Concerning the predicament of the Japanese militarists, General MacArthur said: «When the public in Japan realizes its generals and admirals have failed in the field in actual combat and campaigning, the revulsion produced in Japanese thought will be terrific. Therein lies the basis for the ultimate hope of the Japanese citizen's ceasing his almost idolatrous worship of the military, and readjusting his thoughts along more rational lines.» (OWI)

ALLIES HAVE OVERWHELMING SEAPOWER

LONDON, September 21 — The latest edition of the authoritative publication on naval information, the 1943-44 Jane's Fighting Ships, published today, indicates the overwhelming seapower being amassed by the United Nations.

A foreword to the new edition says: «In the United States Navy, expansion continues at a tremendous rate. Two more 45,000-ton battleships in 1944 will bring the total up to 24. Aircraft carriers already in service number more than 100, and many more are in various stages of construction.»

The publication revealed that the American Navy numbers more than 4,167 ships, not including 80,000 landing craft, with several cruisers recently added.

Britain, too, has increased its naval strength since the war began, and now possesses more than 40 escort carriers.

The French 35,000-ton Richelieu has been refitted, and her sister ship, the Jean Bart, is now undergoing repairs.

On the enemy's side, the book pointed out that 500 German U-boats are known to have been sunk since the beginning of the war, and with the Graf Spee and Tirpitz disabled, the Germans no longer have capital ships in fighting condition.

Jane's Fighting Ships said that Japanese ship-building facilities were manifestly unequal to the task of keeping abreast of the Allied production in replacing her great losses. (PWB)

CARUSO SENTENCED TO DEATH

ROME, September 21 — The death penalty was pronounced tonight on Pietro Caruso, former Rome Fascist police chief, by an eight-man special court which had been hearing evidence for the last two days.

Roberto Occhieto, Caruso's accomplice in a series of six crimes, was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

China. Still another ship was left listing, and was believed to have sunk.

Reports from this coastal area said today that the Japanese are strengthening their defenses all the way down the shore from Shanghai to Amoy — in preparation for what they believe is an imminent Allied assault from the sea.

In the Palaus, east of the southern Philippines, American invasion troops were said to have most of the island of Peleliu under control. Admiral Chester Nimitz announced that 7,645 Japanese have been killed in Palau fighting thus far.

On Morotai, in the Moluccas, south of the Philippines, General Douglas MacArthur's engineers have all but completed their work on landing fields, and none but Japanese snipers remain for infantrymen's mopping-up.

In China's Kwangsi Province, one Japanese column headed for the southern fortress city of Kweilin has been stopped by Chinese forces east of the city. But from the northeast, Japanese troops continued to push onward, although Chungking headquarters said Chinese resistance had slowed the advance.

In Burma, Indian troops tonight continued their advance into the Chin Hills in pursuit of Japanese fleeing southeastward toward Mandalay. Despite unfavorable weather, planes of the Eastern Air Command supported Indian attacks.

JAPS SAY THEIR FLEET IS IN TRAINING

WASHINGTON, September 21 — Radio Tokyo said today that the Japanese Navy has not spent the last two years "in vain," despite the fact that it has failed to offer battle against Allied naval attacks on the Marshalls, the Gilberts, the Marianas, the Carolines, and the Bonins.

The Japanese Imperial Navy, said Tokyo, has been in training. (OWI)

AMERICAN MISSION TO CHINA SUCCESSFUL

NEW YORK, September 21 — Generalissimo Chiang Kai Shek has accepted United States recommendations for the increase of China's industrial contribution to the United Nations, it was revealed today in Chungking.

President Roosevelt's emissaries were Board Chairman Donald Nelson, and Major General Patrick Hurley, who arrived in China on September 6, on an economic and military mission for the President.

The spokesman who made the announcement said that recommendations proposed definite plans to bring more of China's presently-available industrial potential to bear on the combined effort for the defeat of Japan at the earliest possible moment. He pointed out that material produced in China frees air transport tonnage over the hump from India for vital materials which China cannot produce herself.

Nelson and Hurley praised the "complete candor" which prevailed during the discussions in China, and said they had received the wholehearted cooperation of the Chinese Government. (OWI)

JAPANESE BEGIN TO DOUBT

NEW YORK, September 21 — Admiral Yarnell, in his weekly summary to the Allied Press on Japan's position, said, "Despite the fact that she is as strong as leaders can make her, Japan's certain defeat cannot be doubted by anyone who has followed the course of events in the Pacific during the last year."

Home propaganda, on the other hand, said Yarnell, has been telling the Japanese people that the Imperial Navy had been luring the U. S. Navy into a position where a single gigantic battle will decide the course of the war. The Japanese people have not been given a complete picture of actual combat and campaigning, the revulsion produced in Japanese thought will be terrific. Therein lies the basis for the ultimate hope of the Japanese citizen's ceasing his almost idolatrous worship of the military, and readjusting his thoughts along more rational lines." (OWI)

CARUSO SENTENCED TO DEATH

ROME, September 21 — The death penalty was pronounced tonight on Pietro Caruso, former Rome Fascist police chief, by an eight-man special court which had been hearing evidence for the last two days.

Roberto Occhieto, Caruso's accomplice in a series of six crimes, was sentenced to 30 years in prison.

There was no demonstration in the crowded courtroom when the court announced the verdict at 2010 hours, after considering the evidence for exactly two hours. Only Caruso showed any emotion. His face turned a milky white when the court announced its verdict. His former colleague displayed a faint smile after hearing that he had cheated death.

The two men were convicted of a series of crimes, the principal one of which was turning over 50 Italian political prisoners to the Germans for massacre as hostages. Recently, a total of 336 bodies were found by Italian Government authorities in the Ardeatine Caves, where the Germans carried out the massacre.

Other charges of which the two were found guilty were violating the extra-territorial rights of the Vatican by raiding a monastery, rounding up innocent Italian citizens for labor battalions in Germany, giving aid and assistance to the Germans, and authorizing militiamen, one of whom was Occhieto, to attend a Nazi sabotage school in Germany.

The attorney for Occhieto, Ottavio Libotte, delivered a three-hour plea for his client, in which he again raised the question of Occhieto's role — which, he insisted, was that of secret intelligence operative for the Patriot Movement, rather than a Nazi pawn as he was depicted in prosecution testimony.

Even Caruso's attorney, Francesco Spezzano, admitted the guilt of his client in a two-hour speech to the court, pleading for a term of life imprisonment instead of a death sentence. He reiterated that Caruso had done nothing but follow the orders of his superiors.

Mario Berlinguer, the state's prosecutor, today asked the death penalty for both Caruso and Caruso's secretary and associate, Occhietto.

Addressing the special court in historic Palazzo Corsini, presided over by President Lorenzo Marroni, Prosecutor Berlinguer brushed aside the defenses of the two men as «inadequate,» and added: «Italy knows how to punish its terrorists and murderers!»

During the testimony yesterday, counsel for Caruso insisted he was «acting under orders» and was «abnormal» because of insanity in his family, while Occhietto's attorney maintained that his client was really a secret member of the Italian Patriot Intelligence Corps. However, the state's prosecutor said that Occhietto's work in behalf of the Patriots was «too secret,» because no one seemed to know directly that Occhietto, allegedly operating under the alias of Raviola, was doing such work.

Prosecutor Berlinguer, in summing up the charges, stated: «Germany will never be able to wash away the shame of the massacres in the Ardeatine Caves.»

The prosecutor pointed out that Caruso confessed in yesterday's testimony that he knew the 50 innocent people were to be shot by the Germans, adding that when both Caruso and Occhietto participated in the random labor pickups they knew that most of the innocent Italians rounded up would never return alive from their slave labor in Germany.

Both defendants were called «traitors» by the prosecutor, who said that Occhietto went off to study in a Nazi sabotage school after the Italian Government, under Premier Badoglio, had declared Germany an enemy of Italy. (UNN)

CROCE SPEAKS ON ITALY'S FUTURE

ROME, September 21 — Benedetto Croce, President of the Liberal Party in Italy, declared today that the Allies have made the Italian Government ineffective by failing to grant it the power necessary to its functions.

The aged historian also declared that Italy has atoned, and is atoning still, for the part her Fascist- forced her to play in this war.

Croce said Italy now wishes «to be recognized legally, as we are in fact, as allies,» and that she wishes the right to share with other Allied peoples in the councils of the new order in Europe.

Croce spoke before a large crowd in the Eliseo Theater here. He added, in part:

«Mr. Churchill, in his trip to Italy, had a favorable impression of the Government, and of its members... and manifested the desire and the wish that it should be lasting. But how can a government last, if the forces necessary to govern are withdrawn from it?

«What does Italy ask for? Help, certainly, to set going our communications and our key industries, in order that we may not be precipitated into famine and the convulsions of famine. I do not doubt that this help will be given in the best way possible, for we are aware of the difficulties the Allies themselves have to face in this field. But, above all, we ask for the restoration of the dignity of our country; because a people, if it does not acquire once more its dignity, is intolerant, agitated.»

Croce asserted that the war now raging is less a war among nations than it is a civil war — a fight against

CHURCHILL AND ROOSEVELT RETURN TO CAPITALS

WASHINGTON, September 21 — President Roosevelt has returned here from his conference with combined British and American military staffs at Quebec.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill has returned to England and will make a report to the House of Commons on the conference and the war situation in general.

The BBC reported that two days have been assigned for debate on Mr. Churchill's report. (OWI - BBC)

U.S. ENVOY TO DE FACTO FRENCH GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, September 21 — President Roosevelt today appointed Jefferson Caffery to be the U. S. representative, with a personal rank of Ambassador, to the «de facto French authority» now established in Paris.

The announcement stated that there was no change in the American position regarding General Charles de Gaulle's French Committee of National Liberation.

Caffery succeeds Edwin C. Wilson, who was the U. S. representative to the French Committee in Algiers. (OWI)

HULL SAYS U.S. IS READY FOR TROUBLE IN GERMANY

WASHINGTON, September 21 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that the United States is ready to meet any chaos, civil war, or other trouble in Germany after she collapses and the Allies have occupied the Reich.

The Secretary would not reveal details of the Allied plans of occupation, saying that many phases of the subject were still being considered.

Hull added that the Germans have been warned not to scorch the earth of lands they still occupy outside their frontiers. He said they have been told they will have to reimburse their victims in fuel, clothing, and other necessities. (OWI)

VICHY EDUCATION LAWS TO BE REVISED

NEW YORK, September 21 — The F.C.N.L. Commission for Education asked the National Council of Resistance yesterday to study the question of the revision of Vichy's education laws, and to propose the policy to be followed, a dispatch from Paris to the New York Times said today.

«The Council will do so in the confidence that it can speak for the entire Patriot movement on this delicate issue,» the dispatch added.

Commenting on this role of the Resistance Council, the dispatch said: «The fact that the F.C.N.L. consults the Council on the formation of official policy on this and other questions reveals the role that the Council plays today, and expects to continue to play at least until national elections have restored in full those republican institutions that were suspended by Pétain.

«The Council is not a governing authority, nor is it a parliament. But, in the absence of a Parliament, it serves as the only approximately representative body so far constituted in France on which the F.C.N.L. may rely for something closely resembling popular endorsement in the form both of general support and the support of particular measures.» (OWI)

FRENCHMAN ADMITS INVENTING FLYING-BOMB

NANCY, September 21 — The French scientist, Georges Claude, who was arrested here last week, has admitted that he invented the flying-bomb being used by the Germans against Britain.

He is said to have confessed also that he surrendered

U.N.R.R.A. CONFIDENT OF SOLVING FOOD PROBLEMS

MONTREAL, September 21 — The combined United States, United Kingdom, and Canada Food Board, reporting to their members of the UNRRA Council, have expressed confidence that Europe's major food problems in 1945 may be solved, given necessary cooperation between the governments.

The report said: It is not meant that Europe as a whole can move from its present diet, but adequate calory supply and some improvement in the quality of the diet can be assured.

Factors which cannot be determined in advance, either in size or timing, are expected to increase the availability of certain foods in 1945. The first decline in current needs of the armed forces, once the liberation of Europe has been achieved, will enable the release of present stocks (including those of the European theaters), as well as decrease new requisitions.

Second, the cessation of hostilities in Europe should also permit the reduction of various stocks other than those held by, or on behalf of, the armed forces, supplies which have been accumulated in the United Nations against wartime contingencies. (OWI)

BROTHER OF TOGLIATTI HELD BY FASCISTS

LONDON, September 21 — The German Transocean News Agency, broadcasting from Milan, said today that Jose Togliatti, brother of Palmiro Togliatti, minister without portfolio in the Bonomi Government, has been taken into custody by the Fascist police.

Transocean said Togliatti has been taken into custody along with 50 other persons, to be held — and executed — should death sentence be pronounced in Rome against Pietro Caruso, one-time Fascist chief of police. (PWB)

DANISH GENERAL STRIKE SPREADS

STOCKHOLM, September 21 — The general strike in Denmark, called Tuesday by the Freedom Council in protest of German measures against the Danish police force, has young people above 17, as they are "considered a link in the German labor mobilization program."

Norwegian Nazis have unsuccessfully attempted to bribe hostile motor repair workers with extra rations to increase their production. An underground paper called the move "a clumsy attempt to create dissension" and urged the workers to decrease production as "each hour's work for the Germans prolongs the war and our own slavery." FRENCH LIST FOODSTUFFS PLUNDERED BY NAZIS

PARIS, September 21 — The Germans took millions of tons of foodstuffs from France during the past four years, and thus deprived the French population of essential commodities, it was announced yesterday by the French Ministry of Agriculture.

Included in the plundered supplies were more than 2,538,000 tons of wheat; 2,774,000 tons of meat; 3,389,000 tons of oats; and 36,000 tons of fish.

Also, 643,000 horses; 40,000,000 liters of milk; 147,000,000 eggs; 51,957,000 kilos of butter; 33,296,000 kilos of cheese; and 42,521,000 liters of oil.

More than 597,000 tons of potatoes were taken out of France, as well as an additional 200,000 tons of other vegetables.

One hundred and eighty million kilos of sugar were taken by the Germans. They also removed 40,613,000 kilos of chocolate and cocoa; 8,895,000 kilos of coffee; 902,000,000 liters of wine; 39,000,000 liters of brandy; and 323,000,000 liters of beer. (PWB)

LYON SEEKS NEWS OF HERRIOT

LYON, September 21 — The city of Lyon asked for news of its mayor, Edouard Herriot, in a letter sent on September 12 to the International Red Cross, a UNN correspondent reported today.

The letter, sent by Acting Mayor Justin Godart, asked the help of the Red Cross in discovering Herriot's whereabouts, and appealed for assurances of his well-being.

Herriot, former Premier of France, was reelected mayor by the people of Lyon shortly after their liberation, although he had previously been carried off by Germans. He was last reported in forced residence at Nancy. (UNN)

DANISH GENERAL STRIKE SPREADS

STOCKHOLM, September 21 — The general strike in Denmark, called Tuesday by the Freedom Council in protest of German measures against the Danish police force, has become total in Copenhagen and has spread to other Danish cities, the Swedish radio reported last night.

The railways are now affected and the postal service has been suspended. Water, gas, electricity, and telephone services are still functioning, however.

A Nazi-controlled Danish broadcast stated that the Danish light ship Schultze Grund was severely damaged by two explosions and must undergo major repairs before it can be used.

Clashes between Danish and German police took place today around police stations in Copenhagen, which have been taken over by Gestapo agents, SS men, and Danish Nazis.

All bridges linking Amager Island with the remainder of Copenhagen were barred, press reports state. (OWI)

NAZIS MAKE MASS ARRESTS IN SOUTHERN NORWAY

STOCKHOLM, September 21 — The Gestapo recently conducted a mass arrest of the citizens of Halden in south Norway in an attempt to track down a Norwegian Patriot organization, the Swedish paper Svenska Dagbladet stated yesterday.

Norwegians have boycotted commercial schools for all France, as well as an additional 200,000 tons of other vegetables.

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 21 — Today's communique:

Land:

Fighting continues on the Adriatic and coastal sectors with the same intensity. The enemy is clinging desperately to his defense positions.

Canadian troops of the 8th Army have made more progress by clearing the enemy from a number of towns in the vicinity of San Fortunato, as have British troops in the vicinity of San Marino.

In a day of heavy fighting, troops of the 5th Army increased their breach in the Goth Line and are approaching the town of Firenzuola.

Air:

Rail communications in Hungary and targets in Czechoslovakia were attacked yesterday by strong forces of escorted heavy bombers.

Declassified E.O. 12356, Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The objectives included the railyards at Halvan and Gyor, railroad bridges at Budapest and Szob, aerodrome at Malacky, and oil installations at Bratislava.

Although aerial communications were curtailed by unfavorable weather, fighter-bombers and fighters attacked close-support targets, road bridges, and motor transport in the Italian battle area.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force were active over Yugoslavia and Greece, attacking motor transport, gun positions, and troop concentrations.

Last night, medium and heavy bombers attacked railyards at Hegyeshalom, in northwestern Hungary.

From these operations, seven of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,400 sorties.

Naval:

It is reported from the south coast of France that in addition to the bombardment of San Remo announced in yesterday's communique, the United States destroyer Hilary P. Jones on September 18 also carried out a successful shoot at Porto Maurizio, about 11 miles eastward of San Remo. Eight small craft were sunk or damaged, an ammunition dump was hit and exploded, and an oil storage tank was set on fire. An enemy battery was also silenced.

On the same day, the Medaws obtained direct hits on a merchant ship anchored near Port Maurizio and set her on fire. The USS Ludlow neutralized an enemy battery.

In all these engagements, there was considerable retaliatory fire from the shore.

On the night of 18/19 September, in the Aegean, HMS Aurora bombarded Suadia harbor in Crete and the airfield at Heraklion.

On 19 September, naval aircraft carried out armed reconnaissance of Rhodes and Cos and destroyed nine enemy motor vehicles. This brings the total score since operations started to 68 vehicles destroyed and 10 damaged.

Other naval aircraft attacked the harbor at Rhodes, obtaining a direct hit with a bomb on a depot ship. Several hits were also obtained on a mole, and a Junkers-52 on the ground was damaged by gunfire. (UNN)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 21 — Today's communique:

There has been heavy fighting in the area of Nijmegen, where Allied ground and airborne forces have linked up.

The base of the Allied salient has been widened, and airborne landings have been further reinforced.

Fighters and fighter-bombers provided escort and support for ground forces.

Allied troops in Belgium advanced to the line of the Leopold Canal, and made substantial gains to the Scheldt, west of Antwerp.

Mopping up continues in the Boulogne area, south of the Liane River.

The German garrison and fortified positions at Calais were subjected to strong and concentrated attack yesterday afternoon by heavy bombers, one of which is missing.

In southern Holland, our ground forces have crossed the German border to Scharpenhell, five miles northeast of Hesplen under heavy German artillery fire.

Stubborn fighting is in progress at other points along the front, particularly at Stolberg, east of Aachen and in the outskirts of Riesdorf, east of the Luxembourg town of Dieken, where an earlier strong enemy counter-attack was repulsed, and 17 German tanks were knocked out.

In the Moselle Valley, heavy enemy resistance is being encountered south of Metz, with fighting centering around and also occupied in fighting over 300 other populated localities, including Ageri, Kapsila, Kadrine, Tausti, Ragma, Laitvery, Roity, Simuna, Vaikre-Maorje, Rake, and Iknurme, and the railway stations of Ageri, Vaikula, and Rake.

Troops advancing west of Narva completely cleared of the enemy the isthmus between the Lake of Chudskoje and the Gulf of Finland, and joined the troops advancing along the western shore of the Lake of Chudskoje.

Northwest and west of Valga, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities.

West of Jelgava (Mitava), our troops successfully repelled strong enemy tank and infantry attacks.

South and southeast of Krospe, our troops captured the populated localities of Tedorusko, Uhla, Jetsenko, Kalyari, Svaru, Shuneik, Moshanets, Savne, and Novosulki.

In the western part of Rumania, our troops, jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting nearly 100 populated localities, including the town and railway station of Lipova; the populated localities of Incus, Shikova, Teleus, Pinkope, Sirjye, Shendor, Vinge, Telate, and Verecherpu, and the railway stations of Incus, Mokre, Tarnoc, Pinkope, Sirjye, Shiller, Vinga, Hopota, Marute-Shuare, Vate-Menuave, Semeskene, and Hoden.

On all other sectors of the front, patrol reconnaissance took place.

During September 20, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 47 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 11 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of September 20-21, our long-range Air Force carried out massive raids on the city and railway junction of Debrecen, in Hungary, and on the city and railway junction of Csop, located 25 kilometers south of Uzhorod. In the bombardment of Debrecen Soviet fliers subjected to bombardment the railway junction and military warehouses in the central and western part of the city. As a result of the bombardment, many fires were started, of which 10 were of large size.

On the railway junction, three military trains and two warehouses of fuel and ammunition were blown up. Huge explosions occurred in the warehouses. The flames of the explosion rose up to 1,000 meters.

On the railway junction of Csop, as a result of bombardment, fires were started, and platforms and railway cars were left burning. Among the fires several explosions were observed, including three explosions of high magnitude, in the northwestern part of the railway junction.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT COMMUNIQUE

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 21 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The renewed Allied offensive against the last German line of defence in the northern Apennines resulted in considerable increase of Patriot activity.

From Spezia to north of Rimini, Patriots are launching attacks against isolated Nazi-Fascist garrisons and are hindering enemy communications.

The reconstruction of demolished bridges is being prevented by the intervention of Patriots and by the lack of specialized workers, who prefer taking to the Maquis rather than helping the Germans.

German traffic across the Po River is being severely curtailed by Patriots.

Some time ago, in a sector located behind the German lines, a small group of Patriots succeeded in stopping a train and freed 300 Italian soldiers who were being deported to Germany. The same group blew up two highway bridges and captured a few prisoners from among withdrawing Germans.

In the fighting at Quarto Pretoria, in Val d'Aosta, Patriots killed or wounded 400 Germans.

Our forces are also engaged in the vicinity of Chateau Salins, 18 miles from Nancy.

Our troops, advancing northeast of Charmes have reached the towns of Moyen and Magnieres.

Gains have been made along the entire sector northwest of Belfort. Opposition has been slight, and the enemy is relying principally on lightly-defended road blocks to delay our advance. Several small towns have been occupied.

The enemy, south of Belfort, has confined his activity to patrolling with moderate support from artillery and mortars.

A force of 19,312 enemy troops, under General Elster, has been taken prisoner after the mass surrender south of the Loire River. (Reuter)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 21 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In Central Holland, the 1st British Airborne Division, in spite of further airborne reinforcements, has been nearly entirely wiped out in the Arnhem area. Remnants of the division were forced into a narrow sector, and, until now, 2,000 prisoners have been taken, amongst them the divisional commander.

At Nymwegen, our troops are fiercely fighting the enemy attacking with tank support from the Eindhoven area. South of the mouth of the River Scheldt, the enemy succeeded in achieving a local penetration.

In the Aix-la-Chapelle sector, strong enemy attacks were repulsed everywhere yesterday. Northeast of the town, a gap in our front line was sealed off. In the course of these operations, during a three-day period, 47 enemy tanks were knocked out.

After several days' fighting, the enemy bridgehead across the Sauer, northeast the town of Echternach, has been eliminated with exception of small enemy detachments.

In the Luneville area, our own attack encountered superior enemy armored forces. After fluctuating fighting, our own forces in Luneville were ordered to withdraw toward the eastern outskirts of the town.

Enemy attacks against Boulogne and Calais were repulsed.

The final resistance of the Brest garrison, on the Le Crozon Peninsula, has reached its end. In heaviest battles, lasting for several weeks, the heroic garrison, consisting of troops of all Wehrmacht branches, and inspired by the exemplary leadership of the fortress commander, General of the Parachute Troops Ramcke, has held the fortress against an enemy far superior in men and material. By their resistance, the enemy was able to occupy not a harbor, but only a heap of ruins.

The heroic resistance of the garrison of Brest will go down in history.

Three German speedboats protecting the flanks of a convoy, attacked superior units of light British naval forces near Dunkirk, during the night of September 19/20. By this attack, the speedboats secured the safe and undamaged arrival of our convoy at their port of destination. The three speedboats were sunk in fulfilment of their task.

The V-1 retaliation fire on London was continued.

Italy:

In Italy, heavy defensive fighting with undiminished strength is still in progress in the area north of Florence, as well as on the Adriatic coast.

In the course of bitter fighting, and under heavy losses for both sides, numerous enemy attacks were repulsed. South and southeast of Firenzuola a larger enemy penetration was sealed off.

On the Adriatic coast, the enemy, attacking with heavy air and naval artillery support, scored several deep penetrations which, however, were partly sealed off by counter-attacks. An enemy break-through was again frustrated.

In the course of these battles, 57 enemy tanks were destroyed yesterday, 100 prisoners were taken.

Eastern Front:

In the northern part of the Szekler salient, Soviet attacks were partly frustrated by counter-attacks.

In west Rumania, our battle plane formations destroyed 24 enemy tanks, as well as numerous guns and vehicles.

The fierce defensive battle for possession of the Carpathian passes continues in the area north of Sanok-Krosno.

Near Warsaw, Bolshevist groups on the western bank of the river were wiped out, and a total of 69 storm and landing craft either destroyed or captured.

Northeast of Warsaw, at the Bobra River, and northwest of Bialystok, enemy attacks failed.

The attack of our armored units southwest of Mitau gained further ground, in spite of stubborn enemy resistance. During the last three days, 48 tanks and storm guns, as well as large amounts of other weapons, were either destroyed or captured here.

In Latvia and Estonia, the enemy, reinforced by fresh reserves, continued his strong attacks, which, however, were stemmed or frustrated by our brilliantly fighting troops' counter-attacks.

In the course of this defensive battle, which lasted for seven days, 600 Soviet tanks are reported destroyed up to now.

Air:

Eleven enemy bombers were shot down during daylight attacks of enemy bombers against the areas of Budapest, Raab, and Pressburg, as well as during night sorties of weaker enemy forces over the Hungarian area.

Enemy aircraft attacking the town of Trier with bombs inflicted losses in lives. (Radio Berlin)

BRITISH ARMOR CROSSES THE RHINE DRIVE TO ARNHEM BEGINS

SHAEF, September 20 — Armored forces of the British 2nd Army and the 1st Airborne Army today crossed the lower Rhine in Holland at Nijmegen, five miles from the German border. They are hitting north toward Arnhem on Heavy German air attacks have been launched at Eindhoven. The bridgehead north of Gheel is also under heavy attack.

The Germans are ferrying troops across the Rhine in barges all the way south from Emmerich to the Ruhr in order to defend the road to Berlin. RAF Mosquitos have been making a number of attacks on the barge traffic, but the weather has been bad for air operations.

The Allied offensive threatens 60,000 to 70,000 German troops south of the Zuider Zee. The Germans are now faced with the prospect either of breaking through the Allied spearhead, which would be difficult, due to their inferior mobility, or of retiring to coastal ports and establishing "sacrifice pockets" such as that at Le Havre.

To the west of the British spearhead into Holland, the Canadian advance north of the Leopold Canal toward the mouth of the Scheldt is going ahead steadily. The advance is slow because of the nature of the ground, much of which has been flooded. Driving 10 miles east from Eccloo, they have captured Assanede on the Dutch border, and forward elements are reported in Holland.

The Canadian 1st Army are now within two miles of the river's estuary and threaten to split the German force to the south in two.

Polish units at the northern end of the coastal front have reached the Scheldt on a six-mile front. They are reported on the outskirts of Terneuzen.

Down the coast, General Crerar's troops have captured Boulogne, but heavy fighting continued southwest and north of the city, where German pockets are still holding out.

Canadians Invest Dunkirk

Canadian troops have completed the investment of Dunkirk and are closing in on Calais. The big guns on the Dover coast in England continued to fire across the Channel at German gun positions. The Cape Gris Nez garrison is still holding out, and their large coastal guns are in action.

Siegfried defenses north from Maastricht have been rendered practically untenable with the crossing into Germany from Sittard. Farther south, American 1st Army units have reached Amstenrade.

Southward at Aachen, where fighting still continues in the surrounded town, American forces are now battling in the factory area of Stolberg. The Germans have been strongly counter-attacking from the main defenses of the Siegfried Line. As the Americans advance slowly in this sector, Allied planes struck ahead of them at railway and other transport targets, disrupting German troop and supply movements.

Düren, an important road junction 15 miles east of Aachen, has been under heavy fire from American artillery.

Repeated German infantry counter-attacks along the entire 1st Army front have been thrown back, and the breaches in the Seigfried Line have been held.

BRITISH ARMOR CROSSES THE RHINE DRIVE TO ARNHEM BEGINS

SHAEF, September 20 — Armored forces of the British 2nd Army and the 1st Airborne Army today crossed the lower Rhine in Holland at Nijmegen, five miles from the German border. They are hitting north toward Arnhem, on the upper branch of the Rhine, to join with airborne forces operating in the vicinity. The crossing threatens to outflank the northern anchor of Germany's vaunted Siegfried Line.

For the fourth consecutive day substantial supplies and equipment were dropped to the Allied airborne army, despite indifferent weather.

The initial assault phase of the airborne invasion of Holland and of the ground forces bid to smash across the waterways to Germany's northwest plain is ended. The second phase, to retain and extend the advances, has begun. The Germans, recovering from their first surprise, are fighting back against positions from which they were dislodged in General Miles Dempsey's drive from the Escaut Canal to Nijmegen.

The British 2nd Army has established an armored corridor throughout Holland to the banks of the Waal River, the continuation of the Rhine in Holland. The base of the corridor at the Escaut Canal has been extended to Duizel and Wilreit, 10 to 12 miles southwest of Eindhoven. With the inclusion of Geldrop, east of Eindhoven, the corridor has a width of about 15 miles.

Airborne and armored units have been disposed all along the corridor to defend it against strong German counter-attacks aimed at cutting through. The heaviest fighting on the flanks of the corridor was reported to be at Best, seven miles northwest of Eindhoven.

LATE BULLETINS

ANGAUR ISLAND CONQUEST COMPLETED

WASHINGTON, September 20 — Japanese resistance on the island of Angaur in the Palau Group has ceased. The United States Navy Department said tonight that troops of the 81st Infantry Division had thoroughly invested the island late yesterday, and that mopping up was proceeding.

Angaur is the southernmost island of the Palau Group. Landings there were made simultaneously with those on the Island of Peleliu, immediately north. Angaur fell after 3 1/2 days of what the Navy said was relatively light opposition. Fighting on Peleliu continues. (OWI)

RAF BOMBS CALAIS GARRISON

LONDON, September 20 — Strong forces of RAF Lancasters and Halifaxes today attacked the German garrison and fortified positions at Calais, it was announced here tonight. The bombing began at 1600 hours and lasted about 2 1/2 hours. (OWI)

To the south, heavy rains from the Luxembourg area to the Swiss border have turned the battle area into a quagmire, which has stalled all major thrusts of the American 1st, 3rd, and 7th Armies.

Bitter fighting is in progress in the Moselle River sector east of Nancy. A large tank battle is developing 18 miles northeast of Nancy, in the area of Château Salins and Moyenvic, in the foothills of the Vosges Mountains. The American 3rd Army is advancing in the direction of Dieuze.

Southeast of Nancy, the town of Luneville was liberated, and the Americans are now only 40 miles from the Rhine in the vicinity of Baccarat. They are meeting with heavy resistance and thoroughly blocked roads.

On the Brittany Peninsula, all organized resistance in the great Atlantic port of Brest has ceased, and mopping up operations are continuing against isolated German pockets. There was no immediate announcement of the number of prisoners taken from the garrison, which once had up to 18,000 men. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

ALLIED PLANES SUPPLY AIRBORNE TROOPS

LONDON, September 20 — Despite bad flying weather, British-based planes today carried more supplies to the airborne troops in Holland and bombed Germans in the Calais area, while attacks on the enemy's lines of communication were maintained by day and by night.

Last night, RAF Lancasters concentrated on the Rhineland towns of Rheydt and München-Gladbach, in the van of the advancing Allied armies, and left large fires blazing. These towns, only two miles apart, are on the main route from Aachen and Cologne to southeast Holland.

Mosquitoes made attacks on enemy road and rail movements deep inside Germany and also attacked trains and road convoys in the area of Emmerich, on the Dutch border. One formation of Mosquitoes caught a convoy of enemy barges ferrying troops across the Rhine between Emmerich and Dinslaken and riddled the boats with cannon and machine-gun fire, leaving several ablaze.

The night's operations cost the RAF five aircraft.

Earlier yesterday, 8th USAAF planes had delivered some of the heaviest attacks of the war on five strategic railway junctions through which German troops pass on their way to the front. In all five junctions — Hamm, Soest, Eschweiler, Düren, and Merzenich — the marshalling yards were jammed with freight cars. Aircrews said flames shot hundreds of feet into the air after the attack, and the yards were reduced to wreckage. Ten Allied bombers were lost.

Germans Bomb Eindhoven

The Germans attempted to block Allied reinforcement columns last night by bombing Eindhoven. The attack was a heavy one, with the Germans throwing more of their aircraft into the fight than have been seen for some time. They lost 26 of them to Mustangs and Thunderbolts of the 8th USAAF.

The British Air Ministry announced today that RAF Coastal Command planes and rescue launches battled through bad visibility and rough seas yesterday to rescue airborne soldiers who fell into the sea when their gliders broke loose from their tow planes en route to Holland. Planes from one RAF base were responsible for the rescue of 60 survivors. Two coastal planes spotted survivors standing on the wings of four crashed gliders and quickly directed launches to the rescue.

Last night, a surprise attack was made on an enemy convoy in a Norwegian Fjord by RAF Beaufighters escorted by Mosquitoes. Of the seven ships in the convoy, one large merchant ship, believed to be a troop transport, and two escort vessels were hit and left burning furiously. There was heavy flak from the shore batteries. One Beaufighter [illegible] on the 600 mile round trip.

GERMANS DEFY NAZI ORDER TO EVACUATE

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY, GERMANY, September 20 — German civilians are remaining in their homes in direct disobedience to the Nazi Party command to evacuate German territory threatened by the Allied armies.

An AP correspondent with the 1st Army said today: «This was the first crucial test of Nazi authority over millions who have been forced to adhere to party discipline, and Hitler has failed in it.

«The civilians were ordered, under threat of death as traitors, to evacuate the Cologne-Aachen area in advance of the American drive, but many are refusing to leave.

«There is no way to estimate just what percentage of the civil population is defying the order, but it is considerable, and reflects passive disobedience on a large scale to Hitler's authority.»

Official documents have been seized ordering all civilians, except those of military age, from the Aachen and Cologne areas, reported an International News Service dispatch today.

Official estimates were that nearly two million persons were involved.

German soldiers are said to have been spreading reports about the defeats of the German armies on the western front. These soldiers were attacked in the German newspaper Westdeutscher Beobachter recently.

The paper said that many of these soldiers travel back into Germany in cars, buses, and lorries, or by bicycle. They stay with relatives and spread many stories of the predicament of the German armies on the western front and «this talk grows like an avalanche and spreads throughout the country.»

The article urged that such reports about conditions at the front be stopped, because people became «upset and nervous.» (OWI)

AMERICANS BATTER SIX-MILE BREACH IN GOTH LINE THREATEN WHOLE ENEMY POSITION IN ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Little over a week after the start of their all-out, frontal assault on the center of the Goth Line, American forces of 5th Army have battered a six-mile wide breach in the German mountain defenses north of Florence, it was officially announced here this morning.

With the capture of the most important hill features of the enemy's Apennine defense zone, the «whole enemy position» guarding the broad Valley of the Po and industrial north Italy is threatened, the official reports stated.

German resistance, which for more than a week has maintained a savage intensity greater than any ever before encountered in the Italian campaign, has already begun to weaken as artillery and air force units take a mounting toll of the shaken German forces.

On the Adriatic coast, 8th Army troops have penetrated to the center of the Republic of San Marino, reaching the outskirts of its capital, and have swung in a widening arc along the last line of hills barring entrance to the Valley of the Po, to approach within a mile and a half of the German coastal citadel of Rimini.

American forces of the 5th Army are now only 28 miles south of Bologna, one of the oldest and most prosperous of north Italian cities, and are within three miles of Firenzuola, key road junction from which branch two roads leading down into the Po Valley at Imola, and at Bologna itself. The westernmost road, that to Bologna, joins Highway No. 65 at a point four miles northeast of the Futa Pass, main German defensive position in the Apennines. American troops advanced nearly two miles yesterday on each side of the Florence-Firenzuola mountain road, pressing through the Il Giogo defile northward to storm the slopes of lofty Monte Castel Guerrino and Monte [illegible] flanking the road near the village of Rifredo.

British-based planes today carried more supplies to the airborne troops in Holland and bombed Germans in the Calais area, while attacks on the enemy's lines of communication were maintained by day and by night.

Last night, RAF Lancasters concentrated on the Rhineland towns of Rheydt and München-Gladbach, in the van of the advancing Allied armies, and left large fires blazing. These towns, only two miles apart, are on the main route from Aachen and Cologne to southeast Holland.

Mosquitoes made attacks on enemy road and rail movements deep inside Germany and also attacked trains and road convoys in the area of Emmerich, on the Dutch border. One formation of Mosquitoes caught a convoy of enemy barges ferrying troops across the Rhine between Emmerich and Dinslaken and riddled the boats with cannon and machine-gun fire, leaving several ablaze.

The night's operations cost the RAF five aircraft.

Earlier yesterday, 8th USAAF planes had delivered some of the heaviest attacks of the war on five strategic railway junctions through which German troops pass on their way to the front. In all five junctions — Hamm, Soest, Eschweiler, Durren, and Merzenich — the marshalling yards were jammed with freight cars. Aircrews said flames shot hundreds of feet into the air after the attack, and the yards were reduced to wreckage. Ten Allied bombers were lost.

Germans Bomb Eindhoven

The Germans attempted to block Allied reinforcement columns last night by bombing Eindhoven. The attack was a heavy one, with the Germans throwing more of their aircraft into the fight than have been seen for some time. They lost 26 of them to Mustangs and Thunderbolts of the 8th USAAF.

The British Air Ministry announced today that RAF Coastal Command planes and rescue launches battled through bad visibility and rough seas yesterday to rescue airborne soldiers who fell into the sea when their gliders broke loose from their tow planes en route to Holland. Planes from one RAF base were responsible for the rescue of 60 survivors. Two coastal planes spotted survivors standing on the wings of four crashed gliders and quickly directed launches to the rescue.

Last night, a surprise attack was made on an enemy convoy in a Norwegian Fjord by RAF Beaufighters escorted by Mosquitoes. Of the seven ships in the convoy, one large merchant ship, believed to be a troop transport, and two escort vessels were hit and left burning furiously. There was heavy flak from the shore batteries. One Beaufighter is missing from the 700-mile round trip.

The Germans sent flying-bombs against southern England, including the London area, shortly after midnight last night. Damage and casualties have been reported.

Discussing the strategy of the air war against Germany, a British commentator pointed out: "Having played a leading rôle in the great task of breaking the power of Germany in France and Belgium, and in the landing of powerful forces of liberation in Holland, the Allied air forces now move forward to their next job: the softening up of defenses and communications for the Battle of Germany. In this, the last battle of the war, all the accumulated experience of over five years' campaigning has gone into the assault." (OWI)

BRITISH PRISONERS SHOT BY S.S.

LONDON, September 20 — It was disclosed today that a party of uniformed British parachutists, captured while on a special mission behind the German lines in Normandy, were shot by S.S. police.

The BBC said that the story was revealed by one of the party who escaped. He stated that many of the prisoners were tortured before being shot, while those who had been wounded were refused medical aid. (BBC)

AMERICANS BATTER SIX-MILE BREACH IN GOTH LINE THREATEN WHOLE ENEMY POSITION IN ITALY

American troops advanced nearly two miles yesterday on each side of the Florence-Firenzuola mountain road, pressing through the Il Giogo defile northward to storm the slopes of lofty Monte Castel Guerrino and Monte La Croce, flanking the road near the village of Rifredo.

Official reports emphasized that no large-scale breakthrough was yet apparent on the 5th Army front, and that the enemy had reinforced the threatened sector of the Apennines. More than 600 prisoners were reported taken in the past 48 hours. Heavy fighting still centered around the turret-top pillboxes and concrete gun emplacements along the mountain crests and hand-to-hand fighting was actually taking place within these fortifications hewn out of the mountainsides, the official reports indicated.

British and Indian troops of the 5th Army, pushing through the Apennines a few miles east of the Americans, were reported to be in the vicinity of the village of Razzala, within 27 miles of the Po Valley at Faenza. These troops also captured the more-than-3,000-foot-high Femina Morte feature, overlooking the road to Faenza along the Lamone River Valley.

On the Ligurian coastal sector, 5th Army forces advanced six miles northeast of Viareggio to capture the town of Camalore, on the road from Lucca to the coast.

Eighth Army forces have now drawn a four-mile arc from the coast inland, partially enveloping the enemy strongpoint of Rimini, eastern terminus of the lateral highway along the southern edge of the Po Valley linking up Milan and industrial North Italy with the Adriatic.

Allied forces are now fighting within three miles of this main highway, Route No. 9, at San Fortunato, where German forces are clinging desperately to their last hill positions guarding the Plain of the Po.

Field Marshal Albert Kesselring has massed a total of nine divisions on the Adriatic front to stem the Allied drive which has pressed forward relentlessly along the coastal corridor since August 26. Although seriously reduced in numbers, these Nazi forces, which include the veteran 1st Parachute Division and the 29th and 26th Panzer Divisions, have fought bitterly to hold every yard in this threatened sector. More than 6,300 prisoners have been taken by the 8th Army in this heavy fighting.

It was announced today that Canadian forces of the 8th Army captured the key hilltop village of San Martino in Monte l'Abate, under assault for three days, during a final night attack on Monday, in which the Canadian troops cleared the last enemy forces from the village under heavy shellfire.

Ausa, Budrioli Crossed

These forces pushed on northwest of San Martino, to cross the Ausa River at a point only a mile and a half due south of Rimini. Fighting continued west of this advance, in the hills stretching to the San Marino border. British troops were reported across both the Ausa and the Budrioli rivers, a quarter-mile north of the former stream, in this sector.

British troops advanced into the northeastern portion of the tiny Republic of San Marino yesterday to capture the villages of Serravalle and Domagno, the latter two miles northeast of San Marino, capital of the small state. British and Indian troops were reported to be within a mile of the capital city in their approach from the south.

Greek troops, operating along the Adriatic coast, yesterday occupied the entire area of the Rimini Airfield, heavily mined and defended by pillboxes and gun positions in the ruins of hangar and repair shop buildings.

The airfield, one of the strongest enemy positions along the coast road leading directly to Rimini, has been the center of a bitter struggle for nearly a week. The Greek troops, consolidating their hold on the cratered landing area, advanced 1,000 yards north along the coast, to within less than two miles of the Adriatic port of Rimini.

It was announced today for the first time that it was troops of the Irish Regiment of Canada who captured the fortress town of Cutrano, where German Panzer Grenadiers fought a 10-day delaying action in positions in tunnels, cellars, and ruins atop the ridge across the low coastal plain some five miles south of Rimini. ISLANDS LIBERATED IN COMBINED OPERATIONS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — The three Dalmatian islands of Mljet, Korcula, and Brac have been liberated by a combined air, sea, and land force assault on enemy-garrisoned islands along the coast of Yugoslavia, it was officially announced here today.

The attacks, which began on September 12, have brought to four the number of Yugoslav islands liberated from the German occupying forces. The island of Vis, or Lissa, was liberated in August. Only the islands of Hvar, one of the largest in the group, and Solet, are still in enemy hands.

Considerable casualties were inflicted on the enemy garrison forces, it was stated. The Royal Navy, units of Land Forces Adriatic and aircraft of the Balkan Air Force cooperated closely with the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation in the operations, which are still continuing, it was said. (PRO)

ITALY-BASED HEAVIES HIT BUDAPEST

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Up to 750 fighter-escorted heavy bombers today struck at three rail ting German forces in Poland's capital. RAF planes had previously made the long haul from Italian bases to Warsaw and return to supply the Polish Resistance Movement.

RAF bombers dropped about 25,000 incendiaries among rolling stock and supplies piled up in the rail yards at Szekesfehervar, about 40 miles southwest of Budapest, in an attack last night. The yards are an important junction center for rail lines about Budapest, and were subjected to their first air attack of the war in last night's assault.

Photo reconnaissance reports today indicated that one and possibly both of the Zup Morava and Gitnica Rivers' bridges in Yugoslavia attacked yesterday by 15th AAF heavy bombers had been destroyed.

Bad weather yesterday cancelled operations of nearly all medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, but fighters and fighter-bombers flew sweeps over Northern Italy and carried out attacks in support of the 8th Army. Light bombers and some mediums attacked enemy concentrations near Rimini. (PRO)

DESTROYERS BOMBARD SAN REMO
CRETE BLOCKADED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Two U. S. destroyers, bombarding enemy targets on the right flank of the Allied 7th Army in the area between Ventimiglia and San Remo, more than 20 miles east of Nice and more than 10 miles within the Italian border, have sunk 13 enemy vessels and destroyed huge stores of materiel and ammunition, it was announced here today.

The destroyers Edison and Hilary P. Jones continued their bombardment for two days, September 16 and 17, and on the third day the Jones attacked the harbor of San Remo alone. A ship alongside a quay piled with ammunition was hit, with tremendous explosions resulting, and 12 smaller craft, some of them motor-torpedo boats, were set afire.

Attacks were also carried out against an enemy convoy in the vicinity of Genoa Harbor by Allied light coastal forces, and two F-lighters were torpedoed and exploded.

In the Aegean, the British Gunboat Aurora bombarded the harbour of Melos on September 17, and on the following day joined with the destroyer Terpsichore to attack an enemy wireless station on the same island. Naval carrier aircraft, in attacks against enemy transport on the large, enemy-occupied island of Crete, destroyed or damaged 36 enemy motor vehicles.

It was officially announced today that Crete is being closely blockaded by Allied ships and planes to prevent the escape of its enemy garrison. (PRO)

FIRST CARGO SHIP ARRIVES AT MARSEILLES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 20 — The first Allied cargo ship to arrive and unload at Marseilles since the liberation of this second-largest city in France was an American Liberty ship under charter to the British, it was announced here today. The vessel inaugurated the direct ships-to-shore handling of commodities within 16 days after salvage operations began on the great Mediterranean port. (PRO)

GENERAL CLARK CONGRATULATES BRAZILIANS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Lieutenant General Mark Clark, Commanding General, 5th Army, today addressed a congratulatory message to Major General Joao Baptista Mascarenhas, commander of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, on the confidence, initiative, and determination with which Brazilian troops had entered their first combat.

General Clark wrote that "within a matter of hours, Brazilian troops had captured a town, and that he was confident that this was only the first of many military objectives which will be listed as captured by the Brazil-

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Up to 730 fighter-escorted heavy bombers today struck at three rail bridges in and around Budapest, and formed a bottleneck for all supplies for German forces on the south Russian front, it was announced here late this afternoon.

Flying Fortresses bombed the Szob and the Budapest north and south rail bridges over the Danube River, in the second attack in three days. Other bombers attacked a fighter field and the Apollo oil refinery at Bratislava, in Czechoslovakia.

Liberator bombers struck at the Hatvan rail yards northeast of Budapest and at the Gyor yards on the west of the city. Early reports indicated that the planes had not met a single enemy fighter. (PRO)

SHUTTLE-FORTS BOMB HUNGARIAN RAIL YARDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — The Mustang-escorted force of 8th AAF Flying Forts which dropped food and weapons to battling Warsaw Patriots in a flight from England to Russia, bombed the Solznok, Hungary, railyards on the first leg of the return flight to England via Italy, it was announced here today.

The flight, the fourth Britain-Russia-Italy shuttle mission carried out by the 8th AAF, marked the first American aid to the Warsaw Patriots, holding out against surround-

CANADIAN DESTROYER AS INVASION FLAGSHIP

LONDON, September 20 — A Canadian destroyer HMS Prince Henry, served as a flagship for American Admiral Chandler during the invasion operations off southern France.

Naval dispatches said today that the American admiral boarded the Canadian vessel at Naples on August 6, and later led the task assault group which was assigned to wiping out heavy gun emplacements on the islands of Levant and Port Gros. (OWI)

FIGHTING ALONG BULGARIA-YUGOSLAV BORDER

LONDON, September 20 — Along the whole length of the Yugoslav-Bulgarian border, the Germans are attempting to hold a number of points controlling lines of communications.

Marshal Tito's communique reported today that Partisan forces in southeastern Serbia have cleared the area of the upper Bregalnica, southeast of Skolpje. Other Partisan forces, in their advance northward from Stip toward Kriva Palanka, have liberated Kratovo and Zletovo.

To the southwest, in the Prilep area, fierce fighting continues, as the Germans are attempting a break-through from Greece to the north. The Bulgarian communique reported today that the Bulgarian 15th Infantry Division is assisting the Partisans in this sector. The Balkan Air Force, operating from bases in Italy, gave direct support to their operations and bombed German strongpoints.

In the frontier zone between Italy and Yugoslavia, German forces are under attack from Patriot brigades. Marshal Tito reported the capture of a German aerodrome after an attack in which 54 were killed and 28 prisoners taken.

In the Poborje Hills, along the Austria-Yugoslav border, the Germans are displaying nervousness at the threat to their communications by Partisans operating in this area. (OWI)

RED ARMY STARTS A SECOND BALTIC OFFENSIVE

MOSCOW, September 20 — A new Russian offensive led by Marshal Govorov was smashing through Nazi defenses north of Tartu in Estonia tonight, aimed at giving the coup de grace to German resistance in the Baltic Socialist Soviet Republics.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said that this Tartu offensive, linked with those driving toward Riga to the south, was launched four days ago, and that almost 2,000 inhabited places have since been liberated.

Under heavy artillery and aerial support, Govorov's Leningrad Front troops have driven up to 43 miles into German defenses along a 75-mile front — matching gains made up to a late hour last night by General Bagramyan's forces smashing their way through Latvia.

Simultaneously, other forces of the Leningrad Front have begun an offensive around Narva, between the upper reaches of Lake Peipus and the sea. This drive had overrun more than 300 small towns and villages at a late hour tonight.

