, described by one prisoner as "a hell of a muddle." (BBC)

ALLIES PONDERING TERMS FOR BULGARIA

WASHINGTON, October 2 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that peace terms for Bulgaria were still being considered. He said the question lies in the hands of the Allied Advisory Commission in London, and that it has not yet reached a decision. (Reuter)

U. S. PLANES ATTACK PALAU AIRFIELD

PEARL HARBOR, October 2 — The strongly defended Japanese installations on the largest of the Palau islands — the island of Babelthuap — have been subjected to another smashing attack by U.S. Marine Corps aircraft.

A communique from Admiral Chester Nimitz's headquarters said tonight that the raiding planes ran through intense flak to their chief objective — the Babelthuap airfield.

Meanwhile, continued fighting on Peleliu, southern island in the Palau group, brought the number of Japanese dead there to 10,151, and the number of captured to 187, since the start of the Palau invasions.

On Angaur Island, an Allied Military Government has been set up as the last of mopping-up operations brought the island completely under control.

Further aerial attacks have been carried out against Japanese positions in the Marshalls, the Volcanos, and at Truk. (OWI)

CHINESE ATTACK REAR OF JAP KWEILIN OFFENSIVE

CHUNGKING, October 2 — The Chinese High Command said tonight that Chinese forces have attacked the Japanese along the Hunan-Kwangsi railway, over which the Japanese rolled their offensive on the Kwangsi capital city of Kweilin.

In the Hunan town of Pinchung, defensive outpost of Kweilin, street fighting continued tonight. Both sides were suffering heavy casualties.

Japanese rail and river communications throughout this area were attacked by aircraft of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing of the 14th USAAF again today. Two troops of Japanese cavalry were caught on the move and heavily strafed.

Other aerial attacks were made on airfields in the Canton area over the week-end, and Japanese supply and barracks areas in Indo-China were also struck. (OWI)

BOMBERS SUPPORT ATTACK IN CHIN HILLS

KANDY, CEYLON, October 2 — Today's communique from Southeast Asia Command headquarters reported that Allied fighter-bombers flying in close support of land forces are attacking Japanese defenses northeast and east of Tiddim in the Chin Hills.

Press dispatches said Allied forward patrols are near enough to Tiddim to hear explosions, which suggest that the enemy is blowing up ammunition and fuel dumps.

On the Salween front, planes attacked enemy storage and supply areas on the Burma Road. Approaches of a bridge were knocked out. (OWI-Reuter)

JAP PLANE AND SHIP LOSSES REACH NEW HIGH

SAN FRANCISCO, October 2 — A survey made by the United States Office of War Information showed that Japan's aircraft and ship losses during September, boosted by American blows in the Philippines and by Allied submarine attacks, broke all previous records.

In September 1,415 Japanese planes were destroyed in combat or on the ground. Allied losses were 129 planes, or less than 1/10th of Japan's. Several hundred more Japanese planes were destroyed, probably destroyed or damaged.

Three hundred Japanese ships, including combat and cargo vessels, were sunk during September. Another 506 were probably sunk or heavily damaged. Allied ship losses were five small combat craft and one transport.

For the first nine months of 1944, Japan's plane and ship losses total 8,394 planes destroyed and 1,237 ships sunk.

Japanese concern over ship losses is shown by comment from the newspaper Mainichi Shimbun, which said that «if only we had ships, the greater part of our difficulties could easily be overcome.» An executive in the planning department of the Japanese NYK Steamship Line said: «It will be an exceedingly difficult matter to divert more labor and increase the allocation of materials directly toward shipbuilding.»

In view of the increasing losses of Japanese planes, Admiral Kitagiri, Vice-President of Japan's Airplane Industries Association, recently said:

«With the conditions prevailing, I consider it almost impossible to meet the demands of the armed forces. Japan's greatest and most urgent problem is an epoch-making increase in the production of planes.» (OWI)

«BLACK WIDOW» FIGHTER IN ACTION

WASHINGTON, October 2 — United States air forces in the European and Pacific theaters of operation are now using America's newest night fighter-plane — the Black Widow.

The War Department said last night that the new plane carries a crew of two or three men, and is equipped with devices for locating enemy aircraft in total darkness.

The Black Widow is a twin-fuselage, twin-tail aircraft powered by two 2,000-horsepower engines. Its firepower includes a 20-mm. cannon and 50-caliber machine guns.

The ship has been used to protect night movements of attack support.

The War Department said the aircraft, despite its weight of more than 12 tons, has exceptional maneuver ability. (OWI)

POWER CRISIS MAY AFFECT TRAMS

ROME, October 2 — A temporary crisis in the supply of electricity for this city may force a change in the tram schedules tomorrow, as well as the city telephone service, Brigadier Alban Low, Deputy Commander of the Rome Allied Area Command, warned tonight.

«We hope that it will not become necessary to carry out further reductions during this emergency, but we cannot count on this,» Brigadier Low stated.

The main effect of this crisis will be to start tram service at an earlier hour in the morning and continue later in the evening. This is expected to level off the peak load on the power situation.

If the crisis has not been eased by 1400 hours tomorrow, tram service will be lengthened from that hour on, but cars will continue to operate until 1830 hours.

On subsequent days, tram service will begin at 0530 hours and stop at 1830 hours.

If the emergency does not improve by the deadline hour tomorrow, two-party telephone service is expected to be cut off, excepting those lines used by city physicians.

In the last several days there has been a marked reduction in the electrical power service during certain hours.

To date, the power emergency has not affected the trams, RAAC officers said tonight. However, if such a reduction becomes necessary, it will mean that the schedule of tram service will be further lengthened so as to effect a further saving of 20 per cent in power.

Steps already are under way to alleviate the emergency situation. Arrangements are being completed to obtain a better grade of lignite at its source. Coal transport has been given special priority.

As an additional step, all emergency allotment of electrical current has been switched from elsewhere in this area, but this is switched back to its assigned area within a short time, it was also pointed out. (UNN)

GRANARY TOTALS TERMED FAVORABLE

ROME, October 2 — In spite of tremendous war-made difficulties, the campaign to collect liberated Italy's wheat crop in the Granaries of the People (Granai del Popolo) has proved a «qualified success» comparing favorable with totals in the years when this country was not a battle theater, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

When field reports for the period ending September 30 have been summed up, collections should stand at 75 per cent of the estimated receipts for the season, in the drive to provide from Italy's own fields as large a stock-pile as possible of this basic foodstuff.

Present incomplete reports show that 67 per cent or 7,815,953 quintals, have been delivered to the Granaries of the People. This is not 67 per cent of the total crop, but 67 per cent of the amount expected, ACC's Agricultural Sub-Commission pointed out.

By the end of October, 90 per cent of the expected collections will be in the Granaries of the People, and the rest will come dribbling in in November and December, the Sub-Commission's experts calculate.

This is the way liberated Italy's 1944 wheat crop estimates stack up:

Expected amassing	11,000,000 quintals

Retained legally for seed	8,000,000 "
Unaccounted for	1,268,440 "

NAZIS ANNOUNCE FIVE MORE GENERALS DEAD

LONDON, October 2 — The official German news agency disclosed the names of five more dead German generals tonight. One of them, said to have been killed on the Italian front, was identified as Major General Wilhelm Crisolli, commander of a Luftwaffe Division.

General Friedrich Mieth, army corps commander, and Major General Friedrich Blümke, commander of an infantry division, were said to have been killed on the eastern front. They were killed in action, said DNB.

Dead from wounds: Lieut. General Friedrich Zickwolff, also an infantry commander, and Major General Werner Dürking, acting commander of a grenadier division. The fronts on which these generals were wounded were not mentioned. (PWB)

GRANARY TOTALS TERMED FAVORABLE

ROME, October 2 — In spite of tremendous war-made difficulties, the campaign to collect liberated Italy's wheat crop in the Granaries of the People (Granai del Popolo) has proved a «qualified success» comparing favorable with totals in the years when this country was not a battle theater, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

Present incomplete reports show that 67 per cent, or 7,815,983 quintals, have been delivered to the Granaries of the People. This is not 67 per cent of the total crop, but 67 per cent of the amount expected, ACC's Agricultural Sub-Commission pointed out.

By the end of October, 90 per cent of the expected collections will be in the Granaries of the People, and the rest will come dribbling in in November and December, the Sub-Commission's experts calculate.

This is the way liberated Italy's 1944 wheat crop estimates stack up:

Expected amassing	11,000,000 quintals
Retained legally for food	13,477,000 "
Retained legally for seed	6,000,000 "
Unaccounted for	1,268,440 "
Total crop estimated	32,345,440 quintals

The 1,268,440 estimated quintals unaccounted for have been retained illegally, Allied officers and Italian agricultural officials believe, despite strict enforcement of the amassing rules — assuming, of course, that the total crop is actually as estimated.

«The collections,» Allied officials pointed out, «compare favorably with those in Fascist years, despite handicaps that turned harvesting into one series of crises after another, especially after the well-nigh complete breakdown of Italian efforts to collect the harvest in 1943 — in the period after the fall of Mussolini, the formation of a new Italian government, and the entry of the Allied Forces.»

The 11,000,000 quintals slated to go into the Granaries of the People will be issued to approximately 18,000,000 ration-card holders in the population of nearly 24,000,000 in liberated Italy.

The remaining 6,000,000 persons are on farms where actually they can raise enough wheat to feed themselves.

Fundamental handicaps against the harvest included the hard facts of military operations, with their inevitable and absolute priority. This accounted for the lateness of the collection in the forward areas.

«The necessary growing pains of the Italian agricultural administration, that had to start from practically nothing to organize its operations, resulted in late starts in field organization, » ACC pointed out.

Practical difficulties were headed, as usual, by shortage of transport. In addition, there were a lack of storage space and fuel for threshing machines, destruction of railroads and bridges, shortage of power for mills, delays in financial arrangements in some parts, temporary labor shortages, and delays in deliveries of binder twine and sacks.

An over-all factor was the reduced acreage caused by destroyed farms, fields mined by the Germans, and thousands of acres flooded by the Germans.

Comparison with other years (1943 statistics are not reliable because of circumstances aforementioned) indicate that the Italian farmer produced to the fullest extent possible in 1944.

Crops in past years in the same area as liberated Italy totaled 34,894,130 quintals in 1942; 41,297,750 in 1941; 42,529,020 in 1940; and 43,964,420 in 1939.

Keeping war handicaps in mind, the amount amassed this year is not out of line with the totals in the liberated area in other years: 13,197,791 quintals in 1942, 16,335,691 in 1941; 16,511,281 in 1940; 17,070,800 averaged in the years 1936 to 1938.

Po Farmers Await Allies

In the northern regions, farmers in the Po Valley are reported to be hoarding their wheat for sale on arrival of the Allied and Italian government officials. The price being paid by the Germans and Fascists is said to be between 285 and 350 lire a quintal.

The Allied-Italian price is 900 lire a quintal for soft wheat, and 1,000 lire for hard. The Po Valley traditionally fed Rome and supplied some 33 per cent or more of the Italian bread-basket.

In supervising and helping to make the Grano del Popolo as much of a success as it is, the Allied Control Commission made available to the Italian agricultural administration a large number of items for sale to farmers.

These included 60,000 pairs of repaired shoes to communes reaching weekly and monthly goals; 25,000 tons of chemicals; 1,500 tons of binder twine; 250 tons of baling wire, and nearly 750,000 sacks. Included also were trucks, fuel oil, chemicals for tanning belting, parts for repairing machinery, and many other harvesting needs.

ACC also obtained space in railroad cars, and storage space by de-requisitioning buildings.

ACC agricultural officers also organized special devices and made constant field trips to aid harvest collections. Convalescent officers from combat units and from the Middle East were brought by special arrangements to work as harvest control officers aiding Italian officials on the ground.

Nearly 50 such «troubles-shooting» officers were used. As one ACC regional commissioner remarked: «One harvest control officer was good for 100,000 quintals of grain on account of the help and encouragement he was able to give.»

Democratic Local Committees

The communal and provincial committees set up as an integral part of the Grano del Popolo campaign played a noteworthy part in this functioning of democracy, officials reported.

In many places, the success of the campaign locally was in direct proportion to the activities of these civic committees. Selected democratically, they had the responsibility of supervising and advising on most practical and equitable methods of furthering the harvest for the common good of producers and consumers.

«On the other hand, success often depended on the extent to which Allied officers and Italian officials from the national level — who, at most, were very few — could Sardinia suffered from lack of binder twine until too late. Lack of seed wheat in the spring also reduced its acreage.

Sicily, with a problem of a different sort, had 10,000 arrests, and 20,000 quintals of wheat confiscated, by a fully mobilized Carabinieri, with the result that the flow of wheat into the Granaries accelerated.

In Foggia and southern Italy, wheat smut formed a late problem. Earlier, Foggia faced a labor-shortage problem, met by importation of 19,000 Italian soldiers as emergency harvest battalions.

Macerata had storage difficulties for a time, its space deficiency being as high as 100,000 tons, until last year's grain was moved out, and other space also found.

In the northern regions, September rains and lack of chemical rust preventives were problems.

In the Campania area, with its many small farms, proper collecting was obviously more difficult from the many scattered holdings than it was in sections where there were larger farms.

Discussing this problem, one ACC officer remarked:

«From my experience, I would say there are at least 62 ways of evading collection.»

The following table shows the latest collections:

The Allied-Italian price is 900 lire a quintal for soft wheat, and 1,000 lire for hard. The Po Valley traditionally fed Rome and supplied some 40 per cent or more of the Italian bread-basket.

In supervising and helping to make the Grano del Popolo as much of a success as it is, the Allied Control Commission made available to the Italian agricultural administration a large number of items for sale to farmers.

These included 60,000 pairs of repaired shoes to communes reaching weekly and monthly goals; 35,000 tons of chemicals; 1,500 tons of binder twine; 250 tons of baling wire, and nearly 750,000 sacks. "On the other hand, success often depended on the extent to which Allied officers and Italian officials from the national level — who, at most, were very few — could energize and organize the local officials and farmers, of whom many were confused, disjointed, and distrustful," the ACC report said.

The original estimate of the amount that could be harvested was about 14,761,000 quintals. That was calculated last spring. Later, the target figure was set at 13,045,175 quintals. The most recent and realistic estimate is 11,600,000 to be amassed, a calculation made by the Agriculture Sub-Commission in the light of a fluid situation.

"Although the estimate of 13,045,175 was patently an aspiration, rather than a calculation," the ACC pointed out, "that regional targets based upon this amount were retained so as not to interfere with previously arranged plans.

"In many places, however, through the energy of ACC officers and Italian officials in the field, even this higher target figure has been achieved," ACC announced.

The lack of transport for hauling grain often delayed transfers of the crop from field to threshing machine, to the Granaries, and thence to deficiency areas, not to mention that Allied officers and key Italian officials themselves often had no transport to get out into the field for the mobile inspections of the first importance to a successful collection.

The rich, surplus provinces of Foggia, Matera, and Macerata, have done exceedingly well, while Sicily and Sardinia have fallen below expectations.

SOVIET T. U. DELEGATES VISIT ROME INDUSTRIES

ROME, October 2 — Members of the Soviet Trade Union delegation were given a warm welcome today by workers, technicians, and employees of some of Rome's largest establishments.

Accompanied by Italian General Confederation of Labor secretaries Giuseppe Di Vittorio and Oreste Lizzardi, the delegation first visited the State Tobacco Monopoly plant, where Delegate Shupletsov addressed the workers and praised the contribution of Italian Patriots in the war against Nazi-Fascism.

Next on the tour was the Poligraphic Institute. The Russian workers' representatives were greeted here by a staff of 1,300 employees, one of whom, a woman worker, exalted the part played by Soviet women in the struggle against Hitlerite Germany.

The tour ended with a visit to the head office of the city's Transportation Commission, and to one of the Commission's shops, where delegate leader Tarasov, in reply to Oreste Lizzardi, said the delegation's visit would serve to strengthen the bonds of friendship between Italian and Russian workers.

«TIMES» URGES ANGLO-SOVIET UNITY

LONDON, October 2 — The Times discussing the debate in the House of Commons last week, said this morning that the world is moving towards one of the most decisive moments in history, the collapse of Germany and the downfall of Hitlerism. The Times continued in part:

The terror that has weighed on Europe is beginning to pass. The guilty already see the hour of doom at hand, and those who have preserved the breath of freedom within them dare, for the first time in four years, to look forward eagerly to the future.

The foundation of Britain's policy in Europe lies in an Anglo-Soviet alliance. This alliance is not merely a product of war-time emergency, but is deeply rooted in the European situation as it will emerge from the war. Unless there is unity between them restraint of Germany will, in the long run, be wholly impracticable, a fact of which German propaganda shows itself vividly aware.

The urgent task of the moment is for Great Britain in consultation with her principal allies, to work out long-term policies which will limit and determine the future role of Germany in European society. The first aim is to provide a firm and permanent guarantee against any renewal of German aggression. The second aim is to enable and oblige the Germans to make their constructive contribution towards rebuilding Europe and for the maintenance of economic well-being and the stability of European peoples.

This is the one policy which can lend a permanent reality to an Anglo-Soviet alliance and any future plan of world organization in its application to Europe, concluded The Times. (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, October 2 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In the central sector, American and British troops of the 5th Army have met very strong enemy resistance to their drive toward the Po Valley. Some local gains have been made, including the capture of Monte Cappello, an important feature dominating the road to Imola.

In the Adriatic sector, there is no appreciable change in our forward positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Light and medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday attacked bridges, troop concentrations, and supply depots in Northern Italy. Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked communications and close-support targets north of the battle area.

Light bombers and fighters attacked shipping in the Adriatic, and gun positions in Yugoslavia.

From these operations, three of our aircraft are missing.

DANISH SABOTAGE INCREASING

WASHINGTON, October 2 — Dispatches from Stockholm said today that reports of sabotage in Denmark are increasing in number, and that violent disruption of railway communications is becoming especially frequent.

The dispatches added that it has now been confirmed by Danish sources that no new national police force would be established, in accordance with Nazi orders, to replace the recently disbanded police departments.

The Danes are said to have refused to serve in a Nazi-controlled police corps. As a consequence, German authorities are forced to draw further reserves from their already over-taxed manpower pools to set up their own police forces. (OWI)

SERIOUS UNREST IN HUNGARY REPORTED

WASHINGTON, October 2 — Reports reaching Geneva, Switzerland, tell of increasing unrest in Hungary. Members of the cabinet, according to the reports, have threatened to resign, and regulations regarding the protection of the Regent Nicolas Horthy have been tightened.

A TASS dispatch from Geneva Saturday said rumors circulating in Budapest suggest that the Lakatos Government is on the eve of a «serious crisis» because of the war situation and the popular feeling against the war which is growing throughout the country.»

TASS said that at a cabinet meeting held on September 28, several ministers threatened to resign, and some prominent Hungarians, who asked for the withdrawal of the product of war-time emergency, but is deeply rooted in the European situation as it will emerge from the war. SHAEF, October 2 — Today's communique:

Allied troops have strengthened the Dutch salient by their advance north of Oss, which cleared the enemy from the banks of the River Maas.

Northeast of Nijmegen, we have repulsed attacks by enemy infantry and armor.

To the southwest, our forces, making further progress west of Turnhout, captured the village of Brecht, and are three miles north of Merxplas.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked troop concentrations, guns, and transportation targets in support of our ground forces in Holland.

Other fighters flew offensive patrols.

Active patrolling was maintained along the German border from Aachen to southeastern Luxembourg.

In the area northeast of Nancy, our troops advanced into Forêt de Gremecey and occupied high ground around Frenes en Saunois and Courtures. A strong counter-attack near Juliaucourt was repulsed.

Local gains were made in the Epinal sector against strong resistance. Artillery fire was particularly heavy. The town of Saint Jean du Marche is in our hands.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, October 2 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

A hard-fought battle, lasting several days, has taken place in the Monte Grappa area, where strong Patriot groups have contested the control of ground sacred to the memories of the last war against the Germans. Many times, enemy attacks were held or repulsed. Enormous Nazi-Fascist superiority in men and material compelled the Patriots to fall back and take up positions elsewhere, along more favorable ground, in accordance with guerrilla tactics. The results of the battle are not to be evaluated in terms of ground regained by the enemy, but according to the losses suffered on each side, and these were considerably higher for the Nazi-Fascists. The latter, in fact, lost about 1,000 men and many motor vehicles. Other sources place the number of dead and wounded at 2,000 and the number of vehicles damaged or destroyed at 160. According to latest information, the Patriots lost about 400 men, plus 30 prisoners who were murdered on the spot by the enemy.

A week ago, a Garibaldi Brigade operation near Castello, in Trento Province, took an enemy position and captured 35 Germans.

Farther to the northwest, a clash, resulting in the killing of 60 enemy soldiers, took place on September 11. On September 7 and 12, patrols of the same brigade killed 12 Germans and took 24 prisoner.

The enemy suffered sizeable losses in a mopping-up operation in the Veneto Mountains. Two hundred Germans were killed and 250 captured. Only eight Patriots were killed.

In Piedmont, also, the struggle against the Nazi-Fascists is gaining in intensity. On September 5, Patriots attacked a garrison at Cascinette, in Turin Province, and killed 10 Germans.

It is more than likely that the German Command has issued instructions for the rounding up of Turin workers for deportation to Germany. It is said there will be an advancement of the curfew hour to facilitate these roundups of thousand of workers.

In the meantime, the Germans are stripping factories of machinery in the Novarese region and in the towns of Bellinzago, Lenta, Rozzio, and Rossenate.

Elsewhere, also, the Nazis are dismantling industrial equipment and shipping it to Germany.

The Udine-Trieste line's power cables and rails have been torn up and sent to the same destination after the Nazis were compelled to abandon its use. (UNN)

Italy:

In central Italy, the Anglo-Americans launched numerous unsuccessful attacks at the earlier local points. On the Adriatic coast, our grenadiers repelled the British at one point where they had crossed the Rubicon.

The Italian Partisans in the rear of the Italian theater of war continue to suffer heavy losses in holdup and sabotage operations. In the second half of September, 1,739 Partisans were killed, and more than 800 captured. Many positions and stocks were destroyed, and a large booty of arms and supplies was captured.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, the Soviet pressure at the bend of the Danube on both sides of the Iron Gate continues to increase.

Between Szeged and Grosswardein, German-Hungarian units, supported by bombers, continued to launch counter-attacks.

In the northern part of the corner of Szeki, at Sechsich Regen, grenadiers and mountain troops frustrated Bolshevist attacks supported by tanks.

In the passes of the eastern Beskides, grim fighting is in progress. Soviet attacks were repelled or checked. In this sector, the enemy lost 46 tanks in the course of the last two days.

No major fighting, except some unsuccessful Bolshevist attacks between Duena and the Bight of Riga, is reported from the remaining parts of the Eastern Front.

Air:

Last night, British planes dropped bombs on Brunswick and the Rhenish-Westphalian territory.

BRITISH REPULSE COUNTER-ATTACKS AS BATTLE FOR HOLLAND RAGES

SHAEF, September 30 — The great battle for Holland is raging fiercely, with the British infantry and armor thrown in by General Dempsey on the northern flank of the corridor, at grips with the Germans near the hamlet of Schijndel.

Schijndel lies eight miles south of Hertogenbosch and three-quarters of a mile north of the railway running eastward to Germany from Tilburg. Close-range tank battles are in progress, and British infantry are moving in to close quarters against concentrations of Germans assembled to 7th Army smashed to within 10 miles of the Belfort Gap gateway to Germany, and to within 30 miles of the lower end of the Siegfried Line, while Lt.-General George Patton's 3rd Army hurled the Nazis back five miles on the stubbornly-defended Metz-Nancy sector.

A dozen miles northwest of Belfort, the last Germans were flushed from the Forest of Mont de Vanne, but the heaviest slugging was east of Lure, which is 18 miles west of Belfort. Here, the Americans stood firm under an assault in strength.

Then they beat forward five miles, and captured the fortified village of Clairegoutte, 11 miles west of Belfort. They were reported within sight of the gap, which begins at Belfort and stretches for 15 miles eastward between the Vosges peaks on the north and the Alps on the south.

Calais Battle Resumed

The battle for Calais resumed shortly after noon today, at the expiration of a truce which permitted the evacuation of about 20,000 French civilians from the port city. Canadian troops threw in a terrific onslaught of heavy, medium, and light artillery fire.

During the evacuation, German drivers who escorted the civilians out of the city attempted to surrender to the Canadian Army, but Allied officers were not permitted to take prisoners during the truce. After the artillery barrage began, German troops streamed out of the garrison in hundreds. One prisoner stated that he had been waiting for a chance to get away for three weeks, and that nine out of 10 in the garrison felt the same way. "The commanders are the only ones who want to fight," the German prisoner said.

The use of three Brittany ports by the Allied navies to carry supplies to western France for the assault on Brest and other vital ports along the peninsula was revealed officially yesterday.

British troops last night annihilated a Nazi force which surged over the Neder Rhine west of Arnhem in a desperate effort to split the Allied armies in Holland.

Front-line dispatches stated last night that the northern approaches to the Arnhem bridge had been destroyed by Allied airborne troops during their stand at Arnhem, and the bridge made unusable to the Germans.

In the Nijmegen sector, a German counter-attack launched with armor supporting infantry appears to have made some headway, and furious fighting is going on in the fruit orchards. The starting point for this attack is the region of Kranenburg, on the north of the Reichswald Forest.

To the south, the 2nd Army extended its hold along the Maas River another five miles to a length of 20 miles, and the Germans could be seen digging in across the river with their backs to the border of their homeland from three to five miles farther east.

South of this new British front, Lt.-General Courtney Hodges' 1st U. S. Army in a one-mile advance routed the enemy from the Dutch village of Echterbosch on the German border 20 miles north of the gateway fortress of Aachen.

Meanwhile, at the extreme southern end of the 500-mile front, new action exploded as General Alexander Patch's

TAF SEALS GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS IN HOLLAND

LONDON, September 30 — Allied air forces today pursued their double strategy aimed at destroying Western Germany's rail communications and her dwindling oil plants.

A strong force of U. S. heavies attacked the rail centers of Munster, Hamm, and Bielefeld, while RAF bombers in strength bombed synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr at Bottrop and Sterkrade. These daylight blows followed night attacks by RAF bombers on the Rhineland rail-junction of Karlsruhe and mine-laying in German waters.

Only one bomber was lost by the RAF in both night and day operations. American losses have not been announced.

USAAF stated that more than 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators, solidly supported by Mustangs and Thunderbolts, delivered a heavy pounding to widespread railroad objectives in western Germany and also attacked industrial objectives, including an ordnance depot at Bielefeld, but the rail network threading through the Hamm-Munster-Bielefeld region to the battlefront was hit the hardest.

The RAF 2nd TAF has now cut practically all the rail communications behind the Germans opposing the British 2nd Army in Holland. Correspondents said that lines linking the Germans in northwestern Holland with Germany and with the Germans in the rest of northern Holland have almost all been sealed off. Movements toward the battle area on these railways have dropped considerably for the past two days, as transport could not get through except by roads which are also exposed to strafing from the 2nd TAF.

Despite poor weather yesterday, 9th USAAF, 2nd TAF, and Air Defense of Great Britain flew 2,500 sorties to destroy enemy materiel and support the ground troops.

About 200 Marauders and Havocs penetrated Germany last night and hit a supply depot at Julich, 10 miles from the Dutch border, and a rail yard at Bingen, 25 miles west of Cologne. Five Havocs were lost in the intense flak. Two other bombers were lost during the day.

Heavy Damage in Rhineland

Other medium and light bombers struck at rail targets at Geldern, Euskirchen, Prum, Bitburg, and Saarbrucken. Rolling stock in the Rhineland was hit by fighter-bombers.

The results of yesterday's operations include 52 locomotives knocked out, 186 railway cars destroyed or damaged, two railroad bridges blasted, a tunnel blocked, 53 barges, two docks, and a canal lock severely damaged, and 82 motor vehicles and 40 horse-drawn wagons knocked out.

According to the Swiss radio, Delle, a French frontier station on the Belfort-Porrentruy line, was bombed yesterday afternoon in four low-level attacks by U. S. aircraft.

In the Freiburg and Strasbourg area, three locomotives and 10 motor vehicles were destroyed in sweeps by Thunderbolts some of them flown by French pilots.

Two flying-bomb attacks were made against southern England and the London area last night. One bomb, which came in low over the east coast, cleared the rooftops of a town by only a few feet.

Fighters of Air Defence of Great Britain (ADGB) today received the unusual order to intercept and destroy a Flying Fortress last seen heading from the Wash toward Liverpool. The Fortress, with a full bomb load, got into difficulties over the Wash and the American crew baled out. Through some mechanical freak, the Fortress levelled out and as its automatic pilot apparently took over control the bomber swung westward across Britain in the direction of Liverpool. After disappearing again and again into the clouds, it finally passed over Liverpool and across Eire, and headed out into the Atlantic, where it presumably fell into the sea when its petrol ran out.

A large group of small German vessels, attempting to carry supplies to the German-controlled islands in the Aegean, were destroyed by gunfire.

The Admiralty listed the number of vessels destroyed or damaged as one large, six medium, and 26 smaller supply ships, as well as one R-boat and three naval auxiliary vessels sunk. Five medium sized supply ships and eight small supply ships were damaged. (Reuter)

DOVER'S ORDEAL BY GUNFIRE IS OVER

DOVER, September 30 — Just over four years after the first German shell crashed across the narrow strait from France, the people of Dover were told officially today that their ordeal by gunfire was ended.

Shortly after 1000 hours this morning, loud speakers in the town gave this message: "The Mayor has received official information that all the long-range guns on the side of the Channel have now been captured."

The message was also broadcast in the caves, where many people have been sheltering for the last month during the fierce bombardment of this little capital of the so-called "Hellfire Corner." (OWI-AP)

EXPLOITS OF BELGIUM'S SECRET ARMY REVEALED

LONDON, September 30 — The great part of Antwerp was saved for the Allies by a Belgian secret army wearing boiler suits for uniforms, it was revealed today, when details of the exploits and achievements of this Resistance Army were published.

Besides preserving Antwerp from destruction, they protected essential war industries intact, and carried out attacks by night and day for three months on German communications. They destroyed 140 railway engines, a "tank" train carrying 158,000 gallons of petrol, and two torpedo boats which were sunk as they were about to put to sea.

Although the aim of the secret army — complete interruption of German communications — was not attained, due to lack of explosives, German movements were disastrously hampered. The lightning advance of British troops into Belgium would not have been possible without the watchfulness and intervention of Patriots, a British general told the commander of the Belgian secret army, Lt. General Piré.

The Belgian secret army had its origin in 1940, when a few Belgian officers banded themselves together to resist the Germans, and in December, 1942, the army was recognized by the Belgian Government in London.

On June 1 of this year, the army was told to hold itself ready. On June 8, two days after the Allied landings in France, came a BBC message calling for sabotage throughout Belgian territory, and sabotage teams at once went to work.

Besides disrupting German communications, they protected the landing of Allied troops and materiel by parachute, provided guides, collected information, and reported essential installations destroyed by the Germans.

The Gestapo tried without success to disorganize it by a savage campaign of repression that caused many losses in its ranks, but every time an officer was killed or disappeared, another one immediately took his place to ensure that the Belgian secret army should be regarded as a regular fighting force. RAILROADS IN FRANCE HAUL ENORMOUS TONNAGE

PARIS, September 30 — More than 10,000 tons of freight daily are being hauled by American military railroads in France, it was disclosed today at a press conference held by former American railway men now working for the Army.

All of these cities are important German war centers.

The docks in Bremerhaven are now largely in ruins, and the three priority ship-building yards there have all been seriously damaged. Fire has devastated the greater part of the industrial and chemical center of Darmstadt, where the two most important chemical factories were damaged. In Osnabrück, both railways and industries have been most severely damaged. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

37 GERMAN SHIPS SUNK BY BRITISH SUBS

LONDON, September 30 — British submarines sank a total of 37 German and German-controlled ships and damaged at least 14 others during recent operations extending from the Arctic Circle to the Aegean sea, an Admiralty communique announced tonight.

In these attacks one submarine intercepted a convoy of three strongly escorted supply ships off the Norwegian coast. Two vessels were hit by torpedoes and sunk. Another convoy was intercepted off Kristiansund, in south Norway. Eight armed trawlers escorted the convoy. Several torpedo hits were obtained; full results were not observed.

RAILROADS IN FRANCE HAUL ENORMOUS TONNAGE

PARIS, September 30 — More than 10,000 tons of freight daily are being hauled by American military railroads in France, it was disclosed today at a press conference held by former American railway men now working for the Army.

The capacity of the lines is increasing steadily, despite the incredible condition of equipment, stated a dispatch from a United Press correspondent.

Men have been forced to work so close to the fighting that they have to bury German dead and extinguish burning trains fired by the enemy in French switchyards as they retreated, the dispatch said, continuing:

"Major General Frank Ross said his uniformed railroaders would not be satisfied until they had at least doubled the present capacity.

"Among the difficulties to be overcome is the effective ruin caused by Allied planes seeking to deny the use of the lines to the Germans.

"More than 5,000 miles of French trackages already have been restored to operation, and the situation is so well in hand that the Army has been able to assign the Brittany-Paris line to transport food to the capital.

"Several hundreds of miles of trackage have also been repaired in southern France.

"The restoration task started long before the landings in France, when American-made locomotives and freight cars were brought to England for assembly so that they could augment French equipment. It was estimated that since the landings 60 per cent of French locomotives have been destroyed, and 400 others have been taken to Germany.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 759021

- Despite the use of American equipment, 60 per cent of rolling stock now in use is of French, Italian, German, or other Continental origin. The equipment even includes some old last-war American Army boxcars that have been patched up for service.

- One of the feats of the transportation service was the patching of a 250-mile stretch of blasted line from the coast toward Le Mans, a job completed in 48 hours.

- French railwaymen helped out by bringing forth equipment they had hidden from the Germans. Replacement parts and tools were thus made available.

- French railroaders told the Americans when they arrived in Le Mans that they would be lucky to get two trains cleared in an entire day. The Americans thought they could do better than that. They did — they cleared 27 trains. (OWI)

NAZI CRUISER DOWN FOR SECOND TIME

LONDON, September 30. — Sinking of the German cruiser Koenigsberg for the second time was confirmed by the Norwegian Government today.

The 6,800-ton warcraft, refloated after being sunk by British bombs in a Norwegian harbor in 1940, had been maneuvered into a drydock. The dock capsized, said the official statement, and the cruiser went down again. (OWI)

5TH ARMY ADVANCES CLOSER TO BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 30 — The 5th Army advanced closer to Bologna, fighting fiercely for every yard of ground against determined enemy resistance, rain-flooded streams, and almost impassable roads, it was announced here today. The advance carried Allied troops into Giugnola, an important highway town 18 miles southeast of Bologna, while forward Allied patrols were in Belvedere, about two miles east of Giugnola.

The hardest fighting along the 5th Army front was reported in the central sector, where Allied troops drove a deep wedge into the German lines, forcing the enemy to pull out quickly to avoid being trapped. As he retreated toward Bologna, the enemy was using Imola, 20 miles southeast of Bologna, as a pivot for straightening his lines. Imola is the apex of a triangle in which the two base points are Forli on the east and Giugnola on the west.

On the 5th Army's right flank, British troops battled forward to liberate the town of Fresiola and take Monte Fuso, a height 10 miles southeast of the town.

8th Army Reaches Fiumicino River

The Germans launched a desperate counter-attack Thursday and again on Friday in regimental strength against Allied positions on Monte Battaglia, the nearest Allied point to the Po Plain. The height is about 13 air miles from Highway 9, the straight-line highway running from the Adriatic northwest to Bologna. There was bitter fighting during both counter-attacks, but the enemy fell back.

Toward the center of the front, American troops of the 5th Army took Giugnola and the important heights of Monte Caggioli and Monte Canda, which flank Highway 65, the road north to Bologna from Florence. Capture of these heights moved the Allied advance another three miles forward from La Mazetta to Filigare.

To the west of Highway 65, Allied troops attacked and reached Monte Balestra and Montefredente.

STRUMITZA TAKEN BY YUGOSLAV PARTISANS

LONDON, September 30 — The town of Strumitza in Macedonia, 18 miles from the Bulgarian frontier, has been taken by Marshal Tito's forces, according to a broadcast today by the Free Yugoslav Radio.

The broadcast said that fierce fighting is still going on at Banjaluka, and that in Dalmatia Yugoslav Patriot forces routed an entire German column, killing 300.

Among other towns liberated was Lonznica, southwest of Belgrade, which was taken after two days of fighting.

Patriot forces destroyed the Litija bridge in Slovenia, the largest bridge between Ljubljana and Zidani. This railway line is part of the main trunk route connecting Zagreb with the port of Trieste. Destruction of the bridge is the latest of a long series of operations carried out by the Partisans and the Allied Air Forces to cut off the retreat of the Germans from the Balkans.

The Free Yugoslav Radio also said the strongpoint of Jablanac, a port on the Croatian coast important for sea communications to Fiume, has been taken. (OWI-Reuter)

BEAUFIGHTERS DOWN MORE TROOP-CARRIERS

CAIRO, September 30 — Middle East Beaufighters destroyed three more Junkers troop-carrying aircraft over the Aegean last night, it was announced in today's communique. No Allied aircraft is missing.

This brings the total German aircraft destroyed in this area in four consecutive nights to 11. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS MASSING FOR GERMAN DRIVE

MOSCOW, September 30 — The Red Army is now massing in Russia's dusty autumn for what may well prove to be the final big battles of the war in the East, said Reuter dispatches sent from here today.

In the closely guarded conference rooms of the Soviet command, said Reuter, the last touches are being put to plans designed to be the death blow to German armies on the eastern front.

These plans, the correspondent added, are based on the strategic conception of clearing a broad path over the last approaches to Berlin.

Battles in the Baltic states and the Balkans, the dispatch concluded, are likely to be revealed as only preliminaries to main operations in which central Poland will act as the gateway to Germany's most vital areas.

Meanwhile, massed Russian guns were pounding tonight at concrete defenses behind which the last Germans driven from northern Baltic areas were holding out in and around the Latvian capital of Riga.

In this Baltic region, northwest of Parnu, the Estonian island of Muhu, a stepping stone to the far larger island of Saaremaa, was occupied today by Russian troops of the Leningrad Front.

Battling Russian troops also entered Yugoslavia today, chasing the Germans from 20 small towns and villages and taking the vital junction city of Negotin.

The Soviet communique said the frontier crossing was made south of the Rumanian town of Turnu-Severin, on the right bank of the Danube.

Still further gains were reported in the Russian drive over the Carpathians into Czecho-Slovakia, and in northern Transylvania.

A Rumanian communique said Rumanian troops had taken the Hungarian town of Gyula, about five miles over the Rumanian frontier northeast of Arad.

From inside Warsaw, Polish General Bor reported the loss of Mokotov, suburb of the Polish capital, and said that Russian planes have dropped more supplies to his troops, now dug in after six days of furious fighting. (Reuter)

8th Army Reaches Fiumicino River

The Germans launched a desperate counter-attack Thursday and again on Friday in regimental strength against Allied positions on Monte Battaglia, the nearest Allied point to the Po Plain. The height is about 13 air miles from Highway 9, the straight-line highway running from the Adriatic northwest to Bologna. There was bitter fighting during both counter-attacks, but the enemy fell back.

Capture of these heights moved the Allied advance another three miles forward from La Mazetta to Filigare.

To the west of Highway 65, Allied troops attacked and reached Monte Balestra and Montefredente.

New Zealand troops of the 8th Army have driven on and have reached the Fiumicino River on a 400-yard front from the coast inland. The Germans, defending the bank in force, counter-attacked twice across the river late Thursday night, but both attacks were repulsed. Eighth Army forces are now established along a road 300 to 500 yards east of Fiumicino from two miles north of San Mauro di Romagna to Savignano.

Dispatches from the front lines reported that both the Marecchia and Rubicon rivers have risen and are running swiftly, making crossings very difficult. As a result, activity around the Savignano area was confined to patrolling, with no further fighting reported in the town.

It was announced that the small Allied bridgehead west of San Mauro was withdrawn after enemy infantry and tanks attacked Allied troops before reinforcements could be brought forward.

Northwest of Canonica, German counter-attacks forced Allied troops to pull back leading forces, and at the latest report were holding firm on their original positions. In the hills to the southwest, positions were unchanged and the enemy was still holding the forward slopes southeast of Montesalvano.

On the central sector, 5th Army troops are in contact with the enemy and have taken many prisoners. (PRO)

POLES INFLICT HEAVY CASUALTIES ON GERMANS

WASHINGTON, September 30 — The Polish National Liberation Committee, in a communique broadcast yesterday by Radio Lublin, said that Polish formations fighting for Warsaw have killed more than 1,050 Germans from September 23 to September 26.

The communique said the Poles also destroyed 14 German guns, 30 heavy machine guns, 14 transport barges, and three observation points. (OWI)

FINNS WANT FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH RUSSIA

HELSINKI, September 30 — Bjorn Bjornson, the National Broadcasting Company's correspondent in Helsinki, said today that Finnish officials are now working on a long-term policy of friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Another dispatch said that the leader of the Russian Control Commission, Pavel Ogilov, declared in Helsinki yesterday that Russia wishes to establish friendly relations with Finland.

In his broadcast, Bjotnson quoted a Finnish Government official as saying: «We will give the Russians our fullest cooperation.»

«The commander of the Czecho-Slovak forces in Slovakia is now completely evacuated, the correspondent reported. This area of some 20 square miles, in accordance with the Finnish armistice terms, is to be leased for 50 years to the Soviets, who will use it for a naval base. (OWI)

CZECHO-SLOVAK FORCES MAKE NEW ASSAULTS

LONDON, September 30 — Following is the text of a communique issued today by the High Command of the Czecho-Slovak armed forces:

«The commander of the Czecho-Slovak forces in Slovakia reports that our units carried an assault at Vernar, in the Turec Valley, there was increased reconnaissance activity.

«In the Southwest, the enemy attacked strongly, and see-saw fighting is continuing.

«In Eastern Slovakia, one of our units annihilated, to the last man, a German unit of 800 men and took all their armaments.

«Air activity was weak, due to bad weather.» (OWI)

700 CRIMEA DAIRY FARMS RESTORED

MOSCOW, September 30 — Seven hundred dairy farms have been restored in the Crimea, where collective animal husbandry suffered grave damage under German occupation, it was announced in Moscow today.

Collective farms have received 10,000 cows, 35,000 sheep, and 40,000 horses from the Soviet Government. Farms of pedigreed cattle, for which many Crimean districts were famous before the war, are now being restored. (TASS)

SOVIETS FACE ANOTHER WINTER WAR

LONDON, September 30 — Moscow stands on the threshold of her fourth war-time winter in a thoughtful mood the Moscow correspondent of The Times wrote today. He said, in part:

«The Russians today, on the eve of victory, see themselves in the double rôle of judge and deliverer. There is something deeply satisfying to them in the way that the successes of their armies bring about more fronts in the lands of their neighbors — an indication that the Red Army has something good to give to all except Fascists.

«Thus they welcome the coalition between royalists and Communists that brought about the fall of Antonescu. And they criticize those who fought the idea of a return, if only temporary, to an authoritarian constitution in Poland.

ECONOMY OF ESTONIA BEING RESTORED

MOSCOW, September 30 — President Vares of the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic said today that the workers of liberated Estonia have already begun the restoration of the national economy.

ONLY LEI TO CIRCULATE IN RUMANIA

WASHINGTON, September 30 — «Soviet war rubles and lei will cease to circulate from October 1,» said Bucharest Radio yesterday, quoting a joint Soviet-Rumanian announcement.

The broadcast noted that only Rumanian lei will remain in circulation, adding that an agreement to this effect was signed by Soviet Marshal Rodion Malinovsky and Rumanian Armistice Commissioner Ion Christu, in conformance with provisions of the Rumanian armistice agreement of September 12.

BBC, quoting a Berne dispatch, said today:

«This is the first act under the armistice terms to help Rumania. Immediately after it was learned in Bucharest that the normal lei was to return, the black-market gold-dollar purchases dropped by 25 per cent.» (OWI)

U. S. HEAVY BOMBERS HIT JAP SUPPLY PORTS

CHUNGKING, September 30 — Heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF continued their efforts to smash the Japanese drive into south-central China today by attacks on Nipponese coastal supply bases and against convoys and communications in Hunan and Kwangsi provinces.

Airfields and other installations in and around the harbors of Cotton and Amoy, along the so-called «invasion coast» of China, received direct hits. In the nearby waters of Formosa Strait, American bombs sank a 15,000-ton Japanese whaler.

Still other formations of 14th USAAF aircraft shot up 22 Japanese troops trains in the area of Chuanhsien, concentration point in northern Kwangsi, from which the Japanese have launched one of their offensives against the Kwangsi Province capital city of Kweilin.

In this same aerial counter-offensive against the Japanese Kweilin drive, American bombers hit fuel and ammunition dumps along the roads of lower Hunan, and caused many fires and explosions from which smoke columns rose more than 6,000 feet in the air.

Bridges, river shipping, and Japanese barracks were also blasted. Eight supply junks were sent to the bottom.

The Chinese High Command said tonight that bitter fighting continued in the streets of Paoching, outer defense bastion of the Kwangsi capital. The battle was said to be going on «house-to-house.» One report had a Japanese column within 31 miles of Kweilin tonight. (OWI-Reuter)

PALAU LANDINGS SECURED

PEARL HARBOR, September 30 — Invading Marines who made the new American landings on islands in the Palaus had their beachheads secure today.

A Navy communique said they went ashore on two small islands north of Peleliu after a heavy shelling of Japanese gun positions by cruisers and destroyers, and after concentrated bombing attacks by carrier-based planes.

Meanwhile, other American patrol bombers striking far into the Netherlands Indies on Wednesday and Thursday, sank or damaged 26 small Japanese ships and five barges.

Navy bombers also struck at the Bonins, southeast of Japan, at the Marianas, at Wake, at Nauru, and at Truk. (OWI-Reuter)

SCHOOLS OPENING AGAIN IN LATVIA

MOSCOW, September 30 — «Latvian children are eagerly awaiting tomorrow, as on that day they will resume their school studies after a three-year interval,» a Komsomolskaya Pravda correspondent reported from Latvia today.

During the German occupation, most of the schools had been converted into army barracks, stables, bath houses, or places of entertainment for the troops, and children were allowed to attend only two hours of lessons after an 11-hour day of heavy manual work. The school year lasted five months, and students had to pay a tuition fee of 1,500 roubles per year, more than most could afford. (TASS)

BUCHAREST, September 30 — A commissariat for the administration of liberated territory in Transylvania will be set up by the Rumanian Government, Radio Bucharest said last night.

U.S. HEAVY BOMBERS HIT JAPS

CHUNGKING, September 30 — Heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF continued their efforts to smash the Japanese drive into south-central China today by attacks on Nipponese coastal supply bases and against convoys and communications in Hunan and Kwangsi provinces.

Airfields and other installations in and around the harbors of Canton and Amoy, along the so-called «invasion coast» of China, received direct hits. In the nearby waters of Formosa Strait, American bombs sank a 15,000-ton Japanese whaler.

Still other formations of 14th USAAF aircraft shot up 22 Japanese troops trains in the area of Chuanhsien, concentration point in northern Kwangsi, from which the Japanese have launched one of their offensives against the Kwangsi Province capital city of Kweilin.

In this same aerial counter-offensive against the Japanese Kweilin drive, American bombers hit fuel and ammunition dumps along the roads of lower Hunan, and caused many fires and explosions from which smoke columns rose more than 6,000 feet in the air.

Bridges, river shipping, and Japanese barracks were also blasted. Eight supply junks were sent to the bottom.

The Chinese High Command said tonight that bitter fighting continued in the streets of Paoching, outer defense bastion of the Kwangsi capital. The battle was said to be going on «house-to-house.» One report had a Japanese column within 31 miles of Kweilin tonight. (CWI-Reuter)

PALAU LANDINGS SECURED

PEARL HARBOR, September 30 — Invading Marines who made the new American landings on islands in the Palaus had their beachheads secure today.

A Navy communique said they went ashore on two small islands north of Peleliu after a heavy shelling of Japanese gun positions by cruisers and destroyers, and after concentrated bombing attacks by carrier-based planes.

Meanwhile, other American patrol bombers striking far into the Netherlands Indies on Wednesday and Thursday, sank or damaged 26 small Japanese ships and five barges.

Navy bombers also struck at the Bonins, southeast of Japan, at the Marianas, at Wake, at Nauru, and at Truk. (OWI-Reuter)

LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN PRESS COMMENTS ON CHURCHILL'S SPEECH

ROME, September 30 — Commenting on the review of the war and the international situation given to the House of Commons by Prime Minister Churchill on September 28, the newspaper L'Italia Libera stated today that the speech was a realistic and severe examination, without deceit, without a flourish of illusions or promises.

Referring to the feelings of sympathy felt by the British Prime Minister for the Italian people, the Corriere di Roma pointed out that Mr. Churchill did not hesitate to make a clear distinction between the Italian people and those who dragged Italy down to ruin. The declaration has a high moral value, for which Italy is prepared to show grateful testimony, the newspaper said.

L'Unita declared: «We are grateful to Mr. Churchill who stated with great clarity the opposition of the Italian people to Fascism,» and expressed the hope that the confidence the Allies have in Italy will prove to be well founded. (UNN)

U. S. NEARS PRODUCTION GOALS

WASHINGTON, September 30 — Julius A. Krug, Acting Chairman of the War Production Board, said yesterday that, in spite of critical lags in the production of some important war equipment, the United States will come within two per cent of 1944 production goals, amounting to 57,000 million dollars, which is almost half the value of the world's war equipment.

Krug said that in 1942 — which he termed «the tool-up year» — American industry had to build plants for production and perfect plans for the control of materials. In 1942, he said, American war production was 14 per cent short of the goals, with a total output of 31,000 million dollars.

In 1943 — which Krug called the «component year» — controlled-materials plans were put into operation, and production fell only six per cent short, with a total of 57,000 million dollars turned out.

WASHINGTON, September 30 — Julius A. Krug, Acting Chairman of the War Production Board, said yesterday that, in spite of critical lags in the production of some important war equipment, the United States will come within two per cent of 1944 production goals, amounting to 67,000 million dollars, which is almost half the value of the world's war equipment.

Krug said that in 1942 — which he termed «the tool-up year» — American industry had to build plants for production and perfect plans for the control of materials. In 1942, he said, American war production was 14 per cent short of the goals, with a total output of 31,000 million dollars.

In 1943 — which Krug called the «component year» — controlled-materials plans were put into operation, and production fell only six per cent short with a total of 57,000 million dollars turned out.

Thus far in 1944 — «the close-out year» — a shortage of only two per cent of the established goals is indicated, Krug said. He added that an unrelenting effort will be required to achieve the huge volume of production called for during the remainder of 1944. (OWI)

ECUADOR TO ISSUE VISAS TO JEWS

QUITO, ECUADOR, September 30 — Ecuadorian consuls abroad have been instructed to issue visas to all Jews of good character who desire to settle in Ecuador, Foreign Minister Camilo Ponce announced today following a visit by Jacob Landau, New York newspaperman representing the War Refugee Board.

President Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra told Landau yesterday that Ecuador will be open to those persecuted by the Nazis. «These are not ordinary times,» he said, «and ordinary rules of immigration are inapplicable. We must try to save human lives.»

The Foreign Minister stated also that he was arranging for the admission of 300 children. Ecuador is utterly opposed to the Nazi racial doctrine, he declared, and will do its part in the noble effort inaugurated by President Roosevelt by offering refuge to victims of the Nazis. (OWI)

FRENCH CABINET ESTABLISHING NEW MEASURES

PARIS, September 30 — French Gestapo chiefs, charged with the murder of Georges Mandel, former French Cabinet minister, will appear before the first of the new special courts set up to try French traitors, Radio Paris said last night.

The new courts will begin their sittings on October 15.

Measures for the establishment of large enterprises of joint production committees, and commissions to investigate collaborators, were approved at yesterday's meeting of the French Cabinet, the French National Radio also said today.

The broadcast added that the establishment of joint production committees will mean the participation of the workers in the management of enterprises.

The commission to purge industry of collaborators will be placed under the authority of a judge representative of the employees.

The Cabinet also decided that all trade agreements providing preferential tariffs are to be cancelled. A complete review of customs duties was proposed.

Following a report by Foreign Minister Bidault, the Cabinet adopted an ordinance for the taking over of enemy property.

A report on the nation's health was given by François Billoux, Minister of Public Health, the broadcast concluded. (PWB)

SOUTH FRANCE CITIZENS RECOVER QUICKLY

LUXEUIL, FRANCE, September 30 — French citizens in the liberated towns and cities of southern France have done a democratic and effective job in re-establishing local government in their communities, civil affairs officials of the Allied 7th Army said today.

In barely more than a month, the officials said, the newly-established local governments in the liberated areas had solved many of the pressing problems left in the wake of the Nazi occupation. Both local and regional governments generally seemed to have popular support, dispatches stated.

Meanwhile, the job of providing adequate supplies for the civilian populations in the liberated areas is proceeding rapidly, the officials found. For example, a French food ship docked in the harbor of Toulon before firing had ceased. But a great deal remains to be done, with critical shortages of milk, petrol, oil, and transport reported from many sections, particularly in the coastal areas. Citizens of Nice had their first taste of bread in 12 days when a food shipment arrived, while the acute shortage in Marseille has been eased somewhat with an increase in the bread ration.

Black market activities, which flourished under Vichy and German control, are being vigorously and successfully fought by the new authorities, according to the dispatches.

a German major general named Mayer, who is still hospitalized there with a shoulder wound. The Gestapo chief admitted torturing the Maquis in the hope of getting information about the activities of the Resistance groups.

The Maquis leader in Toulouse said that part of the torture inflicted by the Germans on members of the FFI there consisted of applying red hot plates to their feet, soaking the clothed prisoners in water, and the compelling them to stand around in the cold, after which they repeated the hot plate process, followed again by the bath.

The Sub-Prefect at Bayonne, Guy La Masaure, said it was difficult to obtain figures on the number of Frenchmen murdered by the Germans, since many had been spirited away from Bayonne. Between 4,000 and 5,000 young men had disappeared out of a population of 100,000 since the occupation, he said. Of this number, about 700 were sent to Germany, although many who were supposedly being sent to the Reich were actually executed on reaching Bordeaux.

The FFI in Tarbes took 600 German prisoners, four of whom were executed after they killed six captured Allied paratroopers.

Some 240 collaborators are now imprisoned in Tarbes alone, awaiting trial, with another 200 being held in Bayonne. (OWI)

C.I.O. HEAD SENDS MESSAGE TO AUSTRIAN WORKERS

WASHINGTON, September 30 — Philip Murray, President of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, yesterday addressed a message to Austrian workers, urging them to oppose the German oppressors with acts of resistance, Murray said.

"Wherever labor joins in battle, it wins common victories — this is the message that American workers send to Austrian workers as the voice of America speaks to Austria.

"Austrian labor can be part of the universal brotherhood of Allied labor which backs our advancing victorious armies.

"The Nazis are weakened by every act of resistance made by Patriots. In France and in Belgium, the widespread organized sabotage at the decisive time contributed tremendously to the speed of liberation of these countries."

Murray added that Austria may soon become a battleground, as already the Russian Armies are on the Hungarian plains, where the Germans will be unable to establish a defense line. He concluded:

"At this crucial moment, Austrian Patriots can do what other Patriots have done. You can help assure the future of your nation in the post-war world of free people by sharing actively with the Allies in this war." (OWI)

DANISH PATRIOTS POLICE COPENHAGEN

LONDON, September 30 — Danish Patriots have ignored the formation of the Nazi police force in Copenhagen, and have taken the policing of the city into their own hands, the Stockholm paper, Svenska Dagbladet, said yesterday.

In the business sections of the city, a shop-protection guard of businessmen, armed with batons and whistles, patrol the city in shifts during the night, replacing the regular Copenhagen police force which has been disbanded and deported by the Nazis.

Meanwhile, the Nazi-controlled Danish Radio yesterday disclosed something of the methods used by the German police force of 1,000 men commanded by Günther Pancke, Gestapo chief in Denmark. According to the broadcast, German police on September 26 searching for Danish saboteurs in the Bondes Inn near the town of Hadersley, were fired on from an ambush. A German non-commissioned officer was fatally injured and two sergeants and one policeman slightly wounded, the broadcast said.

Some of the patriots escaped, but their leader was captured, and died later from wounds inflicted by the Nazis. The inn was dynamited and completely destroyed by the German security police. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 30 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy.

In spite of bad weather conditions, American and British troops of the 5th Army have made progress against stubborn resistance. American troops of the 5th Army have repulsed a strong counter-attack against the important feature of Monte Battaglia, while British troops of the 5th Army took Monte Fuso, a key feature of the Florence-Forli Road.

Heavy rain in the Adriatic sector has prevented any large-scale operations on the 8th Army front.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force.

Air activity yesterday was again curtailed by weather.

Fighter-bombers attacked rail installations south of Milan and targets in southern Yugoslavia.

During these operations, one enemy plane was destroyed. One of our aircraft is missing.

MAAF flew approximately 60 sorties.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 30 — Today's communique:

Land.

German resistance in the Cape Gris Nez area has ceased, and long-range batteries have been silenced.

At Calais, a truce has been arranged while remaining civilians are evacuated from the city.

In the Sheldt Estuary, enemy movements were under attack last night by light bombers.

Our troops are advancing steadily on a six-mile front west of Turnhout in the face of stubborn opposition. German counter-attacks against our Nijmegen salient were repulsed north of Best and in the vicinity of Nijmegen.

Allied forces advancing toward Hertogenbosch from the southeast are within four miles of the town. Fighters and fighter-bombers closely supported our ground forces and attacked transportation targets in Holland.

There was considerable opposition in the air and according to reports so far received, 31 aircraft were shot down by our fighters, of which four are missing.

Patrol activity continued from the Aachen area to the Luxembourg-German frontier with enemy artillery fire on a slightly reduced scale. Troop concentrations and strongpoints southeast of Aachen were attacked by medium and fighter-bombers.

Allied units made local attacks near Hurlen, southeast of Stolberg. Farther south, our troops made limited progress southwest of the town of Prum against enemy fortifications, eight of which were reduced in one attack.

In southeastern Luxembourg, we have liberated Mompach and Wasserbilling.

Haute Contz, six miles south of Remich, has been freed.

West of Metz, an enemy thrust in the vicinity of Gravelotte was repulsed.

Concentrated enemy mortar and small-arms fire were later directed against our troops in this area. Two German counter-attacks were repulsed near Forêt de Gremecey, 14 miles northeast of Nancy.

In the Vosges foothills, Saint Gorgon, just south of the communications center of Rambervillers, was taken. Our positions west and northwest of Belfort were improved against intensified enemy resistance.

Air.

The offensive against the enemy's railway system, supplying battle zones, was continued.

Medium and light bombers struck at railway targets at Geldern, Euskirchen, Prum, Ritburg, and Saarbrücken, and rolling stock in the Rhineland was hit by fighter-bombers. (Reuter)

MAAF flew approximately 60 sorties.

Navy:

On the night of 27/28 September, two of our landing craft operating off the Yugoslav coast met and engaged a convoy of enemy landing craft. Two of the enemy vessels were sunk, and others damaged.

It is reported from the south of France that on 28 September, the United States destroyer Hilary P. Jones and the French destroyer Le Fortune, operating on the right flank of the army near the Franco-Italian frontier, bombarded enemy batteries and troop concentrations. All areas were well covered.

On 28 September, His Majesty's destroyers Laddesdale, Zetland, and Brecon entered Pegadia Bay, off the Island of Scarpanto, and sank a 100-ton enemy vessel. Our ships were engaged by enemy guns, but the fire was returned and the batteries silenced.

On 29 September, His Majesty's Ship Black Prince, with the destroyer Tumult, bombarded the harbor of Syros. Five enemy "F" lighters were sunk, and there were direct hits on a medium-sized merchant vessel, other ships, and enemy installations ashore.

Naval aircraft from the escort carrier Stalker were operating on the same day. (PRO) on a slightly reduced scale. Troop concentrations and strongpoints southeast of Aachen were attacked by medium and fighter-bombers.

Allied units made local attacks near Hurtch, southeast of Stolberg. Farther south, our troops made limited progress southwest of the town of Prum against enemy fortifications, eight of which were reduced in one attack.

In southeastern Luxembourg, we have liberated Mompach and Wasserbilling.

Haute Contz, six miles south of Remich, has been freed.

West of Metz, an enemy thrust in the vicinity of Gravelotte was repulsed.

Concentrated enemy mortar and small-arms fire were later directed against our troops in this area. Two German counter-attacks were repulsed near Forêt de Gremecey, 14 miles northeast of Nancy.

In the Vosges foothills, Saint Gorgon, just south of the communications center of Ramtervillers, was taken. Our positions west and northwest of Belfort were improved against intensified enemy resistance.

Air:

The offensive against the enemy's railway system, supplying battle zones, was continued.

Medium and light bombers struck at railway targets at Geldern, Euskirchen, Prum, Bitburg, and Saarbrucken, and rolling stock in the Rhineland was hit by fighter bombers. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 30 — Tonight's communique:

During today, northwest of Parnu (Pernov), our troops forced the strait of Suurvain and captured the Island of Muhu.

South and southeast of Turka, a town of Drohobycz Region, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Jutenka, Javorav, Mlatush, Krivka, Silzintari, Tuholka, and Rukuv.

In the northeastern part of Rumania, west and southwest of Campulung, our troops, operating in the difficult mountain-wooded terrain, occupied in fighting over 30 populated localities, including Iribagar, Listuk, Jakubeny, Kulnya, Tartaru, Ruzhi, Knizhi, Pojana, and Nyagra-Shoriul, and the railway stations of Bokosh, Iribagar, and Beu.

In the northern part of Transylvania, our troops continued operations for expansion of their bridgehead on the right bank of the River Muresul, north of the town of Turgu-Mures, and occupied the following populated localities: Toarisa, Ungarn, Todalak, and Tarpatak.