Nine Miles from Riga

BBC said the Latvian drive of General Bagramyan's divisions had reached to within nine miles of Riga early today. The Soviet communique added that more than 50 inhabited localities have been taken in the area since yesterday.

Reuter described the multiple pushes on the Baltic front as the final drive to split Hitler's northern army group, estimated at about 30 divisions, into isolated pockets relatively easy to annihilate.

On the far-northern front, United Press dispatches said tonight that Russian troops have entered Finland to enforce their country's armistice terms. Helsinki dispatches repeated reports of Russian clashes with Nazi troops in northern regions of the front. (Reuter - BBC)

POLISH PREMIER THANKS ALLIES

LONDON, September 20 — Premier Stanislaw Mikolajszyk, of the Polish Government in London, yesterday paid tribute to the Allies for their aid to the Polish Patriots in Warsaw. The premier made a broadcast speech, which was quoted by the American Broadcasting Station in Europe.

He spoke of the joy which must have been felt in Warsaw, ABSIE said, on the 48th day of its struggle against the Germans when the American airmen appeared. He also had high praise for the British and South African pilots who flew through clouds, winds, and ice, over high mountains, and in the dark of night, to give the Polish fighters arms.

ABSIE also quoted Mikolajszyk's mentioning the Soviet Air Force, which attacked the Luftwaffe over Warsaw, and brought fresh supplies of arms and ammunition to the Patriots. (PWB)

Just ahead of the Russian push on the southern front, Red Air Force heavy bombers carried out further attacks against the Hungarian capital of Budapest and the Hungarian rail-junction city of Satu-Mare last night.

Dozens of fires were started in the capital, four of them described by the Soviet communique as of vast extent. Fires were observed in the area of the gas plant, and around the city's large rubber factory. Returning airmen said they could see the flames for a distance of 125 miles.

At Satu-Mare, Russian bombs struck three enemy trains loaded with ammunition. They were on junction tracks at the time, and the subsequent explosions started fires over a large area.

Russian and Rumanian troops driving up through western Rumania toward Hungary were said tonight to be within a single day's forced march of the frontier, and within 160 miles of Budapest, with comparatively easy fighting country between them and the Hungarian capital.

German news reports said that Russian troops have entered Warsaw. The Soviet communique had nothing to say of fighting around the Polish capital. But General Bor's Partisan communique said that Russian planes have driven the Luftwaffe out of the sky around Warsaw, and that the city has been free of German raids for two days. It spoke also of continued Russian shelling of German positions.

FINNISH DIET APPROVES ARMISTICE TERMS

WASHINGTON, September 20 — A Radio Helsinki broadcast today announced that the Diet had approved the Russian-Finnish armistice at two special, closed sessions early yesterday morning after giving the Government a vote of confidence.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The armistice was laid before the Diet at the first session, but in accordance with Finnish constitutional procedure, it was tabled until the following session, one hour later, when the Diet voted to pass over to the «ordinary agenda.»

Finnish ratification of the armistice was announced almost simultaneously with a Soviet broadcast reporting the signing of the agreement in Moscow.

Terms of the agreement and their acceptance had been disclosed to the Finnish people in a broadcast late last night by Acting Premier Ernest von Born, who described the date as «one of the hardest days in Finnish history,» but added:

«We must try to build up our future on what has been left to us. We are Russia's neighbor, and must always take this into account.»

Referring to the reparations payment of 300 million dollars over a six-year period as «the most important point» of the peace conditions from Finland's viewpoint, the Premier went on to say that Finland must also be prepared to help the Allies with deliveries of material.

«It is a serious matter,» he added, «that we have to disarm German troops in Finland and hand them over to the Allies, and this although we must prepare hastily for the army to return to peacetime footing.»

The only immediate indications available of how the disarming was proceeding came from Swedish sources. The newspaper Svenska Morgonbladet said yesterday that two companies of German troops in northern Finland had voluntarily surrendered. The Germans asked to be interned, and were disarmed by Finnish detachments, the report said.

The Stockholm Aftonbladet reported yesterday that Finnish troops had been sent prior to September 15 to the Finnish cities of Pori, Vaasa, and Oulu on the Bay of Bothnia, and that all these coastal towns were in Finnish hands.

Aftonbladet also said that German submarines had opened fire against Finnish warships on a recent undisclosed date, adding that the Finnish vessels replied and sank two of the U-boats. The action was said to have taken place in the Aalands Islands.

Nya Dagligt, another Stockholm paper, yesterday reported the presence of a strong German naval detachment in the waters guarding the mouth of the Gulf of Finland.

R.A.F. MAKES SMASHING RAID ON MANDALAY

KANDY, CEYLON, September 20 — Heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command, in support of the over-all Allied offensive to clear the Japanese out of Burma, struck hard yesterday at rail yards in and around the vital junction city of Mandalay.

It is over the road to Mandalay that the Japanese carry most of their supplies for troops holding central portions of Burma and the western end of the old Burma Road. The Seven Japanese aircraft were shot down. One was damaged. From all these operations, only one of Chennault's fighters failed to return.

On the Palau Islands, 1,500 miles from China, American Marines made further gains yesterday, and on the island of Angaur, only two small pockets of Japanese troops were holding out late tonight. The American naval communique said Japanese resistance continued to be stiff — well supported by mortar fire from emplaced positions. Troops on Peleliu now hold most of the eastern coastal area.

At the same time, American aircraft carried out further raids on the Kuriles, and on the Marcus and Marshall island groups. They reported light flak. They scored hits on gun positions, barracks, airfield strips, and storage depots. One plane strafed a Japanese warship on its return flight.

After the sixth day of the American's invasion of Morotai, today's Pacific communique still did not mention any Japanese ground resistance, although American patrols were seeking the fleeing Japanese in the hills.

General MacArthur's communique today announced that heavy and light Allied bombers attacked aerodromes on Amboina, in the Ceram Group. A large ammunition dump exploded.

Fighter patrols swept the coast, destroying a coastal vessel and canoes carrying enemy personnel.

The Celebes Islands, in the Dutch East Indies, were again subjected to another heavy pounding from the air, when Allied heavy and medium units dropped 145 tons of bombs on Langoan airfield. Installations were severely damaged, and an enemy bomber was destroyed on the ground. There were no interceptions, and escorting fighters strafed revetments, destroying two planes and probably a third. One Allied fighter was lost.

CARUSO ADMITS KNOWING 50 HE TURNED OVER TO GERMANS WERE INNOCENT

ROME, September 20 — Pietro Caruso, Fascist chief of police in Rome, blandly admitted at the opening of his trial today he knew that the 50 innocent political prisoners he handed over to the Germans were to be murdered. These 50 were among the 335 Italians murdered by the Germans in the Ardeatine Caves.

Caruso went on trial this morning with his former associate and secretary, Roberto Occhetto, in the Palazzo Corsini before an eight-man special court presided over by President Lorenzo Maroni. The surrounding streets and all entrances to the court building were heavily guarded by Italian Carabinieri and mounted Rome police to prevent a recurrence of Monday's incident, when Donato Carretta, a prosecution witness, was killed by a frenzied crowd. Carretta was chief warder of the Regina Coeli Prison, from which the 50 political prisoners were taken.

While admitting all the charges against him, Caruso based his defence on the ground that he was acting under orders. Mostly, he blamed Guido Buffarini-Guidi, Minister

KANDY, CEYLON, September 20 — Heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command, in support of the over-all Allied offensive to clear the Japanese out of Burma, struck hard yesterday at rail yards in and around the vital junction city of Mandalay.

It is over the road to Mandalay that the Japanese carry most of their supplies for troops holding central portions of Burma and the western end of the old Burma Road. The city is a vital supply base for the Japanese forces now retreating southward into the Chindwin Hills.

Southeast Asia Command headquarters said today that this retreat has begun to look like a rout, that Japanese fleeing before advancing Indian forces pushing down the Tiddim Road have broken into flight. The enemy is using light tanks in an effort to clear his escape path from Allied troops harassing his flanks deep in the rear.

All over China today, other aircraft of the 14th USAAF and of the Chinese-American Wing led by General Claire Chennault struck at Japanese convoys along the rivers and roads, and smashed at Japanese coastal shipping as far south as the Indo-China shore.

Chennault's fighter-bombers bombed and strafed a convoy of 300 trucks near Changsha. They destroyed 90 of the vehicles and damaged most of the others. More than 60 small river craft were destroyed, along with two small steamers. Other vessels, large and small, were shot up along the inland waterways. Railways, ammunition dumps, and warehouses were also hit. Returning pilots reported large fires spattered over the face of China.

In tactical support of Chinese troops resisting the Japanese push southward toward the Kwangsi city of Kweilin, medium bombers carried out attacks against Japanese positions near Chuanhsien. Nipponese interception was light.

The Celebes Islands, in the Dutch East Indies, were again subjected to another heavy pounding from the air, when Allied heavy and medium units dropped 145 tons of bombs on Langoan airfield. CARUSO ADMITS KNOWING 50 HE TURNED OVER TO GERMANS WERE INNOCENT

ROME, September 20 — Pietro Caruso, Fascist chief of police in Rome, blandly admitted at the opening of his trial today he knew that the 50 innocent political prisoners he handed over to the Germans were to be murdered. These 50 were among the 336 Italians murdered by the Germans in the Ardeatine Caves.

Caruso went on trial this morning with his former associate and secretary, Roberto Occhietto, in the Palazzo Corsini before an eight-man special court presided over by President Lorenzo Maroni. The surrounding streets and all entrances to the court building were heavily guarded by Italian Carabinieri and mounted Rome police to prevent a recurrence of Monday's incident, when Donato Carretta, a prosecution witness, was killed by a frenzied crowd. Carretta was chief gaoler of the Regina Coeli Prison, from which the 50 political prisoners were taken.

While admitting all the charges against him, Caruso based his defence on the ground that he was «acting under orders.» Mostly, he blamed Guido Buffarini-Guidi, Minister of the Interior under the Fascist régime, and Giovanni Travaglio, Vice-commissioner of the Rome police. The second part of Caruso's defense offered by his attorney, Francesco Spezzano, was the defendant's «abnormality,» as evidenced by the insanity of Caruso's uncle, brother, and sister.

Caruso told the court of his appointment as chief of police of Verona in February, 1943 adding that 15 days later he was called to Rome by Mussolini and made the capital's chief of police. He gave affirmative answers to every charge, admitting also that the money, gold, diamonds, and other jewelry found in his pocket when arrested belonged to some of those he turned over to the Nazis to be murdered.

Occhietto's defense revolved around his insistence that he was an Italian Patriot in Fascist clothing. Rather than the «Fascist terror» as he was pictured by the prosecutor, Mario Berlinguer, Occhietto said that he was working for the Allies behind the lines and even went to a Nazi school for saboteurs in Holland, so that he could help the Allies prevent sabotage.

Describing the circumstances surrounding the taking of the 50 political prisoners from his custody, Caruso said he was confronted by the Nazi SS Chief, Colonel Kappler, who told him that 320 hostages were needed to carry out the orders of Marshal Kesselring, who wanted 10 Italians killed for each of the 32 German soldiers killed during an explosion in Rome.

Caruso remained completely impassive when Prosecutor Berlinguer asked:

«Did you know that the 50 citizens you handed over would be murdered?»

Caruso answered: «Yes.»

However, the defendant did grimace and show considerable discomfort as Professor Attilio Ascarelli, a criminologist, testifying as the prosecution's first witness, stated that 335 bodies has been found in the Ardeatine Caves, of which 255 had been identified. As the professor recited the details of the exhumation, the autopsies, and the identifications, Caruso buried his face in his hands.

«All of them had been shot at the base of the skull,» Professor Ascarelli reported.

Testimony that Caruso supervised a torture session in which three Rome policemen were the victims was given at the late afternoon session by the three officers, one of whom, Giovanni Scotti, said they were beaten and tortured in a pensione on Via Principe Amedeo. The actual torture, he added, was carried out by the notorious Koch, known as the most brutal man in the Italian Questura.

Then followed a parade of character witnesses including a priest, who pictured Caruso as «a sweet man» they knew at the age of 16 and 17. Caruso is now 45 years of age. One said Caruso was «a fine man,» because the defendant had once given him a ride in an automobile.

Two colonels appeared in defense of Occhietto, who, they swore, was a secret agent for the Italian Patriot movement in Rome. Colonel Giuseppe Bertone said that through Guido Garulli, now under arrest on suspicion, Occhietto, under the alias of Raviola, had warned many anti-Fascists in advance of police searches for them. He added that Occhietto or Raviola has received no compensation for this service.

The second colonel, Ugo Lucca, of the Carabinieri, testified that Occhietto, or Raviola as the witness knew of him, was actually a member of the Patriot Intelligence section, furnishing the Patriots with much valuable information.

Prosecutor Berlinguer, however, told the court that he rejected the testimony of both colonels for lack of more specific information, since neither of the witnesses had ever dealt directly with Occhietto.

Earlier in the trial today, the court rejected the plea of Francesco Melito, an attorney and vice president of the Italian Patriot Union, to allow him to interject in the current trial a civil claim for damages against Caruso for 500,000 lire in behalf of the family of Giuseppe Trucidato, one of the 50 political prisoners turned over by Caruso to be murdered by the Germans.

The trial is expected to be completed tomorrow morning, when the opposing attorneys make their final pleas. (UNN)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 20 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

After a week of intensive fighting in the Goth Line north of Florence, American troops of the 5th Army have now breached this line on a front of six miles, and are now within three miles of the important road center of Firenzuola. American, British, Indian, and Brazilian troops of the 5th Army, on the flanks of this breach, continue to make progress against strong opposition.

In the Adriatic sector, against continued stubborn enemy resistance, Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army are approaching the defenses of Rimini and are assaulting the village of San Fortunato. On their left, British and Indian troops have advanced to the outskirts of the town of San Marino, and have captured the village of Serravalle, north of this town.

Combined Communique, Balkan Air Force:

On 12 September, operations began against the enemy garrisons in the Dalmatian Islands. The islands of Mljet, Korcula, and Brac have now been liberated. The Royal Navy, units of Land Forces Adriatic, and aircraft of the Balkan Air Force cooperated closely with the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation in the successful operation, and considerable losses were inflicted on the enemy. Operations continue.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked railroad bridges in Yugoslavia and enemy positions near Rimini. Heavy bombers of the 8th Air Force, flying from Russian bases, landed in Italy after attacking railyards in Hungary.

Tactical aircraft were active against close-support targets in the battle area, and carried out armed reconnaissances in Northern Italy. Other aircraft attacked enemy communications, shipping, and port installations in Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked Szekesfehervar rail yard in Hungary. On the night of 18/19 September, medium and heavy bombers attacked enemy concentrations in the Rimini area.

In these operations, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and two of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,050 sorties.

Naval:

It is reported from the south of France that on 17 September the U. S. destroyers Edison and Hilary P. Jones carried out successful bombardments of enemy targets on the right flank of the army in the area Between Ventimiglia and San Remo. Enemy light coastal craft in San Remo were heavily fired upon, and there was a large explosion in the quay. The attack on San Remo was continued by the Hilary P. Jones on 18 September with most successful results. One ship alongside the mole was set on fire and exploded with an enormous column of flame and Continuing their operations against transport in Crete, naval aircraft destroyed 25 motor vehicles, including three staff cars. All our aircraft returned safely.

Crete is now being closely blockaded, to prevent the escape of the enemy garrison. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 20 — Today's communique:

The advance of the Allied forces in Holland has continued rapidly. Ground troops made contact yesterday with more airborne formations.

Eindhoven is in our hands, and our armored units have advanced nearly 40 miles to the area of Nijmegen.

Strong enemy counter-attacks were beaten off near Best and in our bridgehead north of Gheel.

Fighters and fighter-bombers again supported and covered the airborne operations, and attacked road and rail transport over a wide area of Holland.

According to reports so far received, 26 enemy aircraft were shot down for the loss of nine of our fighters.

To the west, the enemy is still resisting stubbornly south of the Scheldt, but our troops made progress in the area of the Axel-Hulst Canal.

On the coast, we have captured the citadel and Mont Lambert in Boulogne.

In southern Holland, our troops have liberated Sittard and Amstenrade, northeast of Maastricht, meeting moderate opposition.

East of Aachen, fighting is in progress in the factory area of Stolberg, and enemy pressure is being met near Rushach.

Operating in advance of our ground forces, medium and light bombers attacked railway yards at Eschweiler, Duren, and Merzenich on the Aachen-Cologne line.

Mopping up of enemy pillboxes and pockets of resistance continues east of Rotgen and in the Hofen and Alzen areas south of Monschau. Enemy counter-attacks in this area were unsuccessful.

Heavy and determined resistance has been encountered east of the German-Luxembourg border. East of Bellalf, an enemy pocket was wiped out.

In the Moselle Valley, we have made gains south of Metz against stubborn resistance. Mopping up is in progress six miles northeast of Pont Mousson.

Farther south, our forces have liberated Gerbeville, 14 miles northeast of Charmes.

In Brittany, all organized resistance has ceased in Brest and Recouvrance, and our troops have cleared the enemy from the Crozon Peninsula. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 20 — Tonight's communique:

Land:

Troops of the Leningrad Front, launching their offensive from the area of the northern Tartu, broke through the strongly fortified enemy defence, and, during the four days of offensive, advanced up to 70 kilometers, expanding the break-through up to 120 kilometers in frontage, and liberating over 1,500 populated localities, including Kaulaste, Mustve, Irigeve, Varnye, Kapite, Kote, Varro, Kestula, Vaiekolye, Alatskevach, Larva, Magdaleena, Kogis, Pala, Pishede, Taluvere, Tovare, Palabuere, Stanisa, Avinurme, Misma, Leckeluye, Suala, and Petra; and the railway stations of Avinurme, Mustve, Vladiva, Petja, Iguva, Soltye, Tarve, Kierve, Nava, Paleverre, and Kerknak.

Simultaneously, west of Narva, troops of this front, during the three days of offensive, advanced up to 60 kilometers, and occupied over 300 populated localities, including Ichvi, Tuila, Vatseverre, Koerine-Tuila, Vuike-Maarja, Limala, Sonda, Rastva, Rietsekula, Izaku, Vigona, Tatatse, and Surru; the railway junction of Sonda; and the railway Twelve smaller craft, some of them resembling motor-torpedo boats, were set on fire and detonated violently. A small coaster was set on fire, and a target damaged by a direct hit. Fuel storage tanks were ignited and left blazing. From the violence of the explosion, considerable quantities of ammunition stored in the port area appear to have been destroyed. It is reported that all the formerly serviceable craft in the port have now been sunk.

On the night of 17/18 September, Allied light coastal craft operating in the Gulf of Genoa attacked another enemy convoy. Two "F" lighters were hit by torpedoes and blew up. There was heavy and fairly accurate return fire from the enemy, but our force suffered neither casualties nor damage.

It is reported from the Aegean that the harbor at Melos was again successfully bombarded by HMS Aurora on 17 September. On the same day, naval aircraft from the escort carrier force attacked enemy transport in Crete, destroying 11 motor vehicles and damaging others. One JU-52 was destroyed on the ground. All our aircraft returned safely.

On 18 September, the Aurora with the destroyer Terpsichore bombarded an enemy wireless station at Melos and obtained direct hits.

On the coast, we have captured the citadel and Mont Lambert in Boulogne.

In southern Holland, our troops have liberated Sittard and Amstenrade, northeast of Maastricht, meeting moderate opposition.

East of Aachen, fighting is in progress in the factory area of Stolberg, and enemy pressure is being met near Bushach.

Operating in advance of our ground forces, medium and light bombers attacked railway yards at Eschweiler, Duren, and Merzenich on the Aachen-Cologne line.

Mopping up of enemy pillboxes and pockets of resistance continues east of Roigen and in the Hofen and Alven areas south of Monschau. Enemy counter-attacks in this area were unsuccessful.

Heavy and determined resistance has been encountered east of the German-Luxembourg border. East of Belfalf, an enemy pocket was wiped out.

In the Moselle Valley, we have made gains south of Metz against stubborn resistance. Mopping up is in progress six miles northeast of Pont Mousson.

Further south, our forces have liberated Gerbeville, 14 miles northeast of Charmes.

In Brittany, all organized resistance has ceased in Brest and Recouvrance, and our troops have cleared the enemy from the Crozon Peninsula. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 20 — Tonight's communique:

Land:

Troops of the Leningrad Front, launching their offensive from the area of the northern Tartu, broke through the strongly fortified enemy defence, and, during the four days of offensive, advanced up to 70 kilometers, expanding the break-through up to 120 kilometers in frontage, and liberating over 1,500 populated localities, including Kaulaste, Mustve, Irigeve, Kapite, Kote, Varrs, Kesuila, Vaiekolye, Alatskevech, Leva, Magdalcena, Kogis, Pala, Pishede, Taluvere, Tovare, Palabuere, Stanisa, Avinurme, Misena, Leckeluye, Saala, and Petra, and the railway stations of Avinurme, Mustve, Vladiva, Petja, Iguva, Soldye, Tarve, Klerve, Nava, Puteverre, and Kerknak.

Simultaneously, west of Narva, troops of this front, during the three days of offensive, advanced up to 60 kilometers, and occupied over 300 populated localities, including Ichvi, Toila, Vatseverre, Kuerme-Tula, Vaike-Maarja, Limala, Sonda, Rnatva, Riebekula, Izaku, Vigsna, Tatatse, and Surru; the railway junction of Sonda; and the railway stations of Valvara, Iryve, Toapa, Kukruze, Esvye, Kochtu, and Vimli.

Northwest and south of Valga, our troops continued their advance and occupied over 50 populated localities, including Hodre, Prantu, Gaubye, Koszhenye, Sakyluzne, and Veni.

East of Riga, our troops occupied in fighting over 100 populated localities, including Savats, Krimjene, Imermake, and Ergli, and the railway stations of Lauma and Urieshti.

West of Jelgava (Metavn), our troops succesfully beat back strong enemy infantry and tank attacks.

South and southeast of Krosno, our troops captured the following populated localities: Lubatuvka, Rimanuv, Nevko, Seniava, Odzhehove, Repkovelkye, Chistogor, and Jasel.

On all other sectors of the front, patrol activities and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 19, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 48 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 14 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 19/20, our long-range Air Force carried out massive raids on the capital of Hungary,

Budapest, and the railway junction of Satu-Mare, in northern Transylvania. Military industrial objects were subjected to bombardment in Budapest.

As a result of bombardment, dozens of fires were set, of which four were of a very large size. Many fires were observed in the area of the gas-works, the rubber-factory, and the railway station in the northern part of the city. Amongst the fires several explosions of high magnitude occured. Our pilots observed the flames from a distance of 200 kilometers.

On the railway junction of Satu-Mare, by direct bomb hits three freight trains of war material were blown up. As a result of bombardment, and the explosions of the freight trains, a considerable part of the railway station was enveloped by flames. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 20 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots launched a strong attack on the German garrison at Dogliani, and forced it to retire. Two tanks were destroyed and a considerable amount of war supplies was captured. Thirty German soldiers were killed in a clash along the road to Acqui. Near Geva, in the course of an engagement, 10 Fascist militiamen were killed and two transports destroyed.

During recent operations, Patriots took many Nazi-Fascist prisoners at Cengio. The bridge over the river Tanaro, on the Ceva-Mondovi Road, was blown up. Three motor vehicles were destroyed on the road between Montezemolo and Lera.

Another bridge was blown up again near Piani di Carniglia, in the Spezia area, after the Germans, following a previous Patriot attack, had put it back in to service. Traffic here will be suspended indefinitely, since the explosion caused a 30-yard break in the bridge.

Telegraph lines were cut in 35 different places along the highway leading to Feltre.

Further information reveals that the train derailed two miles south of Rosna was composed of 38 cars. The locomotive and five cars were completely destroyed. The remaining ones were overturned, causing damage to 350 yards of the right-of-way.

Colonel Bartolomeo Fronteddu, an active Nazi collaborator, was killed by Patriots during an air alert in Padova. In reprisal, 10 hostages were shot.

As a result of Patriot activity, navigation in the Lake Maggiore and Ticino areas has been prohibited by German authorities. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, 20 September — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the central part of the Netherlands, the enemy forces which landed from the air, were forced further together in concentric attacks in the area of Arhnem. Well supported by German fighter formations, heavy losses in men and material were inflicted on the enemy. Up to now, more than 1,700 prisoners have been taken. From the area of Eindhoven, the enemy pressed forward to the northeast with all forces. German troops have opened a counter-attack there, too.

To the northwest of Aix-la-Chapelle, the enemy, who employed strong armored forces, was able to widen his penetration. To the southwest of the town, all enemy attacks were repelled, partly at the cost of heavy losses for the enemy.

Our counter-attack is gaining ground slowly.

[illegible] Aix-la-Chapelle, the heavy and fluctua- break-through, partly in new positions. To the north and northeast of Florence, enemy attacks were repulsed and local penetrations were eliminated by counter-attacks.

Eastern Front:

In southeast Transylvania, and in the Szekler salient, attacks of the Bolshevists failed.

In the sector of Krosno-Sanokour our troops repelled fierce attacks of the Soviets, sealed off several penetrations, and destroyed 27 tanks.

At Warsaw, the enemy tried to cross the Vistula at several points under cover of smoke-screens. The attempts to cross the river were frustrated, and units which had reached the western bank were cut off. Northeast of the town, repeated Bolshevist attacks broke down under our fire.

Attacks to the southwest of Mitau brought small improvements in our positions, after enemy counter-attacks were repelled.

In Latvia and Estonia, the attacks of the Bolshevists, which were supported by numerous tank units and battle-planes, were either warded off or stemmed, and numerous tanks were destroyed.

In three days of forest-fighting, our grenadiers wiped out two enemy bridgeheads by fierce counter-attacks in the Kandalaksha sector.

Air:

At noon, yesterday, United States bombers launched attacks against several localities in northern and northwestern Germany. Damages and casualties were caused, particularly in the district of the town of Koblenz.

Last night, enemy terror raids were directed against Munich-Gladbach, and Budapest. Air defence forces shot down 37 enemy aircraft.

Sea:

In the Channel, and in the Indian Ocean, our submarines sank four vessels totalling 26,000 BRT, and two frigates. A further three ships were heavily damaged by direct hits. (Radio Berlin)

U.S. 1ST ARMY MAKES TWO NEW PENETRATIONS INTO SIEGFRIED LINE

SHAEF, September 19 — Allied forces are steadily pushing the enemy back along a front extending through Belgium, Holland, Luxembourg, and France in their drive on Germany from the west.

General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army made two new penetrations into the outer defenses of the Siegfried Line in twin drives eastward from the Duren appendix which juts into Belgium. The northernmost penetration was made just east of Sittard. The second crossing into German territory was made at Simpelveld, six miles north of Aachen, and threatens the German garrison still holding out at the out the orders of the Netherlands Government in London, has paralyzed German communication lines leading into Holland. The airborne army, spreading out from their landing areas, are taking hundreds of prisoners, as well as road junctions and canal bridges, in their drive to open another road to Berlin.

To the southwest, other units of the British 2nd Army have made further gains in their drive northward over the Escaut Canal. One column has driven across the Dutch border north of Lommel, and has entered Luyksgestel and Wilreit, two miles to the northwest.

The American 1st Army has completely surrounded Aachen, defense bastion of the Siegfried Line. Press reports stated that less than 20,000 Germans now remain in the city.

The German High Command has issued evacuation orders to two million Germans in the Cologne-Aachen area.

The Germans counter-attacked strongly in the Stolburg sector east of Aachen yesterday in an attempt to gain time to throw up defenses on the western side of the Rhine. A heavy American artillery barrage hurled the German forces back.

German Counter-Attack Crushed

On the Luxembourg front, the Germans pushed the American line back two miles last night. Early this morning, however, Allied soldiers retook the lost ground and are continuing their drive eastward.

Progress was made in the Prum area, where American troops captured Brandscheid and advanced eastward to Honilheim. Huttingen, between Prum and Trier, was also taken.

American 3rd Army forces, on the southern flank of the Allied front, made a new attack across the Moselle River north of Epinal and were reported to be making good progress.

Armored and infantry battles were being fought north and east of Nancy today as the German command threw men and tanks into the line in an effort to delay the advance into Germany. Late reports placed American troops 20 miles east of Nancy, indicating that they have passed through the Lorraine Gap on the way to Strasbourg.

Heavy German opposition is still being encountered in the Metz area, and one German counter-attack below the city was repulsed.

On the Channel coast, Canadian 1st Army troops fought their way across the Liane River into the southern part of Boulogne, and are advancing slowly toward the southwestern defenses. The port facilities are in Allied hands. Over 2,000 prisoners have so far been captured in this new drive.

Airborne Forces at Arnhem

Airborne reinforcements and supplies were dropped for the third consecutive day into the big attack zones in Holland. Troops of the firmly joined Allied 1st Airborne Army and the British 2nd Army, after liberating Eindhoven, are fighting their way over the Netherlands network of waterways.

Allied armored columns are two miles from Nijmegen on the banks of the Waal River, on the lower reaches of the Rhine. Once the Allies hold Nijmegen, all Germans west and south of the river will have to fight their way through Allied lines to Germany.

One element of the airborne army has gone into action beyond the Rhine at Arnhem, 20 miles above the northern flank of the Siegfried Line.

The original junction of the British 2nd Army and the 1st Airborne Army was made at Veghel, directly north of Eindhoven. In Eindhoven itself, mopping up operations are continuing against isolated German units.

The Germans have been rushing in heavy artillery in a desperate attempt to halt the forward push of the airborne army. The Dutch Resistance Movement, carrying

HAMM, SOEST, AND BREMERHAVEN BOMBED

LONDON, September 19 — Flying Fortresses, 700 strong, today attacked the German rail centers of Hamm and Soest, through which enemy reinforcements must pass to reach the invasion zone of Holland by the most direct route.

At the same time, hundreds of other Allied planes, protected by fighters and fighter-bombers, reinforced and supplied the airborne army now in its third day in Holland. The Luftwaffe has so far made no serious attempt to attack the flying columns.

Hamm is on the main Berlin-Cologne line just behind the pierced Siegfried defences. Soest is 25 miles east of Dortmund. About 700 fighters escorted the bombers, making the armada 1,500 or more strong. The escorting Lightnings, Mustangs, and Thunderbolts strafed and dive-bombed German anti-aircraft batteries in Holland and on the way home attacked communications targets.

Last night, nearly half a million incendiary bombs were dropped on the outer port of Bremen by Lancasters and Halifaxes of RAF Bomber Command. At the end of the attack, air crews reported that the fires appeared to be completely out of control, and that the whole target area was ablaze. Bremerhaven, the outer port of Germany's second-largest harbor, has become doubly important to the Germans since Emden was so severely damaged. It has been used extensively for some time by a large number of naval and other vessels, including E-boats, minesweepers, and escort vessels, and the two great pre-war liners, Europa and Bremen.

While fire-bombs fell on Bremerhaven, 4,000-pound bombs were dropped on Berlin by RAF Mosquitoes in the 179th raid on the German capital.

The Flying Fortresses which dropped supplies on Warsaw yesterday and then flew on to Russia today landed on Italian bases after bombing targets in Hungary. The flight was the second leg of the fourth triangular trip for Fortresses of the 8th USAAF in England.

On the battlefront, Allied bombers today attacked enemy positions in a wide semicircle in the vicinity of Aachen, in support of the United States 1st Army near Stolberg.

American Thunderbolt fighter-bombers are now equipped with a new type of high-velocity rocket developed by the U. S. Navy, and its performance has exceeded expectations in use against enemy armor, say reports from the battlefront.

In a review of the achivements of the 9th USAAF in the last 11 months, it is revealed that this force flew more than 200,000 sorties and dropped more than 400,000 bombs on the enemy in western Europe. More than 15,000 enemy vehicles have been damaged, and thousands of Nazi troops killed or wounded. At least 1,200 enemy planes have been destroyed in combat or on the ground by 9th USAAF aircraft. R.A.F. ATTACKS «TIRPITZ» AGAIN

LONDON, September 19 — RAF Lancasters last Friday made a surprise attack on the German battleship Tirpitz lying in a Norwegian fjord, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

The Lancasters carried out the attack without fighter

Hill said that U. S. Lieutenant Colonel Billings is running the town, located just across the border from Belgium, and that:

«Colonel Billings has found the German population there very amenable to American rule. At first, Billings said, the Germans here were apprehensive. They were not sure how we would treat them. But they soon saw that — as they could read in proclamations posted over U. S. General Dwight Eisenhower's name — 'We come as conquerors, but not as oppressors.'

«Now they [the Germans] are discarding their fears. One sees children, just as in Belgium, waving at American soldiers who drive by in trucks and jeeps. Officially, the American Army is making no effort to be friendly with the Germans. They are to be given justice and fair play, that is all. Billings believes there will be little trouble with ordinary German civilians,» concluded the correspondent. (OWI)

VON RUNDSTEDT EXPLAINS GERMAN FAILURE

LONDON, September 19 — Field Marshal von Rundstedt has issued a report outlining the main reasons for the failure of the Germans to withstand the Allied drive across Europe, and the report, stated the American Broadcasting Station in Europe, has fallen into Allied hands.

The reasons von Rundstedt gave were: first, the Allies' complete mastery of the air; second, the skilful and large-scale employment of Allied parachute and airborne troops; third, the flexible and well-directed support of the land troops by ships and artillery; fourth, the rehearsal of Allied units for their task, and their most precise knowledge of the coast; and, fifth, the swift building up of superiority in numbers and material on the beachhead in just a few days. BELGIAN PATRIOTS TAKE 5,000 PRISONERS

SHAEF, September 19 (UNN) — More than 5,000 prisoners have been taken by Belgian Patriots, it was disclosed here today.

It was also revealed that during the German occupation, Belgian Patriots derailed 875 locomotives and wagons and destroyed 88 trains; cut railway lines in at least 1,000 places; cut hundreds of telephone cables; and damaged bridges, lock gates, turntables, and pumping stations. They also attacked 300 industrial targets.

In all of these operations, they had only 75 casualties. (PWB)

DUTCH COMMANDOS IN AIRBORNE ATTACK

WITH ALLIED FORCES, NETHERLANDS, September 19 «Substantial numbers» of Dutch Commandos joined with Allied airborne troops in the landings on Netherlands soil, it was disclosed here today.

Allied officers said their services had been offered by Prince Bernhard, commander of the Netherlands Forces of the Interior. «It was clear,» said the Allied officer, «that these soldiers feared the war would be over before they could get a chance to kill any Nazis. They jumped at the chance — literally.»

This headquarters disclosed also that exact information about many German gun positions had been obtained from the Dutch people. As a result, emplacements dangerous to the success of the airborne invasion were neutralized by bombers before the troops parachuted. (OWI)

R.A.F. ATTACKS - TIRPITZ - AGAIN

LONDON, September 19 — RAF Lancasters last Friday made a surprise attack on the German battleship Tirpitz lying in a Norwegian fjord, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

The Lancasters carried out the attack without fighter cover and without loss. Their six-ton bombs hit the German battleship, but an intense smoke screen made detailed observation of the results difficult. (Reuter)

R.N. COASTAL FORCES SINK THREE E-BOATS

LONDON, September 19 — Three German E-boats were sunk last night 35 miles north of Dunkirk by the British frigate HMS Stayner and light coastal forces, the Admiralty announced tonight.

One of the E-boats was hit repeatedly by gunfire and finally sunk by the frigate. The other two E-boats were intercepted and engaged by motor torpedoboats, which sank them after an action fought at close-range.

All the British ships returned safely to harbor, one having suffered several casualties. (Reuter)

ROTGEN CITIZENS BECOME AMENABLE TO A.M.G.

NEW YORK, September 19 — «The majority of the 3,000 inhabitants of Rotgen, first German town captured by the Americans, turned down an opportunity to leave», said the New York Herald Tribune today, quoting a despatch sent by Russel Hill, its correspondent in Rotgen.

The reasons von Rundstedt gave were: first, the Allies' complete masters of the air; second, the skillful and large-scale employment of Allied parachute and airborne troops; third, the flexible and well-directed support of the land troops by ships and artillery; fourth, the rehearsal of Allied units for their task, and their most precise knowledge of the coast; and, fifth, the swift building up of superiority in numbers and material on the beachhead in just a few days. BELGIAN PATRIOTS TAKE 5,000 PRISONERS

SHAEF, September 19 (UNN) — More than 5,000 prisoners have been taken by Belgian Patriots, it was disclosed here today.

It was also revealed that during the German occupation, Belgian Patriots derailed 975 locomotives and wagons and destroyed 83 trains; cut railway lines in at least 1,000 places; cut hundreds of telephone cables; and damaged bridges, lock gates, turntables, and pumping stations. They also attacked 300 industrial targets.

In all of these operations, they had only 75 casualties. (PWB)

DUTCH COMMANDOS IN AIRBORNE ATTACK

WITH ALLIED FORCES, NETHERLANDS, September 19 «Substantial numbers» of Dutch Commandos joined with Allied airborne troops in the landings on Netherlands soil, it was disclosed here today.

Allied officers said their services had been offered by Prince Bernhard, commander of the Netherlands Forces of the Interior. «It was clear,» said the Allied officer, «that these soldiers feared the war would be over before they could get a chance to kill any Nazis. They jumped at the chance — literally.»

This headquarters disclosed also that exact information about many German gun positions had been obtained from the Dutch people. As a result, emplacements dangerous to the success of the airborne invasion were neutralized by bombers before the troops parachuted. (OWI)

DE GAULLE VISITS F.F.I. HEADQUARTERS

ALGIERS, September 19 — General de Gaulle, accompanied by Andre Diethelm, French Minister of War, left Bordeaux by air Monday morning for Cognac, whence he proceeded by road to Saintes, said Algiers French National Radio.

Monday evening, De Gaulle visited the headquarters of the French Forces of the Interior for Southwestern France, and conferred with the leaders of the FFI, the radio added. (PWB)

5TH ARMY WITHIN 30 MILES OF BOLOGNA

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 19 — American forces of Lt. General Mark Clark's 5th Army have seized three dominating fortress peaks of the enemy Goth Line in the first great success of their eight-day, frontal assault on the German Apennine positions guarding Bologna and the great Valley of the Po, it was announced here today.

In fierce, bloody fighting, as bitter as any in the hard-fought Italian campaign, the American forces have battled their way up steep, heavily-defended mountain slopes to capture the towering, fortified crests of three peaks dominating southern sections of the mountain roads to Bologna and Imola, and only 20 miles south of Bologna itself, one of the oldest and most prosperous cities in Italy. British and Indian troops of the 5th Army, flanking the American thrust, contributed materially to the success of the assault, it was stated.

Eighth Army troops, widening their bridgehead across the Marano River to a front of 10 miles, yesterday entered the tiny Republic of San Marino at Faetano, on the easternmost of the 38-square-mile state's entrance roads. Allied forces were reported to have penetrated a distance of a mile toward the capital city of San Marino by Sunday evening.

German forces already massed within the borders of the tiny neutral state launched several counter-attacks in the area of Le Grotte, a small village about a mile northwest of Faetano. A captured German testified that all enemy reinforcements for this inland sector passed through San Marino.

Although heavy fighting still raged around the hilltop town of San Martino, Monte L'Abate, overlooking the port of Rimini, Canadian troops penetrated enemy positions west of San Martino to reach the banks of the Ausa River at a point three miles southwest of the Adriatic terminus of the Po Valley road and rail network. Farther southwest, British troops crossed the Ausa River at two places, with tanks and infantry forces, and the Monte Olivo ridge, dominating the upper reaches of the small stream, passed completely into Allied hands with the disorganization of enemy forces at Cerasolo, a mile and a half to the northeast.

5th Holds Watershed

With the capture of the three peaks of Monte Pratone, Monte Alturzo, and Monte Ceili, General Clark's forces have reached the highest point in the Apennine range between Florence and Bologna to the north. Monte Pratone, more than 3,800 feet high, is the watershed of the range in this sector, and dominates the upper stretches of the Santerno River, running northeast into the Po plain at Imola.

Two of the captured heights, Monte Alturzo and Monte Ceili, flank the road from Florence to Firenzuola at a point five miles south of this road junction town, where the mountain highway winds through tortuous defiles known as Il Giogo — the yoke — just before entering a narrow valley formed by two tributaries of the upper Santerno. Monte Pratone, highest of the captured peaks, is about three miles to the east of the pass. All three peaks lie about six to nine miles southeast of the Futa Pass, where the main Goth Line defenses guard the direct road north to Bologna.

The capture of the three main heights along one of the five roads through the Apennines in the sector north of Florence is the first gain announced by the 5th Army since September 13, when it was reported that 5th and 8th Army forces advancing north of Florence had reached the threshhold of two of the five main passes through the heart of the German mountain defense zone. Neither of these two passes was identified.

American forces are now some 22 miles northeast of Florence, and have reached the northernmost point of the Allied advance. Additional gains were reported in the central and coastal sectors of the 5th Army, particularly in the Serchio River Valley.

On the Adriatic coast, Greek troops reached the northern end of the Rimini airfield, after overcoming German pillboxes mounting Panther tank 88-mm. gun turrets, sited all over the field to guard the southern approaches to Rimini. Desert Air Force bombers demolished many of these strong positions with direct, pin-point hits, some of them effected with 1,000-pound bombs only 400 yards in advance of foremost Allied troops. SHUTTLE-BOMBERS ARRIVE AT ITALIAN FIELDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 19 — Flying Fortresses of the 8th AAF landed at Italian bases this afternoon on the second leg of a shuttle flight in which they carried supplies from England to Polish Patriots fighting in Warsaw, it was announced here this afternoon.

The bombers, which left England yesterday, bombed targets in Hungary on their flight from Russia to Italy.

Fifteenth AAF Liberators today bombed two bridges at Kraljevo and Mitrovica on the north-south rail line through Serbia from Macedonia and Greece, it was announced. Only one enemy aircraft was encountered by the bombers and their escort of Lightning fighters. (PRO)

THREE 15TH AAF COMMANDERS MADE BRIGADIERS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 19 — The commanders of three Liberator bomber wings of the 15th AAF have been promoted to the rank of brigadier generals after confirmation by the U. S. Senate, it was announced here today.

The three, who formerly held the rank of colonel, are Brig. Gens. George A. Acheson, who was once a private in the U. S. Army, and Hugo P. Rush and Fay R. Upthegrove. (PRO)

ALLIED LABOR LEADERS VISIT 5TH ARMY FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 19 — The four labor leaders of Great Britain and the United States who have been studying Italian labor conditions visited the 5th Army front today.

The four — Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor, George Baldanzi of the C.I.O., and Thomas O'Brien and Will Lawther of the British Trades Union Congress — were shown the deep defenses of the Goth Line, into which American troops have now fought their way. (PRO)

GERMANS IN YUGOSLAVIA TRYING TO ESCAPE

LONDON, September 19 — Between 17 and 20 German divisions remaining in eastern Yugoslavia and northern Greece are today moving northward in an attempt to reach Hungary by way of Skulpje, Nis, and Belgrade, a Reuter correspondent in Sofia wrote today.

Russian forces advancing across northern Bulgaria, along a line roughly parallel with the Danube River, threaten to cut off German escape roads between Nis and Belgrade. Marshal Tito's forces are operating against German lines of communication and are seriously hampering the German withdrawal.

The Bulgarian Army is engaged in fierce fighting with German divisions detailed to cover the eastern flank of the escape corridor.

Another Russian force is reported to be threatening the northeastern flank of German troops in Greece by their operations on the rail line directly north of Salonika. (Reuter)

RED ARMY REOPENS BALTIC OFFENSIVE GAINS 25 MILES ON 75-MILE FRONT

MOSCOW, September 19 — Red Army troops pushing forward in a new offensive had gained 25 miles on a 75-mile front southeast of the Latvian capital of Riga tonight.

RED ARMY REOPENS BALTIC OFFENSIVE GAINS 25 MILES ON 75-MILE FRONT

MOSCOW, September 19 — Red Army troops pushing forward in a new offensive had gained 25 miles on a 75-mile front southeast of the Latvian capital of Riga tonight.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said that General Bagramyan's forces of the 1st Baltic Front began their new drive four days ago, and that, with strong artillery and aircraft support, they have overrun the towns of Baiska, Iecava and Jaunjelgava, and 2,000 other populated places.

Still another order of the day announced the fall of Valga, Estonian rail junction city 87 miles northeast of Riga. Thus, the Red Army presses toward the sea in its efforts to annihilate the remnants of 30 German divisions trapped in the Latvian-Estonian pocket. Stalin's order said German defenses were deeply staggered.

Reuter said tonight that the whole area is pitted, scarred, and blackened by day and night battles, and that strewn wreckage of German panzers lies everywhere. The German News Agency said that the Russians are within 16 miles of Riga.

Except for further gains of Russian and Rumanian troops in northern Transylvania, the Soviet communique said action over the rest of the Russo-German front was limited to reconnaissance. The BBC said earlier that another 30 populated places had been captured by Red Army units operating out of southern Poland toward central Slovakia.

General Bor's Partisans in Warsaw reported German artillery fire of lessening intensity within the beleaguered city. More food and ammunition have been dropped by Flying Fortresses. Russian shelling and aerial bombardment of German positions continued on a large scale.

The Finnish radio reported clashes between German and Russian forces on the far-northern Finnish frontier. The radio added that the civilian population of Lapland is being evacuated to Sweden to get it out of the way of oncoming battles.

The latest gains of Russian troops in Transylvania put General Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army in the city of Temisoara, 30 miles from the Hungarian border, and on the main railway line running northward into Budapest. Malinovsky is now well into the central European plain, and in position for a major drive across central Europe toward the Hungarian capital.

The Red Air Force carried out a massed raid on Budapest last night, starting many large fires, the Soviet communique said. Other Russian aircraft raided the town of Csap, hitting trains and ammunition dumps, and starting more than 30 fires and several explosions, one of them "of great strength." (Reuter)

RUSSIAN-FINNISH ARMISTICE SIGNED

MOSCOW, September 19 — The armistice between Russia and Finland was signed here today, the Soviet radio reported.

Late tonight the Finnish Acting Prime Minister, in a special broadcast, announced the terms of the armistice. The main points are:

Finnish troops will immediately withdraw to the 1940 frontier. The seaport of Petsamo is to be given up, and the Pokala Peninsula and a parallel line of land on the Gulf of Finland are to be leased to the Soviet Union for 50 years.

Airfields in south and southwest Finland, as well as the Finnish merchant fleet, will be placed temporarily at the disposal of the Allies.

German troops still in Finland are to be disarmed, and the Finnish Army will be placed on a peace-time footing.

Finland will pay an indemnity of 300 million dollars to the Soviet Union over a period of six years.

Radio Moscow also announced that the condition of Finnish Premier Antti Hackzell had taken a turn for the worse, and his condition was described as serious. Hackzell suffered a paralytic stroke shortly after arriving in Moscow to conduct the armistice negotiations. (BBC-Reuter)

CZECHOSLOVAKS ATTACK NAZI COMMUNICATIONS

LONDON, September 19 — Czechoslovak forces launched a counter-attack against German strongpoints in Slovakia between Vrutcky and St. Martin, vital sectors on the main German escape railway from Budapest to Berlin, the Czechoslovak communique announced today. Czechoslovak forces are gaining ground, despite strong German opposition.

In the Nitra Valley, two German attacks were thrown back with a loss of five German tanks and three dive-bombers which were supporting ground operations.

Operations continue to the east in the Hron Valley and a German attempt to counter-attack was frustrated with heavy losses.

The Swedish paper Morgontidningen reported today that a large number of Austrians and workers and deserters from the German Army in Austria have crossed into Czechoslovakia to join Patriot forces. JAPS CLOSE ON KWEILIN; STILWELL REOPENING BURMA

CHUNGKING, September 19 — Japanese troops were reported tonight to have made further gains into Kwangsi Province in their effort to capture the defense base of southern China, the city of Kweilin.

The Chinese High Command said Japanese forces were within 40 miles of the city on the northeast, while another Japanese column, approaching from the east, had reached the suburbs of Kwanyang, 51 miles away.

This Japanese drive, in the face of which American airfields and operating personnel have been moved westward, threatens to cut China in halves.

That would be the immediate tactical effect of a Japanese juncture at Kweilin; but Japanese inability to maintain long supply lines over Chinese territory would make even capture of the city of little long-term strategic importance to the battle of China.

Chinese troops were reported tonight to be building pillboxes and other defenses around Kweilin, in determination to beat off the forthcoming assault.

Meanwhile, the campaign of General Joseph Stilwell's 14th Army in northern Burma was entering a new phase tonight as American engineers pushed their construction of the Ledo Road toward Myitkyina. Thus far, they have put down 238 miles of roadbed from India toward China, and they were laying the last of a 33-mile stretch into Myitkyina today.

This road is to be the Bange-on-Mandalay by-pass into Kunming and the heart of China, joining with the old Burma Road in the area of recently retaken Lungling.

It was recalled here today that General Stilwell vowed, after his defeat in Burma in 1942, to return to blast the Japanese out — and to avenge what he described as "a hell of a beating" suffered by his forces on their long retreat into India.

Aircraft supporting the campaign to free Burma today blasted Japanese rail lines and positions around Prome, on the left bank of the Irrawaddy River, less than 150 miles north of Rangoon. (OWI)

POSTHUMOUS MEDAL OF HONOR AWARDED

WASHINGTON, September 19 — The War Department announced today the posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor to Sgt. Troy McGill, who fought to his death to hold a vital position in Los Negros Island in the Admiralty Group.

In the early hours of March 4 last, McGill, with eight men, occupied a trench which bore the brunt of a furious attack by about 200 drink-crazed Japanese troops. MARSHALL SAYS CAMPAIGN NOT YET AT FULL FURY

CHICAGO, September 19 — General George C. Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff, told the American Legion convention here yesterday that there are now more than four million Americans in war zones, and that their numbers will soon be heavily increased.

Marshall said more than 60 divisions have been committed to combat, in addition to one million Air Force men in 1,000 squadrons. Besides these, he said, there are newly-trained squadrons of Super Fortress personnel ready to take the field for long-range destruction of Japan.

The general said that any doubts the Germans may have had "about our military competence or willingness to fight will soon be dispelled in an unmistakable and final manner."