Following our reconnaissance units, who several days ago penetrated into the territory of Yugoslavia, yesterday, south of the Rumanian city of Turnu-Severin on the right bank of the River Danube, our troops crossed the Yugoslavian border and in first contact overthrew the German troops and captured the following populated localities: Tieklya, Kladovo, Velikaja-Vrdyka, Redkovo, Korbova, Vrazhuga, Davidovo, Kladushnitje, Petrovo-Selo, Monastiretse, Velikaja-Kamenitsa, Velemitsa, Lubitseva, Grabovitca, Krestopalenka, Mirotch, Ravajeva, Kamarinovats, and Negotin.

On the other sectors of the front, patrol activities and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 29, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 63 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 14 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 30 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

A heavy battle has taken place south of Asiago, and has ended in complete victory for the Garibaldi Brigades. The enemy has lost 423 men in dead and wounded. A large amount of war material was captured.

In the Ossola Valley, Patriots extended their control and formed an autonomous organization for the liberated territories. A train was stopped near Nierdo, in Brescia Province, and about 30 Nazi-Fascists were taken prisoner. Patriot groups in the Province of Reggio Emilia cut a highway near Collagna, and captured motor vehicles loaded with arms and ammunition.

As a result of frequent acts of sabotage, the Germans are compelling civilians to guard railway lines under threat of reprisals against their families if traffic is interrupted.

The use of German-trained Fascist troops has been suspended following their poor showing on their arrival in Italy. Instead of the five divisions they had hoped to put in action, the Fascists have succeeded in putting together two — the San Marco and the Monte Rosa. Both have already suffered considerable losses. The second, which has also been weakened by continuous desertions, will not be able to be used against the Patriots. Because of the widespread tendency to desert among the Fascist troops, the Germans have taken preventive measures by arresting army generals and air force officers and holding them as hostages.

In the mountains north of Milan, civilians are daily swelling the ranks of the Patriots. Machine-gun emplacements protected by barbed-wire are being installed in Milan banks and hotels for fear of attacks by Garibaldi Brigade forces. The Nazi-Fascists have made many arrests in their attempts to round up members of the Committee of National Liberation.

The situation in Turin remains confused. It is believed that two German demolition squads have remained in the city charged with the destruction of the city's factories in the event of a forced retreat of the Nazi-Fascist forces. This demolition plan is said to tie in with another, which calls for the deportation of Turin industrial workers to Germany. Railway traffic has been tied up by a strike which began on September 10. The Railway Workers' Federation has issued a manifesto asking its dependents to hold themselves in readiness for a general strike and an armed insurrection. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 30 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

On 29 September, in Holland, the enemy maintained his pressure on the flanks of his infiltration. German formations are engaged in grim defensive and offensive fighting aiming at warding off attacks on the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal and at broadening the bridgehead north of Turnhout. Strong enemy formations attacking at Meeuwyck were repelled in a counter-attack.

In the Nijmegen sector and at Metz, yesterday, grim dogfights were in progress between German and enemy fighter squadrons. Eighteen enemy planes were shot down.

In the front sector running from Aachen to Nancy, yesterday, the operations were limited to some local enemy attacks and successful German counter-attacks.

In the Château Salins and Luneville sectors, the enemy succeeded in recapturing some high ground positions in forest land, in the course of grim fighting.

In the foothills of the western Vosges and northwest of Belfort, a defensive battle is in progress. Fierce fighting British 8th Army limited itself to fighting for Savignano and some unsuccessful local attacks.

Eastern Front:

The fighting in the bend of the Danube, on both sides of the Iron Gate, continues, with both sides throwing fresh forces into the battle. A strongpoint at the Danube was again wrested from the Soviets.

East of Szeged, at Sarkad and in the Grosswardein sector, German and Hungarian units threw back the Rumanians and the Bolsheviks toward the frontiers. The town, Grosswardein is again in German hands.

On both sides of Torenburg and Saechsisch Regen, grim local enemy attacks were frustrated. Also yesterday, Soviet attacks on the Beskides Passes, launched on a broad front, were frustrated by the grim resistance of our divisions.

Between Duena and the Bight of Riga, the enemy attacks abated. Our troops and volunteers of the Latvian SS repelled all attacks.

In the course of the disengaging movements in the northern sector of the Eastern Front, which were reported yesterday, the Navy repeatedly joined in the fighting of the Army. The Navy evacuated strong Army formations, including their armament and equipment, all wounded, and 10,000 civilians within a short time.

Air:

On September 29, the Anglo-Americans continued to terrorize the civilians in western Germany with bombers and fighter formations. Losses in human lives were caused by indiscriminate attacks on localities and trains, particularly in the Reich territory west of the Rhine.

In the night, British planes dropped bombs on Karlsruhe. (Radio Berlin)

GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACKING IN MANY SECTORS; CANADIANS TAKE CALAIS

SHAEF, October 1 — The Germans are fighting stubbornly to hold back the pressure of British, American and French troops along a 300-mile front from Arnhem in Holland to the Belfort Gap.

The British 2nd Army has forced a new salient in the 17-mile stretch of marshy ground between Bourne, east of Eindhoven, and the Meuse River. Strong German resistance to this new thrust was met tonight and is holding up the advance.

To the north, the Germans are making a desperate attempt to penetrate the Nijmegen bridgehead and deny the Allies the use of the bridge across the lower Rhine. They are taking advantage of low clouds and rain to attack from the shelter of the Reichswald Forest.

A heavy German counter-attack is developing north[illegible] concentrations of German tanks and the Germans counter-attacked for the fourth successive day. They laid down the heaviest concentration of artillery fire the French have met since landing on the Mediterranean coast. Some penetrations were made in Allied positions but the Germans were later thrown back with considerable casualties.

On the American 1st Army front, the Germans made a vicious assault on Allied positions southwest of Prum using flame throwers in the first attack. A heavy artillery barrage preceded two attacks and Allied troops were forced to yield some ground. Positions were regained after the German attacks were thrown back.

To the north, the Germans staged a third counter-attack in the area of Stolberg but met with little success.

PROJECTED GERMAN ATTACK SMASHED

LONDON, October 1 — American and RAF heavy bombers were grounded today due to bad weather, but rocket-firing Typhoons from continental bases struck at German tanks north of Nijmegen in Holland. They swept into the tanks in an effort to break up a projected German attack on British lines at Huissen, the Associated Press reported.

Yesterday Allied medium bombers with fighter escort attacked enemy communications at Arnhem and near Goch, across the German frontier to the east, in support of Allied troops, SHAEF announced. Light bombers smashed at trains, barges and motor transport in the Ruhr and northern Holland last night, while a force of Mosquitoes attacked Hamburg and other objectives in western Germany. Night Intruder aircraft also bombed enemy airfields.

SHAEF, October 1 — The Germans are fighting stubbornly to hold back the pressure of British, American and French troops along a 300-mile front from Arnhem in Holland to the Belfort Gap.

The British 2nd Army has forced a new salient in the 17-mile stretch of marshy ground between Deurne, east of Eindhoven, and the Meuse River. Strong German resistance to this new thrust was met tonight and is holding up the advance.

To the north, the Germans are making a desperate attempt to penetrate the Nijmegen bridgehead and deny the Allies the use of the bridge across the lower Rhine. They are taking advantage of low clouds and rain to attack from the shelter of the Reichswald Forest.

A heavy German counter-attack is developing northwest of Nijmegen and concentrations of German tanks and infantry are reported to be crossing the Pannerdensch Canal. RAF strength has been diverted to deal with this counter-attack. Rocket-firing Typhoons are attacking German concentrations.

On the western flank of the corridor British patrols advanced two miles in the Oss sector. They have made contact with the main German front to the west of Oss on a line from Nuland to Berlicum.

The port city of Calais fell today to Canadian troops. After Colonel Schoerner, commander of the garrison, was taken prisoner the entire garrison surrendered. Over 4,000 German prisoners have been taken. So far Canadian casualties were light.

Other Canadian forces today crossed the Belgian-Dutch frontier five miles north of Turnhout. Further west, another Canadian column captured Brecht, two miles north of the Antwerp-Turnhout canal.

A strong German counter-attack was made against American 3rd Army forces at Jallaucourt, 16 miles northeast of Nancy. It was repulsed after four hours of bitter fighting.

French and American forces of the 7th Army are within 10 miles of the gateway city of Belfort. North of Belfort

BIG JAP OIL SHIP HIT

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, October 1 — American patrol bombers sank another large Japanese cargo vessel, and severely damaged a 10,000-ton oil tanker and one other ship, in sweeps off the Netherlands Indies island of Celebes yesterday.

The ship sent to the bottom was of 8,500 tons. Other aircraft of General Douglas MacArthur's command dropped 79 tons of bombs on the island of Ceram, starting many fires. Seven Jap aircraft were destroyed on the ground. (Reuter)

A correspondent with the U. S. 3rd Army tonight reported the discovery of a large German underground aircraft factory in a converted mine in the small town of Algrange, six miles west of Thionville, near the French-Luxembourg frontier.

The part played by the RAF Bomber Command in reducing Calais is revealed in a British Air Ministry announcement today. There the Bomber Command carried out a seven-day sustained attack closely co-ordinated with the ground offensive, dropping 11,500 tons of bombs between September 20 and 28. The bombing moved steadily from west to east along with the advance of the Allied troops. On the last day, positions east of Calais were hit as well as gun posts at Cap Gris Nez. On September 24, Lancasters and Hallifaxes made a concentrated attack, blasting from a height of less than 600 meters in the face of intense flak. Eleven Allied planes were lost in the seven-day aerial assault. (OWI-Reuter)

GERMANS LOST 82,000 IN DEFENDING FRENCH PORTS

SHAEF, October 1 — The Germans have lost 82,000 men, the equivalent of eight field divisions, in trying to deny the Allies the use of ports in Brittany and along the Channel coast, it was officially announced today.

If Hitler's policy of suicidal port defense is pursued in Holland, or if the huge German garrison there is cut off, the grand total will rise to over 300,000, the equivalent of 30 German divisions.

The fall of Calais left the Germans still holding the French ports of Dunkirk, St. Nazaire, Lorient and La Rochelle. The German forces still holding out at the mouth of the Gironde River prevent the Allies from using Bordeaux to feed supplies to the main western front. (PWB)

WALKER'S CORPS, GENERAL PATTON'S SPEARHEAD

NEW YORK, October 1 — Weeks of secrecy were ended yesterday with the announcement that Major General Walton H. Walker's 20th Corps was the spearhead of Lieutenant General George S. Patton's 3rd Army, and New York Herald Tribune Correspondent Joseph Driscoll yesterday in a dispatch from the front.

The spearhead, in its great eastward drive across France, distinguished itself by bold tactics of encirclement which won Prime Minister Churchill's praise in Parliament recently.

Within 15 days, the dispatch said, General Walker led his corps across six rivers — the Loire, Seine, Yesle, Marne, Aisne and Meuse — to liberate scores of towns and cities, including Chartres, Melun, Montreau, Fontainebleau, Chateau Thierry, Epernay, Reims and Verdun.

The corps' speed was such that it thrust through the the Argonne Forest in a matter of hours as compared with the several months required to take these woods in the last war, the correspondent said.

Incessantly pushing the Germans back and off balance, the 20th Corps captured or destroyed 200 enemy tanks, 350 personnel carriers, 500 guns of large caliber, 80 planes and 90 vehicles. The German troops killed or captured exceeded 20,000, the correspondent concluded. (PWB-OWI)

RAF COUNTERING ATTACKS IN NIJMEGEN SECTOR

SHAEF, October 1 — Rocket-firing Typhoons of the RAF are hitting hard against German counter-attacks in the Nijmegen sector, it was reported tonight.

A heavy German counter-attack is developing in the area and concentrations of German tanks and infantry were reported crossing the Pannerdensch Canal, seven miles north of Nijmegen. (PWB-Reuter)

Graham said:

"When the Civil Affairs men arrived they found the city leaderless and without essential services. There was no semblance of government officials, police or fire department.

"Six hours after they had arrived the A.M.G. men had the light and water systems functioning. All German laws and decrees were wiped out.

"Transportation on a limited scale began in a week. The steel mills were at work in five days. Schools were reopened on a limited scale and teachers were being returned to their old posts and equipped with textbooks which the Nazis had taken away from them. Courts are functioning again." (OWI)

5TH ARMY BEATS OFF STRONG COUNTER-ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 1 — Fifth Army forces, fanning out from Firenzuola in forward movements toward Bologna, some 18 miles north, continued to advance yesterday despite fierce enemy counter-attacks, whipping winds, rain, mud, and hazardous hairpin mountain roads. In the right sector of the 5th Army front, American troops repulsed a second major attack on their positions on the salient feature of Monte Battaglia. The Germans threw in strong forces of infantry, heavy artillery and flame-throwers in a desperate effort to dislodge the Americans, but the enemy was again beaten back and our troops pushed forward. It was announced today that heavy fighting still continued in this area.

Reports of Friday's attack revealed that the enemy used at least three divisions in its first major drive on Monte Battaglia. About two miles west of the peak, the important height of Monte Coppella was under attack by 5th Army infantry late Friday night, and strong enemy resistance has been encountered. Enemy units, rushed from other parts of the Apennines and appearing in this sector, have been identified, and indicate that the Germans are reinforcing this area.

Ghugnola, commanding an important lateral road about eight miles northeast of Firenzuola, was captured yesterday after heavy fighting by 5th Army troops, who moved forward and took ground farther north.

Other 5th Army forces advanced northwest of Firenzuola to clear the enemy out of Monteprendente, some 10 miles away.

Slight progress is reported from the 8th Army front, where heavy rains made movement very difficult. Nevertheless our troops cleared the east bank of the Fiumicino River from the coast to Savignano, and about four miles from Savignano, 8th Army troops cleared the enemy out of Tribola and occupied the town.

Positions in the central mountain sector remained unchanged, while from the 5th Army's coastal sector increased enemy artillery action was reported. (PWB — PBO)

ENEMY SUPPLY LINES BOMBED AGAIN

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 1 — More damage was inflicted yesterday upon enemy supply lines in north Italy when medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked nine bridges in the Milan and Venice areas, striking all of the structures, it was announced today. Other fighter-bombers pounded communications in the Po Valley, cutting rail lines in 21 places, hitting road bridges near Rimini and Modena, and destroying six locomotives, 14 rail cars and 16 vehicles, while one locomotive, 45 rail cars and 23 motor vehicles were damaged.

During the night, Raf Wellingtons, Liberators and Hallifaxes attacked targets over the Po River at San Benedetto, 15 miles southeast of Mantua, getting a good concentration in the area of a pontoon bridge which has been used at night by the Germans to get troops and transport across the river.

In coastal operations, Beaufighters scored cannon strikes on two armed trawlers off Ravenna, and two others

LONDON, October 1 — Spitfires and Mustangs of the Air Defense of Great Britain, which yesterday flew to Germany in support of heavy bomber attacks on synthetic oil plants, brought their total number of sorties over a two-week period to 3,000.

During their escorting mission yesterday, pilots of the ADGB reported seeing 16 German jet-propelled fighters flying in pairs several thousand feet above them. The pilots said the German planes wheeled away from them and fled while the heavy bombers made their attack. (PWB)

A.M.G. DOING EFFECTIVE JOB IN LUXEMBOURG

NEW YORK, October 1 — Although the Germans employed an occupational force of 4,500 men in an effort to take Luxembourg away from its residents, a handful of officers and men of a United States Army Civil Affairs unit is doing an effective job of giving the Duchy back to its citizens, New York Times correspondent Frederick Graham said in a dispatch published yesterday.

was again beaten back and our troops pushed forward. It was announced today that heavy fighting still continued in this area.

Reports of Friday's attack revealed that the enemy used at least three divisions in the first major drive on Monte Battaglia. About two miles west of the peak, the important height of Monte Cappello was under attack by 5th Army infantry late Friday night, and strong enemy resistance has been encountered. Enemy units, rushed from other parts of the Apennines and appearing in this sector, have been identified, and indicate that the Germans are reinforcing this area.

Guignola, commanding an important lateral road about eight miles northeast of Firenzuola, was captured yesterday after heavy fighting by 5th Army troops, who moved forward and took ground farther north.

Other 5th Army forces advanced northwest of Firenzuola to clear the enemy out of Montefredente, some 10 miles away.

Slight progress is reported from the 8th Army front, where heavy rains made movement very difficult. Nevertheless our troops cleared the east bank of the Pisatello River from the coast to Savignano, and about four miles from Savignano, 8th Army troops cleared the enemy out of Tribola and occupied the town.

Positions in the central mountain sector remained unchanged, while from the 5th Army's coastal sector increased enemy artillery action was reported. (PWB – FRO)

ENEMY SUPPLY LINES BOMBED AGAIN

ADVANCE AFHQ, October 1 — More damage was inflicted yesterday upon enemy supply lines in north Italy when medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked nine bridges in the Milan and Venice areas, striking all of the structures, it was announced today. Other fighter-bombers pounded communications in the Po Valley, cutting rail lines in 21 places, hitting road bridges near Emilia and Modena, and destroying six locomotives, 14 rail cars and 16 vehicles, while one locomotive, 45 rail cars and 23 motor vehicles were damaged.

During the night, Hal Wellingtons, Liberators and Halifaxes attacked targets over the Po River at San Benedetto, 15 miles southeast of Mantua, getting a good concentration in the area of a pontoon bridge which has been used at night by the Germans to get troops and transport across the river.

In coastal operations, Beaufighters scored cannon strikes on two armed trawlers off Ravenna, and two others off Maestra Point. (PRO)

LONDON SUNDAY TIMES ON ITALIAN CAMPAIGN

LONDON, October 1 — The most significant progress on the various fronts against Hitler has been made on the Italian line, said Scrutator, commentator of the Sunday Times today.

On that front, Scrutator says, Kesselring, in some respects the ablest of the German commanders fighting on a comparatively narrow front with wonderful natural defenses and with both flanks on the sea, has disposed, according to Mr. Churchill, of 27 German divisions. Against him, General Alexander has conducted for months past a patient, resourceful, and successful campaign. Kesselring has been driven from one natural defense to another, and is now finally at the end of them. The advance of the 5th Army towards Bologna means leaving the mountains and entering definitely upon the Lombardy plain. The thrust here against Kesselring's center will make it very difficult for him any longer to maintain a line from sea to sea.

In that case, since it is towards the Brenner that he must eventually retreat, the west coast is the one which he will have to abandon. One may look to see an uncovering first of Piedmont and then perhaps of Milan itself. But the manoeuver will be a difficult one to execute in face of an opponent so skillful as General Alexander, and the latter may perhaps yet reap in a culminating victory the reward of his long patience under thankless conditions.

Mr. Churchill did well to recall attention in his speech to the Italian Campaign and to the magnificent record both of the troops there and of their commander. The finesse of their achievement persists, and when eventually it is seen in perspective it must rank with the highest in the war. (OWI)

M.A.A.F. MEETS ONLY 14 ENEMY FIGHTERS IN MONTH

ROME, October 1 — Only 14 enemy fighters were sent up to oppose the Mediterranean Allied Air Force bombing operations during September, and all 14 were destroyed, Exchange Telegraph reported today.

The dispatch said that one reason for the decline is that Italy-based aircraft destroyed 1,003 enemy aircraft in the air, and 886 on the ground, between July and October. (OWI)

BRAZILIAN MINISTER DECORATES U. S. GENERALS

WITH BRAZILIAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, VIII ARMY, October 1 — Major General Eurico Caspar Dutra, Minister of War of Brazil, yesterday decorated Lieutenant General Mark W. Clark, 5th Army Commander; Major General Alfred M. Gruenther, Chief of Staff, 5th Army, and Major General Willis D. Crittenberger, Commanding General of the 5th Army's 4th Corps, said a UNN correspondent today.

The three American generals were presented with the Order of Military Merit of Brazil.

General Dutra also conferred the Medal of Merit of Brazil, Order of Commander, on Major General Ralph Wooten, Commanding General, USAPSA, and Brigadier General Hayes Kroner, United States Military Attache to Brazil.

Prior to the ceremony, General Clark inspected a guard of honor composed of members of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force. He then went to the front with General Dutra to watch Brazilian troops in action there. (PRO)

10,000 JAPS KILLED ON PALAUS

PEARL HARBOR, October 1 — More than 10,000 Japs have been killed in the conquest of the four islands in the Palaus invaded by American forces in the last two weeks.

A Navy Department communique said tonight that the total will be even greater, since small units of Japanese are still holding out on their mountain stronghold on Peleliu, and a small pocket of resistance remains on Angaur.

Except for these die-hards, said the communique, the American hold on all four of the invaded Palau Islands is now secure. (OWI)

14TH U. S. AIR FORCE SINKS JAP SHIPS

WASHINGTON, October 1 — A total of 1,083,789 tons of Japanese shipping has been sunk, probably sunk, or damaged since March 10, 1943, by the U. S. 14th Air Force, the War Department said yesterday.

Almost 550,000 tons of enemy ships were definitely sunk, the report said. It added that from May 24, 1944, to September 21, 1944, American heavy bombers sank, probably sank, or damaged a total of 90 Japanese merchant vessels, in addition to a cruiser and a destroyer. (OWI)

The Japanese mainland had the assurance of Colonel Iijima, chief of the army's aviation construction section, that Japanese industry could expect frequent and heavy American air attacks, Domei, the Japanese News Agency, reported Iijima as giving the warning. (OWI)

CHINESE TO CONNECT HIGHWAYS WITH LEDO ROAD

CHUNGKING, October 1 — The Chinese have begun construction of a 186 mile road to link Chinese highways with the Ledo Road, Chungking Radio said today.

The broadcast said the new road will run to Myitkyina in northern Burma from Paoshan, a city in western Yunnan Province. Construction of the road was started after the Chinese recently recaptured Tengchung, the largest Japanese base on the Salween front. The road must cross the 12,000-foot Kaokeng range of mountains along the Salween River.

The Ledo Road has been following the advance of General Joseph W. Stilwell's troops through the Hukawng and Mogoung valleys. (OWI)

FINNISH TROOPS ADVANCE IN NORTH

HELSINKI, October 1 — Today's Finnish communique said that Finnish troops advancing in north Finland have reached the village of Tallalkoski, which was for the most part destroyed by the retreating Germans.

The communique added that farther west the village of Pudasjarvi had been by-passed by Finnish troops, and that a small German detachment had been interned, along with captured cars and motorcycles. (OWI)

FINNISH BATTLE RAGES

LONDON, October 1 — Finnish and German troops — both sides heavily reinforced — were fighting a stiff battle tonight for the town of Tornea, on the Swedish frontier.

The Swedish radio said the Finns were holding the larger part of the town, including the customs buildings, but said the Germans were strongly entrenched. The key German strongpoint in Tornea was said to be less than 50 yards from Swedish soil. (Reuter)

RED ARMY DRIVING ON NIS

MOSCOW, October 1 — Soviet armies are rapidly widening their bridgehead across the Danube in Yugoslavia and spearheads have driven 22 miles from Negotin to within 30 miles of the large rail center of Nis. The Russian communique tonight announced the capture of Vrazogrnac on the railroad and highway to Nis. The capture of Nis would sever Germany's only communication line with the southern Balkans and isolate large numbers of German troops.

Press dispatches stated that the first crossings of the Danube were made under cover of early morning fog. The men carried light equipment while heavy Soviet artillery on the north bank silenced enemy batteries on the opposite shore.

A Red Army column driving northward is making steady progress toward Belgrade, capital of Yugoslavia. They have liberated a wide mountainous area where German defenses, reinforced by Hungarian units, were at their strongest.

The Hungarian radio reported tonight that Soviet and Rumanian troops made fresh advances into Hungary and had penetrated Hungarian defenses in the Mako area.

The German news agency stated tonight that the Russians had launched a new major offensive on a broad front against passes on the Czechoslovakia border. The German report said that the Russians regrouped their divisions and brought up fresh formations in the northern Carpathians.

The Polish Home Army communique reported that the WASHINGTON, October 1 — A total of 1,063,789 tons of Japanese shipping has been sunk, probably sunk, or damaged since March 10, 1945, by the U. S. 14th Air Force, the War Department said yesterday.

Almost 550,800 tons of enemy ships were definitely sunk, the report said. It added that from May 24, 1944, to September 21, 1944, American heavy bombers sunk, probably sunk, or damaged a total of 30 Japanese merchant vessels, in addition to a cruiser and a destroyer. (OWI)

FAR EAST ROUNDUP

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Fighting in Burma yesterday was marked by frequent contacts with Japanese troops, with Allied Forces capturing a hill in the Mayu Range, southeast of Maungdaw.

In the vicinity of Buthidaung, Allied artillery was active against enemy positions. In the Chin hills on the Tiddim Road, contact was regained with the Japanese near "the chocolate staircase," a long series of hairpin bends by which the road climbs 3,000 feet toward Tiddim.

Allied planes on the Arakan front strafed troop concentrations in the Buthidaung area, while Beaufighters of the Eastern Air Command attacked shipping in the Gulf of Martaban.

In China no change was reported on the Hunan-Kwangsi railway front, where the Japanese thrust was last reported to have carried to points a little over 30 miles east and northeast of Kweilin.

Fourteenth U. S. Army Air Force headquarters announced the loss of an American airbase at Tanchuk. It was abandoned September 17 after all installations had been destroyed.

HELSINKI, October 1 — Today's Finnish communique said that Finnish troops advancing in north Finland have reached the village of Tailalkoski, which was for the most part destroyed by the retreating Germans.

It also announced that Polish underground forces in the Kampinos forest were pushed westward by overwhelming German forces, which had crossed the Vistula in a general withdrawal. (OWI – UP)

CORRESPONDENT TELLS OF CAPTURE OF MUHU

MOSCOW, October 1 — A correspondent for the Soviet newspaper Pravda today gave additional details of the island of Muhu, northwest of Parnu and across the straits of Suurvain, which was taken by Soviet troops yesterday.

The correspondent says:

"At first the enemy resisted stubbornly. The steep banks created a difficult obstacle, but the marines were able to approach the shore and were the first ones to land. Sub-machine gunners followed. Landing barges followed in a second wave across the straits. The enemy garrison on the island was routed."

The Moscow Radio said that Muhu is the key to the two large islands of Esel and Dago, to which the Germans have evacuated a large number of troops from captured Tallin. Some German troops evacuated from Finland have

DEGAULLE AND NATIONALIZATION OF INDUSTRIES

LONDON, October 1 — General Charles De Gaulle, speaking to the people of France over the Lille radio today, pledged his government to an extensive social program.

He said the most important part of his program calls for the nationalization of considerable parts of industry, including the defense industry.

«In modern times,» said General De Gaulle, «governments are better fitted than individuals to exploit the riches of the earth.»

The reconstruction of France will be an enormous task, he said, asserting that relations between government and labor must be good to facilitate it. (Reuter)

FRENCH COMMUNISTS SUPPORT DE GAULLE

WASHINGTON, October 1 — The French Communist Party is pledged to support General de Gaulle's administration, Bernard Frauchon, secretary-general of the French Communist party and leader in the General Confederation of Labor, declared in Paris yesterday.

Frauchon urged all French workers and employers to co-operate in the proposed manufacture of arms and ammunition in French factories, and to avoid internal political fighting. (OWI)

RENAULT FACTORIES OWNER FACING TRIAL

LONDON, October 1 — One of the most important and sensational political trials in France, the trial of the owner of the Renault factories, is to take place this month.

LIBERATION OF SAN ARCANGELO

SAN ARCANGELO, ITALY, October 1 — With the liberation of San Arcangelo, important communications center due west of Rimini, Allied troops have surmounted the most difficult terrain on this sector of the front and now stand astride the main railway line from Rimini to Bologna.

San Arcangelo is at the junction of the railway line coming up from the south and the main trunk line which heads northwest towards Bologna, already threatened by Allied forces approaching from the Florence area.

A UNN special correspondent who visited the town recently reported that while Nazi snipers have been cleared out, there is still sporadic shelling from long-range German artillery. It is estimated that every building in the town has been hit three or four times by German shells in the continuous eight-day bombardment. However, residents of the town told the correspondent that before the Allies liberated the town Allied artillery fire was so accurate that only six shells actually landed within the community. The actual targets — such as the railway line and crossroads — were the main point of bombardment by the Allies.

«Since the Germans have been driven out,» one resident said, they have fired mortars and shells with absolute indiscrimination. They are entirely responsible for the shambles into which the place has been turned.»

Most of the 12,000 residents and 5,000 refugees are still taking protection in the large shelters, seeking safety and protection from the shelling.

Most of the cattle and vegetables had been commandeered by the Germans, but one heavily loaded food train was hit by Allied shells and the local residents lost no time in stocking up with reserve food supplies. «If we had not been so lucky on that occasion,» said one resident to the correspondent, «I don't know how we would have lived. The Germans gave us nothing except a little bread which was terribly baked and hardly edible.» (OWI)

DAMAGE DONE TO EUROPEAN ART

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Francis H. Taylor, director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City and member of the American Commission for the Preservation of Arts and Monuments, said in an interview yesterday on his return from London that Great Britain has suffered shocking damage to its artistic heritage, and that many of England's great monuments are in ruins.

Taylor went to London to attend a conference of Allied ministers of education, brought together to study the problems of the recovery and restitution of works of art that will be recommended for consideration as part of the surrender terms.

After making a personal survey of damage to works of art in England and France, and studying an official report of the situation in Italy, Taylor believes the war damage to the art of France and Italy is «far less tragic than expected.» He says:

«Great Britain has suffered more damage to its artistic heritage than either France or Italy.»

He reports that in England 4,000 churches have been damaged, including the cathedrals of Canterbury and Exeter, and 2,500 have been completely destroyed.

Only at Rouen and Benevento have any of the great cathedrals suffered damage comparable to the destruction of the cathedral at Exeter, Taylor said.

The British libraries, he added, have also suffered great destruction, particularly the working libraries of law and medicine, as well as the 18th and 19th-century newspaper collections.

Taylor believes, however, that the situation regarding the Belgian art collection was no more serious than that of France. He said the most important collections of the Netherlands museums and galleries had been discovered intact at Maastricht. (OWI)

U.N.R.R.A. TO SEND REPRESENTATIVES TO POLAND

MOSCOW, October 1 — The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will send representatives to liberated Poland, Edvard Bursli, President of the Polish Committee of National Liberation, announced today.

The representatives, the announcement said, will prepare for the relief of «the heroic people who suffered five million dead in five years of war.» It added that the Polish Red Cross at Lublin would attempt to arrange for the shipment of relief supplies, quoting reports of field investigators that many diseases were epidemic in the Praga district, and that the situation was serious in Warsaw, where an estimated 200,000 deaths have occurred since the August 10 rising against the Nazis. (OWI)

Some of the points outlined by Currie in a program designed to create a sound basis for American post-war foreign trade were:

(1) Stabilization of international exchange rates — the basis for which has already been laid down by agreement growing out of the Bretton Woods Monetary Conference.

(2) The removal of war-time import and export controls as soon as practicable.

(3) Freeing of «blocked or frozen» currencies without delay so that nations will be able to spend the current money proceeds of their exports in any market they choose.

(4) The lowering of tariffs and removal of trade barriers, accompanied by the expansion of the reciprocal trade program.

Currie said that only the fullest possible employment in the United States and other nations, can result in the volume of international trade necessary to the economic well-being of the world. (PWB)

GERMAN DESCRIBES ROUNDING UP OF ITALIANS

WITH THE 8TH ARMY IN ITALY, October 1 — How German soldiers in northern Italy were ordered to round up Italians for forced labor service in Germany, was described by a newly captured prisoner to a UNN correspondent.

The scene of the story was La Spezia. The prisoner was a corporal. Every fortnight the corporal was sent out with his section on what German officers called «Partisan-hunting.» In reality, however, the term was a mere cover for the job of rounding up Italian men for forced labor service with the Germans.

The procedure was to approach the first healthy-looking Italian walking in the streets and tell him he was wanted at headquarters for questioning in regard to information regarding Partisans. The man's denials of any knowledge and his pleas to be released were completely ignored. He was immediately taken to an officer; and from that time, never seen again. He was given no opportunity to see his family or pack his bag. From that moment on, he was in forced labor service.

The corporal said that on these missions he was expected always to collect no fewer than 12 workers. It would have served no purpose for him to refuse to comply with the order as he would have been severely punished, and reprisals taken on his family, he said. (PWB)

AUSTRIANS TOLD TO PREPARE FOR ALLIES

LONDON, October 1 — A spokesman for General Dwight D. Eisenhower told the Austrians in a broadcast from the BBC tonight «to prepare for the arrival of the Allies.»

In official instructions the Austrians were told that the time had come for them to give positive and active proof of their willingness to dissociate themselves from their German masters.

«Austrians in town and country should form in all local communities clandestine committees for the arrival of the Allies,» the message said. «These committees should be ready to provide all possible help for the Allies in regard to the administration of local affairs, purge of the Nazis, preparation of black and white lists, and preservation of food stocks, together with safeguarding of transport and machinery.»

The broadcast added that if these instructions were followed, Austria's chances of becoming a devastated theater of war would be lessened.

Similar instructions to the Austrians were broadcast by Radio Moscow today.

After making a personal survey of damage to works of art in England and France, and studying an official report of the situation in Italy, Taylor believes the war damage to the art of France and Italy is «far less tragic than expected.» He says:

«Great Britain has suffered more damage to its artistic heritage than either France or Italy.»

He reports that in England 4,000 churches have been damaged, including the cathedrals of Canterbury and Exeter, and 2,800 have been completely destroyed.

«Only at Rouen and Benevento have any of the great cathedrals suffered damage comparable to the destruction of the cathedral at Exeter,» Taylor said.

The British libraries, he added, have also suffered great destruction, particularly the working libraries of law and medicine, as well as the 18th and 19th-century newspaper collections.

Taylor believes, however, that the situation regarding the Belgian art collection was no more serious than that of France. He said the most important collections of the Netherlands museums and galleries had been discovered intact at Maestricht. (OWI)

U.N.R.R.A. TO SEND REPRESENTATIVES TO POLAND

MOSCOW, October 1 — The United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will send representatives to liberated Poland, Edward Bauki, President of the Polish Committee of National Liberation, announced today.

The representatives, the announcement said, will prepare for the relief of «the heroic people who suffered five million dead in five years of war.» It added that the Polish Red Cross at Lublin would attempt to arrange for the shipment of relief supplies, quoting reports of field investigators that many diseases were epidemic in the Praga district, and that the situation was serious in Warsaw, where an estimated 250,000 deaths have occurred since the August 19 rising against the Nazis. FOREIGN CREDITS TO FINANCE AMERICAN EXPORTS

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Advancements of foreign credits in a substantial amount will be necessary after the war to finance American exports if full employment in the United States is to be approximated, Lauchlin Currie, Foreign Economic Administration Deputy told the sub-committee of the Congressional Post-War Planning Committee. His testimony was made public yesterday.

Discussing the activities of FEA in foreign trade and some of the factors affecting post-war foreign trade of the United States, Currie said that this year United States exports will approach 15 billion dollars — 11 billion 500 million of which consist of Lend-Lease. He pointed out that this is four times the volume of pre-war exports.

The FEA official further declared that if full employment is to be maintained in peace-time, means must be found to fill this gap. He added: «we must look forward to a volume of exports at higher levels than we have ever had before. Foreign countries faced with the necessity of reconverting to peace-time production, the reconstruction of war-damaged industries, homes and agriculture, will be unable to make immediate payment in goods. Foreign credits will therefore be necessary.»

WITH THE 8TH ARMY IN ITALY, October 1 — How German soldiers in northern Italy were ordered to round up Italians for forced labor service in Germany, was described by a newly captured prisoner to a UNN correspondent.

The scene of the story was La Spezia. The prisoner was a corporal. Every fortnight the corporal was sent out with his section on what German officers called «Partisan-hunting.» In reality, however, the term was a mere cover for the job of rounding up Italian men for forced labor service with the Germans.

The procedure was to approach the first healthy-looking Italian walking in the street and tell him he was wanted at headquarters for questioning in regard to information regarding Partisans. The man's denials of any knowledge, and his pleas to be released were completely ignored. He was immediately taken to an officer; and from that time, never seen again. He was given no opportunity to see his family or pack his bag. From that moment on, he was in forced labor service.

The corporal said that on these missions he was expected always to collect no fewer than 12 workers. It would have served no purpose for him to refuse to comply with the order as he would have been severely punished, and reprisals taken on his family, he said. (INWP)

AUSTRIANS TOLD TO PREPARE FOR ALLIES

LONDON, October 1 — A spokesman for General Dwight D. Eisenhower told the Austrians in a broadcast from the BBC tonight «to prepare for the arrival of the Allies.»

In official instructions the Austrians were told that the time had come for them to give positive and active proof of their willingness to dissociate themselves from their German masters.

«Austrians in town and country should form in all local communities clandestine committees for the arrival of the Allies,» the message said. «These committees should be ready to provide all possible help for the Allies in regard to the administration of local affairs, purge of the Nazis, preparation of black and white lists, and preservation of food stocks, together with safeguarding of transport and machinery.»

The broadcast added that if these instructions were followed Austria's chances of becoming a devastated theatre of war would be lessened.

Similar instructions to the Austrians were broadcast by Radio Moscow today.

Revealing that 10,000 Austrians have been thrown into concentration camps in the past few days, and that Seitz, the former mayor of Vienna, has been arrested, the broadcast said:

«At last, Austrians, your time has come to help the Allied strategy and to help yourselves. Strike boldly and quickly. All German administration officers in Austria must get a bullet through their hearts.

«You must act now before Himmler goes too far. Austrians, to arms! Your time has come. You can help to finish this war before the end of this year.»

Meanwhile, from Washington, came a statement from Senator Claude Pepper, member of the U. S. Senate Foreign Committee, paying tribute to the Austrians on the 24th anniversary of the institution of the constitution of the republic.

«Free men everywhere pay tribute to the first country to fall a victim of Hitlerite aggression,» Pepper said. «Austrians know that the United States, together with Great Britain and Russia, recognized Austrian independence at the Moscow Conference on November 1, 1943.

«The military squeeze is converging on Austria. Austrians can speed their own liberation, as did France and Belgium by organization of active resistance groups.»

GREEKS PROMISED NEW ZEALAND FOOD

WELLINGTON, NEW ZEALAND, October 1 — Prime Minister Peter Fraser said today that arrangements have been completed for sending New Zealand foodstuffs to Greece — just as soon as Greek territory has been completely freed. The shipments are to be a gift to the people of Greece from the Government and people of New Zealand, Fraser said. (PWE)

DUTCH RAILWAY STRIKE IS SUCCESSFUL

LONDON, October 1 — The Dutch Government call for railway workers in Holland to strike against the Germans has been practically a hundred per cent successful, a BBC correspondent who interviewed two patriots who reached the Allied lines said today. (BBC)

GERMANS SHOOT MORE POLES

LONDON, October 1 — The Germans have shot 150 Poles during the last few days as a « purification » measure for patriot sabotage of Nazi railway communications, the Polish Telegraph Agency said here yesterday.

The agency added that the murders took place in the villages of Lipniki, Wasniow and Smykany, in the Myslenice district south of Crakow. (OWI)

BREAK-UP OF GERMAN MONOPOLIES

WASHINGTON, October 2 — A peace formula for Germany based on the breaking up of her industrial monopolies and distribution of stock among her workers and returning soldiers was proposed today by U. S. Senator Harley M. Kilgore.

Senator Kilgore, chairman of the Senate's Military War Mobilization subcommittee, stated that Germany's future geographical boundaries are of « secondary importance. »

« The basis for « lasting peace, » he said, « is fundamentally an economic one. Germany under the Nazi setup built a great series of industrial monopolies in steel, rubber, coal and other materials. The monopolies soon got control of Germany, brought Hitler to power, and virtually the whole world into war. »

Senator Kilgore said that most peace terms for Germany so far advanced are political rather than economic in scope and « do not get to the root of the problem. » He added, however, that any plan to strip Germany of her industry and to divide the country into family-size farms would not prove workable. He said:

« Germany should keep her industry, but her industrial monopolies should be broken up and reformed as individual companies as they were before. I. G. Farben, a huge industrial combine, alone is made up of 177 corporations.

« The stock of the war criminals in control of these corporations should be distributed among German workers and returning German soldiers. The establishment of a competitive, free enterprise should be insisted upon. »

Senator Kilgore said his plan would be coupled with the seizure of « the ill-gotten gains of German industrial leaders » and spent in the rehabilitation of Germany and the countries her war machine overran. (OWI)

ESTONIAN PEOPLE REORGANIZE THEIR COUNTRY

TALLINN, October 1 — Estonian people are energetically setting about the restoration of their towns and villages, their industry and agriculture, said the Soviet news agency Tass today.

A session of the Supreme Soviet of Estonia has recently outlined ways for the rehabilitation of the Republic, said Tass, adding that everywhere the peasants are finishing harvesting, threshing the grain and preparing for autumn

The Nazi Minister of Food and Agriculture, Herbert Backe, confirmed today over the Berlin radio that this year's grain harvest is poorer than last. The fodder grain harvest, particularly of oats, has suffered greatly and there is no barley available for bread-making, he said.

The Nazi food minister suggested that the farmers should increase their deliveries, but Goebbels earlier today admitted that he had handicapped the already hard-pressed German farmer by drafting his manpower. Backe hinted that there would be further cuts in German rations.

The New York Times, however, reported that Germans are no longer able to buy the quantities of food to which their ration cards now entitle them. The average consumer is fortunate if he is able to get one or two half-pound loaves of poor quality bread in a week instead of the eight for which he holds ration tickets. Butter and margarine cards are valueless as there is none available. Soldiers' extra food rations have had to be cancelled.

German shopkeepers ignore both money and ration tickets. If they have anything to sell they demand payment in coffee or cigarettes, said the dispatch. Since very few can produce such items, it was said, the majority of city Germans have to get along on a diet of cabbage and potatoes, the only food available on the open market. (OWI)

FOREIGN WORKERS START FIRES DURING AIR RAIDS

LONDON, October 1 — General Dwight D. Eisenhower's recent message to workers in Germany has put an additional burden on Himmler's already strained control and guard service, said a Zurich dispatch to Svenska Dagbladet yesterday.

Guards have been doubled at the larger industrial establishments and labor camps, and special assault commandos have been organized, the dispatch said.

During recent air attacks observers saw many fires which were actually caused not by Allied incendiaries but by instruments dropped over Germany for foreign workers to use. (OWI)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, October 1 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

In spite of bad weather conditions American and British troops of the 5th Army have made some progress in the central sector. American troops of the 5th Army have driven off a further strong counter-attack on the key feature of Monte Battaglia.

In the Adriatic sector, although major operations by the 8th Army are still impossible, the town of Savignano has been cleared of the enemy and some improvement has been made in our positions east of this town.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Although weather again restricted operations yesterday, medium bombers carried out successful attacks against bridges in the Venice and Milan areas, while fighter-bombers also attacked communications in the Po Valley.

Last night medium and heavy bombers attacked a bridge over the Po River at San Benedetto. Heavy bombers did not operate during the day. From these operations three of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew about 500 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF October 1 — Today's communique:

Calais has been captured. The commander of the garrison was taken prisoner last midnight and by early morning the main body of defenders had surrendered. Mopping-up of scattered elements continues. The advance northwest of Turnhout continues to make progress.

In all sectors in Holland there was steady fighting during yesterday, with the situation generally unchanged.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked railway wagons and other transportation targets. Enemy counter-attacks west of our salient continue, and northeast of Nijmegen there has been heavy fighting. Communications at Arnhem and near Geck, across the German frontier to the east, were attacked by escorted medium bombers.

Trains, barges and motor transport in the Ruhr and Northern Holland were attacked by light bombers during last night. Yesterday strongly escorted heavy bombers in very great strength pounded the railway yards of Hamm, Muenster and Bielefeld in Western Germany. Around the German frontier bordering Southern Holland and Belgium, slight advances were made southwest of Prum where several pillboxes were destroyed and a number of prisoners taken.

Several small counter-attacks northeast of Nancy and at Jallaucourt were repulsed. Northeast of Epinal the town of Rambervillers has been reached by our forces against light resistance. Local gains were made east of the Moselle River in this sector. The enemy has been launching counter-attacks and has intensified artillery fire. Northwest of Belfort a number of violent counter-attacks were repulsed and our positions improved. (Reuter)

SOVIET COMMUNIQUE

MOSCOW, October 1 — Tonight's communique:

During today, On Yugoslavian territory, south of the Rumanian City of Turgu-Severin, our troops in fighting continued to advance, and captured the populated localities of Kukurishte, Mihailovak, Ushanovak, Rakovo, Milnshimo, Vitrovak, Rakronya, Rechka, Rakakovo, and Razhederniak.

On other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 30, in aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 46 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ AAI, October 1 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Operations of the Garibaldi Brigades in the Veneto sector are proceeding with increasing success. On September 18, Patriots liberated Lorenzago, in Belluno Province on the road leading to Austria and ousted the local garrison, composed mostly of SS troops.

Much war material was captured. Previous to this, on August 20, Patriots attacked a Fascist unit of SS troops in the vicinity of the Sevino Alps. Seventy militiamen were killed and 180 taken prisoner. The booty included 4 mortars, many machine guns and a notable quantity of munitions.

In the Spezia sector, where the enemy had carried out large-scale mopping up operations, Patriot forces immediately occupied their former positions. In this sector the enemy lost approximately 800 men. The efficiency of the Patriots has increased as the result of the capture of large supplies of arms.

In all Northern Italy, Patriots are carrying out direct acts of sabotage against railway and road communications. Enemy military traffic has been suspended on the railway lines between Portogruaro and Casarsa, Motta di Livenza and San Vito, Vicenza and Castelfranco, and on other railway lines in the Veneto sector. Even the garages that were part of the powder houses of Treviso in Udine [illegible] destroyed on September 8.

ing yesterday. Units of the 1st Canadian Army which had established across the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal despite our stubborn resistance were able to reach the region, northwest of Turnhout while strong British attacks on the Juliana Canal at Moerzyck were frustrated. In the forests west of Chateau-Salins and in the area, north of Luneville, the enemy continued his strong attacks. Our counter-attacks led to fierce engagements. Fierce fighting continues for the foothills, wooded hills and entrances to valleys in the western Vosges. Numerically superior American tank forces during yesterday, succeeded in penetrating into the town of Rambervillers. On both sides of Lure, all attacks of the American 7th Army were warded off in hard fighting and in successful counter-attacks.

Our fortresses on the Channel and the Atlantic coast, yesterday were also subjected to heavy fire. Our artillery smashed enemy batteries off Dunkirk. Our thrusts made from Gironde-North dislodged the enemy from his positions.

During to-day's morning hours, escort vessels of a German convoy without suffering losses have sunk four British E-boats and set fire to an additional one, off the Dutch coast near Ymuiden.

In the western Alps, our mountain troops captured a strongly fortified and stubbornly defended hill position, south of Monte Genevre. In grim hand-to-hand fighting, the garrison was battled down and a number of pillboxes and guns were destroyed.

Italy:

In central Italy, units of the American 5th and the British 8th Armies also yesterday did not launch their large-scale attack. The hotly fought for Monte Battaglia in the Etruscan Apennines after fluctuating fighting remained in enemy hands. In the coastal area, there was local fighting on the Rubicon.

Eastern Front:

In the Balkans, fighting continues in the Danube bend on both side of the Iron Gate. In the area of Grosswardein, German and Hungarian troops in a counter-attack broke the enemy resistance and continue their advance. On both sides of Tecenberg and on the Maros, lively offensive and defensive fighting continues. Stubborn attempts at breaking through made by freshly brought up Soviet forces on the crossroads of the eastern Beskides failed.

Within and west of Warsaw, additional encircled groups of bands were smashed. The remnants of these groups unconditionally surrendered.

Between Dvina and the Riga Bay, enemy attacks collapsed in our fire. The island of Moon was lost to numerically superior enemy forces.

Air:

Anglo-American terror bombers made attacks on western German towns. The residential quarters of Bielefeld and Muenster were particularly affected. During the night, British planes dropped bombs on Hamburg. Twenty-seven enemy planes including 11 four-engined bombers were shot down.

During the month of September, vessels of the German Navy sank 17 ships totalling 84,000 tons and heavily damaged six additional ones. Furthermore, one destroyer, three frigates, four E-boats and one minesweeper were sunk and one destroyer damaged. Between September 1st and 30th, light German naval vessels, board flak of merchant ships and navy flak shot down 206 enemy planes.

On September 14 Patriots of the Treviso sector derailed a train full of fuel on the Treviso-Vicenza line, destroying 132 tons of war materiel. During the period August 15 to the present time Patriots many times interrupted the Turin-Bardonecchia line along the Val di Susa line and forced the enemy to use steam engines because of the damage caused to electric installations. Patriots in this sector burned 3 freight cars of war materiel and damaged three electric locomotives. In reprisal the enemy bombarded 4 towns and burned two others by means of flame-throwers. During the period August 5-9 Patriots interruped highways in 11 places to the west of Turin and carried out 19 attacks against trains and troop convoys.

Eastern Front, Correspondent Walter Plato writes that there is a new focal point characterizing hard battles on the Eastern Front. It is said that Sunday's German War Communique with regard to the Eastern Front for the first time mentions the fighting area in the Balkans and in this manner characterizes the fighting in the Danube bend on either side of the Iron Gate. It is furthermore stressed that this fighting area is insofar of great strategic value as German units fighting in that area have the task to prevent thrusts of Soviets into the Serbian area because Soviet operations are aiming at cutting off German forces in the Aegean area. In the battle raging on the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier region, German and Hungarian formations have taken the initiative with strong and effective counterthrusts.

Allied Losses in Fighting in the West. The bitter fighting in the West during September resulted in the consolidation of the front. During September, 10,650 prisoners were taken, 1392 enemy tanks and armored reconnaissance cars were destroyed— this figure does not include six-ton enemy tanks which were landed by gliders and a considerable part of which was captured in good condition. — 268 guns were destroyed or captured, 360 motorized vehicles, more than a thousand transport gliders and glider planes were destroyed; 140 enemy planes were shot down by the army sloyle. The thrust carried out by formations of the Waffen S.S. in the Arnhem area resulted in the capture of 733 enemy supply bombs, the number of heavy guns captured was 478, many other weapons as well as ammunition and stocks of fuel were also captured.

No Allied Soldiers on Northern Bank of Lower Rhine. Correspondent Guenter Weber reports that after the annihilation of the 1st British Airborne Division, there is not a single Allied soldier on the northern bank of the Lower Rhine.

Western Front. In the southern part of the Western Front, Americans have been trying to regain lost territory between Metz and Rambervillers, during the past 24 hours and to push in the German bolt position guarding the Burgundy gate, north-east of Lure. Their main pressure was directed against Seille river as well as against sectors at Chateau-Salins, east of Luneville and south of Rambervillers. German counter-measures are under way against American forces which advanced south of Rambervillers. North-east of Lure, Americans penetrated more deeply into foothills of Vosges.

Goebbels Speaks to German Peasants. Reviewing the German food situation, Reich Minister Dr Goebbels declared at a meeting of farmers that thanks to the industry and loyalty of German peasants food has been safeguarded for the coming year for the German people. Goebbels conveyed to farmers thanks and recognition from the Fuehrer and the whole German people and continued as follows: « Since the beginning of the war, our enemies had placed great hopes in the starvation of the German people, as it was the case in the First World War when millions of German peasants frustrated the expectations of the enemy. Throughout the war, the German food situation withstood the greatest strain and remained secured despite enemy air terrorism. This was the case also for the coming year although Germany in the course of the year had to acquiesce to considerable territorial losses in the East and West. »

Competent Berlin circles declare with regard to the German raw material situation: Germany has sufficient reserves of all vital raw materials, above all iron ore, wolfram and bauxite for overcoming the final phase of this war and to maintain the German armament industries.

JAPANESE OFFICIAL WARNING ON AIR ATTACKS

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Domei, the Japanese News Agency, on Wednesday quoted Colonel Masayoshi Iijima, chief of the Japanese Army's aviation construction section, as warning the Japanese people at home and in Manchuria of more frequent Allied air attacks on Japanese war industries.

Colonel Iijima said in part:

« The enemy will undoubtably try to disrupt the supply lines feeding our war industries, and it is quite obvious from the enemy's attacks on Yawata and Anshan that his objective is to reduce our steel-making capacity.

« We can expect that for some time to come our steel mills will be bombed. Other steel mills besides those at Yawata and Anshan will have to be on the alert.

« After the destruction of our steel mills, the enemy will focus his attacks on our airplane factories. The enemy undoubtedly will concentrate on facilities which are easy to destroy and hard to repair.

« In Europe the British and Americans have attacked German ballbearing plants. The destruction of these plants will paralyze the airplane industry. Here, too, we must be on guard. »

Information reaching Washington reveals that the Japanese government has distributed to its people a booklet of air raid precautions saying that air attacks on the Japanese mainland may come not only from China but also simultaneously from the south and from the Aleutians.

Here are excerpts from the booklet:

« No matter how complete the Japanese air defense, enemy aircraft can come to Japan in large numbers. We must expect them day and night. A bombing raid may take place anywhere at any time. The nearest place to the Japanese mainland and the one with the greatest strategic significance is the American base at Attu (in the Aleutians). They have built a powerful airbase there. The island is about 1,588 miles from Tokyo, which aircraft can reach in about seven hours of flight.

« It is extremely difficult to destroy this base. Already several hundred superb aircraft under a famous American bombing commander are stationed there. These aircraft frequently raid our bases in the Kuriles.

« From the South Pacific it is also possible to raid Japan's mainland. Enemy aircraft coming from the south must come from carriers and the collective strength of enemy carriers should not be overlooked.

« Further, the enemy may not come from the southern route alone. He may come from the north, the south, and from the continent of China at the same time. He can launch a coordinated attack with both land-based and carrier-based aircraft. » (OWI)

JAPS COMPLAIN OF INTERNAL CORRUPTION

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Radio Tokyo revealed yesterday that Japan is having trouble with profiteers, with the black market, and with a maladjusted distribution system for consumer goods.

Immediate relief from these economic ills, said the broadcast, can be found in the enforcement of unified price controls. Government agencies were said to be demanding action against the black market « and other corrupt economic practices, » such as « price-raising competition. » (OWI)

the whole German people and continued as follows: « Since the beginning of the war, our enemies had placed great hopes in the starvation of the German people, as it was the case in the First World War when millions of German peasants frustrated the expectations of the enemy. Throughout the war, the German food situation withstood the greatest strain and remained secured despite enemy air terrorism. This was the case also for the coming year although Germany in the course of the year had to acquiesce to considerable territorial losses in the East and West. »

GERMAN OVERSEAS STATIONS

Soviets Use Tito for Their Policy. The Kremlin's policy with regard to Tito represents Moscow's attempt to secure total political supremacy in the Balkans. This way the Balkans should be sealed off once and for all not only against Germany but also against the British and Americans. This was stressed by the semi-official Hungarian Agency « Budapester Nachrichten. »

Germany Has Sufficient Raw Materials. Competent Berlin circles declare with regard to the German raw material situation: Germany has sufficient reserves of all vital raw materials, above all iron ore, wolfram and bauxite for overcoming the final phase of this war and to maintain the German armament industries.

JAPANESE OFFICIAL WARNING ON AIR ATTACKS

WASHINGTON, October 1 — Domei, the Japanese News Agency, on Wednesday quoted Colonel Mazayoshi Itoma, chief of the Japanese Army's aviation construction section, as warning the Japanese people at home and in Manchuria of more frequent Allied air attacks on Japanese war industries.

must expect them day and night. A bombing raid may take place anywhere at any time. The nearest place to the Japanese mainland and the one with the greatest strategic significance is the American base at Attu (in the Aleutians). They have built a powerful airbase there. The island is about 1,583 miles from Tokyo, which aircraft can reach in about seven hours of flight.

« It is extremely difficult to destroy this base. Already several hundred superb aircraft under a famous American bombing commander are stationed there. These aircraft frequently raid our bases in the Kuriles.

« From the South Pacific it is also possible to raid Japan's mainland. Enemy aircraft coming from the south must come from carriers and the collective strength of enemy carriers should not be overlooked.

« Further, the enemy may not come from the southern route alone. He may come from the north, the south, and from the continent of China at the same time. He can launch a coordinated attack with both land-based and carrier-based aircraft. » (OWI)

GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACKING IN NIJMEGEN AREA

SHAEF, September 29 — British and German forces are now building up for a decisive battle in the Waal-Rhine sector. Counter-attacks by German formations within the past 24 hours in the narrow strip of land between the two rivers in northern Holland indicate their intention to fight [illegible] to the finish.

On the Channel coast, Canadian forces this morning captured the German strongpoint at Cape Gris Nez after the launching of a heavy attack. Over 200 Germans were taken prisoner, and eight cross-Channel guns were captured.

A 10-hour armistice was requested today by the German commander at the Calais garrison to discuss surrender terms. Hostilities were resumed when he refused to accept «unconditional surrender.»

Supreme Headquarters later announced that a 24-hour truce was granted at the request of the German commander to permit the evacuation of several thousand civilians from the Calais area.

In the Antwerp area, the Canadians are being opposed by the German 7:1th Infantry Division, composed of mixed reinforcements, including naval officers who are in command of some units.

Far to the south of the Allied front, the American 3rd Army threw back four German counter-attacks north of Nancy and recaptured Château Salins. This town has changed hands several times. The Germans have stepped up their air activity in this sector, and 16 of 69 planes in one attack were destroyed.

After the heaviest air attack yet in the Moselle sector against a German strongpoint in the Parroy Forest, General Patton's forces knocked out 82 German tanks and made an advance of several miles.

The Germans are reacting strongly to the Allied advance on Rambervillers, road center 15 miles northeast of Epinal, but gains of three miles have been made through mud and booby traps. A few miles southeast, several German counter-attacks supported by artillery and mortar fire were beaten back.

GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS BOMBED

LONDON, September 29 — Both RAF and USAAF bombers were out over the west German frontier region today, striking heavy blows at Siegfried Line fortifications and mashalling yards.

American Marauders went for points in the Webenheim area of the West Wall, about 20 miles east of Saarbrucken, and at rail points in Saarbrücken itself. Returning fliers described the results as «good.»

Aircraft of the 2nd TAF this morning attacked the town of Geldern, another supply point for the Siegfried Line, and their bombs hit the railway northeast of the town. All these targets lie in the path of the American 3rd Army. Today's attacks follow yesterday's missions against railway com-

GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACKING IN NIJMEGEN AREA

SHAEF, September 29 — British and German forces are now building up for a decisive battle in the Waal-Rhine sector. Counter-attacks by German formations within the past 24 hours in the narrow strip of land between the two rivers in northern Holland indicate their intention to fight hard for this gateway to the Reich.

Three German counter-attacks from the area of the Reichswald Forest, each employing about 200 men, tanks, and self-propelled guns, were launched in the Nijmegen area last night and today, but all three were repelled. Under cover of darkness last night, the Germans crossed the lower Rhine West of Arnhem, near Heveadorn. They came over in assault boats and seized some ground on the west bank of the river, where British forces are reported to be established in strength. By late this afternoon, the German forces were wiped out.

Farther south, the Germans are slowly being cleaned up east of the Eindhoven-Nijmegen Road. They have only one strongpoint left in this area — at Overloon, 22 miles northeast of Eindhoven. One prong of the British 2nd Army is driving toward Germany on a 15-mile front from Cuijk southward to Veerlingsbeek, both on the west bank of the Maas River. The German frontier lies three to five miles to the east.

On the western flank of the corridor, British forces are meeting strong German resistance, particularly in the area five miles west of Veghel, where a heavy counter-attack was beaten off.

On both sides of the corridor running north to the lower Rhine, British armor and artillery are protecting supply columns. Allied forces within the corridor are constantly being reinforced and strengthened.

In the Antwerp area, the Canadians are being opposed by the German 711th Infantry Division, composed of mixed reinforcements, including naval officers who are in command of some units.

Far to the south of the Allied front, the American 3rd Army threw back four German counter-attacks north of Nancy and recaptured Chateau Salins. This town has changed hands several times. SHAEF, September 29 — French tanks have broken through the first-defense line of the Belfort Gap south of Le Thillot, despite strong German resistance, a United Press dispatch reported late tonight. (UP)

BEST CAPTURED; GERMAN GENERAL TAKEN

SHAEF, September 29 — Allied troops have captured Best, northwest of Eindhoven, after several days of bitter fighting, it was reported late tonight.

General Schilling, commander of the German garrison at Cape Gris Nez, was among the 200 prisoners taken in the capture of the German strongpoint. (Reuter)

U. S. MARINES MAKE NEW PALAU LANDINGS

PEARL HARBOR, September 29 — United States Marines have made two new invasions in the Palau Islands, on land masses north of Peleliu, where the last Japanese are being annihilated.

A Pacific Fleet headquarters communique said late tonight that one of these islands, Ngesebus or Honguur, has a 4,800-foot airfield strip.

On one of them, invading forces were said to be mopping up. The full extent of resistance met was not reported. (OWI) munications in the Rhineland, when Coblenz, Frankfurt, Mannheim, Karlsruhe, Aachen, and Dusseldorf areas were attacked.

RAF Mosquitoes were active over Holland and Germany in the last 24 hours. Last night they attacked objectives in Brunswick and strafed airfields well behind the enemy lines. Keeping up their methodical destruction of enemy transport, they swooped down on rail yards, road convoys, ferry crossings, and barges.

Other Mosquitoes patrolled the North Sea, waiting to pounce on German aircraft carrying flying bombs. One Mosquito pilot sighted two of them just after they had launched their bombs against southern England, and his guns sent the carriers — both Heinkels — crashing into the sea.

Flying along the coast of southern Norway at dusk yesterday, other Mosquitoes caught a German torpedo boat in a sheltered bay. They released depth charges, riddled the superstructure with cannon and machine-gun fire, set the boat on fire, and left it sinking.

Armadas of more than 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators, with average daily escort of 700 fighters, were over Germany every day from Monday to Thursday of this week, in a campaign to smash railroad centers and war plants feeding the German Army.

Losses from Monday to Thursday, according to Associated Press, were 110 heavy bombers and 25 fighters. The heaviest losses occurred yesterday, when more than 100 enemy fighters concentrated on one bomber formation attacking Magdeburg and ignored those heading for Kassel and Merseburg. Forty-nine bombers were shot down and 12 fighters failed to return, although several are reported to have landed in France after running out of gasoline.

In all, 36 German planes were destroyed — 26 by fighters and 10 by gunners in the bombers.