Marshall declared that the Allies are determined to increase the size and fury of their attacks. "The pressure on the enemies," he said, "must not be eased for a single moment, until their last squad is battered into a state of helplessness."

The American Chief of Staff said that success has been made possible only by Allied coordination — coordination of the armies of Russia, the British Empire, the United States, and China. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

ALLIES WIN BATTLE AGAINST MALARIA

ROME, September 19 — The Allies have won another important battle in Italy, inflicting a heavy defeat on the Germans and on the ally recruited by the enemy for behind-the-lines sabotage — the malaria-bearing anopheles mosquito.

The Allied victory was achieved «despite the chaos of total war and all that the Germans could do to intensify the malaria potential,» reported Colonel Paul F. Russell of the U. S. Army, chief malariologist of the Allied Control Commission. Colonel Russel is on leave to the Army from the Rockefeller Foundation.

In announcing the Allied victory over the two enemies, he said the Germans had sent two well-known Nazi entomologists into areas which the Italians over a period of years had drained of mosquito-breeding places. Soon after their visit the German Army reflooded the reclaimed marshes, thus increasing the spread of malaria.

The Germans did succeed in trebling and quadrupling the malaria rate among Italian civilians in some areas but the prompt work of Allied medical officers and engineers saved thousands of lives among the civilian population and the Allied soldiers, Colonel Russel stated.

Effects of German Sabotage

«In the Pontine Marshes and the Agro Romano areas, malaria rates have been higher than for many years. This has been directly due to German sabotage with consequent flooding of the reclaimed marsh areas. The season of maximum malaria-mosquito breeding had arrived before the area could be entered by the ACC. Mines, booby traps, lack of transport, complete disruption of civil organization, the return of infected refugees, the destruction of screening, — these and other factors have made it impossible to carry out more than palliative measures.

«However, by September 1, several thousand hectares of land had been drained, airplane larvicriding was being done at Ostia and Terracina, tons of Paris green dusted, and over five million atabrine tablets distributed.

«The situation, bad as it had been, might have been infinitely worse, with complete paralysis of civilian reconstruction activity and serious malaria in Rome itself.»

In a report to the ACC covering the nine-month period beginning January 1, Colonel Russel stated:

Colonel Russel reported that the Germans turned the clock back 60 years for the Italian people when they deliberately sabotaged the extensive reclamation projects begun in 1887. The report to the ACC declared:

«One of the great tragedies of the war has been the systematic destruction by the German Army of the great land reclamation projects or bonifiche of Italy. Not only has this smashing of pumps, blocking and mining of canals, and deliberate reverse diversion of sea and river water greatly increased the breeding of anopheles malaria mosquitoes. It has also driven from their homes thousands of peasants; has flooded thousands of acres of farm land, and has set back disastrously the economy of vast areas. The area of farm land in south Italy flooded by the Germans is estimated at 37,000 hectares, or 93,000 acres. This figure includes only the areas south of Rome.

«This wanton destruction did not hamper Allied transport, but it dealt a terrible blow to the Italian peasants and it increased the malaria potential enormously. It is no exaggeration to say that in some areas, as in the Agro Romano, the appearance of the land when the Germans were driven back was what it had been in 1880 before the earliest advances in land reclamation had been made.»

Colonel Russell paid tribute to the soundness of Italian engineering in the land reclamation projects which made the speedy action, stimulated by the ACC, more effective in achieving considerable salvage. «But complete recovery must await pumps not now available in Italy. It will then take some years for the land to sweeten again.» (UNN)

ANOTHER RAILWAY LINE RESTORED

ROME, September 19 — The Taranto-Gioia railway line has been put into service again, it was announced today by the Ministry of Communications.

From Gioia another line runs to Bari.

Daily passenger train service will soon be started between Metaponto and Reggio Calabria. (UNN)

ITALIAN PARACHUTE SILK SENT TO ENGLAND

ROME, September 19 — Ten tons of parachute silk from Calabria weaving sheds has been shipped to England and from 15 to 20 additional tons will follow soon as part of Italy's contribution to the United Nations' war effort, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

Silk factories in southern Italy were able to resume production after silkworms had been imported from Turkey by plane. (UNN)

U.S.A. OFFICERS «FATHERS» TO REFUGEE CHILDREN

BARI, September 20 — Three American medical officers have become «fathers» to a group of 33 battle-shocked refugee children, whom they have restored to health after the children literally rushed into the arms of American soldiers while fleeing from their Nazi pursuers.

The parents of the children have all been killed by the Germans in Italy, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Poland, Greece, and Yugoslavia.

Today, the children are safe from the Germans in liberated southern Italy, where they are students at an agricultural school financed by an American philanthropic organization. It was at this school that the doctors found the children, practically all of whom were suffering from malnutrition, nervous exhaustion, and battle hysteria. Some of the children had hidden from the Nazis for as long as a year in the immediate vicinity of the battle line, until rescued by American soldiers.

The three American medical officers volunteered to spend their free time with the children when they discover-

LIBERATED ITALY

ALLIES WIN BATTLE AGAINST MALARIA

ROME, September 19 — The Allies have won another important battle in Italy, inflicting a heavy defeat on the Germans and on the ally recruited by the enemy for behind-the-lines sabotage — the malaria-bearing anopheles mosquito.

The Allied victory was achieved «despite the chaos of total war and all that the Germans could do to intensify the malaria potential,» reported Colonel Paul F. Russell of the U. S. Army, chief malariologist of the Allied Control Commission. Colonel Russel is on leave to the Army from the Rockefeller Foundation.

In announcing the Allied victory over the two enemies, he said the Germans had sent two well-known Nazi entomologists into areas which the Italians over a period of years had drained of mosquito-breeding places. Soon after their visit the German Army reflooded the reclaimed marshes, thus increasing the spread of malaria.

The Germans did succed in trebling and quadrupling the malaria rate among Italian civilians in some areas but the prompt work of Allied medical officers and engineers saved thousands of lives among the civilian population and the Allied soldiers, Colonel Russel stated.

«In the Pontine Marshes and the Agro Romano areas, malaria rates have been higher than for many years. This has been directly due to German sabotage with consequent flooding of the reclaimed marsh areas. The season of maximum malaria-mosquito breeding had arrived before the area could be entered by the ACC. Mines, booby traps, lack of transport, complete disruption of civil organization, the return of infected refugees, the destruction of screening, — these and other factors have made it impossible to carry out more than palliative measures.

«However, by September 1, several thousand hectares of land had been drained, airplane larviciding was being done at Ostia and Terracina, tons of Paris green dusted, and over five million atabrine tablets distributed.

«The situation, bad as it had been, might have been infinitely worse, with complete paralysis of civilian reconstruction activity and serious malaria in Rome itself.»

In a report to the ACC covering the nine-month period beginning January 1, Colonel Russel stated:

«The results of the intensive malaria-control program of ACC correlated with military malaria control have kept this disease effectively in check in Sicily, Sardinia, and southern Italy (below the Pontine areas), although the malaria potential was much greater than normal.»

Examples of how well the ACC malaria program operated were Sardinia and Foggia, where the incidence of malaria has been from one-third to one-half that of 1943.

No civilian in liberated Italy suffering from malaria in 1944 went untreated because of the lack of specific medicines. More than 11,000,000 atabrine tablets from the United States were made available to civilians through the U. S. Army's Medical Supply Branch in cooperation with ACC's Malaria Control Branch. In addition, 125,000 ampoules of quinine were set aside for civilian use. This supply was augmented by drugs captured from the Germans and by moderate amount of quinine and Italchina remaining to local authorities from 1943.

With the aid of the Italian Government in liberated Italy, the drug supplies were made available to every provincial capital south of the battle-line. The civilian government cooperated in cleaning and redigging 2,000,000 meters of canals, draining 20,000 hectares of flooded land, repairing or replacing 15 pump units, applying 20 tons of Paris green, and applying 200,000 gallons of oil.

The three American medical officers volunteered to spend their free time with the children when they discovered the school.

The children, ranging in age from seven to 15, were treated by one of the officers for all their medical ills, while another put them through a series of treatments for the battle shock, fear and hysteria the children suffered after their experiences — particularly in the cases of those who had witnessed the cruelties imposed on their parents by the Germans. The third officer planned and supervised the installation of a sanitary system for the school to safeguard the children's health.

Now the doctors spend all their spare time with the children, who are responding to treatment and soon will be able to carry on as normal children. (UNN)

In Catania, Sicily, one offender was sentenced in absentia to four years and a fine of 278,000 lire for concealing wheat and other cereals. A second got one year, and was fined 265,000 lire.

In Naples, four persons were arrested and 35 others were reported to the police for offenses of the same nature. (UNN)

CARUSO TRIAL TO BE RESUMED

ROME, September 19 — The trial of Pietro Caruso, charged with handing over 50 Italian political prisoners to the Germans for murder in the Ardeatine Caves, will be resumed at an early date.

Meanwhile, an autopsy was performed today on the body of Donato Carretta, in the presence of the Crown Attorney. The results of the post mortem are expected to be announced shortly, police stated.

Carretta, the state's principal witness in the trial of Caruso, was dragged from the Palace of Justice yesterday by a frenzied mob and slugged and beaten before his unconscious body was thrown into the Tiber. The body was later retrieved and hung at the entrance to the Regina Coeli Prison, where he formerly served as warden.

An official Italian Government statement issued late last night said that adequate police protection would be provided when the trial is resumed. It was also stated that a thorough investigation would be made of the mob violence and reported lack of control over the courtroom spectators.

It was reported late last night that the inmates of the Regina Coeli Prison attempted to stage another demonstration within the jail but were suppressed by police. (UNN)

THREE ARDEATINE CAVES BODIES IDENTIFIED

ROME, September 19 — Three Fosse Ardeatine bodies have been identified as the remains of Navy Lieutenants Fiorenzo Semini, Agostino Napolitano, and Augusto Zironi, it was announced here today.

On September 8, the three officers left a north Italy naval base and came to Rome. After several vain attempts to pass through the German lines, they joined the Underground Movement against the Nazis. In March, they were arrested by the SS and taken to Via Tasso, where they were cruelly tortured, and on the 24th of the same month, along with some 320 other hostages, they were assassinated by the Germans. TWO CZECH CABINET MINISTERS RESIGN

LONDON, September 19 — General Sergei Ingr, commander-in-chief of the Czechoslovak armed forces, and General Rudolf Viest, commander of the Czechoslovak 1st Army, have resigned their posts in the Czechoslovak Government, in which they were Minister of Defense and Minister of State, respectively.

Deputy Prime Minister Jan Masaryk, who already holds the portfolio of Foreign Affairs, is temporarily taking the post of National Defense.

The changes in the Czechoslovak Cabinet were announced tonight by Msgr. Jan Sramek, the Prime Minister, with the approval of Dr. Edward Benes, the Czechoslovak said «any change in the national administration next January will involve no change in the military leadership of the war.»

«What this election campaign will do,» he continued, «is to prove to our enemies that we can fight total war and speed the final victory. It will drive home to Japan — and to Germany — the bitter lesson that every day they delay their surrender will make more onerous the terms of their defeat.» (Reuter)

U.S. MINISTER TO SYRIA AND LEBANON NAMED

WASHINGTON, September 19 — President Franklin D. Roosevelt today nominated George Wadsworth to be the first United States Minister to the Lebanese and Syrian republics.

Wadsworth has been in diplomatic work at Beirut and Damascus, and worked with the U. S. State Department at Istanbul, Sofia, and Cairo.

The United States has not had a diplomatic representative to Syria or Lebanon, as they were formerly mandated territories under French protection.

Announcing the recognition of the Syrian and Lebanese republics by the American Government, Secretary of State Cordell Hull stated:

«The recognition of the independence of Syria and Lebanon is a matter of gratification to the people and government of the United States. The eventual right of Syria and Lebanon to independence was recognized by the terms of the mandate entrusted to France.

«Since the proclamation, issued at Damascus and at Beirut, regarding their independence, effective powers have been transferred to the governments of both countries, subject to the exigencies of war.» (OWI)

AUSTRALIAN LEND-LEASE TO U.S. INCREASED

CANBERRA, September 19 — It was officially stated here yesterday that reciprocal lend-lease by Australia to the United States had been set at 355,300,000 dollars for the fiscal year ending 30 June 1945.

This will bring to 902,400,000 dollars the amount allotted to United States troops in Australia since the war. (OWI)

COSTA RICA-PANAMA BOUNDARY AGREEMENT

WASHINGTON, September 19 — «The presidents of Costa Rica and Panama are meeting today at a point near the border of their two countries to celebrate an auspicious event — the final demarcation of their common boundary,» said Secretary of State Cordell Hull in a statement today.

«As a tribute to the collaboration of the Chilean adviser to the boundary commissions, they have selected today, a Chilean national holiday, to celebrate the conclusion of this task. In arriving by mutual agreement at a definitive settlement of this old and difficult problem, the governments of Costa Rica and Panama have not only shown great statesmanship, but have also demonstrated the effectiveness of the inter-American principle of the settlement of disputes by peaceful means, and have provided another example of the practical value of hemisphere solidarity and cooperation. WAR IN EUROPE TO END THIS YEAR, DEWEY SAYS

SEATTLE, September 19 — Thomas E. Dewey, Republican candidate for the Presidency of the United States, said last night that it seemed already clear that this year would see the end of the war in Europe. He continued, in part:

"As we have so long wanted to do, we shall be able to throw all of our energy and might into the war in the Pacific."

Stating that the elections in the United States would not hinder the forward march to victory, and paying high tribute to the military leadership in the Far East, Dewey Cordell Hull said:

"The recognition of the independence of Syria and Lebanon is a matter of gratification to the people and government of the United States. The eventual right of Syria and Lebanon to independence was recognized by the terms of the mandate entrusted to France.

ARMED REBELLION SPREADS IN DENMARK

LONDON, September 19 — A full revolt of Danish Patriots was said tonight to have broken out in Copenhagen. Reuter dispatches from Stockholm said that fighting between Danes and Nazi troops occurred in other Danish cities since noon today, and that clashes continued.

Telephoned reports to Stockholm said late tonight that dead bodies were to be seen everywhere on the streets of Copenhagen. Ferry and air connections with Sweden have been broken. One news source said a new general strike has been proclaimed, to begin tomorrow morning.

Late this afternoon, Danish police were still holding out under German fire in the castle of Amalienborg, where the royal family is living. The Danish Press Service said German efforts to storm the buildings were resisted bitterly, and that fighting — described as a great struggle — continued late today.

Other dispatches from Stockholm said the Germans had occupied all Government building, including Parliament quarters and all police stations, shortly before noon.

Simultaneously, the Germans decreed a state of emergency throughout the nation. This action came on the heels of the two-day strike (which ended late yesterday) in protest over the removal of Danish political prisoners from Danish territory to the Reich.

Reuter said the Nazi state-of-emergency decree provides the death penalty for unauthorized possession of firearms, and prohibits all movement of motor cars without Nazi-issued permits.

The decree accused Danish policemen of having assisted saboteurs. (OWI - Reuter)

300,000 MURDERED AT MINSK BY NAZIS

MOSCOW, September 19 — The Soviet Commission of Enquiry into German Atrocities reports that more than 300,000 persons were murdered at Minsk by the Germans. The victims included thousands of prisoners of war. They were killed by carbon monoxide gas, shooting, and starvation.

Among those named as being responsible for the atrocities are the German commandant of Minsk, Lt. General P. D. Specring; SS Police Chiefs Schlager and Strauss; and the commander of the 18th Motorized Division, Lt. General Schubagen.

A member of the commission wrote in the Soviet Army newspaper Red Star, today:

"Hitler, and all those guilty of these monstrous crimes, will suffer in full measure the punishment they deserve."

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 19 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

The day has again been characterised by extremely heavy fighting in the central and Adriatic sectors of the front of the Allied Armies in Italy.

American troops of the 5th Army have made significant gains north of Florence, and have captured another key feature — Monte Pratone.

In the Adriatic sector, British and Canadian troops of the 8th Army have considerably enlarged their bridgehead over the River Marano, and have captured the villages of Cerasolo and Faetano.

Navy:

Allied light coastal craft continued to harass the enemy convoys moving close in-shore in the Gulf of Genoa. Two engagements took place on the night of 16/17 September, an F-lighter being sunk in each case. On each occasion, there was heavy return fire from the enemy which caused no casualties and only superficial damage to one boat. Thanks to these constant and successful attacks, the Germans are finding it more and more difficult to supply their armies by sea.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked rail yards and bridges in northeastern Yugoslavia and central Hungary.

Medium bombers and fighter-bombers were active against rail and road communications in the Po Valley, as well as troop concentrations, gun positions, and strong-points in the battle area.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and the Adriatic. Other aircraft attacked communications in Yugoslavia.

From these operations, 11 of our aircraft are missing.

Opposition to the advance of our ground troops was stubborn.

In the area west of Antwerp, Allied troops, now fighting on Dutch soil, are advancing in spite of stiff opposition.

Fighting continues in Boulogne, where we have made further progress into the town.

In southern Holland, our troops advanced northwest of Maastricht against resistance from enemy infantry, artillery, and dug-in tanks.

Elements further east have reached Ubachsberg and Simpelfeld against moderate resistance.

In Aachen, hard fighting continues. Southeast of the city, we have cleared the town of Bushach, and units northeast have met strong opposition.

The mopping up of the Germans is in progress east of Rotger, across the border from Eupen, and we have captured Hofen.

East of Saint Vith, our forces in Germany are meeting stiffening resistance and increasing artillery fire.

Brandscheid has been taken, and we have advanced to Hontheim, nine kilometers east of the border.

Our armored units moving across the Luxembourg-German frontier have taken the town of Huttingen.

In the Moselle Valley, we have further reinforced our troops to the east of the river.

West of the Belfort Gap, our troops, in an advance of more than eight kilometers eastward from Loup-sur-Semouse, have entered the town of Fougerolles. An enemy attack near Pont de Roide was repulsed.

According to reports so far received, 32 enemy aircraft were destroyed in Monday's overall air operations. Thirty-three of our fighters are missing.

MOSCOW, September 19 — Tonight's communique:

Land:

During today, troops of the 3rd Pre-Baltic Front, launching their offensive, broke through the enemy defence, and captured the town and important railway junction of Valga, mighty strong-point of the German defence in the southern part of Estonia, and also occupied in fighting over 200 other populated localities, including the town of Sirva and the localities of Taude, Alma, Borzula, Lepe, Irzhe, Golumuzhe, and Lielkiene.

East of Riga, our troops captured the town and railway junction of Plavina, and also occupied in fighting over 600 other populated localities, including Berena, Loizdun, Jaugulidiene, Sesviene, Jaunulidienda, Ledre, Ishry, and Ochuzene, and the railway stations of Elste, Jaunulidiene, Degas, and Trinchevo.

Troops of the 1st Pre-Baltic Front, launching their offensive with support of massive blows of artillery and aviation, broke through the strongly and deeply-echeloned enemy defence southeast of Riga, and during the four days of offensive, advanced up to 40 kilometers, expanding the break-through up to 120 kilometers in frontage. In the course of their offensive, troops of this front captured the following important streng-points of the Germans: Bauska, Iecava, Vesmuiza, and on the river of the West Dvina, Jaunielgava and Petava, and also occupied in fighting over 2,000 other populated localities, including Kurmene, Patslame, Bardelesh, and Utash, and the railway stations of Jaucieva, Palsuban, Lapetish, Podsmuzhe, and Mitajershava.

West of Jelgava (Metavia), our troops successfully beat back enemy tank and infantry attacks, inflicting on the enemy heavy losses in men and material.

In the western part of Rumania, our troops, jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied the city and important railway junction of Timisoara.

On all other sectors of the front, patrol activities and

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 19 — Today's communique:

The landing of Allied airborne troops in Holland continued yesterday. Supplies were also landed, and our positions strengthened and consolidated.

The operations are proceeding, and in one area, our ground forces have already linked up with the airborne troops.

In advance of the airborne operations, fighters and fighter-bombers attacked flak boats and positions, troops, and transports.

Other fighters maintained patrols and provided escort and cover for transport aircraft and gliders.

More than 70 flak boats and positions were put out of action.

Many motor and horse-drawn vehicles were destroyed, and an ammunition dump was blown up.

In the Moselle Valley, we have further reinforced our troops to the east of the river.

During September 18, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 121 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 21 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 18/19, our long-range Air Force carried out massive raids on the capital of Hungary, Budapest, and on the town and railway junction of Csap, located 25 kilometers south of Uzhorod.

Military freight trains and warehouses of the Germans and Hungarians were subjected to bombardment.

As a result of the bombardment of Budapest, over 30 fires were set, of which five were of very large size. In the area of the marshalling freight station, by direct bomb hits two warehouses of war material were blown up; also, big explosions were observed in the area of the North Freight Station.

On the railway junction of Csap 16 fires were started by bombardment.

In the western and eastern parts of the railway junction, railway cars and platforms were burning. Amongst the fires, several explosions were observed, of which one was of large size. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 19 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots are continuing their attacks behind the German lines. Isolated enemy patrols were captured or scattered in Emilia and in Liguria. German prisoners declared that highway and railway traffic has been made extremely difficult because of Patriot activity.

Near Feltre, a car belonging to the General Staff was ambushed. Seven German officers were killed, three wounded and taken prisoner.

Patriots planted a bomb in the offices of the Fascist Party of Bologna. The explosion completely destroyed the building. Three Fascist militiamen were killed and others wounded.

At Milan, the Germans took 250 hostages, whom they threaten to shoot following the killing of 25 German soldiers. The Archbishop of Milan has taken steps to try to prevent this new massacre.

Manganiello, a noted Fascist hierarch, who had recently ordered savage atrocities against the civilian population, was captured by Patriots while he was seeking to escape to the north. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 19 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In central Holland, the enemy has reinforced his troops employed in the rear front areas by new landings of airborne forces. Our own attacks against the landing points are slowly gaining ground against stiff enemy resistance.

From the Neerpelt bridgehead, the enemy pushed north with strong armored forces and has entered the town of Eindhoven. 40 tanks were destroyed in bitter fighting.

Northwest of Aix-la-Chapelle, the enemy, in spite of strong artillery and tank support, could achieve only small gains in territory. West and south of the town, all attacks were repulsed.

In the Luneville area, our own counter-attacks are making satisfactory progress.

Only local fighting activity is reported from the remaining sectors of the front.

Yesterday, too, the enemy, supported by strong artillery and air forces, attacked Boulogne and Brest. In Boulogne, he succeeded after fierce fighting in entering the town. He was, however, soon dislodged from several battery positions. The town and harbor of Brest were left in ruins. The surviving garrison retreated toward the Le Crozon Peninsula, and is still fighting on.

Enemy attacks directed at Lorient and St. Nazaire were frustrated.

From its base, at the mouth of the Gironde, a German battalion raided the town of Royan and destroyed large fuel and ammunition depots of the enemy there.

Italy:

In Italy, heavy defensive battles continue with undiminished fury, in the area north of Florence and on the Adriatic coast. In the course of this fighting, the enemy scored penetrations through our lines, which were sealed off. The intended break-through yesterday was also frustrated.

Hard fighting, with heavy losses on both sides, is continuing.

Eastern Front:

In the northwest corner of Rumania, counter-attacks of [illegible] units threw back the enemy into

At Thorenburg, and in the Szekler salient, attacks of several Soviet infantry divisions were frustrated.

At Sanok and Krosno, renewed enemy attacks were also repulsed by counter-attacks. At one point, 24 enemy tanks, which had succeeded in breaking through, were knocked out.

Northeast of Warsaw, all Soviet attacks failed.

Southwest of Mitau, our troops destroyed 28 enemy tanks in defensive actions against enemy counter-attacks.

In Latvia and Estonia, our hard-fighting divisions yesterday again frustrated all enemy break-through attempts. One hundred forty-nine tanks were destroyed during the last two days' fighting.

Air:

Enemy bombers launched terror attacks against Wesermünde and Budapest, as well as other localities in the Serbo-Hungarian area. Nineteen enemy aircraft were shot down by fighters and flak artillery. (Radio Berlin)

WAR FRONTS

CONTACT ESTABLISHED WITH AIRBORNE TROOPS

SHAEF, September 18 — General Miles Dempsey's British 2nd Army tonight established contact with the Allied airborne troops which landed in Holland yesterday.

Some of the forces were entirely unopposed, while others met fierce machine-gun fire. The only reinforcements the Germans were able to muster were small groups of company strength, either men just back from south of the Scheldt, or troops who had been quickly switched from one area to defend another where the danger was greater.

Allied aircraft operating in conjunction with yesterday's airborne operation lost only two bombers and 16 fighters out of the 3,000 sorties flown. It was announced that the British 7th Armored Division, the original «Desert Rats,» participated in the landings. It was also disclosed that British Hamilcars, the largest military gliders in the world, were used.

Opposition to the landings was so light that the troop carriers were parked wing tip to wing tip in orderly lines. Dutch people came out into the fields to help unload the supplies, which included tanks and anti-tank guns, armored vehicles, and jeeps.

Valkenburg Liberated

On the southern flank of General Dempsey's forces, American ground forces pushing into Holland have liberated Valkenburg, six miles beyond Maastricht.

South of this column, at the point of deepest penetration into Germany, German troops from the Russian front counter-attacked on a small scale but were repulsed. Stolberg, east of Aachen, was heavily hit by heavy Allied guns and fighter-bombers.

The Americans are grimly holding their positions 20 to 25 miles from the Rhine city of Cologne, turning back waves of strong German counter-attacks. Allied guns knocked out 14 German tanks in one attack, and stopped every German effort to regain a foothold within the Siegfried Line.

North of Trier also the Germans are strongly opposing the American advance, but engineers have virtually blown apart the Siegfried Line, effectively wrecking what it took the Germans years to build.

New penetrations into Germany have been made at the frontier town of Echternach, 20 miles northeast of the city of Luxembourg and at Hollendorf, to the northwest of Echternach.

With the breaching of the Siegfried Line, the German Army is faced with the problem of withdrawing to another line in an effort to defend Germany. The next line is the Rhine, one of the most important waterways of Europe.

CONTACT ESTABLISHED WITH AIRBORNE TROOPS

SHAEF, September 18 — General Miles Dempsey's British 2nd Army tonight established contact with the Allied airborne troops which landed in Holland yesterday. The British troops swept forward from their bridgeheads across the Scheldt-Meuse Canal in an attack closely coordinated with the airborne action.

Latest reports stated that British troops were seven miles inside Holland on the road to Eindhoven at Valkenswaard, breaking through strong German resistance. The Germans started savage counter-attacks from the surrounding woods, but formations of RAF Typhoons strafed them until their resistance ceased.

German opposition on other parts of the Escaut Canal weakened, and the British made a new crossing at an undisclosed location.

The Allied 1st Airborne Army, which landed in Holland yesterday, has captured its initial objectives and taken prisoners, according to preliminary reports received tonight. Additional airborne troops, heavy equipment, and supplies were landed by glider today to aid in consolidating the airborne troops' positions behind the German lines. There was some Luftwaffe opposition, and at least 26 German planes were shot down.

The operation is going much better than expected as to the progress and personnel losses which are the lowest ever experienced in such an airborne venture.

Within an hour after the original landing, a number of unidentified Dutch villages were taken and vital bridges, canal crossings, and rail and highway junctions were taken.

BRITISH MAKE FURTHER ADVANCES IN HOLLAND

SHAEF, September 18 — British troops who broke into Holland today have advanced three miles north of Valkenswaard to capture Aalst, it was reported late tonight. Other forces have by-passed Eindhoven, and are now northwest of the city.

The American 1st Army penetrated into Germany northwest of Aachen, the BBC reported. (OWI)

NEW CROSSING INTO GERMANY
GERMAN FORTRESS NEAR BOULOGNE SURRENDERS

SHAEF, September 18 — Troops of the American 1st Army made another crossing of the German frontier east of Simpelveld, seven miles north of Aachen, it was reported late tonight. Another column, 13 miles northeast of Maastricht, is within four miles of the German border.

East of Boulogne, the fortress of Mont Lambert surrendered to the Canadian 1st Army tonight. The whole of the town east of the Liane River is virtually in Canadian hands, and the main sector is being mopped up. The chief German strongpoint still holding out is a gun position west of the river. (Reuter)

They are bringing up troops from other sectors, including boys of 13 and men of 85. These « home guards, » together with seasoned fighting men out of hospitals, have been sent to fight beside paratroop units in an effort to prevent more break-throughs.

To the south, General George Patton's 3rd Army is reported 18 miles east of Nancy, indicating that they are now well through the historic Lorraine Gap between the Ardennes and the Vosges.

German resistance is stiffening along the Moselle River in the area east of Pont a Mousson.

Allied forces are reorganizing and building up strength along the line of the Moselle from Nancy to Thionville. At Metz, heavy artillery duels are continuing.

On the Channel coast, the Canadian 1st Army shock troops broke through the perimeter defenses of the French port of Boulogne, and ferried themselves across the harbor and the Liane River from the north. Hundreds of prisoners have been captured in this new all-out assault on the port city. The Canadians are reported to have reached the dock area.

Polish troops of the Canadian 1st Army, fighting above the canal between Hulst and Axel, were forced back across the waterway, but later reestablished their bridgehead. The Germans are desperately trying to hold their last avenue of escape across the mouth of the Scheldt River.

7TH ARMY TAKES LURE, WEST OF BELFORT

SHAEF, September 18 — French and American troops of the 7th Army, on the southern flank of the Allied front, today drove the Germans out of Lure, 17 miles west of Belfort.

Between Epinal and Vesoul, the town of St. Loup sur Semouse was liberated by an Allied column driving northward.

The liberation of Lure threatens the strong German forces holding Belfort, main escape route into Germany. Tanks are being used by the Germans in an effort to stem the Allied advance.

To the south, along the French-Italian frontier, American troops advanced four miles from the newly liberated town of Modane, rail terminus of lines leading through the Mt. Cenis Pass into the Turin plain. Their advance took them to the town of Lans le Bourg. Stiff resistance was being met from German units trying to halt the Allied advance, which threatens the German armies in Italy.

SUPPLIES DROPPED TO HOLLAND AND WARSAW

LONDON, September 18 — Scarcely had RAF bombers returned from their night raids on Bremen and enemy airfields on the Continent this morning when a steady stream of Allied bombers and transport planes began to fly to Holland to carry supplies to the Allied airborne army which landed yesterday north of the Rhine.

Some 250 Liberators and hundreds of transports and gliders participated in resupplying Lt. Gen. Lewis Brereton's 1st Allied Airborne Army. They were intercepted in the Maastricht area, and engaged in a series of dogfights, in which Allied fighters kept the enemy away from the cargo planes.

They destroyed 27 out of 60 German fighters which tried to interfere.

Another force of Flying Fortresses also flew eastward from Britain today to drop supplies of ammunition and food for the Polish Patriots fighting the Germans in Warsaw. The bombers flew on to Russia, while the fighters escorting them returned to Britain. This was the first time supplies had been flown to Warsaw from Britain.

While RAF Mosquitoes blasted Bremen with two-ton bombs last night, starting many fires in the city, night fighters shot up enemy airfields on the continent and destroyed two Nazi fighters. Before dusk, a small force of British heavy bombers attacked an ammunition depot in Holland. All these operations were carried out without loss.

The besieged German garrison in the French port of Boulogne was bombed for four hours yesterday by Lancasters and Halifaxes, which dropped more than 3,500 tons of explosives on this German outpost.

Gun positions and garrison forces on Walcheren Island in the Rhine delta of the Netherlands, were attacked by a strong force of RAF heavies last night. They dropped 784 tons of bombs on the enemy positions guarding the entrance to the vital port of Antwerp. Mosquitoes of 2nd TAF attacked three strategically important canal gates and heavy guns south of Calais.

Beaufighters attacked enemy shipping in the Heligoland Bight, off the mouth of the Elbe, blowing up one ship and getting fire to another, the Air Ministry announced today.

A brief air raid alert plunged London and the southern counties into darkness again last night when the Germans launched a few flying bombs. Allied night fighters shot a number of them down.

EISENHOWER BROADCASTS ORDERS TO GERMANS

LONDON, September 18 — General Eisenhower has issued a message, broadcast this afternoon by the BBC to the people of western and southwestern Germany. The text follows:

Allied Military Government is established in the theater under my command, to exercise in occupied German territory, the supreme legislative, judicial, and executive authorities invested in me as Supreme Commander, Allied Expeditionary Force, and as Military Governor.

The immediate task of the Allied Military Government, during the course of military operations, will be to secure the lines of communication of the Allied Armies, and to suppress any activities in the occupied areas of Germany that could impair the speedy conclusion of the war.

Simultaneously, the Allied Military Government will begin the task of destroying all National Socialism. It will remove from responsible posts all members of the Nazi Party, of the SS, and others who have played a leading part in the National Socialist regime. This process begins immediately upon the arrival of the Allied Armies in each area, and the inauguration of the Allied Military Government.

The civilian population will, as far as possible, continue in their normal occupations. Detailed instructions to them will be issued by the Allied Military Government in each area.

Meanwhile, Fortresses and Mustangs returned to Britain from Italy, completing their third triangular shuttle mission from England to Russia and the Mediterranean. These Fortresses had bombed an armament plant near Dresden on September 11 on the way to Russia and two days later attacked another armament works at Diosgyor in Hungary, on the run to Italy. No bombs were dropped on the homeward flight.

Reviewing yesterday's gigantic air operations, SHAEF revealed that more than 4,000 sorties, exclusive of airborne operations, were flown over the Continent yesterday, with 7,500 tons of bombs dropped on the enemy. RAF Bomber Command, 2nd TAF, Air Defense of Great Britain, and 8th and 9th USAAF took part in the day's supporting and bomber operations, and lost only two bombers and 16 fighters. They destroyed at least nine enemy fighters. More than 3,000 of the sorties were flown against targets in Holland in support of skytroops before and after they arrived. The Germans put up only a token resistance in the air.

The British Air Ministry announced that during the 12 hours beginning at 0859 yesterday, RAF Bomber Command sent well over 1,250 planes on bombing missions without the loss of a single aircraft.

8TH ARMY HAS EIGHT-MILE MARANO BRIDGEHEAD

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 18 — British, Canadian, and Greek troops of the 8th Army in heavy fighting yesterday expanded their bridgehead across the Marano River to a width of eight miles between the Adriatic Sea and the eastern boundaries of the tiny Republic of San Marino.

Focal points of the fierce battle were still the airfield, on the coast, some three miles southeast of Rimini, where German forces have fought off Canadian and Greek troops for four days, and the hilltop village of San Marino in Monte Titano, a little more than a mile to the west.

Today, Canadian and Greek troops were reported to have reached the northwest corner of the airfield but, despite bitter fighting, the German parachute forces and the lumbering, 60-ton Tiger tanks — serving as mobile blockhouses amid the rubble of the shattered village — still held San Marino on the second day of the Allied assault.

Farther inland, British troops made considerable gains, capturing the village of Cerasola and the nearby high ground dominating the Ausa River Valley and the Rimini-San Marino highway that winds along it.

Heavy fighting was reported for the height of Monte Oliva, a spur of Monte Titano, dominating feature of the mountain republic of San Marino. Heavy casualties were being inflicted on the enemy forces holding this sector, and numerous prisoners were being taken. Just east of the two-mile stretch of the Marano River which forms the southeastern border of San Marino, German forces were reported to have fallen back toward the boundaries of the neutral state after the 8th Army's capture of the village of

Travisi and a height one half mile west of the village of Montescudo.

Although the 8th Army's relentless thrust along the Adriatic coast toward the southeastern edges of the valley of the Po swept around the borders of San Marino, an official statement today made plain that German forces marching through the tiny neutral state had been subjected to heavy air attack from Allied planes. The official statement declared that prisoners from the 356th German Infantry Division, rushed forward to reinforce the near-annihilated 98th Infantry Division, had reported their march through San Marino as a "Nightmare of constant bombing and strafing".

Stiff Resistance to 5th Army

On the 5th Army front, where for the past five days a frontal assault on the main Goth Line defenses north of Florence has been in progress, fierce enemy resistance still held British, American, Indian, and Brazilian troops to limited gains.

Although these forces, in close, bloody combat, have now fought their way into the powerful German defensive zone, an official statement today declared that enemy forces apparently intend neither to withdraw nor surrender, but to fight to the death in their mountain fastnesses. Ensconced in well dug-in positions, behind extensive minefields and barbed wire entanglements, and backed by heavy fire from artillery, mortars, and machine-guns in the mountain passes above them, the German 4th Parachute Division is putting up a savage, fanatic defense to hold the mountain gateways into the Po Valley and industrial north Italy. They have launched several strong counter-attacks, pouring forth from their mountain battlements to try to stem the Allied advance up the slopes by their desperate sacrifice of life.

The Brazilian troops of the 5th Army were identified inferentially today as holding the western sector of the 5th Army front.

Official reports stated that the troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force exhibited "considerable aggressive ability" in their first day of combat, and had advanced more than a mile to take a town along their sector of the front. (PRO)

T.A.F. BOMBERS HIT GOTH DEFENSES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 18 — Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, striking only 500 yards ahead of 8th Army forces within a mile of Rimini, lashed savagely today at German positions still holding the Allied thrust along the Adriatic coast toward the valley of the Po.

The attacks, carried out by Mitchell bombers, covered the low hills southwest of the terminus of the Po Valley highway to Milan with fires and explosions, sending huge columns of smoke more than 3,000 feet into the air.

Other medium bombers and fighter-bombers attacked German transport and bridges along the Po Valley.

Up to 500 heavy bombers today attacked communications targets, including two rail bridges and a rail yard in Budapest, and a bridge over the Danube in Yugoslavia. (PRO)

R.A.F. BOMBERS STRIKE BRESCIA RAIL YARDS

ADVANCE AFHQ September 18 — R.A.F. Wellington, Liberator, and Halifax bombers last night struck at the Brescia rail yards, between Milan and Verona, where hundreds of loaded railway cars have jammed up as a result of damage to tracks and bridges along the valley of the Po.

Both incendiary and high explosive bombs were used to blast the important yards and the tons of material unable to get forward to the hard-pressed German forces defending the Goth Line.

by Lt. Colonel John W. Richardson from the Bulgarian Government, shortly after the Russian declaration of war on that Axis satellite.

Major General Nathan F. Twining, Commanding General of the 15th AAF, met the returning airmen at the south Italy field. Most of the prisoners were imprisoned in a small barracks near Shumen, in eastern Bulgaria, and were kept on a meager diet of black bread and cabbage soup during their imprisonment.

A group of nearly 1,000 Allied airmen were liberated from Rumanian prison camps on September 1. (PRO)

TITO LIBERATES LARGE SERBIAN TOWN

LONDON, September 18 — Marshal Tito's Yugoslav forces have liberated the large western Serbian town of Valjevo after several days of bitter fighting, Tito's communique said the town was occupied yesterday.

The statement added that 400 Nazis were killed and 300 captured in fighting in Macedonia and that a German column in Slovenia was smashed. Another 100 Germans were killed and 19 trucks were destroyed in an area north of Belgrade.

The BBC said tonight that Tito's forces have liberated the three largest islands off the Dalmatian coast, and that Yugoslav control of these islands cuts off the last German escape route from Adriatic areas. (BBC)

WAR IN YUGOSLAVIA OVER SOON, VELEBIT SAYS

LONDON, September 13 — A confident prediction that the war in Yugoslavia will end in a month, or at the utmost in six weeks, was made today by Major General Vladimir Velebit, head of Marshal Tito's Military Mission to London. He added:

"That does not mean that Marshal Tito will stop fighting. It does not matter if our country is liberated tomorrow. We shall continue the war. We are prepared to invade Germany and if necessary go on until we reach Berlin with the rest of the Allies."

Velebit was more cautious in giving a date for the end of the war in Europe, and said he was not very optimistic that it would end this year. "Most probably it will be next spring", he added. (Reuter)

RED AIR FORCE SOFTENS HUNGARIAN FRONT

MOSCOW, September 13 — Heavy bombers of the Red Air Force carried out massive raids on the Hungarian cities of Debrecen and Satu-Mare last night, making direct hits on warehouses and rail facilities. The Soviet communique said tonight that large fires were started, and that thunderous explosions burst from the midst of flames.

Debrecen and the northern Transylvania town of Satu-Mare lie in the area now being squeezed by Russian troops pushing over the mountains from Sanok and Krosno in southern Poland, and other Russian and Rumanian forces driving northward out of the lower Carpathians in Rumania.

More than 30 villages and the city of Ustriki-Dolnye fell to Russian troops pushing southward in the Sanok area in the last 24 hours. Except in the Baltic area, said the communique, fighting of only local importance took place on the rest of the long Russo-Nazi front.

In the Baltic salient, Russian dispatches said, German attacks have been repelled with heavy losses to the enemy in the area of Jelgava (Mitau).

The German radio said today, of the same area, that Russian attacks at and around Jelgava had reached an "unheard-of intensity." The Nazi broadcast added that Russian tank penetration of German positions near Bauska, 40 miles south of Riga, had created a critical situation for the German armies.

General Bor's forces inside Warsaw said tonight that to fight to the death in their mountain fastnesses. Ensconced in well dug-in positions, behind extensive minefields and barbed wire entanglements, and backed by heavy fire from artillery, mortars, and machine-guns in the mountain passes above them, the German 4th Parachute Division is putting up a savage, fanatic defense to hold the mountain gateways into the Po Valley and industrial north Italy. They have launched several strong counter-attacks, pouring forth from their mountain battlements to try to stem the Allied advance up the slopes by their desperate sacrifice of life.

The Brazilian troops of the 5th Army were identified inferentially today as holding the western sector of the 5th Army front.

Official reports stated that the troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force exhibited «considerable aggressive ability» in their first day of combat, and had advanced more than a mile to take a town along their sector of the front. (PRO)

T.A.F. BOMBERS HIT GOTH DEFENSES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 18 — Medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force, striking only 500 yards ahead of 8th Army forces within a mile of Rimini, lashed savagely today at German positions still holding the Allied thrust along the Adriatic coast toward the valley of the Po.

The attacks, carried out by Mitchell bombers, covered the low hills southwest of the terminus of the Po Valley highway to Milan with fires and explosions, sending huge columns of smoke more than 3,000 feet into the air.

Other medium bombers and fighter-bombers attacked German transport and bridges along the Po Valley.

The night attack followed heavy daylight blows by bombers of the Tactical Air Force against German positions near Rimini and the center of the front. Mitchell bombers, attacking in nine waves for three hours yesterday forenoon, hit enemy troop concentrations and gun positions northwest of Rimini and astride the Rimini-Bologna road and railway. The attack was erroneously described in yesterday's preliminary reports as northwest of Regina.

Spitbombers, Kitty Hawks and Baltimores of the Desert Air Force attacked troops of the German 26th Panzer Grenadier Division and the 1st Parachute Division in dug-in positions atop the San Fortunato Ridge south of Rimini, and in positions northwest of this Adriatic port. (PRO)

JAP SEA LANE CUT BY ALLIED APPROACH

AFHQ, September 18 — Dispatches from operational areas in the Pacific pointed out today that the conquest of Morotai Island in the Moluccas, and the imminent control of the Palaus, now threaten to close Japanese sea lanes eastward of the Philippines.

These dispatches to the Melbourne Times said the Japanese will hereafter have to confine most of their vital supply shipping to the waters of the China Sea, and even these waters, it was pointed out, are becoming increasingly hazardous because of the stepped-up activity of heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF along the so-called «invasion coast» of China.

Late reports from Morotai, where General Douglas MacArthur's Allied forces landed three days ago, said that airfield construction was progressing rapidly, and that by-passed Japanese troops on the main Moluccas island of Halmahera, immediately adjoining Morotai to the south, are now threatened with extinction.

American Marines on the Palau island of Peleliu have taken the dominating mountain from which Japanese defenders had been able to impede the American advance. In their latest gains they have overrun Japanese power and radio installations.

Radio Tokyo last night virtually admitted that the Palaus are lost. The Americans, said Tokyo, continue their attack with «amazing» material strength, such as incessant aerial attacks, and a continuous heavy-calibre shelling at the rate of 80 to 120 rounds a minute.

The broadcast described American naval strength as «swarms of warships,» and said that reinforcements were pouring in. Admiral Chester Nimitz's communique late this afternoon said, however, that Japanese opposition in the Palaus was still heavy.

Chinese and Allies Linked

On the Chinese land front, Japanese troops have been driven out of Lungling, a Yunnan Province garrison town lying south of the Burma Road, 220 miles northeast of Mandalay. And on the other side of the Burma Road, north of Lungling, Chinese and Allied troops have linked up for the first time in 2½ years.

Chungking added that Chinese troops have broken into the Chekiang Province city of Wenchow, and that they had temporarily blocked Japanese efforts to get control of the Wu River seaport. Other Chinese units have retaken the Chekiang town of Lishui.

Heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF have carried out another heavy attack against the Japanese-held city of Changsha, causing many fires and explosions. Other attacks were made on Japanese positions northwest of Changsha, and on the Japanese ferry crossing at Chunhsien, where enemy troops are driving down on the Kwangsi city of Kweilin, threatening to join their east and west forces and tactically slice China in halves.

least 320 Roman citizen-hostages taken by the Germans last April, had resigned as a result of dissatisfaction with his handling of preliminary arrangements for the trial.

According to Count Sforza, it was the president of the court who issued the invitations to the bereaved women, wives or close relatives of victims of the German outrage, who set off the wave of popular frenzy which resulted in the ex-warden's death.

Count Sforza also revealed that a police inquest had been held in connection with the lynching of Carretta, and that several members of the Carabinieri, police and petty officials had been placed under arrest for failing to take more vigorous action against the violence of the mob.

The inquest had convinced officials that the ex-warden was hated as a cruel and vicious gaoler, and had infuriated the courtroom crowd by his arrogant conduct at the witnesses' bench, Count Sforza stated.

Count Sforza also drew the attention of the foreign correspondents to the threats made today on the Republican Fascist Radio to execute 40 political prisoners held in northern Italy if Caruso should be sentenced and executed. Such «savagery,» Sforza said, was «the natural end of over 20 years of Fascist brutality.»

Reconvenes in Rome

As result of the lynching of Carretta, the trial of Caruso will be reconvened in a much smaller court chamber, Sforza said. He indicated also that better police protection would be afforded, and that the attendance of widows and families of the victims would be reduced to a much smaller percentage, to avoid the incitement of further mass hysteria.

The trial will continue to be held in Rome, Count Sforza insisted, in order to vindicate the natural sense of justice under which the prosecution of the Fascist criminals has been undertaken.

Eyewitnesses stated to police that the crowd which had gathered outside the court building became impatient and broke into the courtroom, chanting, «We want Caruso! We want justice!» They overflowed into the jury box and occupied every available seat and all standing room. Police were reported to have disarmed several spectators within the courtroom.

At this point, a woman spectator recognized Carretta and pointed him out as the direct cause of her son's death. The fury of the mob turned on the ex-warden of the prison, and he was beaten, kicked, and dragged from the room to the Tiber, where the infuriated mob threw him into the swirling waters.

As Carretta's unconscious body floated down the river, a handful of people followed it in a row boat, striking it with the heavy oars.

Shortly afterward, the body was retrieved from the Tiber and dragged to the Regina Coeli Prison, where it was hung up at the entrance. (PRO - Reuter)

GOVERNMENT STATEMENT ON CARUSO TRIAL

ROME, September 18 — The Italian Government in a statement released late tonight announced that a thorough investigation would be carried out to fix the responsibility for the mob lynching of Donato Carretta, former warden of the Regina Coeli Prison, who was beaten and thrown into the Tiber River before being hanged at the entrance to the prison earlier today.

The Government statement also said that the investigation would seek to determine if adequate police protection had been provided for at the trial.

In the meantime, all persons suspected of having been involved in the mob violence today are being held, pending further investigation. (UNN)

SHORTAGES BREAK ITALY'S ECONOMY

ROME, September 18 — American, British and international trades union representatives, who have just completed a survey of labor and living conditions in liberated Italy, declared today that a broken national economy, inadequate communications, and an undeveloped industrial structure have resulted in a social and economic state of affairs « impossible to describe. »

The statement, issued jointly, and apart from separate reports to be made to their respective organizations, declared that widespread corruption, looting, and black-market activities are the only alternatives to starvation for a large mass of the Italian people.

The union representatives, who began their survey on August 29, and who have since visited Naples, Bari, Lucera, and Taranto in southern Italy, and Palermo and Catania in Sicily, are: Walter Schevenels of the International Federation of Trade Unions; Will Lawther and Thomas O'Brien of the British Trade Union Congress; Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor; and George Baldanzi of the (American) Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In each of the cities visited, the labor men held meetings with Italian union leaders and with the political party groups that in many cases control the labor organizations. They talked with workers on farms, in factories, and in shipyards.

They obtained vital statistics and word-of-mouth information from laborers themselves. They listed their findings in five sections:

1. Despite the stabilization of the lire at 400 to the pound sterling and at 100 to the dollar, money has no real meaning. The majority of the people are without normal employment. The food ration is insufficient to maintain a minimum standard of health, especially for those who work. Supplementary food must be bought in the free market of the unrationed foodstuffs, or on the black market.

A modest meal in a third-class restaurant costs between 100 and 200 lire. Rationed olive oil (important commodity in the Italian diet) costs four lire a litre when available. Black market prices for oil range from 50 to 550 lire. A pair of leather shoes costs between 3,500 and 4,500 lire.

Compare these prices with the 65 to 150-lire daily earnings of the average worker. Civil servants, judges, carabinieri, and police are paid less than 65 lire daily. A real basis for social life is lacking.

The result is corruption, looting and black-market activities on a large scale; or starvation.

2. Except for parts of Sicily and Naples Province, there is no means of transportation or communication worth mentioning, apart from those run by the military and Allied Control Commission authorities. There is also considerable shortage of raw materials of all kinds, especially coal, most of which had to be imported before the war. There is a shortage of power. The result is a meager prospect for improving employment possibilities — and hence the social condition of the workers.

Unionism Survived Fascism

3. The trade union spirit encountered everywhere by the delegation was much higher and more alive than was expected, despite 20 years of Fascist oppression of free thinking. It should also be remembered in connection with trade union consciousness, that liberated sections of Italy are less developed, from the industrial and social point of view, than most other eastern and central European countries.