Squadrons of the new American night fighter plane, the «Black Widow,» have been placed under orders of the French anti-aircraft defense and form part of the aerial defense of Paris, the paper Figaro reported Wednesday. The Black Widow has distinguished itself in defensive operations in Great Britain. (OWI – Reuter – BBC)

ARNHEM BATTLE DID NOT FAIL, MONTGOMERY SAYS

SHAEF, September 29 — Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery declared tonight that the British 1st Airborne Division at Arnhem «did not fail,» and that «all is well elsewhere.»

«There can be few episodes more glorious than the epic of Arnhem,» Montgomery said in a message to their commander, Major General R. E. Urquhart.

Field Marshal Montgomery stated that the last message from the division, which lost 6,000 of its 8,000 effectives, read:

«All will be ordered to break out, rather than surrender. We have attempted our best, and we will continue to do our best as long as possible.» (OWI)

DUTCH PATRIOTS AIDED U. S. AIRBORNE TROOPS

NEW YORK, September 29 — The success of the American airborne operation along the corridor from Eindhoven to Nijmegen would not have been possible without tremendous help from the Dutch people, a combined American press correspondent wrote in a delayed dispatch.

«It not only was the rise of a well-organized underground that contributed to their success,» the dispatch said, «but also the voluntary help of old men, housewives, and school children. They saved American troops thousands of valuable combat man-hours. With wheelbarrows and dog-carts, on bicycles and on foot, they scoured the country-side after American planes had dropped thousands of parcels of ordinances — the first time in nearly 12 years that any other than Nazi justice had been meted out in Germany.»

The court found four women guilty of trespassing on a forbidden military area, and each was fined 2,000 marks [200 dollars] with an alternative of six months' imprisonment. The case of two men, charged with stealing coal, was referred to a higher court.

Hill said the impression observers received from the proceedings was that Allied officials intend to be just but firm with German offenders, avoiding giving the Germans the idea we will act arbitrarily, but not allowing them to think we will let them get away with anything. (OWI)

8TH ARMY CROSSES FIUMICINO RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 29 — Canadian troops of the 8th Army, battling their way westward along the edge of the Po Plain 10 miles inland from Rimini, have established a bridgehead across the Fiumicino River, it was announced here today.

The new bridgehead, although described as small, and held only by leading troops, marks the successful passage by the 8th Army of the principal natural barrier between the Allied forces and Cesena, first main town on the Rimini-Bologna Road. The crossing of the river by the Canadians, which puts them within eight miles of Cesena, was made in the face of heavy enemy resistance, which held 8th Army gains all along the 16-mile arc across the southeastern corner of the Po Valley to the minimum.

In heavy rains which precluded close air-support and stalled armor and heavy mobile equipment, 5th Army American troops yesterday captured three key mountain peaks flanking the main Florence-Bologna Road where it winds through the Radicosa Pass, 21 miles south of Bologna, and in further advances along the Santerna River Valley to the east approached to within 11 miles of the Plain of the Po at Imola.

The American capture of the two peaks of Monte Oggioli and Monte Canda, flanking to the west and to the east the high Radicosa Pass, clears one of the principal natural defensive positions guarding the remaining stretches of the Bologna Road. Some six miles northwest of the Futa Pass, the Radicosa defiles wind even higher through the Apennine gaps, and mark the crest of the direct route from Florence north into the Po Valley.

The point of northernmost penetration by Allied forces through the enemy Apennines defenses Thursday shifted northeast to Monte Battaglia, four miles east of Castel del Rio, and some 12 miles northeast of the Radicosa Pass. Here, American forces of the 5th Army have pushed through the mountains south of the Firenzuola-Imola Road along the Santerna River Valley to within 11 miles of Imola itself. Enemy forces which attempted to form for a counter-attack in this sector were dispersed by the 5th Army artillery. Fre British troops operating in the upper Senio River Valley northeast of Palazzuolo, eight miles due south of these American forces, reported strong enemy resistance to their advance toward Castel Bolognese on the Rimini-Bologna Highway just east of Imola.

On the left flank of the American forces now in control of the Radicosa Pass, South Africans and American troops of the 5th Army continued to clear enemy forces from the Castiglione area, 10 miles west of the Florence-Bologna Road, and some units were reported to have reached Monte Gatti, a mile west of Castiglione. Farther west, the enemy was reported to be falling back behind extensive demolitions and minefields, which made continued contact difficult. It was officially stated that the entire Gothi defense zone in this sector has been penetrated by the 5th Army forces, with the exception of a small area near the Ligurian coast.

«They organized a system among themselves in establishing local dumps where citizens brought the parcels out from under the noses of the Germans behind Nazi lines. Sometimes they were able to smuggle packages through to the Americans after dark. Otherwise they waited until the Germans had been forced back.

«American officers believe that not a single package was lost through looting. The Dutch even carefully folded expendable parachutes to return to the Americans. One housewife washed six before returning them.»

The dispatch said that Allied troops believe that the Netherlands has suffered as much, if not more than any other western European country under German occupation.

«Not since the American liberation of isolated French colonial communities on the Atlantic coast of western Morocco have Allied troops found such poverty, want, and hardship,» the report stated. (OWI)

ALLIED COURT TRIES GERMANS IN GERMANY

NEW YORK, September 29 — Russell Hill, in a dispatch from Kornelimunster, Germany, to the Herald Tribune yesterday described the trial of six German civilians by an Allied military court on charges of violating military which puts them within eight miles of Cesena, was made in the face of heavy enemy resistance, which held 8th Army gains all along the 10-mile arc across the southeastern corner of the Po Valley to the minimum.

Rains Hold Up Progress

Heavy rains, which held up tanks and prevented air support, coupled with fierce enemy resistance, held the 8th Army to relatively slight gains on the Adriatic coast Thursday. New Zealand troops, announced for the first time as fighting in 8th Army in the current offensive, reported heavy fighting within 1,000 yards of the Fiumicino River near its mouth, some nine miles northwest of Rimini. Further inland, Canadian and British troops met with a series of savage enemy counter-attacks along the five-miles sector athwart the Emilia Highway from San Mauro del Romagna, south of Pribolo.

Canadian troops cleared San Mauro of remaining enemy troops and pushed westward on both sides of the village to make their crossing of the Fiumicino River. Just southwest of Savignano, on the main Rimini-Bologna Road, troops of the Queen's Brigade took up positions on a low ridge about 1,000 yards from the town on Wednesday night, only to be driven off Thursday by heavy enemy counter-attacks which capitalized on the fact that the British tanks were held up by demolitions and mud-clogged roads. Two German tanks were destroyed in the sharp fighting, but enemy forces at last reports still held positions on the disputed terrain.

Other British troops, which pushed northwest from the village of Canonica, south of the main Po Valley Road, also met with two heavy enemy counter-attacks, but held firm to their guns, despite desperate enemy efforts to retake this ground just east of the upper Fiumicino River. At the extreme southern edge of the 8th Army's arch across the edge of the Po Plain, other troops reached the village of Tribola, nine miles west of Rimini, only to be forced to fall back when enemy opposition stiffened.

Official figures released Friday placed the number of prisoners taken by the 8th Army since the beginning of their Adriatic coast offensive on August 26 as 9,000, while the 5th Army, which began its drive on the center of the enemy line on September 13, has taken 3,400 prisoners. (PRO)

BAD WEATHER CUTS M.A.A.F. SORTIES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 29 — Stormy weather yesterday cut Mediterranean Allied Air Force operations to 100 sorties, one of the smallest number flown this year.

Heavy and medium bombers did not operate, and only Thunderbolt fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force carried out limited sweeps against enemy highway and rail transport north of La Spezia. Mustang fighter-bombers of the Balkan Air Force attacked the Sedes-Salonika area, strafing an airdrome and destroying three enemy planes and damaging four others. Six locomotives were also destroyed in the same operations. (PRO)

CHETNIKS RESPOND TO TITO'S ENLISTMENT APPEAL

LONDON, September 29 — Yugoslav units have reached the approaches to Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, the Free Yugoslav Radio announced this morning.

The broadcast said that Chetniks and members of the so-called Home Guard are coming over en masse to the National Army of Liberation in response to a call for enlistment by Marshal Tito. Over 55,000 responded by September 16, and still more are joining.

Thousands of leaflets containing Tito's call were dropped over Yugoslavia, the broadcast said. Many were dropped on Zagreb, where quisling groups were forced to surround the town to prevent ex-members of the so-called Home Guard from deserting in batches to Tito's camp.

New units and officers' cadres are being created within the Liberation Army.

Yugoslav troops in western Serbia have routed a major enemy force of Chetniks, Marshal Tito announced in a communique today. This success followed two days of heavy fighting, in which 700 of the enemy were killed and wounded, and the remainder pushed back toward the Drina River.

In eastern Bosnia, Srebrnic has been liberated by the Yugoslav offensive, and 150 enemy soldiers have been killed. The small Dalmatian port of Jadlanac has also been liberated.

In Croatia, Yugoslav units are attacking the town of Sunja, where the railway station has changed hands several times. (OWI)

NAZI BOMBERS DOWNED OVER AEGEAN

CAIRO, September 29 — Beaufighters of the Middle East Command shot down two Nazi bombers over the Aegean last night. Two surface craft were also destroyed, as Beaufighters made daylight attacks on German-held Aegean harbors. (PWB)

RED ARMY TAKES GREAT BOOTY IN ESTONIA CARPATHIANS CROSSED TOWARD SLOVAKIA

MOSCOW, September 29 — Red Armies closing in on Riga in the final phases of the Baltic campaign took time out to take stock of their booty today, and disclosed that night. In the latest advances on the city, Russian troops over-ran more than 30 small villages.

Battle correspondents of Moscow newspapers said today that Russian and Czecho-Slovak troops have crossed the hump of the Carpathians in their drive down into Slovakia, and that they now control several major passes leading down into the Steyi Valley.

Russian Caucasian units are said to have gone into action against German and Magyar forces trying to impede the Red Army thrust into Czech territory. Russian forces have gained ground over a 60-mile front.

The Russian communique said 60 more towns in the wooded, hilly country of this region — southeast and south of Turka — have fallen to the Red Army since yesterday. An additional 40 have fallen in the Stanislavov region of the Carpathians, on the left flank of the drive through Turka.

At the same time, other Russian forces, striking northward through Transylvania, have taken the Hungarian town of Targu-Mures, rail junction and highway city to the west of the southern Carpathians, and have established a bridgehead over the Mures River.

The Soviet communique said that activity elsewhere on the Russo-German front was limited to reconnaissance and local fighting.

From inside Warsaw, Polish Home Army General Bor reported the delivery of more supplies by Russian planes. He said the situation remains unchanged. Artillery duelling continued. The Germans made slight gains in localized areas of the city. (Reuter)

FINNS REPAIR NINE MORE BRIDGES

WASHINGTON, September 29 — The text of today's Finnish communique, as broadcast domestically by the Finnish Radio and reported by the Federal Communications Commission, follows:

"In northern Finland, our troops in the Kuivaniemi direction have reached the River Olhavajoki and have also continued to advance in all other operation directions.

"Nine blown-up road bridges were again repaired during the past 24 hours, and many demolitions and barricades and numerous minefields were cleared.

"The repairing of serious damage caused to the sparse railway and road net continues to demand much time and effort." (OWI)

SOVIETS AND RUMANIANS IN ORADEA MARE

BUCHAREST, September 29 — According to the Rumanian war communique today, the important Transylvanian rail center of Oradea Mare, on the Hungarian frontier, was entered by Soviet and Rumanian troops yesterday.

Oradea Mare stands on one of the main rail routes from Rumania westward. (Reuter)

SOVIETS URGE HUNGARIANS TO REVOLT

MOSCOW, September 29 — The Soviet radio, in a broadcast yesterday urging the Hungarian people to turn against Germany, said that the fate of Hungary was in the people's own hands. The broadcast added:

"Soon the Red Army and the Allied armies will smash the robber system of German Fascism and those who support it. But in this fight for democracy and for the freedom of peoples, the Soviet Union and her Allies consider it important that the peoples themselves should participate.

"Now, when the final blows are being struck at Hitler's hordes, the Hungarian people have the last opportunity to atone for their past sins. There is only one way of atone-

New units and officers' cadres are being created within the Liberation Army.

Yugoslav troops in western Serbia have routed a major enemy force of Chetniks, Marshal Tito announced in a communique today. This success followed two days of heavy fighting, in which 700 of the enemy were killed and wounded, and the remainder pushed back toward the Drina River.

In eastern Bosnia, Srebrnic has been liberated by the Yugoslav offensive, and 150 enemy soldiers have been killed. The small Dalmatian port of Jadlanac has also been liberated.

In Croatia, Yugoslav units are attacking the town of Sunja, where the railway station has changed hands several times. (OWI)

NAZI BOMBERS DOWNED OVER AEGEAN

CAIRO, September 21 — Beaufighters of the Middle East Command shot down two Nazi bombers over the Aegean last night. Two surface craft were also destroyed, as Beaufighters made daylight attacks on German-held Aegean harbors. (PWB)

RED ARMY TAKES GREAT BOOTY IN ESTONIA CARPATHIANS CROSSED TOWARD SLOVAKIA

MOSCOW, September 29 — Red Armies closing in on Riga in the final phases of the Baltic campaign took time out to take stock of their booty today, and disclosed that among the prizes captured from the German northern forces were 165 warehouses choked with hard supplies and fuel.

Taken by Marshal Govorov's Leningrad Front troops alone, in their sweep through Estonia, were more than 20,000 rifles and sub-machine guns, 2,239 railway cars, 98 locomotives, and 29 complete railway trains loaded with supplies; 57 tug boats and 49 other vessels, including cutters; 981 trucks; 363 field guns of varied caliber; 495 mortars; 88 tanks; 35 planes; and 15,745 officers and men.

In the first 10 days of the Leningrad Front offensive, the Germans suffered the loss of more than 30,000 officers and men, in killed alone. Russian troops destroyed 87 tanks and self-propelled guns; 1,440 railway cars loaded with supplies and ammunition; 86 warehouses of ammunition and fuel; 550 trucks; 260 mortars, and 230 field guns of varied caliber.

Front-line dispatches said tonight that German forces now appear to be powerless to stop the progress of the concentric Russian attack on Riga. Strong German rear guards were reported covering the main retreat toward prepared positions outside of the city.

There has been a marked increase in aerial fighting over the Riga pocket. The Germans are said to have brought up strong fighter formations to cover their final retreat. Soviet dispatches said fierce air battles continue day and the Russo-German front was limited to reconnaissance and local fighting.

From inside Warsaw, Polish Home Army General Bor reported the delivery of more supplies by Russian planes. He said the situation remains unchanged. Artillery duelling continued. The Germans made slight gains in localized areas of the city. (Reuter)

FINNS REPAIR NINE MORE BRIDGES

WASHINGTON, September 29 — The text of today's Finnish communique, as broadcast domestically by the Finnish Radio and reported by the Federal Communications Commission, follows:

"In northern Finland, our troops in the Kuivaniemi direction have reached the River Olhavajoki and have also continued to advance in all other operation directions.

"Nine blown-up road bridges were again repaired during the past 24 hours, and many demolitions and barricades and numerous minefields were cleared.

"The repairing of serious damage caused to the sparse railway and road net continues to demand much time and effort." (OWI)

SOVIETS AND RUMANIANS IN ORADEA MARE

BUCHAREST, September 29 — According to the Rumanian war communique today, the important Transylvanian rail center of Oradea Mare, on the Hungarian frontier, was entered by Soviet and Rumanian troops yesterday.

Oradea Mare stands on one of the main rail routes from Rumania westward. (Reuter)

SOVIETS URGE HUNGARIANS TO REVOLT

MOSCOW, September 29 — The Soviet radio, in a broadcast yesterday urging the Hungarian people to turn against Germany, said that the fate of Hungary was in the people's own hands. The broadcast added:

"Soon the Red Army and the Allied armies will smash the robber system of German Fascism and those who support it. But in this fight for democracy and for the freedom of peoples, the Soviet Union and her Allies consider it important that the peoples themselves should participate.

"Now, when the final blows are being struck at Hitler's hordes, the Hungarian people have the last opportunity to atone for their past sins. There is only one way of atonement: immediate armed opposition against Horthy and Hitler, and the total employment of all Hungary's living and material forces on the side of the liberating Red Army, which has reached Hungary's borders." (PWB)

HUNGARIANS DEMAND PEACE

WASHINGTON, September 29 — Radio Moscow said today that "further demonstrations have taken place in Budapest against Regent Nicholas Horthy," and added that "a large crowd in front of the government palace demanded immediate peace."

The broadcast quoting a report from Ankara, added that "normal production cannot be maintained in many factories of the armament industry in Hungary because workers fled to the country following air raids." It also said that strikes are in progress in some factories in the Hungarian capital. (OWI)

JAP SHIP SUNK; TOKYO ADMITS SHORTAGES

AFHQ SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 29 — General Douglas MacArthur's air arm struck far to the west into Philippine waters on Wednesday and sank a 10,000-ton Japanese transport off the Sulu Archipelago, immediately northeast of Borneo.

Still another freighter, of 5,000 tons, was severely damaged.

The Sulu string of islands lies a little more than 100 miles west of Mindanao.

These successes, following hard on the destruction and battering of 65 Japanese vessels in Philippine waters six days ago, brought domestic appeals from Radio Tokyo today, urging the Japanese people to find substitute materials for products previously carried by ships from conquered territories in the south.

The Japanese news agency, Domei, said Nipponese factories «are now standing at the crossroads» for want of raw materials, and urged the greater use of domestic shale deposits for extraction of badly needed aluminum.

Domei explained the food shortage in Japan by saying that bottoms previously used to bring in food products from the southern islands are now being used to carry bauxite ore, from which aluminum is extracted.

Late accounts of the United States Navy's carrier-based raid carried out over the Philippines disclosed today that two Japanese naval tankers were among the vessels destroyed. One troop transport, three large cargo ships, and three large commercial tankers were also smashed.

Jap Urges Suicide Missions

WASHINGTON, September 29 — A semi-official Japanese spokesman, head of the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, today urged the Japanese people, at home and abroad, to «crash into their objectives with suicidal attacks.»

Speaking over Radio Tokyo, the spokesman posed these questions:

«Carrying out a deliberate crash into the objective, shall we not sink a battleship with a single plane? Shall we not force down a large plane with a small one?»

The speaker asked his audience for wholehearted cooperation, and suggested that they give up the customary greetings when meeting people, morning and night, and substitute a slogan.

Literally translated, the slogan of greeting he suggested was this:

«Spirit of deliberately crashing into the objective.»

Meanwhile, the Japanese Cabinet held a special meeting with Premier Kuniaki Koiso, Domei said the group met for 4½ hours to discuss what were described as «current problems.»

Paoching Defenses Pierced

CHUNGKING, September 29 — The Chinese High Command said today that Japanese forces driving on the Kwangsi capital of Kweilin have infiltrated the town of Paoching, on the rim of the Kwangsi capital city's outer defenses.

An Army spokesman said Chinese defenders were resisting bitterly in hand-to-hand fighting in the streets of the city. Still another Japanese column converging on Kweilin from the south was reported to be only 90 miles from the Kwangsi capital tonight. The Japanese advance has over-run the site of an evacuated American airfield.

The group included electrical and mechanical specialists lent to the Australian army to maintain Canadian-made equipment in Australia.

Davis recalled the promise made by Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King that Canadian forces would be diverted «in strength» to the Pacific after the end of the fighting in Europe. (OWI)

GENERALS IN INDIA KNIGHTED

LONDON, September 29 — Four generals of the British 14th Army on the Indo-Burma frontier were knighted Wednesday night, the Associated Press reported.

Lieut.-General W. J. Slim, land commander, became Knight Commander of the Bath. Lieut.-Generals G. A. P. Scoones, A. F. P. Christison, and M. G. N. Stonford became Knights of the British Empire.

Lord Louis Mountbatten, Supreme Commander in Southeast Asia, commented at his headquarters that this was the first time of which he knew, that four generals of one army were knighted simultaneously. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

ALLIES RESTORE 3,095 MILES OF RAILWAY

ROME, September 29 — American and British railroad-operating engineers of the Allied Control Commission have restored and today are operating 3,095 miles of railroads in liberated Italy.

So speedy has been restoration of railroad service since the beginning of the Allied liberation of Italy that today 7,000 freight cars (goods wagons) are being used weekly to carry civilian goods exclusively. This is in addition to the number of cars used to handle military traffic.

Allied military repair and operating crews, using British and American repair equipment and spare parts, have kept apace of the Allied armies in their advance northward. So quickly have the Allied engineers worked that already they have established a railhead somewhere south of Florence. This line, which was in use less than a month after the city's liberation, brought food for the population there.

Allied rehabilitation of the railroads under the ACC's Transportation Sub-Commission, in cooperation with the Allied Military Railway Service and the Italian Ministry of Communications, has given an important boost to the country's economic life. Some of the items recently shipped over the rehabilitated railroads of Italy in liberated territory have included: wheat, onions, chalk, baskets, boxwood, lemons, vegetables, nuts, apples, tomatoes, melons, household goods, brushes, salt-fish, peaches, horsehair, garlic, dried fish, coal dust, lignite, straw, cement, olive husks, cuttle, olive oil, furniture, grapes, timber, wine, tiles, empty sacks, honey, wood, charcoal, carrubs (a type of bean), citrus, hemp, plows, salt, fertilizer, caustic soda, bran, grain, salt, and pyrites.

Gas for Rome

Typical of the speedy action by the Allied engineers is the reconstruction of a railroad north of Rome which was badly needed because it was the only transportation outlet from a lignite mine, the output of which was necessary to restore cooking-gas service in the capital. Because the rail bridge destroyed by the Germans would take several months to repair, the engineers decided to run the railway roadbed on a nearby highway, which would require only two weeks. The entire project was completed and the first train run over the new spur and roadbed in 17 days.

Gas for Rome

Typical of the speedy action by the Allied engineers is the reconstruction of a railroad north of Rome which was badly needed because it was the only transportation outlet from a lignite mine, the output of which was necessary to restore cooking-gas service in the capital. Because the rail bridge destroyed by the Germans would take several months to repair, the engineers decided to run the railway roadbed on a nearby highway, which would require only two weeks. The entire project was completed and the first train run over the new spur and roadbed in 17 days.

Movement of civilian and military traffic is supervised by Allied operating engineers who before the war were operating experts on British and American railroads. Freight space is allotted by a system of bids received by the Allied dispatchers. They decide, on the basis of economic background provided by Allied and Italian economists, the importance of the cargo. After a bid is accepted a waggon label is issued and is attached to the car carrying the approved cargo.

Civilian freight bidding in the southern areas has already been taken over by Italian Government officials, following the Allied policy of turning back all governmental functions to the Italians themselves as quickly as possible.

As fast as the railroads have been rehabilitated and improvements made, tonnage carried has been increased, mostly for civilian use. Several hundred tons of foodstuffs a day are now coming into Rome by railway. Included in this figure are between 200 and 300 head of cattle each week, which are now arriving in the capital.

Total civilian tonnage moved on liberated Italian railways during the month of August was over 200,000. This included movements of foodstuffs, fuel and petrol, seeds and fertilizer, and miscellaneous items for civilian use. The Bari division alone moved 48,643 tons of civilian goods during August.

An example of credible use of the Italian railways is Sicily, where over 80 per cent of the traffic carried is civilian.

The problem of the shortage of freight cars is being solved by an efficient use of the cars in service, with carefully planned itineraries for return loads, and efficient repair systems with supplies and spare parts coming in from Great Britain and the United States. (UNN)

SOVIET T. U. LEADERS MEET SOCIALISTS

ROME, September 29 — Russian trade union delegates, here at the invitation of the Italian General Confederation of Labor, today met with leading members of the Italian Socialist Party.

The discussion covered a wide range of problems and included such questions as the relations between Italian and Russian workers, the time and other factors involved in the reconstruction of destroyed Soviet industries in the regions over-run by the Germans, the possibility of an early resumption of trade between Russia and Italy, and the advisability of calling an international gathering of trade union organizations as suggested by the Italian Socialist Party.

Asked if the Russian workers are aware of the part played by Italian Patriots in the liberation of their country, Tarasov, the delegation head, said the Patriots' cause is a "sacred cause" well known to all Russians, and especially to the Ukrainians.

In reply to another question, Tarasov said that, whereas in pre-war days from 16 to 20 per cent of Russian industrial workers were women, the percentage has now risen to 50 and, in some industries, even 70 per cent. (UNN)

SOVIET AND ITALIAN T. U. LEADERS CONFER

ROME, September 29 — Italian workers were never in sympathy with Fascism, declared Achille Grandi, one of the general secretaries of the Italian General Confederation of Labor, at a meeting today between delegates of the Soviet Trade Union Council and Italian Trade Union representatives, sponsored by the Confederation.

The Fascist Régime could never dispense with special emergency laws for fear of a general insurrection, he pointed out in support of his declaration.

Today, the Italian people look forward to the future with greater hope since the Roosevelt-Churchill joint statement on Italy, which foreshadowed an improvement in conditions of Italy.

M. P. Tarasov, the head of the Soviet delegation and Secretary of the Central Council of Soviet Trade Unions, sent a message of greeting to the Italian Patriots who along with the Allied armies, are fighting the common enemy.

He told how the Russian people felt great satisfaction on learning of the strikes carried out by the Italian workers in March, 1943. (UNN)

ROOSEVELT DENOUNCES ARGENTINA

WASHINGTON, September 29 — President Franklin Roosevelt today denounced the Argentine Government for what he termed the growth of Nazi-Fascist influences developing in that country at a time when Nazi forces are facing defeat in Germany.

President Roosevelt said it was a paradox that Fascist methods should be used in a country where the majority of people were democratically inclined, and declared that Fascist influences are trying to split up the Pan-American bloc.

The President charged Argentina with repudiating six inter-American obligations, and with undermining the American system of defense.

Argentina, as well as all other nations, neutrals and belligerents alike, will be judged by the parts they play in the war, the President declared.

Elaborating on the Argentine Government's repudiation of "solemn inter-American obligations," the President added:

"Unless we now demonstrate a capacity to develop a tradition of respect for such obligations among civilized nations, there can be little hope for a system of international security theoretically created to maintain the principles for which our peoples are today making sacrifices to the limit of their resources, both human and material." BRAZILIAN GENERALS SIGN "GOLDEN BOOK"

WITH 5TH ARMY, September 29 — Major General Dutra, Brazil's Minister of War, and Major General Mascarenhas de Moraes, Commanding General of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force now attached to the U. S. 5th Army, yesterday signed the Golden Book of Florence at a ceremony in the historic Palazzo Vecchio.

Brigadier General Edgar Hume, who escorted the Brazilian visitors, pointed out to them that they were the first Brazilians to sign the famous book since Emperor Dom Pedro.

After signing, General Mascarenhas turned to General Hume and said, "In the name of the Minister and myself, I wish to express our thanks for this great honor. This is another sign of the solidarity of our peoples, who are united in the defense of liberty and justice."

Attendants at the Palazzo were garbed in medieval costume as the two Brazilian generals and members of their party went to the cathedral of Florence where, in the absence of the Cardinal-Archbishop, they were received by the Vicar General, Monsignor Tirapani, who later took them to the churches of Santa Maria Novella and Santa Croce. They also visited the Medici Palace.

After lunch at General Hume's headquarters, the party visited a plant now used as an ordnance shop, and then attended a concert by the Florentine Symphony Orchestra at the Palazzo Vecchio.

General Dutra flew from Brazil to Italy to inspect troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force now serving with the 5th Army. (PRO)

LONDON, September 29 — The Foreign Office announced last night that the Argentine Ambassador to London had delivered a note to the British Government stating that war criminals would be barred from Argentina, and would be prohibited from depositing funds or acquiring property in the country.

The Chancery Office gave press correspondents the text of the note which Miguel A. Carcano, the Argentine Ambassador to the Court of St. James', handed to the British Foreign Office on September 26.

The action of the Argentine Chancery followed by only a few hours the reiteration in Washington by Secretary of State Cordell Hull, that the United States would view with grave concern offers of asylum to enemy leaders and their henchmen by neutral nations.

Secretary Hull said that the progress of the Allied military forces had decided the United States to call this matter again urgently to the attention of a number of neutral governments. (OWI)

UNITED NATIONS

DUMBARTON OAKS JOINT STATEMENT ISSUED

WASHINGTON, September 28 — With the six weeks' talks on post-war security between Britain, America, and China opening today, a joint statement was issued at Dumbarton Oaks by Under Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, the chairman of the British delegation, Sir Alexander Cadogan, and the Soviet Ambassador, Andrei A. Gromyko.

After announcing the completion of the Anglo-American-Soviet conversations, the statement said:

"These conversations have been useful and have led to a large measure of agreement on recommendations for the general framework of the organization, in particular for the machinery required to maintain peace and security."

The three delegations will now make reports to their respective governments, which will consider these reports and issue a joint statement in due course.

It is now considered likely that a conference of all the United Nations may be called before the end of the year, based on today's joint statement and a general conviction in Washington that the ground has been prepared for the formation of an effective post-war organization to preserve peace.

Talks With China Begin

The post-war security talks, which entered their second phase today with the Chinese delegates taking the place of the Russian delegates, are expected to last about 10 days. In an introductory speech, Secretary of State Cordell Hull paid tribute to the wisdom and experience in international affairs brought to the meeting by the Chinese delegation.

Dr. Wellington Koo, chief of the Chinese delegation, said today that the Chinese plan for an international peace and security organization is similar to the British and American plans.

Dr. Koo, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, said that having studied the American and British plans for a world security organization, he saw no obstacle to general agreement. The only differences between them and the Chinese plan were a matter of degree.

In addition, the Chinese plan carries a specific and detailed definition of aggression which is not contained in the other plans, Koo explained. Potential aggressors should be put on notice in advance as to what acts will be regarded as offensive to international order, he added.

In the new talks with the Chinese delegation, the British delegation is under the chairmanship of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador to the U. S., as Sir Alexander Cadogan, hitherto chairman, can no longer be spared from the Foreign Office at London. (OWI - Reuter)

ROOSEVELT LISTS GERMAN CONTROL POINTS

WASHINGTON, September 29 — President Roosevelt announced at his press conference here today that he had sent a letter to Leo Crowley, Federal Economic Administrator, outlining eight basic points for controlling post-war Germany.

The letter to Crowley specified that economic studies be accelerated so that the United States Government may participate with the other United Nations in seeing to it that Germany does not again become a menace to the world. A paraphrase of the eight points follows:

1. Export Control. With a view to encouraging private trade without interfering with the prosecution of the war against Japan, we should relax controls over exports to the fullest extent compatible with our continuing war objectives, particularly that of defeating Japan.

2. Disposition of Strategic and Critical War Materials. should be carried on, as it has been in the past, in close integration with our armed forces.

3. Lend-Lease. Lend-Lease supplies should continue to be furnished in whatever amounts are necessary for the most effective prosecution of the war. Until the complete defeat of Germany and Japan, the flow of Lend-Lease aid should be continued in the amounts necessary to enable the combined strength of all the United Nations to defeat our common enemies as quickly as possible. The FEA should aid in carrying out this policy to the fullest extent.

4. Surplus Property. As you have done in the past, you should continue to take every reasonable measure to see to it that no unnecessary surpluses develop out of the procurement by the FEA for Lend-Lease, UNRRA or other purposes.

In connection with procurement or production for Lend-Lease, or relief and rehabilitation purposes, you should continue to investigate and take up supplies of other Government agencies which are or may be surplus.

7. Control of War-Making Power of Germany. You have been making studies from the economic standpoint of what should be done after the surrender of Germany to control its power and capacity to make war in the future. This work must be accelerated, under the guidance of the State Department. You should furnish assistance in work and, when requested to do so, in personnel, by making available specialists to work with military authorities, the Foreign Service, and such other American agencies, and officials as participate with the other United Nations in seeing to it that Germany does not again become a menace to succeeding generations.

8. Reconstruction. It is in the national interest of the United States, as well as in the joint interest of the U. S. and other peace-loving nations, that the destruction and devastation of war be repaired and that the foundations for a secure peace be laid.

I understand that you are also preparing to submit for my consideration major proposals along these lines. In varying degrees, every working man, every farmer, and every industry in the United States has a stake in the production and flow of manufactured goods, agricultural products, and other supplies to all the other countries of the world. To produce the largest amount of useful goods and services at home, we should export and import as much as possible.

GERMANY WILL BE A CONTINUING DANGER

LONDON, September 29 — Germany will be a continuing problem even after her defeat, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today in a session which ended a two-day debate on the European political situation. He emphasized that it was the key to the foreign policy Britain must pursue.

Eden stated that the peace to be imposed on Germany is a peace which takes every precaution to prevent Germany from having an opportunity to start another war. "What we mean by unconditional surrender is, that we are not prepared to make a negotiated peace with Germany," the Foreign Secretary said.

The reasons for demanding unconditional surrender are based on the experience of history and on the interpretation which Germany placed on the 14 Points after the last war. German military authorities practiced ingenious, and to a certain extent, successful evasion and obstruction of all the points.

The German General Staff, Eden asserted, recognizing the inevitability of defeat, are already thinking in terms of peace.

Talks With China Begin

The post-war security talks, which entered their second phase today with the Chinese delegates taking the place of the Russian delegates, are expected to last about 10 days. In an introductory speech, Secretary of State Cordell Hull paid tribute to the wisdom and experience in international affairs brought to the meeting by the Chinese delegation.

Dr. Wellington Koo, chief of the Chinese delegation, said today that the Chinese plan for an international peace and security organization is similar to the British and American plans.

Dr. Koo, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, said that having studied the American and British plans for a world security organization, he saw no obstacle to general agreement. The only differences between them and the Chinese plan were a matter of degree.

In addition, the Chinese plan carries a specific and detailed definition of aggression which is not contained in the other plans, Koo explained. Potential aggressors should be put on notice in advance as to what acts will be regarded as offensive to international order, he added.

In the new talks with the Chinese delegation, the British delegation is under the chairmanship of Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador to the U. S., as Sir Alexander Cadogan, hitherto chairman, can no longer be spared from the Foreign Office at London. (OWI – Reuter)

ROOSEVELT LISTS GERMAN CONTROL POINTS

WASHINGTON, September 29 — President Roosevelt announced at his press conference here today that he had sent a letter to Leo Crowley, Federal Economic Administrator, outlining eight basic points for controlling post-war Germany.

The letter to Crowley specified that economic studies be accelerated so that the United States Government may participate with the other United Nations in seeing to it that Germany does not again become a menace to the world. A paraphrase of the eight points follows:

1. Export Control. With a view to encouraging private trade without interfering with the prosecution of the war against Japan, we should relax controls over exports to the fullest extent compatible with our continuing war objectives, particularly that of defeating Japan.

2. Disposition of Strategic and Critical War Materials. In view of the curtailment which is to be made in our war production after the German phase of the war, the FEA should consult with the appropriate supply agencies with a view to making an appropriate cut in its foreign procurement program for strategic and critical materials needed in the prosecution of the war.

The adjustment of this reduced program should be made in such a way as to prevent undue and unnecessary financial losses to American taxpayers, best to preserve our foreign relations, and to strengthen our foundation for a high level of international trade in the future.

3. Preclusive Buying. The FEA has been buying abroad materials needed by the Axis to produce munitions and other war materials, in order to keep our enemies from getting them.

I understand that the peak of this program already is passed, as a result of the victories which have been won by the United Nations. The FEA should continue to take full necessary steps to prevent Japan from getting strategic and critical materials for the Japanese war program, but it should limit its preclusive purchasing program achieving that end, observing, of course, existing commitments.

4. Economic Warfare. The FEA's studies of the enemies' potential and other phases of economic warfare should be reduced and focused on the war against Japan. This work Department. You should furnish assistance in work and, when requested to do so, in personnel, by making available specialists to work with military authorities, the Foreign Service, and such other American agencies, and officials as participate with the other United Nations in seeing to it that Germany does not again become a menace to succeeding generations.

5. Reconstruction. It is in the national interest of the United States, as well as in the joint interest of the U. S. and other peace-loving nations, that the destruction and devastation of war be repaired and that the foundations for a secure peace be laid.

I understand that you are also preparing to submit for my consideration major proposals along these lines. In varying degrees every working man, every farmer, and every industry in the United States has a stake in the production and flow of manufactured goods, agricultural products, and other supplies to all the other countries of the world. To produce the largest amount of useful goods and services at home, we should export and import as much as possible.

With this objective in mind, you should continue to take such action as is necessary or desirable in accordance with the powers delegated to the FEA and in conformity with the foreign policy of the United States as defined by the Secretary of State. (OWI – Reuter)

The German General Staff, Eden asserted, recognizing the inevitability of defeat, are already thinking in terms of the next war. It is the reemergence of a military Germany that will be a continuing danger.

Discussing post-war relationship with western European powers, Eden said that the British Government were ready to enter into close association with them to guarantee the future peace of Europe. "It would be an important element in unifying action against any potential aggressor," he said.

Britain wants to see France an equal and potent partner in all her affairs, Eden stated, adding that the Allies are already discussing the point at which there should be a recognition of the French Provisional Government. (Reuter)

GERMAN ATROCITIES IN ESTONIA REVEALED

NEW YORK, September 29 — Correspondent W. H. Lawrence, in a dispatch from Moscow appearing in today's New York Times, said that the Moscow newspaper Izvestia yesterday described how advance Red Army units reached a German concentration camp near Kloga, Estonia, where four huge funeral pyres, containing the bodies of an estimated 2,000 men, women, and children, were still smouldering.

The dispatch continued, in part:

"The news of this latest atrocity was presented in the form of interviews with some concentration camp victims who escaped and reached army units, as well as with Red Army men who found the pyres in the forest.

"Most of the victims were described as intellectuals from Vilna, Riga, and Tallinn. But Izvestia said there also were a number of Soviet prisoners-of-war, including some who had been moved from Tallinn to Kloga on September 19, the day on which the last executions were carried out." (OWI)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 29 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied troops have continued to strengthen the flanks of the Nijmegen salient. Enemy counter-attacks from Schinadel were driven back, and our forces made a limited advance toward Herdogenbosch.

Our bridgehead over the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal was extended.

In the Epinal-Belfort sector, we have made substantial advances despite increased enemy aggressiveness. Northeast of Epinal, the villages of Rult and Destford were taken in an advance of several miles. A number of villages in the northwest approaches to the Belfort Pass are also in our hands. A strong counter-attack was repulsed with heavy loss to the enemy.

Our troops continued to close in on Calais yesterday against heavy opposition. We hold all the high ground dominating the city, and have captured the citadel. German fortifications in the port were attacked by heavy bombers during the morning. Gun positions in Cap Gris Nez were heavily bombed in the evening.

Air:

More than 1,000 heavy bombers, with strong fighter-escort, attacked industrial plants at Merseburg, a synthetic oil plant and a railway yard at Merseburg, and a tank factory at Kassel yesterday. Thirty-six enemy aircraft were destroyed in combat. Forty-nine bombers and 12 fighters are missing. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 29 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in the direction of Riga, our troops continued their battles for improvement of their positions, and also occupied over 30 populated localities, including Elkazhe, Svite, Partazhi, and Panteri.

South and southeast of Turka, a town in Drohobycs region, our troops with fighting forged ahead in the difficult conditions of mountainous, wooded terrain, and occupied over 60 populated localities, including Visovska-Vishnye, Krasnye, Mohnate, Orave, Kosiele, Galoveshko, Ribakovy, Statko, Ludvikoshko, and Rizhku, and the railway stations of Grebeno, Selenyanka, and Rozhonka.

West and southwest of Delatyn, a town of the Stanislav region, our troops, overcoming enemy resistance and engineering obstacles in mountainous, wooded terrain, occupied over 40 populated localities, including Osnaloge, Borsuchnye, Selnye, Polenitse, Varovka, and Otzheluzhe, and the railway stations of Borsuchnye, Selenye, Voronyenko, and Varovka.

In the northern part of Transylvania, our troops broke up enemy resistance, captured the town of Targul-Mures, and also occupied in fighting over 50 other populated localities, including Jarmutene, Tetele, Tabiti, Karidejaja, Jarde-Muresh, Nagy-Ernyoes, and Torkpandye, and the railway stations of Torkchipaje, Yirneshke, Simuse, Armonnare, Mushal, and Murnie.

Our advancing units forced the River Murusel, and on its western bank occupied a bridgehead with several populated localities, including Arsalnye, Vaire-Santeman, Imach, Kortele, and Remeteeh.

On the other sectors of the front, reconnaissance and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 25, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 29 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 31 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 29 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

American troops of the 5th Army, in a most successful day's fighting, have captured the three mountains of Monte Bastione, Monte Oggioli, and Monte Canda, which dominate the main Florence-Bologna Road. Farther east, American troops have also made important gains on the Firenzuola-Imola Road.

In the Adriatic sector, the 8th Army have been engaged in very fierce fighting in which the enemy made a number of heavy counter-attacks in the high ground north of the Rubicon.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Yesterday's operations were severely restricted by continued unfavorable weather conditions, which forced cancellation of both heavy and medium bomber missions.

Fighter-bombers carried out small-scale attacks on rail lines and roads along the northwest Italian coast. Fighters of the Balkan Air Force made offensive sweeps over Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece. Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Adriatic and targets on the Yugoslav coast.

MAAF flew approximately 100 sorties. None of our aircraft is missing. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 29 — Strong groups of Patriots, coordinating their activities with the Allied advance, are attacking the Germans behind their lines, in order to hasten the liberation of a few localities. A special bulletin, reported that the Bellaria and Sant'Agata coastal sectors were in the hands of the Patriots when the 8th Army arrived.

After mopping up remnants of the Nazi-Fascists, Patriots made arrangements for the reestablishment of order in the above-mentioned localities.

In the sector between Spezia and Parma, Patriots attacked the garrison at Losignano in daylight. For more than two hours, bitter street and even house-to-house fighting went on.

After the battle against the Germans which took place September 9 in the vicinity of Saint Bernard Pass, the Garibaldi Brigades operating in this sector regrouped their forces and took the offensive. Two large German vehicles, loaded with troops and munitions were destroyed, causing casualties. The Piave Brigade, operating in a different sector, has completed regrouping and the Cesare Battista and General Perotti Battalions fused into one unit.

Among the most important acts of sabotage was the interruption of the Milan-Turin railway line. A train carrying German troops was derailed.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 795021

The spirit of revolt against the Germans is spreading to the civilian population, and in many cities strikes have taken place. At Milan, Turin, Novara, Bologna, Genoa, and Reggio Emilia, many workers stayed away from work for periods of varying length. In the Lake Maggiore sector, strikes were very successful.

In cities like Pallanza, Stresa, and Arona, not yet liberated by the Patriots but within striking distance, all work has ceased. Since the Germans are attempting to arrest all men between 16 and 60 years of age, many are taking to the Maquis to avoid being arrested.

Both in the above-mentioned places and elsewhere, Nazi-Fascist persecution and reprisals serve only to increase the number of those who are uniting with the Patriots. Many Italian citizens residing abroad have crossed the Alpine border to enlist in the Garibaldi Brigades. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 29 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The enemy attempt at overcoming the obstacles in Holland formed by the rivers Maas and Rhine by a large-scale use of airborne troops at outflanking the West Wall from a northerly direction and penetrating into Germany between Emden and Münster, has been frustrated.

The British 2nd Army, attempts to broaden the thin spearhead which had been pushed forward over Eindhoven and Nijmegen in a westerly and easterly direction.

Yesterday, grim fighting was in progress, particularly at the Dutch frontier, east of Nijmegen and west of Venloo.

Enemy activities also increased between Antwerp and Hertogenbosch. The enemy's initial successes were limited or frustrated by a counter-attack of the German reserves. More than 40 English tanks were destroyed.

The activities of both sides on the remaining parts of the western front up to Metz receded to the background. The enemy, having been thrown back westward from the infiltration north of Luneville, the Americans yesterday counter-attacked north of Nancy. The counter-attack yielded but little ground, and serious losses were inflicted on the enemy.

In the foothills of the western Vosges, the Franco-American attacks, particularly on both sides of Epinal and west of Belfort, increased in grimness. Extremely grim and fluctuating fighting in forest land developed, which resulted only east of the Ruhr in a withdrawal.

Calais is the only fortress of those held by us in the enemy's rear — as Dunkirk, Calais, the coastal artillery group of Cap Gris Nez, Channel Islands, Lorient, St. Nazaire, La Rochelle, Gironde de Nord, Gironde de Sud — which is being attacked, for the time being. Extremely grim fighting is in progress. At some points, the enemy approached to the borders of the town. Officers who summoned the garrison to surrender were sent back. In the other fortresses, our troops, by successful counter-attacks, completed their stocks in arms and supplies.

Italy:

In Central Italy, northwest of Firenzuola, yesterday, Mount Battiglia, which the enemy had captured on September 27, was subjected to an all-round attack. We succeeded in cutting off the enemy garrison and frustrating all relief attempts.

On the Adriatic front, the enemy continued his strong tank attacks throughout the night and the whole day, supported by planes attacking in waves.

The German divisions repelled all attacks and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy, thus achieving a full defensive success.

On the summits of the northern forest Carpathians, numerous Bolshevist attacks were frustrated, and infiltrations eliminated in counter-attacks. Between the northern borders of the Carpathians and Mitau, no major operations are reported.

Light German naval forces repeatedly shelled successfully Soviet positions on the eastern coast of the Bight of Riga.

In the northern sector of the eastern front, troops of the army and the Waffen SS, in the course of fighting which lasted for a fortnight, effectively supported by formations of the Air Force, frustrated attempts at breaking through made by 180 rifle divisions, numerous tanks, and quick Bolshevist units in the course of their withdrawal. They inflicted heavy losses in men and material on the enemy.

From September 14 to September 27, the Bolsheviks lost more than 1,000 tanks, the rolling material of five tank corps. Fighters and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force destroyed 698 Soviet planes. The command and the troops engaged in this grim defensive battle distinguished themselves.

In the waters off northern Norway, escort vessels of a German convoy sank an enemy motor assault boat and shot down four planes. A German vessel was lost by a bomb hit. Three other planes were brought down by armed ferry boats in the same waters.

Air:

The enemy disappointment at the unsuccessful attempt at penetrating western Germany over northern Holland was vented in increased terror attacks on German towns. In central Germany, serious damage was caused in residential quarters of Kassel, Magdeburg, Dessau, and some localities in the Halle-Leipzig sector. Last night, British planes attacked Brunswick.

On September 28, the Anglo-American Air Force lost 75 planes, 59 of which were four-engined bombers, by the action of fighters and anti-aircraft batteries of the Air Force. (Radio Berlin)

Victorious Counter-Attacks in Italy: In the central sector of the front, northeast of Firenzuola, the Germans launched a powerful counter-attack and reestablished their main defence line, evacuated a few days ago. The British armored forces were unable to sustain the momentum of this attack, and had to withdraw southward. Monte Battaglia, which was considered by the enemy as a key position, was stormed by German infantry. Fighting is in progress to annihilate the last remnants of the British garrison holding out there. The Allied troops were also compelled to evacuate San Mauro, in the Adriatic sector. The Allied plan to break through the German defences came to grief because of Kesselring's successful action.

Artillery duels took place in the Tyrrhenian sector.

Allied Plans in West Upset: The terrific losses suffered by the Allies in the West have upset the Allied plans, as the Anglo-Americans are no longer in a position to launch any large-scale attacks.

Socialist Guilt: If the Italian Socialists had not obstructed the war effort in the last war, they might have avoided the present war. It was because of their unpatriotic attitude that Mussolini left the Socialist Party in 1914. Otherwise, there might have been no Fascism in Italy.

AIRBORNE TROOPS AT ARNHEM WITHDRAWN BRITISH IN NEW ATTACK TOWARD MEUSE

SHAEF, September 27 — Troops of the British 1st Airborne Division, who for 10 days withstood constant attacks by superior German forces at Arnhem, have been withdrawn to the south bank of the lower Rhine, it was announced here tonight. The withdrawal across the river was carried out mainly during Monday night, and has now been completed.

The airborne troops, ferried back across the Rhine, have [illegible] with other selected Allied forces along the

On the northwestern flank of the Allied corridor, British troops are facing the German 245th and 59th Infantry Divisions. The 59th Division appears to have been given the task of protecting the German flank for a withdrawal of all elements south of the Meuse River.

The Germans cut the corridor's original supply road between St. Oedenrode and Veghel, approximately 11 miles north of Eindhoven, but American airborne troops and British tanks drove them back. Allied engineers quickly cleared the mined areas and convoys continued northward. An alternate supply route was opened to Nijmegen by British armor striking along the west side of the corridor. In this operation, German forces were pushed out of Oss, eight miles north of Veghel.

On the eastern flank of the Nijmegen-Eindhoven salient, the German 107th Panzer Brigade and two SS panzer divisions are opposing the Allied advance. Some of these German units, having been resupplied, were thrown into action and have lost heavily in men and equipment.

Link-Up Is Completed

West of the corridor, the German salient in the Arendonck area east of Turnhout has been eliminated, and the town is firmly in British hands. British and Canadian troops have linked up in this area.

Strong Allied elements are north of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal from their bridgehead and are in the vicinity of Ryckevorsel, west of Turnhout.

On the American 1st Army front, light to moderate German artillery fire was encountered in the Aachen-Stolberg area of Germany. Allied troops attacked German pillboxes and other fortifications northeast of Rotgen.

To the south, Greiveldange was taken in a 10-mile advance from the city of Luxembourg. American troops in this sector are now one mile from the German border.

In the Metz area, troops of the American 3rd Army seized a bridge leading into a key bastion in the chain of fortresses guarding Metz, on the west bank of the Moselle River. The assault followed a fighter-bomber attack and a day-long artillery barrage.

The Germans staged two counter-attacks southeast of Dieuze, both of which were repulsed with heavy losses.

AIRBORNE TROOPS AT ARNHEM WITHDRAWN BRITISH IN NEW ATTACK TOWARD MEUSE

SHAEF, September 27 — Troops of the British 1st Airborne Division, who for 10 days withstood constant attacks by superior German forces at Arnhem, have been withdrawn to the south bank of the lower Rhine, it was announced here tonight. The withdrawal across the river was carried out mainly during Monday night, and has now been completed.

The airborne troops, ferried back across the Rhine, have now linked up with a fair-sized Allied force along the southern bank. Some of the wounded Allied soldiers were left behind and are being taken care of by the Germans. The Allied casualty figure is not known, but it was announced here that heavy casualties were inflicted on German SS units opposing them.

Bad weather made the withdrawal necessary, as it prevented adequate reinforcements and supplies from being dropped to relieve the encircled force. Their stand at Arnhem tied down superior and hard-fighting German forces and enabled the British 2nd Army to hold the vital Nijmegen bridge over the Waal River. The Waal is twice as wide as the lower Rhine, and the securing of a good crossing paved the way for a powerful build-up east of this river barrier at the gateway to the Reich.

British Reach Meuse

Driving eastward from the supply corridor, the British 2nd Army launched a new offensive, reached the Meuse (Maas) River, and was closing in to form a solid line. British troops are along the river on a five-mile wide stretch, three miles from the German frontier. At Gennep, 10 miles south of Nijmegen, they found the bridge blown up by the retreating Germans. Far to the south, Belgian and British troops hold a 10-mile stretch of the Meuse through Maeseyck, eight miles north of Vegnel.

On the eastern flank of the Nijmegen-Eindhoven salient, the German 107th Panzer Brigade and two SS panzer divisions are opposing the Allied advance. Some of these German units, having been refitted, were thrown into action and have lost heavily in men and equipment.

Link-Up Is Completed

West of the corridor, the German salient in the Arendonck area east of Turnhout has been eliminated, and the town is firmly in British hands. British and Canadian troops have linked up in this area.

In the Metz area, troops of the American 3rd Army seized a bridge leading into a key bastion in the chain of fortresses guarding Metz, on the west bank of the Moselle River. The assault followed a fighter-bomber attack and a day-long artillery barrage.

SHAEF, September 27 — The Luftwaffe, in an all-out attempt last night to smash the vital Waal River crossing at Nijmegen, used everything from bullets to glider or pick-a-back-type bombs in their assault, a Reuter dispatch reported late tonight.

Allied traffic was halted for a short time while the debris was cleared around a 20-foot crater near one approach. (Reuter)

A.A.F. PRISONERS FROM RUMANIA IN U. S.

WASHINGTON, September 27 — The War Department announced today that 1,613 officers and men of the U. S. Army Air Force who had been prisoners of war in Rumania have arrived in New York City from Europe.

Each of the repatriated men, the Department added, has been given a 30-day furlough.

The vessel bringing home the ex-prisoners was met by a special ship which put aboard the first mail many of them had received in over a year.

Wounded men from Rumanian prison camps have been arriving by air and boat for the past several weeks. (OWI)

GERMAN WAR PLANTS HEAVILY ATTACKED

LONDON, September 27 — War production plants and railyards in the Rhineland and western Germany were battered today by 2,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators in what was described as a wide-spread softening-up bombardment just ahead of the Allied ground forces.

At the same time, RAF Bomber Command carried out the fifth attack in seven days on German fortified positions in Calais, dropping 1,500 tons of bombs. Today's bomb load brought the total weight for the five raids to 7,500 tons.

Targets attacked today by the big American bombers were at Kassel, Ludwigshafen, Cologne, and Mainz — all in western Germany. The railyards at Oppau also were hammered by the Forts and Liberators in the third straight day of heavy attacks against German communications and war plants behind the western front.

Other formations of RAF bombers, with a strong fighter-plane cover, bombed a synthetic oil production plant five miles north of Essen, as well as other military objectives in the Ruhr area. All of these targets have been attacked by the RAF in recent weeks. The attacks were so successful that at one time during this month eight of the plants were out of action and another plant was turning out only half of its normal output.

One formation of 8th USAAF Liberators, attacking in western Germany, encountered more than 100 enemy planes, while other Allied bombers reported meeting no enemy aircraft.

An official announcement tonight said that fighter planes accounted for 31 planes, and bomber gunners five; five others were destroyed in ground strafing. Forty-two bombers and seven fighters are reported missing.

Returning bomber crews said heavy flak barrages were encountered over Cologne and Ludwigshafen.

The Air Ministry announced here today that last night RAF four-engined bombers attacked communications centers and industrial plants at Frankfort and Karlsruhe in southern Germany.

Maximum Enemy Interception

Today's efforts at interception by the Luftwaffe were regarded as the maximum effort by the German Air Force to counter the Allied threat to Germany. The German Air Force has lost 84 planes in two days, a Reuter report said tonight.

These losses were inflicted on Monday and yesterday as the Luftwaffe, which is now concentrated at forward airdromes in the Ruhr area, sought to strike back at the Allied thrust into Holland.

Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF today continued their unremitting attacks on Rhineland communications and strong-points in the path of the American 1st and 3rd Armies.

In the last 10 days, fighter-bombers have flown more than 3,600 sorties and destroyed or damaged more than 621 railroad cars, 41 tanks, and 16 enemy aircraft, in the air. They have also wrecked 383 trucks, disabled 89 locomotives, and silenced 85 guns, as well as attacking many Siegfried

To stop the Germans from becoming aware of what was happening, Wood said, the British 2nd Army on the south bank of the river laid down a shattering box barrage all afternoon.

"The first party was to set off at 2200 hours," the dispatch continued. "Little packets of sulfanilimide and morphine were distributed to each man. We tore up blankets and wrapped them around our boots to muffle the sound of walking through the underbrush. The password was 'John Bull.' If we became separated, each man was to make his way by compass due south until he reached the river.

"Our major led the way and linked our party together by getting everyone to hold the jacket tail of the soldier in front of him. Our infiltrating column had an absurd resemblance to some children's game.

"The area was half light with the glow of fires from burning houses around us when we set out. We went through a supposed enemy pocket without hearing a shot except for a distant sniper's bullet. Another group ran into a machine-gun position with a fixed line of fire across their path. Another had to silence a group of Germans with a burst of Sten fire and hand grenades. But we all got through without the Germans' realizing that we were doing anything more than normal night patrolling.

"The worst part was waiting two hours by the river until our turn came for assault boats to ferry us across. The Germans, if not definitely suspicious, were inquisitive, as they kept sending up flares. It was vital to lie flat and motionless. We lay shivering on a soaking field with a cold rain drizzling down.

"Our actual crossing was quiet, but soon after it seemed that the Germans had guessed what was going on, because they mortared and shelled heavily along the shallow river.

"Men whose turn for a place in the boats had come after hours of waiting insisted on staying under fire a little longer so that the wounded could go first. Any wounded left behind would automatically become prisoners of war, so many sick and limping left their beds to take a chance with the escape parties.

"This epic stand of the British airborne soldiers ended as it had been fought — with honor and high courage. They can now sleep soundly for the first time in eight days and nights. They still have same objective as they have always had and they still mean to get in there. They called their mission 'Operation Berlin.'" (OWI)

ARNHEM WITHDRAWAL MADE IN SMALL GROUPS

LONDON, September 27 — The withdrawal of the British 1st Airborne Division from Arnhem began Monday, when orders were received to break out of the forest citadel on the northern banks of the lower Rhine and join with British 2nd Army forces on the south bank, Alan Wood, combined Allied press correspondent, wrote in a delayed dispatch.

Giving details of the withdrawal, Wood wrote:

«Our commander decided against a concerted assault on the Germans around us. Instead, the plan was to split up into little groups 10 to 20 strong and set out along different routes at two-minute intervals and walk through the German lines under cover of darkness. Patrols went out earlier tying bits of white parachute tape to trees to mark the way.»

STATE OF SIEGE PROCLAIMED IN HOLLAND

LONDON, September 27 — A state of siege has been proclaimed in the liberated sections of the Netherlands, the Dutch news agency, Aneta, reported yesterday.

The proclamation, containing the provisions of the agreement between the Netherlands, Great Britain, and the United States, established the supreme authority of Allied headquarters. It declared:

«It is essential that military operations which have already led to the liberation of part of our country be continued by our Allies with all their power until the enemy is totally defeated and expelled from the entire territory of the Kingdom. You are hereby called upon to obey promptly and fully all orders which the Commander of the Allied forces may be required to issue, forced by military considerations.» (OWI)

GERMANS STRIVE TO HOLD 5TH ARMY

ADVANCE APHQ, ITALY, September 27 — German forces, reinforced by elements of three infantry divisions, have intensified their desperate resistance in the center of the Italian front, and in a ferocious and costly counter-attack have driven back 5th Army forces from advance positions 21 miles south of Bologna, it was announced here today.

The enemy counter-attack, accompanied by heavy fire from 280-millimeter and 170-millimeter field pieces, struck the American forces on Monday night, and dislodged them from their positions on a hill some four miles east of the main Florence-Bologna road well to the north of the Futa Pass, today's announcement said. Monte La Fine, more than 3,000 feet high and two miles to the east of the lost positions, is still firmly held by 5th Army troops, it was said. Three fierce enemy counter-attacks were repelled in this sector during daylight hours Monday.

On the Adriatic coast also, where 8th Army forces are battling to break through enemy forces into the open reaches of the Plain of the Po, fighting took on a grim tone yesterday, with savage counter-attacks and the appearance of a new German weapon, an 88-millimeter anti-tank gun of considerable effectiveness.

British troops have now crossed the Rubicon along a five-mile stretch, from the Emilia Highway at Santarcangelo southward to the hamlet of Cornacchiara, and are within 3 1/2 miles of Savignano, where the Rimini-Bologna railroad and highway cross the Fiumicino River, nine miles northwest of Rimini. Enemy forces, supported by Tiger tanks, are resisting fiercely the British pressure westward.

On the eastern flank of the 5th Army's advance through the Apennines toward Bologna and the center of the Lombardy Plain, Monte Acuto, 15 miles from Imola along the Santerno River Valley, was reported captured yesterday. Meanwhile, British troops of the 5th Army had reached Boscoli, 21 miles from Forli, and only some 30 miles west of 8th Army forces pushing west from Rimini.

Other 5th Army forces, working their way northward through the mountains north of the Futa Pass, were reported yesterday to have captured Monte Beni and the southern slopes of Monte Freddi, one mile north of the junction point of the Firenzuola Road and Highway 65, and 24 miles south of Bologna itself. Still farther west, on the parallel road from Prato to Bologna through Vernio and Castiglione, 5th Army troops had reached La Storia, some 29 miles from Bologna, it was reported.

Brazilian troops and the American 92nd Infantry Division, fighting on the left flank of the 5th Army, were engaged in patrol actions to probe enemy strongpoints in a sector where grim and bitter fighting has ensued as a result of increasing enemy strength, it was stated. (PRO)

R. N. DESTROYERS SUPPORT 8TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 27 — Five British destroyers and two naval gunboats operating in the Adriatic have fired nearly 8,000 shells in support of 8th Army forces driving northward along the coast, it was announced here today.

The destroyers, the HMS Laurel, Eudine, Urchin, Kimberly, and Lookout, and the gunboats, the HMS Scarab and Aphis, have been employed since August 28 in shelling enemy batteries, mobile artillery, troop movements, and transport.

It was revealed today that Allied light coastal forces operating in the Gulf of Genoa have sunk 64 enemy vessels in these waters since inauguration of patrol action last December. These forces have reported as probably sunk 13 other enemy vessels, while 35 were said to have been damaged.

Four enemy vessels were captured in this period. (PRO)

It was revealed today that the amphibious assault which destroyed the garrison of Himara, Albania, more than a month ago, had made the use of the Albanian coast road so precarious that German forces had been supplied by sea.

In other naval action in the Adriatic, the US destroyers Edison and Madison shelled enemy artillery and troop concentrations in the Ventimiglia area in northeastern Italy, while the British destroyer HMS Lookout bombarded enemy guns, a tank, and parachute troops north of Rimini. Light coastal forces sank four enemy craft in the northern Adriatic on the night of September 23-24, it was reported. BOMBERS HAMMER NAZI BALKAN RETREAT ROUTES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 27 — Heavy and medium bombers of the MAF last night struck at the 1,500-foot-long Borovnica railway viaduct in Yugoslavia, as part of the persistent campaign to cripple German retreat and supply routes in the Balkans, it was announced here today.

The viaduct, more than 200 feet high and carrying the main rail line between Vienna and Trieste, had previously been attacked by Partisans, who destroyed a 600-foot-long centre section of the lengthy structure. German engineers, struggling to keep open the links of the extended German armies with the Homeland, had repaired the break by using box girders, it was stated.

Although unfavorable weather prevented the operation of heavy bombers in daylight hours yesterday, medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force knocked out eight road and rail bridges in the Po Valley, while fighter-bombers scored four direct hits on a German headquarters 12 miles northwest of Firenzuola in the center of the Italian front. FIVE DANUBE BRIDGES DESTROYED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 27 — Five of the eight rail bridges across the Danube between Budapest and Belgrade have been destroyed, one of them probably by Partisan activity, an Air Force announcement said today.

Although 15th AAF heavy bombers cut four of the eight bridges — those at Budapest, north and south; at Baja, 90 miles to the south; and at Pancevo, east of Belgrade — the fifth bridge, near the Hungarian-Yugoslav frontier, was destroyed by other than air assaults, the announcement said. The Air Force statement declared that «it is not known who knocked out this fifth bridge, but it is believed to have been a result of Partisan activity.»

The three still passable bridges across the Danube in this sector are those at Szob, northwest of Budapest; at Dunafoldvar, 50 miles south of Budapest; and at Novi Sad, Northwest of Belgrade. (PRO)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 27 — Allied troops, landed by sea and from the air, are operating "on a wide front" in Albania and on the islands off the Yugoslav coast, a special communique issued by the Balkan Air Force here today declared.

A naval announcement made simultaneously said that landing craft of the Royal Navy, supported by destroyers and light coastal craft, had been ferrying Allied troops and Partisans since September 16 in a series of operations designed to harass the German withdrawal from the Balkans.

The operations were under command of Land Forces Adriatic, a Commando formation set up almost four months ago to cooperate with the Royal Navy, Royal Air Force, and Allied Partisan Forces in harrying the German occupation forces in the Balkans, it was stated.

Only the barest particulars were given of the operations under way on the mainland of Albania and the Yugoslav islands. No specific locations were given either of amphibious operations or the landing of the airborne troops employed in the surprise Allied attack.

In regular reports of Strategic Air Force operations, it was stated that medium and heavy bombers had last night attacked the railroad viaduct at Borovnica, in the extreme northwestern corner of Yugoslavia, where one of the main rail routes employed by German forces withdrawing from the Balkans winds through the mountains into Italy to connect with lines through the Brenner Pass to Germany itself.

Light bombers of the Balkan Air Force, said to be giving air support to the operations, were reported to have bombed military objectives at Drnis, Yugoslavia. Hurricanes and Spitfires flew armed reconnaissance along the Dalmatian coast and damaged two enemy observation posts, it was said.

"They have kept up such pressure on an ever-demoralized enemy that some half a million Germans have been pinned down on this front, instead of being available for Aachen, Metz, Belfort, Riga, or Warsaw."

"In the past month, the 8th Army alone has inflicted casualties at the rate of nearly 1,000 daily, and advanced more than a mile a day. MORE STRONGHOLDS LIBERATED BY PARTISANS

WASHINGTON, September 27 — Today's communique from Marshal Tito's Yugoslav National Army of Liberation Headquarters said Partisan forces have liberated four more strongholds in Serbia.

In western Serbia, Partisan units liberated the towns of Loznica and Ljubovija, in the Drina Valley east of Tuzla.

During this engagement, 260 Germans were captured, and war material was seized, including two heavy mortars, 14 automatic rifles, and some trucks.

Father to the east, other Partisan units repelled an attack by a German motor transport column trying to break through Partisan-held territory toward Lajkovac, south of Belgrade.

Other Partisan units, west of this town, were forced to withdraw from the town of Prilep, 47 miles south of Skoplje, after a fifteen-day battle against strong German forces. Two German divisions have entered Prilep, but the Partisan forces are nevertheless continuing to fight against these enemy troops.

In central Serbia, Partisans are carrying out strong attacks against concentrations of German transport in the Ctachak-Kragujevats area, hindering the German attempt to drive through to the north.

Last night's communique from Marshal Tito's Headquarters, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, announced that the island of Pag, one of the northern Dalmatian islands north of the port of Zara, has been liberated by naval and land forces. The capture of Pag follows the liberation of all central Dalmatian islands reported on Monday.

Tito's forces have also captured Gracanica in eastern Bosnia, south of the River Save. (OWI-Reuter)

GREEK PARTISANS CAPTURE PREVEZA

CAIRO, September 27 — Greek Partisans have captured the port of Preveza, sealing the fate of the German garrison on the island of Levkas in the Ionian Group, British United Press said yesterday.

Kastroykia, another port 12 miles north of Preveza, and the towns of Zolongo, Samarina, and Valsorties, all in the Ioannina Province, have also been liberated.

The British United Press added that recent reports from western Greece indicate that enemy forces are unable to move eastward toward Salonika except in a small trickle, and that they are receiving very few reinforcements. (BUP)

TROOP-CARRYING AIRCRAFT DOWNED OVER AEGEAN

CAIRO, September 27 — Beaufighters of the Middle East Command, operating over the southwest Aegean Sea last night, destroyed four troop-carrying enemy aircraft, it was announced here today. Three enemy transports, a Dornier 24, and two JU-52's were sent crashing into the sea in flames. (PWB)

RIGA BATTLE RAGES

MOSCOW, September 27 — Russian troops took off from the west coast of Estonia today and captured the island of Vormsi, on which German troops who fled from the Baltic debacle sought to set up a stronghold while awaiting rescue by sea.

Mopping-up of the Estonia sector of the Baltic battle-front continued, with Russian troops still battering against the outer defenses of the Latvian capital of Riga in the face of bitter German resistance.

Reuter said tonight that the battleground before Riga has become the graveyard of the German northern forces. Dense fighting rages, and columns of smoke rise everywhere from the « funeral pyres » of smashed German vehicles.

The Luftwaffe sent 64 planes into the struggle today and fought with Red Air Forces airmen for two hours. Their losses were 14 planes. The other 50 fled through the smoke. On the ground, the Red Army over-ran 200 inhabited localities and eight railway stations.

BULGARIA BREAKS WITH HUNGARY

WASHINGTON, September 27 — Bulgaria has severed diplomatic relations with Hungary, Radio Sofia said last night.

The regime of the Hungarian Premier, General Geza Lakatos, was informed of Bulgaria's action by Dimiter Naumov, Bulgarian Minister to Budapest. The broadcast added that the Swiss Government had been asked to care for Bulgarian interests in Hungary. (OWI)

MINOR ACTIVITY ON BULGARIAN FRONT

LONDON, September 27 — The text of the Bulgarian communique, as broadcast last night by Radio Sofia:

« On the whole front there was reconnaissance and minor artillery activity.

« The battle south of Strumitsa continues. The glorious and heroic 15th Infantry Division, after a prolonged struggle against much superior enemy forces, withdrew for the most part through the mountains to territory outside.

« Despite unfavorable weather conditions, squadrons of dive-bombers and fighters successfully attacked enemy concentrations south of Strumitsa. All planes returned.

« Two of our aircraft must be considered lost during air activities on September 25. » (OWI)

FINNISH TROOPS REPAIR NINE BRIDGES

HELSINKI, September 27 — Nine bridges destroyed by the retreating Germans in Finland have been repaired by Finnish troops, said today's Finnish communique.

Meanwhile, Finnish soldiers, driving westward in North Finland, have reached the Ijoki River, but the bridge there also had been blown up by the Germans.

Other Finnish advances were made in the directions of Puolanka, Pudasjarvi, and Puolanka-Taivalkoski. (PWB)

FINNISH POLITICAL PRISONERS RELEASED

STOCKHOLM, September 27 — The last two of the so-called « group of six » members of the Finnish Diet, arrested in the summer of 1941 for advocating peace, were released from prison on September 25 after the Finnish Government had proclaimed an amnesty, according to reports from Helsinki.

They were Deputies of the Diet, Yrjo and Kai Sundstrom, the Finnish authoress, Hella Wuolijoki, who had been sentenced to death; and the well-known Left Socialist Master of Medical Science, Mauri Ryoma, announced the Soviet News Agency today. Ryoma was the founder of the Finnish Society of Peace and Friendship with the Soviet Union. (TASS)

Except for the capture of several small villages in the Carpathians north of the Czech frontier, the Soviet communique said, there was nothing but continued reconnaissance activity elsewhere along the Russo-German front.

Dispatches from the Sanok area in those Carpathian hills said the mountain passes were choked with smoke from blazing pine forests as the Red Army fights its way through new gateways into Czecho-Slovakia. The Germans were said to be falling back despite fresh reinforcements.

Other dispatches said the Russians would assault the German-held Czech frontier with crushing weight just as soon as the passes have been cleared. With them is the Czech Corps, ready to move into its homeland.

Of the battle for Warsaw, Radio Moscow said tonight only that Polish General Berlinger's four full divisions are now occupying a sector at Praga, preparing to strike at the Polish capital. From inside Warsaw, General Bor's headquarters said earlier that there appeared to be a momentary lull in artillery duelling. Last night, Russian aircraft dropped more supplies for the Poles within the city.

The only news of the southern, the Balkan front, came from German sources. The Overseas News Agency said Russian troops have penetrated the Hungarian frontier, and that bitter street fighting was going on in a small town five miles over the border. The Germans added that the towns of Mako and Foldeak had fallen «temporarily» into Russian hands. (OWI-Reuter)

WIDESPREAD RAIDS SMASH JAP SHIPPING

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 27 — War-planes of General Douglas MacArthur's Southwest Pacific command swept over a vast area of the South Seas yesterday and carried out highly damaging attacks against Japan's vital supply shipping.

The region of operations extended from New Ireland in the east to Borneo in the west, and from the Philippines to the Island of Timor, 1,150 miles south. The east-west width of their operational area was just under 2,500 miles, and took in the islands of Celebes, Ceram, and Halmahera.

Off Borneo, the bombers sank a 3,000-ton freighter. They sank a coastal vessel off the Philippines; three small freighters and several barges off the Moluccas; numerous small craft off Ceram; a 1,000-ton vessel in the Celebes Sea; and three camouflaged freighters and several barges off Halmahera. They damaged other shipping in sweeps off New Guinea, New Britain, Bougainville, Hollandia, and Timor.

Other targets over this far-flung battle-front included harbor warehouses, barracks, and gun positions. They shot up airfields and started many fires. Three planes failed to return.

Peleliu Fight Grim

Dispatches from the Palaus early today said that Japanese suicide missions have strewn the battle-front with their own blood. Glory-hungry Nipponese have been rushing the American lines with charges of high explosives wrapped around them. Since Monday night, they have been using phosphorus grenades. No major changes in the line have been reported since early yesterday, when Japanese forces were cut into two isolated pockets.

A 20th USAAF communique said today that formations of Super Fortresses which yesterday attacked Japanese industrial centers in Manchukuo returned to their bases in China without loss. Pilots said they could not report on the effectiveness of their raid on the steel city of Anshan, because of low-hanging clouds which obscured the target.

Jap Drive Gains

Chinese High Command communiques said today that Japanese troops have come within 47 miles of the Kwangsi city of Kweilin, key position of Chinese defenses in southern China. Chungking gave no news of the second Japanese column attacking the city from the north, but said that Chinese forces have engaged the enemy, and that fighting to stay the Japanese advance was in progress.

Illustrating the fluidity and the almost cellular nature of the battle of China, Chungking said that Chinese forces have retaken the recently-captured city of Jungyun by sliding behind the very Japanese column which has continued its advance toward Kweilin.

In an effort to create some order in a fight which bears a close resemblance to a «rat race,» the Japanese have moved both air units and troops from bases in Manchukuo.

General Claire Chennault said yesterday that the Japanese hope, with these reinforcements, to seal their internal communications lines. But, he added, they under-estimated the aerial opposition they were to encounter.

The Southeast Asia Command disclosed today that an Allied force has cut in behind Japanese positions at Tiddim, in Burma, and that Japanese troops retreating on their long march from the Imphal plains are now facing rear and frontal attacks.

The speed of their retreat has stepped up. Pursuing Indian troops have lost contact with the Japanese rear guard retreating down the Tiddim Road.

In strategic support of the battle for Burma, Allied bombers carried out another raid on Mandalay, chief Japanese supply city for Burma operations. They made direct hits on the rail yards and on a bridge at Bhamo, on the Burma Road to the north.

The Japanese News Agency revealed that Nipponese forces fighting in Burma now have a new commander-in-chief, Lieut. Gen. Heitaro Kimura. Nothing was said about the former commander, Lieut Gen. Shojo Kawabe, who led the assault that was to have penetrated the heart of India. (OWI)

Marquis Venosta stated that it was an act of supreme justice that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, together with Marshal Stalin, took cognizance of the difficult position of Italy.

«We do not consider our goal reached, but are certain that a great step forward has been made», the Under Secretary said.

In reply to questions on Italy's relations with Japan, the Under Secretary stated that Italy is playing a part in the war effort of the United Nations and has no limit set on the extent of her participation.

«Italy can consider herself at war with Japan even though a formal declaration has not been made,» Marquis Venosta announced. (UNN)

SOVIET TRADE UNIONISTS MEET ITALIAN LEADERS

ROME, September 27 — The Soviet trade union delegation today met the secretaries of the Italian General Confederation of Labor to initiate an exchange of information on the trade union movement in Italy and Russia.

M. P. Tarasov, head of the delegation and Secretary of the Central Council of the Soviet Trade Unions, said the delegates are not as yet familiar with Italian labor conditions, and requested the aid of the leaders of the confederation in acquiring a full and complete background.

Achille Grandi, one of the secretaries of the confederation, acknowledged on behalf of Italian workers the part Russian workers are playing in the liberation of Europe from Nazi-Fascism.

Oreste Lizzardi, another IGCL secretary, pointed out the difficulties confronting the confederation and the measures being adopted to overcome them.

The Soviet delegation also included V. D. Askenov, President of the Central Committee of the Industrial Mechanics Union; P. V. Shupletsov, President of the Organizing Committee of the Agricultural Workers of the Ukraine and Moldavia, and D. P. Shevliegin, delegation Secretary.

Tarasov also read a message of greetings to Italian workers on behalf of 25,000,000 Russian trade unionists, in which he paid tribute to the Allied troops fighting on Italian soil.

Tarasov said one of the purposes of his visit was to inform Italians of the activity of the trade unions in his country, while pointing out the importance of destroying the enemy decisively and of the subsequent punishing of war criminals.

The next task, he said, would be the reestablishment of democratic liberties which have been trampled by the Nazi-Fascists, and the reconstruction of the destroyed economy of liberated countries.

He expressed the hope that friendship between Italian and Soviet trade unions would continue to grow. (UNN)

PROBLEMS OF POST-WAR GERMANY DISCUSSED

NEW YORK, September 27 — The basic problem with post-war Germany will be what to do about certain economic wrecks which will be left from the Hitler Régime, Political Analyst Walter Lippmann said today.

In discussing what should be the Allied policy toward German industry after disarmament, he said that many people will assume that there will be left a powerful, workable German economic system. On the contrary, Lippmann stated, we shall find German economic ruin.

«As a matter of fact, the German economic system which will come out of this war will still be desperately unsuited for civilian uses,» Lippmann declared. «It was unsuitable enough before Hitler, but now it has been still more radically altered. Capital investment under Hitler has been according to the principle of 'guns rather than butter,' which means that millions of Germans are employed in industries that are wholly uneconomic in civilian life, and are designed only for war.

«Under any conditions of peace, the Germans face the gigantic problem of transforming their economy so that it is capable for civilian use.»

Lippmann asked how we shall permit and assist the Germans to redesign and rebuild their economy. He adds that it is a real problem for Allied policy, because German economy cannot be converted to civilian use without permission and economic aid. «If it is not successfully converted, the German population will sink to a level of misery and disease, where it will be a fearful menace to the peace and social health of mankind,» he said. U.N.R.R.A. DELEGATE SUMS UP ACHIEVEMENTS

MONTREAL, September 27 — The Right Honorable Richard Law, head of the British UNRRA delegation and Minister of State, in an interview yesterday summed up the achievements of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration's 10-day conference here.

The most important practical results were, first, the agreement on plans for the relief and return to their homes of approximately 20 million displaced persons. At least 12 million of this total were torn from their homes and driven into forced labor in Nazi factories.

Second, special provisions for the immediate care, following the cessation of hostilities, of persecuted German, Hungarian, and other Jews, and other Nazi victims.

Third, harmonious and unanimous agreement on plans for limited aid to Italy.

Law stated that before the conference convened some doubt was expressed as to UNRRA's ability to settle down to the job — heightened by the realization that if this first practical demonstration of the United Nations' cooperation in non-military effort should fail, there might be little chance of succeeding along similar lines. TANGIER GERMAN CONSULATE CLOSED

LONDON, September 27 — The German Consulate General in Tangier has been closed and the entire staff withdrawn, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today.

Nineteen German agents have also been expelled from Spanish Morocco and Tangier as the result of urgent representations by the British Ambassador. The Spanish High Commissioner in Spanish Morocco has promised that two other agents will leave before the end of the month.

The British Government informed the Spanish Government that there are still at least four agents in the Tangier zone and a greater number at large in Spanish Morocco. Mr. Eden added, «I can assure questioners that the Spanish Government are being left in no doubt that the British Government do not regard this partial fulfilment of their undertaking as satisfactory, and are insisting on the rapid and complete disposal of this question.»

When asked why this delicacy was being shown, Mr. Eden replied, «There is certainly no delicacy on our part, but there is dissatisfaction that it has not been dealt with more quickly.» (Reuter)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 27 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

The 8th Army troops have now cleared the last enemy resistance south of the Rubicon, and Dominion troops of the 8th Army are in the outskirts of Bellaria.

On their left, British troops, in heavy fighting, have extended their bridgehead over the Rubicon and are now approaching the town of Savignano.

In the central sector, American and British troops of the 5th Army made slight advances against determined enemy resistance.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Tactical aircraft yesterday continued their attacks against communications and battle zone targets in Northern Italy. Medium bombers attacked road and rail bridges in the Po Valley. Fighter-bombers were active against troop concentrations, rail lines and rolling stock, motor transport and supply dumps in and near the battle area.

Last night, medium and heavy bombers attacked the railroad viaduct at Borovnica, in northwestern Yugoslavia.

Unfavorable weather prevented heavy bomber operations during daylight.

From those operations, three of our aircraft are missing.

Incomplete reports show that MAAF flew over 550 sorties.

Balkan Air Force:

Seaborne and airborne troops of Land Forces Adriatic are at present operating on a wide front in Adriatic country which includes Albania and the islands of Yugoslavia. Tactical air support has been given by the Balkan Air Force.

Navy:

Since 16 September, landing craft of the Royal Navy, covered and supported by destroyers and light coastal craft, have been operating among the southern Dalmatian Islands, carrying troops and Partisans engaged in harassing the German withdrawal. Bodies of troops have also been landed on the mainland of Albania.

area of Boxmeer on the east. A stretch of some five miles south of Boxmeer is in our hands.

Gains have also been made on both sides of the base of the Allied salient. On the west, we have reached the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal along a considerable portion of its length. On the east around Maeseyck, we control the west bank of the Meuse between Wessem and Dilsen.

To the south as far as Luneville, active patrolling continues with little change of position. Light to moderate artillery fire was encountered in the Aachen and Stolberg areas, and our units engaged German pillboxes and strongpoints northeast of Rotgen.

In southern Luxembourg, we occupied Grieveldange. An enemy counter-attack in the vicinity of Morsul, east of Nancy, was repulsed. Considerable enemy artillery fire has been directed against our troops in the Meurthe Valley. North of Epinal, our forces have crossed the Moselle in strength and have occupied Châtel sûr-Moselle and a number of towns to the south.

The enemy is fighting stubbornly in the vicinity of Doncilles and Tendon to slow our advance east of Epinal. West and northwest of Belfort, further progress has been made, and several villages have been liberated.

On the Channel coast, operations against Calais continued successfully.

Air:

Yesterday, fortified positions in the town and heavy gun and radio installations at Cap Griz Nez were attacked by heavy bombers. Other heavy bombers attacked rail centers at Osnabrück and Hamm in northwest Germany, and industrial targets at Bremen. Twelve bombers are missing.

Fortifications and strongpoints at Breskens, and rail and road targets at Cleve were attacked by medium bombers. Fighters provided escort for heavy bombers to Germany, and also for supply missions to the Low Countries, while fighters and fighter-bombers gave support to ground forces and attacked transportation targets in Holland.

Thirty-eight enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air. Seven of our fighters are missing.

Last night, light bombers attacked road and river transport in Holland and western Germany. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 27 — Tonight's communique:

During today, west and northwest of Parnu (Pernov), our troops continued their operations for clearing off dispersed enemy groups along the western coast of Estonia. Our troops occupied the Island of Osmussar.

In the direction of Riga, our troops in the course of their offensive occupied in fighting over 300 populated localities, including Skroteri, Sunte, Skulte, Siedy, Idrisal, Traupe, Rigaste, Mitoure, Tarche, Vatrane, Pinzine, and Kalbala; and the railway stations of Lade, Inteje, Skulte, Merize, Vidastie, Jungtrava, Kalbala, and Vatrane.

South and southeast of Sanok, our troops, as a result of stiff fighting, captured in the wooded mountain area several populated localities including Serbanuvka, Bobracke, Restone-Burne, Volosate, Tarnava, and Hnik.

On the other sectors of the front, patrol activities and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 26, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 10 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, seven enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 27 — In Liguria, where Garibaldi Brigades had previously destroyed 21 motor transports, on September 4 eight German trucks and two other motor vehicles were drawn into an ambuscade and all those in them were killed.

In the battle for Bonassola, in Spezia province, 60 Germans were surrounded and annihilated. Only five enemy soldiers found safety in flight. In a clash near Cenigio, in the province of Savona, 15 Germans were killed and many others were wounded.

Fighting is extending from Liguria to nearby regions.

In Piedmont, a lively engagement took place on September 5 near Aqui, in the province of Alessandria, where 30 Germans were killed.

The same day, 10 Germans were killed near Ceva, in Cuneo Province.

Patriots held out for 48 hours at Montefiorino, in the Province of Modena, when, on September 11, the enemy launched a violent attack to clear the network of secondary roads in the area. In this fighting, the Nazi-Fascists suffered heavy losses.

Farther to the northwest, in a locality cloaked in military secrecy, the «Osoppo» Garibaldi division is increasing in numbers and in efficiency. The enemy, worried by the threat it constitutes, is attempting to head off the division by endeavouring to close all the roads leading to the zone in which it operates.

In Brescia Province, Patriots wearing the «Green Flame» emblem stopped a train on September 22 and captured 20 Germans and 12 Fascists.

In all the above-mentioned regions, and elsewhere, acts of sabotage have taken place. Bridges were destroyed near Rivarolo, in Turin Province, and on the road between Ceva and Mondovì, on September 10. On September 8, another was destroyed near Bedonia, in the Province of Parma. A fourth was dynamited near Padova on September 14.

In the Province of Treviso, between Casier and Lughignano, six enemy boats were destroyed and telephone lines were interrupted.

Near Turin, the Fascists burned down several villages in reprisal for an attempt on the life of Pavolini.

Previously, other localities, among them Barge, Orbassano and Cumiana, had also been set on fire, while some, among them Crissolo and Trimta, in Cuneo Province, were subjected to bombing by the Germans.

The Germans attempted to flood the area around Due Ville, in Vicenza Province, by mounting an action against the Pusavan aqueduct. The Patriots were successful, after a stiff battle, in frustrating the Germans' designs. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 27 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

On September 26, the last resistance of the encircled English Airborne Division was broken in the Arnhem area. In the course of bitter fighting, lasting for 10 days, our forces, concentrated with the utmost speed and led by the Commanding General of an SS Armored Corps, SS Obergruppenführer and General of the Waffen SS Dietrich, have thus succeeded in completely destroying an English elite division, in spite of bitter resistance and reinforcements received by the enemy by further landings from the air. All enemy attempts to free the encircled division from the south failed. The enemy suffered enormous losses. A total of 6,450 prisoners were taken. Thousands of dead are reported. Thirty anti-tank guns, as well as other guns, numerous weapons, and 250 vehicles were captured. In addition, 1,000 gliders carrying supplies were destroyed or captured, and 100 planes were shot down.

To both sides of Eindhoven, fierce fighting continues with English units supplied and further reinforced from the air.

North and east of Nijmegen, enemy attacks were repelled.

Only local fighting actively took place along the entire front from Aix-la-Chapelle to the region south of Metz. There was fierce artillery fire from both sides. A German shock troop, which had crossed the Moselle in a westward direction, penetrated deep into enemy rear areas and blew up an American ammunition depot.

North of Nancy, enemy attacks collapsed under the impact of our defensive fire.

At, and south of, Château Salins, German armored units, in a speedy advance, occupied several localities and thereby closed a gap in our front lines.

The American 7th Army yesterday also continued to attack east of the Upper Moselle, in the region of Epinal and Remiremont. In the face of our stubbornly fighting troops, who were counter-attacked time and again, the enemy scored only small local successes.

In the main fighting area of Calais, where town and harbor continue to be subjected to strong artillery fire as well as to unceasing bombing attacks, fierce fighting is going on. From our other bases along the Channel and Atlantic coast, defensive fighting is going on against advancing enemy groups. At the Iron Gate, southwest of Orsova, our troops frustrated a Soviet encirclement movement by counter-attacks. To both sides of Turenburg, and south of Neumarkt, yesterday, too, all Soviet attacks failed. Along the slopes of the Carpathian Forests, German and Hungarian troops withdrew into prepared mountain positions according to orders received.

At the northeastern frontier of Slovakia, the Soviets were pushing on in direction of the Beskide Mountains. Heavy attacks were repulsed here. Several penetrations were sealed off.

Our fight against the Warsaw Underground Movement is making good progress.

At Suduhnen, and south of the river Memel, Bolshevist attacks failed. Our disengagement movements between the River Duena and the Riga Bight are continuing according to plan. Rear guards frustrated numerous enemy attacks.

Air:

During a defensive action against Soviet planes, attacking the Virbo Harbor area, German fighter planes downed 14 enemy planes. On September 25, battleplanes set one Soviet speedboat afire in the waters of the Fisherman's Peninsula.

Enemy bomber formations launched terror raids against the western part of the Reich, especially against the cities of Osnabrück, Bremen, and Hamm.

During last night, fast British flying squadrons attacked Frankfort-Main and Karlsruhe.

Thirty-three enemy planes were brought down by German fighters and anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe, over Germany and the area of Holland. (Radio Berlin)

Allies Land in Balkans: A flash received around noon announces from Berlin: «The Allied forces have landed along a broad front on the Dalmatian coast. German military sources report Wednesday noon that landing operations are spread out along the entire Dalmatian coast from Albania to the north. Combined land and naval forces are participating in the operations.»

Western Front: The correspondent Max Krull writes: «The annihilation of the British 1st Airborne Division at Arnhem frustrated the Allied plans to open, by means of large-scale landings, the German barriers in the Belgian-Dutch area. The complete failure [of these plans] discloses the magnitude of the Allied miscalculation. As a result, what is left is a small bridgehead of 75 kilometres from the Belgian frontier to Nijmegen. It is too small to serve as an operational base for an effective break-through.»

Light naval batteries of the Fleet yesterday also took successfully part in the land fighting at the Pas de Calais. In spite of heaviest enemy air attacks, they continued the shelling of south English harbor towns.

V-1 retaliation fire upon London was continued.

Italy:

In central Italy, the enemy offensive northeast of Firenzuola, as well as on the Adriatic coast, continued. The intended break-through again was frustrated in the course of bitter fighting. Counter-measures are being taken against one penetration point to the northeast of Firenzuola. In one corps' sector of the Adriatic front alone, 72 enemy armored cars were destroyed during the period from September 23 to September 25.

Eastern Front:

At the Hungaro-Rumanian frontier, in the areas of Szeged, Gyula, and Gross-Wardein, fierce offensive and defensive fighting continues. Enemy attacks in the Szeged area were repelled. Gyula was evacuated by our troops according to plan. Gross-Wardein is being defended.

WAR FRONTS

Nijmegen. The British 2nd Army, however, has made an island out of Elst, and supplies are flowing past it on both sides.

In the center of the corridor, German attacks were repulsed in the Schijndel area. The Germans still hold Best, to the south of Schijndel.

Small German groups have succeeded at times in setting up roadblocks for a few hours, but are continually thrown back. It is impossible for the Allies to line the corridor with troops to form an impregnable defense, and the Germans are bound to break through at points. No serious interference with supplies flowing northward to Arnhem is effected by these attacks, which are rapidly pushed back.

More than 1,100 heavy bombers today struck a powerful blow in tactical support of the heroic British airborne troops locked in critical battle west of Arnhem. They hit vital communications targets at Osnabrück, Hamm, and Bremen on the main railway net over which the Germans might rush up reinforcements to this tense sector.

Security Silence at Arnhem

Supreme Headquarters today imposed security silence over the operations of the airborne unit at Arnhem, except for official announcements by Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery. It was stated that this is a security measure to prevent the Germans from gaining knowledge of Allied troop movements so long as the situation remains in an extremely fluid state.

An Associated Press dispatch said that the attacks on the little band of British airborne troops holding a precarious foothold on the north bank of the upper branch of the Rhine were made by parts of three to four German divisions. Front dispatches last night reported that the airborne units finally had been forced to yield the north end of the highway bridge at Arnhem, after holding it desperately for three days.

Allied patrols, cutting across the narrow neck of land between the Waal River and the lower Rhine at Ochten, 13 miles west of Nijmegen, have reached the south bank of the Rhine, but have not yet built up its strength.

At the base of the corridor, the British troops which thrust west from Eindhoven to Reusel have now crossed the border into Belgium, and are approaching Arendonck,

SUPPLIES LANDED IN HOLLAND CORRIDOR

SHAEF, September 26 — Over 200 transport planes of the Allied 1st Airborne Army landed today on an airstrip in the Allied corridor in Holland and unloaded reinforcements of medical supplies, food, and equipment, it was announced late tonight.

ALLIED PATROLS FAN OUT ON 42-MILE FRONT

SHAEF, September 26 — British and Belgian patrols are fanning out on a 42-mile front on General Miles Dempsey's southern flank toward the banks of the Meuse (Maas) River, it was reported late tonight. Allied troops have reached Groningen, 15 miles south of Nijmegen, and have cleared the main highway leading north from Eindhoven.

The widening and consolidation of the supply corridor from Eindhoven through to Nijmegen is making satisfactory progress. At a point a few miles north of Eindhoven, the base is now 20 miles wide. The Allies now have more roads for handling the ever-increasing flow of supply traffic, but they have not yet established a new set of supply arteries.

Spearheads thrusting east from the corridor are steadily closing in on the German frontier and are clearing the area south of Nijmegen. Units advancing 11 miles north of Deurne have reached Oploo, west of Groningen. In fairly stiff fighting, the town of Mill, seven miles northwest of Oploo, was also reached.

The Germans, in their unceasing efforts to cut the supply lines, have recaptured the town of Elst, midway between the two branches of the lower Rhine north of Arnhem is effected by these attacks, which are rapidly pushed back.

SUPPLIES LANDED IN HOLLAND CORRIDOR

SHAEF, September 26 — Over 200 transport planes of the Allied 1st Airborne Army landed today on an airstrip in the Allied corridor in Holland and unloaded reinforcements of medical supplies, food, and equipment, it was reported late tonight.

The planes discharged their cargoes in two hours and returned to England. The great supply shuttle service is now in full swing.

On the western flank of the corridor, Oss and Heesch, about 10 miles west of Grave, have been reached by British troops. (UP)

KIEL TWO-THIRDS DESTROYED OR DAMAGED

LONDON, September 26 — Almost two-thirds of Kiel, Germany's leading naval dockyard and arsenal, has now been destroyed or seriously damaged, aerial reconnaissance reveals. The British Air Ministry said three great shipbuilding yards have been hit and 10 arsenal buildings demolished, with 12 others severely damaged. (Reuter)

ALLIED BOMBERS SINK FOUR JAP FREIGHTERS

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 26 — Four more Japanese freighters have been sunk in raids on sea lane approaches to the Philippines. The freighters were sunk in bombing sweeps off Borneo and Halmahera. (OWI) to the east of Turnhout. Another crossing of the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal has been made at Ryckevorsel, 15 miles northeast of Antwerp.

In the American 1st Army sector, patrols probing the way toward Cologne met strong German resistance. In the Stolberg area, American troops are under fairly heavy artillery fire from the Germans, who are strongly entrenched east of the town.

Little change in positions is reported in the area north from Aachen to the Meurthe Valley. German patrols and some artillery fire are being encountered in some sectors, and violent German reaction to Allied patrolling is being met elsewhere.

Further to the south, the American 3rd Army was slowed down by heavy rains except in the Dieuze sector, 25 miles north-east of Nancy, where American forces beat off six German counter-attacks. The German thrusts were made in battalion strength of 300 men each, under cover of artillery fire. No gains were made by the Germans in these attacks.

French forces with the 3rd Army scored a gain of five miles north of Baccarat, 29 miles southeast of Nancy. German prisoners taken by the Americans stated that the German border was closed by Nazi SS units.

In the Epinal area, the American 7th Army continued its advance toward the Vosges Mountains and cleared villages of German troops in an effort to outflank the Belfort Gap.

On the Channel flank of the Allied line, Canadian units drove on the French port of Calais and liberated Escaplès, five miles to the southeast. It is estimated that 28,000 Germans are hemmed in along the coast, of whom 8,000 are believed to be in the Calais area. The Canadians have gained control of high ground overlooking Calais, and they have reached the waterline west of the city.

A German battery at Calais lobbed single shells across the Dover Straits for nearly an hour early today and continued at intervals all this afternoon.

Supreme Headquarters announced today that the Germans have suffered more than 800,000 casualties since the landings in Normandy. These include more than 500,000 captured, 100,000 killed, and 200,000 seriously wounded.

HEAVIES HIT CALAIS AND GERMAN RAIL YARDS

LONDON, September 26 — While 8th USAAF heavies dropped a bomb-load of 3,500 tons on Osnabruck, Hamm, and Bremen today, another load of 3,500 tons of explosives was concentrated on German fortified positions at Calais. German fortifications at Breskens, on the Scheldt Estuary south of Flushing, were attacked by medium bombers this afternoon.

The blow to Osnabruck, the first big railway center east of Arnhem, was delivered by a force of over 1,100 bombers operating in tactical support of the heroic British airborne troops fighting their critical battle west of Arnhem. The marshalling yards at Hamm and Bremen are also vital communications hubs on the main railway networks over which German men and material have been moving to the Dutch and Moselle River fronts.

Escorted by medium forces of 8th USAAF Mustangs and Thunderbolts, the Flying Fortresses and Liberators bombed most of their targets visually.

Mannheim, Rhine industrial center, had been raided by RAF Mosquitoes during last night. One aircraft was lost on this mission.

Today's RAF attack on Calais was highly concentrated and carried out in good visibility. It was the third heavy attack in 48 hours on this coastal fortress, where Canadians have launched their all-out drive to reduce the German garrison.

Further North, RAF medium bombers attacked German the advance into Holland, and more than 200 German aircraft which at various times tried to strafe the British and Polish forces were beaten off.

For the first time, according to the Associated Press, German airmen engaged Allied rocket-firing Typhoons. In one engagement, more than 25 Messerschmitts and Focke-Wulfs dived on five Typhoons, but after two of the German craft were destroyed the others fled. In all, the 2nd TAF destroyed 16 German aircraft yesterday and damaged 19, for the loss of three Allied aircraft.

To the south, near Eindhoven, medium bombers attacked trains attempting to bring up armored vehicles and supplies to the German troops in Holland. They encountered 50 Messerschmitts and destroyed four, at the cost of one bomber.

U. S. 1ST ARMY TO TRY SIX GERMANS

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, GERMANY, September 26 — Six German civilians will be tried in Kornelimunster tomorrow on charges of minor offenses in the 1st Allied military court held in Germany, a Reuter dispatch reported last night.

Four German women will face charges of violating a United States proclamation ordering civilians to stay out of restricted areas. Two men are charged with the theft of coal from local railway yards. The cases will be heard in a court of summary justice dealing with minor offenses.

8TH ARMY CROSSES RUBICON

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 26 — British troops of the 8th Army have crossed the Rubicon, ancient boundary of the Roman Empire, and have established several bridgeheads west of the stream near the spot where Ceasar crossed with his Roman legions to change the course of history, it was announced today.

The crossing of the Rubicon, made only in the face of heavy German resistance, came just short of a month after Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese's forces began their assault on the Adriatic end of the enemy's Goth Line, an attack which has brought the Allied army out into the southeastern fringes of the Po, and inflicted a total of 25,000 casualties on the retreating German forces.

The British infantrymen crossed the historic stream at two points about a mile apart, and seven miles from where it flows into the Adriatic at Bellaria. They pushed on at least 1,000 yards farther west into the high ground in this area, despite heavy enemy opposition, while both to the north and south, other British troops approached to within a few hundred yards of the shallow river.

Successful Night Attack

On the Adriatic coast, 8th Army infantry and tank forces on Sunday night broke through the main body of the German 1st Parachute Division, battling to stem the spreading advance of the Allies into the Plain of the Po, to make a penetration of more than a mile and capture the coast-road town of Bordonchio, six miles northwest of Rimini and 23 miles from Ravenna. Here, just a little more than a mile south of the mouth of the Rubicon, the German veterans became disorganized under the ferocious night attack, lighted by the play of searchlights and the red tracer fire from Bofors guns, and fell back with heavy losses.

On the 5th Army front, where American forces have broken through the center of the enemy's mountain defenses, heavy rains, muddy roads, and stiffening enemy resistance have slowed the advance toward Bologna. German forces were reported still to be in the village of Moradaccio, 23 miles from Bologna, and some 16 miles from the Rimini-Bologna Road, and to be resisting the 5th Army advance in fierce street fighting.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Sec. 3.3/NND No. 785031

In the Lyttel area the American 7th Army continued its advance toward the Vosges Mountains and cleared villages of German troops in an effort to outflank the Belfort Gap.

HEAVIES HIT CALAIS AND GERMAN RAIL YARDS

LONDON, September 26 — While 8th USAAF heavies dropped a bomb-load of 3,500 tons on Osnabruck, Hamm, and Bremen today, another load of 3,500 tons of explosives was concentrated on German fortified positions at Calais. German fortifications at Breskens, on the Scheldt Estuary south of Flushing, were attacked by medium bombers this afternoon.

The blow to Osnabruck, the first big railway center east of Arnhem, was delivered by a force of over 1,100 bombers operating in tactical support of the heroic British airborne troops fighting their critical battle west of Arnhem. The marshalling yards at Hamm and Bremen are also vital communications hubs on the main railway networks over which German men and material have been moving to the Dutch and Moselle River fronts.

Escorted by medium forces of 8th USAAF Mustangs and Thunderbolts, the Flying Fortresses and Liberators bombed most of their targets visually.

Mannheim, Rhine industrial center, had been raided by RAF Mosquitoes during last night. One aircraft was lost on this mission.

Today's RAF attack on Calais was highly concentrated and carried out in good visibility. It was the third heavy attack in 48 hours on this coastal fortress, where Canadians have launched their all-out drive to reduce the German garrison.

Farther north, RAF medium bombers attacked German defense positions in the West Scheldt Estuary of Holland today, providing support for Allied ground forces driving toward the coast. The bombs were dropped visually in concentrated patterns over the targets, despite an intense flak barrage sent up by enemy ack-ack positions.

Heavy Damage to Ships

A heavy toll was taken of some 20 enemy vessels lying in the enemy defended anchorage at Den Helder in Holland, by fighter-escorted Beaufighters of RAF Coastal Command. About half of the vessels were set on fire, and most of the remainder were damaged. The United Press said one minesweeper was blown up, and another minesweeper, a merchant vessel, three tugs, four trawler-type auxiliary vessels, and a fuel barge were set afire. A building, probably an ammunition store, was also blown up.

A fighter group of the 8th USAAF, patrolling over northwest Germany today, engaged more than 40 German planes and shot down 23 of them. Only one American plane was lost.

For hours yesterday, in mist and low clouds, Spitfires, Mustangs, and Typhoons of the 2nd TAF, flying nearly 650 sorties, provided air cover for the troops beleaguered at Arnhem. A sharp battle took place around the spearhead of United States proclamation covering [illegible] of restricted areas. Two men are charged with the theft of coal from local railway yards. The cases will be heard in a court of summary justice dealing with minor offenses.

8TH ARMY CROSSES RUBICON

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 26 — British troops of the 8th Army have crossed the Rubicon, ancient boundary of the Roman Empire, and have established several bridgeheads west of the stream near the spot where Caesar crossed with his Roman legions to change the course of history, it was announced today.

The crossing of the Rubicon, made only in the face of heavy German resistance, came just short of a month after Lieutenant General Sir Oliver Leese's forces began their assault on the Adriatic end of the enemy's Goth Line, an attack which has brought the Allied army out into the southeastern fringes of the Po and inflicted a total of 25,000 casualties on the retreating German forces.

The British infantrymen crossed the historic stream at two points about a mile apart, and seven miles from where it flows into the Adriatic at Rellaria. They pushed on at least 1,000 yards further west into the high ground in this area, despite heavy enemy opposition, while both to the north and south, other British troops approached to within a few hundred yards of the shallow river.

Successful Night Attack

On the Adriatic coast, 8th Army infantry and tank forces on Sunday night broke through the main body of the German 1st Parachute Division, battling to stem the spreading advance of the Allies into the Plain of the Po, to make a penetration of more than a mile and capture the coast-road town of Bordonchio, six miles northwest of Rimini and 23 miles from Ravenna. Here, just a little more than a mile south of the mouth of the Rubicon, the German veterans became disorganized under the ferocious night attack, lighted by the play of searchlights and the red tracer fire from Bofors guns, and fell back with heavy losses.

On the 5th Army front, where American forces have broken through the center of the enemy's mountain defenses, heavy rains, muddy roads, and stiffening enemy resistance have slowed the advance toward Bologna. German forces were reported still to be in the village of Moradaccio, 2½ miles from Bologna, and some 16 miles from the Rimini-Bologna Road, and to be resisting the 5th Army advance in fierce street fighting.

Germans forces were reported to be reinforcing the critical central sector of their front by seasoned troops, in order to make up for the loss of prepared positions farther south.

Three fierce German counter-attacks were made yesterday in the vicinity of Monte La Fine and Pratolungo, west of Moradaccio, and official reports declared that the enemy was making a desperate effort to set up a new holding line along the forward slopes of the hills in this sector.

Along a 10-mile diagonal southeast from these northernmost American troops, British forces of the 5th Army captured a series of villages and heights along and flanking three mountain roads leading to the Po Valley at Forli, Faenza, and just to the west of the latter town.

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean Theatre, sent a message to General Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief, Allied Armies in Italy, expressing the hope that the crossing of the Rubicon by the 8th Army "would lead, as with a famous commander in the past, to decisive victory, and the destruction of Kesselring's army."

British troops crossed the River Rubicon about two miles south of where the main Po Valley highway, Via Emilia of the past, bridges the shallow waters. The advance was made after British forces had driven the Germans from the ridge between the Marecchia River and the Rubicon, and captured the key villages of Santarcangelo, six miles west of Rimini, and Poggio Berni, three miles farther to the southwest. The town of Scorticata, 11 miles southwest of Rimini, and overlooking the upper reaches of the Rubicon, was also captured yesterday. It has been the scene of heavy fighting for some days. (PRO)

WILSON CONGRATULATES ALEXANDER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 26 — The Supreme Allied Commander of the Mediterranean Theater, General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, today sent a message of congratulations to General Sir Harold Alexander on the breaking of the Goth Line.

The message stated:

The skill and speed with which the 8th Army was regrouped once more completely surprised Kesselring. This fact and the determination of the advance resulted in the early breach of the enemy's most easterly defenses, and have forced him to use up more and more of his reserves on that flank.

The determined attack of the American and British troops of the 5th Army in most difficult country has now breached the Goth Line at its strongest place, and the 5th Army stands ready to push forward into the plains.

I hope that the crossing of the Rubicon will lead, as with a famous commander in the past, to decisive victory and the destruction of Kesselring's army. (PRO)

LIBERATORS HIT GREEK PORTS SECOND DAY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 26 — Liberator bombers of the 15th AAF yesterday bombed the three harbours of Salamis, Skaramanga, and Piraeus, all near Athens, in the second consecutive day's attack on Greek shipping facilities.

Only slight to moderate flak was reported by the bomber crews. (PRO)

BRAZILIAN GENERALS HONORED

5TH ARMY HQ ITALY, September 26 — The Legion of Merit, of the degree of Commander, was presented to Generals Mascarenhas and Zenobia da Costa by General Clark on behalf of President Roosevelt in a ceremony here today attended by the Brazilian Minister of War.

The award was made to the Brazilian generals for work done before they joined the 5th Army.

The citation for General Mascarenhas reads: «For exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding service as commanding general of the 7th Military Region, Recife, from 21 June 1939 to 29 January 1943, in that important sector which included air bases. He organized and directed its defenses when the threat of attack was ever present. He gave material aid and assistance to our forces when they arrived in northeast Brazil, and through his cooperation many problems of interest to both forces were adjusted on an efficient basis. He was responsible for installing picked Brazilian troops in the most critical positions necessary to adequate defense. The second DSC was awarded to Sergeant Elmer J. Cessna for extraordinary heroism near Guboro, Italy, last July when, despite his wounds, he led his men to their objective and single-handedly attacked an enemy machine-gun position, silenced it, and later made a reconnaissance of the area. (UNN)

MONTENEGRIN CAPITAL FREED BY PARTISANS

LONDON, September 26 — Marshal Tito's Headquarters issued a communique today saying that Cetinje, capital of Montenegro, has been freed by Yugoslav forces.

Troops advancing on Belgrade have occupied the town of Topola on the Kragujevac-Belgrade rail line 64 kilometers southeast of the Yugoslav capital.

In western Serbia, German motorized columns were routed on the Kolubara and Strumlica rivers, the communique stated. The town of Ridvista, on the Strumlica River in Macedonia, was freed of the enemy.

An earlier communique issued last night said that over 3,000 German and quisling troops were killed and wounded, and over 4,000, including the commander of the German 269th Division, were captured in fighting for Banja Luka.

Yugoslav forces occupied the town of Ljubovija, in western Serbia.

A strong column of German troops has been routed 32 miles south of Belgrade.

In eastern Serbia, heavy fighting with German reinforcements is in progress near Slubnik and Plavna.

In eastern Bosnia, the town of Majevica has been occupied. All islands of central Dalmatia are liberated. The town of Sion, on the Peljesac Peninsula, has been occupied, and approach to the Yugoslav mainland has thus been opened up, the communique concluded. (Reuter)

GREEKS LIBERATE LEPANTO

CAIRO, September 26 — Greek Patriot forces have liberated the towns of Lepanto, 12 miles northeast of Patras, on the Gulf of Corinth, and Serrai, in Macedonia, 25 miles north of the Gulf of Salmon, the Hellenic News Service in Cairo announced this morning. (PWB)

MOPPING UP OF GERMANS ROUTED IN ESTONIA

MOSCOW, September 26 — Russian troops swept through hundreds of towns and villages southward from Tallinn and westward toward Riga today, driving through what Reuter described as «flotsam and jetsam» of another wrecked German army group.

The Soviet communique said Russian troops were liquidating dispersed enemy units all along the western coast of Estonia, blocking their efforts to reach the evacuation port of Riga — the last important escape harbor left open to the remnants of 30 smashed German divisions.

Front-line dispatches said all organized resistance in Estonia has ceased, that only before Riga, in northern Latvia, are the Germans still able to hold the Russian advance with massed tanks and mobile artillery.

The Germans, said Reuter, are sparing neither lives nor their last reserves of materiel in an effort to stop Russian armored squadrons from breaking through to the Latvian capital.

Obliteration Matter of Days

AMERICANS DECORATED IN PIAZZA VENEZIA

ROME, September 26 — At an impressive ceremony in the Piazza Venezia yesterday, Brig. Ben. Thoburn K. Brown, Rome Area Commander, awarded the Distinguished Service Cross to an American infantry lieutenant and an American infantry sergeant for extraordinary heroism in action.

Purple Heart Medals were presented to six RAAC enlisted men who had been wounded in action.

General Brown awarded the DSC to 24-year-old Lieut. Arpod Sabo of Buffalo, New York, who, according to his [illegible] earlier communique stated were eight and that over 1,000 German and quisling troops were killed and wounded, and over 4,000, including the commander of the German 369th Division, were captured in fighting for Banja Luka.

Obliteration Matter of Days

The news service described the fighting as a slaughter, saying that every available Russian aircraft has been put into the air to complete the destruction and rout of the Germans.

Obliteration of the Germans northward of the frontiers of East Prussia was held to be merely a matter of days.

Except for further gains through the tough mountain country south of Sanok in southern Poland, the Soviet communique said there was only reconnaissance activity on other salients of the Russo-German front.

Turka, a railway junction in the Carpathians 45 miles southeast of Sanok, has been captured.

Early dispatches said the Germans and Hungarians facing the Russian drive on Budapest have massed new divisions in the area of captured Arad, in western Rumania, trying desperately to block the advance across the Hungarian frontier.

In northern Transylvania, the advance of Russian and Rumanian forces continued tonight.

In Warsaw, General Bor's headquarters reported continued liaison with Russian forces, and intensified Russian and German artillery duels.

Radio Moscow announced that Ivan Fedorovich Zhavoronkov, general of aviation, and Mihail Nikolaevich Chistiakov, general of artillery, have been promoted to the rank of marshal. (Reuter)

GENERAL BOR IDENTIFIED

LONDON, September 26 — A Reuter correspondent said here today that members of the Polish Government have revealed the true name of the man known as General Bor, commander of Polish troops fighting in Warsaw.

Bor was identified as Lieut. Gen. Tadeusz Komorowski, of the regular Polish Army. He is said to have fought in the defense of the Polish capital in 1939, and is credited with having organized Polish Underground units around Cracow after Poland's collapse. (Reuter)

PREMIER THANKS U. S. FOR AID TO WARSAW

WASHINGTON, September 26 — Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk of the Polish Government in London has telegraphed thanks to President Roosevelt for the aid brought by the United States Army Air Force to the embattled Poles fighting the Germans in Warsaw. The United States Department of State released yesterday the text of the telegram, which follows:

Accept, Mr. President, the heartfelt thanks which I have the honor to present to you on behalf of the people of Warsaw for the very effective aid which the U. S. Air Force in their gallant flight has given the defenders of the Polish capital. We owe the successful completion of this operation to you, Mr. President, who as supreme commander of the U. S. Armed Forces gave orders to bring help to the insurgents in Warsaw who have been fighting for seven weeks a lonely battle against the Germans. This outstanding example of America's interest in and active support of those fighting for freedom will be deeply entrenched in the hearts of all Poles.

Sustained by the tangible proof of a brotherhood-of-arms, the Poles in Warsaw and throughout Poland firmly believe that in their struggle against the barbarous German enemy, they will, until the achievement of complete and final victory, continue to receive help from the Allies, and that their growing needs of supplies, particularly of food and medical supplies, will be fully satisfied.

We beg Mr. President, to convey our words of thanks to the commanders and the brave airmen who with such outstanding zeal and devotion to duty have undertaken this hazardous operation; also, the Polish people's warm sympathy for the next-of-kin of those who have lost their lives in the gallant attempt to bring sorely-needed relief to their Polish comrades-in-arms. RUSSIANS MOVING AGAINST GERMAN NAVY

LONDON, September 26 — «Remarkable revolving» is being evidenced by the Finns at the news that the Russians have torn up the German barricade across the Gulf of Finland, presumably in a move against the Germans, said London Daily Mail Correspondent Walter Farr. He also wrote from Helsinki yesterday that the Finns are glad for the news that the Red Baltic Fleet has sailed out of Kronstadt through lanes swept in dense enemy minefields.

Heavy naval gunfire from the Gulf can be heard throughout Helsinki, he said, presumably as the warships of the Soviet Fleet battle it out with German units for the mastery of the Baltic.

Crews of Finnish MT boats that have been out on patrol are certain, Farr also write, that the cruiser Hipper and one pocket-battleship are among the German vessels trying to stop the Russians. (Reuter)

A 20th USAAF communique said the attack was carried out in daylight today and that Japanese planes attempted to intercept, but that they failed to interfere with the mission.

The chief target was the Japanese steel-manufacturing center at Anshan, 150 miles northeast of the Chosen Bay harbor of Dairen. Anshan has been hit by the B-29's twice before, on July 29 and on September 8.

Anshan is a city of several hundred thousand, and its basic steel and coke and chemical plants cover a vast area. The Japanese radio said later today that the port of Dairen, from which most of Manchukuo's factory products are shipped, was also hit by the Super Fortresses.

Marines Gain on Palaus

American Marines fighting on the island of Peleliu, in the southern Palaus, were less than a mile from the northern tip of the Japanese stronghold early today, and still finding stiff opposition.

Only 293 Japanese dead have been counted in the last three days; but dispatches indicated that faster gains and greater slaughter of the enemy are ahead, since the chief Japanese strongpoint in the hills has been outflanked.

Mopping-up operations continued on the island of Angaur, six miles to the south, where an estimated 975 Japanese have been killed in 12 days of fighting. There, American Army engineers are rushing a large, heavy-bomber airfield to completion — the first step in converting the island into a base for operations against the Philippines, 600 miles to the west.

Nanking, Amoy Raided

Late reports of American aircraft operations cover vast regions of the Pacific and the mainland of China. Formations of 14th USAAF bombers have struck again at the airfields around Canton, south China supply port for Japanese forces threatening the Kwei Kiang River bastion of Kweilin, hub of southern China's defenses.

Harbor installations at Amoy, and shipping in the nearby Formosa Strait, have also been attacked. Another Japanese tanker was sunk; and a cargo vessel badly damaged.

Nanking's rail and warehouse installations were hit Sunday, and large fires were started. Meanwhile, still other missions struck at Japanese supply centers and warehouses along the old Burma Road, and at river convoy routes in French Indo-China.

Waves of medium bombers hit the Japanese at Chuanhsien, north of Kweilin, and others strafed the highways, destroying many trucks. Pilots of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing reported direct hits on motor concentrations, fuel and ammunition dumps, and railway bridges.

At the same time, Navy and Army bombers struck at Japanese positions at Chichi Jima in the Bonin Islands; and at harbor facilities and barracks in the Marshalls, the Marianas, and the Marcus Islands.

Tanker Sunk off Celebes

One of General Douglas MacArthur's patrol planes sank three Jap vessels in the Gulf of Davao, in the Philippines. The patrol bomber found two destroyer escorts fueling up beside a seaplane tender. One stick of bombs sank the escort ships, and left the tender in flames.

Another 10,000-ton tanker was sunk off Celebes, and a 5,000-ton cargo ship was damaged. Still other attacks started huge fires, and blasted airfields, harbor installations, and barracks on Timor, Ceram, Halmahera, Dutch and British New Guinea, New Ireland, and New Britain.

GERMANS WITHDRAWING FROM SLOVAK INTERIOR

LONDON, September 26 — The Germans have withdrawn part of their troops from the interior of Slovakia, apparently to meet the impending Soviet attacks in the Carpathians, said today's communique from the commander of the Czecho-Slovak forces in Slovakia.

The Slovak Patriot forces have continued their advance east and northeast of Telgart, retaking the towns of Dobsina, Ztraiena, and Kralovi Lehota. At Handlova, in a coal-mining district, the enemy is attacking, but Slovak resistance is strong, the communique said.

German troops have begun defense works in the White Carpathians.

In the area of St. Martin, the situation remains unchanged, the communique said. (OWI)

SUPER FORTS ATTACK MANCHUKUO STEEL CITY

CHUNGKING, September 26 — Formations of the United States Air Force's largest bombers — the B-29 Super Fortresses — have carried out another smashing attack on Japanese industrial objectives in Manchukuo, Japanese-occupied Manchuria.

Mopping-up operations continued on the island of Angaur, six miles to the south, where an estimated 575 Japanese have been killed in 12 days of fighting. There, American Army engineers are rushing a large, heavy-bomber airfield to completion — the first step in converting the island into a base for operations against the Philippines, 600 miles to the west.

Ledo Road Opened

On the land front in China, United States Army engineers have linked up the new Ledo Road with existing highways leading into interior China, and have thus provided a new supply route for war material out of India.

In Burma, Indian troops are still pushing onward toward the Chin Hills, meeting little opposition from the Japanese rearguard. In Arakan, extensive patrolling was reported. (OWI - Reuter)

MUTINEERS TAKE JAPANESE SHIP

WASHINGTON, September 26 — The Japanese have lost another cargo ship — this time as a prize of war to a mutinous crew.

The ship, the Asto Maru, came into a port of unoccupied China, with a tale about how the Chinese boatswain tied the Japanese captain in a sack and threw him overboard.

The mutiny almost failed. The sack had been poorly tied, and the Japanese captain broke out of it and started swimming toward an oncoming Japanese patrol boat.

The mutinous sailors, under direction of the boatswain, hauled him back on board, kept him quiet until the patrol boat disappeared — and then threw him overboard again, this time well sewed in.

Then they proceeded to port. (OWI)

DETAILS OF ROCKET CRAFT DISCLOSED

LONDON, September 26 — The details of another British «secret weapon,» the landing craft tank, were disclosed here tonight.

This, known as the Rocketcraft, is fitted with rockets which can all be fired within the space of 30 seconds at considerable range. The fire is roughly equivalent to the fire of 30 artillery regiments, or 30 cruisers, each mounted with 12 six-inch guns.

Rocketcraft were first used in the Sicilian landings, where their «broadsides» so shocked the enemy garrisons in certain positions that they surrendered without further resistance. The weight and intensity of their fire would so shatter garrisons of the enemy's defense localities and gun batteries that Allied assault troops, moving close behind this storm of fire, met an adversary partially, if not completely stunned. LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN REPRESENTATIVES TO U. S., U. K. URGED

LONDON, September 26 — Italy is to be given a greater degree of self-government and is to be invited to appoint «direct representatives» to London and Washington.

These developments in diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the United States and Italy, 12 months after Italy's exit from the war, were announced here tonight by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin Roosevelt in a joint statement.

The statement, issued after a discussion of the Italian situation at the President's residence in Hyde Park, said that Allied engineers, technicians, and industrial experts are to be sent to Italy to help in the country's economic recovery. The American «Trading with the Enemy» Act has been modified so that Italy may resume business transactions with the outside world.

The announcement said:

«We believe we should give encouragement to those Italians who stand for the political rebirth in Italy and who are completing the destruction of its Fascist system. The American and British peoples are, of course, horrified by the recent mob action in Rome, but feel that greater responsibility placed in the hands of the Italian people and on its government will most readily prevent the re-currence of such acts.»

The British High Commissioner in Italy, the statement said, will become ambassador. The American representative in Rome already holds that rank.

The first and immediate consideration in Italy is the relief of hunger and sickness and fear. «To this end,» the declaration stated, «we have instructed our representatives at the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to declare for the sending of medical aids and other essential supplies to Italy.

«At the same time, the first steps should be taken toward the reconstruction of Italian economy — economy laid low under years of misrule by Mussolini and supplies ravished by the German policy of vengeful destruction. These steps should be taken primarily as military steps to [illegible]

UNRRA COMMITTEE'S REPORT ON ITALY APPROVED

MONTREAL, September 26 — The reports of the Committee on Policy, authorizing limited aid to Italy, were approved by the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration in its session here today.

The committee reports were approved without a dissenting vote, and constitute a program of action for speedy major relief operations in distressed areas.

Herbert H. Lehman, director general of UNRRA, read a Government statement, which will become a part of the record, reemphasizing the limited type of aid proposed for Italy. (OWI)

BONOMI GOVERNMENT DENOUNCES MUNICH PACT

ROME, September 26 — In an official announcement issued here today, the Italian Government declared that it considers as null and void the Munich Pact of September, 1938, the Ciano-Ribbentrop Vienna Agreement of November, 1938, and all other acts which, as a consequence of these accords, aimed at menacing the independence of the Republic of Czecho-Slovakia.

The announcement, contained in a Government Press and Information Bureau release, also said care of Czecho-Slovak interests in Italy is now in the hands of Consul General and Minister Plenipotentiary Vladimir Vanek, who arrived in Rome a few days ago. (UNN)

ANNULMENT OF MATTEOTTI TRIAL

ROME, September 29 — Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for the Punishment of Fascist Crimes, today asked for the annulment of the Rome and Chieti court decisions rendered in 1925 and 1926 in the Matteotti murder trial.

The High Commissioner has sent the court proceedings and all other documents related to the case to the Court of Cassation chancellery. Once the annulment has been pronounced, it is expected these will be turned over to competent legal authorities for a new investigation of the circumstances surrounding the Matteotti murder and a possible reopening of the trial.

Giacomo Matteotti, a member of the Chamber of Deputies, was murdered on 10 June 1923, on the eve of his announced intention to speak against the Mussolini Government. His body was found several days after in the Garbatella woods, not far from Rome. (UNN)

LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN REPRESENTATIVES TO U. S., U. K. URGED

LONDON, September 26 — Italy is to be given a greater degree of self-government and is to be invited to appoint «direct representatives» to London and Washington.

These developments in diplomatic relations between Great Britain and the United States and Italy, 12 months after Italy's exit from the war, were announced here tonight by Prime Minister Winston Churchill and President Franklin Roosevelt in a joint statement.

The statement, issued after a discussion of the Italian situation at the President's residence in Hyde Park, said that Allied engineers, technicians, and industrial experts are to be sent to Italy to help in the country's economic recovery. The American «Trading with the Enemy» Act has been modified so that Italy may resume business transactions with the outside world.

The announcement said:

«We believe we should give encouragement to those Italians who stand for the political rebirth in Italy and who are completing the destruction of its Fascist system. The American and British peoples are, of course, horrified by the recent mob action in Rome but feel that greater responsibility placed in the hands of the Italian people and on its government will most readily prevent the recurrence of such acts.»

The British High Commissioner in Italy, the statement said, will become ambassador. The American representative in Rome already holds that rank.

The first and immediate consideration in Italy is the relief of hunger and sickness and fear. «To this end,» the declaration stated, «we have instructed our representatives at the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration to declare for the sending of medical aids and other essential supplies to Italy.