Despite these two unfavorable factors, a substantial part of the Italian working class has responded spontaneously to the call of the trade union organization. It is true to say, however, that a larger part of the working class has not yet been brought into the movement; and it may even be assumed that these workmen have not yet been reached by the trade unions. For the north of Italy, there are many indications that the revival of trade unionism will be quicker.

4. The Part of Rome: The first attempts to reorganize the trade unions were initiated mainly from three important political parties — Socialist, Communist, and Christian-Democrat. In the pre-Fascist period and even during Fascism, these different ideologies had kept the workers apart. These three main political ideologies have now pledged themselves to the establishment of a united, national trade union movement.

5. Solemn pledges have been given by the trade union leaders belonging to the already-mentioned parties to abstain from all political interference in the labor movement, and to keep all forms of party politics out of the reborn trade union movement. (UNN)

2. Confiscation of all property belonging to traitors or their accomplices.

3. Severe punishment of persons who used national property for the benefit of the enemy or of a few privileged people.

4. Immediate action against illegal profits.

5. Purge and reform of the principal state services.

6. Creation of mixed committees in administrative departments to give the workers a share in the direction of the national economy.

7. Nationalization of heavy industries, large banks, insurance companies, and natural sources of power.

8. Renovation of the army, with the French Forces of the Interior forming the core of the new army. (PWB)

WARRANT ISSUED FOR DARNAND'S ARREST

WASHINGTON, September 18 — Monsieur Martin, examining magistrate responsible for legal enquiry into the assassination of Georges Mandel — French Minister of the Interior in the government of Paul Reynaud — has issued several warrants, including one for the arrest of Joseph Darnand, Vichyite head of the French "Militia", said Radio Paris yesterday.

Radio Lyon reported from Paris yesterday that three officials of the former Vichy Government — Marcel Peyrouton, Pierre Etienne Flandin, and Tixier Vignancourt — have been transferred to Paris from Algiers, to be tried as collaborationists. (OWI)

ART WORKS SAVED IN DUTCH TOWN

MAASTRICHT, September 18 — Hidden before the Germans invaded Holland and moved again when their hiding place was destined to become part of the Germans' Atlantic Wall, 1300 paintings from the priceless Ryks Museum collection in Amsterdam have been preserved safely during the war in an air-conditioned sandstone cavern on the outskirts of Maastricht, the United Press reported yesterday.

Among the masterpieces in the underground vault are the works of Rembrandt, including his famous Night Watch, and works of Van Dyke, Hals, Rubens, Tintoretto, Van Gogh, Murillo, El Greco, Monet, Van Ruisdael, Steen, Vermeer, Van Scorel, and Lavmar. (OWI)

HOLLAND TO HAVE 100 MILLION DOLLAR CREDIT

NEW YORK, September 18 — The Netherlands Government is completing arrangements with a group of 14 New York banks and trust companies for a credit of 100 million dollars for reconstruction, according to a joint announcement by the Netherlands Information Bureau and Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, which heads the group of banks concerned.

The Wall Street Journal quoted the announcement as saying that the credit, to be used only for purposes of reconstruction, is fully secured by the free assets of the Netherlands Government and will run for three years at an interest rate of 1½ per cent annually. The Netherlands, however, has the privilege of repaying the credit at any time before the end of the three-year period without premium or penalty, on 30 days' notice.

It was emphasized that the Netherlands Government considers the credit as a temporary arrangement. "As soon as practicable after the liberation of the Netherlands, negotiations will be initiated contemplating the refunding of the present proposed credit with an unsecured credit," the announcement said.

Aldrich said that he had discussed the credit, the first to be granted a foreign government since the outbreak of war, with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, and that the U. S. Treasury had taken a most constructive and cooperative position. He added that the credit had also been discussed with the State Department, in view of the international aspects involved. (OWI)

1,500 COLLABORATORS ARRESTED IN BRUSSELS

BRUSSELS, September 18 — Fifteen hundred collaborators have already been arrested here alone, but many more are still in hiding, Belgian Minister of the Interior August de Schryver announced today.

Other officials said the Belgian Government is anxious that Leon Degrelle, who is in Germany, be brought to justice as soon as possible for the crimes committed by the pro-Nazi Black Brigade, of which he was the leader. (PWB)

FFI ARREST 500 COLLABORATORS AT NANCY

WASHINGTON, September 18 — French Forces of the Interior have imprisoned more than 500 collaborators in the Nancy area and are holding them for questioning, an Associated Press dispatch said today. Some of the group resisted arrest, and sporadic battles between them and the FFI occurred during the past three days.

U.N.R.R.A. ELECTS POLISH DELEGATE

MONTREAL, September 18 — Jan Ciechanowski, Polish Ambassador to the United States, was among those named yesterday to the procedure committee of the UNRRA meeting here.

It was the first time that a Polish delegate has been named to a United Nations procedure committee, and the selection met with the approval of the Russian delegate, M. Sergeev.

Representatives to the conference suggested that the appointment might mean that Poland is shortly to get relief. At present, the only way of sending relief to Poland is through Murmansk and over Russian railroads. (OWI)

GERMANS SEIZE 250 HOSTAGES IN MILAN

WASHINGTON, September 18 — The Swiss Telegraph Agency said today that the Italian Clandestine Socialist newspaper Avanti, circulated in German-occupied northern Italy, had appealed to workers in Turin and Milan "to prepare the final details for the imminent general insurrection."

Avanti particularly stressed the importance of preventing the German Army from carrying out destruction or seizing industrial installations.

The agency reported in another dispatch that the Germans in Milan yesterday seized 250 hostages "taken from all circles of the Milan population," following the killing of 25 German soldiers by Italian Patriots. The agency added that it was feared these hostages would be shot. Milan's Cardinal Schuster had appealed to the German authorities to "prevent this summary execution," the Swiss agency added. (OWI)

Some of the group resisted arrest, and sporadic battles between them and the FFI occurred during the past three days.

Many of those arrested had fought alongside the Germans against Russia, and had been deserted by the fleeing Germans in France, despite an appeal by Pierre Laval to German officials in Nancy to have the collaborators taken into Germany.

French resistance forces in eastern France are now using four tanks they made in a factory at Clermont Ferrand, right under the noses of the Germans, a French Press Agency dispatch said yesterday.

The bodies of the tanks were made from camouflaged tractors. The tank components were hidden in different parts of the factory until they could be assembled. They are excellent for surprise attacks and for reconnaissance purposes, the dispatch added. (OWI)

FINNISH OFFICERS REPORT NAZI CRISIS GROWING

LONDON, September 18 — A specially constructed U-boat capable of reaching Japan is reported to be waiting in a heavily-guarded pen to take away Hitler or other high Nazis when Germany collapses, according to Finnish officers recently returned from Berlin and quoted by a Daily Mail correspondent in a dispatch from Stockholm. The report continued:

The Daily Mail dispatch included excerpts from a report on the political and military crisis in Germany drawn up by the Finnish liaison officers, who were told of the submarine by a high German staff officer during a visit to East Prussia. He said that the submarine is waiting at the Polish port of Gdynia, and that it is commanded by a leading German U-boat ace.

The Finnish officers said that, despite the thousands of arrests ordered by Himmler since the attempt on Hitler's life on July 20, the anti-Hitler movement is steadily growing, particularly in the Army, and expressed the belief that the Army may well make another attempt to overthrow the Nazi regime.

According to the Finnish officers, discipline in many sections of the German Army is disintegrating. Both officers and men have been seen trading their weapons or Wehrmacht property on the black market for coffee, cigarettes, or other luxuries. (BBC)

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, september 18 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy

In the Adriatic sector, troops of the 8th Army have made important progress in the high ground on the left of the sector, and now hold a bridgehead over the River Marano on a frontage of eight miles.

In the 5th Army sector, American, British, Indian, and Brazilian troops are still engaged in fierce fighting within the enemy Goth Line positions.

On the remainder of the front, there is no material change in the situation.

Navy:

Supporting the army in the Rimini area yesterday, His Majesty's Ships Loyal and Lookout effectively engaged enemy gun positions and troop movements with more than 900 rounds. Minesweepers working in the area were fired upon by a coastal battery until it was silenced by the Loyal.

It is reported from the Aegean that on 16 September, naval aircraft accompanying a force of escort carriers operating under the command of Rear Admiral Troubridge, R.N., made low-flying attacks on enemy motor transport in Crete. Twenty-three vehicles were destroyed and others damaged.

Off the island of Milos, 80 miles northward, they sank three large and two small sailing craft and damaged a merchant ship with near misses and gunfire.

All our aircraft returned safely.

On the same day, Milos was bombarded by H.M.S. Aurora which reported three hits on a merchant vessel afterwards beached. Three other small ships were reported sunk and two more beached.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force.

Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked rail yards and oil refineries in Budapest.

Tactical aircraft attacked enemy communications, troop concentrations, and other military objectives in northern Italy, and in the battle areas, as well as in Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked Brescia rail yards in northern Italy.

In these operations, 11 of our aircraft are missing.

Enemy casualties approximately 1,750 sorties. (PRO)

and cleared Lure of the enemy. North of Lure, the enemy used tanks in resisting the advance. Local engagements took place in the area of Pont de Roide.

In the Higher Alps we have driven several miles up the Maurienne Valley after capturing the Modane and have reached Lunslebourg after still fighting.

Air:

Striking in advance of our airborne forces yesterday, heavy, light and fighter-bombers, in very great strength, attacked anti-aircraft batteries, gun positions, communications, troops, and transport throughout Holland, while fighters swept a path for the aerial transports and gliders, and provided umbrella cover for the landings.

As the enemy's guns opened fire, our fighters and fighter-bombers dived to silence them in low-level strafing and bombing attacks.

Many motor vehicles, locomotives, railway cars, and barges were destroyed or damaged, and bridges and supply dumps were hit.

According to reports so far received, nine enemy aircraft were shot down in combat by our fighters.

Later in the day, gun positions and troops on the Island of Walcheren were attacked by strong forces of heavy bombers.

Coastal aircraft struck at shipping off the Frisian Islands.

Fortified positions and garrison troops at Boulogne were bombarded for four hours by other heavy bombers, which dropped more than 3,500 tons of high explosives. Intense anti-aircraft fire was encountered at times, but there was no opposition in the air.

Strong-points at Brest were attacked during the day by small forces of fighter-bombers.

Other fighter-bombers hit several locomotives and railway cars in western Germany. (OWI – Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 18 — Tonight's communique:

Loval:

During today west of Jelgava (Mietava), our troops successfully beat back enemy tank and infantry attacks.

South and southeast of Sunok, our troops continued their advance, and captured the district center of Drohobyces Region, the city and railway station of Ustrik-Dolnye, and also occupied over 30 other populated localities, including Nadulanye, Novokanee, Ukotsko, Kurliku, Ulashnye, Michkovkee, Ubrukye, Labodesh, and Ustynova.

On the other sectors of the front, fighting of local importance and reconnaissance activities took place.

During September 18, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 134 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 62 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 17-18, our long-range air force carried out massive raids on the city and railway junction of Debreceu in Hungary, and on the city and railway-junction of Satu-Mare, in northern Transylvania.

The Soviet pilots bombarded military trains and warehouses of the Germans and Hungarians. As a result of bombardment of the railway junction of Debrecen, many fires were started, of which five were of large size. Flames enveloped railway cars and platforms, and also a big warehouse of ammunition. By direct bomb hits, a warehouse of war material was blown up.

On the railway junction of Satu-Mare, over 30 fires were set by bombardment. A large number of explosions were observed amongst the fires. Fuel tanks and military warehouses were blown up.

During daylight on September 16, the aviation of the Red Banner Fleet carried out a raid on the port of Liepaja

SHAEF, September 18 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied airborne troops were landed in Holland yesterday after powerful air operations in which the Allied air forces operated in great strength.

First reports show that operation is going well.

Our ground forces near the Belgium-Dutch frontier are continuing to make progress.

Farther south, we have mopped up pockets of resistance on the outskirts of Aachen. Heavy fighting continues in the city. Elements pushing on east to the town are encountering determined resistance.

Advances have also been made across the Luxembourg-German frontier.

In the Moselle Valley, our troops are clearing the area west of the river of isolated groups. North of Nancy, progress has been made and enemy counter-attacks near Pont-a-Mousson were repulsed.

The German are fighting hard in the Belfort Gap. Our troops have occupied the town of St. Loup-sur-Semouse.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 18 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Operations of the Garibaldi Brigades in the Lake Maggiore area are part of a strategic plan to liberate entire regions. The Patriot offensive is now developing on four main sectors. These are in the Turin and Novara provinces, in the Ligurian Riviera, and in the Lake Maggiore district. In all these sectors, Patriots are registering notable successes with regard to control of both enemy territory and enemy movements. The number of Germans and Fascists killed here during the past few week goes into the thousands.

Bold thrusts against German garrisons are being made in other sectors also, thus preventing the enemy from freely concentrating or shifting his forces. The dispersion of forces and the difficulty of freely maneuvering them are aggravating the already difficult position of the Wehrmacht, which is therefore compelled to fight in a hostile country under the continuous threat of Patriot activity from their rear. It appears that the German High Command is preparing to abandon wide areas of northern Italy and to limit its occupation to strategic points and key positions only which will ensure the withdrawal of the German divisions now in Italy when they will have to fall back into German territory.

Most recent Patriot activity includes the destruction of a highway bridge four miles east of Borgotaro. Another bridge near Togh, south of Pontremoli, was also destroyed.

Twenty-four German prisoners, including a captain, were taken on the west bank of Lake Iseo. These were released following an agreement with the German command which assured that no reprisals would be carried out against the population, and authority was given for transferring the wounded to a civil hospital.

On August 30, a group of Patriots captured 60 Fascist militiamen taking refuge in the Piedimulera barracks. At Omegna, on Lake Orta, a truce has been declared between Patriots and the Germans. A clash which resulted in casualties on both sides occured near Andorno between Fascist Republican guards and Patriot detachments. A train was wrecked between Novara and Arona, causing the death of four Fascists and wounds to five others.

Patriots captured the mayor of Cogaola, near Biella. He was executed for atrocities committed while in the service of the Germans.

A Patriot group carried out a surprise attack on the railway station in the town of Gazzaniga, in Valseriana, in the province of Bergamo. The passengers of trains arriving at the station were searched and, as a result, a German lieutenant, a German official, an Italian Air Force officer, three militiamen, and many other Fascists were taken to the mountain headquarters of the Patriots. Following this incident, Nazi-Fascist troops poured into Valseriana. A violent battle ensued which lasted four hours and cost both sides heavy losses.

Colonel Marabini, commander of the Forli Fascist Republican Guard, was killed in an engagement. Two Patriots taken prisoner on this occasion were hanged in a Forli public square and their bodies were left exposed for many days.

FUEHRER's HEADQUARTERS, September 18 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the Dutch area, the enemy yesterday at noon, after having made heavy air attacks, dropped parachutists and airborne troops behind our front, with focal points near Arnheim, Nymwegen, and Eindhoven.

Yesterday afternoon, the enemy attacked between Antwerp and Maastricht-Nordern, to establish contact with these airborne formations. Embittered fighting developed, especially in the area of Neerpelt. The enemy succeeded in making slight gains of ground toward the north. Concentric German counter-attacks are in progress against the landed airborne troops of the enemy.

Between Maastricht and Aachen, as well as in the area of Nancy, our troops are still engaged in heavy defensive fighting with strong enemy forces. On other sectors of the western front, numerous minor attacks of the enemy were repulsed.

The enemy, who had penetrated into Luneville, was thrown out again.

A German counter-attack, south of the city, is making good progress.

In the ruins of Brest, our heroic garrison, although concentrated in a narrow space, is still holding its own against extremely severe enemy attacks. In Boulogne, too, attacked during the whole day in the region north of Florence. All his attempts to break through, were frustrated and severe losses inflicted on him.

Eastern Front:

At the Bulgaro-Serbian border, there were several local engagements in which 10 Bulgarian tanks were destroyed.

In the southern part of Transylvania, enemy attacks supported by tanks were foiled, too, yesterday.

Renewed Soviet attacks near Sanok and Krasno were repulsed. Salients effected by the enemy were sealed off, in counter-attacks.

In Latvia and Estonia, fighting is going on with extreme violence. A big attack, launched by the Soviets, has now been extended also to the Dorpat area. It was checked after heavy fighting.

German battle-plane formations effectively supported our defensive fights in the Baltic area. Last night, German bomber and battle-plane formations, with telling effect attacked Soviet troop concentrations; 75 Soviet aircraft were downed in aerial combat and by flak artillery yesterday.

On Lake Peipus, German naval artillery boats sank one Soviet gunboat and damaged another.

Air:

North American bombers made a terror attack on the city of Budapest.

During the night, enemy planes dropped bombs on Bremen and the Dortmund area, as well as on Debreczen in Hungary.

Landings in Holland: «To hamper the enemy's landing attempts from the seas, a large coastal section has been submerged... The enemy attacking on the Albert and Meuse-Scheldt Canals, could not break through our lines in spite of the concentration of 12 divisions in a small place... On Sunday, when the enemy tried to make light his stagnant operations in northern Belgium by landing air-borne troops and paratroop units, our troops checked the attempt promptly. When they were flying over the coasts, numerous cargo gliders were shot down or forced to land upon the submerged areas.»

Landings in Holland: - To hamper the enemy's landing attempts from the sea, a large coastal section has been submerged... The enemy, attacking on the Albert and Meuse-Scheldt Canals, could not break through our lines in spite of the concentration of 12 divisions in a small place... On Sunday, when the enemy tried to make fluid his stagnant operations in northern Belgium by landing air-borne troops and paratroop units, our troops checked the attempt promptly. When they were flying over the coasts, numerous cargo gliders were shot down or forced to land upon the submerged areas. -

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Western Front: Military commentary by Dr. Kruil: - The British landing operation in the Dutch area, with its gravity centre in the branches of the Rhine Estuary near Arnheim and Nimwegen, gave a new aspect to the battle in the northern sector of the western front... The constantly stiffening German defence between Antwerp and Maastricht had decreased enemy pressure toward the Netherlands to such an extent that the enemy thought he could reach a decisive success only by means of unusual measures. The thrust in the rear of the German front was supposed to bring relief... -

Eastern Front: - The general attack in the Baltic area was extended by the enemy, with another center of gravity at Dorpat. No changes are reported from Warsaw and from the Krosno and Sanok areas. The same applies to the Transylvanian area. -

No Change in the West: The situation on the western front remains fundamentally unchanged. The Allies had to effect a landing in Holland in view of their failure to breach the German lines along the Scheldt. The Germans have taken effective counter-measures against the newly landed troops.

No Progress in the South: Allied attacks along the Italian front continue, but the heavy losses suffered by the Allies during their continuous offensive have now became perceptible. In the central sector, a large unit of the 5th Army was surrounded and wiped out.

Mussolini on the Administration of Italy: Addressing the new Mayor of Milan, Giuseppe Spinelli (or Schinelli), a simple worker, the Duce emphasized that in future, all responsible positions in the administration, as well as in the management of food-supplies, will be entrusted to men from the working classes. Mussolini also pointed out that the two deputies of Spinelli are not members of the Fascist Party.

AIRBORNE TROOPS LAND IN HOLLAND

SHAEF, September 17 — Strong Allied forces of the 1st Airborne Army, protected by a vast air umbrella, were landed at noon today west of the German-Dutch frontier, on the northern bank of the Rhine River, it was officially announced today.

The landing of paratroopers was followed by the descent of countless gliders.

This is the first Allied airborne operation carried out by General Eisenhower's forces since the original descents on D-Day. It is also the first airborne operation since the British and American forces were combined into one command under Lieut. Gen. Brereton.

The landing was preceded by an attack by more than 700 protective Flying Fortresses, escorted by forces of Mustangs, against enemy gun positions over a wide area in Holland. Last night, strong forces of Lancasters attacked airfields in Holland and Germany.

A Reuter military correspondent wrote that it was possible that the operations are aimed at «leapfrogging» the great water belt which separates the northern and southern Netherlands, described by the Germans as the strongest defense line in western Europe.

Split-Second Timing

The air attack preceding the landings started yesterday afternoon when Allied bombers struck Dutch dykes with the probable object of releasing flood waters to impede German concentrations and reinforcements. RAF escorted heavy bombers carried on the attack in the evening, bombing and strafing German airfields in the surrounding area.

Just before the airborne troops were landed, fighter, medium and heavy bombers attacked German barracks and anti-aircraft gun positions. Flying Fortresses bombed just ahead of the troop-carrying transports and gliders in split-second timing. Except for a few German fighters thrown off at the beginning of the operation, the Luftwaffe failed to appear and there was no interference during the landing operations. Antiaircraft fire was weak.

At least 15,000 airborne troops were dropped in the first landing and a half hour later thousands of gliders landed guns, bicycles and light tanks. There was stiff German opposition at many points and the Allied troops went down through fierce fire. It was a completely self-contained unit including motor transports and supply services.

TRAPPED NAZI GENERAL AND 20,000 MEN SURRENDER TO U. S. 83RD DIVISION

HEADQUARTERS, U. S. 3RD ARMY, September 17 — A German general and his 20,000 trapped men surrendered this afternoon to the U. S. 83rd Infantry Division on the south bank of the Loire, near Orleans, Press dispatches reported tonight.

The surrender of the 20,000 was made at Beaugheney to Maj. Gen. Robert B. Macon by the German commander, Maj. Gen. Erich Elster, who said: «The situation obliges me to surrender my group and its supplies to the American Army.» He handed over his revolver and the surrender was completed.

General Macon told a Columbia Broadcasting System reporter that credit should go to Lt. Samuel W. Magill, who initiated the surrender without the loss of a single life. Magill, while on patrol with his platoon south of the Loire, learned from the Maquis that the Germans were willing to surrender. He drew up the terms of surrender and sent them to the German headquarters. General Elster accepted the terms, but would not surrender to a lieutenant. Magill then arranged the riverside meeting with General Macon.

The junction of the American 3rd and 7th Armies had trapped General Elster and his army to the south.

A German colonel who came into the American lines to negotiate the surrender said, «This is the most extraordinary military situation ever.»

The Germans are in the utmost confusion. Only part of them have arrived in the American lines. The remainder are en route, with all the fight taken out of them.

The Germans had been heavily strafed by crews of the 19th Tactical Air Command under General O. P. Weyland.

It is estimated that six German divisions in Holland were cut off by the landings. Almost the entire Dutch coastal region has been flooded. All of Holland's big cities, contain-

AIRBORNE TROOPS TAKE DUTCH TOWNS

SOMEWHERE IN HOLLAND, September 17 — The 1st Airborne Army, which landed near the Dutch-German frontier today, has liberated several Dutch towns, it was reported late tonight by a combined Press correspondent.

Fifty strong units of General Brereton's army dropped near the German border have cleared the enemy from these towns and established their positions, the report said. (OWI)

RAF ATTACKS IN WALCHEREN ISLE

LONDON, September 17 — A strong force of Lancaster bombers this evening attacked gun positions and the German garrison on Walcheren Isle. They dropped nearly 700 tons of high explosive bombs. Weather was clear and the targets visually identified. (Reuter)

Attacks on bridgehead Slacken

On the British 2nd Army sector, troops continued to pour into Holland after securing three strong bridgeheads over the Escaut Canal. The latest points secured inside Holland have not been disclosed.

German efforts to attack the bridgehead north of Gheel show a slight slackening. During the last 36 hours, however, British troops on the northern bank of the canal have been subjected to heavy artillery fire and a number of counter-attacks. None of them succeeded but shelling of the bridgehead continued.

Other sectors of the British 2nd Army front, where the Germans have not formed their dispositions in battle groups, are quiet. Prisoners taken do not know their own units, and information as to their composition and strength is difficult to obtain.

On the northern flank of the Allied front, the Canadian 1st Army widened its bridgehead across the Leopold Canal and advances were made between Antwerp and the sea. There are signs that the Germans' whole position on the west bank of the Scheldt is loosening and that they are preparing to evacuate.

Polish patrols have probed into the area of Hulst across the Dutch border. They are reported to have cut the road leading out of Hulst to Saaftenbeek. Polish troops moving up have liberated St. Jan Steen, two miles south of Hulst. To the west, they are operating in the area of Wachtbeke, 10 miles northeast of Gheel.

Aachen under shellfire

On the Channel coast, Canadian troops today launched an all-out attack on the German garrison of Boulogne. In stiff fighting they fought their way through the outer defenses and now dominate the town from the northeast.

American 1st Army units are continuing their pressure through the Siegfried Line toward the Rhine. Forces which penetrated the whole width of the line south of Aachen are reinforcing the position taken as they emerged from the second line of defenses. They are reported to be 25 miles from Cologne. To the rear of the break-through, forces have penetrated into Aachen and are shelling the city. They hold all high points dominating the city.

Other American units pierced the German defenses below Rott, eight miles southeast of Aachen, and are advancing into the Rotgen Forest. Only moderate opposition is being met by American troops across the German frontier in the area of Prum, but farther south they are encountering heavy resistance.

Frontline dispatches said indications point to the small faith the Germans placed in their ability to hold the Siegfried Line against fast and heavily armored tanks. They are reported to be preparing for a last-ditch battle along the Rhine.

Allied Pincer Movement

On the 3rd Army front to the south, American units captured Lunéville, south east of Nancy, against sporadic resistance. Other American tanks and infantry were streaming across the Meurthe River, 30 miles below Metz, threatening to cut off German troops remaining between the two cities.

Allied troops are moving their heavy concentration of armor across the Moselle eight miles below Metz to form the southern prong of a pincer movement to encircle the city. The Germans are preparing for a delaying action in [illegible] push into Germany. The for enemy barracks. Mustangs went down to draw anti-aircraft fire and, with a strong force of Fortresses, attacked every gun position that showed fight.

The attack on ack-ack gun positions was said to be novel; groups of six to 12 planes were assigned to dozens of targets, each group knowing beforehand which targets to attack.

24 Hours of Air Attack

British Lancasters and Halifaxes today attacked the Germans at Boulogne, dropping more than 3,300 tons of bombs.

Today's tactical bombing of targets in Holland followed 24 hours of widespread air activity in which Allied fliers attacked a variety of German targets by day and by night. Outstanding among their missions was an attack yesterday afternoon on Dutch dykes, aimed at releasing flood water to impede German concentrations and reinforcements. Marauders and Havocs of the 9th USAAF dumped 300 tons of bombs on the isthmus and dyke connecting Walcheren Island in Antwerp harbor with the mainland.

In the evening, 200 Lancasters and Mosquitos raided four airfields — Lewarden and Steenwijk in Holland and Hopsten and Salzbergen near Osnabrueck in Germany. After them came 100 more heavies of the Bomber Command in raid areas of Dortmund, Brunswick and Moerdijk.

Fighter-bombers of 9th USAAF made attacks on Brest, and for the first time encountered no flak. Twelve enemy gun positions were bombed and strongpoints were hit.

Both 8th and 9th USAAF aircraft claimed a heavy score of damage to enemy transport and communications yesterday. Heavy bombers strafing rail and road communications in western Germany behind the Siegfried Line destroyed 73 oil tank cars, knocked out or damaged 200 rail cars, disabled 56 locomotives and wrecked 30 motor vehicles. Fighter-bombers destroyed 12 enemy aircraft, 27 enemy guns, two locomotives, six observation posts and a number of railroad cars and horse-drawn vehicles. They cut railroads in western Germany in four places.

«Catastrophe Stocks»

As a result of the incessant Allied air attacks on western Germany's communications, railway traffic there has been rendered «completely chaotic» and orderly evacuation is impossible, according to a Berne dispatch to NYA Dagligt Allehanda yesterday. Transport of food has become unmanageable, and the authorities in Cologne and Wuppertal have been compelled to dip into their so-called «catastrophe stocks» intended as a last reserve. Hitler youth members are reported to have been instructed to remain in threatened districts to «destroy everything hitherto undestroyed if the enemy should come.»

In operations over the Channel ports area yesterday, aircraft gave close support to the ground troops. At Cap Gris Nez the lighthouse used as an enemy observation post was attacked with rockets and bombs, and the Casino at Dunkirk, converted into a strong point, was bombed and strafed. Supply depots, ammunition dumps and shipping were also attacked. Four merchant ships in the harbor of Terneuzen, north of Ghent, were strafed and left on fire and badly damaged. One was reported to be in a sinking condition.

No flying-bomb warnings were sounded in England today, the Associated Press reported. (Reuter-OWI)

BOMBERS PREPARE THE WAY

LONDON, September 17 — Up to 1,000 Flying Fortresses escorted by Mustangs this morning prepared the way for the first airborne landing of strong Allied forces in Holland, pouring bombs into German gun positions across a wide area of the country.

As the American bombers went in to attack, they met RAF heavy bombers returning from missions over Germany. Only a few hours earlier strong forces of RAF Lancasters had attacked enemy airfields in Germany and Holland, while Mosquitos bombed Brunswick. Three Allied bombers are missing from the night raids.

There was magnificent timing between the 2nd TAF aircraft and the 8th USAAF heavies before the airborne landing. Spitfires strafed German barracks in the area where the landings were made. NAZIS TAKEN BY SURPRISE

NEW YORK, September 17 — An eye-witness account of the Allied airborne landing in Holland today was given in a dispatch by Judson Quinn, representing the combined American Press.

«Parachute troops and glider-born infantrymen of the 1st Allied Airborne Army surprised the German defenders,» he said, «and landed with negligible opposition.»

His dispatch continued: «I watched the Troop Carrier Command drop thousands of parachutists from hundreds of planes. The multi-colored parachutes glittered gaily in the bright noon-day sun as they fluttered to the earth with men, arms and supplies.

«Flying in tight, low formations, these sky-trains slipped over the coast of Holland from the North Sea and reached the drop area before the Nazis manned their anti-aircraft guns. By the time the second and third formations began dropping, light flak was shooting up into the sky fleets. We did not see a single German fighter and the only airfield I saw was so pockmarked with bomb-craters it was unusable.

LANDINGS MAY BE DECISIVE FACTOR

LONDON, September 17 — Lieut. Gen. Brereton, commander of the 1st Airborne Army which landed in Holland today, told his men before they took off that they were participating in one of the greatest operations in military history.

He said: «On the success of your mission today, on the navigation and flying skill and courage of the air crews and the speed of the landing force, rests the difference between a quick decision in the west and a long-drawn-out battle. I know I can depend on all of you. Godspeed to you.» (Reuter)

MONTGOMERY SAYS NAZIS BEATEN

LONDON, September 17 — Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery said in a message to his troops tonight that the German people know their position is already hopeless and that they have little wish to continue the struggle.

The Allies are closing in on Germany from the east, the south and the west, said the field marshal. «Our American Allies are fighting on German soil — and pretty soon we shall all be there.»

Montgomery added: «No human endeavor can now prevent complete and utter defeat of the armed forces of Germany. Their fate is certain and their defeat will be absolute.

The field marshal revealed that the total of German prisoners taken in the France campaign thus far is nearly 300,000. He added that many more, yet to be rounded up, would swell the number. He said the enemy's losses have been so great that it is problematical how long he may be able to continue the battle. (Reuter)

EISENHOWER WARNS GERMANS

SHAEF, September 17 — A message defining the status of the Netherlands Resistance Forces now fighting side by side with the Allied forces in the Netherlands was addressed to officers and men of the German forces in the Netherlands today by a member of SHAEF.

The message issued on behalf of the Supreme Commander, said: «Powerful Allied forces are fighting on Dutch soil. I, therefore, address to you the following statement. Netherlands Forces of Resistance now fighting side by side with Allied forces are instructed to conduct their operations against you in accordance with the rules of war. They are commanded by their own officers under the leadership of Prince Bernhard, appointed by me as their commander. They are regarded by me as an army under my command.

«I am determined that every effort shall be made to trace the authors of any atrocities committed against members of the forces under my command. The guilty will be brought to justice.» (Reuter)

7TH ARMY NEARING BELFORT

SHAEF, September 17 — Forces of the American 7th Army are slowly driving on Belfort, the defensive center of the German escape gap into their homeland.

To protect Belfort, the Germans are forming a defense line around Luxeuil, 25 miles northwest of the city, and are reported to be fortifying the gap. One spearhead of the 7th Army, driving eastward from Vesoul, liberated Meurcourt, about seven miles west of Luxeuil, and captured Quers, five miles to the south.

Other American columns are driving before them a conglomerate German army containing naval units, labor battalions and miscellaneous troops evacuated from the southern coast of France.

Another 7th Army column is consolidating with the American 3rd Army in great depth at the southern end of Germany's western front. They have reached Chaumont.

«To the south, the 7th Army is now threatening the lateral communications of the German forces in headlong retreat, racing in panic for the Belfort-Mulhouse gap, the vital gateway into the Reich.

«Here the retreat has come to a forced end. Here the German army is committed to a stand, for, although Belfort and Mulhouse are still on French soil, these bastions are the outer defenses of Germany proper. If they are lost the full strength of the Allied armies of the south will be poised along the Rhine River ready for the final assault on Germany.

«FFI scouts have passed through the German lines from Belfort and have reported that intensive preparations are being made for the defense of this key strongpoint.

BREST GERMANS REFUSE TO SURRENDER

BREST, September 17 — The German commander of the Nazi-held port of Brest has suffered tremendous losses since the siege began, wrote Louis Wulf, Reuters correspondent, in a delayed dispatch.

Wulf said: «An American colonel went into the German lines on Wednesday, to ask General Ramcke, commander of the doomed German garrison which has been besieged for three weeks, to surrender.

«But Ramcke, arrogant commander of the 2nd Parachute Division, sent back a six-word answer, refusing curtly the American terms, and on Thursday the American artillery resumed firing into the part of the town in German hands. Meanwhile, close and fierce hand to hand fighting rages in all the streets leading toward the harbor and the U-boat pens where the Germans have their strongholds.

«There was an air almost of the wars of olden days when the American colonel set out with the invitation from his general to the Nazi commander to lay down his arms. The colonel went with another colonel and a lieutenant in a small command car with a white flag at the side. In spite of this, a German sentry took a pot shot at the car of truce just as it entered the Nazi lines. The three officers dismounted, and finished their journey on foot in single file.

«When they had explained their mission, each of them was blindfolded, and led to a German command point where they were received by a major. The American envoys were not allowed to see Ramcke himself, and had to wait while the message was taken to him. Back came the refusal.

«There were about 25,000 Germans in Brest when the siege began. Now there are no more than 8,000. The Americans have taken 16,000 prisoners and have buried 1,000 dead. Some of the remnants are escaping by sea.

«This is the hardest hand-to-hand fighting the U.S. forces have met so far, and they are fighting magnificently against some of the toughest of the Nazis.» (OWI)

The Germans in that area are withdrawing toward the Mt. American troops nearing the Italian border found the Germans well entrenched in pillbox fortifications. The tunnel was twice the target for heavy attacks by RAF Lancasters last year.

ALLIES PREPARE FOR FINAL ASSAULT

WITH THE MAQUIS SOUTH OF BELFORT, September 17 — Here in the Jura Alps, south of Belfort, the opening stages of the battle of Germany are being prepared, stated UNN Correspondent David Schoenbrun in a delayed despatch.

« The battle of France is strategically at an end, with one of the most disastrous and swiftest defeats the Wehrmacht has suffered in this war, » wrote Schoenbrun.

« From the French Riviera, where the 7th army landed less than a month ago, the German army has fled northeast

RUSSIAN-FINNISH TERMS

LONDON, September 17 — The Finnish diplomat who brought the Soviet peace terms to Helsinki has returned to Moscow, taking the Finnish reply, says Norman Macdonald, BBC Stockholm correspondent. (BBC)

BREST GERMANS REFUSE TO SURRENDER

BREST, September 17 — The German commander of the Nazi-held port of Brest has suffered tremendous losses since the siege began, wrote Louis Wulf, Reuters correspondent in a delayed dispatch.

Wulf said: « An American colonel went into the German lines on Wednesday, to ask General Ramcke, commander of the doomed German garrison which has been besieged for three weeks, to surrender.

« But Ramcke, arrogant commander of the 2nd Parachute Division, sent back a six-word answer, refusing curtly the American terms, and on Thursday the American artillery resumed firing into the part of the town in German hands. Meanwhile, close and fierce hand to hand fighting rages in all the streets leading toward the harbor and the U-boat pens where the Germans have their strongholds.

« There was an air almost of the wars of olden days when the American colonel set out with the invitation from his general to the Nazi commander to lay down his arms. The colonel went with another colonel and a lieutenant in a small command car with a white flag at the side. In spite of this, a German sentry took a pot shot at the car of truce just as it entered the Nazi lines. The three officers dismounted, and finished their journey on foot in single file.

« When they had explained their mission each of them was blindfolded, and led to a German command point where they were received by a major. The American envoys were not allowed to see Ramcke himself, and had to wait while the message was taken to him. Back came the refusal.

« There were about 25,000 Germans in Brest when the siege began. Now there are no more than 3,000. The Americans have taken 16,000 prisoners and have buried 1,000 dead. Some of the remnants are escaping by sea.

« This is the hardest hand-to-hand fighting the U.S. forces have met so far, and they are fighting magnificently against some of the toughest of the Nazis. (OWI)

DUTCH MONEY FOR ALLIED TROOPS

WASHINGTON, September 17 — The Netherlands government has made Dutch currency and coin available to Gen. Eisenhower for use in the liberation of the Netherlands, it was announced in a joint statement of the Dutch Treasury and War Department released yesterday.

8TH ARMY NEAR RIMINI

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 17 — Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army, pressing relentlessly northward along the Adriatic coast toward the broad valley of the Po, were battling fiercely yesterday against powerful German tank forces striving to hold San Martino, last hilltop village south of Rimini.

Within two miles of Rimini, and overlooking the port at the edge of the Adriatic's gleaming sands, these 8th Army forces were fighting lumbering German Panther and Tiger tanks, massed on the hilltop to give strength to battered infantry forces, weary and weakened in nearly two weeks of desperate fighting to hold the 8th Army drive up the coastal corridor toward the Po.

The 8th Army's bridgehead across the Marano River is now six and a half miles wide, and at places more than two miles deep. German forces apparently still held out in the wrecked hangars and buildings of Rimini airfield, three miles south of the town along the coast, but everywhere else 8th Army Forces pressed northward.

Heavy Fighting

At a point five miles inland, British leading elements established themselves with little opposition on a low ridge within 500 yards of the highway between Rimini and San Marino, meanwhile, troops of the 2nd Gurka Rifles, supported by British tanks, crossed the Marano River to seize the ridge running northeast from the village of Mulazzano. South of the upper Marano River, where for a two-mile stretch this stream forms the southeastern boundary of the Republic of San Marino, 8th Army forces captured two hamlets northeast of Montescudo. Stiff fighting took place between Montescudo and the river, one mile to the west, but there was no indication that Allied troops had entered the republic, although German forces were reported to have massed guns in its outskirts.

On the Ligurian coast, 5th Army forces made a six-mile advance from positions north of the Serchio River to occupy the resort town of Viareggio, 14 miles northwest of Pisa. This area has apparently been the scene of bitter delaying action by German troops. Forward elements of the 5th Army were reported to have thrust past Lake Massaciuccoli to the town's southern and southeastern outskirts on September 13.

Brazilians in Battle

Further inland, Brazilian, American, British and Indian troops were meeting savage enemy resistance from Goth Line positions in the Apennines heights. Infantry forces, working their way uphill through elaborate, interwoven defense works described as «the strongest prepared defensive positions encountered in Italy,» scored small, but significant gains yesterday.

Troops of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, under command of Major General Da Mascarenhas, entered into battle for the first time along the face of the Goth Line, it was reported today.

German forces again rallied, this time centering their resistance around the village of San Lorenzo in Correggiano, some three miles south of Rimini. With the capture of this position, only the low ridge topped by the village of San Martino in Monte L'Abate remains between the advancing 5th Army and the port of Rimini itself. Fighting for this feature was reported today. (PRO)

BUDAPEST RAIL YARDS BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 17 — Up to 500 escorted heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today bombed rail yards and oil refineries in Budapest, following the bombardment of targets in the Hungarian capital by planes of the Soviet Air Force last night.

The rail yards struck were the Rakos, Kobanya and Ferencvaros yards, in all of which explosions and fires were reported. Oil refineries of the Magyar and the Shell plants were the oil targets.

Tactical Air Force bombers attacked enemy guns and troop concentrations just northwest of Regio.

In an attack which lasted over three hours, Mitchell bombers concentrated on one strongly held enemy area.

In other attacks today, fighter-bombers struck at railway transport, and Marauder bombers hit at four key rail bridges in north Italy. (UNN)

For her action in attacking German blockhouses with hand grenades and for killing three Germans, Marie has been awarded the Order of Chad by General Leclerc. (Reuter)

BOMBERS HIT GERMANY

LONDON, September 17 — Following up the past week's crushing air blows against Germany and occupied Europe, the RAF struck again at Germany and Holland last night.

Very strong forces of Lancasters attacked German airfields in Holland and Germany while Mosquitoes pounded Brunswick.

Three bombers are reported missing from the night's raids.

Flying Fortresses escorted by fighters bombed German gun positions over a wide area in Holland this morning.

In support of the Allied armies in Germany, fighters and fighter-bombers fanning out for hundreds of miles behind the Siegfried line yesterday sprayed destruction over German locomotives, tank cars, trucks and barges rushing reinforcements and supplies to the enemy defenses.

Simultaneously Marauders and Havocs of the U. S. 9th Air Force in a two-pronged attack dumped 300 tons of bombs on the isthmus and dike connecting Walcheren Island in Antwerp harbor with the mainland to prevent the German garrison from making a fortress of that position.

There was heavy anti-aircraft fire from ships in the estuary and two bombers failed to return. (Reuter)

ORDERS GIVEN TO THE DUTCH

LONDON, September 17 — A member of General Eisenhower's staff, speaking from London this afternoon, broadcast the following statement to the people of Holland:

«The following message, dated September 17, 1944, is issued by order of the Supreme Commander and is addressed to the people of the Netherlands.

«First, to the people of the southern region of the Netherlands, south of the river Lek and the Rhine: the hour for which you have been waiting so long has struck. Your qualities of courage and discipline which have brought such magnificent results since the landing in Normandy began are now called upon for one last supreme effort.

«Now that Allied forces are on your soil and Netherlands forces are acting with them, your full assistance and obedience to orders of the Supreme Commander are essential for the early liberation of the Netherlands.

«I therefore make the following statement to Netherlands forces of resistance operating south of the River Lek and the Rhine, firstly, conduct your operations against the enemy according to the rules of war. In the event of any atrocities committed against you by German forces, collect all available evidence, especially names and units of perpetrators, so that those guilty can be brought to justice by the forces of the Allies.

«Follow Orders»

«Secondly, follow precisely the orders you have received from your leader, Prince Bernhard, and from your local commanders. Do not indulge in any unorganized outbursts of violence, avoid as far as possible action against superior enemy formations.

WOMAN IS TANK GUNNER

PARIS, September 17 — Probably the only woman machine gunner in western Europe serving with tank forces, 20-year old Marie Pain was enrolled in the French Army as a soldier by General Leclerc when his forces entered Paris, Paul Bewsher, Daily Mail correspondent reported.

Bewsher wrote: «General Leclerc allowed this unusual procedure simply because he had heard her story. Her father founded the first resistance group in Savoy and Isere Departments. «Secondly, follow precisely the orders you have received from your leader, Prince Bernhard, and from your local commanders. Do not indulge in any unorganized outbursts of violence; avoid as far as possible action against superior enemy formations.

«Thirdly, your orders now are to protect, not to sabotage, factories, mines or other industrial installations. Safeguard these especially — stores of petrol, oil and lubricants — against destruction by the enemy. All these facilities will soon be needed by the people of the Netherlands and their Allies.

«Fifthly, those of you who find yourselves within an area liberated by the Allied Armies can assist them by maintaining complete discipline and remaining quiet until you receive your orders from your leaders as to the exact action required of you.

Supreme Moment

«To the population of still unliberated areas south of the River Lek and the Rhine I say: Do not attempt any mass rising. Give all the help you can to your own forces of resistance. Provide them with shelter. Give them information about the enemy's activities and movements. Many Dutchmen in key posts will now be going into hiding to avoid being captured or killed by the enemy.

operations, I say: Your time for action is not yet. It will come. When it comes you will receive your news and instructions. Until then, you must remain absolutely quiet and refrain from any action or demonstration.

« Finally, to all people of the Netherlands, I say: This is your supreme moment, fulfill your task loyally. If all play their part the liberation of the Netherlands will be achieved soon. Long live the Netherlands. »

DUTCH ORDER GENERAL STRIKE

LONDON, September 17 — The Netherlands government tonight ordered a general strike of all railway personnel in Holland, the Associated Press reported.

The announcement said that the Dutch government is fully aware of its great responsibility. After careful consultation with the high command, however, the Government was of the opinion that the act is of such primary military importance that it can no longer be delayed. The statement emphasized that the people were left to carry out the instruction in accord with their own judgment.

Over 50,000 foreign workers have escaped from German factories, Moscow Radio said yesterday, and are hiding in the Austrian mountains and woods. Some of them have formed armed units.

Moscow radio said: « Foreign workers who escape from German factories are much attracted to Austria because they hope to reach Yugoslavia or Switzerland via Austria. Armed units have attacked German policemen and military depots, shot at German frontier guards, and damaged railway installations. » (OWI)

DESTROYERS SINK NAZI CONVOYS

ALEXANDRIA, EGYPT, September 17 — Two British destroyers wiped out two German Aegean convoys in a two-hour running fight last Wednesday night and early last Thursday, Associated Press reported late last night.

The first convoy consisted of three schooners, and the second was made up of a merchantman and two armed escorts. All were sunk without damage or loss to the British ships. (OWI)

AIR DAMAGE AT PLOESTI

LONDON, September 17 — It was disclosed here last night that Allied bombing had reduced the oil production in Ploesti by two-thirds.

The American 15th Air Force, in 18 attacks, dropped 12,975 tons of bombs on the oil fields, losing 223 heavy bombers and 33 fighters. One hundred and eighty-eight German planes were destroyed in the air.

The RAF in 123 night attacks on Ploesti, lost only 15 heavy bombers. (OWI)

RED ARMY DEEP IN TRANSYLVANIA

MOSCOW, September 17 — German defenses along the southern Hungarian frontier were beginning to crumble tonight as Russian forces drove deeper into Transylvania, thrusting out attacks which in some instances have penetrated to areas behind the Nazi lines.

One unit of Cossacks operating about 50 miles forward of main Russian and Rumanian positions cabered all the occupants of a German staff headquarters far to the rear of the enemy front.

At the same time, Red Air Force bombers carried out what were described as massive raids on Hungarian rail-junction cities, including Satu, in northern Transylvania, starting huge fires in railway structures and warehouses. Huge ammunition dumps were hit as well as trains loaded with ammunition and other military supplies.

Inside Warsaw, General Bor's Patriots said tonight that they have taken the initiative in some sections of the city [illegible] of Russian artillery and air support. Russian

JAPANESE LEADERS TRY NEW STRATEGEMS

NEW YORK, September 17 — A survey of recent news from Japan reveals that Japanese leaders, while casting about for new ways and means to delay defeat, are still trying the old method of shuttling their military chiefs from post to post, to a chorus of increasingly pessimistic Press and radio comment about the war.

Latest attempt of the Japanese Fascists to induce Japan to lift herself by her own bootstraps was disclosed by Domei, the Japanese news agency, which said today that the Imperial Rule Assistance Political Society (the parliamentary wing of Japan's ruling Fascist party), in order to combat a « more intense » war situation, has launched a mass campaign with six aims.

The aims are: increased war production, increased food production, making the « people's livelihood secure, » the strengthening of transportation, the mobilization of public opinion, and « appropriate measures » to defend the Japanese mainland.

The drive began today with a mass meeting in Tokyo, according to Domei.

The Tokyo domestic radio revealed today the most recent of the now frequent shifts in high-ranking Japanese naval personnel. It said Admiral Naokuni Nomura, who was reported yesterday to have been relieved of his duties as commandant of the Yokosuka Naval Station, had been named commander-in-chief of the « Supreme Headquarters of Sea Escort. »

Relieved of his Post

This command, a Domei dispatch said, was established in November, 1943, to « direct matters pertaining to the protection of sea transportation. »

This is the third job in two months for Admiral Nomura. A member of Japan's Supreme War Council, Nomura was appointed to the Yokosuka post on August 2, after serving a few days in July as Navy Minister.

Tokyo Radio also announced that Commander Tashiro has been relieved of his post as general staff officer and member of the naval Press section and has been sent to « an undisclosed front line post » on sea duty with the Japanese fleet, which has not been seen at sea since the battle of the eastern Philippines last June 19.

Two more appointments were reported by Tokyo Radio, which said that Vice Admiral Tsukahara is now commander of the Yokosuka Naval Base and Vice Admiral Tozuka is the new chief of Naval Aviation Headquarters.

In the meantime, the Japanese people are getting a considerably franker and more discouraging picture of the war from their propagandists.

Tokyo Radio told them on Friday that the American offensive in the Pacific is extending toward the Philippines with « increasing tenacity. » In a broadcast to Germany the same day, the radio said that Allied attacks in the Pacific « are not yet comparable to those in Europe, » but added, « soon, however, the fighting in the Pacific and the remainder of East Asia will assume the scale of that in Europe today. »

SECOND LANDING MADE IN PALAUS

PEARL HARBOR, September 17 — American forces have landed on Anguar island to establish a second beachhead in the strategic Palau group, 600 miles east of the Philippines, a Pacific Fleet announcement said today.

Infantrymen of the 81st Division went ashore at Anguar, southernmost of the Palaus, under cover of heavy fire from cruisers and destroyers, and seized their initial objectives against resistance which so far has been « relatively light, » the announcement said.

Meanwhile the Marines who made the original landings in this westernmost island group in the Carolines have killed more than 1,400 Japanese and have taken the airport on the southern end of Peleliu island.

Huge ammunition dumps were hit, as well as trains loaded with ammunition and other military supplies.

Inside Warsaw, General Bor's Patriots said tonight that they have taken the initiative in some sections of the city as a result of Russian artillery and air support. Russian planes continued to drop supplies.

Late dispatches from the Polish capital said the Alexandrowski bridge across the Vistula was still intact. Presumably it was over this bridge that Russian patrols this morning were reported to have crossed into Warsaw. North of the suburb of Praga, bitter fighting continued in the Vistula-Bug River triangle.

Moscow tonight failed to confirm German reports of a new and large Russian offensive in the area of Riga, on the Baltic front. The Soviet communique instead said that German counter-attacks in the region of Mitava (Jelgava), about 20 miles southwest of Riga, had been beaten back with heavy losses to the enemy.

From Istanbul, by way of the Turkish Exchange Telegraph, came reports that Red Army troops have crossed the Bulgarian-Greek frontier in the direction of Salonika. Penetration deep into this relatively flat country, said Istanbul, would cut off German forces in northeastern Macedonia.

From the Czech Government tonight came a message hailing the linking of Russian and Czechoslovak forces in eastern Slovakia. An official spokesman said: «This was great and joyful news for the whole Republic.»

The airport is reported by the Associated Press to be one of the finest in the western Carolines.

The communique made no mention of American casualties. It said that several Japanese tanks had been destroyed and that severe fighting was continuing. Several strong enemy counter-attacks have been thrown back and the Marines fought their way ahead through strong defenses in depth.

Planes Start Fires

Carrier-based planes are continuing to give close support to the ground forces. On Friday they pounded Japanese troop concentrations, gun positions and supplies and flew north to bomb airfields at Babelthuap, largest of the Palaus. Several fires were started.

The Nimitz communique also announced air attacks by land-based planes over broad stretches of the Pacific. Heaviest assault was delivered against targets in the Truk Atoll, where Liberators dropped more than 70 tons of bombs. Other attacks were carried out against Paramushiru in the Kuriles, Wotje Atoll in the Marshalls, and Pagan Island, in the Marianas.

General MacArthur announced today that American troops on Morotai Island in the Moluccas less than 300 miles from the Philippines, have consolidated their positions without encountering Japanese opposition.

The majority of the Japanese troops formerly stationed on the island had been moved to Halmahera in the belief that the attack would be made there. The few defenders left on Morotai were reported by MacArthur to have fled into the steep, wooded hills.

Meanwhile American engineers were rushing work on the captured airstrip on the island and expressed the belief that it would soon be in shape.

At the same time American heavy bombers dropped 125 tons of bombs on Halmahera to "neutralize" two airfields there. Heavy damage was inflicted and there were no reports of interceptor opposition.

A still heavier attack was carried out against the Maranget airdrome on Celebes, main flanking Japanese base to Halmahera, where 185 tons of bombs were dropped. A medium freighter was damaged in the attack.

UNITED NATIONS

RUMANIA AND UNITED NATIONS

BUCHAREST, September 17 — Rumania has a profound desire to live on good terms with the Russian people and will never allow her relations with the Soviet Union to be disturbed, Grigore Bunescu, Rumanian Foreign Minister, said in a statement broadcast today by the Rumanian Radio.

Rumania is eager to collaborate with the United Nations in the work of world reconstruction, he added. (PWD)

APPEAL TO AUSTRIANS

LONDON, September 17 — The people of Austria today were urged by an Austrian prisoner of war speaking over the BBC to stop making useless sacrifices for the lost cause of the Nazis.

He said: "I particularly want to impress upon peasants, who will be called upon by the Nazis, not to be stupid enough to leave off harvesting to help dig German defenses. Take care to get your crops under cover to tide you over until the next harvest."

He urged that they should keep the crops for themselves and refuse to let the Nazis take them. "Now that the war is near its end, it would be nonsense to make further purposeless sacrifices for the Nazis." (PWD)

UNRRA'S TASKS DEFINED

MONTREAL, September 17 — UNRRA is now ready to answer calls for assistance as the Allied armies liberate United Nations territory, the newly elected chairman, L. Pearson, said yesterday in his first statement.

Among the issues which will come up for determination is UNRRA's policy of bringing relief to the citizens of ex-enemy nations. Another question will be the part UNRRA will play in aiding persons of United Nations citizenship who have been driven into enemy territory. (OWI)

ATLANTIC COAST HURRICANE KILLS 39

NEW YORK, September 17 — The hurricane, which swept the Atlantic coast of the United States last Friday, has resulted in an estimated death-roll of 39. (Reuter)

STEAMER FOR SWISS RED CROSS

WASHINGTON, September 17 — The Panama steamer El Oriente will be transferred by the War Shipping Administration to the Swiss Foundation of the International Red Cross, it was announced yesterday by the Maritime Commission, which has given its approval for the transfer.

The Commission said the ship would be used principally for delivery of parcels of food and supplies to United States citizens who are prisoners of war in German-occupied countries. (OWI)

NO SANCTUARY FOR HITLER

LONDON, September 17 — The Sunday Express, commenting today on the possibility that Hitler might flee to Argentina after Germany's collapse, warned that country not to give him refuge.

"The editorial said: "It is time to use plain words to that Nazi-inclined country. We in Britain, in common with our Allies, do not intend that Hitler shall find in any land any sanctuary short of the grave." (PWB)

CHURCHILL MESSAGE TO INDIA

LONDON, September 17 — Winston Churchill, British Premier, in a message today to the Hyderabad India Defence Council said: "Though our successes are great and growing there is still hard fighting to be done — especially against our Japanese foe, who has now been driven from India and with whom we are determined to settle our account." (PWB)

MORE COLLABORATORS ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, September 17 — Five more collaborators have been arrested by French authorities, the five include three Vichy militiamen charged with murdering Georges Mandel, former French cabinet member, and suspected of the murder of Jean Zay, French Minister of National Education, it was stated in press reports arriving here today.

Georges Claude, a member of the French Academy, who invented the flying torpedo, has been arrested near Nancy. It was also reported that several launching sites for these torpedoes were located near the place where Claude was seized.

The American Broadcasting Station in Europe announced today that Pierre Taittinger, president of the Paris Municipal Council during Nazi occupation, has been arrested and charged with collaboration. The functions of the council have been taken over by the French Committee.

In a later brodcast, ABSIE said that Zay had been murdered on the same day as Mandel and in similar circumstances.

An Associated Press report from Paris yesterday stated that four members of the Vichy-directed police force were involved in Mandel's murder, one of whom was later killed by the Gestapo. The other three were arrested yesterday on order of a Paris grand jury after an investigation report by a Versailles group had been made public. (AP - ABSIE)

SPELLMAN IN PARIS

RUMANIA AND UNITED NATIONS

BUCHAREST, September 17 — Rumania has a profound desire to live on good terms with the Russian people and will never allow our relations with the Soviet Union to be disturbed, Grigore Buzesti, Rumanian Foreign Minister, said in a statement broadcast today by the Rumanian Radio.

Rumania is eager to collaborate with the United Nations in the work of world reconstruction, he added. (PWD)

LONDON, September 17 — The people of Austria today were urged by an Austrian prisoner of war speaking over the BBC to stop making useless sacrifices for the lost cause of the Nazis.

He said: «I particularly want to impress upon peasants, who will be called upon by the Nazis, not to be stupid enough to leave off harvesting to help dig German defenses. Take care to get your crops under cover to tide you over until the next harvest.»

He urged that they should keep the crops for themselves and refuse to let the Nazis take them. «Now that the war is near its end, it would be nonsense to make further purposeless sacrifices for the Nazis.» (PWD)

UNRRA'S TASKS DEFINED

MONTREAL, September 17 — UNRRA is now ready to answer calls for assistance as the Allied armies liberate United Nations territory, the newly elected chairman, L. Pearson, said yesterday in his first statement.

Among the issues which will come up for determination is UNRRA's policy of bringing relief to the citizens of ex-enemy nations. Another question will be the part UNRRA will play in aiding persons of United Nations citizenship who have been driven into enemy territory. (OWI)

ATLANTIC COAST HURRICANE KILLS 39

NEW YORK, September 17 — The hurricane, which swept the Atlantic coast of the United States last Friday, has resulted in an estimated death roll of 39.

Damage is estimated at 50-million dollars. (Reuter)

RECONSTRUCTION OF BELGIUM

BRUSSELS, September 17 — The first openly published and freely circulated issue of the Patriot newspaper La Libre Belgique has appeared with a joint proclamation from the Socialist, Liberal and Catholic parties pledging their «whole-hearted support» for the reconstruction of Belgium.

The proclamation said that the three parties wish to maintain those national institutions «whose elasticity permits necessary reforms,» and that they will devote themselves to the «strengthening of bonds» with Belgium's colonies and to the repair of war damage.

The proclamation promised «swift and severe» justice to Belgian traitors and collaborators. (OWI)

24 NEW CARGO SHIPS

WASHINGTON, September 17 — The United States Maritime Commission yesterday announced the launching of 24 more cargo ships since September 7, raising to 1,116 the number of launchings this year.

The total launched since December seventh, 1941, is 3,840.

MORE COLLABORATORS ARRESTED

WASHINGTON, September 17 — Five more collaborators have been arrested by French authorities, the five include three Vichy militiamen charged with murdering Georges Mandel, former French cabinet member, and suspected of the murder of Jean Zay, French Minister of National Education, it was stated in press reports arriving here today.

Georges Claude, a member of the French Academy, who invented the flying torpedo, has been arrested near Nancy. It was also reported that several launching sites for these torpedoes were located near the place where Claude was seized.

The American Broadcasting Station in Europe announced today that Pierre Taittinger, president of the Paris Municipal Council during Nazi occupation, has been arrested and charged with collaboration. The functions of the council have been taken over by the French Committee.

In a later brodcast, ABSIE said that Zay had been murdered on the same day as Mandel and in similar circumstances.

An Associated Press report from Paris yesterday stated that four members of the Vichy-directed police force were involved in Mandel's murder, one of whom was later killed by the Gestapo. The other three were arrested yesterday on order of a Paris grand jury after an investigation report by a Versailles group has been made public.

CONCENTRATION CAMP MURDERS

WASHINGTON, September 17 — Stockholms-Tidningen, quoting «private» sources, said yesterday that Ernst Thaelmann, former German Communist leader, and Dr. Breitscheid, former Socialist leader and Prussian Minister of the Interior, had been murdered in the Buchenwald concentration camp on September 19.

The dispatch said that Thaelmann and Breitscheid had been killed along with 280 others on the order of Himmler, and referred to the executions as part of an extermination campaign for the elimination of «all those who, after Nazism's collapse, might play a prominent role.»

The dispatch also said that since July a total of 2,500 persons have been liquidated in German concentration camps.

The BBC today quoted a report reaching London which said that workers in the Daimler-Benz works at Steyr, Austria, went on strike when they heard of the murder of Thaelmann. The report said that the strikers damaged machinery before they were dispersed by tear gas. Because of the acute labor shortage, no arrests were made, but the workers were deprived of a week's rations. (OWI-BBC)

GERMANS SEIZE 300 NORWEGIANS

LONDON, September 17 — As the Allied armies press forward into the Reich, Nazi panic is spreading in the Scandinavian countries where Germans are reported to be carrying out mass arrests and executions.

Norwegian Government circles reported that following the widespread arrests on Thursday in Denmark, the Germans seized 100 Norwegians at Namdalen, Namsen and Roervik in the Trondheim area, and 200 others at Halden.

The desperate shortage of manpower in Germany is stressed by a report from Radio Oslo, stating that all men between the ages of 18 and 45 belonging to the Nasjonal Samling — Quisling's former national party — would be called up at any moment. Explanation given for this move is that the «acute situation» makes it necessary. (OWI)

JAPS BEGIN TO TELL TRUTH ABOUT NAZIS

WASHINGTON, September 17 — In its daily summary of European war news yesterday, the Tokyo Radio quoted the official Soviet communique — a new departure for the Japs.

The Japanese paper, Yomiuri Hochi, of Tokyo, published an article yesterday from their correspondent inside Germany who said that: «the Germans are not of late placing high hopes in the new weapons as they once did.»

Commenting on other aspects of Germany's deteriorating situation, the correspondent said that the German rations had been reduced because «refugees and troops from the eastern front, the Balkans, France and other lost territories must be fed in Germany in the future.»

He concluded: «Never before have I seen such serious looks as the German people have today. Ears are tuned in on the radio and their eyes are glued to the newspapers for war news.» (OWI)

ROME STREETS RENAMED

ROME, September 17 — Many streets and avenues in Rome will be given new names, it was decided yesterday by a special Commission. Adolf Hitler Avenue will become Fosse Ardeatine Avenue, while Piazza Mattiri Fascisti will be named for Don Giovanni Minzoni, a priest who was beaten to death by the Fascists in the early days of the regime.

Both the Impero Fascista and Mussolini Forum will have their names altered, becoming respectively, the Foro Italico and the Campo Olimpico. (UNN)

BRIG. GENERAL HUME RECEIVES MEDAL

FLORENCE, September 17 — Brig. General Edgar Hume, commanding the 5th Army Military Government, was presented with the Academic Medal of Florence University by the new president, Professor Piero Calamandrei, at a University reception yesterday.

Republican Fascist police carried off linen, money, watches, cameras and books. They found a few trucks, gasoline and tires, which provided Nazi-Fascist propaganda with an excuse to state that large quantities of war material had been deposited in the monastery.

Questioned by a Vatican representative, the Republican Fascist Police Chief, Pietro Caruso, could offer no justification for this incident, but said, «I am acting for my government.»

Only after 11 hours did Police Chief Caruso and his subordinates, including a German lieutenant, leave the Basilica.

The damage suffered by the Basilica amounted to one million lire. (UNN)

GENERALS RELIEVED OF DUTIES

ROME, September 17 — Sixteen Italian Air Force generals have been relieved of their duties, together with 30 colonels, 122 superior officers and many civilian employees, in conformity with the Epuration laws.

The official announcement added that Epuration Commissions will consider the cases of all these officers who in any way derived material benefits from the Fascist Regime, and all who received Fascist honors and showed their sympathy for the regime. (UNN)

FOOD REACHES FLORENCE

FLORENCE, September 17 — This city's food situation has been notably improved by the arrival here of 140 tons of supplies. The deliveries were made possible by the intervention of A.M.G., which was also responsible for the restoration of electric lighting services tonight. (UNN)

FORMER ARMY MEN CALLED UP

ROME, September 17 — All former army personnel up to the rank of sergeant born within the years 1915 to 1924, inclusive, have been called up again for military service.

The call-up order was issued by the War Ministry in full accord with the Allied Control Commission. (PWB)

JEWS HOLD FIRST ROSH HASHANAH SERVICES

ROME, September 17 — The first Rosh Hashanah services in Italy since Allied liberation were held tonight throughout liberated Italy by Jews of more than 25 nationalities, who celebrated both the advent of the Jewish New Year, 5705, and the practice of freedom of religion, one of the four freedoms guaranteed by the Atlantic Charter.

The services were conducted in Rome, Naples and Bari, in recently liberated Florence and Leghorn, and in every large military establishment in liberated Italy. There also were special services held at the front lines by the Jewish chaplains of the Allied armies.

To the Jews of Rome, Rosh Hashanah marked the first High Holiday service held since the Germans made a nightmare of their existence a year ago — almost to the day. At that time, the Germans extorted 50 kilos of gold from the Jewish community under the threat of massacre or deportation. The promise meant nothing to the enemy. They deported 1,827 Jews, including 200 children, from Rome. Nothing has been heard from this group since.

At the service tonight in the Grand Synagogue on the banks of the Tiber, these victims of the Nazis were not forgotten. While the New Year was welcomed as a year which would bring complete freedom to Italy and the people of all the world, more than 4,000 members of the congregation intoned the Kaddish for their lost co-religionists — the Jewish prayer for the dead.

The Grand Rabbi of Rome, Dr. Israel Zolli, who successfully hid from the Nazis for nine months by posing as the father of a famous Italian soprano, said prayers of

In a short speech, Gen. Hume expressed the hope that the University would soon resume its activity. President Calamandrei then spoke of the future in store for the University under the new liberal regime.

Posthumous honors were awarded to the memory of the Italian and Allied students who had fallen during the war for the liberation of Tuscany. (UNN)

CHURCH VIOLATED BY FASCISTS

ROME, September 17 — Particulars are now available regarding the violation of the extra-territoriality of the Roman Basilica of San Paolo, during the Nazi-Fascist occupation last winter, by Fascist Republican Police with the pretext of searching for refugees who had taken shelter there.

Refugees and persons residing in the neighborhood say that on the night of February 3, the perimeter of the Basilica was surrounded by 300 Republican police while a few succeeded in entering the monastery by subterfuge and forced some of the monks to come downstairs. They, together with the Palatine Guards, were questioned, mistreated and insulted.

All rooms were searched, several doors were torn down, closets were smashed and suitcases were forced open. The sympathy for the regime.

The Grand Rabbi of Rome, Dr. Isreal Zolli, who successfully hid from the Nazis for nine months by posing as the father of a famous Italian soprano, said prayers of thanks for the Allied liberation and added: «Soon the whole world will enjoy the freedom we enjoy now in Rome.»

A sound stage of Italy's Hollywood at Cinecitta, on Rome's outskirts, was the scene for the Rosh Hashanah services for Jewish refugees from 12 countries. For some of this group it was the first High Holiday service in 11 years. They had spent the intervening years either in Nazi concentration camps or fleeing or hiding from the enemy.

Walls of Jericho

In the congregation were Jews from Poland, Germany, Yugoslavia, Great Britain, Rumania, Greece, Turkey, France, Belgium, Hungary and Russia.

More than 2,000 Jews of the Allied armies gathered in a large Roman theatre for the Rosh Hashanah services. Two Yugoslav girls lit the candles symbolic of the beginning of the service.

In the congregation were men and women of the Allied armies from the United States, Great Britain, Poland, South Africa, Palestine, France and Canada. The services were conducted jointly by the American chaplain, Captain Jacob Hochman of Chelsea, Mass., and Pottsville, Pa., and by Captain Meyer Berman of London.

Brigadier General Thoburn K. Brown, Rome Area Allied commander, was present at the services at the invitation of the two chaplains. He was accompanied by Colonel Charles Poletti, AMG regional commissioner in Rome.

General Brown told the military congregation that the service, in addition to commemorating a traditional Hebrew holiday, was a reiteration of the strong belief of all Allied nations «that every man is entitled to life, liberty and pursuit of happiness.»

Chaplain Hochman, commenting on the Allied assault on Germany itself, said: «Hitler doesn't read the Bible. But he certainly has heard of the walls of Jericho and the walls of his Jericho are tottering, and they will come crumbling down. That will be the end of the nightmare that he has brought down on the human race.» (UNN)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 17 — Today's communique:

Land:

Advances were made by Allied troops yesterday between Antwerp and the sea. Our bridgehead over the Meuse-Escaut Canal continues to be subjected to enemy counter-attacks but we are holding firm.

Farther south on the German frontier, our forces are fighting in the southern outskirts of Aachen and strong elements have broken through the Siegfried defences east of the city against heavy resistance.

We have also pierced the defences below Rott and have advanced into Rotgen.

Moderate resistance is being met across the frontier, east of Saint Vith, but our forces farther south, near Brandscheid, are encountering heavy resistance.

In the Moselle Valley, our forces are now across the river in strength, and elements have advanced a considerable distance east of Nancy.

The advance from southern France is making progress against varying resistance.

Elements have pushed, without opposition, to Chaumont, but advances northeast of Vesoul, at the western approaches to the Belfort Gap, were made against defenses that the enemy has been strengthening.

In the Alps, Allied troops have entered Modane, at the western entrance of the Modane railway tunnel linking France with Italy.

The enemy is withdrawing in the direction of the high Mont Cenis Pass.

Air:

In Holland, the Arnemuiden and Bath Dykes, linking by road and rail the island of Walcheren to the Dutch mainland, were attacked yesterday by medium and light bombers.

Other medium bombers struck at two strongpoints north of Boulogne. Fighters and fighter-bombers attacked transportation targets in Holland. (Reuter)

Land:

In a day of heavy fighting, the 5th Army has increased its bridgehead over the Marano River. Several strong enemy counter-attacks against this bridgehead have been beaten off with heavy losses to the enemy.

American, British, Indian and Brazilian troops of the 5th Army are still engaged in fierce fighting on a wide sector of the Goth Line.

entered Lucca found the city in the hands of Patriots, who, after mopping up the remnants of the Nazi-Fascists, attempted to re-establish order. North of Lucca, overpowered by preponderant enemy forces, Patriots were forced to withdraw into the mountains, where they are continuing the fight with extreme vigor. In this sector Patriots killed five German officers and took four prisoners, inflicting other losses on the enemy in men and materiel. Five vehicles were destroyed.

Fighting is proceeding in the southern slopes of the Ligurian Alps where German troops are making desperate attempts to keep open the mountain passes. Patriots are engaging the enemy everywhere attacking communications lines, depots and isolated garrisons, while strong contingents of the Wehrmacht are evacuating Turin and Alessandria and are heading for the French border. An open battle took place in Val d'Osta in the vicinity of Quarto Pretoria. The enemy lost 400 men. Patriot losses were very heavy. After carrying out their task, the Patriot groups engaged in the fighting received orders to withdraw to the contiguous valleys which lend themselves better to guerrilla warfare.

Patriots blew up the Milan-Turin electric railway line on August 13 causing the derailment of a train full of goods and serious damage to telegraphic and railway installations. On August 13 the electric plant of Vezza d'Oglio was blown up. The next day a stretch of railroad between Lecco and Sondrio was torn up.

On August 18 two trainloads of goods were derailed between Arona and Borgo Ticino.

In Brescia Province, Patriots attacked barracks of the Republican Fascist Guards at Capodiponte, capturing all the garrison, arms, ammunition and food supplies. (UNN)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 17 — Tonight's communique:

During today, north of Jelgava (Mitava), our troops repelled strong enemy tank and infantry attacks, inflicting on the enemy heavy losses in men and material.

In northern Transylvania, our troops, jointly with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Blazheria, Burchiu, Brachunesh, Nikolesht, and the railway station of Burchiu.

On the other sectors of the front, fighting of local importance and patrol activities took place.

During September 16, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 106 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire 101 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

Allied Paratroop Landings in Holland: The Anglo-Americans having tried in vain during the past few days to break through the German barrier at the Scheldt estuary and at the Meuse, have landed to-day, Sunday afternoon, strong airborne formations in the area of Tilburg, Eindhoven and Nijmegen. The landing was made under great air umbrella, and enemy paratroops were followed by numerous cargogliders. German troops in this area immediately engaged the enemy encircled formations and annihilated already a considerable part of them. The first prisoners taken were parachutists belonging to the First Allied Army of Airborne troops. Enemy losses are heavy.

Western Front: On either side of Nancy, still fighting took place. German counter-attacks tore a large gap into the northern flank of the enemy penetration area. The French Second Tank Division which is driving on Epinal suffered heavy losses in German counterthrusts and was unable to make any further advance.

Eastern Front: Correspondent Karl Bluecher reports that severe defensive fighting on the Eastern Front continued also during the past 24 hours. It is said that German troops on the whole were able to ward off all Russian assaults. Only north of Bauske, the enemy managed to make a deep breach. This sector was subjected to extreme pressure since the beginning of the Soviet offensive in the Baltic countries. Fighting there has been especially stiff for the crossings of the river Narew.

German Troops Withdraw from Kandalaksha Sector: The complete withdrawal of German troops from the old Kandalaksha front has now been concluded. German competent circles now give an account of these German detachment movements showing the difficulties caused by the Soviets who by a sweeping encirclement from the north tried to bottle up the bulk of German troops in this sector. However frictionless cooperation between German and Finnish posts enabled a rapid execution of military measures and within the shortest time, most of the German supplies could be removed and military establishments dismantled or destroyed.

U.S. 1ST ARMY BREAKS THROUGH SIEGFRIED LINE BREST GARRISON OF 12,000 REPORTED SURRENDERED

SHAEF, September 16 — The American 1st Army today broke through the Siegfried Line and are now fanning out into the country in the rear of this much-vaunted zone of defenses, it was reported late tonight.

The port city of Brest on the Brittany Peninsula was reported by Radio Paris late tonight to have been captured, together with a force of 12,000 Germans.

In less than 48 hours after Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' forces began their armored drive against the

It was reported late tonight that a third crossing of the Escaut Canal had been made by the British 2nd Army in the area north of Moll. Assault boats and rafts were used to force the crossing. A mighty force of artillery and tanks is lined up along the southern bank of the canal, ready to hurl its weight against any active German resistance.

To the south of the American 1st Army, General Patton's forces rolled past liberated Nancy and Epinal, threw an armored drive against the fortress city of Metz, and struck down toward the Belfort Gap to join the American 7th Army in a push toward the gateway to southwestern Germany. Belfort is reported to have been reached by the 7th Army.

In one thrust across the Moselle, the 3rd Army pushed 10 to 15 miles beyond Nancy in an armored drive threatening the entire German position in this area.

In the Metz sector, the German position was growing hourly more desperate as the Americans drove in from the south and pushed down from the northwest.

Panzer Division Destroyed

Near Epinal, the German 113th Panzer Division has been almost totally destroyed as a fighting unit by the suddeness of General Patton's push southward. About 4,000 men were killed, and nearly as many captured.

Along and near the Channel coast, Polish forces of the Canadian 1st Army sent patrols across the Dutch border southwest of Hulst in an effort to cut off the German corridor of retreat across the Scheldt Estuary. The Germans are now confined to a strip some eight to 10 miles in depth, and it is estimated that this pocket contains the elements of four German divisions.

Canadian infantry won a strong new bridgehead over the western branch of the Leopold Canal near Eecool, narrowing the German hold on the south side of the Scheldt River, which is denying the Allies an access to Antwerp from the sea. German resistance in this area seemed to be weakening.

In the Dunkirk area, the Canadians reduced two German strongpoints on the northeastern perimeter of the port. Other troops gained positions astride coastal routes south of Cap Gris Nez.

NEARLY 1,000 NIGHT BOMBERS ATTACK KIEL

LONDON, September 16 — Night air fleets numbering nearly 1,000 RAF and Canadian bombers last night rounded off one of the most intensive weeks in bombing history with heavy attacks on the German Baltic port and submarine base of Kiel, still smoldering from Tuesday's attack by U. S. heavy bombers.

Other RAF aircraft were out on an extensive minelaying program, and yet others attacked Lubeck and Berlin. Eleven aircraft are missing from the night's operations.

U. S. 1ST ARMY BREAKS THROUGH SIEGFRIED LINE BREST GARRISON OF 12,000 REPORTED SURRENDERED

SHAEF, September 16 — The American 1st Army today broke through the Siegfried Line and are now fanning out into the country in the rear of this much-vaunted zone of defenses, it was reported late tonight.

The port city of Brest on the Brittany Peninsula was reported by Radio Paris late tonight to have been captured, together with a force of 12,000 Germans.

In less than 48 hours after Lieut. Gen. Courtney Hodges' forces began their armored drive against the Siegfried Line with the aid of special secret devices, they ripped open a six-to-eight-mile-deep gap through the zone and were fanning out rapidly to cover the forces following them. They have now taken up positions on the east side of the line for a drive toward the Rhine Valley and the industrial heart of Germany.

The thrust through the 10 mile wide breach beyond Aachen was one of four developing drives into the Reich. American troops have reached Stolberg, east of Aachen, and have captured Lammersdorf to the southeast.

The Germans are resisting very strongly in the Prum area, but it was reported that several small towns southeast of the city have been captured by General Hodges' troops.

British Strengthen Bridgehead

On the northern flank of the American 1st Army, the Germans have twice counter-attacked the British bridgehead over the Escaut Canal at Gheel. Both attacks were thrown back, and the British have strengthened the bridgehead steadily. The importance Germany places on preventing a large-scale Allied break-through into Holland is shown by the constant waves of counter-attacks in this area.

The Germans are also desperately counter-attacking in the area of Hechtel, where the British have a second bridgehead across the canal. Despite heavy mortar fire, Allied units have held firmly.

7th Army in a push toward the gateway to southwestern Germany. Belfort is reported to have been reached by the 7th Army.

In one thrust across the Moselle, the 3rd Army pushed 10 to 15 miles beyond Nancy in an armored drive threatening the entire German position in this area.

In the Metz sector, the German position was growing hourly more desperate as the Americans drove in from the south and pushed down from the northwest.

Panzer Division Destroyed

Near Epinal, the German 112th Panzer Division has been almost totally destroyed as a fighting unit by the suddeness of General Patton's push southward. About 4,000 men were killed, and nearly as many captured.

Along and near the Channel coast, Polish forces of the Canadian 1st Army sent patrols across the Dutch border southwest of Hulst in an effort to cut off the German corridor of retreat across the Scheldt Estuary. The Germans are now confined to a strip some eight to 10 miles in depth, and it is estimated that this pocket contains the elements of four German divisions.

Canadian infantry won a strong new bridgehead over the western branch of the Leopold Canal near Eecool, narrowing the German hold on the south side of the Scheldt River, which is denying the Allies an access to Antwerp from the sea. German resistance in this area seemed to be weakening.

In the Dunkirk area, the Canadians reduced two German strongpoints on the northeastern perimeter of the port. Other troops gained positions astride coastal routes south of Cap Griz Nez.

LONDON, September 16 — Night air fleets numbering nearly 1,000 RAF and Canadian bombers last night rounded off one of the most intensive weeks in bombing history with heavy attacks on the German Baltic port and submarine base of Kiel, still smoldering from Tuesday's attack by U. S. heavy bombers.

Other RAF aircraft were out on an extensive minelaying program, and yet others attacked Lubeck and Berlin. Eleven aircraft are missing from the night's operations.

A great load of explosive and incendiary bombs was dumped on Kiel, a naval base now of particular importance to the Germans in their attempt to bring back by sea troops marooned in Finland and elsewhere in the Baltic.

NAZIS EVACUATING CRETE

CAIRO, September 17 (Sunday) — The German garrison of Crete is now massed in the Canea area, on the north side of the island, awaiting evacuation to the mainland. The rest of the island has been almost, if not completely evacuated, said British United Press late Saturday night.

Although the Germans tried to defend the naval base by putting up a smoke screen and a heavy barrage, and sent up many fighters, bombing was very concentrated and fires broke out that were visible for 100 miles. At Berlin there was intense flak, but over Lübeck the defenses were comparatively weak.

Despite misty weather yesterday, 9th USAAF fighter-bombers flew 363 sorties, mainly behind the German lines from Strasbourg to Cologne, and accounted for hundreds of rail and road vehicles. The day's total included the destruction or disabling of over 400 motor trucks, 17 locomotives, 125 railroad cars, 10 armored vehicles, a barge, gun positions, and a fuel dump. The fighter-bombers were not once challenged by German fighters, and only one is missing.

Spitfires patrolling over Holland last night smashed at a concentration of barges near Beure, after Allied airmen the whole day long had attacked shipping and harbors on the Scheldt Estuary. Rocket-Typhoons and bomb-carrying Spitfires of 2nd TAF provided close support for ground forces investing the port of Dunkirk.

The British Air Ministry disclosed today that planes from the RAF Command alone dropped well over 14,500 tons of bomb on German industrial targets during the tremendous and continuous five-day assault from Sunday to Thursday of this week. At one time during that period, fires were burning simultaneously at Münster, Stuttgart, Frankfurt, and Osnabrück, while Darmstadt was still smoldering. The fires were so fierce that smoke blew all the way from Germany to England, the Air Ministry said. It is still too early to assess the devastation done during these assaults, owing to the great clouds of smoke still covering part of the five cities during reconnaissance.

Greatest Aerial Destruction

This «greatest aerial destruction the world has ever known,» as an official report from SHAEF described it, was made by the combined bombing fleets of the RAF, the 8th USAAF, the 15th USAAF, and the 9th USAAF. Between them, they dropped more than 40,000 tons of explosives on German soil. The RAF dropped 18,000 tons; the 8th USAAF 14,428 tons; the 15th USAAF 4,226 tons; and the 9th USAAF 2,500 tons.

The combined assault was made possible by the collapse of the German armies in France and Belgium, which released bombers from close supporting operations with the Allied armies.

Meanwhile, clinging to vain hopes that new weapons will stave off their inevitable end, the Germans sent more flying bombs over southern England today, the first for more than two weeks. It is thought that they were launched from the air over the North Sea from specially-adapted Heinkels.

Duncan Sandys, chairman of the Anti-Flying-Bomb Committee, said this form of attack could be carried on from airfields in the heart of Germany.

Lord Woolton, British Reconstruction Minister, today warned the people of London that they would be foolish to assume that «the enemy has exhausted his capacity to invent devilish instruments that can be discharged from a safe distance until the RAF finds out their hiding place.»

German cross-Channel gunners are estimated to have fired upward of 1,000 shells toward the Dover area during last week. The last attack, which lasted 13 hours, ceased shortly after [illegible] Friday. Dover residents were warned quarter of a million German prisoners. General Jacob L. Devers' 6th Army Group captured 82,000 Germans since the landings on the Mediterranean coast, and Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery's 21st Army Group, composed of the Canadian 1st Army and the British 2nd Army, have taken 70,000 prisoners.

In addition, scores of thousands of Germans are locked up in Channel ports, at Brest, and along the southern banks of the Scheldt River. Few have any hope of getting back to Germany before the end of the war. (Reuter)

SHAEF, September 16 — General Dwight Eisenhower today awarded the Legion of Merit to Col. R. Ernest Dupuy of New York, in charge of SHAEF Public Relations, which handled the greatest volume of news in military history during the landings in France.

Colonel Dupuy directed publicity from Allied headquarters when Brig. Gen. Thomas Davis became ill just before D-day. (OWI)

FRENCH UNITS JOIN AT CHAUMONT

LANGRES, September 16 — Fighting Frenchmen from two units joined hands Thursday morning in Chaumont, 33 kilometers north of Langres, effecting a new contact between the northern and southern armies in France, stated a delayed dispatch from UNN Correspondent William Doerflinger.

From near Langres, liberated on Wednesday afternoon after a sharp battle, five French soldiers drove up the winding highway into Chaumont, where, after an uneventful trip, they arrived at 0930 hours to inform the French unit holding Chaumont that other French forces had moved up from Langres to a point on the highway between the two cities. So, for all practical purposes, the gap between Chaumont and Langres was closed. (UNN)

BLACKOUT ENDS IN ENGLAND

LONDON, September 16 — Tonight is the last night of the complete blackout in England, the BBC announced.

After more than five years, the rigid blackout restrictions have been relaxed to permit the use of ordinary instead of blackout curtains in houses, and streets may be lit up. London, however, will not get its extra street light immediately, the BBC said, because it has too many lighting systems, many of them without a master switch.

Under the dimout orders issued by the Ministry of Home Security, the blackout will continue in most of the coastal areas of Britain. (BBC)

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, September 16 — Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army yesterday widened to five miles their bridgehead across the Marano River, and pushed along the Adriatic coast to within three miles of Rimini, eastern terminus of the main lateral highway along the Po Valley to Milan and industrial north Italy.

In the fighting north of the Marano River, the twin villages of Ospedaletto and Parrignano have been captured, and 8th Army forces were reported to be fighting for a third hamlet, San Lorenzo in Correggiano, one mile north of the river on the coastal plain. Greek forces have reached

CANADIAN, GREEK FORCES EXTEND MARANO BRIDGEHEAD

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 16 — Canadian and Greek troops of the 8th Army yesterday widened to five miles their bridgehead across the Marano River, and pushed along the Adriatic coast to within three miles of Rimini, eastern terminus of the main latera highway along the Po Valley to Milan and industrial north Italy.

In the fighting north of the Marano River, the two villages of Ospedaletto and Petrignano have been captured, and 8th Army forces were reported to be fighting for a third hamlet, San Lorenzo in Correggiano, one mile north of the river on the coastal plain. Greek forces have reached the edge of Rimini airfield, where German troops have barricaded themselves in wrecked shops and hangar buildings.

With enemy infantry forces battered and disorganized by the savage onslaughts of 8th Army ground and air forces, the Germans have rushed forward Mark IV and Panther tanks and heavy self-propelled guns in last-minute attempts to stem the threatening Allied break-through into the vulnerable Valley of the Po.

Although heavy fighting was reported on the 5th Army front, with American, British and Indian troops reported to have fought their way into the Gothic Line defenses, only small gains were mentioned. Enemy resistance was said to have stiffened considerably, and every approach toward the prepared enemy positions high on the Apennine slopes had been bitterly contested. Extensive minefields were being encountered, it was reported.

In addition to the gains made north of the Marano River, 8th Army forces made considerable gains in the sector north and west of Gemmano, some eight miles inland.

British troops captured the village of Casticio, three miles south of Petrignano, southernmost point of the Marano River bridgehead, and the nearby community of Il Poggio. Monte Colombo, a hilltop village just north of the Conca River, was wrested from the battered remnants of the 98th German Infantry Division, now reduced to a few hundred «Reatives. These same 8th Army troops pushed on two miles to the west to capture the village of Montescudo. German reinforcements rushed forward failed to save this latter place.

Just a few hundred yards west of Gemmano, former anchor-point of the German defenses across the coastal corridor, 8th Army forces retook the fiercely contested Hill 449, and then pressed forward to seize the villages of Zollara, one mile west of Gemmano, and Taverna, northwest of the town and on the north banks of the Conca River.

It was announced today that more than 5,500 prisoners have been taken since the start of the 8th Army's Adriatic offensive on August 26. It was also revealed today that the 46th British Division, commanded by major General «Ginger» Hawkesworth, had formed the spearhead of the original attack that had breached the center of the enemy's prepared defenses across the coastal corridor south of Pesaro.

On the Ligurian coast, 5th Army patrols reported contact with enemy forces near the seaside resort town of Viareggio. German heavy and medium artillery were active in this sector. (PRO)

D.A.F. STRIKES ENEMY POSITIONS OUTSIDE RIMINI

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 16 — Light bombers of the Desert Air Force, called into action despite stormy weather, attacked late yesterday afternoon the «last remaining German positions south and west of Rimini» it was announced here today.

Baltimore bombers, switched from other tasks at Army request, bombed enemy artillery and anti-tank positions at San Lorenzo in Correggiano and at San Fortunato. Heavy fighting for San Lorenzo was reported by 8th Army this morning. San Fortunato is three miles farther northwest, and only two miles from Rimini itself.

Photo reconnaissance over the three Greek airfields attacked by heavy bombers yesterday showed 77 enemy planes destroyed and 20 damaged. Of the destroyed aircraft, 60 were Ju-52's, German transport planes.

At the Salamis naval base, a destroyer and a torpedo boat were set afire, and over 10,000 square feet of an ammunition building group were destroyed. (PRO)

GERMAN PRISONERS INDEX TO 8TH ARMY'S SUCCESS

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 16 — An infallible guide to the success of any military operation is the number of prisoners taken, and the fact that the 8th Army collected over 1,200 in one day's recent fighting on September 13, indicates that the stiff German resistance in the Adriatic sector is being overcome, writes a UNN correspondent.

The correspondent added that the capture of so many prisoners in a single day is not surprising in view of the tremendous concentration of artillery fire which the 8th Army had employed the previous night. To the terrific barrage was added the impact of a large-scale aerial bombardment during daylight.

One German prisoner was so grateful he had survived the ordeal that he cheerfully pointed out on a map the positions of many important German command posts. Spitfires took off at once and the targets received individual poundings.

The German attempt to hold the Allied advance between San Marino and Rimini, thus barring progress to the Lombards plains, is being shattered piece by piece, the correspondent concluded, although the enemy is perfectly aware that an Allied break-through here will be the beginning of the end of his whole campaign in Italy. YUGOSLAVS ON OFFENSIVE IN SERBIA

LONDON, September 16 — Yugoslav Army of Liberation [illegible] offensive in all sectors in Serbia.

Heavy fighting between Yugoslav forces and the Germans in east Serbia is in progress in the south Morava River sector near Leskovac, 35 miles south of Nis.

To the northwest, Patriot units liberated six towns, including Zvornik on the Drina River, which is on the main route from Belgrade to Sarajevo.

German communications were attacked in Montenegro between Podgorica and Niksic, near the Albanian border.

Marshal Tito's communique reported that since the beginning of the offensive, large numbers of Germans have been killed or captured. (OWI-BBC)

BULGARIANS WELCOME RED ARMY IN SOFIA

MOSCOW, September 16 — The Red Army, cutting across the Balkans toward central Europe, passed through Sofia today, and was wildly cheered as its trucks and tanks rolled onward through the decorated, flag-lined streets of the Bulgarian capital.

The Soviet communique said Russian forces entered the city at 1800 hours, swept through it, and pushed onward toward eastern Serbia.

The only large-scale operations mentioned in the Russian communique were continued advances by Rumanian and Red Army forces in northern Transylvania, and in the triangle bounded by the confluence of the Bug and Vistula Rivers northwest of Praga.

Five large towns and several other populated places in the salient north of Warsaw were overrun by Russian forces joined by elements of Polish General Berlinger's 1st Army. In this area the Germans were being driven backward through one of the most heavily defended areas of the long Russo-German front — on a line described by the Nazis as part of the inner defenses of the Reich.

In the path of the continued advance in Rumania and Transylvania, Russian bombers last night carried out a smashing raid on the Hungarian rail junction town of Debrecen, in eastern Hungary.

Nearly 50 fires were started, said the communique — 10 of them large, visible to outgoing Soviet pilots for almost 100 miles. Rail yards and other military objectives were hit. Large explosions were observed.

Front-line dispatches to Moscow earlier today confirmed the entry of Russian troops into Czechoslovakia, and said they had joined with Czech forces fighting in eastern Slovakia. Strong elements of Russian troops were said to have crossed into Yugoslavia.

In the course of mopping-up operations far behind the southern front lines, another German general has fallen into Russian hands. Moscow identifies him as Infantry General Rushenhagen, commander of the Nazi 52nd Army Corps. He was said to have been hiding in a wood.

CZECHOSLOVAKS MAKE CONTACT WITH RED ARMY

LONDON, September 16 — Czechoslovak forces fighting in western Slovakia have established contact with Red Army advanced elements which crossed the Czechoslovak-Polish frontier, the Czechoslovak communique announced today.

For the first time, Czechoslovak aircraft were engaged in fighting the German Air Force, the communique also said.

Several German attacks in the Vah Valley, important German route of retreat from Hungary, were repulsed. To the east, in the Nitra Valley, heavy fighting continued. German tank units were strongly supported by artillery and aircraft in an attack on Czechoslovak positions, but were repulsed with heavy losses. (CWI)

YUGOSLAVS ON OFFENSIVE IN SERBIA

LONDON, September 16 — Yugoslav Army of Liberation forces are continuing on the offensive in all sectors in Serbia, and, after having captured the town of Negotin, have driven on to within 10 miles of the Rumanian border near Maidanpek, a communique from Marshal Tito's Headquarters stated today.

Farther south, the advance on Nis has made progress, and a German column trying to fight through to the north was routed in the Kimanovo-Kresevo sector. A second strong German column was handed a set-back in the Demir Kapija area.

The communique also reported attacks on communications in Serbia, the Valjevo-Belgrade railway having been destroyed for a distance of six miles by Partisan fighters.

In the Sandjak, moving northwest from liberated Bielopolje, Tito's forces are driving on the town of Plevlje, in Herzegovina.

Yugoslav troops in Dalmatia have liberated two towns on the Knin-Bihac railway line, Kuprovo and Dobro Selo, killing 350 enemy soldiers. « With this operation, » the communique said, « this sector, which has been of great importance to the Germans, is now cleared of the enemy. »

Another 180 enemy troops were wiped out at the Dalmatian town of Benkovac, which has also been occupied by the Partisans.

FINNS DISARM GERMAN TROOPS

LONDON, September 16 — German troops in southern Finland have been rounded up and disarmed by Finnish civil police, according to dispatches quoted by the Swedish radio.

The action was ordered by the Finnish Ministry of the Interior, said the radio, in accordance with the Moscow agreement calling for the disarming and internment of German military personnel after September 15.

In a special announcement from Hitler's headquarters today, the Germans admitted that they have failed to carry out the Finnish demand that they evacuate all troops by midnight last night, and threatened that German troops left in Finland will protect their security « against all attackers. »

The German announcement said the Finns allowed too little time for total evacuation, claiming that troops in central Finland would need 20 days to march unopposed to the Gulf of Bothnia, and at least 30 days to reach the Norwegian frontier.

The official Finnish report about the fighting on Suursari Island between German and Finnish forces is tantamount to a declaration that a state of war now exists between Finland and Germany, the Times correspondent in Stockholm said today, quoting semi-official reports from Helsinki.

The correspondent pointed out that by opening hostilities on Thursday, the Germans themselves brought about this situation, for the time limit fixed by the Finnish-Russian preliminary armistice agreement did not expire until midnight yesterday.

The Russian armistice conditions have now arrived in Helsinki, the correspondent added.

Finnish Foreign Minister Carl Enckell has left Helsinki by plane for Moscow, where he will meet the heads of the Finnish delegation charged with discussing Finland's withdrawal from the war, the Swedish radio said today, quoting a Helsinki report.

Prime Minister Antti Hackzell, who was head of the Finnish delegation, was reported seriously ill after suffering a stroke on Thursday.

The Finnish radio today appealed to Austrian soldiers in the German Army in Finland to lay down their arms and to refuse to be transferred elsewhere «to fight Germany's last battle.»

The broadcast told the Austrian troops: «The time granted you by the Finnish Government to complete the evacuation of Finnish territory has expired. From now on, the Finnish Government is under obligation to round you up, either alone, or with the aid of Russian troops, and to hand you over to the Allies as prisoners of war.

«When Finnish or Russian troops order you to lay down your arms, surrender to them. Refuse to be transferred to Norway, or to be sent to Germany to fight Germany's last battle.

«Officers and men of the 2nd, 6th and 7th Mountain Divisions! You owe it to your families and to your homeland not to die for Germany, but to live for Austria.»

At the same time, the British Eastern Fleet continued its sweeps along the main supply lines of waters north of the Indies and in the Indian Ocean. This fleet, which includes units of the British, Australian, French, Dutch, and American navies, has sunk several more Japanese warships and supply vessels in the Malacca Straits, between Sumatra and Malaya.

This quickly tightening control of the Southwest Pacific brought nervous warnings of imminent danger from Japanese radios. The Nipponese-controlled Radio Manila said today that civilians of the Philippine city had been warned to build air raid shelters. The radio complained of what it described as an apathetic attitude on the part of Filipinos.

In the air over interior China, 14th USAAF bombers struck again today at Japanese forces striking down into Kwangsi Province from southern Hunan. They strafed and bombed 45 Japanese-occupied compounds, and caused havoc among Japanese columns moving toward the city of Kweilin.

Major General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing struck as far east as the mouth of the Yangtze River, shooting up barracks and other Jap troop concentrations. They also sank river ships and made direct hits on railway yards.

On the ground, fighting in the Salween River area centered around Lungling, around the last Jap-held positions holding up the opening of a land supply route from India to China. Chungking said tonight that Chinese troops were counter-attacking in an effort to throw back strong Japanese units which yesterday took a high position south of the city.

In other areas along the Tengchung Road, Japanese troops have begun a withdrawal to the south.

Japanese Retreat Continues

In upper Burma, the British 14th Army has crossed the Chindwin River, and today pushed forward in pursuit of elements of the broken Japanese 15th and 31st Divisions, which were fleeing eastward. The Japanese reached the Chindwin at the height of the Monsoon, and found its deep, swirling waters a formidable barrier, said front-line dispatches. Hundreds of Japanese dead were found on the west bank of the stream.

Along the Tiddim Road, Indian divisions were clearing the Manipur River crossing.

In Arakan, active patrolling was reported.

ROOSEVELT, CHURCHILL PLEDGE ASSAULT ON JAPAN

QUEBEC, September 16 — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill today pledged a devastating assault on Japan with all the resources of their two mighty nations, as soon as Europe is out from under «the corroding heel of Nazism.»

In a joint statement this afternoon, the two United Nations leaders announced that they had «reached decisions on all points» in the war in Europe and the Pacific.

«The most serious difficulty with which the Quebec Conference was confronted has been to find room and opportunity» to use the Allied forces against Japan, the statement added.

Mr. Churchill declared that the question of a supreme commander for the Pacific had not been discussed once. Mr. Roosevelt stressed the tremendous differences separating the Pacific areas of action, and asserted there were necessarily three commands under Mountbatten, MacArthur, and Nimitz. He added that human beings simply could not transfer themselves mentally over the extreme distances of the Pacific.

NAZIS CLOSE FINNISH-SWEDISH FRONTIER

STOCKHOLM, September 16 — The Germans have closed the northern part of the Finnish-Swedish frontier, it was officially announced here last night.

German troops told Swedish frontier guards that they would prevent any Finnish refugees from crossing into Sweden, and they stopped all contact between the Finns and Swedes over the border. (OWI - Reuter)

RUSSIA CONSIDERING BULGARIAN ARMISTICE

LONDON, September 16 — Seven Russian military experts have arrived in Sofia, stated a United Press correspondent over the Bulgarian telegraph yesterday. At the same time, the Bulgarian delegation that asked General Tolbukhin for an armistice returned to Sofia. They reported that they had been received with great amity.

The conclusion of an armistice between Russia and Bulgaria has not yet been announced. The latest news was that the Soviet Government was prepared to consider Bulgaria's request for an armistice. (PWB)

MOROTAI AIRFIELD TAKEN; PALAU GAINS MADE

AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, September 16 — General Douglas MacArthur's American and Australian forces had overcome initial Japanese resistance on the Island of Morotai today, and had swept inland to take over the first of the island's airfields.

Meanwhile, the new American landings in the Palau Islands also made gains. Marines were said tonight to have extended one bridgehead for a depth of 1½ miles, after smashing several Japanese counter-attacks. Late dispatches said the Americans were closing in on the main airfield in the Palau Islands group.

Morotai is among the northernmost islands of the Moluccs group, which lie west of New Guinea and about 300 miles southeast of Mindanao in the Philippines. The Palau group lies 550 miles due east of Mindanao.

Military observers foresaw tonight the possibility of a combined MacArthur-Nimitz assault against the Philippines from these new bases, once they have been completely invested. An Allied strategy which would attempt to evade any large-scale land operations, such as would be necessary for the establishment of bases in China, was becoming obviously clear.

Aircraft of the 14th USAAF, under command of General Joseph Stilwell, continued to smash at Japanese airfields and coastal shipping from the shores of the East China Sea to the coastline around Canton, far to the south.

Shipping was sunk off the Luichow Peninsula, which juts into the Gulf of Tonkin off French Indo-China. Japanese warehouses were hit at a point near Canton.