«At the same time, the first steps should be taken toward the reconstruction of Italian economy — economy laid low under years of misrule by Mussolini and supplies ravished by the German policy of wasteful destruction. These steps should be taken primarily as military aims to put the full resources of Italy and the Italian people into the struggle to defeat Germany and Japan.» (Reuter)

ROOSEVELT ON ITALIAN RELIEF

NEW YORK, September 26 — General Pope, publisher of the Italian-language newspaper Il Progresso Italo-Americano, on Saturday made public a letter written to him by President Roosevelt concerning Italian relief.

Mr. Roosevelt's letter was written after Pope had sent him an editorial from Il Progresso appealing to the President for prompt relief measures in Italy.

The President's letter, dated September 18, said:

I am glad to have your letter of September 9, and it gave me additional ammunition at Quebec, where I am trying to work out amelioration of the situation in Italy.

All I can do, is to ask you to give me a little time because of two things. First, I am trying to coordinate the matter of relief with the War Department, the UNRRA, etc., and second, to carry this on in complete agreement with the British.

Also, I am most anxious to have the Italian Government take over an increasing share of the work of distribution.

ITALY MUST GET RID OF FASCISTS, NENNI SAYS

AQUILA, September 26 — In a speech before the Provincial Socialist Federation here Sunday, Pietro Nenni said the reconstruction of Italy cannot be accomplished unless the forces which held sway in the country for the past 20 years are swept aside.

The General Secretary of the Italian Socialist Party conceded that Fascism in Italy is dead as a doctrine, but insisted that it is still very much alive in the interests which put it into power and supported it throughout the past two decades.

Italy, he said, must redeem herself from the crimes committed during Fascism, especially by increasing its participation in the defeat of the Nazis, and added:

«When we grow impatient toward the Allies, we must remember that somehow declared war against them. But foreigners insult us every time they say the Italian people are responsible for the crimes of Fascism.»

Speaking of epuration, Nenni said it must be the task of the people, and not of «old magistrates and prefects,» and suggested that it be carried out «without too many papers.» (UNN)

PISA TOWER DAMAGE WAS GERMAN

ROME, September 26 — Ironically enough, the sole damage to the famed Leaning Tower at Pisa — which in German broadcasts the Allies so frequently were accused of shelling — is the loss of one colonette struck by a German anti-aircraft shell.

The loss of the colonette — one of the hundreds of small columns that circle the tower at its several levels — was confirmed today by the Allied Control Commission's Division of Fine Arts, Monuments and Archives.

Detailed inspection of art treasures in Pisa is hampered still by German mines and booby-traps, ACC's experts reported.

«The southern half of the town is smashed badly, but the northern portion is damaged mainly by the mines which the Germans blew in every street leading north from the river, as they retreated,» Major J. B. Ward Perkins, deputy director of ACC's MFAA Division, reported.

The Lungarno (street) on both banks of the river has a few blasted gaps; otherwise, that interesting section escaped with superficial damage. The picturesque mediaeval Chapel of La Spina on the south bank is substantially intact.

The condition of the Cathedral area (including the Leaning Tower) in the decidedly vulnerable position on the northeast corner of Pisa was described today by ACC officers as «a monument to Allied restraint.»

Already the roofs of the Cathedral and the Baptistry have been repaired following unusually slight, superficial damage, mostly from small shells.

The only serious damage to historical treasures is in the Campo Santo, the roof of which burned after the Germans had removed all fire fighting apparatus from the area.

UNITED NATIONS

CHURCHILL ON ESCAPE OF WAR CRIMINALS

LONDON, September 26 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a statement to Commons today about war criminals, said that the British Government was resolved to do the utmost to prevent nazi criminals from finding refuge in neutral territories.

Mr. Churchill's declaration came during a series of questions and statements concerning post-war justice for the war criminals. The Prime Minister had been asked about a statement attributed to Sir Cecil Hurst, chairman of the United Nations War Crimes Commission, that if Hitler managed to escape to a neutral country, the Allies could do nothing.

Mr. Churchill then eluded against statements out of their context. He said: «I understand that the remarks attributed to Sir Cecil Hurst in the newspapers do not represent accurately what he said. It is one of those cases of taking out detached sentences from their context, and not having proper regard to all necessary limiting and guarding phrases and words which are proper to public statement. His Majesty's Government are resolved to do their utmost to prevent Nazi criminals from finding refuge in neutral territories from the consequences of their crimes.»

Interrupting the Prime Minister, Sir William Davison (Conservative) said that, in a subsequent explanation, Hurst had declared existing extraditional machinery was inappropriate to the circumstances, and some new arrangement might be insisted upon to ensure the surrender of the war-guilty. Sir William suggested it was essential for Britain, America and Russia to take immediate steps to warn neutrals that they will not be permitted to shelter Hitler and other war criminals from receiving punishment due them.

Mr. Churchill replied: «Odd as it may seem, the point has not entirely escaped the Government.

«I notice a number of neutrals have already made satisfactory statements upon the subject, but it is not our intention to allow the escape of these men to be effected without exerting almost every effort which civilized powers can contemplate.»

The case of Napoleon — who remained a British prisoner for several years — was brought up, and the Prime Minister pointed out:

«Napoleon gave himself up and threw himself upon the mercy of Britain and was kept for the rest of his life as a Prisoner of State.»

Labor Member Captain Dugdale asked if Mr. Churchill included Spain in those countries that had given satisfactory assurances that war criminals would not be harbored within their boundaries. Mr. Churchill answered:

«I do not think I have noticed any particular pronouncement by Spain.»

He declared: «No,» to a suggestion by Daniel Lipson (Independent) that because of the public concern a full report of what Hurst had said should be made available. «What Hurst says,» said Mr. Churchill, «is if necessary overridden and superseded by what is said on behalf of the Government.» (Reuter)

CHURCHILL OUTLINES POST-WAR SECURITY PLANS

LONDON, September 26 — Prime Minister Churchill, who returned here this morning after his conference with President Roosevelt in Quebec, made a statement to the House of Commons later today about a post-war organization for world peace. He also praised the heroism and tenacity of the Polish Home Army and the population of Warsaw.

Mr. Churchill told Commons that Britain's policy was to join with the governments of the United States, Russia, and China in reaching an agreement upon a set of proposals for establishing a group to maintain peace and security, and to further social and economic cooperation among peace-loving nations.

The first steps toward such an organization are being taken in conversations among officials of the four governments at Dumbarton Oaks, at Washington, said Mr. Churchill. «None of the governments represented is committed at present,» he added, «but conversations are on the official level.»

«If, as I greatly hope, we succeed in framing such joint proposals, they will be communicated to other governments of the United Nations concerned as a basis for discussion at a joint conference of all United Nations,» Mr. Churchill continued. An appropriate opportunity would be given to the Commons to consider these Big Four proposals before anything was finally settled, he added.

After praising the Poles in Warsaw, who for nearly two months have fought to contribute all in their power to drive the Germans from the Polish capital, Mr. Churchill said the British Government had always made it clear to all concerned that they were too far from the scene to undertake the responsibility for ordering or supporting a general rising in Poland.

At the same time, they persistently used their good offices to promote cooperation and coordination of plans regarding such matters between the Polish and Soviet authorities, and, despite formidable practical difficulties, have furnished military supplies by air to the Poles. The Russians also sent supplies as soon as operational plans permitted and direct contact was established.

Mr. Churchill will make a statement on the war and the international situation in Parliament on Thursday, Mr. Eden announced today. (OWI-Reuter)

U. S. SHIPS ORDERED TO BY-PASS ARGENTINA

WASHINGTON, September 26 — After October 1, no ships of United States registry may carry goods out of Argentine ports.

An order prohibiting the use of American vessels for Argentine export trade was issued today by the War Shipping Administration under a directive from the United States State Department.

The State Department said the action was taken because of «war requirements,» adding that other South American nations, «effective contributors to the war effort,» would continue to have U. S. bottoms for shipments to the north.

There was no provision in the order to prohibit non-American vessels from entering United States harbors with Argentine goods.

Most of Argentina's exports to the United States have been carried in vessels of United States registry. (OWI)

BLACKLIST OF PRO-AXIS FIRMS TO BE MAINTAINED

WASHINGTON, September 26 — It was announced by the State Department today that the United States and Britain have decided to maintain a blacklist of foreign firms who are today friendly to the Axis, to permit the Allied governments after the war «to deal properly with firms which have been part and parcel of the Axis effort to gain world domination.»

It added that the lists will also be necessary to maintain control over foreign assets, which have been looted from rightful owners by Axis governments, until the Axis can be deprived of this stolen property.

The statement added that other firms on the list «constitute foreign investments by Axis leaders in an effort to finance themselves and their cause after the surrender of Germany,» and that the lists will constitute a means of furthering the wartime economic strangulation of Japan.

It is reported that, of the 45 countries and territories whose nationals have been placed on «the proclaimed list of blocked nations,» Argentina has the greatest number — 1,654.

Reuter said the official statement made no reference to Argentina by name, but a tabulation of the September edition of the proclaimed list showed the South American country which Secretary of State Cordell Hull has repeatedly described as having a «Fascist» government.

Other countries, in order of number on the list, are: Chile, 1,451; Switzerland, 1,290; Spain, 1,284; Peru, 1,163; Portugal, 1,050; Colombia, 1,123; and Sweden, 479.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 26 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied troops have made good gains on the east of the Eindhoven-Nijmegen salient. Helmond and Deurne have been captured, and the Allies advanced several miles to the north.

In the Schijndel area, enemy attacks against the supply corridor have been repulsed. West of Turnhout, our troops have gained a bridgehead over the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal.

From the area north of Aachen to the Meurthe Valley, there has been little change. Sporadic artillery fire and patrolling by the enemy continue in the north half of this sector.

East of Aachen, our patrol activity has met strong enemy reaction.

In the Moselle Valley slight advances were made by our troops northeast of Nancy.

Southeast of Luneville our forces have made gains in the Bonamenil area.

In the Epinal area our troops have advanced several miles east of the Moselle. The village of Jeoxey has been taken, and the occupation of Epinal completed.

West of Belfort, gains of several miles were made by our armor and infantry against stiff opposition.

Air:

Gun positions and strongpoints in the Arnhem area were attacked by medium, light, and fighter-bombers yesterday. Four enemy aircraft which attempted to intercept our bombers were shot down by escorting fighters.

Road and rail transport in the Ruhr was strafed by fighters. Fortified positions at Calais were bombarded for over an hour by heavy bombers which dropped more than 1,000 tons of high explosives. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 26 — In view of the threat that the Patriots, who have again disrupted the railway line from Lumo to Switzerland, represent for the Germans, the German command in Milan has sent large reinforcements to the endangered sector. The line is guarded by patrols, and the bridges are watched by strong German detachments. Several SS battalions have been stationed in the Varese sector. But all German measures are not sufficient to hinder Patriot attacks against enemy lines of communications.

The Semplone line has been interrupted by damage to the Cuzzego bridge.

In various Alpine sectors, especially in Piedmont, lively clashes are in progress.

Fifty vehicles containing airplane material have been captured by the Patriots near Turin. The Germans have removed infantry units to the vicinity of Cerreto Pass, with the intention of rebuilding a bridge, and reopening the road between Spezia and Reggio Emilia. Patriots carried out several harassing raids, which could not prevent the concentration of German troops, who finally attacked their positions before Cerreto Pass to the northeast of Spezia. After strenuous resistance the Patriots were forced to retire. The struggle lasted two hours and the enemy suffered heavy losses.

In Liguria, the Fascist Monte Rosa Division, in the course of bitter fighting, lost more than 80 killed and about 100 wounded.

According to latest particulars on the liberation of Domodossola, it is learned that the enemy garrison was composed of 510 Nazi-Fascists, including many SS troops. The city, though surrounded by several thousand Patriots, did not become a battlefield, thanks to the intervention of the local ecclesiastical authorities, who mediated the surrender of the Nazi-Fascist garrison. After the liberation the Fascist mayor was arrested; the district secretary of the Fascist Party and the chief of police succeeded in fleeing.

The Garibaldi Division of Domodossola extended its control along the Domodossola-Milan line.

Patriots captured an armored train, together with machine guns and ammunition. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 26. — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

Several enemy attacks were repulsed and a penetration removed by counter-attacks in our beachhead in western Holland and in the Antwerp sector.

In Central Holland, above all in the area of Eindhoven, fierce fighting continues. While enemy attacks southwest of Vechel failed, the enemy succeeded in advancing a few kilometers to the east and southeast of Helmond. An enemy relief attack for the remnants of the British 1st Airborne Division, encircled west of Arnhem, was smashed by our counter-attack. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

North of Nijmegen, the British continued their strong attack supported by tanks, but were able to gain little ground only.

Effective raids were launched by our battle plane formations, in spite of adverse weather conditions, against enemy troop movements, infantry positions, and crossing traffic to the southeast of Arnhem. The enemy suffered heavy losses and lost 23 aircraft in aerial combat.

Southeast of Aix-la-Chapelle, local fighting activity was reported. Several enemy attacks were repelled and an American fighting unit was encircled.

Strong enemy tank attacks on either side of Luneville were repulsed. Strong units of the American 7th Army continued their offensive between Epinal and Remiremont. The enemy succeeded in widening his Moselle River bridgehead in the face of stubborn resistance offered by our troops. Fierce fighting is continuing.

On the Adriatic sector, the new German defence line successfully withstood strong enemy pressure.

Eastern Front:

Southwest of Transylvania, enemy activity increased along the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier. To the north of Arad, German and Hungarian troops threw back enemy spearheads.

Vivid local fighting activity is reported from the area between Torenburg and the fringe of the east Carpathians. On the Beskide Passes, the enemy continued, throughout the day, his attacks, employing fresh reserves. They were repelled or held in hard fighting.

Between the River Duena and the Riga Bight, numerous attacks by the hard-pressing opponent were repulsed, and 40 tanks knocked out in the course of our disengagement movements. Thus, the total number of tanks destroyed during the time from September 14 to September 24 has increased to 936.

Air:

American bomber formations, under cover of heavy clouds, launched raids on towns in southwestern Germany, above all on Koblenz, Frankfort-Main, and Strasbourg. Anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe brought down 11 enemy aircraft.

During the night, British planes dropped bombs on Mannheim. (Radio Berlin)

Bitter Fighting in Italy: Bitter fighting is in progress in the Adriatic sector, where the 8th Army started the third phase of its offensive. Another fierce battle is being fought astride the Firenzuola Road around Monte Fugiolo and Monte Latino. The Allies succeeded in achieving some small gains around Palazzuolo.

Germans Getting Ready in France: The western front is now being stabilized and made ready for the imminent encounter of opposing armor. The Allied failure in Holland has seriously upset all plans of the Allied Supreme Command, which has now to reckon with powerful German forces ready to take the initiative at an opportune moment.

As he met with no success, Italy had to intervene. After the calvary of the past year, with all of Italy brutally destroyed, the country is again looking towards a better future. After the victory, Italy will need some time for reconstruction. Thereafter, she will become a European, Mediterranean, and African power and in this may join once again the big powers of the world.

SUPPLIES FERRIED TO PARATROOPS AT ARNHEM

SHAEF, September 25 — Reinforcements and supplies have been ferried across the River Lek both by day and under cover of night, to help the lone legion of paratroops still holding out at Arnhem. The encircled airborne force has not yet received substantial relief, however. Bitter fighting continues.

The relieving column consisted of duck-borne infantry of the British 2nd Army from Nijmegen, who linked up with Polish paratroops dropped in the Elst area, between Oosterbeek and launched themselves across the river to succour their encircled comrades. All night and all day they have been ferrying food and supplies to the northern bank.

Typhoons and Mustangs of the 2nd TAF operating in the Arnhem area, yesterday destroyed 13 locomotives and damaged 14. Road and river transport were also attacked in this area, and other Tactical aircraft gave close support to the ground troops, destroying enemy gun positions and troop concentrations.

Picked SS troops, reinforced by tanks, in a strong night attack against the corridor, had cut the main road north to Nijmegen by dawn today. This, the only major built-up road crossing the marshlands and ditches of this countryside, stands six feet above the surrounding terrain, on which vehicles were sitting targets. British tanks and armour are now fighting furiously to restore the situation, while infantry pushed on through side roads to the Rhine.

Beek, Mook Liberated

On the east flank of the salient, Allied troops have crossed the border into German territory in two places; near Beek, and in the neighborhood of Reichswald Forest. Beek, three miles east of Nijmegen, and Mook, seven miles south of the town, have been liberated, and Allied troops are now within seven miles of Kleve, the northernmost anchor of the Siegfried Line.

British armoured units are now reported to be less than 40 miles from Essen, home of the Krupp Works, in the heart of Germany's industrial Ruhr.

Along the western flank of the Allied corridor extending from Belgium into Holland, strong German attacks were beaten off at Uden, 18 miles southwest of Nijmegen, and at Erp, four miles farther south.

British troops have entered Turnhout, 22 miles east of Antwerp and 24 miles west of Eindhoven. The retreating Germans have been pushed back from the Escaut Canal to the Turnhout Canal, and Canadian forces have driven five miles northeast of Antwerp and crossed the Antwerp-Turnhout Canal. The Canadians advanced 10 miles on a 30-mile front east of Antwerp during Saturday night and last night.

CANADIANS OPEN ALL-OUT ATTACK ON CALAIS

LONDON, September 25 — Canadian troops, supported by RAF heavy bombers, this morning began an all-out attack on Calais, one of the strongest fortresses in Europe, now almost isolated by extensive inundations.

By noon, the strongpoint of Escalles, four miles southwest of Calais, had fallen. After that, pillboxes were overrun in quick succession. The attack was strikingly similar to that which captured Boulogne last week.

The encircled airborne force has not yet received substantial relief, however. Bitter fighting continues.

The relieving column consisted of duck-borne infantry of the British 2nd Army from Nijmegen, who linked up with Polish paratroops dropped in the Elst area, between Nijmegen and the River Lek. The Germans have the river under fire and the ferrying of men and supplies is a hazardous task.

Near Arnhem, the British and Polish airborne forces are clinging to their hold on the high ground west of the city, fighting from house to house against numerically superior German forces. Official sources said they are tiring under the constant pounding by German shells and mortar fire.

Dispatches from the Arnhem area today described how the duck-borne infantry and Polish paratroops struggled to relieve the encircled forces in the city.

The duck-borne troops pushed northward through the supply corridor from Nijmegen to the Rhine, fighting, advancing, and fighting again. They fought an all-out battle at Oosterhout, to the west of the northern end of the Nijmegen bridge, where the Nazis were in a strong position with 88's, tanks, and dug-in infantry. The relieving column, aided by self-propelled guns, attacked and knocked out tanks, took 160 prisoners, including SS troops, and then resumed their drive northward, spurred forward by urgent radio messages from the hard-pressed troops five miles away.

Once they had linked up with the Poles in the Elst area, they threw themselves forward to the Lek south of to Nijmegen by [illegible] road crossing the marshlands and ditches of this countryside, stands six feet above the surrounding terrain, on which vehicles were sitting targets. By noon, the strongpoint of Escalles, four miles southwest of Calais, had fallen. After that, pillboxes were overrun in quick succession. The attack was strikingly similar to that which reduced Boulogne last week.

On the American 3rd Army front, French troops, whose presence had not been announced previously, have been attacking the Germans with great audacity and effectiveness. Using American equipment, they have made rapid advances through difficult terrain on the Moselle, and despite tough German tank opposition have forced a crossing of the river north of Epinal and swept on to their present positions through Baccarat and Dieuze. SHERWOOD RESIGNS AS OVERSEAS O.W.I. CHIEF

WASHINGTON, September 25 — Robert E. Sherwood, Director of the Overseas Branch of the Office of War Information, resigned tonight to return to private life and assist President Roosevelt in his campaign for reelection.

Elmer Davis, OWI Director, appointed Edward W. Barrett, Executive Director of the Overseas Branch since January, to succeed Sherwood. (OWI)

The Allies have also a small bridgehead across the canals near Lochenberg, eight miles northeast of Antwerp. A 15 to 20-mile advance in this area would cut road and rail routes from the islands of Walcheren and Beveland, to which the Germans have been withdrawing across the Scheldt.

On the American sectors of the front, hard fighting continues. Front-line messages say massed United States artillery is hammering traffic centers and military installations deep in German territory. Correspondents said Allied artillery laid down a withering fire all along the American 1st Army's front. The heaviest guns, including 240-millimeter and 155-millimeter howitzers, were in action and set two towns containing German petrol dumps, afire.

A German counter-attack east of the frontier city of Aachen was repulsed. South of Aachen, near Rotgen, slight enemy gains were hammered out.

American infantrymen yesterday captured Epinal, 40 miles southeast of Nancy a Reuter dispatch reported. The town fell to a fast outflanking maneuver by troops who stealthily crossed the river by night above and below the town. The whole town was mopped up by noon, except for isolated snipers.

In the vicinity of Bacarat, enemy resistance is decreasing, and French forces have made local advances five miles north of that town. One correspondent with General Patton's 3rd Army said, "Previously we took thousands of prisoners daily. Now it has become a matter of killing as many Germans as possible daily, and smashing the first-class equipment they are compelled to use in every counter-attack." (OWI-Reuter)

HEAVIES ATTACK GERMAN RAIL LINES

LONDON, September 25 — More than 1,300 Flying Fortresses and Liberators today attacked five large marshalling yards serving the western front, and other military and industrial objectives in western Germany, while about 200 British heavy bombers dumped more than 1,120 tons of explosives on besieged Calais. This morning's hour-long attack on this French Channel port followed a heavy pounding of German fortified positions there only yesterday evening.

The American bombers over Germany today struck at two marshalling yards at Frankfurt and two at Coblenz, both Siegfried Line supply depots. They also bombed the yards at Ludwigshafen. Bombing was done by instrument.

The heavy bombers were escorted by strong forces of Mustangs and Thunderbolts from Britain, which were later reinforced by Lightnings and other Mustangs rising from French bases. Part of the escorting force was drawn from the 9th USAAF — the first time since D-day that 9th USAAF fighters escorted 8th USAAF bombers.

Nine bombers and three fighters were lost to ground fire in today's attack. No enemy planes were encountered.

American and British fighter-bombers worked most of yesterday over a wide variety of ground targets in support of the armies on the German frontier, the Associated Press reported today. In addition, French-based U. S. Thunderbolts were called in to help break up a formation of 100 Nazi tanks blocking the U. S. 3rd Army in the Nancy area. Two low-level attacks scattered the tanks into the woods, where they were strafed and bombed.

In the four-day period ending today 9th USAAF pilots in almost constant attacks in the Coblenz-Cologne-Trier and Stolberg areas have destroyed 247 motor transports, 58 armored vehicles (including 17 tanks), 269 railroad cars and 60 freight cars.

The evacuation of wounded to Great Britain by air continues all the time, and the total number of casualties flown from the Continent out of units of the British 2nd and Canadian 1st armies alone since D-day is 23,607.

RAF Avengers of Coastal Command attacked enemy [illegible] Dutch Coast on Saturday and yesterday.

"The hour for action has come!

"Note carefully the following instructions.

"The organized cells of foreign workers within the Reich will take immediate action according to pre-arranged plan. Members of organized cells will refrain from all unorganized resistance and useless provocation of the Gestapo. They will obey the orders of their leaders precisely.

"Foreign workers who are not members of organized cells and who have not already carried out my instructions to go into hiding in the towns or — preferably — on the land, will do so at once."

The spokesmen cautioned the foreign workers carefully to memorize the instructions provided with the "instruments" and then destroy the instructions. He continued:

"Work out your plan of action. After your plan is complete in every detail — and only then — put the instruments to the use for which they were designed.

"Bear in mind, while deciding on your plans, that foodstuffs and crops in Germany will be needed after the defeat of Hitler.

"Act wisely. Do not under-rate the power of the Gestapo. However, remember that today the Gestapo stands in fear of 12 million foreign workers who, by acting now, can seal the fate of the Third Reich." (Reuter)

TROOP-CARRIER PLANES FLY 8,000 SORTIES

LONDON, September 25 — U. S. troop-carrier planes flew 8,000 sorties in the first week of the first Allied airborne invasion of Holland, an Associated Press dispatch said today.

The press agency quoted a staff officer as saying that 40 million pounds of heavy supplies and troops had been landed since the airborne operations began last Sunday, with a loss of less than three per cent — despite heavy flak and fighter opposition after the Nazis recovered from their initial surprise. FRENCH ARMY WANT TO CONTINUE THE FIGHT

SHAEF, September 25 — Although the liberation of France is almost complete, between 200,000 and 300,000 French want to continue the war against Germany, General Koenig, Commander-in-Chief of the FFI and Military Governor of Paris, said today.

Between 100,000 and 150,000 Frenchmen want to remain in the French Army after the war, but they need arms and equipment of the type already supplied to French divisions by the Allies.

Southwestern France has been almost completely mopped up by the FFI, but there are still a few pockets of resistance on the coast in the region of La Rochelle, south of Loire Estuary, and northwest of Bordeaux. These troops will be forced to surrender very soon.

Probably more than 30,000 Germans have been captured already by the FFI. (Reuter)

ALLIES CAPTURE OVER HALF-MILLION PRISONERS

LONDON, September 25 — Since D-day, Allied armies have taken well over half a million prisoners in France, Belgium, and Holland, a recapitulation by the United Press showed today.

Keeping count of prisoners has been one of the major statistical jobs of this campaign. In addition to the American, British, and Canadian armies, French, Polish, and Belgian Resistance Forces have contributed their share.

The capture of the great ports of Boulogne and Brest in the latter part of last week swelled the total by 43,000, while the largest haul of the campaign consisted of between 43,000 and 45,000 taken in the Falaise Pocket between August 12 and 23.

RAF Avengers of Coastal Command attacked enemy shipping off the Dutch Coast on Saturday and yesterday, the British Air Ministry stated today. The aircraft set fire to a large vessel and an E-boat which were sighted five miles south of Den Helder.

Flying-bomb attacks were launched against the London area and southern counties in short bursts early this morning and just after dark last night. During the three weeks ended this morning, only 129 flying bombs were sent against England, the British Air Ministry announced today.

The Ministry also disclosed that many land and parachute mines were dropped over London by the Germans during the night raids of 1940 and 1941, causing widespread damage. The largest parachute mines contained about two tons of high explosives, an I.N.S. dispatch said. (OWI - Reuter)

EISENHOWER CALLS TO WORKERS IN REICH

LONDON, September 25 — Mobilization of all foreign workers inside Germany «for active resistance» and «for immediate action,» with instruments to be furnished by the Allies, was called for tonight by General Eisenhower.

Of the Allied armies involved in the fighting, the American 1st Army has the biggest bag of captives, according to accessible figures. It has captured a total of 182,493 between June 6 and September 22.

The American 9th Army, whose presence in France was announced a few days ago, captured 60,000 up to September 22, while the 3rd Army figure, available up to September 6, is listed as 76,000. The armies in southern France, now described as the 6th Group Sector, had taken 72,000 prisoners by September 13. (OWI)

F.F.I. CONTRIBUTION TO BRITTANY CAMPAIGN

WASHINGTON, September 25 — Now that the fighting in Brittany is almost ended, the real story of the FFI part in the fighting on the French Peninsula can be told, a dispatch to the Washington Post said yesterday.

It is a story of an amazing and letter-perfect two-month campaign of the French Forces of the Interior fought behind the Germans lines and spearheaded by nearly 1,000 French paratroopers, who started landing the day before D-day, the dispatch revealed.

«The FFI kept mobile and powerful columns of Germans away from the main stage in Normandy, where

General Eisenhower was mounting his great campaign. French Resistance forces seized three main highways and scores of secondary roads, as well as the two railroads that run the peninsula. They pinned up in this spout of the tea-pot several German divisions, including the tough parachutists. Then, when General Bradley's army came out of Normandy from the north, the Patriots had things in hand on the Americans' flanks.

The last week's events at Brest, St. Nazaire, and L'Orient were proof of how well the FFI carried out their assignment. These ports were packed with Germans who once were good fighting men, but who spent their last days of war far from the big battlefield. And that was just where General Eisenhower wanted them to be — out of the picture.

The final assaults were carried out by American troops, but the French Patriot Army had done its job.

French sources in Washington disclosed that there were 15,000 members of the FFI in Brittany on D-day. As the FFI got more volunteers and more guns to put in their hands, a pattern of sabotage and ambush began to take form in other parts of Brittany, but it was an ordered process directed by Koenig and his staff, not wanton destruction.

Between June 6 and July 25, there were 180 derailments behind the German lines in northern France. By August 2, General Patton's American armoured column racing out of Normandy had reached Rennes, halfway across the peninsula. This was the signal for the last phase of the FFI's Brittany campaign.

General Koenig addressed a message to his reserves — thousands of loyal Frenchmen not already in the FFI. The time had come, he told them, to blast the Germans loose from every road, railroad, and communication center in Brittany and send them scurrying for their last strongholds.

In the next few days, American columns branched out over Brittany with incredible speed, one making the last 75 miles to the outskirts of Brest overnight.

They dashed over highways swept clear of any important German resistance and across bridges protected from destruction by the Patriot army of Brittany. (OWI)

5TH ARMY WITHIN 12 MILES OF PO PLAIN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 25 — American troops of the 5th Army, thrusting to the northeast along the Santerno River Valley, yesterday advanced to within 12 miles of the Plain of the Po in an offensive which has carried them well beyond the last prepared enemy defensive works of the Gothic line, it was announced here today.

American troops were reported to be in the mountain area southeast of Castel del Rio, a road-junction village from which lock two roads leading to the Po Valley at Castel San Pietro and at Imola, where they join the main lateral highway from Rimini to Bologna and Milan. These troops, and others south of Roccadisupra, a hamlet five miles west of Castel del Rio, were officially described as the «northernmost points in Italy in Allied possession.»

A statement by an Allied Public Relations Officer today disclosed that the 5th Army forces which were reported yesterday to be within 15 miles of Bologna were «forward reconnaissance elements,» which did not stay at this advanced and exposed point. American troops in the Roccadi Supra and Castel del Rio areas, on the other hand, represented «definite forward stabilized positions,» the official said.

Castel del Rio is some 21 miles southeast of Bologna, and Rocca di Supra is at least 20 miles south of the Po Valley city.

Extensive Enemy Demolition

The prong of the 5th Army thrusting into the Santerno River Valley has captured a series of four features from six to eight miles northeast of Firenzuola to clear their access to the Po Plain, official reports said. Farther west, other 5th Army formations crossed the Santerno River near its source, capturing the Coroncina hill mass, five miles northwest of the Futa Pass, and pressed forward to cut the Prato-Castiglione-Bologna Highway at a point just two miles south of Castiglione, a town six miles northwest of the Futa Pass on Highway 65.

On the Adriatic front, where Lt. General Sir Oliver Leese's 8th Army forces are on the edge of the Lombardy Plain, heavy fighting continued yesterday, with official reports again emphasizing that German forces gave «no indication» of withdrawing movements. Enemy parachute forces, supported by tanks and self-propelled guns, fought savagely among the woodlands and vineyards of the coastal plain to hem in the Allied troops fanning out over the fertile countryside. German artillery was massed well forward, to put down a heavy protective screen of shellfire covering the German troops barricaded in farmhouses and behind ditches in the area north of the coastal corridor through which the 8th Army forces have pushed.

8th Nears Rubicon

Canadian troops made a mile gain along the coast yesterday to reach Fedele Grande, five miles northwest of Rimini, while 8th Army forces west of Rimini pushed over a mile beyond the Rimini-Bologna rail lines north of San Giustina, to near the Uso River. This shallow stream is the Rubicon of antiquity — boundary line between Italy proper and the province of Gallia Cisalpina — made memorable by Julius Caesar's decision to cross it to carry to successful conclusion his civil war with Pompey.

German forces counter-attacked the advancing 8th Army troops at a point 1,500 yards east of the historic stream yesterday, although Gurkhas, fighting to gain control of the town of Santarcangelo di Romagna, reported that the Germans had pulled back after blowing the bridge over the river at this point, six miles from its mouth.

In heavy fighting yesterday 8th Army troops gained control of the six-mile stretch of road between the Marecchia and the Uso Rivers and leading from the Emilia Highway at Santarcangelo di Romagna southward to Scorticata and thence to the Upper Tiber Valley. Scorticata remained in German hands, but Allied forces were pressing westward to attack ridge positions north of this village and had already gained a hold on the hills to the southwest. Montebello, a hamlet 13 miles southwest of Rimini and a mile and a half southwest of Scorticata, was reported being cleared of the enemy.

On both the two main sectors of fighting along the Italian front, south of Bologna and at the Adriatic edge of the Po Plain, German resistance continued to be heavy yesterday. German forces were still following Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's orders to fight to the last man and the last bullet.

Far with the loss of the Apennines positions and the natural obstacles to Allied advance which they represent, the decimated German forces will have lost the last line along which stabilized resistance in Italy south of the Po is possible. (PRO)

ISLAND OF SOLTA FREED BY COMBINED FORCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 26 — Combined Allied naval and land forces have freed the Dalmatian island of Solta, or Soltel, clearing the last German troops from the Central Dalmatians, it was announced here today in a special communique.

The German garrison forces on the island, some 30 square miles in area, were trapped and overwhelmed in a five-day campaign ending September 26, the announcement said. At least two companies of German troops

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, September 25 — American troops of the 5th Army, thrusting to the northeast along the Santerno River Valley, yesterday advanced to within 12 miles of the Plain of the Po in an offensive which has carried them well beyond the last prepared enemy defensive works of the Goth Line, it was announced here today.

American troops were reported to be in the mountain area southeast of Castel del Rio, a road-junction village from which fork two roads leading to the Po Valley at Castel San Pietro and at Imola, where they join the main lateral highway from Rimini to Bologna and Milan. These troops, and others south of Rocodisupra, a hamlet five miles west of Castel del Rio, were officially described as the "northernmost points in Italy in Allied possession."

Castel del Rio is some 21 miles southeast of Bologna, and Roco di Supra is at least 20 miles south of the Po Valley city.

Extensive Enemy Demolition

On the direct Florence-Bologna Road, 5th Army forces were reported to have fought their way some three miles north of the Futa Pass, to take up positions at Casetta and the nearby hamlet of Covigliaio, 24 miles north of Florence and near the junction of Highway No. 65 and the road from Firenzuola. In this area, as elsewhere along the center of the Goth Line, the enemy has destroyed every bridge and culvert in the 5th Army's path, and only almost "superhuman" efforts by army engineers have made roads to the front passable, official reports said. Whole hillsides have been blasted out by the retreating enemy to block narrow roads winding about the mountains.

These demolitions and road blocks, choking off the main passageways through the barren mountain fastnesses, plus the fierce enemy resistance still being encountered, point up the difficulties overcome by the forward reconnaissance elements which were reported to have reached to within 15 miles of Bologna on Saturday.

If made in the area north of the Futa Pass, and along the main road to Bologna, this thrust would have represented a penetration of at least nine miles within the enemy's positions as indicated today. Even if made from the Castel de. Rio district in the Santerno River Valley, such a force would have thrust more than six miles beyond the northernmost American positions reported today.

Columns of troops made dramatic gains on the Adriatic coast yesterday to reach Pedero Grande, five miles northwest of Rimini, while 8th Army forces west of Rimini pushed over a mile beyond the Rimini-Bologna rail lines north of San Giustina, to near the Uso River. This shallow stream is the Rubicon of antiquity — boundary line between Italy proper and the province of Gallia Cisalpina — made memorable by Julius Caesar's decision to cross it to carry to successful conclusion his civil war with Pompey.

ISLAND OF SOLTA FREED BY COMBINED FORCES

ADVANCE AHHQ, ITALY, September 25 — Combined Allied naval and land forces have freed the Dalmatian island of Solta, or Solta, clearing the last German troops from the Central Dalmatians, it was announced here today in a special communique.

The German garrison forces on the island, some 30 square miles in area, were trapped and overwhelmed in a five-day campaign ending September 23, the announcement said. At least two companies of German troops, numbering up to 200 men, held the island, and manned installations mainly in the area of Rogac, a small port, and Grohote, another village on the eastern side of the island.

The first Allied forces to land on the island were patrol units which went ashore at the southern end late on the night of September 17. They pushed inland, and as they came under German fire, the remainder of the Commando forces came ashore at 0200 hours. The main force brought up heavy mortars and machine-guns for the final assault on the enemy positions on September 21 and the two following days, the announcement said.

An RAF squadron, less one flight, of a special RAF Regiment, landed on September 22, along with a battery of 25-pound guns, to move eastward against the German forces, then attempting to make their escape. Light Allied naval forces patrolling the waters around the island frustrated this attempt to flee to the mainland, and the garrison was "eliminated" on the early morning of September 23, the reports stated.

All the Dalmatian islands, with the exception of Hvar, have now been reported liberated. The islands of Mljet, Korcula, and Brac were reported freed on September 20, while Vis was occupied by Partisan and Allied forces in August. (PRO)

U-BOAT SUNK IN GREEK HARBOR BY BOMBERS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 25 — Liberator bombers which attacked the submarine pens at Skaramanga Harbor in Greece sank a 500-ton U-Boat and sunk and grounded two other vessels, it was reported here today.

Coastal Air Force planes attacked an 8000-ton enemy vessel and two escort ships in northern Adriatic waters yesterday, while light and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force struck at Po Valley bridges in the rear of German forces battling to hold back the Allied armies thrusting onto the Lombardy plain.

Bad weather restricted operations of medium bombers in northern Italy yesterday. (PRO)

R.A.F. GUN RUNNERS AID PARTISAN SUCCESS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 25 — RAF planes, which have flown thousands of tons of supplies into Yugoslavia in the past two years, have contributed much to recent Partisan success, an official announcement stated here today.

In a recent month the report said, RAF crews in this service, aided by Americans, transported over 2,000 tons of supplies from bases in Italy to secret landing fields in Yugoslavia or to designated parachute-drop areas held by Partisan forces. The Balkan Air Force alone has carried more than 5,000 tons of arms and supplies by air since June, the report stated.

The dropping of supplies by parachute has been so highly developed, it was said, that complete soldiers' packs containing arms, clothing, bedding, and all supplies necessary to a fighting man, as well as medical packs, radio packs, and even office supply and boot repair packs, have been made up for Partisan needs.

British, American, French, Yugoslav, Greek, and Italian airmen compose the crews of these Balkan Air Force transport units, and many types of planes, including Halifax heavy bombers and Italian craft, are used. (PRO)

TITO'S FORCES LIBERATE BANJA LUKA

LONDON, September 25 — Yugoslav Partisan forces have liberated Banja Luka, second-largest town in Bosnia, after a five-day battle in which the enemy lost 3,000 dead and 4,000 prisoners, including the commander of the German 42th Division, Marshal Tito announced today in a special communique.

An earlier communique said that an entire garrison, consisting of Austrians, surrendered to Yugoslav forces at Sava, a station on the Ljubljana-Zagreb railway.

More than half of Herzegovina is now firmly in the hands of Tito's men, and the area of liberated territory in this province is being constantly enlarged.

Yugoslav troops advancing in Serbia have occupied the stronghold of Stragarin and another fortified position south of Rudnik.

In Slavonia, the Brod-Belgrade railway line has been cut in 20 places and one bridge has been blown up.

In north-central Serbia, the Partisans defeated a strong enemy column, captured 554 prisoners, and killed 665. Large quantities of weapons and ammunition were also taken.

Bridges were blown up on the main Belgrade-Kurgujevac railroad, and in the same area, just south of Kurgujevac, the Partisans took 1,000 more prisoners.

The middle Dalmatian islands have now been cleared of the enemy.

The Yugoslavs have captured Sion, an enemy strongpoint on the Peljesac Peninsula, and with the capture of several other towns, have now cut off the Germans from their land communications in the north Adriatic.

Army took more than 50 towns in this drive, which will give the Russians a northern wedge into Hungary.

An early dispatch from Reuter reported a battle raging northwest of the rail-junction of Arad, 15 miles from the Hungarian frontier. Germans and Hungarians were fighting grimly to bar the Soviet way into Hungary, and have brought three fresh divisions to this front. But, despite all this, the Russians were moving ahead.

Tonight's Soviet communique announced that on all fronts 23 Germans tanks were destroyed or damaged and 31 enemy planes were shot down.

Reports from the Poles fighting inside Warsaw stated that German troops have started to dig trenches along the Vistula River. One line of trenches faced the river, over which the Russians were storming, and a second line faced the Poles inside the city, who are attacking from the rear.

The BBC naval correspondent said today that the Russian capture of the Estonian naval base at Baltiski should go far toward facilitating Russian naval operations outside the Gulf of Finland. This port, he pointed out, was developed as a naval base for the Russian Navy before the last war. Its capture, plus the changing situation in Finland, the correspondent said, should go far in allowing the Russians to drive passages through the elaborate mine and net defenses in the Gulf of Finland. FINNS EJECT GERMANS FROM TWO TOWNS

STOCKHOLM, September 25 — The Associated Press said that a Finnish communique today announced the Finns had captured the towns of Haukipudas and Puolanka from the German occupants, and that other Finnish troops were still advancing against the Germans in Lapland.

The two towns were given as Haukipudas, on the Bothnian Gulf, six miles north of Oulu on the way to the German stronghold of Kemi; and Puolanka, some 45 miles west of Suomusalmi in the heart of Finland. (GWI UP)

RUMANIAN PROPAGANDA MINISTRY LIQUIDATED

BUCHAREST, September 25 — The Rumanian Propaganda Ministry has been liquidated by a government decree, it was disclosed today. A single department for press and information will be created in the Rumanian Foreign Ministry.

BULGARIANS TAKE GERMAN PRISONERS

WASHINGTON, September 25 — The text of a Bulgarian communique, dated yesterday, as broadcast by Radio Sofia to Bulgaria and reported by the Federal Communications Commission here follows:

In the Timok River Valley and in the Bela Palanka, Kicevo Palanka, and Tsarevo Selo regions, there was patrol and light artillery activity.

Fighting is developing south of Strumitza, and units have advanced to the west. Prisoners and booty have been taken, including five guns, two trucks, much ammunition, and other material.

Our air forces carried out successful reconnaissance, observing much valuable information about the enemy. (PWB)

GERMAN GENERALS TELL WEHRMACHT TO REBEL

MOSCOW, September 25 — In an appeal broadcast over Radio Moscow today, 15 captured German generals and colonels told the German Army and the German people that Hitler and his associates are leading Germany to "complete catastrophe," and urged German soldiers to overthrow the Nazis and abandon the hopeless struggle.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The group of officers, whose statement was also published in Pravda, were members of the ill-fated German Army of the Southern Ukraine, and declared that they joined in full in the recent appeal made by 17 generals of the German Central Army Group.

They asserted that they had fulfilled their military duty to their troops, and continued: «Now, being in captivity, we have the opportunity to express our thoughts and opinions of the present hopeless military situation of Germany.»

They recalled the disaster inflicted upon their army, which was completely routed by the Russians in August and lost 20 divisions, and stated that, as a result, «the military situation in the Balkans has undergone radical changes.»

«Formerly our allies, Rumania and Bulgaria are now our enemies and are fighting against us,» the officers pointed out. «We have lost our strongholds and all our fleet in the Black Sea, all the oil resources in Rumania. In the south-east, a new strong front has arisen and entered into war against Germany.»

In consequence, the officers said, they considered the original appeal by the 17 generals of the Central Army Group a «right move,» declaring: «Hitler's rule and his associates are leading the Germany Army and Germany to a complete catastrophe.» (Radio Moscow)

JAP PHILIPPINE AIR FORCE BROKEN

PEARL HARBOR, September 25 — A forced withdrawal of the Japanese Navy from the immediate Philippines, breaking of the enemy air force there, and disruption of his inter-island communications, are the recent accomplishments of the United States 3rd Fleet, Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of American naval forces in the Pacific, said today in his communique.

Following the two-day attack on Manila last week in which 193 enemy ships and small craft were sunk or damaged and 465 planes destroyed or damaged, the revised total boxscore of the 3rd Fleet now stands at 429 Japanese ships and small craft sunk or damaged, and 978 planes shot down in the air or destroyed on the ground; in addition, unnumbered enemy planes have been damaged in the air or on the ground by the American carrier-based planes.

The fleet, under the command of Admiral William Halsey, also has done extensive, crippling damage to enemy airfields and naval establishments. These actions, together with the 3rd Fleet's support of the assaults on Palau Island, have merited the words of Admiral Nimitz' communique that its «operations have forced the enemy to withdraw his naval forces from their former anchorages in the Philippines, and to seek new refuges in the same general area,» and have broken his air force and his inter-island communications. The operations of the 3rd Fleet are compared to those of the 5th Fleet, which «broke the enemy carrier-based air force in the Battle of the Philippine Sea.»

Details of Attacks

Details of the Manila area engagement reveal that on the second day, September 21, of the smash at the Japanese naval forces and installations, carrier planes of the team of Admirals Halsey and Mitscher sank 45 more ships, large and small, and damaged 29; 200 enemy airplanes were destroyed or damaged.

In a later announcement, Pacific headquarters related another telling blow against the enemy's Philippine area strength. American warships exploded 10 of 13 troop and supply-laden barges trying to bring reinforcements to the beleaguered Japanese garrison on the northern end of Nauru Island, where moderate anti-aircraft fire was met.

Corsairs of the 4th Marine Wing carried out further neutralization raids against Japanese-held atolls in the Marshalls, striking at Mille on September 21 and 22, and at Jaluit and Wotje on the latter date. On the same days, Dauntless dive-bombers attacked Maloelap Island.

General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters in the Southwest Pacific said that in the latest series of air attacks on Japanese positions on the Dutch Celebes, 105 tons of bombs were dropped. Enemy interception was negligible.

The United Press says that the 29th attack in three weeks was made on Friday on the enemy positions on Celebes by a strong force of Liberator heavy bombers, which bombed enemy airdromes within 200 miles of the Philippines. The news agency added that this attack brought to 1,868 tons the total amount of explosives unloaded on the cratered Japanese runways and supply areas in the unrelenting, softening-up offensive. The enemy tried only one interception, and that was ineffective.

13 Jap Ships Struck

To the north, PT boats sank at least two enemy supply and troop craft in Morotai Strait, between Halmahera Island and American-held Morotai. Eleven Japanese luggers and barges, and many small craft were destroyed or damaged by fighter sweeps over the already heavily-hit enemy base on Ceram.

Thirty-five tons of bombs were dropped by Allied attack planes and fighter-bombers on Bubo and Utarom airdromes in Dutch New Guinea, and enemy-occupied areas at Vogelkop on the same island were harassed by the same planes. Enemy naval auxiliary craft attempting to slip through the Allied blockade were destroyed by Allied motor-torpedo boats.

Twenty-nine tons of bombs were rained down on enemy encampments and supply dumps at Wewak, British New Guinea, by medium and patrol planes. Night naval patrols also shelled shore positions and sank two barges near the offshore islands.

An Allied reconnaissance plane bombed anti-aircraft positions of the Japanese on Timor Island. One Allied plane was lost when attack and pursuit planes striking shipping of numerous islands in the Banda Sea, destroyed or seriously damaged five barges and several small craft. Patrol planes attacked enemy-held villages in the Babar, Aroe and Tanimbar Islands.

Allied dive-bombers, air and naval patrols dropped 39 tons of bombs in attacks on Kavieng and occupied sectors on the southeastern part of New Ireland; supply installations and communications lines were damaged. Rabaul, on New Britain, got another taste of Allied explosives — 20 tons that destroyed buildings and started fires. (Reuter – UP)

The fleet, under the command of Admiral William Halsey, also has done extensive, crippling damage to enemy airfields and naval establishments. These actions, together with the 3rd Fleet's support of the assaults on Palau Island, have merited the words of Admiral Nimitz' communique, that its « operations have forced the enemy to withdraw his naval forces from their former anchorages in the Philippines, and to seek new refuges in the same general area, » and have broken his air force and his inter-island communications. The operations of the 3rd Fleet are compared to those of the 5th Fleet, which « broke the enemy carrier-based air force in the Battle of the Philippine Sea. »

Details of the Manila area engagement reveal that on the second day, September 21, of the smash at the Japanese naval forces and installations, carrier planes of the team of Admirals Halsey and Mitscher sank 45 more ships, large and small and damaged 20. 200 enemy airplanes were destroyed or damaged.

In a later announcement, Pacific headquarters related another telling blow against the enemy's Philippine area strength. American warships exploded 10 of 13 troop and supply-laden barges trying to bring reinforcements to the beleaguered Japanese garrison on the northern end of Peleliu Island in the Palaus. The other three barges and a motor sampan are believed to have been sunk. The announcement said: « A few of the enemy probably were able to swim ashore » without their equipment.

In addition to the Japanese ships and planes sunk, destroyed or damaged, the Pacific communique said, « extensive and widespread damage was done to buildings, warehouses, railroad equipment, oil storage tanks, harbor installations, hangars, shops, and stored supplies and equipment.

« Our own losses in this daring and highly-successful strike, » continued the communique, « were 11 planes in combat, 10 pilots, and five air crewmen. »

« There was no loss or damage to any of our surface ships. »

(Combat losses to Admiral Halsey's 3rd fleet now include 21 planes, 17 pilots, and 20 crewmen.)

Marine forces made small right and left flank gains on Peleliu on September 23.

In other Pacific areas, 7th USAAF Liberators struck at Chichi Jima and Haha Jima in the Bonins, and twice at Iwo Jima in the Volcano Islands, on September 22. Only meager anti-aircraft fire was encountered in these attacks. A single 7th U. S. AAF Liberator bombed Pagan Island on the same day, and Mitchells of the same command swept at Island and American-held Morotai. Eleven Japanese barges and barges, and many small craft were destroyed or damaged by fighter sweeps over the already heavily-hit enemy base on Ceram.

Thirty-five tons of bombs were dropped by Allied attack planes and fighter-bombers on Babo and Utarom airdromes in Dutch New Guinea, and enemy-occupied areas at Vogelkop on the same island were harassed by the same planes. Enemy naval auxiliary craft attempting to slip through the Allied blockade were destroyed by Allied motor-torpedo boats.

Twenty-nine tons of bombs were rained down on enemy encampments and supply dumps at Weenk, British New Guinea, by medium and patrol planes. Night naval patrols also shelled shore positions and sank two barges near the offshore islands.

An Allied reconnaissance plane bombed anti-aircraft positions of the Japanese on Timor Island. One Allied plane was lost when attack and pursuit planes, striking shipping of numerous islands in the Banda Sea, destroyed or seriously damaged five barges and several small craft. Patrol planes attacked enemy-held villages in the Babar, Aroe, and Tanimmbar Islands.

Allied dive-bombers, air and naval patrols dropped 39 tons of bombs in attacks on Kavieng and occupied sectors on the southeastern part of New Ireland; supply installations and communications lines were damaged. Rabaul, on New Britain, got another taste of Allied explosives — 20 tons that destroyed buildings and started fires. (Reuter - UP)

DUTCH CIVIL OFFICIALS IN MOROTAI LANDINGS

WASHINGTON, September 25 — Netherlands Government representatives landed on Morotai Island with the American invasion forces on September 15, to re-establish the Dutch East Indies civil administration, an official announcement said yesterday.

Led by Major J. G. Weijner of The Hague and representing the NICA — Netherlands Indies Civil Administration — their function will be to set up governmental administration again for 10,000 Morotai natives. (PWB)

ALLIED HEAVIES ATTACK MYITNGE IN DAYLIGHT

KANDY, CEYLON, September 25 — Heavy bombers of the Allied Eastern Air Command have made a concentrated daylight attack on railway workshops and sidings at Myitnge, 10 miles south of Mandalay, the Southeast Asia communique announced today.

It added that the 5th Indian Division has made further progress against light enemy resistance in the drive to Tiddim.

Fighters and fighter-bombers also were active. Long-range planes sank two river craft and damaged many others in sweeps over mid-Burma, the communique stated. One of the enemy's seldom-seen aircraft over central Burma was downed by three Allied fighters.

In the Allied drive on Tiddim, only scattered enemy resistance was encountered. It was from Tiddim that the Japanese launched their abortive attack on India.

Severe fighting in the Kwangtung Province, where Chinese forces recaptured Howping and Sunhing, was reported today in a communique from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters. Other Chinese troops, said the communique, forced their way into the town of Lungling, with the Japanese retreating to the north.

Today's communique from Chungking, issued by the Chinese High Command, stated that enemy troops on the Hunan front, south and north of Paoching, continued to attack Chinese positions, but were repulsed. It also reported that Paohsien again fell into enemy hands.

EPURATION IN FINANCE, TREASURY DEPARTMENTS

ROME, September 25 — A brigadier general, two colonels, two captains, and three lieutenants of the Customs Guards, a body under the jurisdiction of the Finance Ministry, were suspended from office following epuration proceedings, the Government Press and Information Service announced today.

From the same source came the disclosure that 15 section and department heads and 37 lesser employees of the Treasury Department have also been suspended and will be subjected to epuration investigations. (UNS)

ITALIAN TREASURY NOTE PURCHASES MOUNT

ROME, September 25 — Purchases of Italian treasury bills exceeded redemptions by 3,506,000,000 lire in the Rome area in August, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

This amount was almost twice as great as the excess of purchases over redemptions of treasury bills in all southern Italy for the fiscal year ending 30 June 1944. (UNN)

REMITTANCES FROM U. S. EXTEND TO ROME

ROME, September 25 — Personal remittances from the United States now are being received by Italians here, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

These remittances are paid in lire through the offices of the Banco di Napoli to residents of Rome, and of the provinces of Roma, Littoria, Frosinone, and Campobasso. This is an extension of the service operating in the rest of liberated Italy for some time.

Remittances are now being accepted by banks in the United States for transmission here, provided that no individual or household in Italy receives more than 500 dollars a month through this channel. (UNN)

U.N.R.R.A. POLICY COMMITTEE ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS

MONTREAL, September 25 — The Policy Committee of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Council last night unanimously adopted a resolution submitted by the Soviet delegation, recommending that UNRRA give special consideration to the relief needs of countries where the devastation and suffering of the people is greatest, and has been caused by enemy action and re-

United Nations areas, UNRRA should not operate to dry up sources of care already functioning, such as government aid or private relief; UNRRA should give aid to only the needy persons in such areas; preference should be given to congregated groups rather than distressed individuals; and UNRRA should rule that the return of such persons could be made only with the consent of the government of the area, as well as the country of origin.

"The congregated groups" to which preferential aid would be authorized by UNRRA would include, said Dr. Warren, such persons as the displaced Poles in Mexico and refugees in UNRRA camps in North Africa and Egypt.

These recommendations, Dr. Warren added, have not yet been considered for final action by the UNRRA Council.

Dr. Warren also said that the Displaced Persons Committee has taken no action on the Cuban delegation's suggestion of a committee for displaced persons in the Western Hemisphere.

Plans to Restore Order

Dr. Warren outlined yesterday how UNRRA plans to restore order from the chaos caused by Germany's attempt to "colonize and Germanize" certain European areas. UNRRA, according to him, will take responsibility for the return to Germany of some 2,000,000 Germans whom the Nazis introduced into countries they occupied. About 200,000 Germans were settled in Alsace-Lorraine, and there are many others in western Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. When these are sent back to Germany, Allied nationals will be able to return to their own homes.

Prior to the liberation of France, said Dr. Warren, it was estimated that from 2,000,000 to 2,500,000 intruded enemy persons were in United Nations' areas. These included, he explained, technicians, administrative officials of the German Todt (engineering) Organization, civil officials, colonists, and evacuees from Germany's bombed areas. But the apprehension of fifth columnists among the intruded enemy nationals, said Dr. Warren, was a matter for the affected government to determine, and UNRRA's Displaced Persons Committee had not considered the problem of enemy residents in United Nations' areas before the war.

In connection with the cooperation between UNRRA and the Inter-Governmental Committee on Refugees, Dr. Warren said that UNRRA would care for and repatriate those persons who "care and desire" to go to their old homes in United Nations' areas and who have been displaced by enemy action because of race, religion, or aid to the United Nations.

Persons of these categories who did not wish to return to their old homes, Dr. Warren explained, would be cared for by UNRRA for a "reasonable" length of time until funds of the Inter-Governmental Committee could take care of them. (OWI)

A.M.G. RULES FOR GERMANY AMPLIFIED

SHAEF, September 25 — An official announcement amplifying details of rules already issued for the occupation of Germany by forces under the command of General Dwight Eisenhower, was issued here late last night.

The announcement said that British and American officers of the Allied Military Government are fully prepared to enter each newly-captured city, town, and village in Germany and to assume jurisdiction over their assigned areas.

All laws and orders will be instituted as an integral part of the military occupation of Germany. Their initial purpose will be to establish law and order, facilitate the action and fulfillment of the needs of the Allied Armies, and prevent acts hostile to the Military Government.

Everyone, man or woman, whether or not employed, must report to the labor office of his area for registration.

U.N.R.R.A. POLICY COMMITTEE ADOPTS RESOLUTIONS

MONTREAL, September 25 — The Policy Committee of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Council last night unanimously adopted a resolution submitted by the Soviet delegation, recommending that UNRRA give special consideration to the relief needs of countries where the devastation and suffering of the people is greatest and has been caused by enemy action and resistance to the enemy.

The United States and United Kingdom delegations seconded the Russian resolution.

The Committee also approved a resolution offered by the Czecho-Slovakian delegation, calling attention of the member governments of UNRRA to the fact arising out of the basic UNRRA agreement, that protracted rehabilitation is not an UNRRA task. The resolution suggested that problems of extended rehabilitation be solved by methods devised through further international cooperation.

The Committee recommendations now go to the UNRRA Council for final action. Tomorrow, the Council winds up with two public sessions, the last meeting being set for the afternoon.

Yesterday, the UNRRA Committee on Displaced Persons made two recommendations concerning enemy and ex-enemy nationals in United Nations areas and displaced persons in non-invaded United Nations countries. Dr. George Warren, chairman of the committee, said that by the first recommendation, UNRRA would be authorized, on the request of any United Nations Government, to remove and return to their homes any enemy or ex-enemy nationals who may have been intruded by enemy action in United Nations areas.

The second recommendation, Dr. Warren added, said that in operations in aid of displaced persons in non-invaded return to Germany of some 2,000,000 Germans whom the Nazis introduced into countries they occupied. About 200,000 Germans were settled in Alsace-Lorraine, and there are many others in western Poland and Czecho-Slovakia. Everyone, man or woman, whether or not employed, must report to the labor office of his area for registration. Employment status will be examined and regraded, and future assignment will be decided. Strikes and lockouts which hamper any activity of the Allied forces will not be permitted.

It is made incumberent upon all persons in Germany to familiarize themselves with all laws, decrees, proclamations, notices, and ordinances.

Judges and court personnel, permitted to resume work, will administer justice in accord with the decrees of the Allied Military Government. The Military Government will have power to suspend court officials and review all court decisions.

Military Government courts will be established for the trial of offenses against the interests of the Allied forces, and violations of Allied Military Government laws and proclamations.

There will be justice and equality before the law. Each person appearing before the Military Government Courts has the right to a copy of the charges, to attend his trial, and to cross-examine witnesses. He may consult a lawyer or conduct his own defense. In cases where capital punishment may be imposed, he may be represented by an officer of the Military Government in place of counsel chosen by him. He may also bring in witnesses with relevant information regarding the case. (OWI)

7TH ARMY PROVIDES MILK FOR FRENCH CHILDREN

7TH ARMY HQ, FRANCE, September 25 — Civil Affairs officers disclosed today that the U.S. 7th Army in southern France has provided, from its own stock, 100,000 cans of condensed milk and 3,450 pounds of dried milk to help alleviate a serious shortage of milk which was affecting the health of French children, United Press reported today.

The first food ship was brought to southern France 10 days after the landings there, and the population of Toulon was being fed on American food before firing ceased in the city.

Bread brought into Nice was the first the population there had seen for 12 days, and the bread ration of Marseilles has already been increased from 150 to 200 grams daily.

Civil Affairs officers said that help is being given to the French without, in any manner, interfering with the policies or operations of the French government.

Health conditions in southern France have been found to be generally better than originally expected.

The most critical shortages were found to be milk, gasoline, oil, and transportation.

Public order was found to be excellent, with local police continuing to function and with courts open for the trials of collaborators and others. Civil Affairs specialists are assisting the French in plans to repatriate a large number of refugee Czecho-Slovaks, Russians, Poles, Italians, and others in France, many of whom are fighting with the FFI. DANES ASKED TO MAINTAIN ORDER

LONDON, September 25 — The Danish Freedom Council has called on the people of Denmark to cooperate voluntarily in maintaining public order during the emergency created by the German dissolution of the Danish police force, it was reported here today.

The proclamation urged all Danes to «show ourselves and the world that we are a social community which knows how to maintain discipline even after the Germans have removed our police force.» (PWB)

Fighter-bombers and fighters were active against communications.

Other aircraft attacked military targets in Yugoslavia.

From these operations, five of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,000 sorties.

Navy:

On 22-23 September, enemy batteries, troops, and storage dumps in the neighborhood of the France-Italian frontier were again bombarded from the sea in support of the Army. Areas were well covered, and explosions were observed. The U. S. destroyers Woolsey and Edison were both in action. There was active return fire from the shore, and splinters fell on board, but our ships suffered neither casualties nor damage.

On 24 September, in support of the 5th Army, H.M.S. Loyal carried out a heavy bombardment of enemy batteries and gun positions seven miles north of Rimini. More than 400 rounds were fired, and all areas were well covered. Minesweepers working in the same area were fired upon by the shore batteries, but were not hit.

Naval activity continues in the Gulf of Genoa, the Adriatic, and the Aegean. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 25 — Today's communique:

Fierce fighting continues in the Arnhem area, where we have succeeded in getting some reinforcements to the north bank of the river under the cover of darkness.

East of Nijmegen, Allied troops have entered German territory in the neighbourhood of the Reichswald Forest.

The area to the south of Veghel, where enemy pressure was strong, has been cleared after the repulse of a counter-attack from the village of Erp.

East of Eindhoven, our bridgehead over the Bois Le Duc Canal was extended to the neighbourhood of Deurne.

Farther west, we have pushed the retreating enemy from the Escaut Canal to the general line of the Antwerp-Turnout Canal.

In the Geilenkirchen area, our troops met concentrated medium artillery fire, which was countered, and patrol activity continued in the sector.

In the area of Roggen, south of Aachen, one of our units reduced a German strongpoint, and slight gains were made against stubborn enemy resistance. A German counter-attack was repulsed east of Aachen with heavy enemy losses.