He added that human beings simply could not transfer themselves mentally over the extreme distances of the Pacific.

« Blaze of Unity »

No date had been set for the start of the great offensive in the Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt said, and he intimated this depended on the date of the fall of Germany.

Following is the text of the statement:

« The President and the Prime Minister and the Combined Chiefs of Staff held a series of meetings during which they discussed all aspects of the war against Germany and Japan. In a very short space of time, they reached decisions on all points, both with regard to the completion of the war in Europe, now approaching its final stages, and the destruction of the Barbarians of the Pacific.

« The most serious difficulty with which the Quebec Conference has been confronted, was to find room and opportunity for the marshalling against Japan of the massive forces which each and all of the nations concerned are ardent to engage against the enemy. »

Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt both stated at a press conference that the Quebec Conference was the happiest yet and with a greater degree of unity than any held so far. Mr. Churchill said the discussions had been held « in a blaze of unity. The only point on which we differed was that the United States wished more than her share in the Pacific operations. But we have settled that. »

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill pledged themselves to a devastating assault on Japan with all the resources of their two nations, and said they had reached quick and complete unanimity on plans for bending Japan into submission.

After the press conference today, there will be no further word of the movements of Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill until each has arrived at his destination from Quebec.

Marshal Stalin has been kept closely informed of the discussions, it was stated. (OWI-Reuter)

CHINESE GOVERNMENT MEET COMMUNISTS

CHUNGKING, September 16 — Relations between the Central (Chungking) Government and the Chinese Communists were discussed openly for the first time yesterday at a meeting of the People's Political Council under Central Government auspices, New York Times Correspondent Brooks Atkinson reported.

Atkinson wrote: «At this (Friday) morning's crowded session, Lin Tso Han, Communist delegate from Yenan, the capital of Communist China, gave a 75-minute account of his negotiations with Government representatives during the past four months.

«At the afternoon session, General Chang Chih Chung gave an account of the negotiations from the Chungking Government's point of view.

«Chang expressed hope that differences could be solved, saying: "A coalition government would quicken the hearts throughout China. This question cannot be solved by the Government, but must be solved by the people."

«Chang also said that the release of political prisoners had been promoted and could be easily arranged.»

Atkinson quoted Lin as saying that the Central Government and the Communists were fundamentally divided on the issue of establishing democracy now, and on the size and disposition of the Communist Army. Lin called for the formation of a coalition government now, representing all parties which are willing to fight Japan. (OWI)

TRADES UNION CONFERENCE ENDS

ROME, September 16 — Liberated Italy's first trades union conference came to an end today with Italian labor receiving promises of international assistance in its efforts to establish a unified and democratic trades union movement.

A resolution submitted by the CGIL was approved. It called for safeguards upon Italian efforts to build a unified organization on a national basis. At the same time, Achille Grandi, Secretary General of the Confederation, urged action on the problems of minority representation and on the question of legal authority for the unions to allocate their unemployed.

Each of the five visiting foreign labor delegates, under whose sponsorship the conference was held, spoke to the meeting in the theater of the Ministry of Finance.

The British Trades Union Council representatives, William Lawther and Thomas O'Brien, assured Italian labor that the workers of the United Kingdom will collaborate closely with the workers of Italy for as long as the union movement here continues to develop along democratic lines.

George Baldanzi of the American Congress of Industrial Organizations declared that American workmen were united in their fight against Fascism and ready to help a free Italian workers' movement.

Luigi Antonini, representative of the American Federation of Labor, declared that Italian trade union activities will be closely watched by American workers. Unity in all fields, he said, is the indispensible condition for the reconstruction of Italian national life.

Walter Schevenels, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trades Unions, the last of the speakers, recalled the strikes of Italian workmen in 1943, and said they proved that Fascism did not succeed in crushing the spirit of Italian labor. He said much hard work is necessary for the education of Italian workmen in the ways and manners of thinking of trades unionists. (UNN)

ANTONINI BROADCASTS TO AMERICAN WORKERS

ROME, September 16 — Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor, in a radio broadcast today to organized labor in America, stated that the purpose of his visit to Italy was to collect information on the rebirth of the Italian workers' movement, with a view to helping it get on a solid foundation.

Speaking of the Italian General Confederation of Labor, he said: « It has established the basis of a united trade union movement, independent of political parties and free from any governmental control. »

Recalling his meetings with thousands of workers in southern Italy, he said that he had found a genuine desire to build up a strong and independent trade union movement — not only a movement that seeks to improve the conditions of the working classes, but one which will become one of the mainstays of Italian democracy and which will cooperate in the work of Italian reconstruction.

ROME, September 16 — War Minister Casati, speaking of the epuration of the Army, in an interview with the paper Unità, stated, «It is hard to get rid of the mistakes of 20 years, but this I am resolved to accomplish.»

On the subject of responsibilities, Minister Casati added that this problem was a serious one. «It would be unfair,» he said, «to spare the generals, who obviously have a greater responsibility, and to punish only those holding lesser positions. I intend to take the necessary measures to prevent such injustice.»

On the work accomplished by the Italian Liberation Corps, after stressing the necessary reserve he must observe on the subject, Minister Casati added, «I am pleased to say that the formations of the C.I.L. fully deserve the praise they have received from their superiors, as well as from the Allied Authorities. I may add that in the future, C.I.L. forces will be further increased. The incorporation, already begun, of volunteers and Partisans in the Army will be accomplished, and this will heighten both the morale and the discipline of the troops.» (UNN)

DE GAULLE PRAISES FRENCH UNITY

TOULOUSE, September 16 — General Charles De Gaulle told the people of Toulouse today that suffering has brought to all French men and women a unity which «I am certain nothing will be able to break.»

«The future lies ahead of us, a future, in which there will be obstacles and difficulties to overcome to reach our goal,» the French leader said.

«Authority of state, a republican state, and all it represents, are what the entire nation needs to complete its liberation from present and future difficulties,» De Gaulle asserted.

Outlining some of the present difficulties, he said: «We find our country ravaged in many regions, railway lines cut, ports badly damaged, roads and bridges demolished, and ruins in many parts of the country. We find France with 3,000,000 people absent — held by the enemy in odious captivity. But we find France resolved to resume her goal, a greater and better France.» (Reuter)

U.N.R.R.A. MONTREAL CONFERENCE OPENS

MONTREAL, September 16 — The opening of the 44th meeting of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration is scheduled today. More than 100 million victims of war are looking to it to ease their suffering.

The opening ceremonies were postponed a day, due to the absence of 350 delegates delayed by storms in the United States.

UNRRA is seeking, its members declare, to prove that the United Nations can work together in helping the helpless as well as in fighting aggressors on the battlefield.

Herbert Lehman, director-general of UNRRA, is due to speak briefly at the opening session. A nominations committee will be among the groups appointed today, and a report is expected this afternoon when a chairman and officials will be elected. (OWI)

PROPOSALS SUBMITTED TO GOVERNMENTS

WASHINGTON, September 16 — It was learned on reliable authority here yesterday that tentative drafts of the decisions reached in the initial phase of the post-war security conference at Dumbarton Oaks have been submitted to the American, British, and Russian governments by their delegates to the conference.

While awaiting replies from their governments as to whether the organization upon which they have agreed is acceptable, the delegates are also considering some additional matters and drafting some further conclusions, although Sir Alexander Cadogan, head of the British delegation, has been called to Quebec for a brief visit with Prime Minister Churchill on important matters not connected with the conference.

Edward R. Stettinius, Under Secretary of State and head of the American delegation, stated yesterday that the conferees had made «excellent progress,» and that he had «complete confidence in a successful outcome» of the discussions.

It now appears that the discussions will continue into the first part of next week, although there have been no official estimates as to their length.

After replies have been received from the Russian, British, and American governments, final drafts containing the recommendations of the three countries will be prepared for presentation in the second phase of the conference, in which a Chinese delegation will replace the Russian group.

It has been learned that most of the major points were agreed upon during the initial phase of the conversations, but there has been some revision in the plans as originally presented by each delegation. (OWI)

PROCEDURE AGAINST FRENCH TRAITORS DESCRIBED

PARIS, September 16 — The judicial procedure to be used against French traitors and Nazi collaborators was described today by the French Minister of Justice, François de Menthon, in an interview with a News Chronicle correspondent.

In each French department, a court of justice will be set up consisting of a magistrate and four jurors. The jurors will be drawn by lot from a list of 100 by the president of the court and two representatives of the local Resistance Movement.

The rapid punishment of the collaborators is an indispensable condition of national unity, pointed out de Menthon.

He said: «A new penalty has been added to the code under the name of national dishonor. It is for the mass of minor collaborators, who will not be punished by imprisonment, but will be deprived of the ordinary political, social, and economic rights enjoyed by every French citizen.

«The minimum period of national dishonor will be five years; in some cases, it will last for life.

«Indictments are being prepared against all the ministers who held office under Vichy; some are already in custody.

«France will demand the extradition of those Vichy ministers who have fled abroad. The three ministers who have been under detention in North Africa are being brought to France.»

De Menthon revealed that the number of collaborators arrested so far in Paris exceeds 5,000. (PWB)

BOLOGNA PROFESSOR MURDERED BY FASCISTS

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 16 — The story of how Professor Cesarini of the University of Bologna went to his death before a Fascist firing squad has been told to a UNN correspondent by a Bologna journalist recently escaped from German-occupied territory.

The journalist, whose story was confirmed by another witness, told the UNN correspondent that last December, 30 residents of Bologna were arrested for publicly expressing their anti-Fascist sentiments after the fall of Mussolini.

The 30, among whom was Professor Cesarini, were thrown into jail and kept there until January 16. On that day, the notorious Fascist Mayor of Bologna, Pacchili, was executed by patriots. In reprisal, Professor Cesarini and nine others, including the journalist, who had escaped and was sentenced in absentia, were ordered shot.

Cesarini, while already about to be placed in position before the firing squad, made a final desperate attack against the Fascists. He managed to snatch a rifle from one of the guards and shot a Fascist official in the leg before being overwhelmed and severely manhandled.

The professor made a last request before being shot. He asked for and was given a cigar, which he coolly smoked until the last.

The Tribunal responsible for Cesarini's death attempted to justify the murder by explaining that he had «by words and writings provoked an atmosphere favorable to the death of the Mayor of Bologna.» (UNN)

WASHINGTON, September 16 — Danes protesting the removal of political prisoners from Jutland to the Reich rioted in Copenhagen last night, according to dispatches from the Associated Press.

Several persons were killed and 25 were wounded by gunfire.

Yesterday, railroad employees struck, starting the demonstrations. This morning, shopkeepers and newspaper offices closed. (OWI)

GERMANS PANIC IN HOLLAND

LONDON, September 16 — In their last-minute, panic stricken efforts to undermine Dutch resistance, the Germans have executed five members of the Dutch underground press, stated the Dutch newspaper Vrij Nederland yesterday.

Attempting to strengthen their own position in Holland, the Germans have imported 200 Berlin police to The Hague to replace Dutch police in case of emergency. Civil servants in Amsterdam are forbidden to go five miles beyond the city.

Meanwhile, members of the Dutch Nazi Party are evacuating their wives and families to northeast Holland, and a fleet of buses is kept ready in Amsterdam every night to evacuate Dutch Nazis in a case of emergency.

According to reports, many are resigning already. (Reuter)

NAZIS CALL UP BOYS OF 15

GENEVA, September 16 — German radios announced a rally of Hitler Youth throughout the Reich today, saying that 15 and 16-year-old members would be given three weeks of military training, and then be sent into «replenishment units» for front-line duty. (TASS)

ALLIED AIR ATTACK ON PRISON CAMP DENIED

LONDON, September 16 — The British Air Ministry announced yesterday that, contrary to a German report of an Allied air attack on the area of the Buchenwald concentration camp, said to have taken place on August 28, there was no Allied plane near Buchenwald on that date.

Observers regard the DNB report as an attempt to conceal the murder of prisoners in the camp by the Gestapo, as part of the Nazi drive to wipe out potential opposition leaders. (PWB) of German F-fighters. Our ships attacked, and a heavy explosion was heard. When the patrol closed to finish of the enemy, it discovered it was faced with two enemy destroyers. The Allied force passed between the destroyers, one of which was hit by a torpedo and left sinking by the stern and burning fiercely.

Our force was heavily engaged by the destroyers and F-fighters, and was able to withdraw without damage, leaving the enemy to carry on a «Spirited Gun action amongst themselves.» Several hits were observed. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 16 — Today's communique:

Allied troops are now thrusting eastward along a 500-mile front from the Swiss frontier south of Belfort to the Channel coast around the Scheldt Estuary.

Near the Swiss border Allied troops, advancing from southern France, made further progress when contact was established near Dijon with patrols from our forces operating to the north.

The enemy is fighting stubbornly from prepared positions to protect the southern hinge of his withdrawal movement towards the Belfort Gap.

Northeast of Vesoul, we have advanced several miles against increasing resistance.

Elements have pushed to the vicinity of Fays Billot, and south of the town an enemy column was attacked and destroyed.

Northwest of Dijon, we have reached Montbard in the Brenne Valley without meeting serious opposition.

Chatenois, six miles from Neufchâteau, has been captured, and units are in the vicinity of Mirecourt.

In the Moselle Valley, our troops have entered Nancy and Epinal.

Fighter-bombers were active against enemy transportation in the Moselle Valley.

In northern Luxembourg, east of Saint Vith, our advance has continued against strongly-held pillbox defences.

Allied troops closing in on Aachen from three sides are meeting stubborn opposition.

Maastricht has been liberated, and our troops have moved beyond the city.

Fighting continued throughout yesterday in our bridgeheads over the Meuse Escaut, and a number of enemy counter-attacks were beaten off.

Coastal areas north of the Albert Canal are being steadily cleared of the enemy.

Fighter-bombers hit enemy transport in Holland. Ships and shore installations at Breskens, Flushing, and Ellewoutsdijk on the west Scheldt were attacked by medium and light bombers. (Reuter)

Allied Armies in Italy

The 8th Army has considerably increased the size of the bridgehead north of the Marano River against continued enemy resistance.

In the high ground on the left of the sector, the enemy has been driven from Gemmano, Monte Colombo, and Monte di Colombo, and are thus approaching the Marano River on a still wider front.

American, British, and Indian troops of the 5th Army have been engaged in fierce fighting with the enemy in the Goth Line positions.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked airdromes in the Athens area, and a submarine base at Salamis, Greece.

Although operations by tactical aircraft were restricted by adverse weather, enemy communications and strongpoints were attacked in the north of Italy and the battle areas.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force continued supporting operations in Yugoslavia and Albania.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed and five of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,300 sorties.

MOSCOW, September 16 — Tonight's communique:

Land:

During today, north of Praga, our troops, jointly with the units of Polish 1st Army, occupied in fighting the populated localities of Kobyanka, Shamochin, Monki, Bakeainy, and Poltsovizna.

In northern Transylvania, our troops, operating together with Rumanian troops, occupied in fighting over 30 populated localities, including Chogotake, Hodak, Orosi, Nadaksha, Vardalka, Mashuny, Mayak, Vinglasla, and Rodzeny, and the railway stations of Kishinesh, Valdaka, Tompa, Madarish-Sinch, and in the northeastern part of Rumania, captured in fighting the town of Vatra-Dornei.

In mopping-up the woods west of Bacau, the commander of the German 52nd Army Corps, Infantry General Bushenhagen, was hiding in the woods and taken prisoner by the troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front.

Today, our troops entered the capital of Bulgaria, Sofia.

On other sectors of the front, patrolling and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 15, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 89 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 130 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 15/16, our long-range Air Force carried out a massive raid on the city and large railway junction of Debrecen, Hungary, and submitted to bombardment an accumulation of military trains and military industrial objectives of the city. As a result of bombardment, nearly 50 fires were started, of which 10 were of large size. On the territory of the junction, flames enveloped cars and warehouses of war material. By direct bomb hits, four railway trains were smashed, and gas works and military fuel warehouses. Fires were followed by huge explosions. Our fliers leaving their targets observed the flames from the distance of over 200 kilometers. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 16 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The Garibaldi Divisions operating in the Veneto sector carried out effective actions in Treviso Province. They attacked enemy garrisons at Pieve di Soligno and at Cison di Valmarino, and Patriots killed 120 Germans, took many prisoners, and captured many vehicles.

According to recent information, it is learned that the disruption of the railway line east of Valsugana, in Vicenza Province, will compel the enemy to suspend traffic for at least 15 days. In Valsugana, barracks and depots belonging to the Todt Organization were burned.

In Val d'Ossola, during the month of August, Patriots destroyed 15 bridges, 14 locomotives, and 123 railway cars.

Patriots operating in Imperia Province stormed and captured an artillery emplacement with all its personnel and ammunition. In the same sector, a large Fascist unit was routed, and many Fascists were taken prisoner.

Fifteen Germans were killed in the Spezia sector, at Fresinetto, while in the act of rounding up workers for forced labor. A bridge near Savonero was blown up by Patriots.

In Piedmont, in the Langhe region, Patriots attacked several Nazi-Fascist garrisons. Seventy Nazi-Fascists were taken prisoner after 20 had been killed. Eight vehicles were captured.

In Turin Province, the Germans burned 180 houses at Carmagnola, and 20 at Urbiano, near Susa.

In the mountain region of Bergamasco, Patriots liberated many localities.

In Parma Province, 97 Germans were killed and 40 taken prisoner.

In the Bologna sector, fighting increased in violence.

In Reggio Emilia Province, two trains carrying German war material were attacked and seven bridges were destroyed.

Many groups of Italian workers escaped from Germany succeeded in crossing the Alpine border and joining the Patriots. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 16 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

The focal point of the fighting yesterday was again in the area south and southeast of Aix-la-Chappelle. The enemy with concentrated infantry and tank forces attempted to break through toward the northeast via Stolberg. The enemy, with the most heavy employment of material, first succeeded in achieving minor territorial gains; however, our counter-attacks checked the enemy advance. Twenty-seven enemy tanks were shot up.

South of Aix-la-Chappelle, as far as to the area south of Nancy, numerous often-repeated enemy attacks were frustrated. Particularly successful was our defensive fighting in the area of Vesoul, where the enemy in the course of his fruitless attacks sustained severe losses.

In completely-destroyed Brest, our gallant garrison, despite heaviest enemy fire and constant air attacks, is still offering stubborn resistance to the enemy, who is launching his attacks again and again. The harbor towns on the coast of southern England, yesterday, were subjected without interruption to the fire of our naval coastal batteries. In the attack as reported yesterday, made by British E-boats on a German convoy north of the West Frisian Island of Texel, altogether three enemy boats were sunk, according to final reports.

Mirach. Several Soviet attacks were frustrated in the eastern Carpathians.

At Sanok and Krosno, our divisions again smashed the Bolshevist attempts at breaking through, made with strong forces. Twenty-seven Soviet tanks were shot up. Northeast of Warsaw, troops of the Waffen SS and Hungarian formations repulsed the enemy, who had penetrated.

In the area of Bauske, Modohn, and Valk, the Soviets, supported by tanks and squadrons of battleplanes, continued their fierce attacks. Our divisions, in bitter fighting side-by-side with Latvian volunteer formations, and in excellent cooperation with strong forces of the Luftwaffe, smashed all enemy attempts at breaking through. Enemy forces which had penetrated were repulsed in immediate counter-thrusts. Eighty-seven enemy tanks were destroyed. Fighters and anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe shot down 92 Soviet planes.

Air:

In the waters off the northern Norwegian coast, four enemy planes were shot down and one Soviet E-boot was sunk by naval anti-aircraft guns, patrol vessels, and anti-aircraft guns of ships of a German convoy.

Last night, British bombers made a terror attack on Kiel. A few enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin. (Radio Berlin)

WAR FRONTS

AMERICANS INSIDE GERMANY AT FOUR POINTS 1ST AND 3RD ARMIES LINKED; NANCY LIBERATED

SHAEF, September 15 — The Siegfried Line in the areas of Aachen and Trier has been pierced to a depth of several miles as Allied troops are throwing their overwhelming weight of material and superiority of manpower against the Germans' last and futile line of static resistance. The initial penetrations of the German defenses are but the prelude to the Allied campaign of destroying the Siegfried Line at many points.

Troops of the American 1st Army are now closing in on Aachen from three sides, with one column reported inside Germany, only five miles west of the city. These troops are [illegible] and will open the way to the main defenses of the Siegfried Line.

Late reports tonight stated that the American 3rd and 1st Armies have joined close to the German border. The junction of the 3rd and 7th Armies to the south has resulted in a continuous front, bringing the command of these armies under General Dwight Eisenhower.

It was officially announced today that Nancy is now completely free of German troops after bitter fighting. Halfway north to Metz, 3rd Army troops have pushed steadily east of Pont à Mousson toward the Saar Basin. They now have six firm bridgeheads across the Moselle River, the newest one at Charmes. This city, 25 miles south of Nancy, and on the west bank of the Moselle River, was liberated early today.

There is little other news about the 3rd Army's operations in the Moselle area, and it is assumed that they are gathering their forces for an all-out assault on Germany from this direction.

Second British Bridgehead

British troops have thrown a second bridgehead across the Escaut Canal immediately north of Gheel. They are consolidating on the northern bank against piecemeal opposition. Another bridgehead was established here, but the Germans reacted violently and it was given up in the face of sustained and concentrated German pressure.

The British 2nd Army is now mopping up the last isolated pockets of German resistance between the Albert Canal and the Scheldt. The Germans helped to close their own trap by blowing up all but one bridge over the Scheldt before retreating to the Albert.

The Canadian 1st Army have abandoned their narrow bridgehead over the Leopold Canal, northeast of Bruges, and have withdrawn to the western banks, it was reported today. Meeting bitter resistance, they were under constant shelling by the Germans who had the advantage of flat country.

To the east, Polish troops under the command of General H. D. G. Crerar are in the vicinity of Zandlooper, 2½ miles from the Dutch border north of Ghent. Advance patrols have actually reached the frontier, press reports stated.

At Le Havre, a total of 9,600 Germans have been taken prisoner. British casualties were officially placed at less than 400.

Complicated Tank Barriers

In an effort to halt the Allied advance, the Germans placed «dragon's teeth,» concrete tank traps, in their path. Once the artillery began to blast the road barriers the tanks moved along, ignoring the complicated barrier. They were later stopped by an ingenious impediment of railway gates of steel pipes filled with heavy steel cable. Intense German machine-gun fire then covered them until the Americans found a way to get through by fastening explosives to the gates.

Allied forces which crossed the German frontier east of Eupen in Belgium are meeting stronger German resistance at Rotgen, including extensive minefields and roadblocks.

Farther to the south, in the area between Aachen and Luxembourg, a third crossing has been made in the area of Prum. This penetration is reported to be developing satisfactorily and units are five to six miles inside Germany.

The breaching of the Siegfried Line northwest of Trier places American troops over 10 miles within the Third Reich. There has been little news of their progress since the crossing was first made.

These four penetrations, begun as independent moves, are now likely to develop into strong, coordinated assaults now have six firm bridgeheads across the Moselle River, the newest one at Charmes. LATE BULLETINS

AACHEN SURROUNDED; STOLBERG CAPTURED

SHAEF, September 16 (Saturday) — American 1st Army troops have completely surrounded Aachen and fighting is reported in the outskirts of the fortress city, it was announced late last night.

An Associated Press dispatch reported that American troops captured Stolberg, five miles east, and Lammersdorf, 12 miles southeast, of Aachen, bringing Allied troops to within 35 miles of Cologne.

Forces of the American 3rd Army liberated Epinal, 30 miles south of Nancy, it was officially reported.

ONE PALAU LANDING MADE ON PELELIU

NEW YORK, September 15 — One American landing in the Palau islands was made on the Island of Peleliu, it was disclosed tonight by an American radio correspondent.

Describing stiff enemy resistance to American Marines, CBS reporter William Ewing said the Japanese were well protected by thick woods «from the pre-invasion bombardment of Peleliu Island.»

Peleliu lies immediately south of the main Palau land mass. The correspondent said the Japanese held their fire until American landing craft were almost beached. He said: «This is going to be a tough campaign.» (PWB)

BOMBS HIT GERMANY THREE TONS A MINUTE

LONDON, September 15 — More than 30,000 tons of explosives, averaging more than three tons a minute for six days and nights, fell on Germany during the sustained air assaults terminated yesterday by bad weather, a dispatch from SHAEF revealed today.

During this period, warplanes of the 8th, 9th, and 14th USAAF have flown 19,243 sorties and destroyed 560 enemy craft in the air and on the ground. (PWB)

R.A.F. ATTACKS NORTH SEA CONVOY

LONDON, September 15 — RAF Beaufighters and Mosquitoes yesterday evening attacked an enemy convoy off Kristiansund in southern Norway. An Air Ministry communique said three merchant ships were left burning and an escort vessel was seen to blow up.

Yesterday afternoon, Lancasters of RAF Bomber Command attacked an ammunition depot in Holland. From these operations, one Coastal Command Beaufighter is missing. (PWB)

CAPTURE OF LE HAVRE A MODEL FOR SOLDIERS

LONDON, September 15 — David Bernard, BBC commentator, broadcast this description of the fall of Le Havre on his return to London.

The enemy garrison did not surrender en bloc; they surrendered in small groups, and only after our troops were literally within bayonet distance. But each particular strongpoint, both outside and inside the city had to be fought for. The story of the battle itself will, I feel, be available for all officers and men of the future in the form of an army text-book.

It was beautifully planned and daringly executed. It stands as a perfect example of that particular type of attack, and wherever I went among our troops, I heard nothing but praise and admiration for the commander of the 49th Division, which, with the 51st (Highland) Division, broke through the prepared and fortified German perimeter into the heart of the city itself.

There were about 12,000 German troops defending the city, and German prisoners taken were in the neighbourhood of 10,000. The expert thoroughness in planning the attack can be witnessed in the numbers of our own casualties. In this frontal attack on a major force in prepared positions, our losses were about 50 killed, and a relatively small number of wounded.

Battles nearly always have their amusing story. In this battle, it took the form of a competition. The Highland Division, which carried out the attack on the northern sector, offered five pounds for the capture of the commander of the German garrison, Colonel Wildermuth. But the officer commanding the 49th Division went one better by offering six pounds. It was a troop commander of the 49th Division who captured the colonel — and the six pounds. (BBC)

FLYING-BOMBS DAMAGE MILLION DWELLINGS

LONDON, September 15 — Lord Woolton, Britain's Minister of Reconstruction, disclosed tonight that 1,164,000 houses or flats in London were damaged during flying-bomb attacks, and 23,000 destroyed. In the case of a large proportion, the damage was slight.

8TH ARMY SEIZES CORIANO RIDGE, CROSSES MARANO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 15 — Eighth Army troops have seized the 7,600-yard Coriano Ridge, where for 10 days German tank and infantry forces have held the Allied drive toward the Valley of the Po, and Canadian armor has crossed the Marano River, to approach within four miles of Rimini, it was announced here today.

In the furious assault on the coastal ridge, where German forces had dug in their tanks in earthwork revetments in a desperate attempt to stem the 8th Army offensive, which threatened to overrun the Valley of the Po, almost the entire strength of two German divisions, the 289th Grenadier Regiment, and the 98th Infantry Regiment, was liquidated. Eighth Army forces captured 1,200 prisoners on Thursday alone, when the savage battle was at its height.

Canadian troops, consisting of armor and infantry, crossed the Marano River, two miles in from the coast, yesterday, and after establishing a bridgehead moved northeastward to come within a mile of the Rimini airfield, three miles from this port town, terminus of the Po-Valley road and rail lines to Bologna and Milan.

Greek troops were revealed as fighting with the 8th Army forces for the first time today, being identified with an advance against stubborn enemy opposition toward the village of San Lorenzo on the coast road.

With the capture of the Coriano-San Savino Ridge, which at its southwestern end is only four miles from the neutral state of San Marino, and the probability that the Germans will be forced back onto the coastal spurs of high Monte Titano, German troops have taken up positions within this tiny republic, it was reported.

An official statement declared, "From air reconnaissance over San Marino, it is clear that the Republic is being used by the Germans for supplies and gun areas, and enemy motor transport and guns within the Republic are being engaged by our air force and artillery, as on other sectors of the front."

Germans in San Marino

Although the Vatican delegate of the Republic, reputedly the oldest state in Europe, has said that San Marino officials had marked all entrances to their 38 square miles of territory with Red Cross flags and markers indicating neutrality, German troops have set up 88-millimeter guns in specially-prepared gun pits just inside the frontier, it was stated here.

A sergeant of Carabinieri, now in Allied lines, testified that Field Marshal Albert Kesselring sent a delegation to the Republic early this month to insist on the free use of the roads passing through the tiny state. The sergeant, pressed into duty as an interpreter for the Germans, declared that both German staff cars and police cars plied the mountain roads, and that German military police were quartered in the town of San Marino itself.

Although details in official reports were scarce, mention of "mounting resistance" from enemy forces defending Goth Line positions and the statement that 5th Army troops were now "up against the main positions" of this mountain defense zone indicated that direct, frontal attack was underway against these Apennines bastions. Air Force reports said that Marauder bombers staged heavy attacks on Goth Line positions north of Firenzuola, "in front of ground forces." Firenzuola is about 24 miles north of Florence, along a lateral road paralleling the Santerno River, and linking up two of the main roads to Bologna north of the Futa Pass, main German defensive position in this sector.

Fifth Army forces were also reported to have made gains north of Lucca, and between this town and Pistoia to the east.

CAPTURE OF LE HAVRE A MODEL FOR SOLDIERS

LONDON, September 15 — David Bernard, BBC commentator, broadcast this description of the fall of Le Havre on his return to London.

The enemy garrison did not surrender en bloc; they surrendered in small groups, and only after our troops were literally within bayonet distance. But each particular strongpoint, both outside and inside the city had to be fought for. The story of the battle itself will, I feel, be available for all officers and men of the future in the form of an army text-book.

It was beautifully planned and daringly executed. It stands as a perfect example of that particular type of attack, and wherever I went among our troops, I heard nothing but praise and admiration for the commander of the 49th Division, which, with the 51st (Highland) Division, broke through the prepared and fortified German perimeter into the heart of the city itself.

There were about 12,000 German troops defending the city, and German prisoners taken were in the neighbourhood of 10,000. The expert thoroughness in planning the attack can be witnessed in the numbers of our own casualties. In this frontal attack on a major force in prepared positions, our losses were about 50 killed, and a relatively small number of wounded.

Battles nearly always have their amusing story. In this battle, it took the form of a competition. The Highland Division, which carried out the attack on the northern sector, offered five pounds for the capture of the commander of the German garrison, Colonel Wildermuth. But the officer commanding the 49th Division went one better by offering six pounds. It was a troop commander of the 49th Division who captured the colonel — and the six pounds. (BBC)

FLYING-BOMBS DAMAGE MILLION DWELLINGS

LONDON, September 15 — Lord Woolton, Britain's Minister of Reconstruction, disclosed tonight that 1,104,000 houses or flats in London were damaged during flying-bomb attacks, and 23,000 destroyed. In the case of a large proportion, the damage was slight.

«We had not previously thought it wise to let the country know the magnitude of the problem in London,» said Woolton. «I imagine the enemy at present is so busily engaged in licking his own wounds, that he won't derive very much satisfaction from contemplating ours.»

In ordinary raids from 1940 to this spring, the damage was 84,000 houses destroyed and 142,000 still to be repaired, of which 42,000 were not fit for occupation.

Figures for the total damage covering air-raids and flying bombs in the London area are 107,000 houses destroyed, representing the accommodation for half a million people; 170,000 seriously damaged and needing repair, and 700,000 which have received first repairs, but need further work to make them reasonably comfortable. ALLIES REVOKE NAZI LAWS

LONDON, September 15 — An Allied proclamation revoking all the most infamous Nazi laws and dissolving all Nazi organisations in Germany has been published by the Allied Military Government, said Richard Hottelet, Columbia Broadcasting System reporter, yesterday.

The Allied laws revoke such Nazi decrees as racial laws and those suspending civil rights. (PWB)

Fifth Army forces were also reported to have made gains north of Luera, and between this town and Pistoia to the east.

German forces suffered heavy losses in their unsuccessful attempts to hold the Coriano-San Savino coastal ridge. At the inland end of this high ground, British infantry and tank forces carried out a brilliant encircling movement which cut off enemy positions west of San Savino and resulted in two German regiments' being obliterated through casualties and captures.

American medium bombers and Desert Air Force medium and light bombers took a heavy toll of enemy troops and guns in savage «saturation» attacks upon the German forces holding the ridge between Rimini and San Marino yesterday. Desert Air Force fighter-bombers slashed at enemy transport, struck the San Pietro Bridge on the Rimini-Bologna rail line, and bombed and strafed barracks and machine gun emplacements on the Rimini airport. MAAF. HEAVIES STRIKE IN GREECE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 15 — Up to 500 Allied heavy bombers today attacked three airfields crowded with enemy fighter planes and transports, and a submarine base, in the Athens area, it was announced here this evening.

The attacks followed a night mission by RAF bombers and marked the first MAAF attack on Greek targets since last December.

The airfields attacked were the Athens-Kalamaki, the Athens-Tatoi, and the Athens-Eleusis fields, on which a large number of JU-52's and fighter planes had been observed.

The submarine base was identified as that at Salamis, on an island off the port of Piraeus. (PRO)

MIDEAST BEAUFIGHTERS HIT AEGEAN SHIPPING

CAIRO, September 15 — Rocket-firing Beaufighters operating from eastern Mediterranean bases Thursday attacked enemy shipping in Paroskia harbor, in the Island of Paros, in the Aegean Sea, setting on fire a lighter and damaging another vessel, a Middle East communique announced today.

Aerodromes on the Island of Crete were bombed Thursday night for the third night in succession, the communique said. (PWB)

FRENCH SAILORS GIVEN ROUSING WELCOME

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 15 — Citizens of Toulon turned out in great numbers yesterday to greet parading sailors of the French Fleet, it was announced here today.

The French sailors were reviewed by Louis Jacquinot, French Minister of Marine, Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, and Vice Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, U. S. Navy.

French Forces of the Interior formed a guard of honor for the French seamen, returned to their great Mediterranean base for the first time since the scuttling of the French fleet in November, 1942. (PRO)

GENERAL WILSON SALUTES R.A.F.

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 15 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander, Mediterranean Theatre, has sent a message to Royal Air Force units under his command on the occasion of the fourth anniversary of the height of the Battle of Britain, when RAF airmen shot down 485 enemy planes over the British Isles.

General Wilson asked the airmen to «remember those who fought and triumphed against terrific odds, and who gave to us and to our Allies time to create and marshal the great forces of the United Nations which are now sweeping forward all over the globe.» (PRO)

87 U. S. SOLDIERS TAKE OATH OF CITIZENSHIP

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 15 — Eighty-seven American soldiers, natives of 20 different countries, took oaths of citizenship under Army auspices in Italy recently, it was announced here today.

Brig. Gen. L. C. Jaynes addressed the new citizens, telling them that they had become «shareholders in a great commonwealth,» which with proper interest in public welfare on their part would ensure them «the privileges of a wholesome life.» (PRO)

TITO SAYS FASCISM MUST BE WIPED OUT

LONDON, September 15 — Fascism must be wiped out of united Yugoslavia, which desires representation at the peace table, Marshal Tito said yesterday in a speech commemorating the first anniversary of the 1st Dalmatian Brigade.

Speaking of the future of Yugoslavia, Tito said, «Great days of freedom are ahead for us, but there will also be days of new effort and new struggle.

«I am sure our men of the Yugoslav Army of National Liberation will not only crown this struggle by victory, but will also preserve their achievements for our people so that nobody will be able to take from them what they have

«There were many adherents of Fascism in our country, and they are still here. Fascism has its roots everywhere, and will try to rise again if a mortal blow is not struck at it now. Every nation which wishes to avoid such disasters in the future as we have suffered in this war must accomplish this task.» (PWB)

TROOP-CARRIER PLANES AID YUGOSLAVS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 15 — Cargo planes of the 60th Troop Carrier Group have flown nearly 4,000 missions and have carried millions of pounds of supplies to aid Marshal Tito's Partisan Forces in the past six months, it was announced here today.

Among the missions performed by these planes was one in which explosives were carried to Partisans to enable them to destroy a railway trestle and an enemy troop train crossing it. The plane landed in a rough field a short distance from the railway trestle in Yugoslavia, and unloaded the explosives just in time to wreck the bridge and kill the entire trainload of Germans. RUSSIANS MASS FOR ASSAULT ON WARSAW

MOSCOW, September 15 — Russian and Polish forces, using captured Praga as a new forward base, were reported to be massing tonight for the final assault on Warsaw.

Swinging north of the Polish capital to widen the frontal attack across the Vistula River, Marshal Rokossovsky's troops, joined by elements of Polish General Berlinger's 1st Army, have taken several inhabited localities just above Praga, and were said tonight to be forging onward against stiff resistance.

Except for further gains in cooperation with Rumanian troops in northern Transylvania, the Russian communique spoke only of hand fighting of local importance.

Last night, the Red Air Force carried out a heavy raid on the Hungarian capital of Budapest. More than 35 fires were started, 20 of them large. One bridge over the Danube received direct hits.

On all fronts, 110 German tanks and 72 enemy planes were destroyed yesterday.

From the German News Agency came reports that the Russians have launched a new offensive in the Baltic area, using 40 divisions, all massed in the northern sector. This attack, unconfirmed by Moscow, was said to have begun yesterday.

Following flights of Russian aircraft which dropped food and ammunition to Patriots fighting in Warsaw, the Polish Committee of National Liberation broadcast a message to General Bor's forces in the beleaguered city.

«The hour of liberation is near,» said the message. «Keep on fighting. Relief is coming.»

A Rumanian communique said that Russian and Rumanian forces have made further gains in central and eastern Transylvania, pushing toward Cluj and Targu-Mures. Bucharest reported heavy fighting in the region of the town of Arad, in western Transylvania.

Further progress of Russian units was reported from the Czech border section of southern Poland.

Tito said that the agreement with Dr. Ivan Subasic of the Yugoslav Government in London has made possible a united Yugoslav front, and added, «The agreement has strengthened our ranks, and is proof of the strength and victory in the field of politics. It is in complete harmony with all our former efforts to achieve as complete a unity of our nations as possible, so that our country may be able to occupy a worthy place with regard to other countries.

Self Determination Essential

«But, we shall be firm that no further steps should be made on the strength of this agreement without the approval of all our nations. Our nations must themselves determine their form of internal government. This is the principle put forward by our great Allies, and we adhere to it.»

Speaking of the peace conference, Tito declared, «We are a small country as far as territory is concerned, but we have proved by our deeds that our nation is great in spirit. We wish to be together with our Allies at the table where the fate of Europe, and of our country, will be decided.»

Tito concluded by stating, «The military victory over the German invader and his servants will come soon, but a long and hard struggle will be necessary to kill Fascism in our lands.

GERMANS IN FINLAND AS DEADLINE EXPIRES

STOCKHOLM, September 15 — At midnight tonight, the Russian demand that all German troops in Finland be expelled as a pre-armistice measure expires.

In spite of the Finnish ultimatum to the German commander to evacuate his troops, they are still believed to be in Finland. Swedish reports stated that indications point to the German intention to remain there and fight, instead of complying with Finland's order.

The Finnish communique announced that German naval forces attempted to land at several points on Suursari Island and at Hogland, in the Gulf of Finland, after a German demand of surrender was rejected. The attacks were repelled by Finnish fire, except at one point where fighting continues for a small bridgehead. Finnish naval craft and artillery units have sunk or destroyed nine German vessels.

A Swedish radio broadcast declared that the problem of German military evacuation from north Finland will remain unsolved at the expiration of the period of respite.

In Finland, the cabinet and officers of the Diet were called to an emergency meeting to consider measures to be taken against the German troops. Discussion will undoubtedly be held on the Russian peace terms, which were handed to the Finnish delegation in Moscow late last night.

Matters connected with Premier Antti V. Hackzell's illness will also be discussed, the Finnish radio said. A Moscow broadcast earlier today reported that Hackzell suffered a stroke last night, and is in serious condition with paralysis of his right hand and leg and loss of speech.

SLOVAKS DESTROY 31 ENEMY AIRCRAFT

LONDON, September 15 — A fierce battle is raging in the Nitra Valley in western Slovakia between Czechoslovak forces and enemy tanks and motorised units, attacking with strong artillery and air support, said today's communique from the commander of the Czech forces in Slovakia. Three localities were liberated here during successful counter-attacks.

Heavy casualties among German troops in Slovakia have been caused by Allied bombing. During the first 16 days of the Slovak rising, 31 enemy aircraft were shot down by Slovak anti-aircraft defences.

An enemy motorised column attempting to penetrate the Hron River Valley toward the main coal mining district of Slovakia was routed. Czechoslovak troops are pursuing the enemy, who is retreating towards Ziate Moravce.

In eastern Slovakia, Czech Patriot Forces are systematically disabling German and Hungarian transportation, especially in the regions of Sabinov, Humenne, and Presov. (PWB)

ALLIES LAND IN HALMAHERAS AND PALAU CARRIER-BASED PLANES SMASH AT PHILIPPINES

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 15 — General MacArthur's troops, in a big jump forward on the way back to the Philippines, have made a successful landing on Morotai Island in the Halmaheras, 250 miles south of Mindanao, a special announcement said today.

At the same time, it was revealed that American forces had landed on the Palau Islands at the western end of the Caroline group in the Pacific, 550 miles northeast of the Halmahera group.

The text of Admiral Nimitz's communique announcing the landings in the Palau Islands, revealed that the carrier-based aircraft and surface combat ships of Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet are supporting the establishing of beachheads with a heavy aerial and naval bombardment at close range.

The American troops who made the landings form a combined Army and Marine Corps force under the command of Marine Major General Julian Smith, while amphibious operations are being directed by Vice Admiral T. S. Wilkinson, chief of the 3rd Amphibious Force.

Composition of the potent U. S. 3rd Fleet is secret, but it is known to include some of the latest and most heavily armed American battleships, in addition to a number of aircraft carriers.

Morotai Beachhead Secure

General Douglas MacArthur declared tonight from his command post on the island of Morotai, north of Halmahera, that the new American beachhead in the Moluccas is secure, and that the island group is now dominated by American forces.

Indicating that the landing on Morotai had taken the Japanese by surprise, MacArthur said that beachhead positions had been well established, and added, «The Allied campaign in the Pacific is now entering its decisive stage.»

At the same time, combined Army and Marine Corps forces, heavily supported by battleships, cruisers, and carrier-based aircraft, pushed added waves of invasion troops onto new beachheads in the Palau Islands.

This invasion carried out almost simultaneously with the landing on Morotai, was announced today by Admiral Chester Nimitz's headquarters at Pearl Harbor. The last communique late this afternoon said that 16-inch batteries of Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet battleships were pounding Japanese positions from close range, but the points

General MacArthur himself has gone ashore with his forces at Morotai, northernmost of the Halmaheras group, which is regarded as the southernmost bastion of the Philippines.

The 300-mile leap from New Guinea took the Japanese by surprise, the announcement said, the enemy having apparently anticipated it in the southern Halmaheras, which have now been bypassed. Allied losses so far have been «very light,» the communique stated, adding that up to the present no air or naval losses had been suffered.

MacArthur's forces went ashore under cover of naval guns which hurled shells into enemy positions, and the landing was preceded by an intense aerial bombardment. Heavy and medium bombers blasted airstrips and buildings with 95 tons of bombs in the 11th attack in 15 days against Japanese positions in the Halmaheras.

Meanwhile, heavy Liberator bombers ranging over waters off the coast of China, have sunk three Jap ocean-going freighters in Taiwan (Formosa) Strait.

Chinese Success at Wenchow

On the land front not far northwest of these waters, Chinese troops were reported tonight to have broken into the Japanese-captured city of Wenchow, in central Chekiang Province. The Japanese took the seaport city several days ago in what Chungking described as an effort to head off an Allied landing on the shores of the East China Sea.

In the southwestern Chinese interior, the Chungking High Command said, Chinese and Allied troops from Burma and from Yunnan effected a junction close to the Burmese-Yunnan border.

But in other areas, Japanese offensives made further progress. The enemy drive toward Kweilin, southern hub of Chinese defenses in Kwangsi Province, has pushed forward another five miles.

Troops of the British 14th Army have captured the outer positions in the Japanese defenses guarding the Manipur River crossings on the Tiddim Road, the Southeast Asia Command communique announced today.

The communique made no mention of any fighting on other fronts in Burma.

It was announced today that the 13th Air Force is now operating in the Southwest Pacific area, thus greatly augmenting the 5th Air Force. Lightnings of the 13th Air Force «in sizeable force» have already made their first attack, hitting the southern Philippines without loss, the announcement said. Presence of the 13th is expected to aid considerably in the new landing on Morotai. (OWI-Reuter)

JAPANESE GENERAL STAFF AWAITS DEFEAT

SAN FRANCISCO, September 15 — Vice Admiral John W. Greenslade, Pacific coast coordinator of naval logistics, said here Tuesday that the Japanese General Staff knows that defeat is inevitable, and «can only wait now for our next blow to fall.»

Speaking before a gathering of San Francisco businessmen, Greenslade said that the full power of the United Nations will be turned against Japan as soon as Germany concedes defeat, and urged the occupation of the Japanese homeland after final Pacific victory.

The Admiral traced the progress made so far in the inexorable naval drive across the Pacific and added:

«Working from bases thousands of miles from our country, our Navy has mastered the greatest supply problem in the history of warfare.»

Recalling that Britain has already signified her intentions by transferring Admiral Bruce Fraser from the Home Fleet to the Far East, Greenslade said that it is significant that Admiral Fraser is, among other things, an expert in combined operation.

«The occupation of Japan will be absolutely necessary

The Palau Islands are a major Japanese bastion, about 950 miles east of the Philippines. The Nimitz announcement said enemy resistance to continued landings was stiff.

These two new landings on widely separated Japanese-held territory along the southeastern flank of Mindanao followed closely on the three-day assault of carrier-based aircraft on Japanese positions, convoys, and airfields in the central Philippines and adjacent waters.

More complete information tonight showed that enemy positions on the Philippine islands of Panay, Cebu, Negros, and Leyte were heavily smashed. Revised figures put the total of Japanese aircraft destroyed at 433, of which 156 were shot down in combat and 277 destroyed on the ground.

Figures released two days ago, which probably included Japanese losses suffered outside the immediate central Philippines area, put destruction of enemy planes by American carrier-based aircraft at 501.

Late figures reveal two large cargo vessels, one medium transport, two destroyers, and 35 small ships sunk. Ships damaged included five cargo vessels, one medium oil tanker, 36 small ships ,two motor-torpedo boats, and many sampans. These damage losses were in addition to those previously announced.

The Admiral traced the progress made so far in the inexorable naval drive across the Pacific and added:

«Working from bases thousands of miles from our country, our Navy has mastered the greatest supply problem in the history of warfare.»

Recalling that Britain has already signified her intentions by transferring Admiral Bruce Fraser from the Home Fleet to the Far East, Greenslade said that it is significant that Admiral Fraser is, among other things, an expert in combined operation.

«The occupation of Japan will be absolutely necessary after she surrenders,» Greenslade stated. «It will be much less onerous and expensive than future wars.» (OWI)

U. S. ARMY CASUALTIES TOTAL 327,616; NAVY, 61,509

WASHINGTON, September 15 — United States Army casualties for all theaters through August 29 were placed at 327,616, by Secretary of War Henry Stimson yesterday. The total represents an increase of 21,821 over the total released a week ago.

Of the total, 62,357 were killed, 172,042 wounded, 46,181 taken prisoner, and 45,036 are missing.

Casualties in the Navy totaled 61,509, including 24,459 killed, 23,064 wounded, 4,466 prisoners, and 9,520 missing. (OWI)

U. K. COMMEMORATES BATTLE OF BRITAIN

LONDON, September 15 — The Royal Air Force in the United Kingdom today commemorated the fourth anniversary of the Battle of Britain.

It was on 15 September 1940 that the furious battle between the RAF and the Luftwaffe reached its climax, when Fighter Command pilots destroyed more than 485 raiders over Great Britain.

«In an order of the day today, the chief of the RAF Technical Training Command said. «Two things, and two things alone, fought off the enemy: the Royal Air Force and the spirit of the people of Great Britain.» (BBC)

LIBERATED ITALY

ITALIAN MINER CONDEMNS LABOR MENTALITY

ROME, September 15 — A hard-bitten man named Sassi, from the rank and file of an Italian miners' labor union, said today that the greatest fault with efforts to unify the Italian labor movement lies in the mentality «which does not take full account of the national tension between class and class.»

Sassi spoke to provincial and communal delegates to the internationally-sponsored trades union congress which opened the first of three sessions in the Finance Ministry building this morning.

Seated on the dais were Italian trades union leaders and the five members of the American, British, and International labor groups who have just completed a survey tour of central and southern Italy and Sicily. They are:

Walter Schevenels, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trade Unions; William Lawther and Thomas O'Brien, of the British Trades Union Council; Luigi Antonini, of the American Federation of Labor; and George Baldanzi, of the American Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Opposes Proportional Representation

Miner Sassi further declared that the idea of a proletariat still dependent upon the «professorial classes» coexists in what he described as the effete labor mentality. Sassi's assertions were delivered in opposition to delegates who had declared a necessity for «proportional representation» methods of election to provide a voice in any new labor movement for those minority factions which exist in the old one.

«I can assure you,» said the miner, «that with suppression of the mentality that looks for aid to political parties, we can be independent as a labor movement.

«The movement must have nothing to do with political issues. We must limit ourselves to the economic and social welfare of the working people. If there are people who wish to bring in political parties, we must block them at once.»

He declared himself against a proportional representation system which would foster factional divisions in labor, and thus becloud the «yes» and «no» issues which confront the working man.

There was unanimity among the delegates for unity in the ranks of Italian labor. But from the start of the meeting at 0900 hours this morning, until it closed at 1800 hours this evening there was full discussion about which matters of organizational importance must take precedence.

Schevenels had appealed for a collective sense of responsibility in taking the first steps which, he said, «will affect the full future of Italian trade unionism.»

The International Federation delegate reminded the conference that any measures it may adopt for its provisional body must be consonant with the interests of laborers in occupied northern Italy, «who must have their part in final decisions.»

Schevenels declared that the divisions existing in the trades union movements, national and international, have been «the greatest catastrophe to social progress, and one of the reasons why the Italian people lost so many of their rights during the period since the last great war.»

«Even union headquarters,» he said, «is frequently out of touch with the rest of the movement.»

Listing what he described as the gravest defects of current organization, Di Vittorio said democratic principles have not been applied universally; that acceleration toward freedom has been too rapid; that many self-appointed leaders have overstayed their time in office, «reluctant to part with the residue of an old system.»

One deformity in the current system, he said, is the practice of choosing leaders from lists handed down from above. But he held this method of choosing leaders to be a good one in many cases.

It was this statement which precipitated most of the day's discussion.

The second most heated topic of the day was the question whether statutes should be drawn by the leadership to submit to the forthcoming labor congress in Naples next month, or whether the matter of outlining a provisional set of rules of procedure should be left to the rank and file after union organizations have been unified.

Oris Bigazzi of Rome declared that a statute should be drawn to be submitted to a labor congress. He said elections should be deferred until after a constitution can be adopted.

«Unity now,» said Bigazzi, «without a constitution, would bring chaos later. Workmen should be fully informed of their objectives. Many men remain outside the movement now because of a lack of confidence, inspired by a failure to outline these objectives.»

Several resolutions calling for immediate action on issues of minority rights, and methods of procedure are to be submitted to the final session of the conference tomorrow morning. (UNN)

ROATTA AND OTHER GENERALS SUSPENDED

ROME, September 15 — Army General Mario Roatta and Army Corps Generals Barbieri, Zanghieri, and Carbone have been suspended from their posts pending ascertainment of their responsibility in the military events of 8 September 1943, and the days immediately following, the War Ministry announced today.

The suspension order took the form of a decree issued by the Lieutenant General of the Realm. (UNN)

NINE ADMIRALS REMOVED FROM POSTS

ROME, September 15 — The Navy Ministry today announced that nine admirals had been relieved of their duties and will relinquish their rank pending trial.

Other officers similarly dealt with included 99 senior and 62 junior naval officers.

Pierruccio Lantini, former Minister of Corporations, has been arrested by order of the Commission for Sanctions Against Fascism.

Costamagna Carlo, Supreme Court councillor, and Manzella Gesualdo, Supreme Court prosecuting attorney have been removed from their posts by order of the Deputy High Commissioner for such sanctions. (UNN)

GERMANS DESTROYED NEMI RELICS

ROME, September 15 — The Germans are responsible for the wanton destruction of the historical ships located in the museum of the town of Nemi, it was revealed today in an inquiry carried out by the Superintendent of Monuments in Latium Province.

These ships, which represented the most ancient model of naval construction, dating back to the times of the Emperor Caligula, had been removed from Lake Nemi during the years 1929-1932.

Democracy in Unions

Immediately following Schevenels, Giuseppe di Vittorio, who described himself as an agricultural worker, outlined the broad general objectives as set forth in the Pact of Rome by the CGIL.

Di Vittorio declared that the first principle of organization must be a completely unframmelled democratic system within the union. Unionism, he said, must work for the social and economic welfare of the men at large. Defects of union activities thus far must be singled out, he added, so that their elimination may give strength to the movement.

Speaker after speaker agreed with these broad terms. But one after another revealed an opinion that democratic organization within the ranks is a matter of time. Some said Fascism has lowered the educational level of workmen, that they have lost their political and trade union consciousness; and that the guidance of hand-picked leaders must remain for some time.

Di Vittorio listed what he said were the chief setbacks to unionism. He said only the older men in the movement could remember beyond the days of Fascist sindacalism and its dictatorial methods. He said communications and transport, both in a ruined state, provide little means to propagate the union cause.

«Unity now,» said Bigazzi, «without a constitution, would bring chaos later. Workmen should be fully informed of their objectives. Many men remain outside the movement now because of a lack of confidence, inspired by a failure to outline these objectives.»

ROOSEVELT-CHURCHILL CONFERENCE ENDS

QUEBEC, September 15 — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill will bring their conference to a formal close at noon tomorrow, but the quickened pace of the European war may hold the two leaders in personal contact for further conversations before Mr. Churchill returns home.

Stephen Early, Mr. Roosevelt's private secretary, said that discussions by British and American chiefs of staff might continue after Churchill and Roosevelt had finished their talks.

While the press conference was proceeding, Roosevelt and Churchill were conferring with Anthony Eden, the British Foreign Secretary, who arrived here last night. Another of the British staff who reported to Prime Minister Churchill was Sir Alexander Cadogan, Permanent Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, who arrived from the world security talks at Dumbarton Oaks. BELGIAN COAL MINES UNDAMAGED

LONDON, September 15 — The Belgian coal mines at Beering and Houthaelen, in Limbourg Province, have suffered no damage, the Belgian National Radio said today.

It is further reported that Belgian coal mines have 250,000 tons of coal in store. Belgian main railways have sufficient supplies to run on a limited service for eight days, and Belgian local railways and electrical power stations have supplies for 20 days. (PWB)

MARSHAL PETAIN'S ARREST ORDERED

LONDON, September 15 — The French Minister of Justice, Francois de Menthon, announced in Paris today that a warrant had been issued for the arrest of Marshal Henri Petain, the American Broadcasting Station in Europe reported tonight.

The French minister stated that he «would ask for the creation of a special court to try the former Vichy chief of state.» (ABSIE)

BIG WELCOME FOR DE GAULLE IN LYON

LYON, September 15 — General de Gaulle was cheered by large crowds on his first official visit to Lyon. Crowds lined the way from the airport and some 30,000 people cheered for several minutes at the town hall before the general spoke.

The French Radio Thursday night said that 10 officers had been condemned to death by a court martial at Montpellier.

Charges were not revealed in any of the sentences. (PWB)

ALL VICHY DIPLOMATS FIRED

PARIS, September 16 — The appointments of all ambassadors and other diplomats by the Vichy Government are cancelled, a French Ministry of Foreign Affairs statement said today.

The dismissals are made without prejudice to the judicial decisions which may be taken in respect of the diplomats concerned, the statement added. (PWB)

VICHY DEFAULTED 1,500 BILLION FRANCS

PARIS, September 15 — The French Minister of Finance stated yesterday that the Vichy Government defaulted 1,500 billion francs, the British United Press reported.

He added that France's gold reserve remained intact, and will form the basis of the country's financial restoration. (OWI)

CANADIAN CARDINAL ARRIVES IN ENGLAND

LONDON, September 15 — Cardinal Villeneuve of Montreal arrived here today reportedly on a mission for President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

U. S. LUTHERANS AUTHORIZE FUND

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, September 15 — A five-million-dollar appropriation for post-war rehabilitation and reconstruction in European and other war-torn countries was authorized at the annual fiscal conference of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod, the Associated Press reported.

The planning council said the money would be used to rebuild damaged churches, erect missions, and reestablish scattered congregations. (AP)

U.S. W.D. FAVORS RANK ABOVE GENERAL

WASHINGTON, September 15 — The U. S. War Department favors the creation of an army rank above that of general, but limited to two officers and not conflicting with that of General of the Armies, currently held by General John J. Pershing, Secretary of War Henry Stimson said at his press conference yesterday.

Stimson said the War Department view on the question of an advanced army rank had been asked by members of Congress, in view of a bill passed by the Senate creating a naval rank of Fleet Admiral and authorizing the appointment of two naval officers to this grade.

The bill is now before the House of Representatives, and the Congressmen sought War Department opinion on an amendment providing for an equivalent Army rank. (OWI)

GERMANS MAKE MASS ARRESTS IN COPENHAGEN

WASHINGTON, September 15 — Hundreds and perhaps thousands of persons in Copenhagen were arrested Wednesday night when the Gestapo and the German police carried out the biggest raid on Danish civilians in this war, the Danish Press Service reported yesterday.

The mass arrests came after the German-controlled Danish home radio said that a German soldier and two German policemen had been killed in and around Copenhagen during the past two days in a series of Patriot attacks on the occupying forces. As a result, German authorities ordered the Danish police chief to cooperate more energetically in the search for «political murderers,» adding, «The way in which political executions recently have gotten the upper hand in Denmark has made it impossible for the SS and the police chief of Denmark to tolerate any longer the fact that Danish police are not fighting with all their energy against these attacks.»

The Danish Press Service said railway and tram passengers were searched for weapons and many flats were raided. The results of the raid are reported to be in no reasonable proportion to its scale, and the Underground organization escaped without serious damage, the news agency said.

A United Press dispatch said the Danes regard the arrests as one more symbol of German jitters, and the Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet viewed the raid as evidence of German nervousness and of «the beginning of the end of occupation there.»

S.S. GENERALS HEAD BERLIN POLICE

LONDON, September 15 — Two SS generals have been appointed to head the Berlin police, the German news agency DNB admitted yesterday.

SS Lieut. General Kurt Geehram was made senior police commander and acting police president, and SS Major General Erik Heimburg was appointed chief of the regular Berlin police.

In an effort to tighten Nazi control in Norway, SS General Redless, Gestapo chief, has taken over control of the Hird Organization, which is the armed formation of the Quisling Party.

In Holland, 200 Berlin police arrived in the Hague to assume the duties of the Dutch police in case of emergency, it was reported by the Dutch paper Vrij Nederland. In other towns under German occupation, Dutch Nazis have replaced the regular police chiefs. The Quislings are reported to be trying to resign from the Party. (OWI)

MEDITERRANEAN

AFHQ, September 15 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army, after very heavy fighting, have cleared the village of Coriano and the ridge running southwest from that village. Other troops of the 8th Army have attacked across the River Marano, and have established a bridgehead. Heavy fighting continues.

North and northwest of Florence British and American troops of the 5th Army are meeting heavy resistance from the enemy Goth Line positions.

On the remainder of the front, active patrolling continues without any major alteration in our forward positions.

Navy:

On the night of 12 September, Allied light coastal forces encountered four German F-lighters in the Gulf of Genoa. Attacks were carried out at short range, with the result that three F-lighters blew up, and the fourth was left on fire.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

The major part of yesterday's operations by tactical aircraft was concentrated against battle-front targets in Italy. Medium, light, and fighter-bombers attacked defense positions, guns, and other close-support targets in both the eastern and central sectors of the battle area. Other fighter-bombers were active against communications, supply dumps, and shipping in northern Italy.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Genoa and ports in the Adriatic.

Heavy bombers did not operate due to bad weather. Medium and heavy bombers last night again attacked airdromes in the Athens area.

From these operations, 11 of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,500 sorties.

Complete reports indicate the following numbers of our aircraft missing, in addition to those already given in the communiques:

From operations of 10 September, an additional four.

From operations of 11 September, an additional four.

The enemy garrison at Brest has rejected demands for surrender and fighting continues. Loud explosions have been heard.

Air:

Enemy guns in the Brest area were attacked yesterday by fighter-bombers. Scattered enemy fire was also encountered on the Crozen Peninsula, south of Brest, where strong-points were attacked by medium and light bombers.

Fighters and fighter-bombers provided support for ground forces and attacked transportation in Holland. Strong-points near Boulogne were targets for medium and light bombers. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 15 — Tonight's communique:

Land:

During today, north of Prago, our troops, jointly with the units of Polish 1st Army, with stiff fighting continued to advance and occupied the following populated localities: Rino, Galubzhegi, Alexandru, Uzabeli, Stanislavus, Chernastruga, Nargit, Anopol, and Targube.

South of Sanok, our troops captured the town of Leske, and the populated localities of Plonna, Yagorets, Lukovo, Durzuk, Ugertse, and Ezhnibovo, and the railway station of Ugertse.

In northern Transylvania, our troops, operating jointly with the Rumanian troops, captured the town and the railway station of Toplita, and also occupied in fighting over 40 other populated localities, including Tovata, Madyare, Vumbalu, Vadazh, Tavate, and Vodozue, and the railway stations of Tavata, Ilvets, and Arbeten-Vyets.

On other sectors of the front, patrol activities and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 14, our troops on all fronts damaged or destroyed a total of 110 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 72 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 14/15, our long-range Air Force again carried out a raid on the Hungarian Capital, Budapest. As a result of bombardment of the military and industrial objectives of the enemy, over 35 fires were started, of which nearly 20 were of large size. Bomb hits were made upon the bridge across the River Danube. On the western railway station, on the territory of the main railway shops, and other industrial plants, amongst the fires huge explosions were observed. Our fliers observed the flames from a distance of 250 kilometers. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 15 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Italian Patriots, in conjunction with French Maquis, were engaged in bitter fighting in the Argentara Hills, in the Piccolo and Gran San Bernardo Mountains, and in Val di Stura. The Germans intensified their efforts to secure their passage through Piedmontese passes and valleys. Large German forces were deployed in the Trebbia Valley to reoccupy Bobbio. Garibaldi Brigades are continuing to offer stiff resistance. German thrusts in force on the front extending from Cuneo to the Tenda and Stura Valleys resulted in failure. A bloody fight took place at Vinadio. In their attempts to transfer 40 wounded men outside the city, the Germans suffered heavy losses. They were forced to despatch three reinforcement battalions to Pavia Province, where more than 1,000 Patriots are engaged in battle.

The Ligurian coastal sector, between Ventimiglia and Diano Marina, is in the hands of Patriot forces. As a result, the Germans were compelled to evacuate several localities in the Genoa sector. Patriots carried out daring attacks against Oneglia, where more than 80 political prisoners were freed, and against German artillery emplacements, damaging some of the guns. It is estimated that 8,000 Patriots are on the offensive in Liguria, in Genoa. Nazi-Fascists cannot risk venturing into the old sections of the

SHAEF, September 15 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied troops in northeastern Belgium have reached the line of the Leopold Canal, north of Maldegem.

Mopping up continues in the area south of our bridgehead over the Escaut Canal. Farther south, Allied troops have taken several small towns inside Germany, and are meeting increasing resistance from prepared enemy positions.

South of Aachen, enemy resistance is strong. East of St. Vith, we have pierced the outer section of the Siegfried defences on a six-mile front. Other units are encountering extensive road blocks and pillboxes, but progress has been maintained.

In the Moselle Valley, strong enemy counter-attacks against our bridgeheads were contained. Further advances have been made in the area south of Nancy, where the Germans are putting up a stubborn defence with heavy mortar, small arms, machine-gun, and sporadic artillery fire.

In northern Transylvania, our troops, operating jointly with the Rumanian troops, captured the town and the railway station of Toplita, and also occupied in fighting over 40 other populated localities, including Tovata, Madyare, Vambala, Vodazh, Tavate, and Vodozue, and the railway stations of Tavata, Ilvets, and Arheten-Vyels.

On other sectors of the front, patrol activities and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 14, our troops on all fronts damaged or destroyed a total of 110 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 72 enemy planes were shot down.

Air:

On the night of September 14/15, our long-range Air Force again carried out a raid on the Hungarian Capital, Budapest. As a result of bombardment of the military and industrial objectives of the enemy, over 35 fires were started, of which nearly 20 were of large size. Bomb hits were made upon the bridge across the River Danube. On the western railway station, on the territory of the main railway shops, and other industrial plants, amongst the fires huge explosions were observed. Our fliers observed the flames from a distance of 250 kilometers. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 15 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Italian Patriots, in conjunction with French Maquis, were engaged in bitter fighting in the Argentera Hills, in the Piccolo and Gran San Bernardo Mountains, and in Val di Stura. The Germans intensified their efforts to secure their passage through Piedmontese passes and valleys. Large German forces were deployed in the Trebbia Valley to reoccupy Bobbio. Garibaldi Brigades are continuing to offer stiff resistance. German thrusts in force on the front extending from Cuneo to the Tenda and Strua Valleys resulted in failure. A bloody fight took place at Vinadio. In their attempts to transfer 40 wounded men outside the city, the Germans suffered heavy losses. They were forced to despatch three reinforcement battalions to Pavia Province, where more than 1,000 Patriots are engaged in battle.

The Ligurian coastal sector, between Ventimiglia and Diano Marina, is in the hands of Patriot forces. As a result, the Germans were compelled to evacuate several localities in the Genoa sector. Patriots carried out daring attacks against Oneglia, where more than 80 political prisoners were freed, and against German artillery emplacements, damaging some of the guns. It is estimated that 8,000 Patriots are on the offensive in Liguria. In Genoa, Nazi-Fascists cannot risk venturing into the old sections of the city without grave danger to themselves. One hundred and seventy-two Germans and many Fascists were killed, and others were taken prisoner.

German troops, after reoccupying a few places previously liberated by Patriots on the right bank of Lake Maggiore, carried out retaliatory acts against the civilian population. Homes in Cannobio and Valmara were first sacked and then burned by Nazi-Fascist troops. Women, children, and old men were massacred.

Italian soldiers of the San Marco Battalion, who were until now compelled to remain with the Germans, opened fire on the Germans September 11, shouting, «Long Live Free Italy.»

Patriots cut Highway 51, leading to the Austrian border, and blew up a bridge, causing a landslide which blocked both the road and the railway. A railway line near Borgello, between Pontremoli and Borgotaro, was disrupted by Patriot forces.

On the night of September 6, in the region of La Barrack, Patriots destroyed a bridge. A highway and a railway tunnel were blown up east of Valdagno. The disruption of the Milan-Domodossola railway line was completed. The railway bridge over the Cavour Canal was demolished.

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 15. — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

At the Albert and Maas-Scheldt Canal, enemy bridgeheads were further narrowed down by successful counter-attacks of our troops.

Between Maastricht and Aix-les-Chapelle, the Americans, supported by strong tank forces, continued their large-scale offensive.

Maastricht was lost.

South and southeast of Aix-les-Chapelle, the enemy succeeded at some points in penetrating into the forefields of the West Wall. Heavy fighting, in the course of which 40 enemy tanks were knocked out yesterday, continues with undiminished fury.

In the region of Nancy and in front of the Burgundy Gate, bitter fighting also continues. From the fortified harbors and bases at the Channel and Atlantic coast, heavy but successful defensive fighting was reported yesterday. At the outskirts of blazing Brest, Boulogne, and at the Cape of Gris Nez, the attackers suffered particularly heavy losses.

For several days, the harbor towns on the southeast coast of England have been subjected to heavy fire by German long-range batteries.

Escort vessels of a German convoy sank a British E-boat in the waters to the north of the West Frisian Island of Texel.

Italy:

In Italy, the enemy continued his attempts to break through our positions of the Apennines and the Adriatic sector, before the bad weather period sets in. In ruthlessly employing strong infantry and tank forces, the enemy ran against our defence front until late in the evening.

In the course of fierce fighting, the enemy succeeded in gaining only little ground, apart from a penetration near Coriano.

To the north of Florence, all attacks, supported by strong artillery, were also repulsed.

Local penetrations were cleared by immediate counter-attacks.

Eastern Front:

In the southern part of Transylvania, and in the northern part of the Szekler salient, numerous Soviet attacks were repulsed.

At Sanok and Krosno, renewed attempts of the Bolsheviks to break through our front line were frustrated.

One penetration was sealed by counter-attack.

At the Vistula, to the north of Sandomierz, grenadiers and sappers, supported by storm artillery of the Army, as well as throwers, liquidated an enemy bridgehead in the course of fierce offensive fighting, lasting for several days, and destroyed the bulk of two reinforced Soviet rifle divisions. A large number of prisoners was taken, and 161 guns, as well as numerous other weapons, were captured.

In the battle region of Warsaw, Praga was lost after fierce house-to-house fighting. To the north of the city, fierce enemy attacks were repelled.

To the northwest of Lomza, our troops disengaged themselves from the enemy after fierce fighting, and took up positions on the northern bank of the Narev.

In the northern sector of the eastern front, the Bolsheviks opened up the expected large-scale attack on a broad front, with over 40 rifle divisions and a large number of tank and battle plane formations. Despite the fact that the Soviets employed far superior forces in men and material, our troops, splendidly supported by the Luftwaffe, frustrated all break-through attempts of the Soviets in fierce fighting. Penetrations were brought to a hold, or sealed by immediate counter-attacks.

German bomber and battle plane formations attacked Soviet columns on the march and traffic targets at the eastern front by day and night with good effect. Particularly in the battle region of the Carpathians, and near Medohn, they destroyed a large number of tanks and guns, as well as over 100 motorized vehicles of the enemy.

In fierce air battles and by the activity of the anti-aircraft artillery of the Luftwaffe, 99 Soviet aircraft were shot down yesterday.

At the Kandalaksha front, our rearguard troops again repelled several Soviet attacks yesterday.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN HOME RADIO

Soviet Expels Journalists: Budapest: «Anglo-American correspondents, coming from Turkey to Bucharest, have been asked by the Soviet military authorities to leave Rumania immediately. The Soviets point out that the Rumanian military theatre is exclusively reserved for the Bolshevik Army.»

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Western Front: The military correspondent Dr. Max Krull reports: «The enemy had concentrated strong forces in the areas of Maastricht and Aix-la-Chapelle. It was certain that he would attack there and would achieve the customary initial successes. Superiority in material enabled him to capture the town of Maastricht. Fighting was very lively at the upper Moselle and the gateway to Burgundy. South and southeast of Aix-la-Chapelle, a bitter fight is still raging for two works of German fortifications. Enemy losses have been exceedingly heavy. By-passing Nancy the enemy advanced toward Luneville. The Americans are also concentrating troops and material in order to make further break-through attempts at Belfort.»

Eastern Front: «The battle for Warsaw continues. Several German batteries shelled the suburb of Praga, where the Bolsheviks had established strong tank formations after its evacuation by the Germans. Praga was systematically laid in ruins... In order to avoid unnecessary losses, the Germans evacuated the city of Novograd in the area east of Ostrolenka... The expected large-scale attack has been opened by the Bolsheviks at the northern wing of the eastern front... in order to smash the German fronts in Estonia and Latvia.»

FASCIST RADIO

A Panicky Retreat: The murderous fire of the German artillery broke up all enemy attacks on the western front. The Allies, confronted with this stiff resistance, reacted in a panicky and disorderly manner. Their losses were extremely heavy. Near Liege, German motorized columns played havoc with heavy enemy tanks.

No Change in Italy: On the Italian front, the Anglo-Americans continue their offensive. Although the German lines were slightly moved, it can be safely stated that Kesselring remains the master of the situation.

Along the Sieve, the Wehrmacht in a powerful counter-attack recaptured most of the important positions previously lost.

Worries in Quebec: Official communiques publish reports on the Quebec Conference, which are nothing but sheer bluff. However, in reality, the two Anglo-Saxon statesmen must be extremely worried over the future. Dr. Goebbels's article, as well as neutral reports, show that the situation in Germany in very different from what the Allies would like the world to believe.

AMERICANS REPORTED EIGHT MILES INSIDE REICH

SHAEF, September 14 — Reuter dispatches from American 1st Army forward command posts put American troops 7½ to eight miles inside the Reich frontier late tonight.

Reuter said strong concentrations of armor and infantry supported by artillery were battling bitterly along a wide front on German soil.

[illegible] today that several more two miles of the defenses on a four-mile front about 30 miles northwest of Trier.

AP added that the Germans were fighting like fanatics from their thinly-garrisoned and lightly-armed forts. There appeared to be a shortage of enemy infantry. Allied tanks and artillery were brought up to blast out of the earth the pillboxes held by the enemy.

The Siegfried penetration was described as no breakthrough, but a crack in the first line of the Siegfried defenses. The outer belt only has been broken at several points. The main forts still remain to be reached.

The 3rd Army around Nancy and the 7th Army pushing forward toward Belfort made further progress today. The Nancy bridgeheads, north and south of the city, were said to have been improved even as General George Patton's armor and infantry repelled several strong German counter-attacks along the front from captured Thionville to Charmes.

Patton Gathers Reserves

More and more tanks and anti-tank guns were said to have been carried over the Moselle River today as Patton built up striking reserves. Patton's positions over the Moselle improved as enemy forces were driven by armored attacks from high ground which they had used for artillery observation points.

Commenting on operations in this area, the German Overseas News Agency said today that the Americans have assembled strong forces near Metz. The broadcast said a large-scale artillery barrage had started, presumably as a preliminary to a strong attack.

In northern Belgium, said the BBC, British troops have forced the Germans back to the Escaut Canal, having cleared a long section of the Albert Canal line. The Germans, said the BBC, have cut bridges over the Escaut even at the cost of isolating many of their own troops who were unable to keep pace with the retreat. Late dispatches said even the Escaut line had been broken at several points.

At Brest, American troops have battled their way into the city, and were fighting tonight in the submarine pen area west of the city. Earlier reports said the German garrison has again refused to surrender.

SIEGFRIED LINE OUTPOSTS SMASHED

SHAEF, September 15 (Friday) — It was announced here late last night that initial major obstacles of Siegfried Line outposts have been smashed by advancing American forces.

In the Aachen area, said SHAEF, the frontier has been crossed on a 10-mile front. In the Aachen area, the towns of Forstebach, Kopschen, and Wormhof have fallen [illegible] of the frontier

SHAEF, September 14 — Reuter dispatches from American 1st Army forward command posts put American troops 7½ to eight miles inside the Reich frontier late tonight.

Reuter said strong concentrations of armor and infantry supported by artillery were battling bitterly along a wide front on German soil.

From here, it was announced today that several more towns in the vicinity of captured Rotgen have fallen to American columns. Radio Paris said one of these towns was Lammersdorf, four miles to the southeast.

Aachen Besieged

The United Press said tonight that American «Long Toms» (155 mm. guns) were pounding the city of Aachen (Aix la Chapelle) from commanding heights above the town. Penetration of 1st Army armored columns up to the outskirts of the big German border city was announced last night.

Still another American column was reported driving down on the city from the north, threatening to outflank the German defenses. Front-line dispatches reported increasingly heavy enemy artillery fire.

German shelling, according to the Associated Press, has stepped up as American forces drive their wedges deeper into the already cracked Siegfried Line, outer fortifications of which have been over-run, despite pyramidal concrete tank blocks spread over the approaches to depths of up to three miles.

The deepest penetration into Siegfried Line defenses was reported from the Prum area by the AP. The news service said tanks and infantrymen have hammered through points. The main forts still remain to be reached.

The 3rd Army around Nancy and the 7th Army pushing forward toward Belfort made further progress today. The Nancy bridgeheads, north and south of the city, were said to have been improved even as General George Patton's armor and infantry repelled several strong German counter-attacks along the front from captured Thionville to Charmes.

SHAEF, September 15 (Friday) — It was announced here late last night that initial major obstacles of Siegfried Line outposts have been smashed by advancing American forces.

In the Aachen area, said SHAEF, the frontier has been crossed on a 19-mile front. In the Aachen area, the towns of Forstebach, Kopsehen, and Wormhof have fallen.

SHAEF added that another penetration of the frontier has struck five to six miles into Reich territory northwest of Prum. (Reuter)

TACTICAL AIRCRAFT HIT FRENCH PORTS

LONDON, September 14 — Precision bombing by RAF Mitchells and Bostons of the Allied 2nd Tactical Air Force eliminated an enemy strongpoint on the outskirts of Boulogne this afternoon, it was officially reported.

More than 200 Marauders and Havocs of the 9th USAAF bombed four old French fort on a peninsula near Brest this afternoon in direct support of American troops besieging the enemy garrison there, United Press reported. (OWI - UP - AP)

YUGOSLAVS CAPTURE MIHAILOVICH'S H. Q.

LONDON, September 14 — Yugoslav Partisans today captured the former headquarters of General Mihailovich in western Serbia, it was announced tonight by Marshal Tito. Documents of his supreme command were captured, as well as several officers on his headquarters staff. A large transmitting set and four smaller ones were also taken. (OWI)

6,000 BOMBERS RANGE OVER GERMANY

LONDON, September 14 — A six-day series of thousand-bomber attacks at German war industries was climaxed yesterday when over 6,000 Allied bombers of all types filled the German skies in the greatest aerial assault in history.

The attack approached its height on Tuesday night when RAF heavy bombers pounded the German cities of Stuttgart, Frankfurt, and Munster. Then, yesterday morning, 8th USAAF Flying Fortresses and Liberators smashed the synthetic oil plants at Merseburg and Lutzendorff near Leipzig, and Ludwigshafen.

RAF heavies carried on the unrelenting attack yesterday evening when strong forces of the four-engined bombers hit the railway junction at Osnabrück and the Nordstern synthetic oil plant in the Ruhr.

During the day, 9th USAAF medium and light bombers devoted their attention to enemy positions between Aachen and Koblenz, while RAF Mosquito bombers, with their 4,000-pound bombs, topped off the day's operations with their fourth successive night attack on Berlin.

During the same day, other 8th USAAF Flying Fortresses, which had shuttled-bombed Chemnitz, Germany, on Monday, moved on to Italy from their Russian bases, blasting military targets at Diosgyor, 80 miles northeast of Hungary, while en route.

Bad flying weather today brought a temporary halt to the smashing Allied aerial offensive which was a shattering foretaste of things to come if the German people continue to fight.

Smoldering Cities

Mosquito pilots, returning from Berlin last night, reported that Stuttgart, Frankfurt, Osnabrück, and Munster were still burning fiercely from the RAF attacks, an Air Ministry communique said today.

Fires were still smoldering in the Hesse capital of Darmstadt, which was almost entirely devastated by an RAF assault earlier this week, the Air Ministry reported.

Despite the low cloud level today, Tactical Air Force fighter-bombers and fighters were able to give support to Allied troops, mainly British, Canadians, and Poles, along the northwestern end of the Allied line. Pilots reported no concentrations of enemy transport or troops, but what movement was sighted appeared to be headed generally east, toward Germany.

In its activity yesterday concentrated against enemy positions between Aachen and Koblenz and around Nancy and Metz, the 9th USAAF took a heavy toll of enemy equipment, destroying or damaging 11 German planes on the ground, 52 railway cars, 21 locomotives, 88 motor vehicles, 21 pieces of armor, and shot up four forts, three gun positions, a flak tower, a radio station, and an airfield. Seven planes were lost in the operations.

Allied British-based aircraft alone have destroyed at least 347 German planes in the past six days, an Associated Press summary showed today. In the same period, Allied losses have totalled 106 fighters and 225 heavy bombers. The report does not include figures from the 2nd TAF, whose planes have been making down-to-earth sorties in support of Allied ground troops.

A Reuter dispatch from Zurich said today that all German traffic in the province of Baden has been paralyzed by the weight of the Allied air attacks, and Rhine shipping has been suspended after the sinking of many barges.

ALLIES HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF SIEGFRIED LINE

SHAEF, September 14 — The Siegfried Line has been photographed by an Allied aerial photographic squadron which covered 26,000 square miles of territory, it was stated today.

PARISIAN CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

PARIS, September 14 — Nine hundred and eighty-nine Parisian Patriots were killed and 3,859 wounded in the liberation of the French capital, Marcel Flouret, Prefect of the Seine Department, announced today. (PWB)

GENERAL BRADLEY'S NOMINATION CONFIRMED

WASHINGTON, September 14 — The U. S. Senate today confirmed the nomination of General Omar Bradley, commander of the 12th Army Group composed of the 1st and 3rd Armies, to the permanent rank of major general, the White House announced.

President Roosevelt yesterday recommended that General Bradley be advanced in recognition of his outstanding accomplishments on the battlefields of France. (PWB)

8TH ARMY MAKES 1,000-YARD GAIN ON ADRIATIC

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 14 — British, Canadian, and Indian troops of the 8th Army, battering their way forward against the heaviest enemy resistance, have made gains of up to 1,000 yards all along a two-mile front in the center of the Adriatic coastal corridor, it was announced here today.

The 8th Army advance, in which flame-throwers and anti-tank rocket projectiles were used at close range to destroy dug-in enemy tanks atop the coastal ridges, has driven the Germans from many of their positions between Coriano and San Savino, where for more than 10 days the enemy has held the Allied forces threatening to overrun the Valley of the Po.

In the central sector of the Italian front, where 5th and 8th Army forces have moved into positions to storm the towering escarpments of the enemy's Goth Line through the Apennines, German troops turned loose the full power of their concentrations of machine-guns, artillery, mortars, and self-propelled guns in what was officially described as a "tremendous increase of resistance."

Official announcement was made today that British divisions, including the 6th South African Armoured Division, have been assigned to Lieut General Mark Clark to strengthen the Allied 5th Army for its rôle in the full-scale attack on the enemy's Goth Line positions. It has already been announced that 5th Army American forces are fighting in the sector north of Florence, formerly held by 8th Army troops.

Fanatic German Resistance

The savage and bloody struggle along the 11-mile-wide Adriatic coastal corridor has centered on a two-mile hilly stretch from Coriano, four miles in from the sea and six miles south of Rimini, southwest to the hamlet of San Savino. Here, on a ridge of ground more than 10 miles behind their prepared defenses, German forces have stemmed the 8th Army onslaught which smashed through the Goth Line and swept up the Adriatic coast toward the broad Valley of the Po. With the line gained by a fanatic stand of the veterans of the German 1st Parachute Division and the 26th Panzer Division, the German forces were enabled to mass tanks and fresh troops on this ridge-line and check the swiftly developing Allied break-through.

In the hasty reinforcement and reformation of the enemy forces, the tanks of the 26th and the 29th Panzer Divisions were dug in behind earthwork defenses, to form an extemporized line of fortifications on these low coastal ridges. Fierce fighting has raged around the villages of Coriano, Passano, and San Savino, all along this ridge-line, and turned into blockhouse defenses by the enemy. At last reports, all these positions were in German hands, although hard fighting was continuing all about them.

ALLIES HAVE PHOTOGRAPHS OF SIEGFRIED LINE

SHAEF, September 14 — The Siegfried Line has been photographed by an Allied aerial photographic squadron which covered 26,000 square miles of territory, it was stated today.

In spite of heavy anti-aircraft fire, defensive action by enemy fighters, bad weather, and smoke screens put up by the enemy to hide some sectors, the Allied aerial cameramen took thousands of photographs to give Allied armies a complete mosaic of the Siegfried Line and surrounding areas.

Recently-built obstacles and new defensive positions have also been photographed to keep the mosaic up-to-date.

R. N. CARRIER-BASED PLANES HIT GERMAN SHIPS

LONDON, September 14 — A medium-sized German supply ship and three escorting M-class minesweepers were repeatedly hit by British cannon-firing naval fighter planes off Statlandet, Norway, an Admiralty communique announced tonight.

One of the escort vessels blew up and sank and, when last seen, the remaining craft were damaged and halted.

The planes came from the aircraft carrier Furious and the escort carrier Trumpeter, which were escorted by the cruiser Devonshire and a number of destroyers, all under the command of Captain G. T. Philip.

One fighter plane was lost in the attacks. (Reuter)

it was announced here today.

The 8th Army advance, in which flame-throwers and anti-tank rocket projectiles were used at close range to destroy dug-in enemy tanks atop the coastal ridges, has driven the Germans from many of their positions between Cerasno and San Savino, where for more than 10 days the enemy has held the Allied forces threatening to overrun the Valley of the Po.

In the central sector of the Italian front, where 5th and 8th Army forces have moved into positions to storm the towering escarpments of the enemy's Goth Line through the Apennines, German troops turned loose the full power of their concentrations of machine-guns, artillery, mortars, and self-propelled guns in what was officially described as a "tremendous increase" of resistance.

Official announcement was made today that British divisions, including the 6th South African Armoured Division, have been assigned to Lieut. General Mark Clark to strengthen the Allied 5th Army for its rôle in the full-scale attack on the enemy's Goth Line positions. It has already been announced that 5th Army American forces are fighting in the sector north of Florence, formerly held by 8th Army troops.

Fanatic German Resistance

The savage and bloody struggle along the 11-mile-wide Adriatic coastal corridor has centered on a two-mile hilly stretch from Coriano, four miles in from the sea and six miles south of Rimini, southwest to the hamlet of San Savino. Here, on a ridge of ground more than 10 miles behind their prepared defenses, German forces have stemmed the 8th Army onslaught which smashed through the Goth Line and swept up the Adriatic coast toward the broad Valley of the Po. With the time gained by a fanatic stand of the veterans of the German 1st Parachute Division and the 26th Panzer Division, the German forces were enabled to mass tanks and fresh troops on this ridge-line and check the swiftly developing Allied break-through.

In the hasty reinforcement and reformation of the enemy forces, the tanks of the 26th and the 29th Panzer Divisions were dug in behind earthwork defences, to form an extemporized line of fortifications on these low coastal ridges. Fierce fighting has raged around the villages of Coriano, Passano, and San Savino, all along this ridge-line, and turned into blockhouse defenses by the enemy. At last reports, all these positions were in German hands, although hard fighting was continuing all about them.

Farther south, 8th Army forces yesterday recaptured two unchemmested farms on another ridge about 1,000 yards northwest of the village of Croce, a mile to the south of San Savino. Bitter fighting was also reported in the area of Gemmano, just south of the Conca River, and some eight miles inland.

Advance elements of the 5th Army have already driven back all outpost positions of the Goth Line between Pistoia and Lucca, and in some cases attacks have probed into the defenses in depth making up the formidable fortifications. Made up of concrete emplacements for all types of weapons, tank obstacles, minefields, and dugouts, the Goth Line in this mountain sector will prove a "test of Allied might," it was said.

Aside from a sharp clash in the upper Arno Valley northeast of Bibbiena, only patrol actions were reported on the rest of the Italian front.

Marauder bombers attacked enemy positions near Firenzuola, north of Florence, while Mitchell bombers attacked German strongholds along the Adriatic coastal corridor.

It was announced today that 15th AAF fighter pilots shot down two enemy aircraft yesterday near Oswiecim, Poland, where heavy bombers blasted a German synthetic oil plant. (PRO)

THIRD SHUTTLE BOMBING OPERATION IN PROGRESS

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 14 — Landing yesterday at 15th AAF Bases in Italy, flying Fortresses of the 8th AAF, escorted by their own Mustangs, completed the second leg of their third England-Russia-Italy shuttle-bombing mission, it was announced today.

En route to Italy, the Fortresses attacked targets at Diosgyor, 80 miles northeast of Budapest and 10 miles west of Miskolcz, in Hungary.

Leaving England on Monday, the heavy bombers blasted an armament and motor transport works at Chemnitz, Germany, about 20 miles southeast of Dresden. With the Mustangs, they continued to American-staffed Soviet bases, which had served the 8th and 15th AAF in previous shuttle missions.

The Fortresses were part of the formation of more than 1,000 8th AAF heavies which met some 125 enemy fighters in attacks on industrial targets in central Germany on Monday. The fighter escort met an additional 400 to 500 enemy fighters, and with the bombers they destroyed 175 Luftwaffe planes in one of the fiercest air battles ever fought over Germany.

Heavy bombers of the 15th AAF carried out the first shuttle mission between American and Russian bases in early June. The 8th AAF has flown three missions to Russia since then, the first, on June 21, when their Fortresses attacked synthetic oil targets near Berlin and continued to Russian bases. On June 26, they attacked oil installations at Drohobycw, in Poland, and continued to 15th AAF bases in Italy.

On July 5, the 8th AAF task force returned to Great Britain, after attacking targets in southern France, and completing the first triangular shuttle.

Between July 5 and August 6, 15th AAF fighters flew two shuttle missions to Russia, and on August 6, 8th AAF bombers attacked the Gdynia aircraft assembly plant, near the Polish Baltic port, and landed in Russia.

August 8, the 8th AAF bombers attacked Rumanian targets, en route to Italy. On August 10, Mustangs of the 8th AAF flew over Yugoslavia on a special mission, and on August 12, when the Fortresses and Mustangs attacked the Toulouse aerodrome, in southern France, the third leg of the second trans-Europe shuttle flight by the 8th AAF was completed. FRENCH OF 7TH MEETING STIFFER RESISTANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 14 — French troops in southern France have met with heavy resistance in the advance north and northeast of Champlitte, it was announced here late tonight.

American forces were reported to have made limited gains northeast of Vesoul against considerable German resistance.

French and American troops of the 7th Army yesterday occupied several towns northwest, west, and south of Belfort, forming a semi-arc facing the gateway to southwestern Germany.

With the Allies holding Cubry Les Faverney, 30 miles northeast of Belfort, Calmoutier, the same distance and also to the northeast; Villersexel, 20 miles southwest of Belfort, L'Isle Sur Doubs, less than 20 miles southwest; and Pont de Roide, some 17 miles south of Belfort, our forces appear to be in excellent positions for a concentrated thrust at the southern flank of the Siegfried Line.

On the left flank, against relatively light opposition, French troops yesterday occupied Langres, 40 miles north of Dijon and an important road junction. Advance units meanwhile continued northward in the direction of Chaumont, General Pershing's American Expeditionary Force Headquarters in the last war.

Genevrieres, eight miles northeast of Champlitte fell to French troops who met no enemy resistance, and to the south in this area, the town of Gray on the upper Saône River and having a population of 6,000 was cleared of the enemy. Meanwhile, other French troops continued to push on in a rapid advance beyond Gray.

The American advance continued methodically north of Vesoul, and fast moving troops reached Cubry les Faverny, against very light enemy opposition. In the vicinity of Vesoul, Calmoutier, directly on the road to Lure, approaching Belfort, was captured and Noroy Le Bourg, seven miles west of Vesoul, was cleared of the enemy. Other American forces fought off strong enemy opposition and entered Villersexel, 20 miles southwest of Belfort.

On the right flank of the line, French troops took the village of Pont De Roide and nearby Autechaux after many days of hard fighting in difficult terrain. However, the Germans made a strong counter-attack, supported by tanks, [illegible] attempt to fight forces in a desperate effort to ward

YUGOSLAVS ISOLATE GERMAN TROOPS IN GREECE

LONDON, September 14 — Yugoslav Partisan forces operating in Macedonia have isolated German occupation troops in Greece and the Aegean islands. Strong German forces withdrawing from those areas have been herded south of the Dvedelija frontier station of the Greek-Yugoslav border, because communication facilities have been cut.

It was announced in London that several hundred British prisoners of war were freed when Yugoslav Partisans liberated Negotin, on the Salonika-Belgrade rail line north of Dvedelija.

In a special communique, Marshal Tito announced that other Yugoslav units, converging on the strategic rail center of Nis, seized the town of Pirot on the main rail line linking Istanbul and Sofia with Belgrade, Budapest, and Vienna. The Germans are trying hard to stem the advance, and bitter fighting is in progress.

In Bosnia, the Partisans have cut all communications toward the German front and in the valley of the upper Vrbas River, the last German strongpoint was captured. The communique said that the area around the Vrbas River as far as Banja Luka has now been liberated.

Marshal Tito stated that considerable numbers of new units are joining the Liberation Army, including 4,000 Moslem militiamen, and large groups of Croatians who have left the German ranks.

Yugoslav forces have captured the Island of Brac, largest of a group of islands lying off the Dalmatian coast opposite Split, Marshal Tito announced tonight in a special order.

The Germans suffered very heavy losses, and Yugoslav troops captured large quantities of arms, ammunition, and other war material. An enemy vessel was sunk.

FRENCH FLEET RETURNS TO TOULON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 14 — The French fleet returned to its main Mediterranean base of Toulon yesterday, as a fleet of nine French cruisers and the battleship Lorraine steamed into the shattered harbour where French sailors had scuttled the French warfleet in November 1942 to save it from German hands.

Admiral Andre Lemonnier, Chief of Staff of the French Navy, captained the ships returning to the great base, now being reopened for shipping.

The American cruiser USS Philadelphia with Rear Admiral Lyal Davidson, and the British cruiser HMS Sirius, with Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief Mediterranean Fleet, represented the Allied naval forces.

Vice Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, commander of the Allied naval forces which carried out the landing in southern France, viewed the homecoming from his flagship anchored in the inner harbour.

WHITNEY, AMERICAN SPORTSMAN, ESCAPES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 14 — Colonel John Hay (Jock) Whitney, staff officer of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force, captured by the Germans in southern France on August 21, has escaped and returned to his organization, it was announced here tonight.

The colonel, a famous figure in American horse racing, made his escape from a moving train, after having been dive-bombed by American planes, shelled by Allied artillery, and attacked by Maquis, while in the hands of his captors.

The colonel and four companions were ambushed by a German tank which opened fire on their jeep, and then shelled a farmhouse in which they took refuge. (PRO)

PRAGA TAKEN; CZECH BORDER CROSSED

MOSCOW, September 14 — The long contested Warsaw suburb of Praga fell to Marshal Rokossovsky's 1st White Russian Front today.

An order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin said the Red Army overwhelmed the strong German fortress protecting the Polish capital after a prolonged and bitter battle.

Joined with the Russians in the liberation of Praga were the troops of General Berlinger's Polish 1st Army.

Six hundred and 60 yards across the Vistula River from Russian and Polish Army positions, General Bor's Partisan forces within the capital said that today, for the first time, the battle from without the city is affecting the battle within.

German resistance to Bor's Partisans lessened considerably, according to their communique, as fighting continued bitterly throughout the ruined streets.

To the northeast of Warsaw, Red Army troops have swept 10 miles beyond Lomza to take the stronghold of Nowogrod, on the left bank of the Narew River.

Diabolical Lomza Defenses

Reuter dispatches described the Lomza German defense area as the most heavily mined and diabolically protected stretch of front thus far encountered on the long Russo-German line.

The Nazis had set up electric generating stations to provide current for their barbed wire. The entire area, dubbed "The Devil's Doorsteps" by Russian troops, was said to have been stuffed with steel and concrete emplacements, and with high explosives in layers of mines in considerable horizontal depth.

German resistance around Lomza, said Reuter, increased as the threat to this last stronghold on the south bank of the Narew River became one of imminent loss. Every inch of the Russian advance was contested. The battlefield was kept under raking German fire. The threshing barbed wire entanglements glowed with flickering rings of blue light at night. And at the last, German engineers released a 13-foot wall of water from sluiceways of canals overlooking the battle ground.

On the central front, in southern Poland, advance elements of Cossack cavalrymen were believed tonight to have crossed the frontiers of Czechoslovakia. This report came from a Reuter correspondent.

Early this evening other dispatches said Russian troops pushing westward through Rumania had linked up with Marshal Tito's Yugoslavs at Negotin, in eastern Serbia.

FINNISH PREMIER IN HELSINKI

STOCKHOLM, September 14 — Prime Minister Hackzell, of Finland, was reliably reported to be returning to Helsinki from Moscow for last-minute conferences with his Government, just a few hours before the expiration of the time given for the Germans to evacuate northern Finland, as a condition for a Russian-Finnish Armistice.

Authoritative accounts were lacking on the specific purpose of Hackzell's trip, but Associated Press said that most observers felt he was bringing peace terms for submission to Parliament.

The rest of the Finnish peace delegation remained at Moscow.

Reports from north Finland indicate that, while the Germans are apparently withdrawing from large areas, they have not evacuated all troops. Should the Germans fail to leave, the Finns are bound by their September 9 agreement with Russia to disarm the remaining Germans and make them prisoners of war. (OWI)

GREEK PATRIOTS SEIZE CHIOS

CAIRO, September 14 — Greek patriots have taken over the administration of the large Aegean Island of Chios, which lies close to the Turkish mainland near Smyrna, following the withdrawal of the German garrison. There is also evidence that the Germans are evacuating Mytilene (Lesbos), north of Chios, and Rhodes, largest island in the Dodecanese group. (PWB-AP)

NAPLES, September 14 — The Greek Prime Minister, Papandreou, and the Greek Finance Minister, Sakos, have had a long meeting with General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Allied Supreme Commander in the Mediterranean, stated a Reuter message.

PHILIPPINE OUTPOSTS BATTERED

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 14 — While complete reports were awaited on the results of the crushing blow delivered at the Philippines by carrier-based aircraft of the U. S. Pacific Fleet, last reported still to be going on, General MacArthur's communique today announced that strategic Japanese bases leading to the Philippines were heavily battered Wednesday in a series of attacks by Allied bombers based in the Southwest Pacific.

The heaviest blow of the day against Japanese bases guarding the approaches to the Philippines, was made at Galea, on Halmahera, General MacArthur's communique said. Aerodromes were badly damaged by bombing and were then strafed by fighters. No enemy interceptors came up to challenge the Allied planes.

South of Halmahera, Allied bombers dropped 125 tons of bombs on Ceram and Boerce. A 1,000-ton Japanese freighter was sunk in nearby waters, and three coastal vessels were sunk or damaged at Ceram.

TENGCHUNG CAPTURED BY CHINESE

CHUNGKING, September 14 — Chinese troops have captured Tengchung, 35 miles east of the Burma border, completing what the Chinese High Command today called "an important accomplishment in the Chinese eastward drive to join up with General Joseph Stilwell's forces in northern Burma and to open a land supply route to blockaded China."

More than 3,000 Japanese troops were wiped out in the battle, which marked the end of a several weeks' siege by Chinese forces, the Chinese news agency reported.

"This marks another high point in the effort to clear the area west of the Salween River, and removes another obstacle to the reopening of the Burma Road."

Tengchung is about 25 miles west of the Salween River, and before the Chinese can effectively use the Burma Road they must wipe out the remaining opposition immediately west of the Salween bridge and clear Japanese troops from the Lungling and Mangshih areas to the south.

The Chinese High Command announced today that enemy troops had captured a hill three miles north of Lungling Tuesday, thus extending their lines across the Lungling-Tengchung road, but added that the pressure of the reinforced Japanese in this area had declined somewhat yesterday.

To the east, in southern central China, the Japanese drive south along the Hengyang-Kweilin railroad is continuing, Brooks Atkinson, New York Times correspondent, said today that while victory in the European war was in sight, the war in the interior of China is going against us.

He wrote: "Driving southwest from Hengyang toward Kweilin, Japanese divisions have reached Hwangshaho at the Kwangsi Province border. That is a good defensive position, but is is possible that the Japanese can outflank it.

"The Chinese retreat casts no reflection on the willingness of the Chinese soldiers to fight. What they did at Hengyang for 47 days is a token of their courage, although the loss of Hengyang considerably discouraged them.

"Now they are tired, and are pitted against freshly-supplied Japanese divisions."

Japanese Offensive Too Late

In Chungking, a Chinese Government spokesman, Dr. P. H. Chang, minimized the effects of the enemy advance in China, saying they were "too little and too late in view of the American successes in the Pacific.

"The present Japanese drive in southwest China cannot acquire any material results, for the Japanese will not have time to consolidate their gains," he said.