In the Metz area, the enemy is still strongly entrenched on the west side of the Moselle River and south of Metz; our troops in this area are continuing to meet strong opposition.

Allied forces have cleared Leyr, eight miles northeast of Nancy, and are clearing Bois de Faulx and the Forêt de Champenoux to the east of Nancy.

In the Meurthe Valley, our units have made further gains in the Foret de Mondon, northwest of Baccarat.

Enemy fortified positions at Calais were attacked early yesterday evening by heavy bombers.

Support for the ground forces in Holland and eastern France was provided by fighters and fighter-bombers, which attacked tanks and armored vehicles near Nancy, and mortar positions and infantry in the Arnhem area.

Locomotives, railway trucks, and motor transport in Holland were also attacked by fighters. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 25 — Tonight's communique:

During today, in the western and southern part of Estonia, our troops, developing their offensive, captured the regional center of the Estonian SSR, the city and port of Haapsalu; the city Kiltingi-Mimme; the city of Moisakula; the city of Mustvie, and also occupied over 800 other populated localities, including Kella, Lacalemma, Rietere, Tayakula, Verete, Vigola, Hudovere, Medrena, Finndi, Kodora, Rannekula, Viste, Shelmete, Kusku, Kohakily, and Tuhalane, and the railway stations of Saule Kella, Kuloga, Vahalemma, Yaytse, Kaluri, Rahla, Raikula, Koykise, Vahtrena, Turin, Sigatse, Voyrete, and Meisakula.

West of Rujiena and Valiera, our troops, continuing their offensive, captured the city and railway station of Muzsulace, and also occupied in fighting over 200 other populated localities, including Virdali, Fundurmulya, Letenne, Matushi, Condull, and Velti, and the railway stations of Vardali, Indus, Kuidaymulu, Ivvloska, Valde, and Lofe.

East of Riga, our troops, as a result of stiff fighting, occupied over 80 populated localities, including Veselauskas, Lyaustes, Vanuzhi, Yountkedle, Rushali, and Valozhi, and the railway stations of Adeye, Maili, and Ekene.

South and southeast of Sanok, our troops, surmounting resistance and engineering obstacles of the enemy, occupied in fighting over 50 populated localities, including Jablonki, Dolzhitsa, Krive, Ehmerek, Velkilna, Vergi-Gurne, Smolny, and Lomna.

Beckmansfield R.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

On other sectors of the front, reconnaissance and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 24, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 25 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 71 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 25 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The activity of the Garibaldi Brigades in the northwest, which began September 6 on the banks of Lake Maggiore and culminated in the liberation of Domodossola, is progressing successfully. Fighting has taken place in the Novara, Biella, and Ivrea regions.

The full significance of this synchronized activity of strong Partisan forces can be found in the fact that Kesselring was twice compelled to send reinforcements into the Aosta Valley in the direction of the Little Saint Bernard Pass. To be able to face the difficult situation, the Wehrmacht has had to abandon certain localities in Piedmont and concentrate its activity on the Ivrea-Pinerolo defense line.

After freeing Domodossola, Patriots advanced southward to liberate Antrona-piana in the Aosta Valley. Other Patriot groups pushed ahead in the area of Omegna and Borgomanero. Still other groups are advancing on Borgosesia. Disorganized German troops in this region have withdrawn toward Biella.

Farther east, Patriots are intensifying their activity near Ivrea.

Ponte San Martino was liberated, thus cutting enemy communications between Aosta and Turin.

Patriots have also extended their control over the Gravellona area, on the Cannobino River.

Garibaldi Brigades operating in Sicsia province have, among other activity, blown up a bridge and interrupted communications over an important road whose name and location are withheld for military reasons.

In the Veneto region, Patriots are also very active and are carrying out daily attacks on railways, roads, and telegraph lines, and against isolated detachments of Nazi-Fascist soldiers. In the province of Padova, they destroyed railway bridges on the following lines: Monselice-Rovigo, Monselice-Mantova, and Saletto-Montagnana.

Another bridge was damaged on the Noventa-Saletto road, and two more on the Vicenza-Treviso line.

In Treviso Province, Patriots derailed a freight train, and on the Treviso-Ostiglia Road, at St. Cristina, a bridge was destroyed. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 25 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In western Holland, the German troops repulsed several enemy attacks from their new positions.

In the area of Arnhem-Nijmegen, German counter-attacks inflicted very high losses on the newly-landed enemy units which were not able to launch major attacks. Local thrusts of the enemy failed in ferocious hand-to-hand fighting.

Of the remaining British 1st Airborne Division still fighting to the west of Arnhem, on a very narrow strip of land, another 800 wounded were captured. To the east of Eindhoven, the enemy succeeded in gaining a little ground.

German battle plane formations successfully intervened in the ground fighting, despite bad weather conditions.

[illegible] of Aix-la-Chapelle, enemy [illegible]

On the Adriatic, our troops were ordered to withdraw to new positions to the northwest of Rimini. Numerous enemy attacks launched against our movement were smashed, and 35 tanks were knocked out.

Eastern Front:

In Southwestern Transylvania, only fighting of local significance prevailed yesterday.

On either side of Torenburg, and in the northern part of the Szekler salient, attacks launched by Bolshevist and Rumanian units were repelled or held. During these fights, the enemy lost 30 tanks in the area of Torenburg alone.

Attack and defence, with alternating success, prevailed at the Beskide Pass to the south of Sanok and Krosno yesterday.

Between the northern fringe of the Carpathians and Mitau, no major fighting activity is reported.

In the areas to the south of Riga, forces of the Army and the Waffen SS threw the Bolsheviks back in successful counter-attacks.

Along the remaining fronts of the northern sector, our disengagement movements could be effected according to plan. The enemy, following with pressure in several sectors, could not impair our movements.

After destruction of all installations of military importance, the town of Revel was evacuated several days ago.

Our disengagement movements in northern Finland take their scheduled course.

Near Prilep, in Macedonia, a strong Bulgarian force was annihilated with few losses on our side. The entire equipment of guns and heavy arms was left in our hands.

Along the Bulgarian western frontier, and at the Iron Gate, local fighting is in progress. (Radio Berlin)

Western Front: Sertorius reports: « The situation in central Holland is still in flux. Both the Allies and the Germans are trying to conduct their fighting with as much mobility as possible. There is no solid front, but a series of overlapping areas, in which both the Allies and the Germans are trying to encircle one another. The enemy is still favored by considerable air superiority. said to liberate Antronapiana in the Aosta Valley. Other Patriot groups pushed ahead in the area of Omegna and Borgomanero. Still other groups are advancing on Borgosesia. Disorganised German troops in this region have withdrawn toward Biella.

Farther east, Patriots are intensifying their activity near Ivrea.

Forte San Martino was liberated, thus cutting enemy communications between Aosta and Turin.

Patriots have also extended their control over the Gravellona area, on the Cannobino River.

Garibaldi brigades operating in Spezia province have, among other activity, blown up a bridge and interrupted communications over an important road whose name and location are withheld for military reasons.

In the Veneto region, Patriots are also very active and are carying out daily attacks on railways, roads, and telegraph lines, and against isolated detachments of Nazi-Fascist soldiers. In the province of Padova, they destroyed railway bridges on the following lines: Monselice-Rovigo, Monselice-Mantova, and Saletto-Montagnana.

Another bridge was damaged on the Noventa-Saletto road, and two more on the Vicenza-Treviso line.

In Treviso Province, Patriots derailed a freight train, and on the Treviso-Oderzo Road, at St. Cristina, a bridge was destroyed. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 25 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In western Holland, the German troops repulsed several enemy attacks from their new positions.

In the area of Arnhem-Nijmegen, German counter-attacks inflicted very high losses on the newly-landed enemy units which were not able to launch major attacks. Local thrusts of the enemy failed in ferocious hand-to-hand fighting.

Of the remaining British 1st Airborne Division still fighting to the west of Arnhem, on a very narrow strip of land, another 800 wounded were captured. To the east of Eindhoven, the enemy succeeded in gaining a little ground.

German battle plane formations successfully intervened in the ground fighting, despite bad weather conditions.

To the north and southeast of Aix-la-Chapelle, enemy attacks were repulsed, and several tanks were knocked out.

On the Eifel front, the enemy lost 16 tanks during unsuccessful attacks.

To the north of Nancy, and near Château Salins, the enemy was thrown back despite stubborn resistance.

In the area of Epinal and Remiremont, the heavy fighting was continued. In the face of fierce resistance offered by our troops, the enemy attack made small local progress.

Heavy artillery activity is reported on either side, near Dunkirk and Calais. The determined garrisons of Lorient and St. Nazaire smashed enemy attacks and mounted successful counter-thrusts.

After destroying the last strongholds, the heroically-fighting garrison of Boulogne had to succumb to the enemy's superiority after the most tenacious fighting.

V-1 fire was directed upon London again last night.

Italy:

In central Italy, the enemy continued to launch a heavy tank attack to the northeast and east of Firenzuola. He was repelled almost everywhere, and achieved only one penetration which has been sealed off in the meantime; 14 heavy tanks were knocked out.

portance, the town of Revel was evacuated several days ago.

Our disengagement movements in northern Finland take their scheduled course.

Near Prilep, in Macedonia, a strong Bulgarian force was annihilated with few losses on our side. The entire equipment of guns and heavy arms was left in our hands.

Along the Bulgarian western frontier, and at the Iron Gate, local fighting is in progress. (Radio Berlin)

Kesselring's Men Hold Out: The evacuation of Rimini by the German troops did not improve in the least the position of the Allies. The British and their mercenaries attacked in this narrow sector 27 times during the past 36 hours, but with no success. The battleground is littered with burnt out British tanks, destroyed by the marvellous new German flame-thrower. Kesselring's men passed over to counter-attack in various sectors of the front and captured numerous important positions, including Monte Comacina.

Change Imminent in the West: Competent German circles consider the enemy attacks in northern Holland, as well as the Allied manoeuvres in southern Holland, as a clear indication of a stiffening up of the German defence. This in itself is an important sign that a profound change in the situation might take place at any moment.

Secret Weapons: The Allies, in spite of their official propaganda, are well aware that Germany is manufacturing great quantities of secret weapons, which will soon decide the outcome of the war. A request was made to Eden to ask the Vatican that the latter should intercede with the Germans, so that the Reich should abstain from using such secret weapons. The new flame-throwers, used on the Italian front, are a forerunner of the powerful weapons, now being prepared for use in the field.

San Marino: The Secretary of State of the neutral Republic of San Marino told a Reuter representative that the Germans never used the territory of the republic for military purposes.

BATTLE TO LINK WITH AIR DIVISION

SHAEF, September 24 — Patrols from the British airborne force at Arnhem, north of the River Lek, have crossed the river and joined up with the British relief army poised on the southern bank. At the same time small armored units of the British 2nd Army crossed the river northward to establish contact with the airborne troops now in their eighth day of hard fighting against overwhelmingly superior enemy forces in the face of continuous shelling and mortaring.

Neither operation represents a complete link-up with the airborne forces, but fighting is now in progress to consolidate the junction. The Germans are striking back strongly, with heavy artillery fire. They have brought up elements of three infantry divisions together with some [illegible] to hold the north end of the Oosterbuig and cross the Rhine. The 2nd army has improved its position in the Nijmegen area, and strengthened its bridghead over the Bois le Duc Canal near the base of the salient.

German panzer forces today launched a furious attack in an attempt to cut the Allied corridor. Tiger tanks and self-propelled guns pounded all day long at the 2nd Army lifeline. Shortly before dusk small formations of Typhoons attacked German tanks with rockets and forced a temporary withdrawal.

On the west bank of the Bois le Duc Canal, Allied forces are making steady inroads into the positions held by the 100,000 Germans cut off between the 2nd Army and the sea. This German force has now to reckon with a new British thrust across the Escaut Canal, where a new bridgehead has been established.

On the Channel coast, Cap Gris Nez has fallen. It was from this cape that the Germans frequently sent shells across the Channel.

On most sectors of the western front, from Arnhem to the Belfort Gap, the Germans are reacting strongly to the Allied advances and have launched many counter-attacks in the past two days.

East of Busbach a counter-attacking German force was driven off with an estimated loss of 40 per cent of its strength.

South of Metz, stubborn enemy resistance continues, and a small counter-attack at Fournoy was broken up by Allied artillery.

American 3rd Army troops have made gains north of Nancy, and Leyr, eight miles northeast of Nancy, has been cleared of the Germans.

The Germans are striking back strongly, with heavy artillery fire. They have brought up elements of three infantry divisions together with some armor. The Germans hold the north end of the Oosthuis ferry over the Lek and are sweeping the river with devastating fire to prevent crossings.

The British relief force, which has been reinforced by glider troops, has increased its hold on the area between the two branches of the River Rhine (the Waal and the Lek) immediately south of Arnhem. British 2nd Army reconnaissance units racing northward by a series of side roads reached the south bank of the Rhine shortly before 1:00 hours this morning, after contacting the airborne troops dropped yesterday between Nijmegen and Arnhem.

The reconnaissance units reported that the main bridge over the river into Arnhem, around which there has been much heavy fighting, is still intact. Allied parachutists were reported to have captured the northern end, while the Germans held the southern end, but neither side could get out on the bridge itself without being shot.

Fresh Airborne Troops

Meanwhile, the 2nd Army has received increasing support from thousands of fresh British and American airborne troops. More than 1,500 aircraft gave support to the 2nd Army in this great relief operation.

To the south, down the narrow 50-mile-long Allied salient to Nijmegen, convoys of men and supplies are battering their way northward to consolidate the corridor

BRITISH REINFORCE ARNHEM TROOPS

BRITISH 2ND ARMY, HQ, September 24 — British troops penetrated a mile into Germany, southeast of Nijmegen, and captured Beek, about four miles from Nijmegen, on the main road into the Rhineland.

A number of troops succeeded in crossing the River Lek under cover of darkness and reinforced airborne troops in the Arnhem area.

General Dempsey's forces are attacking the Germans with great vigour and determination. German troops continue to resist stubbornly and hold on to the high ground just west of Arnhem. (Reuter)

CHINESE RETAKE HOWPING

CHUNGKING, September 24 — Chinese troops have recaptured Howping and Sunhing, recently taken by the Japanese in their drive on Wuchow, the Chinese High Command communique said tonight.

After completing the occupation of Tengchung, Chinese troops forced their way into Lungling, with the Japanese retreating to the north, the communique added. (OWI)

HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED ON JAPS

PEARL HARBOR, September 24 — American carrier planes of Admiral Halsey's command sank or damaged 103 enemy ships and small craft and destroyed or damaged 465 planes in the recent two-day attack on the Manila area, Pacific Fleet headquarters announced here late today. (OWI) vehicle on which they could get their sights, said returning pilots. No estimate of the number of German tanks knocked out has yet been made, but one pilot said they knocked out a great number of them. One American plane was lost, in intense flak.

Third Army troops also made limited gains east of the Meurthe River, between Luneville and Baccarat in the Foret de Mondon. American planes cut several railways in a 50-mile area beyond the Moselle. A United Press dispatch said the Germans in the general area of Nancy below Metz were bringing in their wounded to American evacuation hospitals. One German major showed up at a medical camp with 15 ambulances loaded with German wounded.

The Allied armies in France, Belgium and Holland have captured over half a million Germans since the Allied landing in Normandy on June 6, the British United Press reported today. The recent liberation of Boulogne and Brest raised the total by some 43,000. The greatest single capture was that of between 42,000 and 45,000 in the Falaise pocket between August 12 and 22.

The 3rd Army alone has knocked out 1077 German tanks since August 1. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

ALLIES FIGHTING MOMENTOUS BATTLE

LONDON, September 24 — The Sunday Times air correspondent wrote today: «One of the puzzles of last week's airborne operation over Holland was the comparative inactivity of the German air force.

«The Luftwaffe, which has a total frontline strength of perhaps 4,000 aircraft of all kinds, refrained the Allies' challenge, reserving their diminishing strength for scattered night attacks, in a number that rarely exceeds 30 aircraft all told, on ports, dumps and headquarters in the rear of the armies. Little more is expected. In most respects, the days of the Luftwaffe's effectiveness are over.

«The British 2nd Army thrust from Eindhoven to Nijmegen, 53 miles in two days, would never have been possible without the aid of the air arms in the German rear,» the correspondent continued. «The German invasion of Holland can bear no comparison with our own four years later, in a country prepared by four years of enemy occupation. We are today confronted by fighting armies, not scattered units.»

The Sunday Times military correspondent wrote: «The eyes of the world are fixed on Arnhem, where picked men of the British nation are fighting in the grimmest, most momentous struggle of all ways, for here looms the most deadly danger the Reich has yet had to face. Of what use will the Siegfried Line be if the Rhine is turned in Holland, and if Field Marshal Montgomery, turning southward, envelops the last resources Hitler has flung into the Siegfried Line? The Germans themselves have owned the fate of Berlin hangs on the outcome of this battle.» (Empire)

RAF NIGHT BOMBERS ATTACK NEUSS

LONDON, September 24 — RAF heavy bombers flew out from Britain in very great strength last night and dropped well over 3,500 tons of bombs on targets in Germany not far from the western front battlefields.

One of their main objectives was Neuss, an industrial port southwest of Duesseldorf and roughly 20 miles from the Aachen fighting.

Neuss is one of the enemy's few outlets from the Ruhr to the battlefront, and has two marshalling yards. It is the junction for rail lines from Aachen, Cologne and Duesseldorf and can handle 2,200 railway wagons in 24 hours. Its inland harbour is used by Aachen, Munchen Gladbach, Rheydt, Brewenbroich and Willich.

Night fighters and other aircraft supported the bombers [illegible] encountered little fighter of the French Air Force who did not take an active part in the struggle against the invader. The French National Radio, in announcing this, said the measure covered officers on the active list who, while living in Metropolitan France after November 12, 1942, did not rejoin the fighting forces under the Committee of National Liberation by June 6, 1944. ALLIES 15 MILES FROM BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 24 — Fifth Army infantry forces have captured the Futa Pass, main defensive position of the Goth Line, and have pressed forward to within 15 miles of Bologna, it was announced here today.

Forward elements of Lt. General Clark's forces reported late yesterday that they were within sight of the broad Plain of the Po, after rushing through the shattered mass of rubble and the corpse-strewn wreckage that was all that was left of this sector of the enemy's Apennines defense zone. Thousands of Germans, caught in the merciless artillery barrage which crumbled the mountain fortifications, were slain, and some 2,600 prisoners were captured, in the ten-day assault that broke through the strongest defensive works in Italy.

The Futa Pass defenses, along the main road from Florence northwards through the Apennines to Bologna, were captured as a result of a flanking movement in which 5th Army infantrymen seized the key height of Monte Garzano, three miles to the southeast, and then thrust northward and westward across the upper waters of the Santerno River to take the defenses from behind.

British Capture San Giustina

On the Adriatic front, Canadian and British troops were streaming out across the Marecchia River into the southeastern edge of the Plain of the Po. Canadian troops were reported to have reached the vicinity of Torre Pedrera, four miles northwest of Rimini on the road to Ravenna along the Adriatic coast.

British troops captured the village of San Giustino, four miles west of Rimini, and cut the Rimini-Bologna railway at this point, while Indian troops three miles farther west were battling fiercely to clear the enemy from Santarcangelo di Romagna, at the foot of the northernmost Apennines' ridges, which wall in the narrow coastal corridor along which the 8th Army has fought its way in a month-long offensive.

German forces have not yet attempted to disengage and begin large-scale withdrawal on the Adriatic coast, despite the growing threat that 8th Army tank forces may break through to race across the low, broad plain in their rear. And despite that with drying ground, the Allied advance is gathering way, German troops are fighting fiercely along the front.

Fifth Army reports did not locate the forces now 15 miles from Bologna, although any point within such a radius south of Bologna would indicate a spectacular advance of at least eight miles, and if the thrust was made from the Futa Pass, a gain of some 13 miles. In either case the American push represented one of the biggest day's gains since the fighting for the Goth Line began nearly a month ago.

Heavy Resistance

The break-through by the Allied armies at the center and on the eastern edge of the Goth Line have now forced the Germans to abandon the whole of the prepared positions of the Goth Line, except in the sector west of the Futa Pass, and British troops of the 8th Army have occupied a large number of towns and villages to the north of the Upper Tiber and Arno River Valleys.

RAF NIGHT BOMBERS ATTACK NEUSS

LONDON, September 24 — RAF heavy bombers flew out from Britain in very great strength last night and dropped well over 3,500 tons of bombs on targets in Germany not far from the western front battlefields.

One of their main objectives was Neuss, an industrial port southwest of Dusseldorf and roughly 20 miles from the Aachen fighting.

Neuss is one of the enemy's few outlets from the Ruhr to the battlefront, and has two marshalling yards. Its inland harbour is used by Aachen, Munchen Gladbach, Rheydt, Brewenbroich and Willich.

Night fighters and other aircraft supported the bombers and attacked airfields. They encountered little fighter opposition on the way to Neuss, but crews attacking Munster met heavy fighter resistance. Twenty-two planes were lost in the operations.

Thunderbolt and Lightning pilots strafed Rhine River traffic between Cologne and Coblenz yesterday, setting fire to four tugs and four barges, and damaging 10 more barges. They reported that for the second consecutive day the enemy used smoke screens to protect vital installations.

Other fighter-bombers protected from enemy air attack the Allied air transports dropping supplies to airborne troops in Holland. They destroyed at least 27 German planes in dogfights over Holland.

Today 9th USAAF planes flew in support of the U. S. 3rd Army operations in the Nancy area and strafed three enemy fortified villages northwest of Trier.

French-based Mitchells and Bostons joined in the battle for bomb-scarred Calais yesterday by striking at two strongpoints almost at the water's edge in that city. A strong force of heavy bombers attacked gun emplacements on the island of Walcheren in the Scheldt estuary.

A few flying bombs were sent against southern England and the London area last night, causing damage and casualties.

British and Dominion troops of the 8th Army were meeting heavy resistance both along the Adriatic coast and in the mountain area north of the tiny Republic of San Marino. Eighth Army troops crossed the Marecchia River at two points inland, to attack the mountain village of Poggio Berni, nine and a half miles southwest of Rimini, and the small town of Scorticata, 12 miles southwest of the Adriatic port city. Farther south, 8th Army troops entered the town of Macerata Feltria, 12 miles south of Scorticata, and Campegna, 15 miles to the south of the Marecchia River town.

The 5th Army break-through of the Goth Line defenses was officially pronounced «one of the most successful actions» of the Allied Army, in which more than two-thirds of the German Fourth Parachute division was destroyed, and in which American, British and Indian troops battled their way through a deep zone of mountain defenses consisting of concrete emplacements, subterranean shelters, pillboxes and strongpoints protected by barbed-wire entanglements and massive minefields. ALLIED TROOPS WELCOMED IN SAN MARINO

WITH THE 8TH ARMY, September 24 — The circumstances were most extraordinary on the day that liberation was brought to the little Republic of San Marino, Arthur Bradshaw, UNN correspondent wrote in a delayed dispatch. The first Allied troops to enter the town on September 21, went in in blinding sheets of rain, with visibility practically down to zero. The 521-meter-high town was hidden in thick clouds out of which the rain poured. The drenched liberators could hardly see the people they were liberating; the people sheltering from the downpour had difficulty in seeing their liberators.

In these circumstances there could be no joyous welcome. Civilians, huddling in doorways and edging under cover in the streets, could do little more than wave their greetings to the Allied soldiers as they skirted the residential areas in pursuit of the retreating enemy.

Nevertheless, the people of San Marino indicated their relief that their state was no longer to be a haven for the Germans, or to provide vantage points from which the Nazis could master opposition to the Allied advance. Bradshaw said that one of the first women he saw in the town remarked: «Thank goodness you have come. No longer will we have to tolerate the unbearable Germans.»

Regent Tells of German Entry

The story of the violation of San Marino Republic's neutrality was told to the UNN correspondent by the Urban Regent, Francesco Baldinelli, who, in formal morning dress, received the Allied military representatives in his office in the Governor's Palace.

«Last October,» he said, «Rommel visited Italy and made an official stay in San Marino. He then gave a guarantee that the neutrality of the republic would be fully observed, provided there was no instance of anti-Fascism or anti-Nazism. Even as late as last August, Kesselring wrote officially to the republic reaffirming the German guarantee that the neutrality would be faithfully observed. He put on record his assurance that there would be no movement of troops or military equipment in the territory.

«But, in the opening days of September, the position suddenly changed without any warning from the Germans. Enemy troops started building gun emplacements inside the republic's frontiers. Representatives of San Marino then approached the German commanding officer — and as we had no army to back up our protest at the violation of our neutrality, we had to resort to diplomacy and negotiation.

«The eventual agreement was that the Germans would not place any guns within three kilometers of the town. But since that time, there was almost a daily encroachment until there were gun positions on the outskirts of the town itself. From there the Germans resisted the approaching Allies until they were forced out and withdrew.»

Refugee Problem

The Regent told the correspondent that the present population of the republic was between 70,000 and 80,000, of whom only about 12,000 to 14,000 were residents in pre-emergency times. The refugees had come in from far afield, from Rimini and the surrounding towns and villages. «If we had only known that our neutrality was to be violated,» said the Regent, «we would not have allowed them to cross our frontiers. They have been living in every available shelter, mostly in the tunnels of the light railway running to Rimini. Food has been very scarce, and if the situation had been prolonged I do not know how the people would have lived.»

Despite the terrible weather, Bradshaw said, refugees continued to wend their ways back to their liberated home towns. The roads were terrible quagmires with the rain pelting down, yet these families with their few belongings struggled through the mud and rain, through ditches, through strong-running streams, pushing carts, leading a bullock or two, clinging closely to small baskets that contained live fowls. It was a dismal sight.

Soon after the first Allied troops had entered the town there was good news for the Regent and the refugees. An AMG officer announced that large quantities of food were on the way and there would be adequate supplies for everyone.

Marauder medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force accounted for six bridges, mostly in the Milan area, and also hit three German fuel storage dumps near Parma, Ferrara and Piacenza. Mitchell bombers struck at four other bridges, three near Padua and one at Legnano, 50 miles north of Bologna. Light-bombers and fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force concentrated on bridges at the eastern end of the Po Valley, striking at structures over the Savio River. The TAF also concentrated on roads to Ravenna and Bologna from Rimini, directly in the rear of the German forces striving to hold back 8th Army forces pouring onto the Po Plain along the coast.

Heavy bombers of the Strategic Air Force carried their attacks farther north to hit seven rail bridges on lines into Austria and Yugoslavia. Balkan Air Force planes yesterday scored hits on 14 locomotives, five JU-52 transport planes, 42 railway wagons, 12 motor vehicles, a railway crane and armored rail car, in attacks along the Eastern Adriatic. SWISS TO RELEASE ALLIED POW

BERNE, September 24 — Because of the reopening of the Franco-Swiss frontier at Geneva, Allied prisoners of war, escapees and refugees in Switzerland will have the opportunity to leave the country, a Swiss communique stated today.

Groups of prisoners will be permitted to leave in the course of the next few weeks, the communique added. (Reuter)

MEMORIAL SERVICE TO JEWISH SOLDIERS

ANZIO, September 24 — Memorial services for American soldiers of the Jewish faith who died in Italy during the current war were held here this afternoon at the American military cemetery by a group of their comrades who represented the dead soldiers' families.

Traditional memorial services for the Jewish dead are held annually between the Jewish New Year and the High Holiday of the Day of Atonement.

Because it was impossible for families of the dead to attend, their comrades under the leadership of Captain Jacob Hochman, Jewish chaplain of the Rome Area Command, held the traditional services. These included the burial service and the prayer for the dead. (PWB)

BRAZIL WAR MINISTER IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 24 — Major General Eurico Gaspar Dutra, Minister of War of Brazil, arrived in Italy today to inspect troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force now fighting with the 5th Army in the Goth Line.

He met General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean, shortly after his arrival, he said that the Brazilian forces «will stay at the side of their allies until victory is won.»

General Dutra said that the purpose of his visit is to ascertain on the spot the aims which must be reached so that Brazil's participation in the war can be carried out with efficiency.

A guard of honor of Allied troops greeted the general and his party at the airfield. (PRO)

AMERICAN GENERAL DECORATED

WITH THE U. S. 7th ARMY, September 24 — Lieutenant General Lucian Truscott, commanding the U. S. 6th Corps, was decorated with the Order of the Bath, on behalf of King George of Britain.

Last October," he said, "Kesselring made an official stay in San Marino. He then gave a guarantee that the neutrality of the republic would be fully observed, provided there was no instance of anti-Fascism or anti-Nazism. Even as late as last August, Kesselring wrote officially to the republic reaffirming the German guarantee that the neutrality would be faithfully observed. He put on record his assurance that there would be no movement of troops or military equipment in the territory.

"But, in the opening days of September, the position suddenly changed without any warning from the Germans. Enemy troops started building gun emplacements inside the republic's frontiers. Representatives of San Marino then approached the German commanding officer — and as we had no army to back up our protest at the violation of our neutrality, we had to resort to diplomacy and negotiation.

"The eventual agreement was that the Germans would not place any guns within three kilometers of the town. But since that time, there was almost a daily encroachment until there were gun positions on the outskirts of the town itself. From there the Germans resisted the approaching Allies until they were forced out and withdrew."

Refugee Problem

The Regent told the correspondent that the present population of the republic was between 70,000 and 80,000, of whom only about 12,000 to 14,000 were residents in pre-emergency times. The refugees had come in from far afield, from Rimini and the surrounding towns and villages. "If we had only known that our neutrality was to be violated," said the Regent, "we would not have allowed them to cross our frontiers. Local Army of 75

The Regent reported that the people and 10,000 refugees in Serravalle, recently liberated by the Allies, were starving and without water. They had been entirely neglected by the Germans. The Regent was assured that food would be transported to them at the first opportunity.

Allied officers have paid tribute to the assistance they have received from the local San Marino army — 75 of them in all — in clearing the town. In addition to taking prisoners, they made certain that no snipers were left behind by the enemy to retard the Allied operations.

The UNN correspondent was told that a few of the Germans who had been in San Marino had not had much spirit to continue the fight. Four of them had flung away their arms, and one woman was able to take them prisoner and hand them over to the Allies. (UNN)

RUSSIANS CAPTURE BALTISKY

MOSCOW, September 24 — Ships and marine units of the Russian Baltic fleet, striking from the Gulf of Finland in cooperation with the Red Army drive in Estonia, have captured the Estonian Port of Baltisky (Port Baltic), the terminus of the railway from Tallinn, tonight's Soviet communique stated.

Continuing their drive to clear Estonia of all enemy troops, Red Army units occupied more than 200 inhabited localities southwest and south of Tallinn. Both north and south of Valmiera, the Russian troops captured the town and railway junction of Rujiena and the town of Smiltene, in addition to 200 other inhabited localities.

After heavy fighting east of Riga, Russian forces occupied over 250 inhabited localities. The communique also announced that the Red Army on all fronts disabled or destroyed 64 German tanks and shot down 56 German aircraft.

A Russian Naval communique tonight said that the airforce of the Red Banner Baltic fleet struck hard at enemy shipping in the Baltic, sinking three enemy transports and one patrol vessel. West of Libau, a 10,000-ton transport was sunk, while another transport was sunk northwest of Vindau.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The Germans were reported attempting a last-ditch stand to prevent the capture of Riga as the Russian forces were closing in on them from all sides. The Germans have ordered all male inhabitants of Riga between the ages of 18 and 49 to register for trench digging. A Reuter correspondent said that the Germans, « crumpling before Soviet forces, are either abandoning their heavy equipment and fleeing by sea as best they can, fighting it out to the last, or seizing civilian clothes to try to get through Red Army troops that have closed round them ».

Unofficial estimates in Moscow said that nearly a third of the German divisions on the Baltic front have been so mutilated as to be unable, for the time being, to coordinate a stand.

Russian troops have reached the Hungarian border on a broad front, the BBC announced today. A Rumanian communique gave one location as west of Arad. A later message from Bucharest stated that Soviet and Rumanian troops have crossed the Hungarian frontier from western Transylvania.

BRITISH FIVE MILES FROM TIDDIM

KANDY, CEYLON, September 24 — The British 14th Army is only five miles from Tiddim, in northwestern Burma, a major road and track junction on the approaches of the Chindwin River, today's communique from Southeast Asia Headquarters stated.

British patrols are now operating nearly 50 miles down the Mandalay railway from Mogaung. Troops of the 14th Army ambushed a Japanese convoy in the jungle, knocking out or damaging 30 of the limited fleet of Japanese motor transport.

Allied air assaults were carried out despite unfavorable weather on the railway yards at Thazi, south of Mandalay, and the railway line southeast of Monya. Long-range fighters damaged five locomotives and a large quantity of rolling stock in a sweep over central Burma.

General MacArthur's communique said that Allied bombers struck 13 Japanese strongpoints, ranging from the Philippines to Bougainville in the Solomons, in a series of neutralization raids. Three small ships and five barges and coastal vessels were sunk in air attacks on Davao in the southern Philippines, and on Borneo and Halmahera.

American troops now control over two-thirds of Peleliu Island in the Palau group east of the Philippines, after a campaign in which the Japanese so far have lost 7,000 troops.

On the Yunnan front, numerous attacks were made on our positions east of Mangshih by reinforced enemy troops equipped with artillery, the first Chinese communique announced today. The enemy gained several positions, but lost an estimated 550 troops during the last three days.

The communique reported that an enemy garrison of about 300 still remain of the original defenders in that area. It added that a fairly strong enemy force with many animals « may have entered » Pinga, 20 miles southeast of Mangshih.

A second Chinese communique said that in the Paoching sector enemy troops yesterday continued to attack Chinese positions from two to three miles east of the city and from five to 11 miles southwest of the city. These attacks were all repulsed.

On the Kwangtung front, the communique reported, Chinese forces, after the recapture of Kwantu, reoccupied Hwachu on September 18. (OWI)

SOVIET PAPER REVIEWS JAPS' POSITION

MOSCOW, September 24 — The Soviet newspaper Red Star said on Friday, as a result of the Japanese [illegible] of oil, rubber and other strategic raw materials from the captured territories ». It added that Japan has already « experienced great difficulty in the transport of these materials as a result of United States air and submarine operations. » (PWB)

JAPS DISSOLVE CHURCHES

WASHINGTON, September 24 — The Japanese News Agency Domei said yesterday that the Japanese Government has ordered the dissolution of « all existing federated church organizations » to pave the way for the creation, within a week, of a government-controlled and financed « wartime patriotic religious society » designed to « increase the fighting strength of the people through religious feeling. »

Domei said that about 300,000 religious teachers throughout Japan, representing 13 Shinto, 28 Buddist and two Christian sects, have been instructed to organise the new society by September 30.

General Ninomaya, Japanese Minister of Education, will be the president of the new society and the Government has appropriated 300,000 yen for the financing of the new order. (OWI)

FINNS INTERN GERMAN CITIZENS

LONDON, September 24 — All German and Hungarian citizens in Finland have been interned, said the BBC yesterday, adding that many Germans applied at the last moment for Finnish citizenship.

According to the Finnish News Agency, the internees will be gathered in a camp near Helsinki, and will be treated well.

The suspension of 400 National Socialist associations was ordered in a decree issued yesterday by the Finnish State Council, and reported on the Finnish Home Radio.

The Minister of the Interior has issued detailed orders on the matter, in accordance with the armistice agreement. (BBC-Reuter)

ANOTHER ESCAPE SHIP SUNK

LOUIS RENAULT JAILED

PARIS, September 24 — Louis Renault, motor magnate and one of France's leading industrialists, has been jailed, reported the official French news agency, yesterday.

The agency reported that the accountant of the Renault firm said the Renault factories from 1940 to 1943 made 120,000,000 dollars' worth of war materials for the German Army. (OWI)

YUGOSLAV PARTISANS CUT RAILWAYS

LONDON, September 24 — Yugoslav Partisan troops were continuing without letup their offensive against the enemy's communications in Slavonia, cutting the Brod-Belgrade railway in 20 places in northern Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's communique stated today.

In the region of Sumadija, south of Belgrade, the Partisans captured Stragard, a strongpoint on the Kragujevac-Arandjelovac road. Other Partisan units, operating in western Moravia, near Sevojna, killed or captured 150 Germans and seized a large quantity of war material.

Farther west, a military train with equipment was seized on the railway between Brod and Sarajevo. (OWI)

SOVIET PAPER REVIEWS JAPS' POSITION

MOSCOW, September 24 — The Soviet newspaper Red Star said on Friday as a result of the Japanese Navy's «systematic avoidance of direct contact with the United States Navy» and its consequent failure to protect Japan's sea communications with the southern regions, the Japanese Army was forced to undertake the current drive in China in an attempt to establish overland communications.

Red Star's commentary, written by Ivrmashev, Soviet authority on Pacific affairs, points out that United States control of the Marianas «threatens the inner defense zone of Japan,» and provides «strong flank positions on Japan's main communications, which connect the Japanese homeland with the South Seas.»

Red Star continued: «Moreover, the new flank position must guarantee the development of United States operations westward, namely against the Philippines... The fact that main operations are developing on the approaches to the Philippines explains the importance of this archipelago, which is the key center of the outer and inner sea communications of the Japanese armed forces in the Netherlands East Indies, Indo-China, Thailand, Malaya and Burma.»

The Japanese armies situated there depend wholly on these communications, Red Star stated, and pointed out that the threat to the Philippines would mean not only cutting off these armies, but also «cessation in the delivery

FINNS CONTINUE ADVANCE

WASHINGTON, September 24 — Finnish troops are continuing their advance in north Finland, stated today's communique broadcast by the Finnish Home Radio.

Suomussalmi is partly held by the Finns, and other troops are approaching Puolanka. Progress is slowed down by the destruction of bridges, mining of roads, explosions and demolitions carried out by the retreating Germans. (OWI)

NAZIS NEGLECT OF HEALTH SERVICES

LIEGE, September 24 — The medical situation discovered by the Americans in Liege was «a disgrace to the traditions of German medicine,» a dispatch to the Chicago Daily News stated yesterday. American troops and Allied Military Government officials are working together to re-establish the medical care and health services in this city.

Vast stores of booby-trapped medical supplies previously stolen by the Germans from Belgian hospitals in the Liege district have been recaptured by American troops and are now being distributed to the Belgian medical authorities by civil affairs officials attached to the American 1st Army.

Among the supplies looted in the Liege district were sheets, blankets, medicines, surgical instruments and two travelling X-ray caravans.

Under the German heel, Belgian public health services had deteriorated, tuberculosis and other contagious diseases had increased, and even garbage collecting arrangements collapsed.

German indifference to the health of other peoples is also reflected in the fact that refugees arriving from Germany were often infected with lice, and at least ten known cases had typhus. (OWI)

GREECE REJECTS STORY OF BULGARIAN AGREEMENT

ROME, September 24 — George A. Cartalis, Greek Minister of Information, issued here today a written statement declaring that the Greek Government rejected as a «myth» the official Bulgarian report that an agreement had been reached between local Greek authorities and Bulgarian occupying forces in Thrace and Macedonia. The statement also insisted that Bulgaria «hand over at once unconditionally» the north Greek territories its forces have occupied.

In the circumstances, the Greek Minister told Allied and neutral Press representatives in Rome in a conference today, would the Greek Government discuss the question of Bulgarian authorities remaining in Greek territory.

On the contrary, the Minister said, the Greek Government plans to claim as part of its rights under the Atlantic Charter's guarantee of «Freedom from Fear», territorial readjustments of the Thracian and Macedonian frontiers to give to Greece control of the doorways to the Aegean through which Greece has been invaded three times in the past 20 years.

Friendship with Italy

Minister Cartalis indicated also that the Greek Government would press «security» claims for strategic border territory from Albania, and also looked forward to the «restitution» of the Dodecannese Islands, some of which have already been seized by Greek Resistance Forces. Representatives of the Greek Government are already on these liberated islands, Cartalis said.

Although Greece still suffered from the «Deep wounds» of the Italian War, the Greek Minister said, the Greek Government hoped to enter into good relations and even friendship with Italy, once Italy made clear that she renounced imperialistic claims in the Eastern Mediterranean and recognized the independence and sovereignty of Greece.

ROOSEVELT PRAISES LABOR EFFORT

WASHINGTON, September 24 — President Roosevelt last night made his first campaign speech since he accepted the fourth-term Renomination two months ago.

The President spoke to members of the labor unions, but his words were broadcast by radio to the nation.

He said: «There are tasks ahead of us which we must now complete with the same skill, intelligence and devotion which have already led us so far on the road to victory. There is the task of finishing victoriously this most terrible of all wars as speedily as possible and with the least cost in lives. There is the task of setting up international machinery to assure that peace once established will not again be broken.

«Victory of the Allies in this war will be a victory for democracy. It will constitute such affirmation of strength and power and vitality of government by the people as history has never before witnessed. We move forward with God's help to the greatest epoch of free achievement by free men that the world has ever known or imagined possible.

«We are even now organizing the logistics of peace just as our military leaders are organizing the logistics of this war. The victory of the American people and their Allies in this war will be far more than victory against Fascism. The victory in this war will be victory for democracy.»

The President went on to say that he knew that American business, labor and agriculture have the same will to do for peace what they have done for war, and that they can sustain the national income that will assure full production and full employment.

«All we propose to do in reconversion,» he said, «can be found in one word — „jobs." We shall follow wage policy which will sustain the purchasing power of labor — for that means more production and more jobs.»

Praising American labor, Roosevelt said: «When I addressed you four years ago, I said, „I know that America will never be disappointed in its expectation that labor will always continue to do its share of the job we now face, and do it patriotically and effectively and unselfishly." Today we know that America has not been disappointed. In his order of the day, when Allied Armies first landed in Normandy, General Eisenhower said, „Our home fronts have given us overwhelming superiority in weapons and munitions of war".»

The remainder of the President's speech was devoted to domestic issues and Democratic Party plans for the future. (Reuter)

AMERICAN MERCHANT FLEET TREBLED

WASHINGTON, September 24 — The American merchant marine fleet has nearly trebled since the war began. In the first formal report of the War Shipping Administration, Admiral Land said that the merchant fleet had grown from 1,340 ships totalling 11,250,000 deadweight tons to a victory fleet of over 3,400 ocean-going vessels with a deadweight tonnage of 35,000,000.

The bulk of the cargo carried by the merchant fleet was army supplies and Lend-Lease material.

On the question of the continuation of the ship construction program, Admiral Land said that the merchant marine operation will not stop with the declaration of peace.

«Six million Americans are overseas and they must

Cartalis said that because of the German and Italian practice of using Greece as a troop depot and levying upon its farmers for the food and funds necessary to carry the expenses of the Balkan occupation, the Greek Government felt that it was entitled to a «priority claim,» apart from reparations, in the granting of economic relief. In addition to the economic expropriation of Greece by the Axis, the ravages of three years of war had destroyed 1,300 villages and more than 150,000 homes, and rendered 1,000,000 people shelterless. The cost of living had soared to 100,000 times its pre-war figure as a result of fantastic and ruinous inflation, the Minister said. Out of 25,000 school children recently given medical examinations in Athens, 75 per cent were found to be consumptive, he declared.

National Plebescite

Even with Red Cross relief, Greek adults receive only 900 calories of food per day, while the minimum allowance for medium workers is figured at 2,400 per day, Cartalis said. Nearly the entire population of Greece has been on a 35-40 per cent subsistence diet for the past three years, he averred.

The Greek Minister of Information made clear that the Government intended to hold a national plebescite the moment Greece was liberated, to decide upon whether the monarchy would continue, and to elect members of the National Parliament.

On the question of the continuation of the ship construction program, Admiral Land said that the merchant marine operation will not stop with the declaration of peace.

«Six million Americans are overseas and they must be supplied and must return home. Even with the downfall of the German nation and the occupation of European Axis countries, there will remain the task of defeating Japan.

«A large portion of our merchant fleet will be needed, also, to rehabilitate Europe. The distance from United States ports to the coast of China, the Philippines, and Japan is between two and three times that from our Atlantic coast to European theater of war. It will take two to three times the merchant tonnage to bring the weight of arms equal to those now blasting the Germans, to bear on the Japanese scattered on hundreds of islands and the mainland of Asia.» (OWI)

TRIBUTES TO EISENHOWER

LONDON, September 24 — U. S. Representatives Karl E. Mundt and James P. Richards, after a visit to France and General Eisenhower's headquarters, suggested that after the war the general should be given «the toughest diplomatic post in the world,» because of «his proven qualities — his ability to get along with all types of people, a shrewd appraisal of every situation, and common sense.»

The two legislators said: «He has shown himself perhaps the best diplomat and the country will need men like him to help in the difficult problems of the future.»

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Representative Mundt said he was impressed by the way « all his planning is done to avoid needless sacrifice of life ».

The Congressmen said that Eisenhower told them that after the war he wants to go back to Kansas, « sit on the bank of a creek and fish in the sun. » (OWI)

ARGENTINA HARBORING NAZIS

MONTEVIDEO, URUGUAY, September 24 — Argentina is already harboring Nazi refugees, according to information from anti-Nazi sources in Buenos Aires, said Baltimore Sun correspondent Jaun Elzaundia on Friday.

Elzaundia said that high-ranking German military men — engineers and technicians — have been identified as working for the Argentine government. Among these, he reported, are a former Luftwaffe general under an alias and holding an Argentine passport, who is working for the Argentine Air Force in a technical capacity, and a former commander of the air school at Wenendien, Germany, also under an alias, who is employed at the Cordoba Air School. PUNISHMENT OF WAR CRIMINALS

LONDON, September 23 — With the liberation of western Europe and the collapse of Hitler's former Balkan satellites, the United Nations machinery for the punishment of war criminals begins to turn, a New York Times despatch said yesterday.

The United Nations War Crimes Commission, of which Sir Cecil Hurst, Vice-President of the Court of International Justice, is chairman, has prepared extensive dossiers, and has also been considering the question of establishing some form of inter-Allied Tribunal for the trial of arch-criminals who have offended against the laws of all nations. In the case of Hitler himself, the dispatch said, it is suggested that he be subject to executive action, and be tried by some international court set up for the purpose.

In the case of those who have committed crimes against specific countries, the Allies have decided that they shall be tried by the laws of the countries concerned. Non-German war criminals will also be dealt with in this way.

The dispatch said the Allies are determined that no loophole shall be left for those who have brought suffering to all Europe, and any armistice terms granted to Germany will demand the immediate surrender of all listed criminals together with documents that might lead to the arrest of others.

The refusal of asylum by neutral powers draws the net still tighter round the Nazi criminals. (PWB)

DE GAULLE VISITS BESANCON

BESANCON, September 24 — General de Gaulle yesterday visited Besancon, where he was received by a cheering crowd.

De Gaulle addressing the town's inhabitants reminded his listeners that there were still parts of France in the hands of the enemy. « Our Alsace, and parts of our Lorraine remain to be liberated, » he said.

« There remained other things to do after the liberation of the territory: the people of France must rebuild and create a new France. Evil weeds must be rooted out, and there must remain a great and fraternal France. « We want a France strong, pure, eternal, » he said. « And to do this there are many and great difficulties to overcome. We do not pretend otherwise. We shall overcome them. » (PWB)

BRITAIN HONORS QUEEN WILHELMINA

LONDON, September 24 — King George today invested Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands with the Order of September 17 by the president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Eric Johnston.

Johnston said that invitations had been sent to business organizations in about 40 of the United Nations and to several neutral countries. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

EPURATION OF FASCISTS PROCEEDING

ROME, September 24 — Epuration of Fascists in Italy is proceeding efficiently, Count Sforza, Epuration High Commissioner, said today.

He added that the punishment of Fascist crimes fits into the picture of general reconstruction of the nation.

Count Sforza said that although the epuration process is complex, it is sure and efficient and the execution of justice is proceeding. He pointed out that many Fascist profits had already been confiscated.

General Chirieleison and General Mazzetti, divisional commanders, have been deprived of their rank for having sworn allegiance or adhered to the Fascist Social Republic (the present Mussolini government), together with Lieut. General Girola and Brig. Generals Gianguzzi, Masserano, Carlino and Lastrico. Brig. General Parolari was suspended from office for holding positions in the Fascist hierarchy.

An order was issued for the arrest of Giuseppe Bottai, former Minister of National Education and member of the Fascist Grand Council. Many other prominent Fascists now in hiding in Liberated Italy, against whom warrants were also issued, will be assured of a fair trial when they give themselves to the proper authorities.

Dr. Mario D'Annunzio, eldest son of Gabriele D'Annunzio, was one of the heads of the state railways and National Councillor for the Chamber of Fasces and Corporations. He has been removed from office and referred to the epuration commission of the Ministry of Communications for having taken advantage of his Fascist connections to further his career.

Napoleon Pezzano, chief inspector of the state railways, employed by the Ministry of Communications for the last 20 years, was accused of amassing an exceptionally large fortune through his political ties with Fascist ministers, and has been suspended from his post.

Luigi Arbate, inspector of the state railways, and a member of the Fascist Party before its coming into power, who, by means of political favoritism, reaped great wealth, and Carlo Del Rio, chief of the Post Office and Telegraph Administration, who used his party affinities to the detriment of his subordinates, were also dismissed from office.

Brig. General Lavio Negro, who was second in command of the Emilia Division at the time of the armistice, has been arrested by order of the Minister of War. (PWB)

ITALIAN PROBLEMS REVIEWED

ROME, September 24 — Minister Without Portfolio Palmiro Togliatti said here today that relations between Italy and the Allies have brought to the forefront the necessity of solving two important problems. These, he said are a greater Italian participation in the war against the Nazis and a reduction of Allied control machinery in Italy to the minimum consistent with war exigencies.

Speaking before a Rome province gathering of the Italian Communist Party, the Communist leader reviewed the present political and economic situation in the country and took exception to what he described as attacks on the Russian Government on the grounds that they constituted a threat of a return to reactionary and Fascist methods of life and government.

Examining the causes of discontent among the people,

BRITAIN HONORS QUEEN WILHELMINA

LONDON, September 24 — King George today invested Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands with the Order of the Garter, the highest and senior British order of chivalry.

She becomes the only queen member of the order apart from Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary, and the first reigning foreign queen ever to be admitted to it since the order was founded by Edward III in 1348.

Only the Queen and Princess Juliana, Queen Wilhelmina's daughter, were in the room when the King handed a leather case containing the order to the Dutch Queen.

It is stated officially that the King chose this moment for admitting Queen Wilhelmina to the Order so that he might give expression to the admiration felt by his subjects for the courage and steadfastness she has shown since she came to Britain four years ago. (Reuter)

INTERNATIONAL BUSINESS CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, September 24 — The Stockholm Radio said today that a large delegation of Swedes will leave for America early next month to take part in an international commercial conference under the auspices of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Plans for the international business conference, to be held at Rye, New York, November 10 to 15 to discuss post-war world trade and commerce, were announced on

(the present Mussolini government), together with Lieut.-General Circlo and Brig. Generals Gianturzi, Masserano, Carlino and Lastrico. Brig. General Pariani was suspended from office for holding positions in the Fascist hierarchy.

An order was issued for the arrest of Giuseppe Bottai, former Minister of National Education and member of the Fascist Grand Council. Many other prominent Fascists now in hiding in Liberated Italy, against whom warrants were also issued, will be assured of a fair trial when they give themselves to the proper authorities.

ITALIAN PROBLEMS REVIEWED

ROME, September 24 — Minister Without Portfolio Palmiro Togliatti said here today that relations between Italy and the Allies have brought to the forefront the necessity of solving two important problems. These he said are a greater Italian participation in the war against the Nazis and a reduction of Allied control machinery in Italy to the minimum consistent with war exigencies.

Speaking before a Rome province gathering of the Italian Communist Party, the Communist leader reviewed the present political and economic situation in the country and took exception to what he described as attacks on the Bonomi Government on the grounds that they constituted a threat of a return to reactionary and Fascist methods of life and government.

Examining the causes of discontent among the people, Togliatti said one of the most widespread is dissatisfaction at the delay in cleansing the country of Fascism. To illustrate the slowness of this process he said that commanders of execution squads responsible for the death of many Patriots have not yet been dismissed from army and police forces.

Another reason for this resentment he attributed to the feeling among the people that the Government is not doing its utmost to solve the urgent food, transportation and other supply problems.

A third motive he said, resides in the fact that the great majority of Italian youth was not allowed to take up arms against the Germans.

Togliatti said the Communist Party of Italy has a membership of 200,000 and claimed that Communist leadership played a prominent part in the organization of Italian Resistance Front forces. He said 162 of the Ardeatine Caves victims were members of the Communist Party. (PWB)

FARM WORKERS ASK FOR LAND

ROME, September 24 — Representatives of 10,000 Rome province farm workers in convention here today asked Italian and Allied authorities to cast aside legalistic and bureaucratic considerations and to intervene in the formulation and adoption of measures which will assure agrarian workers a minimum of the necessities of life.

The meeting, called by the Provincial Federation of Labor, also asked that the 450-lire-per-quintal government bonus paid to stimulate grain production find its way into the pockets of farm workers in the form of increases in wages and salaries necessary to meet the high cost of living.

The convention also affirmed the necessity of adopting an agrarian policy which would result in a flow of workers toward the land. In the absence of expropriation, a resolution on the question said, pressure should be exerted on large landowners refusing to co-operate in the reactivation of the country's agrarian economy.

Other resolutions demanded the turning over to individuals or collective groups of land confiscated from former Fascists and the fixing of rents in money or in kind in relation to land productivity and to cost of living. (PWB)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 24 — Today's communique:

Heavy engagements continued yesterday in the Allied salient in Holland. Fighting was particularly fierce in the vicinity of Arnhem, where the enemy is exerting very strong pressure.

We have increased our hold on the area between the Neder Rijn and Waal Rivers. Our positions in the Nijmegen area have been improved and we have strengthed our bridgehead over the Bois Le Duc Canal, near the base of the salient.

Our airborne operations were further reinforced during the day. Ahead of the transport aircraft and gliders, fighters and fighter-bombers, in strength, have dropped fragmentation bombs on numerous gun positions and carried out low-level strafing attacks. Many batteries were silenced. Other fighters provided escort and cover for the airborne operations.

The enemy was active in the air and a number of combats with our fighters resulted. According to reports so far received, 27 enemy aircraft were shot down. Fourteen of our fighters are missing.

East of Antwerp, our forces advanced after establishing a bridgehead across the Meuse-Escaut Canal. Northwest of the city we have made slight advances. The entire front from the Gellenkirchen area to the Meurthe Valley remains relatively unchanged, with stubborn enemy resistance and numerous counter-attacks in all sectors.

In the Aachen area, our patrols are meeting fire from the outskirts of the city, where the enemy appears to be well-entrenched. Stolberg is being cleared of isolated Ger-

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 24 — Today's communique:

Land:

American troops of the 5th Army are exploiting their breakthrough of the Goth Line, north of Firenzuola. They have seized important mountain features north of Firenzuola, and are now only 15 miles from Bologna. On their right, British and Indian troops of the 5th Army have captured several dominating heights and are approaching the town of Palazzuolo.

In the Adriatic sector, troops of the 8th Army have crossed the River Marecchia on a wide front. North of Rimini, British Dominion troops of the 8th Army are meeting strong resistance south of the town of Bellaria, while in the difficult country north of the state of San Marino, which is now entirely in our hands, several strong enemy counter-attacks have been repulsed.

These two blows by the Allied armies in Italy have forced the enemy to abandon the whole of the prepared positions of his Goth Line, except in the sector west of the Futa Pass. British troops of the 8th Army have made large advances in the difficult mountain country north of the Upper Tiber and Arno Valleys, and have occupied a large number of towns and villages in this area.

Navy:

The USS Ludlow again bombarded enemy supply dumps in Ventimiglia area on September 21. The area was well covered. Mine clearance off the south coast of France continues satisfactorily. Shortly before daylight on September 23, British destroyers operating near Corfu met and engaged 3 fast hostile vessels in an inconclusive action, one of the enemy ships was hit and set on fire before they retired at high speed under a smoke screen to the cover of their coastal battery.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked industrial targets in Sudetenland, railyards in Austria, and rail bridges in northeastern Italy.

Medium bombers attacked bridges and fuel dumps in northern Italy, and hit a Cruiser in La Spezia Harbor.

Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked enemy communications and close-support targets in the Italian battle area, while light bombers struck at bridges in the same area.

Other aircraft were active against military objectives in Yugoslavia, as well as shipping in the Adriatic and Gulf of Genoa.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed, and eight of ours are missing.

MAAF flew about 1,550 sorties. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 24 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique.

Continuous interruption by Patriots of road and railway traffic, their attacks on enemy transport columns and ambush activity behind the enemy lines have rendered acute the already difficult German supply problem. German prisoners complain of scarcity of food and ammunition on the Italian Front.

Tens of thousands of Patriots are now operating, all the way from the Alps frontier region down to the vicinity of Turin. Their number is increasing daily despite German terrorist activities which have left 3,000 homeless in the Aosta Valley alone. German troops are not only burning villages. They are also killing many hostages. Three such villages were burned and three others were looted.

In the Aachen area, our patrols are meeting fire from the outskirts of the city, where the enemy appears to be well-entrenched. Stolberg is being cleared of isolated German pockets, but southeast of the town, our troops are meeting stubborn resistance in their advance.

East of Busbach, a counter-attacking German force was driven off with an estimated loss of 40 per cent of its strength.

German pockets are being mopped up in the sector bordering northern Luxembourg, and our units along the entire German-Luxembourg frontier are receiving moderate artillery fire from the enemy.

South of Metz, stubborn enemy resistance continues and a small counter-attack at Pournoy was broken up by our artillery.

We have made gains nine miles north of Nancy where the town of Morey was freed. Enemy tanks and infantry are offering strong opposition in the area east of Nancy.

Our troops have advanced to the vicinity of Benamenil, 19 miles east of Luneville.

Gun emplacements on the island of Walcheren, at the Scheldt Estuary, were attacked by a small force of heavy bombers.

Strong points at Calais were attacked by medium and light bombers.

Their number is increasing daily despite German terrorist activities which have left 3,000 homeless in the Aosta Valley alone. German troops are not only burning villages. They are also killing many hostages. Three such villages were burned and three others were looted.

Italian Patriots were successful in crossing through the German lines and establishing contacts with French Maquis forces fighting their way along the tortuous road leading to the Little Saint Bernard Pass.

A few weeks ago, a strong Patriot group swept down from its position in the Ossola Valley and temporarily occupied some localities in the Vercelli area. The valley can now be considered as being in Patriot hands. Patriots who had been forced to retire from Cannobio by a heavy enemy attack have again liberated the city.

Garibaldi Brigades are developing intense activity in the Veneto region. A large railway repair shop was blown up on the night of September 9 in Udine province. North of Udine, a train carrying a large quantity of war material was derailed three miles east of Tricesimo. An explosives factory between Traveso and Treppo and a bridge three miles east of Soppada were destroyed.

Sabotage activities increased also in the Spezia area. The commander of a Fascist Black Brigade, who was directing roundups of civilians in that region, was executed by Patriots.

In Emilia two bridges were destroyed on the road between Rolo and Carpineti. Another was blown up near Vetto. On September 7 a railway bridge was destroyed between Fornovo and Fidenza. On the following night the destruction of an over-pass west of Bruciate interrupted road traffic for ten days. Explosions were caused in a powder plant west of Piacenza.

The police and carabinieri commander of the Istria region has passed over to the Partisans, together with all his men. He appealed to the Italians of the Istria area to join him and his men in the fight against the Nazi-Fascists.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 24 — Tonight's communique:

Vessels and units of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet, today, captured important military-naval base on the Baltic Sea, the city of Paldiski (Port Baltiski).

During today, south-west and south of Tallin, our troops continued their offensive, captured over 200 populated localities, including Tvorkli, Pokilo, Yaru, Trajle, Klava, Azekule, and Maryama.

North and south of Valmiera, our troops developing their offensive, captured the town and railway junction of Rujiena, the town and railway station of Smiltene, and occupied in fighting over 200 populated localities, including Nuve, Odre, Gitari, Anzele, Spa, Turre, Tsepi, Rubene, Lifvena, Raune, and the railway stations of Trenchi, Kremgale and Dixis.

East of Riga, our troops, as a result of stiff fighting, occupied over 250 populated localities, including Ungur, Nezechi, Maitseli, Tsyshmyhaty, Kludene, Troksony, Vendeli, Preni, Privere, and the railway stations of Ubie, Taurupe, Aizarokule.

On the other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 23, our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 64 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 56 enemy planes were shot down.

Air Force of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet, continued to inflict blows upon the enemy vessels in the Baltic Sea. North-west of the Island Oksl, during the day of September 23, our torpedo-bombers sank 3 large German transports and one escort vessel.

West of Libau, Soviet fliers sent to the bottom enemy transport of 10,000 tons, also one German transport has been sunk to the south-west of Windau. Thus, the total of 5 transports and one escort vessel of the enemy were sunk. (Radio Moscow)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 24 — The High Command of the German Armed Forces announces:

Western Front:

In Central Holland, the enemy landed yesterday again major airborne forces with the focal point in the area south and south-east of Nymwegen. Our troops immediately attacked and heavy fighting continues. Our disengaging movements in western Holland continue according to plan.

South-east of Aix-la-Chappelle and on the Eifel front, all enemy attacks were repulsed yesterday. Strong enemy attacks to the east of Luneville led to initial successes but were then checked.

Since the beginning of the fighting our tank formations destroyed here 106 heavy American Sherman-tanks. Our troops fighting in the bridgeheads of Epinal-Remiremont were withdrawn to the eastern bank of the Moselle after heavy fighting. Furious street fighting in Remiremont continues. To the south of the town, numerous enemy attacks were repulsed, a penetration was sealed off in a counter-thrust.

In Boulogne, remnants of the garrison continue to offer [illegible] after several attacks failed amidst severe losses as a result of a defensive movement by our troops continuing according to plan.

On the Adriatic, fighting flared up and several enemy local thrusts were repulsed.

Eastern Front:

From south-western Transylvania, continuous local fighting activity is reported. On both sides of Torenburg, new enemy attempts at breaking through were frustrated by the tenacious resistance and successful counter-attacks of German and Hungarian tank forces. The enemy sustained heavy losses during unsuccessful attacks made by superior Rumanian formations in the area south of Neumarkt. Local Bolshevist attacks in the Szekle corner and in the eastern Carpathians were unsuccessful.

Near the Carpathian passroads, in the area south of Sanok and Krosno, heavy fighting continues. Counter-thrusts by our tank forces and grenadiers prevented also yesterday enemy attempts at breaking through. Our armored assault groups thus far destroyed or captured 91 enemy tanks and 187 guns, south-west of Mitau.

In the northern sector, continuous attacks by massed Bolshevist infantry and tank forces were repulsed or checked yesterday with numerous enemy tanks being shot up. Luftwaffe formations successfully intervened in the fierce fighting. Despite strong Bolshevist pressure, movements of our troops continue according to plan.

During the past two days, the Luftwaffe on the Eastern Front shot down 73 enemy planes and destroyed 51 tanks as well as several hundred vehicles and numerous guns.

According to reports received hitherto, more than 40 Soviet commissars were taken prisoner during fighting against bands in north-eastern Slovakia.

Air:

Daylight attacks by American bombers were directed against several localities in south-eastern Germany and Sudetenland. During the night, British bombers attacked the Rhenish-Westphalian industrial region, particularly the towns of Neuss and Duesseldorf. Air defences shot down 22 American planes over the Reich territory and the Dutch area. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

TRANSOCEAN AND DNB

Eastern Front: Correspondent Karl Bluecher reports that heavy fighting continued in the past 24 hours in the northern sector of the Eastern Front in the area west of Walk and north-east of Wolmer (Valmeer). Soviet Russians sustained great losses in tanks partly owing to mass employment of German battleplanes which destroyed 51 Russian tanks there and in other sectors of the northern front, during the past 24 hours. In northern Estonia, Russian pressure against German disengaging movement has increased considerably in the past 24 hours but movements of German forces could still be carried out according to plan.

Luftwaffe activity: Strong Luftwaffe formations are reported to have joined with strong forces in operations on the Eastern Front. Several hundred German battleplanes were over the Baltic area where they bombed and machine-gunned Soviet tanks and vehicles columns at the focal point, south-east of Riga. In the Finnish area, German battleplanes protected German disengaging movements.

Western Front: It is said that in view of the dangerous situation for the Anglo-American forces in central Holland, the American commander, making use of the improved [illegible] ordered a major landing operation on

In Boulogne, remnants of the garrison continue to offer gallant resistance in their strongholds, south of the harbor. At St. Nazaire and Lorient enemy attacks were unsuccessful.

Long-range naval batteries effectively shelled Folkstone and Dover.

The Greater London area was also yesterday subjected to the heavy fire of V-1.

Italy:

In Italy, the enemy, yesterday, made slight territorial gains in heavy fighting continuing in the area of Firenyesterday with numerous enemy tanks [illegible] Luftwaffe formations successfully intervened in the fierce fighting. Despite strong Bolshevist pressure, movements of our troops continue according to plan.

During the past two days, the Luftwaffe on the Eastern Front shot down 73 enemy planes and destroyed 51 tanks as well as several hundred vehicles and numerous guns.

According to reports received hitherto, more than 40 Soviet commissars were taken prisoner during fighting against bands in north-eastern Slovakia.

Air:

Daylight attacks by American bombers were directed against several localities in south-eastern Germany and Sudetenland. During the night, British bombers attacked the Rhenish-Westphalian industrial region, particularly the towns of Neuss and Duesseldorf. Air defences shot down 32 American planes over the Reich territory and the Dutch area. (Radio Berlin)

TRANSOCEAN AND DNB

Eastern Front: Correspondent Karl Bluecher reports that heavy fighting continued in the past 24 hours in the northern sector of the Eastern Front in the area west of Walk and north-east of Wolmer (Valmeer). Soviet Russians sustained great loses in tanks partly owing to mass employment of German battleplanes which destroyed 51 Russian tanks there and in other sectors of the northern front, during the past 24 hours. In northern Estonia, Russian pressure against German disengaging movement has increased considerably in the past 24 hours but movements of German forces could still be carried out according to plan.

Luftwaffe activity: Strong Luftwaffe formations are reported to have joined with strong forces in operations on the Eastern Front. Several hundred German battleplanes were over the Baltic area where they bombed and machine-gunned Soviet tanks and vehicles columns at the focal point, south-east of Riga. In the Finnish area, German battleplanes protected German disengaging movements.

Western Front: It is said that in view of the dangerous situation for the Anglo-American forces in central Holland, the American commander making use of the improved weather conditions ordered a major landing operation on Saturday afternoon, between the Meuse and Waal as well as south and south-east of Nymwegen. The German Luftwaffe immediately attacked the enemy airfleet, dispersed the approaching formations and compelled part of them to make emergency landings. German fighters shot down 38 enemy transport planes, gliders and cargo-gliders, according to incomplete reports. Some units dropped between the Meuse and Waal tried to join the First Airborne Division encircled west of Arnhem but were halted by barriers formed by German reserves.

AIRBORNE REINFORCEMENTS DROPPED TO BRITISH BRITISH 2ND ARMY REACHES RHINE

SHAEF, September 23 — Thousands of airborne troops and supplies were successfully dropped in Holland in direct support of the British 2nd Army's drive to relieve the encircled airborne and in the Arnhem sector, it was announced late tonight.

British and American glider-borne troops, as well as supplies, were landed despite strong opposition from German ground and air defenses. The operation was supported initial attack cut through the corridor, but plane-supported Allied counter-attacks reestablished the line.

Despite strong German counter-attacks along the whole corridor, the Allies have succeeded in widening the base of their salient by a crossing of the Bois le Duc Canal. Weert has been captured, and patrols are driving on. On the northern flank of the corridor, Vessem has been taken, and fresh advances have been made.

A Netherlands spokesman in London reported that the Germans had flooded the entire western stretch of Holland to the north-south line of Amsterdam, Utrecht, and Breda. The Germans are destroying the great harbor works at Amsterdam.

Along the 600-mile front, the Germans are hitting back with everything they have against the slowly advancing Allied armies. Fanatical SS infantrymen, panzer grenadiers, and reinforced panzer divisions are massing for a last fight along and behind the frontiers of the Reich. Behind both lines, there is a great deal of activity. The Germans are rushing up new formations and have scraped together every available man and gun. Indications now are that the Allies will have to fight right through Germany.

Allies Enter Vosges Foothills

On the southern wing of the Allied line, tanks, trucks, and troops of the American 7th and 3rd Armies crossed the Moselle River and the two armies are fighting side by side to drive the Germans back to the Rhine. They have gained high ground on the east side of the river, near Remiremont, and some patrols advanced over a mile into the foothills of the Vosges Mountains.

The Germans have fallen back five miles to prepared positions on the east bank of the River Seille between Metz and Nancy. Patrols penetrated to points about four miles from the center of Metz.

Northeast of Nancy, the seven-day tank battle ended in a definite defeat for the crack panzer formations. Along the Château Salins–Luneville front, 246 German tanks were knocked out. Tanks, artillery, and tank destroyers, supported by dive-bombing Thunderbolts, forced the enemy to withdraw with heavy casualties.

To the northwest, the American 1st Army captured the town of Stolberg, six miles beyond Aachen, after bitter house-to-house fighting. Advance elements are now within 25 miles of Cologne.

In the area east of the Luxembourg town of Diekirch, the 1st Army was forced to give some ground. In other sectors along the line, active patrolling and mopping up continue. Northwest of Geilenkirchen, a German infantry-tank attack was driven off with heavy losses in armor.

On the coastal flank of the Allied line, Canadian 1st Army troops wiped out the last German position south of the Leopold Canal, thereby boxing the remaining German elements into a thin strip along the Scheldt Estuary between Zeebrugge and Terneuzen.

AIRBORNE REINFORCEMENTS DROPPED TO BRITISH BRITISH 2ND ARMY REACHES RHINE

SHAEF, September 23 — Thousands of airborne troops and supplies were successfully dropped in Holland in direct support of the British 2nd Army's drive to relieve the encircled airborne unit in the Arnhem sector, it was announced late tonight.

British and American glider-borne troops, as well as supplies, were landed despite strong opposition from German ground and air defenses. The operation was supported in strength by fighter planes of the RAF and the 8th USAAF.

British armor, bolstered by American parachute troops, drove through a six-mile German barrier to reach the southern bank of the Rhine branch opposite Arnhem today. They joined with airborne forces operating on the southern bank, but no contact has yet been made with the main airborne body across the river.

Mobile guns of the British 2nd Army gave support to the encircled, hard-pressed unit still battling in defiance of German surrender ultimatums. A message received from the commander of the airborne forces in the Arnhem area said that troop morale was high, and that "they will continue to hold out until relieved." The airborne troops have been under heavy mortar and artillery fire from German batteries since they landed. They have taken 943 prisoners.

The British drive, made against SS and panzer troops desperately trying to prevent Allied forces turning the whole defenses of Siegfried Line, vastly eased a situation which last night was officially described as critical.

Supplies and reinforcements are rushing northward along the 46-mile corridor from the Dutch frontier to strengthen the assault across the Rhine. A strong German attempt to sever this vital supply line at Vegbel, on the main Nijmegen-Eindhoven road, was made today. The Germans had flooded the entire western stretch of Holland to the north-south line of Amsterdam, Utrecht, and Breda. The Germans are destroying the great harbor works at Amsterdam.

Along the 600-mile front, the Germans are hitting back with everything they have against the slowly advancing Allied armies. WESTERN AIR ACTIVITY ON RESTRICTED SCALE

LONDON, September 23 — Allied air operations over western Europe were on a restricted scale today after yesterday's heavy-bomber attack on Kassel and fighter-bomber raids on German targets in Holland and the Rhineland.

Aircraft of the 9th USAAF went for communications objectives in an area bounded by Remscheid, Coblenz, and Trier yesterday, while 8th USAAF Thunderbolts patrolled a wide area near Arnhem. The Thunderbolts met no German aircraft and all returned safely.

In one sweep, Thunderbolt pilots supporting the American 1st Army troops in Germany not only knocked out one big German gun, but buried it too. The Germans had pulled the gun back into a tunnel. Twice the American fliers dive-bombed the tunnel, sealing both ends.

British-based American heavies which bombed the industrial city of Kassel yesterday met no aerial opposition, but lost nine bombers and a fighter as a result of German ack-ack fire.

Flying Fortresses which dropped food, medicine and ammunition to the Poles in Warsaw were back at their British bases today after completing their fourth triangular shuttle mission to Russia and Italy. One Fortress and two escorting fighters were lost on the mission. Nine enemy fighters were reported to have been destroyed over Warsaw, where the flak was intense.

A few German flying-bombs landed in southern England and the London area shortly after dark last night, causing some casualties in one outlying district. Another bomb fell into a river in a marshland area, and still another exploded in open country.

"As a military weapon, the flying-bomb is futile," the British Air Minister, Sir Archibald Sinclair, told a Blackpool audience today. "Not a man, not a lorry, not a ton of stores, failed to leave Britain for Normandy as a result of the attack. The damage to war factories during the whole period of the attacks has been infinitely less than Bomber Command has inflicted on German centres of war industry in a single night."

Referring to the high level that Allied tactical bombing has now reached, Sir Archibald said that during the present battle the planes often take off, find, and bomb their target and return within eight minutes.

Sir Archibald also spoke of the battle against the U-boats, which had been won by cooperation between the air forces and navies. He revealed that the sinking of Allied shipping fell from an average of 240,000 tons a month in the first half of 1943, to 65,000 tons a month in the first half of 1944. (OWI - Reuter)

IMPORTANT WAAL BRIDGE CAPTURED BY ALLIES

NEW YORK, September 23 — The important highway bridge over the Rhine River, known in Holland, from the point where it crosses the German frontier into the Netherlands, as the Waal — a bridge defended by the best German troops retreating toward Arnhem — fell to the Allies intact, wrote James Macdonald, in a delayed dispatch in today's New York Times.

Macdonald said, in part:

"The huge and important highway bridge over the Waal, one of the principal military routes to Germany, has fallen intact to the Allies as a result of fierce fighting in which American paratroops did signal work.

"The hoisting of the Stars and Stripes on the northern side of the bridge by American paratroops late Wednesday afternoon informed the British forces on the southern side of the river that they could proceed in the direction of Although the bridge had been mined, these mines never went off, Macdonald reported, for British officers were informed by a Dutch Patriot where the wires connecting the explosive charges were, and these were cut off. GERMAN MILITARY POSITION HOPELESS

SHAEF, September 23 — General Dwight Eisenhower said today that Germany's military position is now hopeless, and that the length of the European war depends to a great extent upon how long the Gestapo remains in control of the Reich.

The Supreme Allied Commander in Europe said it is militarily useless for the Germans to continue fighting, and that continued battle means only further destruction without hope of changing the outcome. (Reuter)

EISENHOWER RECOVERED FROM INJURY

LONDON, September 23 — An American broadcast from Paris today said that General Eisenhower wrenched his knee in a recent aircrash in a marshy area somewhere in France, but is quite well again now.

It was the first indication that the Supreme Allied Commander had been involved in an accident. (Reuter)

8TH EXPANDS FOOTHOLD IN PO PLAIN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 23 — Infantry and armored forces of the 8th Army expanded their foothold at the edge of the Po Plain to a six-square-mile bridgehead across the Marecchia River, and are fanning out from the main road forks of the Po Valley highway network toward Ravenna and Bologna, it was announced here today.

All enemy resistance south of the Marecchia River, including hostilities in the small Republic of San Marino, has ceased, and British troops have swept northward to cross this sluggish stream as far as 10 miles inland, it was reported.

The mounting buildup of 8th Army forces at the edge of the broad, vulnerable Plain of the Po came as official reports from the centre of the Italian front indicated, at least to a limited extent, German disorganization under the ferocious, pounding, frontal attacks of American, British, and Indian troops of the 5th Army. Enemy communications appear to have reached the disintegration point, with supplies short and hungry German soldiers falling back, leaving their equipment behind them.

Destroyer Bombards Enemy

A British destroyer, HMS Loyal, steaming close inshore, was sweeping with heavy gunfire German troops and motor traffic crowding the Adriatic coastal road to the north of the advancing 8th Army forces, a naval communique stated. Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, scouring the broad plain which leads to the heart of industrial North Italy, struck at road and rail bridges, as far north as Padua, and bombed and strafed German trucks and rolling stock held up by blocks and downed bridges.

There was little specific information in official reports of the movement of the 8th Army forces, pouring out of [illegible] coastal corridor below Rimini, where

«The hoisting of the Stars and Stripes on the northern side of the bridge by American paratroops late Wednesday afternoon informed the British forces on the southern side of the river that they could proceed in the direction of Arnhem.»

«The story begins with the dropping of British paratroops last Sunday in the southern outskirts of Nijmegen. The British troops discovered that the Germans had established anti-tank gun emplacements, anti-aircraft gun sites, and snipers posts (in houses, on roof tops, and trees lining the streets), leading toward the southern approaches of the bridge.

«Despite superior odds, the British held on tenaciously,» continued Macdonald, while, he added, the German commander was mustering a force of more than three battalions of picked men.

By Tuesday, British tanks began to drive up the roads leading to the bridge, but were held up by «stiff anti-tank opposition that knocked out the three leading tanks. There were snipers everywhere.»

«While the British tried to hold the southern side, Macdonald said, it was decided to send American paratroopers across the river. They crossed in small assault boats, with orders to liquidate the Germans holding the northern side. Meanwhile, the British on the southern side, ignoring roof-top snipers, accounted for enemy anti-tank gunners, and then started shelling and hand-to-hand fighting with the Germans holding the fortress guarding the southern approach to the bridge. Very soon the fortress was in British hands.

8TH EXPANDS FOOTHOLD IN PO PLAIN

Destroyer Bombards Enemy

A British destroyer, HMS Loyal, steaming close inshore, was sweeping with heavy gunfire German troops and motor traffic crowding the Adriatic coastal road to the north of the advancing 8th Army forces, a naval communique stated. Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, securing the broad plain which leads to the heart of industrial North Italy, struck at road and rail bridges, as far north as Padua, and bombed and strafed German trucks and rolling stock held up by blocks and downed bridges.

There was little specific information in official reports of the movement of the 8th Army forces, pouring out of the narrow Adriatic coastal corridor below Rimini, where German defenses and fanatic resistance had held them for nearly a month. Eighth Army forces now hold a bridgehead across the Marecchia River on a three-mile-wide front in from the sea, and with an average depth of two miles. The advance continues, «with infantry and armour at the entrance to the widening plains,» official statements declared.

Two main highways lead from Rimini. One, the Emilia Highway, or No. 9, leads along the southern edge of the Po Plain to Bologna, 65 miles northwest.

The second highway, No. 16, runs northwest along the Adriatic Coast to Ravenna, 30 miles distant, and at the southern edge of the spreading, multi-channel Delta of the Po. The junction from which these two main highways fork is at Celle, a village one mile northwest of Rimini, and now well within the six square miles north of the Marecchia River held by the Allies.

Fifth army forces, fighting northward through rugged mountain terrain in the heart of the Apennines, yesterday captured high ground some three miles northeast of the road-junction town of Firenzuola, and within 19 miles of the Po Valley town of Imola, on the lower stretches of the Santerno River, Lt. General Mark Clark's infantrymen in this sector are well over the main watershed line of the Apennines, and hold positions dominating the upper San-terna River Valley and the entryway through it to the Po Plain at a point only 45 miles from where 8th Army forces are across the Marecchia River.

Farther west, on the main road from Florence to Bologna over the mountain backbone of Italy, hard-fighting American infantrymen battled northward from the village of Santa Lucia to reach the threshold of the Futa Pass, main German defense position guarding this sector of the front. Here, within 23 miles of the Po Plain and one of Italy's oldest and most prosperous cities, 5th Army infantry forces were beginning the bitter assault on the southern entrance of this lofty defile, while other troops pushed to east and west to storm the fortified peaks guarding the flanks of this entryway to the valley below. To the west, 5th Army troops have taken Monte Citerna, two miles west of the Futa Pass, and Monte Tronale, a 3,660-foot-high mass, five miles from the Futa defiles.

Although enemy resistance in this sector remained stubborn, the German forces were reported to be showing increasing signs of cracking. Rations were running short, probably due to intensive Allied air bombardment of the German lines of supply, and some troops had been without food for three days when taken prisoner. Enemy artillery, mostly from self-propelled weapons, continued to lay down a heavy screening fire from their mountain-top emplacements.

It was revealed today that troops of the Canadian 1st Infantry division, commanded by Major General Christopher Vokes, were among the forces which had passed west of Rimini in the advance which secured a bridgehead across the Marecchia River. These troops participated in the fighting throughout the period of the present offensive along the Adriatic coast, which began August 26 and swept through the enemy's Goth Line defenses north of the Foglia River in 24 hours, only to be held up for 10 days at various German relaying positions farther north along the coastal corridor. More than 327,400 high explosive shells were fired by supporting artillery to lend weight to the Canadian Division's 20-mile advance during this period, it was reported today. (PRO)

ITALIAN CRUISER «TARANTO» BOMBED AT LA SPEZIA

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 23 — Mitchell bombers of the tactical Air Force today attacked the German-held Italian cruiser Taranto in La Spezia harbor, where German demolition engineers were readying the ship for sinking at the entrance to the port in the event of Allied capture, it was announced here this evening.

The 1,500-ton cruiser, armed with seven 5.9-inch guns, was originally constructed for the German Navy at Wilhelmshaven yards in 1912, and purchased by the Italian government in 1920.

Medium bombers also struck at road and rail bridges around Padua and Bologna, in seven German communications behind the threatened Goth Line.

Up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today attacked industrial targets in the Sudetenland, rail yards at Wels in southern Austria, and seven key rail bridges in Italy on rail lines running in from Austria and Yugoslavia. Three of the bridges were over the Piave River, north of the Po, and two others were over the Tagliamento River in northeastern Italy. (PRO)

THE WAR COMES TO SAN MARINO

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 23 — Stiff resistance is being offered by the Germans to the Allied liberation of the town of San Marino, capital of the small republic, wrote a UNN reporter.

«I have been up with our forward troops almost within shelling distance of the town,» the reporter wrote. «Spandaus

HERRENVOLK STOP TALKING ABOUT VICTORY

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 23 — In a delayed despatch from the front, a UNN reporter said that the captured Germans and those who have surrendered to the Allies in Italy recently, have lost all their old arrogance.

Batches of prisoners he saw between Rimini and San Marino, he said, were extremely bedraggled in appearance, their clothing torn and dirty, their faces covered with dirt, and their hair long and unkempt.

There was a reason for this, the reporter wrote. These prisoners had had their heads well down for 24 hours as the Allied guns churned up the ground around them. They had been in their slit trenches throughout the night, unable to sleep, unable to eat, unable to talk, and able only to lie and listen to the whine and detonation of the 8th Army guns.

For days, the enemy front-line troops had been without water or a hot meal, and without much hope of survival. The full-scaled Allied attack had proved almost beyond human endurance. «Whatever we suffered in Russia in artillery attacks,» said one prisoner, «could not be compared with the intensity of fire which poured on us here.»

One of the significant things about these prisoners was that they talked without restraint. In the past, it had been found that prisoners were reluctant to talk in front of other Germans. They were afraid of the Nazi cell system, and of what might happen to them at the hands of their fellow-Germans in the prisoner of war cages.

Secret weapons were mentioned once, and a prisoner said: «They call the liquor sold in Germany V-1 today — because it has no effect.»

Hitler Is Frightened

In reply to a question as to why the German High Command was fighting so fiercely on this front, when the Allies were supreme on all other fronts, one prisoner said: «That is the same question we are all asking.»

They spoke scathingly of Hitler and his clique. «We would have given up long ago,» one prisoner said, «but Hitler and his friends are frightened of their fate. Meanwhile, we all know that thousands of lives are being wasted. Our officers ride us with their revolvers. The soldiers will not stand these conditions much longer. The German Army can not long continue to function on these lines.»

One prisoner's complaint is repeated here. Frontpost is a miniature paper produced by the Psychological Warfare Branch, for German soldiers, giving them hard facts, without any propaganda or «trimming.» It is distributed to the enemy by plane and in shells. This German prisoner complained that the last copy, dated September 15, had reached him only yesterday.

Other prisoners admitted that they read Frontpost carefully and passed it from hand to hand, despite the threats of dire punishment if they were caught in possession of it.

«Safe conduct» leaflets were also discussed with the prisoners. They said those leaflets circulated freely, and they asked permission to say that the treatment they had been promised in the leaflets had been provided in full by their captors. (UNN)

8TH ARMY FIGHTS BY «ARTIFICIAL MOONLIGHT»

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 23 — The complete absence of the Luftwaffe in Italy has enabled troops of the 8th Army to use «artificial moonlight» — created by hundreds of blazing searchlights — to maintain pressure on the enemy for 24 hours every day.

No longer is there any question of having to cease or curtail operations when darkness falls, wrote a UNN correspondent. Every minute of every hour is now a fighting time.

«Artificial moonlight is one of the many factors responsible for the 8th Army's successful crushing of the enemy's prolonged, desperate resistance in the Adriatic sector,» the

Up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today attacked industrial targets in the Sudetenland, rail yards at Wels in southern Austria, and seven key rail bridges in Italy on rail lines coming in from Austria and Yugoslavia. Three of the bridges were over the Piave River, north of the Po, and two others were over the Tagliamento River in northeastern Italy. (PRO)

THE WAR COMES TO SAN MARINO

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 23 — Stiff resistance is being offered by the Germans to the Allied liberation of the town of San Marino, capital of the small republic, wrote a UNN reporter.

«I have been up with our forward troops almost within hailing distance of the town,» the reporter wrote. «Spandaus and 88's are keeping us back, and the crested castle is being used by the enemy as an observation point from which to survey the entire countryside.

«Nevertheless, the Allied troops are making gradual progress, and the picturesque and quaint little republic seems due for a lively but short interlude of modern war.»

German prisoners are being received in a steady stream. They were obviously exhausted and without spirit. Many of them were conscripts from former satellite countries and when told the latest war news they showed their relief at being freed from German domination.

Even if there are 100,000 refugees in the republic, the Allied Military Government has enough food available to feed them for five days, it was stated by an AMG official.

The number of refugees in San Marino is uncertain, and the correspondent was unable to estimate how many would have to be provided for. Many of these people are trying to get back to their homes, and if villages like Monte Colombo and Montescudo are any criterion, what homes they will be!

AMG authorities, however, are making provision in each of the villages from which the residents fled, and food stocks are waiting to be moved in as required so that there will be no starvation. (UNN)

[illegible] what might happen to them at the hands of [illegible] Germans in the prisoner of war cages.

Secret weapons were mentioned once, and a prisoner said: «They call the liquor sold in Germany V-1 today — because it has no effect.»

Hitler Is Frightened

In reply to a question as to why the German High Command was fighting so fiercely on this front, when the Allies were supreme on all other fronts, one prisoner said: «That is the same question we are all asking.»

They spoke scathingly of Hitler and his clique. «We would have given up long ago,» one prisoner said, «but Hitler and his friends are frightened of their fate. Meanwhile, we all know that thousands of lives are being wasted. Our officers rule us with their revolvers. The soldiers will not stand these conditions much longer. The German Army can not long continue to function on these lines.»

One prisoner's complaint is repeated here. Frontpost is a miniature paper produced by the Psychological Warfare Branch, for German soldiers, giving them hard facts, without any propaganda or «trimming.» It is distributed to the enemy by plane and in shells. This German prisoner complained that the last copy, dated September 15, had reached him only yesterday.

Other prisoners admitted that they read Frontpost carefully and passed it from hand to hand, despite the threats of dire punishment if they were caught in possession of it.

«Safe conduct» leaflets were also discussed with the prisoners. They said these leaflets circulated freely, and they asked permission to say that the treatment they had been promised in the leaflets had been provided in full by their captors. (UNN)

8TH ARMY FIGHTS BY «ARTIFICIAL MOONLIGHT»

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 23 — The complete absence of the Luftwaffe in Italy has enabled troops of the 8th Army to use «artificial moonlight» — created by hundreds of blazing searchlights — to maintain pressure on the enemy for 24 hours every day.

No longer is there any question of having to cease or curtail operations when darkness falls, wrote a UNN correspondent. Every minute of every hour is now a fighting time.

«Artificial moonlight is one of the many factors responsible for the 8th Army's successful crushing of the enemy's prolonged, desperate resistance in the Adriatic sector,» the correspondent stated.

«It is possible to use it only when there is complete air superiority, and that is what the Allies enjoy these days. An enemy plane in the sky is an absolute rarity.» (UNN)

BRAZILIAN TROOPS TAKE PRISONERS

WITH 5TH ARMY BRAZILIAN FORCES, September 23 — Brazilian troops of the 5th Army took their biggest batch of prisoners and suffered their first casualties as they ran into stiff German resistance yesterday in attacking a 4,000-foot peak in the Goth Line defenses in the Western Apennines, a UNN correspondent reported in a dispatch today.

The Brazilians have advanced some six miles since going into the line on Sunday, and have liberated the towns of Quiesa, Montemagno, and Camaiore as they moved toward the Goth Line outposts, inflicting heavy casualties on the withdrawing Germans, who put up only sporadic artillery and mortar fire.

Yesterday, however, the UNN correspondent said, the Brazilians met heavy mortaring as they moved on the highest point in their sector, and were forced to withdraw after suffering losses in killed and wounded.

The 35-man United States combat training team which had worked with the Brazilians during the past month left to rejoin their own units yesterday, the dispatch said. The group, which was split into teams of one officer and two or three enlisted men to each Brazilian unit, was reviewed by Brazilian General Euclydes Zenobio Da Costa, who expressed deep appreciation for the Americans' « intelligent cooperation and training. »

« It is a sad day for us, who became accustomed to your companionship during the past month, » the General told the departing Americans, under the command of Lieutenant Colonel Raymond Brisach.

Another dispatch said that three Brazilian nurses have been cited by commanders of American hospital units for their services in treating wounded American troops.

The Brazilian medical unit, which includes 25 nurses, forms part of a veteran American evacuation hospital. They not only care for Brazilian wounded, but assist in taking care of American or other Allied wounded, working side by side with U. S. doctors and nurses.

The entire Brazilian medical unit volunteered for overseas duty. (UNN)

GREEK PREMIER PRAISES MOUNTAIN BRIGADE

LONDON, September 23 — The Greek Premier, George Papandreou, in an order of the day yesterday, praised the Greek Mountain Brigade, which helped to drive the Germans from Rimini.

« We follow with deep emotion your struggles and sacrifices at the side of our great Allies, » Papandreou said. The Greek nation is proud of her fighting men. When the full story is told of the epic struggle of mankind against the barbarians, our Mountain Brigade will occupy a high place in the hearts of the Greek people and will be honoured in the pages of Greek history. ALLIED TROOPS' MORALE AT PEAK, SAY T.U. LEADERS

ROME, September 23 — Allied troops, advancing in northern Italy in one of the most difficult stretches of terrain in the world, are cheerful and optimistic, the British and American trades union delegation reported today on their return here after a visit with the front-line soldiers.

The five leaders of labor organizations are scheduled to leave Sunday for their home countries.

« We've seen the battlefields from Sicily right on up through Cassino, and we've followed the campaign as ordinary men, but we never realized until we saw for ourselves the difficulties of the rows on rows of mountains through which the Allies are smashing ahead, » Tom O'Brien, a representative of the British Trade Union Congress, remarked.

« Normal » is the fitting way to describe the questions asked by the troops, the delegates said.

« They want to finish off the Germans and go home, and they want to know what they're going to get out of life afterward, » Will Lawther, the other BTUC representative, reported.

George Baldanzi of the (American) Congress of Industrial Organizations, supported this report, adding, « You can't take the cream of the youth of North America away from home, and suddenly change their beliefs.

« They have just as clear vision as they had in 1932, when they saw their fathers fighting through a world depression, and they're going to avoid that kind of thing, or know the reason. »

O'Brien said that the troops are determined that « Germany must be squashed for good, » and added:

« They know that the job has got to be done properly this time, for the safety of society. » to the Bulgarian frontier, in an attempt to secure their escape routes from Greece and Bulgaria. Bulgarian forces, giving support to the Partisans, are driving the Germans toward Nis from Bela Palanka, a railroad junction of lines leading from Sofia to Nis.

North of the Greek border, the Germans have succeeded in retaking Prilep, and confused fighting is in progress in this area.

In Montenegro, where the Partisans now hold Niksic firmly, further progress has been made in the direction of Danilovgrad. The Germans in this sector are withdrawing toward Podgorica. The coastal escape route for the Germans in the Cetinje area and in northern Albania is seriously threatened by this action. (OWI)

R.A.F. HITS ENEMY VESSEL AT SAMOS

CAIRO, September 23 — Rocket-firing Beaufighters of the Middle East Air Command scored a dozen hits on the deck-line and amidships on a 1,000-ton vessel in the port of Vathi, on Samos Island, yesterday. Pieces of the vessel were blown into the air and the ship was left in flames. (Reuter)

RED ARMY TAKES GULF OF RIGA - ESCAPE PORT -

MOSCOW, September 23 — Russian troops swept in and liberated the Gulf of Riga city of Parnu late today, depriving the Germans of a second Estonian port from which they have been evacuating elements of the 30 German divisions trapped in the Baltic region.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin indicated that the city had been taken with very little opposition. Entry and complete investment were preceded late last night by a strong Red Air Force attack on the harbor and railway yard areas.

The Soviet communique said many German evacuation ships were hit along the harbor wharves, and that troop trains clustered on trackage near the port were set afire. Fires were started among the ships also, and one of these was followed by what the communique called an explosion of great magnitude. Warehouses were struck and left burning.

Still other troopships were attacked yesterday by aircraft of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet in the Gulf of Riga and in the Baltic Sea. Eleven vessels were sunk, and three were badly damaged. The official Soviet statement tonight said most of these ships had fled from Tallinn harbor just before the Estonian capital city fell to Russian troops yesterday.

In addition to Parnu, Red Army columns liberated the highway-junction city of Viljandi and 700 other inhabited localities in southern Estonia.

Russians Bomb Riga

Russian planes also attacked the Latvian capital of Riga last night, even as Russian guns battered away at German positions around the city. This attack also caught loaded German troopships and trains, scoring direct hits, and leaving many fires. Several violent explosions were observed as bombs fell thickly in the area of the export harbor and the maritime station.

Reuter said tonight from Moscow that the three coordinated Russian offensives into the Baltic states are smashing German panzers at an unprecedented rate. Dispatches spoke of the Baltic drives as relentless pushes against the northern frontier of East Prussia -- drives which will not lose their crushing, striking weight before they have broken through toward Berlin.

During the past week on the Riga sector alone, said Reuter, the Red Army has smashed more than 500 "Tiger" tanks.

On the central European front, advance Russian patrols

«They know that the job has got to be done properly this time, for the safety of society.»

Both Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark and General Sir Harold Alexander would like to see more visits by workers to troops, and vice-versa, the delegation reported.

«Although he knew the tremendous difficulties in the way, General Alexander said such visits would let the workers see how the weapons made by them were being used, and would let the soldiers see how the weapons were being made,» O'Brien reported.

«General Clark remarked, 'You should have done this before.'»

The other members of the delegation were Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor, and Walter Schevenels of the International Federation of Trade Unions. (UNN)

YUGOSLAV DRIVE ON BELGRADE CHECKED

LONDON, September 23 — The double drive on Belgrade, in which elements of the 1st and 12th Partisan Corps linked with three divisions at a point east of Valjevo, has been checked in that area, Marshal Tito's communique reported today.

To the east of the Kolubara River, however, advances have been made.

In south Serbia and Macedonia, the Germans hold a number of centers between Nis and Skoplje and eastward.

MOSCOW, September 23 — Russian troops swept in and liberated the Gulf of Riga city of Parnu late today, depriving the Germans of a second Estonian port from which they have been evacuating elements of the 30 German divisions trapped in the Baltic region.

During the past week on the Riga sector alone, said Reuter, the Red Army has smashed more than 500 "Tiger" tanks.

On the central European front, advance Russian patrols were said early today to have clashed with Hungarian border guards, but there was no confirmation late tonight that Russian forces had crossed the frontiers of Rumania in the drive toward Budapest.

From General Bor's Polish headquarters inside Warsaw came reports of added Russian landings on the western bank of the Vistula. Heavy fighting was said to be going on all around the Russian bridgeheads inside the Polish capital.

Flying Fortresses shuttling out of England to Russia dropped more supplies for Bor's beleaguered troops.

On other sectors of the long Russo-German front, said the Soviet communique, fighting of only local importance took place. (Reuter)

FINNS TAKE FIELD AGAINST NAZIS

WASHINGTON, September 23 — Radio Helsinki said tonight that Finnish troops have gone into action against the Germans.

An official Government announcement said Finnish forces had attacked their former allies because the Nazis had failed to withdraw from Finland within the time stipulated under the conditions of the Russian armistice terms.

Declassified E.O. 12356, Section 3.3/NND No. 789621

The Russians demanded that the Finnish Government clear its nation of German forces by midnight of September 15. The terms specifically stated that the Nazis were to be disarmed and interned. Finland's tardiness in carrying out the demand has since brought protests from Moscow.

Radio Helsinki added that Prime Minister Urho Castren's new government unanimously ratified the terms of the armistice with Russia and Great Britain at the third and final reading of the document before Parliament today.

The broadcast declared that withdrawal of Finnish forces to the 1940 frontier, in accordance with Russian wishes, would be completed tomorrow. The retreat was begun Thursday. (OWI)

DANISH LEADER PRAISES SOVIET TERMS TO FINLAND

LONDON, September 23 — Christian Moller, President of the Free Danish Council, stated today that the Soviet armistice terms to Finland were a blow to Nazi propaganda about Russian intentions in Europe.

"Russia has shown great patience and if Finland resumes the democratic policy she followed before the war, it will mean she can join the coming peaceful world organization," Moller said.

"This will automatically lead to friendly relations between Finland and Russia. Nobody outside of Russia can, I believe, realize what the Russian people suffered, and what colossal sacrifices they made for the whole world.

"It is understandable that Soviet Russia will and must safeguard herself against a repetition of that fate." (OWI)

CZECHS IN FIERCE FIGHT

LONDON, September 23 — Units of the Czechoslavakian forces are waging a heavy defense fight against the enemy in the Turcjansky-Svaty Martin area, where the Germans opened a powerful offensive with air and tank support, the Czechoslovak communique stated today.

At Telgart, Czechoslovak forces attacked successfully, pushing back the enemy and capturing prisoners and military material.

In the Upper Vah Valley, there is reconnaissance activity on both sides.

Sabotage activity by Patriot units in regions occupied by the Germans is continuing, and the Patriot groups are steadily increasing. (OWI)

BULGARIAN TROOPS CONTINUE ADVANCE WESTWARD

SOFIA, September 23 — Bulgarian units are continuing to advance westward in the Bela-Palanka region, where there is strong artillery and patrol activity on both sides, the Bulgarian communique, broadcast by Radio Sofia, reported today.

The Germans suffered losses in making two frontier attacks in the Timo River valley, where there was considerable enemy patrol activity.

Bulgarian units attacked in the direction of Tsarevo Selo-Kisen, clearing the enemy from some forward strongpoints.

South of Strumitza, which is firmly held by Bulgarian troops, fighting is continuing and developing favorably.

Air force reconnaissance continued yesterday with good results, and dive bomber squadrons and fighters attacked a train and fired some cars. One plane did not return. (OWI)

PALAU FIGHTING CONTINUES BITTERLY

PEARL HARBOR, September 23 — American Marines battling on the Palau island of Peleliu were said tonight to be advancing slowly but steadily.

Approximately three-fourths of the island is now in American hands, but Japanese gun crews deeply emplaced in precipitous hillsides were reported holding out grimly.

Total Japanese dead thus far on Peleliu were put at 7,920 by Admiral Chester Nimitz's communique tonight. In the same nine-day period of Palau fighting, American troops on the nearby island of Angaur killed 950 Japanese, and tonight were mopping up the last of them.

Peleliu airfield came into United States forces' use for the first time today with the forced landing of a heavy bomber. Dispatches said the field has been completely reconditioned by naval personnel.

A flotilla of seven Japanese barges trying to run in supplies for the besieged defenders of Peleliu was smashed by fighter-bombers and naval guns. An Associated Press dispatch said this was the largest relief expedition the Japanese have sent to the invaded island since the landings.

Meanwhile, carrier-based aircraft carried out a strong attack against the Japanese-held island of Yap, about 360 miles to the northeast of the Palaus.

In the waters of Formosa Strait, aircraft of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing sank a loaded 8,000-ton Japanese troopship yesterday.

Radio Tokio today just about admitted that Palau was lost, saying that defense of the island to the last man would gain valuable time — time badly needed to bolster the shaky inner defenses of the Empire.

Quoting a Japanese newspaper, the radio said the Palau fight is a delaying action, and that Japan must speedily increase its fighting strength "before the enemy rushes forces to the next objective."

On the land front in China, bitter fighting continued today in the area northwest of the threatened city of Kweilin, Kwangsi Province hub of all southern China's defense system.

Southeast of Kweilin, another Japanese column threatening the city over-run the town of Jungying. The main body of Japanese troops assaulting the Kwangsi area was said to be only 40 air miles from Kweilin late yesterday.

British 14th Army troops in Burma have advanced another eight miles toward Tiddim, in the Chin Hills, a Ceylon communique said tonight. (Reuter)

MILLION AND A HALF MEN IN U.S.N. OVERSEAS

NO EXCUSE FOR HUNGARY, MOSCOW SAYS

MOSCOW, September 23 — Hungary could break with Germany if her present rulers wanted to, the Soviet periodical War and the Working Classes said in an article quoted last night by the Russian Radio.

The Germans now have fewer troops in Hungary than they had in Rumania before that country broke with Germany, the paper said. The Hungarian Army is as large as that of Rumania or Bulgaria. German troops retreating from the Balkans are defeated and demoralised, and Germany can send no other forces into Hungary.

If the present rulers of Hungary persist in their present policy, it will only end in their sharing the fate of Hitlerite Germany, and they can blame only themselves, the Russia paper concluded. (OWI)

GERMANS BLAMED FOR FLORENCE DAMAGE

ROME, September 23 — General Sir Harold Alexander, Commander-in-Chief of Allied Armies in Italy, blamed the Germans for the damage done to the art treasures of Florence in reply to a letter sent by Guido De Ruggiero, Italian Minister of Public Education, today. De Ruggiero had thanked him on behalf of the Italian people for doing his utmost in preserving Florence from the horrors and destruction of war. (UNN)

TRADE UNIONISTS MEET RUSSIAN DELEGATION

ROME, September 23 — The British and American trades union delegates who have just completed a survey of Italian labor and living conditions held an informal conference tonight with members of the Russian labor delegation, who arrived in Italy by plane today.

Thomas O'Brien, representative of the British Trades Union Council who acted as spokesman for the conferees, said they had discussed the findings of the outgoing group, and that the Russians indicated they would make a similar survey.

It was expected that the reports of the mission from the Soviet Union, and those of the American and British visitors, submitted to their respective organizations, would eventually be the guides for international assistance to the Italian labor movement.

The delegation was composed of Will Lawther and Thomas O'Brien of the British Trades Union Council, Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor, and George Baldanzi of the American Congress of Industrial Organization.

During their talk with Bonomi, they expressed the desire that Italian trade unions be represented in the work of the Committee for Aid to Italy. (UNN)

NO PENSIONS FOR FASCISTS' WIDOWS

ROME, September 23 — All pensions granted to the widows of 15 Fascist hierarchs will be discontinued shortly, it was reported here.

Among those affected will be the widows of Italo Balbo, one of the Fascist quadrumvirate who led the March on Rome, who before his death was Air Minister and Governor of Libya, Michele Bianchi, another organizer of the March on Rome and former Minister of Public Works, Luigi Razza, well-known Fascist syndicalist, Roberto Forges Davanzati, director of the newspaper La Tribuna, and Gaetano Postiglione, former Undersecretary of Communications.

By order of Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for Sanctions against Fascism, warrants for the arrest of the Fascists hiding here or elsewhere in Liberated Italy have been issued.

Included on this list are Zenone Benini, former Undersecretary for Albanian Affairs; Guido Cristini, former President of the Special Fascist Court; Luigi Federzoni, former President of the Fascist Senate, Gaetano Le Maitre, former President of the Special Fascist Court; and Edmondo Rossoni, Fascist leader.

Count Sforza pointed out that these Fascists may now present themselves to the proper authorities and may be certain that they will be accorded every opportunity to defend themselves.

One general and one colonel have been removed from their posts in the Royal Customs Guard, together with two captains and three lieutenants, by the Epuration Commission of that body. (UNN)

FLORENCE, September 23 — The Superintendent of Schools of Florence today announced that the city schools would reopen October 2. (UNN)

The complete schedule of prices to be paid by the official collection agencies for the 1944 crop follows:

Grade	Maximum Acidity Permissible	Price per Quintal
First	2 degrees	6,000
Second	5 "	5,700
Third	7 "	5,400
Lampante (lamp oil)	7 "	5,100
Lavato, Scaldato d'Inverno (washed oil)	No restriction	4,800

These prices are nearly four times those of 1942-43, when the top price was only 1,550 lire for the best low-acidity oil, ACC pointed out.

The new prices were dictated by the higher costs of transportation, labor, baskets, solvents, and power. Those prices cover the minimum costs of production, while at the same time they are low enough to insure, with proper care, a reasonable ration to all parts of Italy in both town and country, officials said.

The major portion of the oil crop, estimated at 2,000,000 quintals, will come from southern provinces. (UNN)

NOBILE THANKS U.S. OFFICER WHO SAVED HIS LIFE

ROME, September 23 — At his first opportunity in 16 years, General Umberto Nobile, famous Italian explorer yesterday personally thanked 1st Lieutenant Merrill Beam, of the U.S. Army Signal Corps, who picked up the General's radio distress signal from near the North Pole after the dirigible Italia had crashed. Lieutenant Beam set the rescue machinery in motion, resulting in the rescue of the General and survivors of the expedition.

The meeting of rescued and rescuer took place in General Nobile's apartment here.

When the Italia crashed on 25 May 1928 after flying over the North Pole, a hurriedly patched-up emergency radio sent out the signal which Lieut. Beam picked up in Philadelphia on his "radio hunt"—a short-wave receiving set. The message was relayed to the Associated Press by the Philadelphia Bulletin. Air Rescue parties were sent from Sweden to the position picked up by Beam. The survivors were rescued on 23 June 1928, by Swedish airmen.

General Nobile retired from the Italian Air Force and traveled in the United States, Spain, and Russia between 1930 and 1942, returning to Italy last summer when Mussolini was deposed. (UNN)

CABINET RECOMMENDS DISMISSAL OF SOSNKOWSKI

LONDON, September 23 — The Polish Cabinet today adopted a unanimous resolution recommending the dismissal of General Kazimirz Sosnkowski, Commander-in-Chief of the Polish Army.

The cabinet's recommendation was communicated by Prime Minister Mikolajczyk to the President.

Commenting on this action by the Polish Cabinet, a Reuter diplomatic correspondent said that it climaxes a long struggle for power between the democratic and extreme nationalist factions among the Poles in London. The former, headed by Prime Minister Mikolajczyk, stands for friendly agreement with Soviet Russia and for cooperation with the Polish Committee of National Liberation. (Reuter)

NO PENSIONS FOR FASCISTS' WIDOWS

ROME, September 23 — All pensions granted to the widows of 15 Fascist hierarchs will be discontinued shortly, it was reported here.

Among those affected will be the widows of Italo Balbo, one of the Fascist quadrumvirate who led the March on Rome, who before his death was Air Minister and Governor of Libya; Michele Bianchi, another organizer of the March on Rome and former Minister of Public Works; Luigi Razza, well-known Fascist syndicalist; Roberto Forges Davanzati, director of the newspaper La Tribuna; and Gaetano Postiglione, former Undersecretary of Communications.

By order of Count Carlo Sforza, High Commissioner for Sanctions against Fascism, warrants for the arrest of the Fascists hiding here or elsewhere in Liberated Italy have been issued.

Included on this list are Zenone Benini, former Undersecretary for Albanian Affairs; Guido Cristini, former President of the Special Fascist Court; Luigi Federzoni, former President of the Fascist Senate; Gaetano Le Maitre, former President of the Special Fascist Court, and Edmondo Rossoni, Fascist leader.

Count Sforza pointed out that these Fascists may now present themselves to the proper authorities and may be certain that they will be accorded every opportunity to defend themselves.

One general and one colonel have been removed from their posts in the Royal Customs Guard, together with two captains and three lieutenants, by the Epuration Commission of that body. (UNN)

OLIVE OIL PRICES FIXED

ROME, September 23 — Producers of olive oil in Italy will receive 6,000 lire a quintal for first-grade oil, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

The new price was determined through close consultation between the Italian Ministry of Agriculture and the technical experts of the Commission.

Former arrangements for the collection of the olive oil have been improved in the new decree, which has already been signed. The communal and provincial committee systems, used advantageously in the Granaries of the People plan, have been incorporated in the new decree, thus making oil collection a civic responsibility.

Producers must have permits for storing oil on their premises. Strict controls will be exercised over the oil presses, which will be licensed.

yesterday personally thanked 1st Lieutenant Merrill Beam of the U.S. Army Signal Corps, who picked up the General's radio distress signal from near the North Pole after the dirigible Italia had crashed. Lieutenant Beam set the rescue machinery in motion, resulting in the rescue of the General and survivors of the expedition.

The meeting of rescued and rescuer took place in General Nobile's apartment here.

When the Italia crashed on 25 May 1928 after flying over the North Pole, a hurriedly patched-up emergency radio sent out the signal which Lieut. Beam picked up in Philadelphia on his «radio ham's» short-wave receiving set. The message was relayed to the Associated Press by the Philadelphia Bulletin. Air Rescue parties were sent from Sweden to the position picked up by Beam. The survivors were rescued on 23 June 1928, by Swedish airmen.

General Nobile retired from the Italian Air Force and traveled in the United States, Spain, and Russia between 1930 and 1942, returning to Italy last summer when Mussolini was deposed. (UNN)

CABINET RECOMMENDS DISMISSAL OF SOSNKOWSKI

LONDON, September 23 — The Polish Cabinet today adopted a unanimous resolution recommending the dismissal of General Kazimirz Sosnkowski, Commander-in-Chief of the Polish Army.

The cabinet's recommendation was communicated by Prime Minister Mikolajczyk to the President.

Commenting on this action by the Polish Cabinet, a Reuter diplomatic correspondent said that it climaxes a long struggle for power between the democratic and extreme nationalist factions among the Poles in London. The former, headed by Prime Minister Mikolajczyk, stands for friendly agreement with Soviet Russia and for cooperation with the Polish Committee of National Liberation. (Reuter)

A.M.G. ANNOUNCES REGULATIONS FOR GERMANY

SHAEF, September 23 — Two of the most significant laws under which the military occupation of Germany will operate are those providing for the absolute dissolution of the Nazi Party and the annulment of all laws unfairly discriminating against residents of the Reich. This was announced here yesterday, and is in addition to the other functions previously stated to be enacted by the Allied Military Government in Germany.

The Nazi Party is declared illegal, and it will be dissolved with all of its affiliated organizations, the announcement said. AMG will take over from Nazi administrative officers all party funds, property, records, and equipment. The party officers will be directed to remain at their posts until the exchange is effected, on the penalty of death if they fail.

German residents must surrender all firearms and wireless transmitting apparatus. Civilian activity in general is under rigid control, with travel within the country and across borders allowed only at the discretion of the military authorities.

The announcement also declared that the Reich Citizenship Law of 1935, denying citizenship to those not of German «blood», is dissolved. The Hitler Youth Law, requiring membership in that organization is abrogated, and laws protecting Nazi symbols, uniforms, and flags are swept aside.

An AMG law temporarily suspends the regular German civil, criminal, and administrative courts, and dissolves all special Nazi courts. It is proposed that regular courts be reopened when purged of all Nazi influences, and as soon as conditions permit.

Allied military marks have been issued, and will be legal tender for all purposes within the Reich. Punishment will be dealt to those who refuse to accept or discriminate against this currency. (OWI - Reuter)

SECRET OILFIELDS IN U. K. REVEALED

LONDON, September 23 — The existence of secret oilfields in Great Britain, which all through the war period have been yielding thousands of tons of high-grade oil, was revealed today by the British Government.

Geoffrey Lloyd, M. P., Secretary for Petroleum, who accompanied the Press party around the fields, said: « The oilfields came into operation just when we needed every ton of oil to carry this country through the crisis of the war. These were supplies which the U-boats could never sink ». (PWB)

U.S. CONGRESSMEN VISIT FRANCE

LONDON, September 23 — Ten American Congressmen returned here today from a tour of France.

Karl Mundt, from South Dakota, said: « All of us came back with a vivid appreciation of the problems facing the Army and the splendid job it has done. »

The Congressmen lunched yesterday with General Eisenhower and his staff, and Mundt said the greatest impression of the entire tour was the degree to which Eisenhower has the interests of the individual soldier at heart. « The health, security, food and housing conditions of the Army are excellent, » Mundt added.

The tour included the invasion beaches, Cherbourg, Army supply depots, and two days in Paris. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 23 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy

The Allied Armies in Italy continue to make important progress in both the central and Adriatic sectors.

The 5th Army has kept up its pressure in the Firenzuola area and has occupied important high ground north of this town. West of Firenzuola, American troops of the 5th Army have widened their breach in the Goth Line by capturing Monte Citerna and Monte Tronale, and they are now on the threshold of the Futa Pass.

In the Adriatic sector, troops of the 8th Army have cleared all resistance south of the River Marecchia, and have considerably enlarged their bridgehead north of the river.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 23 — Today's communique:

The clearing of the Boulogne area has been completed with the capture of Le Portal. Fierce fighting continued all day yesterday in the area of the Allies northern thrust. Other troops crossed to the north of the Waal (Rhine) and after bitter fighting between Nijmegen and Arnhem our troops reached the southern bank of Nederrijn (north branch of the Rhine River).

The enemy attacked the eastern side of our salient, but the base was further widened by the recrossing of the Bois le Duc Canal, and to the west by fresh advances beyond Vessem. Our forces have captured Stolberg, east of Aachen, and are now mopping up isolated enemy pockets in the town.

There has been little change from the Dutch-German border south to Luneville.

Enemy counter-attacks were repulsed at a number of places. German tank and infantry were driven back by our artillery northwest of Gelkirchen after an unsuccessful counter-attack southeast of Stolberg.

We inflicted heavy losses in repulsing German counter-attacks. Stubborn resistance was met from enemy pillboxes and defended road blocks.

In the area east of Dickirch, our units were forced to give some ground. Active patrolling and mopping up continue in other sectors along the line.

In the Moselle Valley, an enemy counter-attack was repulsed at Coin-sur-Seille, five miles south of Metz. Our troops have reached Epinal, and south of the town we have forced crossings of the Moselle at many points, against stiffened resistance. The roads southeastward toward Remiremont are heavily defended.

Farther south, in the vicinity of Melay, counter-attacks have been repulsed. The town of Melisey in the Lure area has been taken.

In the Riviera, the resort town of Menton is in our hands.

Transport targets in northern France, Holland, and western Germany were attacked by our fighters and fighter-bombers, which also provided close support for troops. Bridges and barges in Holland were targets for our light bombers last night. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 23 — Tonight's communique:

Lend:

Troops of the Leningrad Front, developing their offensive, today captured the town and important port in the Gulf of Riga, Parnu (Pernov), and the large highway junction in southern Estonia, the town and railway station of Viljandi, and also occupied over 700 other populated localities, including the towns of Turi, Vahaski, Tagdash, Lelle, Kyaru, Tarvele, Vanlandre, Vihla, and Ilugudi, and the railway stations of Lelle, Kyaru, Olete, and Vihla.

Troops of the 3rd Pre-Baltic Front, continuing their offensive, captured the town of Valmiera, and also occupied over 80 other populated localities, including Kiarke, Montuli, Tulasilva, Chiunki, and Juuntelsiene, and the railway stations of Ieiondi and Shiaule.

East of Riga, our troops occupied over 150 populated localities, including Valeis, Kushmaria, Latene, Ugaesh, Mondele, and Tekmetse, and the railway stations of Arika, Lainy, Baltava, and Rekunete.

On the other sectors of the front, fighting of local importance took place.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked an aerodrome and other military objectives in the Munich area, while other formations attacked the rail yards at Larissa, in northern Greece.

Medium bombers attacked a number of railroad bridges in the Po Valley and to the north of Padua. Fighter-bombers were active against roads, rail lines, bridges, motor transport, rail rolling stock, and close-support targets in the Italian battle area.

Last night, our bombers attacked targets in the central Po Valley.

From these operations, 17 of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,600 sorties.

Navy:

Yesterday, September 22, HMS Legal successfully bombarded enemy troops and traffic on the coastal road to the north of Rimini. For weeks past, minesweepers working in very difficult conditions have been clearing areas to enable gunfire support to be given to the Army. Many mines have been disposed of.

It is reported from the south of France that on September 20 the USS Ludlow bombarded enemy transport and railway yards at Ventimiglia. The area was well covered. (PRO)

East of Riga, our troops occupied over 150 populated localities, including Valeta, Kushimartu, Lutene, Uspesh, Mandele, and Tokmetse, and the railway stations of Anka, Laimy, Baltava, and Roknete.

On the other sectors of the front, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 22, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 57 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 39 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 22/23, our long-range Air Force carried out raids on the port of Riga and the port of Parnu (Pernov). As a result of the bombardment, in the port of Riga over 20 fires were started, and warehouses of the Germans were left burning. In the area of the docks and in the marshalling yard of the railway station, huge explosions were observed.

At the port of Parnu, bombs were exploding amongst the German vessels which were moored at the docks. Several fires broke out, one of which was followed by an explosion of great magnitude. Other fires were observed amongst the enemy trains on the railway station.

Aircraft of the Red Banner Baltic Fleet, by day, on September 22, pursued in great strength enemy vessels leaving the port of Tallinn (Reval). The transports with German troops were overtaken in the Finnish Gulf and the Baltic Sea. Our naval fliers, with bomb assault and torpedo blows, during the day, sunk 11 enemy transports; also, three other transports and a minesweeper were seriously damaged. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 23 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique.

The position of the German troops in Piedmont has become more serious. In spite of the efforts of the Germans to maintain control of Moncenisio and Monginevra, these passes are practically useless. Patriots are preventing the Germans' fortifying themselves or receiving reinforcements. In several localities, strikes have broken out. Patriots destroyed a railway bridge over the Malone stream between Chivasso and Turin. The railway line between Airasca and Turin has also been cut. In view of the deterioration of the situation, many Fascist families are being transferred from Cuneo to Venice.

The operations which took place in Valle dell'Orco ended in complete success for the Patriots. A strong contingent of men belonging to the 10th M.A.S. (fast motorboat) flotilla was annihilated. Enemy losses total 300 killed, and 200 prisoners.

Clashes between Patriots and Nazi-Fascists took place in Valle di Cavco, in Valle Varaita, in the lower Biella region, in the Vercelli sector, and in Val Seriana. The Germans carried out retaliatory bombing raids in the northern Piacenza sector, because of the losses suffered.

Patriots in the Valtellina sector routed a Fascist garrison 10 Kilometers from Sondrio. As a result of Patriot activity, the Tolmezzo-Paluzza and the Tolmezzo-Ammezzo-Forni highways were interrupted.

An important airplane assembly plant of the Macchi di Varese works, transferred after a bombing raid to a locality in Valle Olona was attacked by Patriots on the night of September 15 and blown up with three strong charges of dynamite. The damage done was so great that the activity of this industry may be considered at an end. (UNN)

FUEHRERS HEADQUARTERS, September 23 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

While, north of Nijmegen, our defensive front held firmly against strong enemy attacks, our units, attacking from the east and west, succeeded in interrupting the communications between enemy forces in south and central Holland, at Vechel. All enemy attempts to widen his penetration near Eindhoven were frustrated in bitter fighting, with the enemy losing heavily.

In Central Holland, 30 enemy tanks were destroyed on September 21.

Strong enemy attacks in the area southeast of Aix-la-Chapelle were repulsed in the course of heavy fighting. A German counter-attack threw the enemy back to his former position. During this operation, 12 tanks and armored cars were destroyed, and several guns were captured.

On the Eifel front, our counter-attacking troops regained West Wall territory which had been previously lost, and eliminated the remnants of the enemy's Sauer bridgehead, northwest of Echternach. The American 5th Armored Division suffered high losses here, losing over 40 tanks and armored cars.

South of Metz, there was local fighting activity.

In the Luneville area, the heavy fighting continues.

South of Chalean Salins, the superior enemy was repulsed by a German counter-attack.

At Luneville, enemy pressure toward the east increased in intensity. All attacks were frustrated by the stubborn resistance of our troops.

Along the upper Moselle, fluctuating fighting is going on around Epinal and Remiremont. South of Remiremont, several enemy attacks were repelled.

At two points where the Soviets penetrated into the German positions, counter-attacks of German and Hungarian troops are in progress.

South of Sanok and Krosno, the defensive battle rages with its usual ferocity. The unshakable firmness and determined counterthrusts of the German panzer units and grenadiers frustrated the efforts of the Bolsheviks to break through yesterday, as well.

In the central sector, some local attacks of the enemy south of the River Memel failed.

Our armored forces, attacking southwest of Mitau, were again able to improve the German positions. All enemy counter-attacks were warded off.

The fighting in the northern sector rose to an even higher pitch of fury. The German divisions, fighting bravely, supported by squadrons of battle aircraft, offered stubborn resistance to reinforced Soviet formations.

Numerous enemy tanks were destroyed, and all Soviet attempts to break through were frustrated or brought to a halt.

The German movements of withdrawal which have been ordered in northern Esthonia were completed according to plan yesterday. The enemy did not interfere with the movements of the German troops.

Air:

In the waters off Memel, German fighters completely destroyed a force of seven enemy torpedo bombers, thus forestalling an attack on a German convoy.

Enemy bomber forces, making use of weather conditions which were particularly unfavorable for the defence forces, carried out daylight terror raids against the cities of Kassel and Munich. Fifteen four-engined bombers were destroyed.

Naval:

In the course of our disengagement movements in western Holland, an escort unit of the German Navy evacuated strong troop formations and their equipment and weapons across the Scheldte Estuary, employing vehicles of all kind and being subjected to heavy air attacks. This has been achieved, despite unfavorable weather conditions, in the course of continuing day and night operations. (Radio Berlin)

FASCIST RADIO

It is claimed by the Fascist Radio that, in spite of eight divisions' having been employed by the Allies in one narrow sector, the attempted break-through has not materialised, and therefore the Allied offensive in Italy can be considered a failure. The loss of over 100 Allied tanks in a single day is confirmed. Rimini is still in German hands, according to the Fascist Radio, which moreover reports an Allied concentration southwest of Firenzuela. The latter town is not otherwise mentioned.

This morning, in the neighborhood of Bologna, eight people, including two officers, were executed for «terroristic» activities, 30 more were condemned to imprisonment.

8TH ARMY LIBERATES RIMINI, ENTERS PO VALLEY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 22 — Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army, battering their way through the last, bitterly-defended enemy positions across the Adriatic coastal corridor, yesterday captured the port of Rimini and crossed the sluggish waters of the Marecchia River to enter the broad Plain of the Po, it was announced to the northernmost limits of the city across the river, however.

Canadian troops captured the ridgetop village of San Fortunato, three miles southwest of Rimini, and spread out to occupy the connecting hill masses in a bitter action Wednesday. Then, with infantry and armour forces readied to exploit this gain, the Canadians pushed on to reach the Marecchia River the same night. At the second German strongpoint, the village of Ceriano, on the San Marino-Rimini Road, British infantry and tanks wrestled with reinforced German troops for two days and nights before gaining a break-through. The main weight of the German tank forces, including the 26th and 29th Panzer Divisions, was thrown into the battle to hold these positions just north of the San Marino border. As a result of savage and fanatic counter-attacks, these enemy forces regained the village of Ceriano after it had been taken by the British troops on Wednesday, and continued in possession throughout that night. With the renewal of the Allied assault at daybreak yesterday, the German forces were flung back, and the ruined village and the whole ridgetop were taken.

Within the tiny Republic of San Marino, British troops of an Indian Division completed the round-up of the last German stragglers still inside the state's border. The Army of San Marino assisted Allied troops in this clean-up, and took the leading part in driving scattered German elements from their mountain state's capital town.

5th Liberates Firenzuola

On the 5th Army front, shrouded in mists and rain, American troops widened and deepened their penetration of the Goth Line north of Florence. Pushing forward over muddy mountain trails, Lt. General Mark Clark's troops captured the important road junction town of Firenzuola, and pushed over two miles to the northeast to cross the Santerno River and seize the eastern slopes of Poggio Castle, over-looking the valley road leading down to Imola.

Other American troops occupied the village of Santa Lucia, and penetrated through the mountains to the northeast and northwest in flanking attacks on each side of the main German defenses guarding the Futa Pass on the Florence-Bologna Highway through the Apennines.

On the Ligurian coast, 5th Army troops captured the town of Pietrasanta, six miles north of Viareggio, and inland, took Monte Prano, nearly eight miles northeast of the seaside resort town. (PRO)

8TH ARMY LIBERATES RIMINI, ENTERS PO VALLEY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 22 — Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army, battering their way through the last, bitterly-defended enemy positions across the Adriatic coastal corridor, yesterday captured the port of Rimini and crossed the sluggish waters of the Marecchia River to enter the broad Plain of the Po, it was announced here today.

As the 8th Army swept northward into the southern edge of the plain along which lie the principal cities of North Italy, a shattered German army, reduced to almost half its peak strength of 12 divisions, fell back, exhausted from desperate, last-minute counter-attacks which failed to stem the Allied advance, pent up for nearly a month in the narrow confines of the Adriatic coastal corridor south of Rimini.

The dramatic advance of the Canadian and Greek troops and their armour came after a fierce two-day battle to drive the enemy from their strongly-held positions atop the Fortunato and Cerano ridges, spaced five miles apart across the upper end of a more than 20-mile-long entryway into the Emilia Plain between the easternmost spurs of the Apennines and the Adriatic Sea.

In heavy thunderstorms whose lightning flashes brought the opposing forces and the rain-lashed countryside into eerie silhouette, the advancing Allied forces moved at night through the ruins of Rimini and, farther west, made their way across the flooded Marecchia to establish a bridgehead at the edge of the great plain which is the heart of industrial North Italy.

Greek forces had cleared most of the enemy forces from the port town of Rimini early yesterday morning, and had taken up positions along the Marecchia River at its northern outskirts, it was reported. Enemy forces still clung forced German troops for two days and nights before forcing a break-through. The main weight of the German tank forces, including the 26th and 29th Panzer Divisions, was thrown into the battle to hold these positions just north of the San Marino border. As a result of savage and fanatic counter-attacks, these enemy forces regained the village of Cerano after it had been taken by the British troops on Wednesday, and continued in possession throughout that night. With the renewal of the Allied assault at daybreak yesterday, the German forces were flung back, and the ruined village and the whole ridgetop were taken.

Within the tiny Republic of San Marino, British troops of an Indian Division completed the round-up of the last German stragglers still inside the state's border. The Army of San Marino assisted Allied troops in this clean-up, and took the leading part in driving scattered German elements from their mountain state's capital town.

5th Liberates Firenzuola

On the 5th Army front, shrouded in mists and rain, American troops widened and deepened their penetration of the Goth Line north of Florence. Pushing forward over muddy mountain trails, Lt. General Mark Clark's troops captured the important road junction town of Firenzuola, and pushed over two miles to the northeast to cross the Santerno River and seize the eastern slopes of Poggio Caprile, over-looking the valley road leading down to Imola.

Other American troops occupied the village of Santa Lucia, and penetrated through the mountains to the northeast and northwest in flanking attacks on each side of the main German defenses guarding the Futa Pass on the Florence-Bologna Highway through the Apennines.

On the Ligurian coast, 5th Army troops captured the town of Pietrasanta, six miles north of Viareggio, and inland, took Monte Prano, nearly eight miles northeast of the seaside resort town. (PRO)

BRITISH MAKE SLIGHT PROGRESS IN ARNHEM AREA

SHAEF, September 22 — Some progress has been made by British tanks north of Nijmegen against strong German resistance. Bitter fighting is going on at Elst, five miles north of Nijmegen and about the same distance south of the encircled airborne troops.

Heavy fighting was reported in Stolberg, and the southern part of the town is being cleared by the American 1st Army. (Reuter)

JAP CARGO SHIPS SMASHED OFF MINDANAO

AFHQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 22 — General Douglas MacArthur said tonight that four more Japanese cargo vessels have been sunk or severely damaged in the latest air sweeps over Mindanao Island, southernmost of the Philippines. five miles east of Munich, found their target clear and smothered the field, crowded with planes, with their high explosive missiles.

Liberators also bombed the rail yards at Larissa, 150 miles north of Athens, where rolling stock has been concentrated for use in withdrawing German troops from Greece.

Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force struck at 11 bridges behind the German lines from Milan eastward.

Because of bad flying weather, and concentration of Allied planes on close-support operations with the advancing ground forces, German engineers had been able to repair many of those previously-bombed structures. (PRO)

R.A.F. BOMBERS HIT PORT OF SALONIKA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 22 — RAF medium and heavy bombers attacked the port of Salonika, second largest in Greece, in an effort to cripple German attempts to evacuate men and supplies from the Aegean Islands, it was announced here today.

Formations of Wellingtons, Halifaxes, and Liberators bombarded quays and port installations, and left the entire harbor area a mass of smoke and flames.

One huge explosion was believed to be that of a ship in the port. (PRO)

NIGHT BOMBERS FLY MORE SUPPLIES TO WARSAW

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 22 — Heavy bombers of the RAF last night made their sixth 1,750 mile trip from Italian bases to drop supplies and ammunition to the Polish forces battling German forces in the capital city of Warsaw, it was announced here late this afternoon.

The planes dropped captured German ammunition among the other stores they carried for the Polish forces, who for nearly two months, have fought in the heart of the Polish city. Last night's mission was carried out despite stormy weather which reached to the upper stretches of the Danube, and caused the planes to fly at altitudes of over 15,000 feet. (PRO)

ALEXANDER, CLARK TOUR FRONT WITH LYTTLETON

WITH 5TH ARMY, September 22 — General Sir Harold Alexander, Commanding General of the Allied Armies in Italy, and Lieut. Gen. Mark Clark, 5th Army commander, on Wednesday conducted Oliver Lyttleton, British Minister of Production, to frontline positions of the 5th Army, where, from a high point in the Gothic Line, they observed 5th Army troops moving toward Firenzuola.

The position to which General Clark led the party was the crest of a hill captured by the 5th Army in the preceding 24 hours. The bitterness of the fighting required to secure the hill, and the devastating accuracy of 5th Army artillery were attested by the seared tree trunks, only natural growth left on the hill, and the large number of enemy dead still lying in the positions in which they had been killed.

After visiting these advanced positions, the party landed on field rations not far from Mt. Altuzzo.

The trip to the front followed an inspection of a guard of honor by General Alexander, General Clark, and Mr. Lyttleton at the 5th Army command post in the morning, and a brief conference at General Clark's headquarters.

GERMANS EVACUATING PELOPONNESUS

CAIRO, September 22 — The Germans have evacuated the greater part of Peloponnesus, the southern area of the Greek mainland, reported a Reuter correspondent here today.

The German movement from southern to northern Greece still continues; they are taking with them all the motor transport they can lay their hands on.

At the same time, the Germans are moving their garrisons in Crete from east to west. (Reuter)

BRITISH POSITION AT ARNHEM CRITICAL 2ND ARMY CORRIDOR STRENGTHENED

SHAEF, September 22 — British airborne troops in the Arnhem area, nine miles north of Nijmegen, are still fighting a fierce, isolated battle and their position is officially described as "critical but not hopeless." German attacks against them have increased in violence, and casualties among the airborne troops have been mounting.

The 1st Airborne Army is clinging to positions along a good-sized front on the northern bank of the Lek River, the northern branch of the Rhine, while waiting for relief from the tank columns of the British 2nd Army, General Miles Dempsey's forces, pushing north from Nijmegen, appear to have been held about two miles north of the city by strong German defenses, including well-placed artillery and anti-tank screens. There is no sign of the Germans' being able to cut across or shorten the corridor by their counter-attacks on its flanks.

Polish airborne troops and supplies were dropped today, but weather conditions have prevented the Allies from cooperating as fully as planned. The Luftwaffe has moved up 150 fighters from an area south of the Ruhr, and are occupying bases immediately east of Nijmegen and Arnhem.

The British 2nd Army corridor is being steadily widened at its base and it is now 39 miles across. Though the spearhead has been almost halted, it is steadily growing in power as reinforcements roll up. On the northern flank of the corridor, heavy fighting is going on in the area of Winterie, five miles west of Eindhoven, where flooded plains and waterways make progress slow. British infantry units have reached Woert, on the southern flank of the corridor, 15 miles southeast of Eindhoven. They now hold a line on the Bois le Duc Canal.

German forces on General Dempsey's western flank, south of the Scheldt, are trapped, but are fighting strongly in a desperate effort to defend the Dutch islands at the mouth of the river. The islands are well fortified with naval guns. Canadian and Polish forces of the Canadian 1st Army are pressing strongly against the Scheldt pocket. Grim fighting is reported from the banks of the Leopold Canal to the west, but there are signs that the Germans are weakening in this sector.

At the mouth of the river, Terneuzen has been captured by Allied troops and they are steadily clearing the southern bank.

Boulogne Garrison Surrenders

To the west, the commander of the German garrison at Boulogne surrendered after the Canadians captured the fortress of Wimereux, north of the city, and brought the last remaining stronghold at Le Portel to the southwest under attack. Over 7,500 prisoners have so far been taken and the final total is expected to be much higher.

German resistance along the whole of the Moselle River front is growing. One of the largest tank battles since D-day is progressing in the Dieuze area. In the past two days, General George Patton's 3rd Army forces have knocked out 68 German tanks, bringing the five-day total to over 190

In the past two days, General George Patton's 3rd Army forces have knocked out 68 German tanks, bringing the five-day total to over 190 tanks destroyed.

It is believed that the bulk of the German tank strength in this area has been dug into the ground due to lack of fuel, but it was estimated that close to 100 German tanks were used to launch a major attack last night. Strong German artillery forces were brought up to support the attack.

On other sectors of the Moselle front, strong German resistance is continuing. They counter-attacked twice in the area south of Metz, but were repulsed. American units, attempting to cross the river here, were thrown back.

East and south of Nancy, General Patton's troops cleared Luneville of German resistance and have taken high ground along the west bank of the Meurthe River in the vicinity of Flin.

American 1st Army positions in the Siegfried Line around Aachen have been strengthened, while German strongpoints in the Hurtgen Forest are being crushed. A German counter-attack at Gellenkirchen, inside the German frontier near Maastricht, was stopped by American artillery before it reached Allied positions.

American troops which crossed the German frontier east of Diekirch, northwest of Trier, were forced to give ground by a heavy German counter-attack with tanks. Reports stated that 30 German tanks were destroyed in the early stages of this action. (OWI - Reuter - AP)

700 FORTRESSES BOMB KASSEL

LONDON, September 22 — Industrial objectives in the Prussian center of Kassel, behind the Siegfried Line, were attacked by at least 700 Flying Fortresses today, supported by several hundred Mustang fighters. Targets in this home of aircraft plants and locomotive works were bombed by means of instruments because of heavy cloud formations. No mention of German opposition or air combats was made in early reports.

At least 30 war factories are reported to have been blown up in previous attacks on Kassel, through whose yards pass major rail lines leading into the industrial Ruhr Basin, and to the western front.

American medium bombers this afternoon dropped about two million leaflets and bulletins of the latest war news over Calais and Dunkirk and pockets of resistance in Holland. No opposition of any kind was encountered.

Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF flew 700 sorties yesterday to bomb and strafe enemy transport, road convoys and troop concentrations behind the enemy lines, it was announced today. In the day's operations, railroads were cut in 80 places, and 69 armored vehicles, 21 locomotives, and over 300 railway cars were disabled or destroyed, and gun positions, and barges hit.

French-based Marauders of 9th USAAF concentrated on rail targets in Germany behind the Siegfried Line, bombing just ahead of General Hodges' 1st Army six miles from Trier, three waves of medium bombers attack at Ehrang, Carolstein, and Pronsfeld.

In the five days from September 16 to 20, inclusive, more than 11,500 sorties were flown by Allied aircraft, exclusive of gliders.

In addition to hitting targets at Coblenz and Mainz, Allied heavies also hit one of the few synthetic oil plants operating in Germany, the oil plant at Ludwigshafen.

It is now revealed that the quantity of supplies dropped by American Flying Fortresses on Warsaw last Monday exceeded the total amount dropped from Allied planes in 48 days during which the Poles have been holding out. The Commander-in-Chief, General Bor, said these supplies helped in pinning down five German divisions in the Battle for Warsaw. (OWI - Reuter)

NEW YORK, September 22 — An American major general, a colonel, three lieutenants, and six enlisted men, armed with one machine gun and various small arms, were credited with delaying a heavily armed German column of 117 vehicles for 15 minutes while a tank ambush was prepared, an Associated Press dispatch reported.

When the trap was sprung on the German column, the report stated, more than 300 of the 479 German troops were killed and 60 were captured. Not a single American soldier was lost in this classic tank trap. The column was wiped out at Marchiennes, France, near the Belgian border, as it raced up from the south in an effort to escape to Germany.

CONGRESSIONAL MEDAL AWARDED

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Brigadier General Theodore Roosevelt, eldest son of the former U. S. President, Theodore Roosevelt, yesterday was posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor, highest U. S. Military award, for gallantry "above and beyond the call of duty."

General Roosevelt died of a heart attack in France July 12.

Secretary of War Henry Stimson presented the medal to the General's widow in a ceremony in Washington attended by members and friends of the family.

The citation read, in part, "...Although the enemy had the beach under constant fire, General Roosevelt moved from one locality to another rallying his men around him, directed and personally led them against the enemy. Under his seasoned, precise, calm, and unfaltering leadership, assault troops reduced beach strong-points and rapidly moved inland with minimum casualties. He contributed substantially to the successful establishment of the beachhead in France."

A War Department announcement said a recommendation had been made some time previous to the General's death that he be awarded the Medal of Honor. The General had been decorated many times in the last war. (PWB)

11 AMERICANS AMBUSH GERMAN COLUMN

NEW YORK, September 22 — An American major general, a colonel, three lieutenants, and six enlisted men, armed with one machine gun and various small arms, were credited with delaying a heavily armed German column of 117 vehicles for 15 minutes while a tank ambush was prepared, an Associated Press dispatch reported.

Not a single American soldier was lost in this classic tank trap. The column was wiped out at Marchiennes, France, near the Belgian border, as it raced up from the south in an effort to escape to Germany.

An American armored division had moved north from the town into Belgium when an excited Frenchman reported to the general and the colonel that a German armed column was approaching the town from another direction. The general quickly organized his little army of 10 Americans, deploying them to cover every route into the town with their light weapons.

Using the radio in his jeep, a lieutenant relayed an order to the American armored division to send back two platoons of tanks to take up ambush positions.

As the German column rolled into the streets, it was met by a stream of harassing small arms fire from four directions. The startled Germans, mystified by the fire which they believed to come from a large force, began shooting as their vehicles jammed up.

For 15 minutes the American army held up almost 500 Germans. The general and his 10 officers and men fired their rifles and carbines and tommy guns until the last bullet had been spent. They escaped before the Germans could round them up.

The Germans reorganized their column and swept on through the town and ran directly into the flaming guns of waiting American tanks. Vehicles knocked out or destroyed included 20 command and reconnaissance cars, 43 trucks, 14 half tracks, eight motorcycles, 12 20-millimeter guns, four 75-millimeter guns, eight 150-millimeter guns, three 150-millimeter howitzers, and four dual-purpose guns. Farther south, where still other Russian spearheads are slicing into the already trapped Nazi Baltic armies, Russian guns were said to be lobbing shells into German positions around the Latvian capital of Riga.

On the battle line in central Europe, Russian troops have taken the vital rail town of Arad, in western Rumania, 10 miles from the Hungarian frontier. More than 50 other inhabited localities have been over-run in the same area.

In the Sanok area of southern Poland, 30 villages have been liberated in what Moscow described as continued stubborn battles with German forces trying to halt a breakthrough into Slovakia.

BULGARIANS BOMB GERMANS IN YUGOSLAVIA

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Planes of the Bulgarian Air Force yesterday bombed German positions at Kriva Palanka in Yugoslavia, and all returned safely to their bases, it was announced today by the Bulgarian High Command. This was contained in the text of a communique broadcast by Radio Sofia.

Land operations are also taking place at Kriva Palanka, which lies on the Sofia-Skoplje railway, 60 miles southeast of Sofia. Bulgarian units are advancing and taking prisoners here, the communique said.

Military operations continued at Strumitsa, where the 15th Infantry Division continued its heroic resistance against vastly superior forces, but there was nothing to report from the Tsarevo Selo sector.

The High Command announcement also said there was patrol activity in the Timo River Valley, and that the building up of defenses continued on both sides of the river.

Representatives of the German and Italian puppet missions in Bulgaria have also been arrested, the broadcast added.

According to Radio Sofia, the three regents resigned the day Kimon Georgiev formed a new cabinet.

The three regents were appointed by the Bulgarian Sobranje in August 1943, following the mysterious death of the Bulgarian King, Boris. They were to rule the country during the minority of the seven-year-old boy-King, Simeon II. (OWI)

U. S. 3RD FLEET ATTACKS MANILA

The Japanese have reacted sharply to this latest attack with a proclamation of martial law in the Philippines. The announcement came almost simultaneously with the U. S. Navy communique, and said that the step had been taken «in view of the danger of invasion's being imminent.» The Japanese News Agency said that the proclamation was made by the Philippines quisling president, and comes into force immediately.

Manila, on the island of Luzon, is the center of a complex of military installations. The modern and well-equipped harbor is the largest in the Philippines, and the important naval base of Cavite lies nearby. Outside of the capital, which had a pre-war population of some 350,000, are the Clark and Nichols airfields.

The Japanese put an umbrella of planes into the air to protect these vital points, but they were no match for the American aircraft, which brought down 110 and then destroyed another 93 on the ground. The carrier planes went on to inflict «severe damage» to this strongly-defended area, the communique said.

Marines Advance on Peleliu

Meanwhile, American Marines on Peleliu in the Palaus, Philippine outpost 600 miles to the east, were battling their way ahead against stiff Japanese resistance. A communique from the headquarters of Admiral Nimitz at Pearl Harbor said today that 6,792 Japanese have been killed since the start of the Palau campaign, while an additional 850 were killed in the invasion of Angaur Island, south of Peleliu, where organized resistance was yesterday reported to have ceased.

An American radio correspondent on Peleliu said in a broadcast this morning that the Japanese there have apparently adopted a new strategy of strict conservation of their forces. The picked troops defending the island are fighting bitterly, but are not carrying out any offensive action, he said, adding that all the initiative has been left to the Americans.

The main Japanese force is dug in on a series of ridges on the western side of Peleliu, which an Associated Press correspondent today described as packed with caves and bristling with steel-doored, concrete underground strong-points. The correspondent quoted Major General Roy Geiger, commander of the 3rd Amphibious Corps, as saying that the terrain was the most difficult he had ever seen.

«We have had to lower our boys by ropes down the rocky sides to get at some of those caves,» Geiger said. «That's the only way to get at them.»

The AP correspondent said that the Japanese had spent years carving out underground caverns in the ridges, while the guns of their strong-points command the summit of the principal feature. At one point he saw an eight-inch Japanese naval gun that could sweep all of Peleliu to the south.

Despite these obstacles and the bitter resistance, the Marines are continuing to advance, Admiral Nimitz's communique announced.

The communique also disclosed a new series of attacks by carrier-based aircraft against Japanese installations in the central and northern Pacific. The planes heavily bombed targets at Arakabesan in the Palaus, Moen Island in the Truk Atoll, Pagan and Marcus islands, and Iwo Jima.

The Japanese put up only «ineffectual interception» to these attacks, the communique said, and no American planes were lost.

In the southwest Pacific, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today that Allied planes dropped 215 tons of bombs in the latest attacks on Halmahera, Ceram and Celebes on the southern approaches to the Philippines.

Many Japanese aircraft were damaged in the Halmahera attack, which was followed up by carrier aircraft attached to the Southwest Pacific command. The carrier planes

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Planes of the Bulgarian Air Force yesterday bombed German positions at Kriva Palanka in Yugoslavia, and all returned safely to their bases, it was announced today by the Bulgarian High Command. This was contained in the text of a communique broadcast by Radio Sofia.

Land operations are also taking place at Kriva Palanka, which lies on the Sofia-Skoplje railway, 60 miles southeast of Sofia. Bulgarian units are advancing and taking prisoners here, the communique said.

Military operations continued at Strumitsa, where the 15th Infantry Division continued its heroic resistance against vastly superior forces, but there was nothing to report from the Tsarevo Selo sector.

The High Command announcement also said there was patrol activity in the Timo River Valley, and that the building up of defenses continued on both sides of the river.

On other parts of the front, there was only patrol activity. (OWI)

SOVIETS ARREST FORMER BULGARIAN REGENTS

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Radio Moscow said today that Soviet troops had arrested the three former regents of Bulgaria — Prince Cyril, Bogdan Filov, and Lt. Gen. Nikola Mikhov, as well as Dobri Bozhilov, former Bulgarian Prime Minister, and Hristo Vasilev, former Minister of Finance.

Representatives of the German and Italian puppet missions in Bulgaria have also been arrested, the broadcast added.

JAPS LOSE 205 PLANES, 11 SHIPS

SAN FRANCISCO, September 22 — Radio Tokyo said tonight that American carrier-based aircraft today carried out a second attack against Japanese installations in and around Manila.

The Nipponese account of this second assault on the Philippine capital said that American bombs rained down on the harbor and on Clark and Nichols airfields and that the Japanese Embassy was among the buildings hit.

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Roaring in from carriers of the 3rd Fleet, American warplanes Wednesday caught the Japanese at Manila completely by surprise and destroyed 205 of their aircraft and sank 11 ships in the bay of the Philippines capital, the Navy Department announced today.

An additional 26 vessels were listed as damaged and probably sunk in this first attack on targets at Manila, adding up to what was officially described as a «superlatively successful» operation. American losses included 15 aircraft, from which several airmen were rescued, while the Japanese failed to inflict any damage on the surface ships of the task force, under the command of Admirals Halsey and Mitscher.

P. T. boats operating northeast of Morotai Island, where U. S. forces are rushing the construction of an airfield only 250 miles from the Philippines, sank a 2,000-ton freighter carrying troops and supplies, the communique said.

There was no report of ground action on Morotai, northernmost of the Halmaheras, where American forces yesterday were reported cleaning up small but stubborn enemy resistance northeast of the Gila Peninsula.

Japs Capture Wuchow, Yungyan

In southern China, Japanese forces have captured the Kwangsi Province river port of Wuchow in their continued westerly drive toward the Chinese fortress city of Kweilin, 170 miles to the northwest.

Still another Japanese column, said Chungking, has taken the city of Yungyan, 60 miles southwest of Wuchow. American fighter aircraft and medium bombers operating in close support of Chinese ground forces opposing the Jap advance struck at Nipponese depots and supply lines throughout the area.

Planes of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing hit a large dump, starting fires which were visible

Chennault's pilots also struck at shipping off the south-western coast of Formosa. Among the ships hit was a 400-foot Japanese naval vessel.

Strong patrol action was reported from British troop fronts in Arakan and Burma.

Meanwhile the Japanese News Agency reported that five more of Hirohito's admirals have «died in action.» (OWI)

BRITISH PUBLISH DEMOBILIZATION PLAN

LONDON, September 22 — The British Government have published a plan for releasing men and women from the armed forces when the war against Germany is over.

The announcement stated that there will be two schemes put into operation, — the main scheme and a special one for men wanted for urgent work of reconstruction. The first men released under the main scheme will be those aged 50 and over. Priority will then be arranged according to age and service. Two months' service will count as being equal to an additional year of age. For instance, men aged 24 with five years' service will rank with men aged 30 with four years' service.

Also under the main scheme, when the size of the forces needed against Japan and to occupy Germany is decided, releases will keep pace with the intake of new recruits. Men released under the main scheme will get at least two months' leave with full pay, a ration allowance, dependence allowances, a gratuity, and civilian clothing.

There will be no priority for married men, but it is reckoned that 90 per cent of the first half-million released will be in this classification.

Those who have served overseas will receive an extra day's leave with full pay for every month abroad. Released men will get their jobs back, if they want them, with full pension and social insurance rights.

That is the main scheme. The special scheme for reconstruction work will affect relatively few men, — mainly those wanted for urgent work. Only Ministry of Labor applications for release will be considered. If men leave the occupation they have been directed to, they will be sent back to the forces.

There will be a Parliamentary debate on the White Paper and these proposals fairly soon, the BBC said. (Reuter - BBC)

NEW INCENDIARY BULLET USED BY U.S. AIRCRAFT

WASHINGTON, September 22 — The War Department announced that a new armor-piercing incendiary bullet is being used by American airmen on all battle fronts. It is the answer to the use by the Germans of protective armor in planes and tanks.

The new bullet has been supplied in large quantities to air forces in Europe and the Pacific. (Reuter)

U.N.R.R.A. APPROPRIATION PROPOSED FOR ITALY

MONTREAL, September 22 — The United States delegation to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration now in session here proposed yesterday a relief appropriation to the extent of 50 million dollars for aid to Italy.

Dean Acheson, asaistant U. S. Secretary of State and a member of the American delegation, declared last night that the proposal was supported with «extraordinary expressions of magnanimity» by other delegates from several countries which had suffered at the hands of Italy. The proposal was seconded by the French representative, Christain Valensi.

Acheson explained that the Norwegian delegate had asked whether the supplies which would be used in the proposed Italian Allied relief program would be taken from «short» stocks, thus decreasing the amount of «short» supplies for other countries.

The resolution was not put to a vote, but will be held for further discussions. No indication had been forthcoming as to when the resolution will come up for discussion.

Acheson made it clear that, should the resolution be approved by the UNRRA council, it will not set a precedent providing for UNRRA aid in other enemy or ex-enemy countries. Such aid, he said, must be sanctioned by the council in each instance.

The United States proposal embraces medical care for children, care of expectant mothers, and aid for displaced persons. The resolution is one of limited operations with limited funds for a limited type of work. (OWI)

CARUSO SHOT AS A TRAITOR

ROME, September 22 — Pietro Caruso, former Fascist Chief of Police of Rome, died the death of a traitor to his country at 1403 hours today, shot in the back by a firing squad at the Fortezza Bravetta. He had been convicted last night by an eight-man court for a series of crimes, principal one of which was handing over 50 innocent Italians to be massacred by the Germans.

Caruso was also convicted of participating in the round-up of hundreds of Italians for slave-labor service in Germany. Caruso had admitted at his trial that he knew many of these would never return to Italy alive.

Caruso was brought from the Regina Coeli Prison to the scene of the execution at 1358 hours. During the long ride from the center of the city to the fortress on the north west outskirts of Rome, he rode in a gray prison van accompanied by five Carabinieri and a priest. An autobus loaded with Rome police followed the van through the city.

The chair on which Caruso was placed had arrived at the fortress an hour before its occupant. It was plain wood, and had a concave notch at the back where Caruso rested his head. The chair was placed against an earth revetment in the inner fortress courtyard. Each of the chair's four legs was firmly staked into the ground.

When the van arrived, representatives of the Italian Ministry of Justice, the Carabinieri, the Rome Metropolitan Police, and representatives of the Allied and Italian press were waiting. On the other side of the revetment, a firing squad of 16 Rome Metropolitan Police riflemen were also waiting. They had arrived five minutes before the chair.

The van stopped about 30 feet past the chair. The autobus carrying the police guards turned about and left the courtyard. There was a five-minute wait, while final adjustments were made to the chair.

Then Caruso, who had watched the death of many innocent people and had supervised the torture of many more, was taken from the van by three Carabinieri. He was wearing the same blue suit he had worn during his trial when

The van stopped about 30 feet past the chair. The autobus carrying the police guards turned about and left the courtyard. There was a five-minute wait, while final adjustments were made to the chair.

Then Caruso, who had watched the death of many innocent people and had supervised the torture of many more, was taken from the van by three Carabinieri. He was wearing the same blue suit he had worn during his trial when he blandly admitted committing all the crimes with which he was charged, excusing them on the ground that he «was following orders.»

After Caruso alighted, the gray van pulled away to the far side of the courtyard. Caruso was placed in the chair in a straddling position, his back to the firing squad and his face toward the revetment. The court had decreed he was to die as a traitor. No grass grew at the spot Caruso faced. Attendants tied Caruso's feet to the chair's two rear legs. Two ropes encircled his back, and were fastened to the back of the chair.

The priest prayed with Caruso for a few moments and then walked to one side and slightly to the rear of the firing squad. The first order was given, and the front column of the squad knelt. Then both lines of riflemen raised their guns.

There was a terrific explosion and a mass of fire as the 16 rifles sounded at the same moment.

There was no need for a doctor to examine the body. Caruso was dead.

A black undertaker's wagon appeared from behind the revetment. A few moments later, the dead Fascist was on his way out of the fortress.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Caruso was captured on June 12 by Italian Patriots in a little town 70 miles northwest of Rome. The former Fascist police chief was fleeing with two companions, who were also arrested, and a box two feet by three feet containing about eight to nine million lire in cash, gold bullion, and assorted jewelry. These, Caruso admitted at his trial, were taken from his victims, including the 50 innocents whose bodies were among the 336 found in the Ardeatine Caves.

It was also Caruso who frankly admitted that he had made all the arrangements for the execution of Count Ciano, Mussolini's son-in-law and Italian Foreign Minister. But he denied he administered the coup de grâce. Rome citizens who saw the film of the execution insisted that, while the face of the murderer could not be seen, his hand was clearly visible. They insisted it was Caruso's hand.

While the sentence of the special court was being carried out, Caruso's secretary and accomplice, Roberto Occhietto, began to serve the 30-year term imposed by the same court for the same crimes which resulted in Caruso's execution. (UNN)

ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR ITALY HEARS REPORTS

ROME, September 22 — Recent political developments in liberated Italy were the subject of a report at the 21st meeting of the Advisory Council for Italy today in Rome.

Captain Ellery W. Stone, USNR, Acting Chief Commissioner of the Allied Control Commission, made the report.

General Vasiliev, the acting representative of the Soviet Union, was chairman. Participating also were these representatives of five other Allied Nations: George Exintaris, Greece; Sir Noel Charles, Britain; Alexander Kirk, United States; M. Couve de Murville, French Committee of National Liberation; and Milosc Smiljanic, Yugoslavia. (UNN)

PENICILLIN BROUGHT TO ITALY

ROME, September 22 — Two precious parcels of penicillin, the first imported for benefit of civilians in Italy, were handed over to Italian health authorities today by the Public Health Sub-Commission of the Allied Control Commission.

One of the consignments came from the British War Office and the other from the United States War Department.

The valuable drug was turned over to Istituto Superiore d'Igiene for experimental work, and for cultivation of cultures in biological laboratories, leading eventually to production for general use.

Hospitals will have the first call on any supplies produced from these original molds. (UNN)

PRICE-CONTROL, EPURATION MEASURES ADOPTED

ROME, September 22 — The Council of Ministers met today at the Viminal Palace to examine and adopt important price control, epuration, and other measures.

The meeting approved the formation of an inter-ministerial committee whose job it will be to coordinate and discipline prices in general, and especially in those commodities and services which come directly under the control of government authorities.

Other measures were adopted for the speeding up of epuration procedure in the first four categories of civil servants, and for the compilation of voters' list in preparation for the time when national elections will be held in Italy. (UNN)

COURTS CLAMP DOWN ON GRAIN LAW VIOLATORS

ROME, September 22 — Police officials in Catania, posing as black market dealers, today caught Gismondo Casal and Antonin Contino red-handed with 3,000 quintals of grain. It was immediately confiscated together with six motor vehicles, and the offenders were jailed.

In Bari, a fine of 1,559,600 lire and four years in prison were meted out to both Pietro Laviglio, a farmer, and Vincenzo Ceci, a tractor mechanic, for failing to turn in grain to the Granai del Popolo.

Several grain law evaders appearing before the Trapani courts drew a total of 5 1/2 years in prison and 693,000 lire in fines. (UNN)

ITALIAN FILM STAR FINED

FLORENCE, September 22 — The well-known Italian film star Fosco Giachetti was fined 6,000 lire by the Allied Military Court here yesterday for travelling from Rome to Florence without a regular permit.

Giuseppe Ballerini, who organized the trip, was sentenced to six months in jail and fined 50,000 lire. Giachetti's sentence was lighter, because he was able to prove that he had come to Florence to visit his family. (UNN)

ITALIAN POSTAL SERVICE REACHES NEW HIGH

ROME, September 22 — Civilian mail service in liberated Italy is now restored to a point where more than 17,000,000 letters, equal to 70 tons, have been dispatched between Allied and neutral countries and Italy between January 1 and August 31.

Planned by British and American mail experts of the Allied Control Commission in cooperation with Italian postal authorities, the rejuvenated mail service was restored to liberated Italy as soon as security conditions permitted in a specific territory. An example of this speedy postal restoration was Rome. Postcard service between Rome and the south of Italy was in operation June 19, two weeks after the capital's liberation, and full foreign letter service to and from the capital went into effect July 1.

The close ties between Italian citizens and citizens of the United States and Great Britain, is indicated in the number of civilian letters arriving in Italy from the two countries in June, July, and August, which totaled 3,400,000. A total of 1,350,000 civilian letters left Italy for these countries during the same period.

Through the cooperation of Allied military authorities Italian civilian mail to and from Italy is being carried along with mail to and from Allied troops. Already the ACC has established an airmail service from Tripoli to Italy, and Italian postal authorities are now operating a restricted internal airmail service, which also links Sicily and Sardinia with the mainland.

The plans and operation of restoring mail service to liberated Italy has included provisions for mailing and delivery of newspapers within Italy, thus carrying out another of the four freedoms under the Atlantic Charter — freedom of the press.

Other postal services now in operation in the greater part of liberated areas are savings bank, postal funds, check account service, mail registration and insurance, and express letters. (UNN)

BRITISH LEADERS OF A.C.C. FOR GERMANY NAMED

LONDON, September 22 — It was announced today that Major General S. W. Kirby and Mr. Ivan Kirkpatrick have been nominated leaders of the British section of the Central Control Commission to be set up in Germany after the period of military control.

The Commission will include representatives of Britain, the United States, and the Soviet Union. (BBC)

ALLIES WILL CONTROL GERMAN PRESS

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Plans for the operation of the «whole German informational apparatus» by British, American, and Russian officials were described yesterday by Robert Sherwood, Director of Overseas Operations for the U. S. Office of War Information.

Sherwood, who has just returned to the U. S. after more than seven months in the European war theater, told his press conference that the press, radio, and film services in Germany will operate under the joint control of the three military occupational forces.

He said that the first task of the information services will be to give instructions to the German people promulgated by the military authorities. Later, the services will be used to «convince the German people that they really lost the war.» To which Elmer Davis, OWI Director, added: «And that they will lose it if they ever start it again.»

The informational servicing activities of the U. S. Office of War Information will continue in liberated countries on a diminishing scale until such time as the services provided by OWI are adequately available through normal channels, Sherwood added. He stressed that OWI will function as «a service machine, not as a propaganda machine.» (PWB)

FILIPINO LAUDS U. S. POLICY

WASHINGTON, September 22 — Carlos P. Romulo, resident commissioner of the Philippines in the United States, today praised the American policy which, he said, has assured the Filipino people of their independence.

Speaking before the House of Representatives, Romulo said:

«Today, we find ourselves on the threshold of victory. We are about to recover the Philippines. From the start, America based its premise in the Philippines upon the human platform. Its framework was built by the Americans who planted the concept of democracy in the Philippines. Its foundations rest deep in Bataan.» (PWB)

GERMANS EXECUTE 318 GREEKS IN CRETE

LONDON, September 22 — The Germans are carrying out fierce reprisals on Crete and have executed 318 Greeks in six districts of the island, the Greek Information Office said today.

The statement added that Lt. Gen. Koch, Commander of the German Police in Crete, is chiefly responsible for the massacres in the Amarion district, where 150 Greeks were executed. German soldiers who took part belong to the 822nd Infantry Battalion. (OWI)

INSIDE GERMANY

HMS Kimberley and HMS Lookout were both in action to the north of Rimini, engaging coastal guns and field batteries with upwards of 1,000 rounds. Target areas were well covered, and one particularly obnoxious battery was effectively silenced.

Allied Armies in Italy.

The Allied Armies in Italy have still further successes to report. After nearly a month of continuous bitter fighting, troops of 8th Army have driven the enemy from the San Fortunato-Carnaio Ridge, and have a bridgehead over the River Marecchia.

Rimini has been captured. This is most important, as the town lies at the entrance to the Po Valley.

Fifth Army, giving the enemy no respite, has captured the important road center of Firenzuola and dominating hills to the north and northeast of the town, as well as other vital ground in the central sector of the Apennines.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force.

Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday continued their assaults on enemy communications in Hungary and Yugoslavia, attacking many rail yards and rail bridges. Fighter-bombers also attacked a rail yard in Yugoslavia.

Due to adverse weather, tactical aircraft did not operate.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force were active over Greece and Albania, attacking military objectives, but weather restricted these operations.

Last night, our bombers attacked port facilities at Salonika, Greece.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed, and 10 of ours are missing.

MAAF flew about 850 sorties. (PRO)

SHAEF, September 22 — Today's communique:

Land:

The Allied drive through Nijmegen continued yesterday against increasing enemy opposition.

Our armored forces have captured the bridge at Nijmegen in conjunction with airborne troops. They have crossed to the north bank of the Waal, and pushed on north.

The town of Nijmegen has been cleared of the enemy. The base of the Allied salient has been widened on both sides of Eindhoven. We have reached Someren on the east, and we are fighting in the area of Wintelre on the west.

Air:

Fighters and fighter-bombers supported operations in Holland. Some enemy aircraft were encountered, principally in the areas of Nijmegen and Lochem. Twenty enemy aircraft were shot down for the loss of four of our fighters.

In the Scheldt Estuary, we have captured Terneuzen, and are steadily mopping up the southern bank east of the Leopold Canal.

In the Boulogne area, the enemy has been confined to the high ground southwest of the town.

The enemy strongpoint in the Forest De la Creche, on the outskirts of the town, was attacked by medium and light bombers.

Troops crossing into Germany from southern Holland have advanced to within three miles of Gellenkirchen. In Stolberg-Busbach, east of Aachen, mopping up is in progress, and we are engaged in house-to-house fighting in Stolberg. East of the town, our troops have gained the high ground.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 22 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

During the period August 27 to September 3, Patriots killed 300 Germans in hard fighting that took place southwest of Belluno. German forces, supported by tanks and armored cars, which had begun mopping up operations against Patriots in this sector, were strongly opposed. After successfully combating repeated enemy attacks, Patriots of the Garibaldi Brigades retired to the mountains only because of the scarcity of munitions, maintaining their efficiency and unity. Having received the necessary reinforcements, they are now preparing to meet new attacks.

The city of Tolmezzo can practically be considered besieged by Patriots, who control the surrounding mountains.

The Liguria Division, whose activity is increasing, has carried out effective actions. Enemy losses totalled 52 killed and 16 wounded, two vehicles destroyed and three damaged, one bridge demolished, and another damaged.

In Lombardy, during the month of August, almost 300 Nazi-Fascists were killed between Monte Fenice and the village of Vara. In the Montalto, Montebello, (Pavia), Prinia, and Nibbiola (Novara) sectors, clashes took place which ended in favor of the Patriots.

The garrison of Cortellazzo di Alessandria was captured. German troops were stopped at Ciogo Presolana near Bergamo. After liberating Domodossola, Patriots took over the administration of the town. The mayor was substituted by a Provisional committee which, among other things, fixed the bread ration. A large section of the local young men immediately enlisted in the Garibaldi Brigade operating in that sector. This brigade liberated the villages of Nibbiano and Pianello south of Domodossola.

Nazi-Fascist ferocity becomes more savage both in the cities and in the country. The Germans are rounding up workers to deport to Germany or to work on fortifications. Fascist militiamen are collaborating with the German SS in seeking out men with relentless indiscrimination, which often results in massacres among the civil population. In the village of Pagnano, where some German soldiers were killed by Patriots, 210 men were taken from their homes, barbarously massacred, then left on the spot; every one was forbidden to bury the bodies. Eight Patriots were shot in the square of the commune at Bologna. The bodies were

At Pont-à-Mousson, and in the Nancy-Luneville area, several enemy attacks were repulsed, partly by successful counter-attacks. The enemy suffered heavy losses. Local penetrations were sealed off.

In the Remiremont sector, the enemy attacked with strongest forces. Heavy fighting is in progress near the town.

The defenders of Boulogne have been for days opposing a far superior enemy in heaviest defensive operations.

Strong enemy air attacks were launched against Calais yesterday.

The St. Nazaire garrison repulsed several enemy attacks.

Italy:

In the area north of Florence, numerous enemy attacks, launched with concentrated forces, were frustrated in bitter fighting. One local penetration was sealed off.

On the Adriatic Coast, the enemy, due to the high losses suffered during the last days' fighting, did not continue his break-through attacks.

Along the entire front, strong local attacks were repulsed.

On September 20, a total of 106 enemy tanks were destroyed.

Eastern Front:

In southwest Siebenbürgen, Hungarian troops are fighting advanced enemy units.

In the Szekler salient, our troops frustrated all Bolshevist attacks.

In west Rumania, German battle planes knocked out 23 tanks and destroyed numerous vehicles.

In the course of the defensive battle in the Sanok-Krosno area, heavy fighting with reinforced Bolshevist units is still going on. Our counter-attacking troops eliminated local penetrations, destroying numerous Soviet tanks.

At Warsaw, a new enemy attempt to cross the river has failed on the river islands. Over 200 prisoners were taken.

Our armored storm units, fighting against stubborn enemy resistance, have gained further ground south of Mitau.

In Latvia and Estonia, our heroically fighting troops again frustrated new attacks of strong Soviet forces on the eighth day of battle.

In the course of defensive and offensive fighting, 103 enemy tanks were either destroyed or captured yesterday.

In the northern part of Estonia, the ordered disengagement movements from the Narva sector were completed according to plan.

Air:

North American bombers yesterday attacked several localities in the Hungarian area.

Terror attacks on western Germany caused damages, especially in Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, Koblenz, and Mainz.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, 22 September — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Arnhem area, our own attacks, aiming at the destruction of the British 1st Airborne Division's trapped remnants, was continued.

Enemy forces, advancing from Nijmegen in a northward direction, were held north of the town. South of Nijmegen, our own attacks are slowly gaining ground.

Fighter and battle plane formations supported the Army's defensive fighting in the Dutch sector, destroying 38 enemy planes, including 20 large transports serving the supply of enemy airborne troops. Twelve four-engined bombers, as well as 10 Anglo-American bombers, were also shot down by units of the Wehrmacht.

In the Aix-la-Chapelle area, several enemy attacks, supported by tanks, were repulsed. The enemy lost nine tanks. Southeast of the town, enemy pressure is increasing in intensity.

American forces pushing through the mountains five miles east of the main Bologna road yesterday captured the mountain village of Barco, 25 miles northeast of Florence, and the nearby Monte Acuto in a frontal approach to the town of Firenzuola, now threatened also from the east, where American forces yesterday captured the twin peaks of Monte Frena and Monte Montale.

On the west coast sector of the 5th Army front, Allied forces approached the outskirts of Pietrasanta, six miles north of Viareggio. Only light enemy artillery fire and decreasing enemy resistance were met on this flank of the 5th Army's advance. (PRO)

BRITISH FORCES SEIZE YUGOSLAV POSITIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 21 — British artillery and infantry forces were landed on the Yugoslav mainland and cleared the western end of the Peljesac Peninsula, between the islands of Hvar and Brac, during recent operations to liberate the Dalmatian islands, it was announced here today.

The capture of the three Dalmatian islands of Brac, Korcula, and Mljet, announced yesterday, was carried out against strong enemy resistance, a special announcement declared. Fighting on the mainland is still continuing, today's announcement stated, and guns landed on the island of Brac are shelling enemy concentrations and batteries on the Yugoslav mainland.

In a naval encounter on the night of 15/16 September, involving light naval forces employed to prevent evacuation of the islands, four enemy ships were sunk, it was said. Balkan Air Force planes aided materially in the operations, and bombarded the nearby mainland ports of Trepanj, Ploca, Omis, and Makarska. (PRO)

In an advance of 2½ miles over tortuous, strongly defended mountain country in the heart of the Apennines, American forces yesterday captured the two peaks of Monte Frena and Monte Montale, one-half mile from the Firenzuola-Imola road and within little over two miles of the key road and junction town of Firenzuola. Leading American forces in this sector, to the east of the main German defensive positions, are only 26 miles from Bologna at the edge of the wide and fertile Plain of the Po.

Fighting continued yesterday within the confines of the tiny republic of San Marino, where 5th Army forces were at the edge of the capital in the center of the mountain state.

Prisoners taken by 8th Army forces since the start of their offensive now number more than 6,700, an increase of more than 400 in the past day.

Heavy rains yesterday prevented Tactical Air Force bombers and fighters from lending close support to the 5th Army in its advance through the mountain bastions of the Goth Line. The rains and mist also cut down observation for artillery fire, and made movement along muddy mountain trails extremely difficult for tanks and supply vehicles.

Danube at Baja, 80 miles south of Budapest, and the fourth across the Danube northwest of Belgrade at Novisad. Two rail yards in eastern Hungary were also struck.

RAF Wellington, Liberator, and Halifax night bombers struck another heavy blow at German troop and supply movements from the Balkans in an attack last night on the Hegyeshalom rail yards, in northwest Hungary.

The rail center, the principal marshalling point on the Gyor-Vienna line, is the second Hungarian rail target to be hit by the night bombers this week.

Balkan Air Force Spitfires yesterday strafed a concentration of over 200 enemy motor vehicles massed in a large field at Pedinon, Greece, near the Serbian border, and wiped out practically the entire number. The trucks were parked off a main road leading northward, and were probably part of the enemy movement of troops out of Greece which has been accelerated recently, it was said. (PRO)

CONGRATULATIONS FOR MINESWEEPING FLOTILLA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 21 — Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, today sent congratulations to the officers and men of the 12th Minesweeping Flotilla, a British unit which has achieved a record of sweeping 1,000 mines from enemy waters since its arrival in the Mediterranean in the autumn of 1942. YUGOSLAVS BREAK GERMAN BOSNIA OFFENSIVE

LONDON, September 21 — After smashing a German offensive in Krupanj, in western Bosnia, Yugoslav forces liberated the town, Marshal Tito's communique reported today. To the east, in recently-liberated Valjevo, 700 Germans were killed and 1,000 prisoners were taken.

In Serbia, the Germans were routed near Krivi and were driven back to Pirot. In the Nis-Lescovac area, fighting continued with some losses to the German forces.

In eastern Bosnia, Yugoslav forces pursued the retreating Germans after taking the town of Tusla, 60 miles northeast of Sarajevo. Large quantities of booty, including railway wagons with food supplies and war material, were captured.

Continuing their operations against German communications, the Zagreb-Karlavac rail line was destroyed in 250 places, while the Zagreb-Sisak line was cut in 80 places and one train was derailed.

Marshal Tito reported that over 300 members of the Croat Home Guard have joined his liberation forces and have contributed their transport and equipment. (OWI)

NAZI CHIEFS FLEEING AEGEAN ISLANDS

CAIRO, September 21 — The Germans are still sneaking key personnel from the Aegean Islands, according to reports reaching here.

These evacuees are said to be fleeing in Junkers-52 transport planes, most of which are forced to make their flights under cover of darkness to avoid attacks by vigilant Allied airmen.

The reports stated that the constant air and sea watch by the Allies is preventing the Germans evacuating personnel by sea from the islands to the Greek mainland. Meanwhile, on the mainland, the reports added, the German northward movement is continuing. (Reuter)

A radio correspondent reported today that General Dwight Eisenhower's campaign is well over a month ahead of schedule.

To the east, on the Canadian sector, German resistance to the Polish drive toward the Scheldt has collapsed. Troops under General Crerar's command have taken the town of Terneuzen. Canadian troops on the Poles' west flank have driven into Holland and are two miles from the Scheldt Estuary, near the mouth of the Leopold Canal.

At Boulogne, the total number of prisoners taken has mounted to 6,000. The entire city is in Canadian hands with the exception of Portel, southwest of Boulogne, and Wimereux to the north.

Between Aachen and Trier, the American 1st Army has an almost unbroken front of 90 miles on German soil. In the Stolberg-Rusbach area, east of Aachen, the Americans are continuing to attack against increasing resistance. Most of the activity is taking place in the Forest of Hurtgen.

To the south, on the Luxembourg border, General Hodges' troops are meeting heavy counter-attacks in the area east of Diekirch, at Bleialf. Slightly to the south, bitter fighting is going on at Hollendorf, north of Echternach, and a large-scale German counter-attack was thrown back.

The railway yards at Trier, which were tightly packed with German troops and supplies to be sent to the central sector of the front, were heavily bombed yesterday by Allied planes.

105 Tanks Destroyed

Along the Moselle River, to the south of the American 1st Army sector, a large portion of the German armored forces were thrown into battle against General George Patton's positions. In the greatest single tank battle since the landings in France, the Americans destroyed 105 German tanks in three days.

Forward patrols reached a point eight miles south of Metz, the nearest reported position to the city. Rockets and heavy artillery fire are being thrown into the German fortress itself.

German tank assaults were concentrated in the Dieuze area, east of Nancy, where American troops were forced to make a slight withdrawal.

German nuisance patrols were reported to be slipping across the Moselle in the Thionville area under cover of darkness.

To the southeast of Nancy, French troops with the American 3rd Army are closing in on Flin, five miles northwest of Baccarat, despite strong German resistance. Farther back, at Luneville, American troops are pushing the Germans to the north. The Germans are shelling the city itself and snipers within it are being rounded up by French Forces of the Interior.

With the capture of the submarine pens at Brest, on the Brittany Peninsula, the most hotly contended port city in France, the city passed into Allied hands. American troops, attacking from the west and supported by a formation of British flame-throwing Churchill tanks, gained an entrance to the walled city on Sunday and fought their way to the sea. More than 17,000 prisoners were taken out of a German garrison which once numbered about 20,000. More than 1,000 wounded are believed to be housed in hospital tunnels around the city walls.

Secretary of War Henry Stimson announced at a press conference today that American casualties up to September 6 amounted to 337,743. Of this figure, 64,466 were killed, 177,235 wounded, 48,725 taken prisoner, and 47,315 missing.

Mr. Stimson announced also that the total number of German prisoners taken in France so far amounted to 457,000. (OWI - Reuter - BBC)

LONDON, September 21 — After smashing a German offensive in Krupanj, in western Bosnia, Yugoslav forces liberated the town, Marshal Tito's communique reported today. To the east, in recently-liberated Valjevo, 700 Germans were killed and 1,500 prisoners were taken.

In Serbia, the Germans were routed near Krivi and were driven back to Hrot. In the Nis-Lescovac area, fighting continued with some losses to the German forces.

BRITISH DRIVE TO RELIEVE AIRBORNE UNITS

SHAEF, September 21 — Elements of British armor are today on the road to Arnhem after crossing the Rhine (Waal) River to relieve Allied airborne troops encircled by strong German units. By this maneuver, German troops in the Rotterdam area of Holland are threatened with encirclement. A more important threat, however, is the outflanking of the northern defenses of the Siegfried Line.

Airborne troops in the Arnhem sector can hear the radio signals of the relieving British force growing in strength. Correspondents have reported that there is confused fighting in the Nijmegen sector, and the Germans are showing no signs of weakening their resistance. The Germans counter-attacked, using their reluctant air force, in an attempt to prevent the turning of their Rhine River flank.

The German defense plans seem to be not so much to hold a line from the North Sea to the Swiss frontier, as to create a series of virtually independent strong-points which would be dangerous for the Allies to by-pass. They are turning cities on the west bank of the Rhine into fortresses, in an effort to gain time and to compel the Allies to carry the war through another winter.

The Germans have been counter-attacking all along the British 2nd Army corridor from the Escaut Canal to Nijmegen. Closely-wedged masses of Germans attacked our lines near Eindhoven, but failed to get through. The base of the British corridor is being rapidly widened, and Allied troops have captured Heere and Soerendonk, east of the main road to Eindhoven.

ALLIES BOMB WEST GERMANY

LONDON, September 21 — Heavy Allied bombers in medium strength today bombed synthetic oil plants at Ludwigshafen and railway marshalling yards at Mainz and Coblenz, along with other targets in western Germany.

Strong forces of fighters escorted the bombers, while other fighters continued heavy support of further airborne reinforcements of the invasion of Holland.

Air Forces headquarters said medium bombers yesterday carried out a heavy attack against the rail yards at Trier, and that the area was densely packed with German troops and supply trains at the time.

Also yesterday, rocket-firing Typhoons shot high explosives into the German-held Fort Merxem, the last Nazi stronghold in the Belgian city of Antwerp, where an estimated 2,000 enemy soldiers were holding out. They have been shelling the city nightly.

At the same time, heavy bombers struck the French coastal town of Calais with 4,500 tons of bombs, and left the city in a pall of smoke which was still rolling upward today when medium bombers crossed the Channel to strike at German rail lines.

The French-based 9th USAAF joined in the attacks against Nazi railways feeding the Siegfried Line, while other aircraft flew tactical missions in support of ground forces in the Calais, Dunkirk, and Boulogne sectors.

A Reuter correspondent at Tactical Air Force headquarters in Belgium said today that the Luftwaffe has been taking advantage of bad weather over Allied fighter bases for increased strafing and bombing of Allied troop positions in Holland.

Flying-bombs launched from the northern coast of Holland crashed down on London and southern counties late today. The capital had casualties and damage. (OWI – Reuter)

SURRENDER PASSES BRING BIG NAZI YIELD

WASHINGTON, September 21 — The Office of War Information said today that the surrender passes distributed by air to Nazi troops have been among the most potent weapons in use on the western front in France.

OWI said German troops have been known to fight among themselves to obtain these leaflets, which guarantee their safe passage as prisoners of war.

Men who have come into the Allied lines with these passes say they hid them in their shoes and elsewhere in their clothing to keep them from discovery by German officers.

A poll of one group of prisoners revealed that 65 per cent of them believed the news accounts printed on the reverse side, telling of the critical Nazi position in Holland and Germany.

The leaflets are delivered to the Germans by plane, and by artillery shells which explode and scatter the sheets well over the heads of enemy units in the line. (OWI)

GERMANS AMAZED BY FLAIL TANKS

WITH CANADIAN 1ST ARMY, FRANCE, September 21 — German soldiers taken prisoner as the Canadian 1st Army fought its way into Boulogne expressed amazement at British flail tanks, about which they had not heard, a Reuter Correspondent reported today.

Prisoners said that when they first heard the tanks rumbling into the city they could not believe it as their minefields were believed to be impassable. They were dumbfounded when they saw the flails beating their way through and exploding the mines. These minefields were the basis of the German defenses at Boulogne, and the flails thrashed through them in a few minutes.

Another weapon which was most effective in crushing German resistance was the Crocodile, a flame-throwing Churchill tank. Prisoners complained that it was so terrifying and so destructive that it was "unfair." (Reuter)

FRENCH CRACK CONCENTRATION CAMP

BORDEAUX, September 21 — French troops liberated 2,500 British and American nationals from Nazi internment with the liberation of the French town of Vitte.

French General Leclerc, who took the town with his 2nd Armored Division, said:

"Britain gave us hospitality in 1940. The United States has given us arms. Today, I am happy that French forces should have restored freedom to Allied nationals." (PWB)

NAZI GENERALS DIG DITCHES

LONDON, September 21 — The German radio said today that Nazi generals turned out at Cracow, in southern Poland, on Sunday to help dig trenches to hold off the advancing Red Army.

The chief of police, the deputy governor, and other high officials were said to have been in on the digging detail.

Cracow is the last German bastion protecting the frontier of Silesia from Red Army forces striking westward from Przemysl.

There have been no recent marked gains on this section of the Russian front. (Reuter)

GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACKING IN SLOVAKIA

LONDON, September 21 — German forces are counter-attacking in the direction of St. Martin and are suffering heavy losses, the Czechoslovak communique stated today.

There is fierce fighting in the area of Vrutky, on the main German escape route from Budapest.

Aircraft of the Czechoslovak Air Force have shot down three enemy planes and have successfully aided ground troops. (OWI)

RUSSIA IMPATIENT WITH FINLAND

MOSCOW, September 21 — Russia will not tolerate any more delay in carrying out the preliminary conditions of the armistice in Finland, " said the Russian newspaper Pravda today.

Nearly a week has passed since Finland pledged herself to disarm the German soldiers on Finnish territory and hand them over to the Allies as prisoners of war. But, until now, not a single German soldier in Finland has been disarmed or handed over to the Allies, continued the paper.

No further delay in carrying out the preliminary conditions of the armistice can be countenanced, said Pravda, adding that the British and Russians paid great attention to their joint aim of accelerating the German rout when the Finnish terms were drawn up. This armistice is a new confirmation of Allied cooperation and military unity, the newspaper concluded. (PWB)

RED ARMY CLEARS PEIPUS ISTHMUS

MOSCOW, September 21 — Soviet armies continued their advances today on four separate important salients of the long Russo-German front, liberating scores of towns and taking several vital railway junctions.

On the Leningrad front, west of the Estonian city of Narva, German troops have been cleaned out of the entire isthmus area between Lake Peipus and the Gulf of Finland. This push linked up with Russian troops advancing along the western shores of the lake.

Southward, around Jelgava (Mitau), where a second Russian Baltic salient is closing in on Hitler's trapped northern armies, large Nazi counter-attacks were under way late today. The Soviet communique said these attacks, supported by tanks, were being repelled.

Red Army troops striking over the northern Carpathians from southern Poland made further gains south and southeast of Krosno, liberating several Slovakian towns.

In western Rumania, Russian and Rumanian troops over-ran more than 100 inhabited localities, including the rail town of Lipava, as they continued their push toward Hungary.

In Hungary itself, the Red Air Force last night carried out another heavy raid on the town of Debrecen. Bombs struck the rail junction and military depots in the center and east of the city. Three military trains were blown up, along with fuel and ammunition dumps. Many fires were started.

Still other Russian bombers attacked the rail junction city of Cegl, causing fires and explosions «of great violence.» (Reuter)

U.S. INFORMED OF RUMANIAN NEGOTIATIONS

WASHINGTON, September 21 — U.S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull said at a press conference yesterday that the State Department was kept fully advised during Soviet negotiations of the Allied-Rumanian armistice, particularly in connection with the return of northern Transylvania to Rumania.

Hull added that final disposition of northern Transylvania will depend on confirmation in a general peace settlement after the war.

He said that this follows the American policy that territorial settlements should be a matter of general discussion and decision after the end of hostilities. This point,

ALLIES BOMB SUMATRA; LIBERATORS SMASH CONVOY

CHUNGKING, September 21 — Carrier-borne planes, supported by units of the British Eastern Fleet, have carried out a smashing attack on the Japanese-held city of Sigli, in Sumatra.

This attack, made three days ago against the most important rail-junction city on the island, met no opposition from either Japanese aircraft or surface units.

Large fires were started in the railway maintenance shops, and the entire target area was left enveloped in dense billows of black smoke.

Meanwhile, heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF have sunk more than 14,000 tons of Japanese shipping in the Strait of Formosa, in an attack on a convoy headed for the supply bases along the so-called «invasion coast» of China. Still another ship was left listing, and was believed to have sunk.

Reports from this coastal area said today that the Japanese are strengthening their defenses all the way down the shore from Shanghai to Amoy — in preparation for what they believe is an imminent Allied assault from the sea.

In the Palaus, east of the southern Philippines, American invasion troops were said to have most of the island of Peleliu under control. Admiral Chester Nimitz announced that 7,645 Japanese have been killed in Palau fighting thus far.

On Morotai, in the Moluccas, south of the Philippines, General Douglas MacArthur's engineers have all but completed their work on landing fields, and none but Japanese snipers remain for infantrymen's mopping-up.

In China's Kwangsi Province, one Japanese column headed for the southern fortress city of Kweilin has been stopped by Chinese forces east of the city. But from the northeast, Japanese troops continued to push onward, although Chungking headquarters said Chinese resistance had slowed the advance.

In Burma, Indian troops tonight continued their advance into the Chin Hills in pursuit of Japanese fleeing southeastward toward Mandalay. Despite unfavorable weather, planes of the Eastern Air Command supported Indian attacks. (OWI - Reuter)

JAPS SAY THEIR FLEET IS IN TRAINING

WASHINGTON, September 21 — Radio Tokyo said today that the Japanese Navy has not spent the last two years «in vain,» despite the fact that it has failed to offer battle against Allied naval attacks on the Marshalls, the Gilberts, the Marianas, the Carolines, and the Bonins.

The Japanese Imperial Navy, said Tokyo, has been in training. (OWI)

AMERICAN MISSION TO CHINA SUCCESSFUL

NEW YORK, September 21 — Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek has accepted United States recommendations for the increase of China's industrial contribution to the United Nations, it was revealed today in Chungking.

President Roosevelt's emissaries were Board Chairman Donald Nelson, and Major General Patrick Hurley, who arrived in China on September 6, on an economic and military mission for the President.

The spokesman who made the announcement said that ture of the vast navies and armies that are steadily being marshalled against them. That they are beginning to wonder about the impossibility of the task before them is hinted in the policy of the Koiso Defense Cabinet, giving people more information and allowing them to participate in the government to a greater degree.

The Koiso Government has been forced by the changing course of the war to make these concessions. It has not suddenly been granted an increasing degree of political wisdom; it has simply been forced to be more honest with the people.

The Koiso Defense Cabinet is not acting to give the people greater enlightenment in the true sense of the word. It is telling them more facts about the course of the war. It says that it is giving the people a greater share in the government. But it has not acted to give them experience in self-rule or understanding of the ideas of the Western world. To do so, would mean that the Koiso Government would be undermining the very sources of its power — authoritarianism and militarism, on which the Japanese Government has been almost completely based since the Manchurian Incident 13 years ago.