Dr. Chang said if the Japanese offensive had been staged two years ago, it would have had major importance, but Pacific developments have now washed it out.

Fourteenth USAAF medium bombers and fighters carried out widespread attacks on Japanese positions and river shipping in southwestern China, General Stilwell's communique reported today. River craft were also hit in French Indo-China Tuesday night, the communique said. Liberator bombers sank a 2,700-ton Japanese freighter in the Formosa Straits. No planes were lost in all operations.

In Burma, 5th Indian Division troops, fighting their way toward Tiddim in western Burma, began probing Japanese positions along the Manipur River, while Allied artillery and aircraft opened attacks on Japanese strong-points covering approaches to the river-crossing on the Tiddim Road.

These strong-points are placed in the natural defenses covering the crossings of the river and have been strengthened during the past two months during the delaying action of the Japanese 33rd Division.

In the Arakan region, Indian troops are pursuing their advantage in the Mayu Range, today's communique from Southeast Asia Command Headquarters reported. The new advances came after a series of heavy attacks had blasted the Japanese from ridge positions a few miles inland from the Bay of Bengal.

Heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command made a daylight attack on the rail center at Moulmein, in central Burma, Wednesday, the communique said, while fighter-bombers and fighters are continuing their support of operations on the Tiddim Road. (OWI - BBC)

Japanese Offensive

In Chungking, a Chinese Government spokesman, Dr P. H. Chang, minimized the effects of the enemy advance in China, saying they were "too little and too late in view of the American successes in the Pacific.

"The present Japanese drive in southwest China cannot acquire any material results, for the Japanese will not have time to consolidate their gains," he said.

Dr Chang said if the Japanese offensive had been staged two years ago, it would have had major importance, but Pacific developments have now washed it out.

Fourteenth USAAF medium bombers and fighters carried out widespread attacks on Japanese positions and river shipping in southwestern China, General Stilwell's communique reported today. River craft were also hit in French Indo-China Tuesday night, the communique said. Liberator bombers sank a 2,700-ton Japanese freighter in the Formosa Straits. No planes were lost in all operations.

In Burma, 5th Indian Division troops, fighting their way toward Tiddim in western Burma, today probing Japanese positions along the Manipur River, while Allied artillery and aircraft opened attacks on Japanese strong-points covering approaches to the river-crossing on the Tiddim Road.

These strong-points are placed in the natural defenses covering the crossings of the river, and have been strengthened during the past two months during the delaying action of the Japanese 33rd Division.

In the Arakan region, Indian troops are pursuing their advantage in the Mayu Range, today's communique from Southeast Asia Command Headquarters reported. The new advances came after a series of heavy attacks had blasted the Japanese from ridge positions a few miles inland from the Bay of Bengal.

Heavy bombers of the Eastern Air Command made a daylight attack on the rail center at Moulmein, in central Burma, Wednesday, the communique said, while fighter-bombers and fighters are continuing their support of operations on the Tiddim Road. (OWI - BBC)

PACIFIC LEADERS NAMED BEFORE QUEBEC

QUEBEC, September 14 — The military command for the forthcoming offensive against Japan was decided upon before the Quebec Conference, White House Secretary Stephen Early told a press conference today.

He stated that there has been no question at the conference of the creation of a "super command," and added that he did not know whether the approved command for the Pacific included the men now operating there.

Foreign Secretary Eden arrived here today after a non-stop flight from the United Kingdom, it was announced tonight. (Reuter)

SOLDIERS' CONDUCT IN ROME PRAISED

ROME, September 14 — Allied soldiers on leave in Rome have conducted themselves in a manner worthy of the countries that they represent, Brig. Gen. Thoburn K. Brown, head of the Rome Allied Area Command, told the press today.

"The number of serious incidents involving soldiers has been gratifyingly low," General Brown added, "and that speaks well for the type of men wearing the various countries' insignia in Italy.

"The good conduct of the soldiers on leave has a really beneficial reaction on the civilian population. And, conversely, any disturbance or breach of discipline by soldiers in the presence of civilians tends to discredit whatever armed forces they represent.

"Therefore, it is most important that our soldiers should take a personal pride in being a credit to their units and to their countries."

Saluting was one thing he would like to see improved, General Brown pointed out, not only between officers and enlisted men, but also between officers and their superiors.

"Saluting is the means by which soldiers recognize and greet each other, and I would like to see a marked improvement in this," he continued.

RAAC is doing everything possible to help soldiers on leave in the city to enjoy it, and has kept restrictions at a minimum. The Military Police are stationed around Rome only to enforce these few rules known to everyone, and not to interfere with the legitimate recreation of soldiers, he said.

General Brown pointed out that four restaurants have been opened for enlisted men visiting Rome, and that sleeping quarters have been provided at several rest centers. (PRO)

POPE PLEASED WITH BEHAVIOR OF TROOPS

ROME, September 14 — Pope Pius XII has given the Allied Command to understand that he is well pleased with the behavior of Allied soldiers during the daily audiences granted to them, according to a statement issued at the Vatican today.

ROME, September 14 — The Enna, Sicily, court sentenced Giuseppe Palermo to two years' imprisonment and a fine of 1,465,000 lire for failure to declare his grain to the Peoples Granaries.

The Bari courts handed down the following sentences in a group of cases involving infractions against the Grain laws.

Tommaso Basilico 6 months' imprisonment and a fine of 10,000 lire; Antonio De Marco one month and 15 days, plus 600 lire; Giovanni Bernardi 3 months and 20,160 lire for hauling grain without the prescribed transport voucher and 46 days plus 500 lire for illegal threshing; Antonio Rutigliano and Antonio Rizzi both to 8 months in prison and a 15,000 lire fine for subtraction of grain and unauthorized threshing.

U. S. GRAND JURY INDICTS BORAX CARTEL

SAN FRANCISCO, September 14 — Several German and British-owned companies were indicted today by a United States Federal grand jury on charges that they monopolized the world's supply of borax, a strategic war chemical, in a cartel described by government attorneys as one of the most ruthless and complete in the annals of the Department of Justice's anti-trust division.

Wealthy London, New York, and California businessmen were named defendants together with the companies they controlled — Borax Consolidated, Ltd., of London; American Potash and Chemical Corporation, operating from New York headquarters, and their subsidiaries exploiting British deposits of crude and sodium borates.

German members of the cartel, who, according to the anti-trust division attorneys, own 90 per cent of the American Potash and Chemical Corporation, were not indicted. Their stock was taken over by the U. S. Alien Property Custodian after its German ownership was discovered in October, 1942. (Reuter)

174 GERMANS IN U. S. INDICTED

WASHINGTON, September 14 — One hundred and seventy-four German aliens, including former high German officials, have been indicted in the states of New York and New Jersey on charges of conspiring to defraud the United States by concealing their party affiliations in this country, the U. S. Department of Justice announced today.

The announcement said Federal grand juries in New York, Brooklyn, and Newark returned 37 indictments culminating a series of investigations which ended in Newark yesterday.

The case is the first to be brought against members of the Nazi Party in the United States, the announcement said.

The indictments carry maximum penalties of 10,000 dollar fines and 10 years imprisonment. All defendants are residents or former residents of the New York-New Jersey area. Many are interned as dangerous enemy aliens, and some are being held in temporary detention at Ellis Island in New York harbor. (OWI)

OCCUPIED AREAS

ALMOST ALL RIMINI IN RUINS

WITH 8TH ARMY, ITALY, September 14 — Almost the whole of Rimini is in ruins, refugees from the German-held town told a UNN special correspondent today.

Not only has Rimini been subjected to intensive shelling and bombing by the Allies, owing to the tenacious defense of the area by the Germans, but the enemy has also demolished the buildings facing the sea to strengthen their defenses.

The population has no alternative but to live in the open air. There has been no bread distribution for two months. Asked whether the Germans were not distributing bread, a refugee replied, «The Germans take everything they can, but they give nothing.» (UNN)

GERMANS HANG THREE ITALIANS

WITH 8TH ARMY, ITALY, September 14 — On August 16, the Germans hanged three young men publicly in a Rimini square. Their "crime" was that they had dodged forced labor for the Germans, and their bodies were left hanging in the square for 48 hours "as an example" to other Rimini residents, a UNN correspondent reported today.

Shootings were commonplace in this district. It is said that between Forli and Ravenna alone, 100 young men were shot. They had ignored the order to report for work for the enemy and had hidden in the fields. German detachments went searching for them with fixed bayonets. They lunged into every haystack, into every bundle of wheat, on the lookout for the runaways. Those they caught were shot offhand, and most of the time, the fields of wheat, farmhouses, and even villages were set afire.

Womenfolk eventually could stand it no longer. There were demonstrations everywhere. One day in Imola, over 700 women assembled in the streets and shouted their resentment. Armed Fascists were ordered to fire to restore order. There was no question of shooting above the heads of the women. They shot to kill, and among the women who fell dead in the first volley was a mother of seven children. (UNN)

MEDITERRANEAN

AFHQ, September 14 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

The advance of British and American troops of the 5th Army during the past few days has been continued against considerably increased enemy opposition on the forward edge of the Goth Line north of Florence.

In the Adriatic sector, 8th Army troops have advanced and have cleared the enemy from many of their positions on the Coriano San Savino ridge, where heavy fighting continues.

Seventh Army:

American and French troops have advanced several miles further at a number of points along their front in southern France, against varying enemy resistance. French Army forces occupied Langres and thrust forward elements toward Chaumont, in the upper Marne Valley. To the southeast, Gray is clear of the enemy, and considerable gains have been made in this sector. In the advance west of the Belfort Gap, American troops have entered Villersexel against considerable opposition. South of Belfort, French troops cleared stiffly defended Fort de Roide, meeting with a strong enemy counter-attack nearby.

Navy:

On the night of 12-13 September, destroyers operating in the Aegean sank an enemy convoy consisting of several vessels escorted by two small armed ships.

On the night 12-13 September targets in Yugoslavia

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force attacked motor and rail transport in Yugoslavia.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Genoa.

Last night, our bombers attacked three aerodromes in the Athens area.

Incomplete reports indicate MAAF flew over 1,050 sorties.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed. Twenty-six of our heavy bombers and nine other aircraft are missing.

From operations of the night of September 12/13, two of our aircraft are missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 14 — Today's communique:

Land:

On the Channel coast, mopping up continues. Allied troops have taken a strong-point in the vicinity of Nieuport-Bains.

In northwestern Belgium, we have enlarged our bridgehead over the Albert Canal at Gheel and, to the southeast, more enemy counter-attacks against our bridgehead brought no result. Mopping up in the area of Hechtel has been completed, and elements have reached the Escaut Canal.

Other Allied troops, after crossing the Albert Canal, have pushed on to cross the Dutch frontier. The frontier has also been crossed farther south, near Maastricht.

In Luxembourg, our forces have made gains in the area northeast of the capital. The bridgehead over the Moselle River continues to be strengthened in the face of heavy enemy resistance, and we are now holding the high ground in one area on the east bank.

In Brittany, progress is being made at Brest against stubborn defences which include small arms, mortars, machine-guns, and some artillery. A fort about two miles east of the town has been taken.

Air:

Fighter-bombers supported yesterday's attack. Attacks on the Siegfried Line and against strong-points near Nancy and Metz were made yesterday by fighter-bombers. Other fighter-bombers hit rail targets in the Nancy area, destroying and damaging a number of locomotives and railway trucks.

Communications and transportation targets on the railways and waterways of Holland were bombed and strafed by medium, light, and fighter-bombers. Hits were scored on the causeway between Walcheren and south Beveland.

Fortified positions at Boulogne were targets for other medium and fighter-bombers. Coastal aircraft attacked an enemy convoy on the anchorage off Den Helder on Tuesday night. Five vessels were left on fire, and a sixth apparently sinking. Shore installations were also hit.

Other formations attacked shipping between the Hook of Holland and Ameland. Two coastal aircraft are missing. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 14 — Today's Resistance Front communique:

Following the liberation of Cannobio, where the German garrison was compelled to hoist the white flag, the Patriot offensive has extended to include the entire Province of Novara. Two Partisan brigades, advancing beyond Cannobio, occupied Oggebbio and gained control of the surrounding area.

The Germans were also beaten near Biella, where they suffered grave losses in men and material.

Patriots also launched violent attacks in the outskirts of Novara, where it seems the Germans have withdrawn a large portion of their troops in order to avoid being bottled up in the city.

From Piedmont to Venezia Giulia, and especially in frontier zones, fighting is increasing in intensity. Italian and Yugoslav Patriot groups have isolated Gorizia.

Successes registered in the Lake Maggiore area saved the lives of 53 hostages the Germans were about to hang at Cannobio where three gallows had already been erected in the town's main square. The timely intervention of Garibaldi units prevented the execution, and they captured the entire German garrison. Stranded German groups north of Cannobio, on the Swiss border, withdrew to the opposite shore of the lake after having waited in vain for reinforcements. Following the Partisan victory, a calm atmosphere has now descended upon the Madonna da Ponte sector of the Italian-Swiss frontier, where the Patriots, in complete control of the situation, are displaying a maximum of courtesy toward Swiss authorities.

In preparation for a new offensive on the eastern shore of Lake Maggiore, a number of Patriot brigades are making deep thrusts. Bitter fighting took place in the direction of Pallanza and Stresa. Omegna has been liberated.

The leader of a Patriot nucleus, known to his followers as the «Red Devil,» died heroically in the course of an assault on a Fascist barracks at Cigliano, in the Province of Vercelli. A spy had informed the commander of the Fascist garrison that the Patriots were preparing to attack.

Patriots executed a leading Fascist at Castagnola Lanze, in Asti Province. The Fascist commissioner at Estile met the same fate.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, 14 September — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the West, our troops frustrated British attacks south of Dunkirk, as well as north of Bruges and Ghent. Enemy bridgeheads across the Albert Canal, and the Maas-Scheldt Canal, were eliminated or narrowed down by counter-attacks. Between Maastricht and the German frontier, in the area of Eupen, our troops fiercely resisted the American offensive. A German counter-attack, with Aix-les-Chapelle as basis, soon dislodged the enemy. During these actions, a large number of enemy tanks and light caliber guns were destroyed.

Our base garrison at the mouth of the Gironde threw the attacking enemy back, under considerable losses.

Italy:

In Italy, enemy attacks failed north of Lucca and Pistoia. Further strong attacks against our groups north of Florence, which were launched with air support, similarly failed.

On the eastern part of the front, the enemy extended his offensive into the neighboring sectors. In spite of strong artillery and air support, all attacks collapsed under the impact of our defensive fire. Smaller penetrations were sealed.

Eastern Front:

In South Siebenbürgen, German and Hungarian troops repelled the attacks of Soviet and Rumanian units.

In order to shorten our lines, the southern part of the Szekel salient has been evacuated according to plan without enemy interference. At the Satok and Krasno penetration points, our defence again successfully withstood the onslaught of the continuously attacking Soviets.

East of Warsaw, the enemy, from his penetration point, broke into the suburb of Praga. Bitter street-fighting is in progress there. Northeast of Praga, formations of Waffen SS and Hungarian units successfully threw back all Bolshevist attacks; 45 enemy tanks were knocked out.

Northwest of Lomza, bitter fighting is in progress for a German Narev bridgehead.

In Estonia, south of the Lake of Wirz, numerous enemy attacks failed. The Soviets suffered heaviest losses.

Yesterday, too, the enemy attempted to interfere with our disengagement movements in Finland. He was repelled by counterattacks.

Air:

Enemy bomber and fighter formations yesterday attacked western and south Germany, extending their raids into central Germany. Terror attacks were aimed especially at the cities of Stuttgart, Darmstadt, Osnabrück, and Auschwitz.

Last night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin.

Eighty-one Anglo-American planes, including 58 four-engined bombers, were shot down by our anti-aircraft defence forces.

A German counter-attack, with Aix-les-Chapelle as basis, soon dislodged the enemy. During these actions, a large number of enemy tanks and light caliber guns were destroyed.

In North Luxembourg, and in the northern part of the Metz bridgehead, our own counter-attacks also scored successes. To both sides of Nancy, stronger enemy forces are advancing across the Moselle River in an eastward direction. Southeast of Nancy, the enemy was stopped at the Meurthe River and in the southern outskirts of Luneville. The garrison of Neufchateau, after being attacked from all sides, succeeded by counter-attack in fighting itself through to the east. The town itself had to be abandoned. Southwest of Mirecourt, the enemy continues to advance. Our protective forces slowly withdrew, under strong enemy pressure, in the area southeast of Langres up to the Upper Doubs, in a northward direction.

During the bitter fighting for possession of Vesoul, the U. S. 7th Army suffered especially heavy losses.

The stubborn defensive struggle of our bases and fortified ports on the Channel and Atlantic Coast continues. The garrisons of Calais and Boulogne repelled several enemy attacks, inflicting losses.

In the fortified zone of Brest, the defenders, although exposed to concentrated artillery fire and continuous air attacks, are fighting on with an unwavering sense of duty. They are aided by Wehrmacht artillery in an exemplary manner. In the western sector, they were able to repel several enemy attacks by immediate counter-action.

FASCIST RADIO

Western Front: While the German troops are stiffening their resistance, the Allies are continuously throwing fresh troops into the battle, with utter disregard for the tremendous losses they are suffering.

A New Offensive Imminent: In Italy, powerful American patrols made strong thrusts astride the Florence-Firenzuola road. It is believed that a large-scale offensive in the western sector of the front is imminent. Heavy losses were inflicted upon the enemy in a bitter hand-to-hand fighting along the Sieve.

The Problem of Partisans: The partisans, it is stated, are greatly perturbed over the treatment they have received in liberated Italy, where they are disarmed as soon as the Allied troops take possession of the captured provinces. It is not improbable that shortly the patriots will turn their weapons against those who originally armed them.

WAR FRONTS

AMERICANS REACH AACHEN; TAKE GERMAN TOWN

SHAEF, September 13 — American troops were said tonight to have penetrated German territory as far as the important city of Aachen (Aix la Chapelle), about four miles over the Reich frontier.

A short time earlier the Associated Press reported from here, that the German town of Rotgen — first to fall to Allied troops — had been captured by American infantrymen. The town lies nine miles southeast of Aachen, and just across the Belgian border.

The AP said American columns swept onward beyond Rotgen, and assaulted pillboxes and broke up anti-tank barriers in the advanced fortifications of the Seigfried Line. The German news agency, DNB, admitted that some of these advanced forts have been captured.

Patton's Moselle Spearheads

Mountains as paths of retreat toward Mulhouse. Countless thousands of Nazi troops were said tonight to have been left behind in villages and forest areas by-passed by the 7th Army in its advance toward Belfort.

A BBC correspondent said today that their escape has been completely cut off; that they have no hope of getting back to the Reich, and that they are merely waiting for Allied soldiers to come along and take them away. Their last route of escape was cut when French troops of the 7th and 3rd armies joined up in the vicinity of Chatillon.

In northern Belgium, British troops have advanced along the Albert Canal, and tonight were said to be within 10 miles of the German border. BBC said enemy units defending the canal failed to stop the British push, and that forward British elements have swept onward beyond the next water barrier.

Dispatches from the Canadian 1st Army said tonight that all resistance has been wiped out in Le Havre, and that British forces are in control of the entire city. Prisoners taken were counted at more than 8,000, presumably the entire garrison.

U. S. 9th Army

It was revealed here today that six great Allied armies are now facing the Germans in the west, and that Lt General William Simpson's 9th American Army has taken the field in France. Dispatches said the 9th's present position was not announced, but that it may be thrown into the balance anywhere along the front.

A spokesman for General Eisenhower broadcast instructions to foreign workers in northwest, west, and southwest Germany, to flee from the Gestapo manhunt for trench diggers and soldiers, and to leave the factories.

According to reports from Zurich, the Germans themselves are fleeing from these areas. Roads of the threatened Reich were said tonight to be jammed with trucks, cars, bicycles, and animal-drawn vehicles as the population of areas in the immediate path of the Allied armies stream into the heart of Germany.

Zurich added that women and children in many Rhineland towns have been pressed into service to build fortifications and to dig trenches. Demolition squads in the Ruhr were said to be working day and night as, for the first time in a century and a half, the Germans are forced to scorch their own earth in the face of invading armies.

Over the Channel, German long-range guns lobbed shells for seven hours last night, and then resumed for another three hours this morning. The bombardement of the Dover coast continued into this afternoon. (OWI-Reuter-BBC)

Patton's Moselle Spearheads

Still other columns of the American 1st Army were reported to have made progress within German territory in the area of Trier, 65 miles to the south. At the same time, the AP said that strong armored spearheads of General Patton's 3rd Army have crossed the Moselle on both sides of Nancy.

These spearheads were said to have pushed over the river for a depth of eight miles in the first two hours, despite heavy German artillery fire. The guns of General Patton's roaring tanks were said tonight to be flushing the Germans from the woods into the hail of bombs and rockets let loose from American battle planes covering the swift advance.

Meanwhile, to the south, troops of the American 7th Army were pushing forward against suddenly lessening resistance, and tonight were reported to have reached a point within 25 miles of the Belfort doorway into southwestern Germany.

The 7th Army advance carried forward units more than four miles beyond captured Vesoul, and beyond the small town of Dampvalley-les-Colombe, on the main Vesoul-Belfort highway. These forward elements were said to be closing in on Lure.

LATE BULLETINS

A.F. HITS OSNABRUCK, NORDSTERN

LONDON, September 13 — Strong forces of 4424 bombers with fighter escort attacked the railway junction and yards at Osnabruck and the Nordstern synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr in daylight this evening, an Air Ministry communique announced.

Two aircraft are missing.

Osnabruck is in northwestern Germany, approximately 47 miles east of the Dutch frontier. (PWB)

PALESTINE MOVEMENT CURTAILED

JERUSALEM, September 14 (Thursday) — All movement of horses, mules, and donkeys outside of their own areas has been forbidden throughout Palestine, owing to the prevalence of an African horses' disease. (Reuter)

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Again over 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators, strongly escorted by fighters, attacked a variety of oil and industrial targets in central, southern, and western Germany. Weather was good, and all targets were bombed visually. One objective was an airfield where Messerschmidts had recently been active.

Thirty German planes were shot down in sky battles today, while 20 were destroyed aground. American losses were not immediately tabulated.

Four-engined Lancasters and Halifaxes last night switched from strategic bombing to tactical operations, and 1,400 planes struck at congested marshalling yards at Stuttgart and Frankfurt, and at German plants in the Ruhr.

The bombing of Frankfurt was decided on almost at the last moment, and the heavies were switched from another target 40 miles farther east to devastate military traffic packed in the railway yards there, on its way to the Siegfried Line. There was still enemy opposition, but neither the ground defenses nor the fighters were able to prevent the Lancasters' dropping more than 4,000 incendiary bombs on the targets. Huge fires were started in areas which had not been bombarded before, thus spreading the devastation in this important engineering center beyond the part in the west bombed in July.

Stuttgart too was heavily attacked by the heavies, which added to the havoc wrought to its engineering plants in July and again recently.

Berlin Bombed Again

For the fourth night running, Mosquitoes bombed Berlin last night and attacked German airfields.

All these night operations cost the RAF 25 aircraft.

Reconnaissance photographs of Darmstadt, the chemical center of the Upper Rhineland, show that almost the entire city now lies devastated after the RAF attack on Monday night.

Coastal Command Beaufighters struck at an enemy convoy off the West Frisian Islands on the Netherlands Coast last night, severely damaging a destroyer and leaving five other ships on fire. A radio station and gun positions ashore were also strafed and left afire.

Commenting on the lack of German opposition to attacks by the 2nd TAF, a Reuter correspondent said, "It is becoming increasingly obvious that the Luftwaffe is concentrated still further back in Germany. The Germans in the border area are relying on flak for nine-tenths of their protection, while the Luftwaffe is apparently being saved for the Battle of Germany. Every day, more and more Allied aircraft are flying over the Reich."

LUFTWAFFE IN FRANCE "BOMBED OUT"

NEW YORK, September 13 — The German Air Force was bombed out of the western theater of action rather than shot out of it, Gill Robb Wilson, New York Herald Tribune correspondent, said today in a delayed dispatch after visiting graveyards of German aircraft in France caused by Allied bombing attacks on French airfields.

In his visits to airfields in almost every part of France, the correspondent said, German hangars, shops, and factory facilities had been found reduced to ruins by strategic bombing. German runways and parking areas were pitted with craters.

He wrote: "An attempt to count destroyed German aircraft and stores of supplies at a great airfield near Germany Tuesday proved a failure. The broken planes were in chaotic heaps. NAZIS FEAR LANDING ON DANISH COAST

LONDON, September 13 — According to the Danish Press Bureau, the Germans are "taking urgent measures of a military nature in Denmark, fearing Allied landings on the Danish coast."

The reports stated that fortifications are being erected in south Jutland. Railways in Denmark are heavily guarded by German troops.

Families of Gestapo agents are being rapidly evacuated to Germany, while the remainder of the German population is being mobilized for the construction of defenses.

NAZIS LOSE BELGIAN ECONOMIC RESOURCES

WASHINGTON, September 13 — In a survey of the economic resources of Belgium, the U. S. Foreign Economic Administration yesterday said the liberation of that country will be a blow to the economic resources of Germany.

The survey pointed out that the liberation of Belgium means the loss of approximately 2,000,000 workers who had been forced to work in Belgium for Germany.

It showed that Germany will lose the 30 per cent of Belgium's yearly output of 25,000,000 tons of coal which was shipped to Germany and German-occupied countries, and four and a half million tons of coke, half of which went to Germany and half to Belgian industry working for Germany.

Germany will also lose 400,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity which was transmitted yearly to plants in the Cologne area. In addition, Germany will have to do without 4,000,000 tons of iron and steel, as well as a great variety of mechanical and electrical equipment which was used by Germany.

AMERICANS THRUST TOWARD BELFORT GAP
7TH AND 3RD ARMIES LINK IN STRENGTH

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 13 — American troops of the 7th Army forked across the narrowing Belfort Gap escapeway of the shattered German armies still in southern France today as the Allied 3rd and 7th Armies merged into a powerful united force at a point just north of the upper Seine River, it was announced here late tonight.

As enemy resistance weakened, the American forces pushed across the valley between the Vosges and the Jura mountain chains to reach the village of Flagy, six miles north of Vesoul, on the main highway through the Belfort passageway into southern Germany, and thrust to the northeast to the hamlet of Danvalley-Les-Colomne, some 30 miles west of the fortress town of Belfort itself.

Meanwhile, heavy enemy resistance held 7th Army forces pressing toward Belfort from the south and southwest, along the 20-mile front from Villersexel, 14 miles southwest of Vesoul, to Pont de Roide, some four miles from the Swiss frontier.

French forces of the 7th and 3rd Armies linked in force on the upper Seine River at Chatillon, it was announced this morning. The French forces, running out from Dijon, toward the German border, were making further gains in the valley of the upper Ource River, just southeast of Chatillon, tonight's announcement said.

Enemy resistance completely collapsed at this town, which is some 40 airline miles northwest of Dijon, and the remaining German troops in this area attempted a hasty withdrawal eastward. But the scattered, though substantial groups of enemy personnel east and south of the 7th and 3rd Armies' link line, faced capture or death.

Rapid Advances

Fanning out in all directions north of Dijon, French troops yesterday met slight enemy opposition, and made rapid advances. Recey sur Ource, 33 miles northwest, was reached by advance elements, while somewhat northeast and

PARIS UNEARTHS MASSACRED PATRIOTS

NEW YORK, September 13 — Dispatches from Paris to the New York Herald Tribune said today that the bodies of 145 men and women massacred by the Germans during the last days of August have been unearthed in scattered parts of the city.

The Germans were said to have emptied the jails of Patriot captives as they prepared to flee the city. Some of these, said the dispatch, were ordered deported to the Reich. Others were killed on the spot.

Fanning out in all directions north of Dijon, French troops yesterday met slight enemy opposition, and made rapid advances. Recey sur Ource, 33 miles northwest, was reached by advance elements, while somewhat northeast and beyond Longeau, progressing more than 33 miles, other units reached a position only five miles south of Langres, without encountering any enemy opposition.

Other French forces, farther east, crossed the Saône River north of Gray and reached Vars and Oyrieres, both approximately 32 miles northwest of Besançon. The separate units contacted each other at these points.

In the American sector, the enemy organized his forces for a determined effort to stop the Allied advances toward Belfort and the southern flank of the Siegfried Line. With the support of tanks and self-propelled guns, the Germans fought fiercely yesterday and counter-attacked north of Vesoul and at Port sur Saône, eight miles northwest of Vesoul, which earlier had been captured by our troops. Severe fighting continued throughout the day in this area, and the enemy opposition extended as far east as L'Isle, 32 miles northeast of Besançon, and about 17 miles from Belfort.

At the extreme right of the Allied line, French troops made gains up to five miles north of Dambelin, heading toward the Doubs River and Montbellard, meeting comparatively little enemy opposition.

In the vicinity of Pont de Roide, which is 20 miles south of Belfort, strong resistance was met.

500 AMERICANS FREED FROM NAZI INTERNMENT CAMP

U. S. 3RD ARMY HQ, FRANCE, September 15 — Five hundred Americans, most of them women, have been freed from a German internment camp at Vittel, 18 miles southeast of Neufchâteau in the Vosges Department in eastern France, the Associated Press reported today.

Some men and children were also in the group, and other nationalities, including British, were also liberated, the AP dispatch said. (OWI)

EXTREME NAZI BARBARITY IN BESANÇON AREA

LONDON, September 13 — Extreme barbarity was practiced by the Germans in the Besançon area, a London Times correspondent said today. He continued:

«In a village square near Besançon, the Germans poured petrol over five young men of the French Forces of the Interior whom they had captured, and burnt them alive.

«This revolting story is given without doubt as to its veracity, for examples of such barbarity are too numerous, and from sources too disinterested, to be doubted.

«Here in the Jura, it is unnecessary to listen to the French for such sources. The evidence of one's own eyes will tell all and more than one wants to know.» (MOI)

ROUT OF 11TH PANZER DIVISION DESCRIBED

WITH 7TH ARMY, JULIA ALPS, September 12 — The complete rout of the once-famed 11th Panzer Division, followed by panic and headlong flight from Lyon in a disorganized mob of fleeing grenadiers, was described by 38 American soldiers and two officers who escaped from the 11th, a UNN correspondent reported today.

The 40 Americans, who had been taken prisoner in an action near Lyon on September 1, spent the night under guard. When they were marched out the next morning, they were amazed to note the number of German armored and motorized troops proceeding along with them on foot. Convoy discipline was conspicuous by its absence. Some units crowded together in tight formation, and others scattered along the road with great gaps in the ranks.

In a few minutes the sound of airplane motors was heard and all troops made a dash for the trees at the side of the road, leaving their vehicles parked in the center. Allied fighters swept down, strafing along the line, with only a weak response from a few armored anti-aircraft cars. Five truck-loads of men went up in flames in this attack.

The convoy then moved on to the next village, where the convoy halted and an English-speaking German officer came over to see the prisoners. He apologized for having made them walk.

«You see for yourself that we have little transport left,» he said. «It was not like that two years ago. We have little left now.»

He told the Americans that the 11th had fought in Russia for three years. It was bitterly cold and the Russian soldiers and partisans never gave them a moment's respite. The 11th was sent to France for a rest and arrived just in time to get caught in the Allied landings. They had been under constant attack from the time they left Bordeaux until the present.

Disillusioned

When an American lieutenant asked him if the Germans still thought they would win the war, he shrugged his shoulders and said: «We are told there is a secret weapon ready to blast the enemy at the gates of Germany.»

Then, looking around to make sure he would not be overheard, he added: «But, confidentially, we've been get-

F.F.I. LIBERATE LA ROCHELLE

LONDON, September 13 — Radio Marseilles stated this afternoon that French Forces of the Interior have liberated the port of La Rochelle, «into which considerable German forces had retired.»

La Rochelle is on the west coast of France in the Bay of Biscay, and lies some 90 miles north of Bordeaux.

Following up yesterday's bag of 18,000 German prisoners captured near Issoudun, French Forces of the Interior today took several thousand more Germans in the Saône and Loire department, and a further 3,000 at Saint Pierre le Moutier, General Koenig's communique announced today. (Reuter)

5TH AND 8TH ARMIES NEAR MAIN GOTH LINE GATES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 13 — Forces of the 5th and 8th Armies, pushing forward against heavy enemy artillery fire, have reached the threshhold of two of the five main passes through the heart of the Germans' Goth Line defenses along the Apennines, it was announced here today.

Official reports did not locate either of these two mountain passes leading through the great bend of the Apennines into the Po Valley in the region of Bologna, except to indicate that 8th Army troops had approached to within a mile of one somewhere northeast of Florence.

Fifth Army forces, identified in previous official reports as operating north and northwest of Florence subsequent to the surprise extension of their front, were declared to be within 2½ miles of another important and heavily-defended gateway through the Goth defenses.

German forces have heavily reinforced all the main passageways through the Apennines in the past two weeks, and by constructing scores of pillboxes and gun emplacements on the sheer mountain faces have made the Futa Pass, 24 miles north of Florence and on the main road to Bologna, into a fortress position even stronger than the Cassino ramparts south of Rome. In the official reports of the strengthening of the mountain line, it was stated that the enemy is «now apparently ready to meet any assault.»

On the Adriatic coast, where fanatic German resistance has held the 8th Army advance, which threatened to turn the Goth Line defenses by smashing through a narrow coastal corridor and over-running the broad Valley of the Po, the fierce, inconclusive struggle of the past nine days continued.

Point 449

In what was officially described as some of the fiercest fighting of the entire Italian Campaign, Point 449, some 800 yards west of Gemmano, captured German strongpoint, changed hands several times yesterday. In this sector, some eight miles in from the sea and only four miles from the boundary of the neutral state of San Marino, enemy forces have clung savagely to high ground overlooking the Conca River and the approaches to Rimini.

On the west coast, 5th Army troops yesterday reached the southern and southeastern outskirts of the resort town of Viareggio, more than 14 miles northwest of Pisa, after sweeping around the shores of Lake Massaciuccoli, Italian seaplane base some three miles southeast of Viareggio.

Fifth Army forces are now some 18 miles north of Florence, with forces reported at Lurgnano, a mountain village little over four miles southwest of the Futa Pass. These forces, and other 5th Army troops at Poggio dello Dogaro, have encountered considerable artillery fire and extensive minefields in their approach to this principal gateway through the Apennines to Bologna.

Further west, 5th Army forces were reported at San Ippolito, 18 miles northwest of Florence, on another road leading north to Bologna and the Po Valley. These troops

Disillusioned

When an American lieutenant asked him if the Germans still thought they would win the war, he shrugged his shoulders and said: « We are told there is a secret weapon ready to blast the enemy at the gates of Germany. »

Then, looking around to make sure he would not be overheard, he added: « But, confidentially, we've been getting that belly-wash for a couple of years. »

The 11th then went on to Lyon, but the next day the sound of nearing American artillery and attacks by strafing and bombing planes brought havoc to the German ranks. Discipline vanished, and the retreat became a wild rush to get out. Every available transport was commandeered: horse carts, bicycles, horses, mules — anything they could get their hands on. No attempt was made to keep units together. It was a hopeless muddle, with thousands of wild and confused men racing to get away.

The American prisoners were halted by their guards outside the city, with the guards wondering what to do with them. The Americans told them that the situation was obviously hopeless, and that the only thing to do was to give themselves up and make their way to the Allied lines.

The guards held a conference and decided to escape with their prisoners. The group hid out in a barn near Lyon and were discovered the following morning by an FFI patrol. The Frenchmen, overjoyed to find the Americans, fed them and led them to the nearest American troops.

The Germans, terrified at the approach of the FFI, were relieved to find that they were not going to be executed on the spot. They were turned over to American military police and happily waved goodbye to their former charges. (UNN)

These forces, and other 5th Army troops at Poggio della Degara, have encountered considerable artillery fire and extensive minefields in their approach to this principal gateway through the Apennines to Bologna.

Farther west, 5th Army forces were reported at San Ippolito, 18 miles northwest of Florence, on another road leading north to Bologna and the Po Valley. These troops may be those referred to as within 2½ miles of an important and highly defended mountain pass, which would be the Vernio Pass, just north of the village of San Ippolito.

All five of the main mountain passes in the central sector of the Goth Line follow « the grain of the land » through a series of mountain valleys cutting through the Apennines. Only the westernmost two of these passes leads to Bologna, while those northeast of Florence run northeast to the towns of Imola, Faenza, and Forli, along the main Po Valley highway from the Adriatic coast to Milan.

Enemy troops, withdrawing to their main defenses guarding the mountain passes, have carried out heavy demolitions along all the approaches. Many defensive works, heretofore unfinished and unmanned, have been hastily completed and garrisoned. Heavy guns, moved back in face of the Allied advance, are now being set up in prepared emplacements on the rocky escarpments guarding the passes, and considerable concentrations of antiaircraft have been assembled to defend the fortifications from air assault.

In keeping with the enemy's practice of employing fortifications in depth in Italy, a secondary line of positions has been prepared behind the main Goth Line to facilitate orderly retreat in the event of an Allied break-through.

This exploitation to the utmost of the difficult terrain of the country enabled the Germans to stem the 8th Army forces which broke through the Goth Line on the Adriatic coast, only to be held on a series of ridges south of Rimini. (PRO)

HEAVIES ATTACK POLISH, SILESIAN REFINERIES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 13 — Italy-based heavy bombers today attacked two synthetic oil refineries in Upper Silesia and Poland, and struck anew at rail spans along the Brenner Pass line from southern Germany into Italy, it was announced here this evening.

The two refineries, at Oderthal, 75 miles southwest of Breslau, and at Oswiecim, 30 miles west of Cracow, represented extreme range targets for the Liberator and Fortress bombers.

Medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force continued their bombardment of enemy gun positions, supply dumps, and troop concentrations just north of the Goth Line, it was reported. More than a dozen attacks were made on Goth Line defensive positions, and rail lines and bridges were attacked from Mantua to Milan and Turin. (PRO)

R.A.F. ATTACKS BOLOGNA RAIL TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 13 — German communications lines in the Po Valley were blasted last night as RAF Wellingtons, Liberators, and Halifaxes attacked railway yards at Bologna, it was announced today.

The yards, built only a few months ago, are off the main line, northeast of the city. It was the first time they were bombed by RAF medium and heavy craft.

Concentrated patterns landed well in the target area, with two 4,000-pound bombs bursting, and an explosion and several fires were reported. (PRO)

SOVIETS ENTER CZECHOSLOVAKIA; LOMZA FALLS

MOSCOW, September 13 — Lomza, a fortress guarding the German defenses of East Prussia and Warsaw, fell to troops of the 2nd White Russian Army today.

At the approaches to Warsaw, the Polish 1st Corps is driving on Praga with the Red Army.

In Southern Poland, Soviet troops captured Krosno, a town and railway station in the Carpathian foothills, and drove southward to cross the Czechoslovak-Polish frontier after liberating 100 other places.

In Rumania, Campu-Lung and Orokhev were occupied by Russian and Rumanian forces.

Marshal Stalin, in an order of the day addressed to General Zakharov, announced the capture of Lomza, the last big German stronghold protecting the southern approaches to East Prussia, after stubborn battles.

No important territorial changes have occurred in the Warsaw situation, according to General Bor's communique today, but an all-out air offensive over the city has driven away the Luftwaffe. German strongholds at three points of the city approaches were heavily attacked by low-flying Stormoviks and the Germans were forced to speed up the evacuation of the right bank of the Vistula.

MAAF Supplies Warsaw

Inside the Polish capital, the Patriots fighting against the German garrison are now using 100 tons of Allied arms, including three million rounds of ammunition, delivered by Allied planes from Italy. Supplies were dropped as late as Sunday night, when Allied airmen, including Polish crews, flew through ice, snow, and fog on their mission to aid Warsaw.

On the Rumanian front, Soviet and Rumanian troops pushed deeper into Transylvania against stiff opposition. In northwest Rumania, Campu-Lung, an important German-Hungarian strongpoint in one of the Carpathian passes, was captured by the Russians after stubborn fighting, said

NAZIS LOSE 256,000 IN RUSSIAN FORTNIGHT

MOSCOW, September 13 — Fifteen German divisions, or 256,000 men, were wiped out by Russian troops in a fortnight's fighting from August 20 to September 3, for the cities of Jassy and Kishinev, according to Radio Moscow today.

The radio said that the heavy German casualties resulted from an encircling move by troops of the 2nd and 3rd Ukrainian armies, which surrounded the towns in a steel ring from which not a single detachment could escape.

More than 150,000 Germans were killed, including three generals commanding divisions, two generals commanding army corps, and two colonels commanding divisions.

Prisoners totalled 106,600, officers and men, including two generals commanding army corps, seven generals commanding divisions, four colonels commanding divisions, and the commandants of the two cities.

Two generals commanding divisions abandoned their troops and fled to Bulgaria, where they were captured.

German losses in materiel destroyed or captured included 338 planes, 830 tanks and self-propelled guns, over 3,500 guns of various calibres, and 33,000 motor vehicles. (PWB)

ALLIES AND RUMANIA CONCLUDE ARMISTICE

MOSCOW, September 13 — Radio Moscow announced this morning that an armistice had been concluded between the Allies and Rumania.

In announcing the armistice, the radio said that it was signed in Moscow after negotiations, lasting from September 10 to 12, between representatives of Russia, Britain, and the United States on the one hand, and a delegation of the Rumanian Government on the other.

The BBC today said that among the Soviet representatives was V. M. Molotov, the Foreign Commissar. Britain and the United States were represented by their ambassadors.

Terms Announced

Here are the terms of the armistice treaty as broadcast by Radio Moscow tonight:

1. Rumania will wage war on the side of the Allied powers against Germany and Hungary for the restoration of her independence and sovereignty, for which purpose she is putting in the field at least 12 infantry divisions with reinforcements. Military operations of the Rumanian armed forces, including her Navy and Air Force, will be conducted under the general direction of the Allied High Command.

2. Rumania promises to disarm and intern all armed forces of Germany and Hungary on Rumanian territory, and also to intern the nationals of both of these powers.

3. Rumania will assure Soviet and other Allied troops of free movement on Rumanian territory in all directions if the military situation requires it. She will give every facility to these movements by placing at their disposal all means of transportation, at her own cost, on land, sea, and air.

4. The state frontier between the Soviet Union and Rumania established by the Soviet-Rumanian agreement of 28 June 1940 is restored.

5. Rumania will immediately surrender all Soviet and Allied prisoners of war held by her, also citizens interned and forcibly abducted to Rumania, to the Allied High Command for the return of these persons to their homelands.

Rumanian troops cooperated with Russian forces to capture the town and railway junction of Orokhev, with some 50 other places in northern Transylvania.

Radio Moscow announced today that Marshal Timoshenko was in command of the operations which wiped out 15 German divisions between Kishinev and Jassy between August 20 and September 1. For this achievement, the marshal has been awarded the Order of Suvorov, First Class — the highest Soviet award for army commanders. Radio Moscow paid tribute to Timoshenko as the first Russian commander to gain world-wide fame in this war, and as the ace operator who went into the field to represent the Supreme Command. Rumania will immediately surrender all Soviet and Allied prisoners of war held by her, also citizens interned and forcibly abducted to Rumania, to the Allied High Command for the return of these persons to their homelands. From the moment of the signature of these terms and until their repatriation has been effected, Rumania undertakes to care, at her own cost, for all Soviet and Allied prisoners of war, and also for all interned and forcibly abducted persons and refugees, supplying them with sufficient food, clothes, and medical aid, in accordance with sanitary requirements, and with transport for return of all these persons to their respective homelands.

6. Rumania will immediately release, irrespective of their citizenship of nationality, all persons imprisoned in connection with their activity in favor of the United Nations, or for their sympathy for the cause of the United Nations, or in view of their national origin, and will rescind all discriminatory legislation and restrictions deriving therefrom.

7. Rumania undertakes to hand over as trophies to the Allied High Command all military supplies and armaments of Germany and of her satellites at present on Rumanian territory, including naval units of Germany and her satellites at present in Rumanian waters.

8. Rumania undertakes to prevent the removal and expropriation of property of all kinds, including valuables and currency, owned by Germany and Hungary or by their citizens, or persons residing on their territory or territory occupied by them, without permission of the Allied High Command. Rumania will safeguard this property.

8. Rumania undertakes to hand over to the Allied High Command all vessels belonging to the United Nations which are in Rumanian ports, irrespective of under whose control these vessels are at the moment, for use by the Allied High Command during the time of war against Germany and Hungary in the mutual interests of the Allies. Thereafter they are to be returned to their owners. The Rumanian Government bears full material responsibility for any destruction or damage of the above property up to the moment it is handed over to the Allied High Command.

Other terms of the armistice: Rumania is to pay Russia 300,000,000 dollars worth of goods over a six-year period; Rumania is to assist the Soviet Command in detaining all criminals; all Fascist organizations in Rumania are to be dissolved; all publications and broadcasts are subjected to the approval of the Soviet commanders; an Allied Control Commission is to be established to carry out the agreement; the Vienna Award is declared invalid by the Allied governments; the whole or greater part of Transylvania is to be returned to Rumania; and the armistice agreement is to become operative immediately.

In a statement issued after the signing of the armistice, the Rumanian signatory stated that Rumanians realize that their future depends upon scrupulous respect of the armistice terms. (Reuter-BBC)

LEND-LEASE TO U.S.S.R. INCREASED SEVENFOLD

LONDON, September 13 — Allied lend-lease supplies reaching the Soviet Armies through the Persian Gulf have increased sevenfold during the last two years, it was officially stated yesterday.

The freeing of the Mediterranean has cut down the time needed to transport supplies from the east coast of America to the Persian Gulf from 75 to 45 days. (PWB)

PRIMATE OF POLAND CARRIED TO GERMANY

LONDON, September 13 — Polish authorities here today said the Primate of Poland, Cardinal Hlond, has been carried off to Germany from Bar le Duc, in France, where he had been held by the Gestapo.

The Cardinal, who has been in German hands since 1940, is said to have refused to become Regent of Poland, under Nazi authority, two months ago. Hlond has been a consistently bitter critic of the Nazi regime. (Reuter)

TITO ANNOUNCES "BIG VICTORY"

LONDON, September 13 — Marshal Tito said today that his Partisan troops have won a "big victory" over German forces in the Posega sector, 70 miles southwest of Belgrade.

The Yugoslav communique said 500 Nazis were killed and more than 200 captured. The remainder of the German force was routed, with Partisan troops still in pursuit late today.

In southern Moravia, the communique added, Yugoslav fighters occupied a number of towns along the main German escape route from Greece. In the course of operations in this area, 3,000 Bulgarians were said to have been disarmed.

Tito's troops were also reported to be fighting bitterly in Macedonia, just across the Yugoslav frontier. Clashes with German units in this sector were described as intense.

CARRIER-BASED BOMBERS HIT PHILIPPINES AGAIN

PEARL HARBOR, September 13 — United States carrier-based bombers have struck for a second time at the Japanese in the Philippine Islands, destroying more than 200 Japanese planes in attacks Monday on the islands of Cebu, Negros and Panay, a communique from the headquarters of Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, reported tonight.

ALLIES WIN VITAL BURMA RIDGE
JAPS TAKE WENCHOW

KANDY, CEYLON, September 13 — Fighting has ceased for the vital ridge in the Mayu Range southwest of Buthidaung on the Arakan front in Burma, today's Southeast Asia Command communique announced, and Indian troops of the 14th Army have pushed on after the fleeing Japanese to capture a second strategic hill.

In the Chin Hills sector, the communique said, 14th Army troops moving down the Tiddim Road are again in contact with the enemy.

In northern Burma, the town of Hopin has been occupied. Hopin had previously been entered by Allied patrols.

In the air, fighter-bombers have again successfully attacked bridges in central Burma. Other fighter-bombers strafed ground targets on the Arakan front and shot up river craft. Two planes were lost in these missions.

In China, meanwhile, the Japanese offensive in Chekiang Province, which appears to have been launched to forestall a possible Allied landing on the coast within easy striking distance of the Japanese mainland, has made more progress. The latest locality to fall into Japanese hands is the large city of Wenchow, on the southern Chekiang coast, loss of which was announced by the Chinese High Command in Chungking yesterday.

A communique from General Stilwell yesterday announced that in support of the Chinese forces, American aircraft destroyed six enemy landing craft and killed many troops in the Wenchow area.

Fourteenth Air Force planes have also been active in southwestern China, bombing and strafing Japanese troop concentrations and river installations between Hengyang and Lungling in Yunnan Province, while heavy bombers flew to the Burma Road to attack Wanling. Large fires and explosions were observed, the communique said. (OWI)

QUEBEC CONFERENCE MAKES "SPLENDID PROGRESS"

QUEBEC, September 13 — Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said today that Mr. Roosevelt expects to finish his part of the Quebec Conference this coming weekend, having thus far made what was described as "splendid progress" in outlining plans for the coming annihilation of the Japanese and German war machines.

The President issued the following statement on behalf of Prime Minister Churchill and himself:

"This conference is to get the best we can out of the combined British and United States war efforts in the Pacific and in Europe. We are working in consonance with the situation in the Pacific and in Europe, coordinating our efforts with those of our Allies, and particularly with the Chinese and the Russians."

This eighth conference of the American President and British Prime Minister was begun Monday, with the avowed prime purpose of plotting the destruction of Japan's military and naval might.

Simultaneously with the President's statement, the global-war aspect of his conference with Churchill was emphasized by the following developments:

A British announcement said that Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner to Canada for Australia, and E. M. Firth, acting High Commissioner for New Zealand, would arrive in Quebec from Ottawa today to participate in the conferences.

Richard Law, British Minister of State who is en route to the UNRRA conference in Montreal, will see Mr. Churchill.

U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau will arrive from Washington today or tomorrow. He and Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of War Henry Stimson make up a cabinet committee on economic problems arising from the war.

LEND-LEASE TO U.S.S.R. INCREASED SEVENFOLD

LONDON, September 13 — Allied Lend-Lease supplies reaching the Soviet Armies through the Persian Gulf have increased sevenfold during the last two years, it was officially stated yesterday.

The freeing of the Mediterranean has cut down the time needed to transport supplies from the east coast of America to the Persian Gulf from 75 to 45 days. (PWB)

PRIMATE OF POLAND CARRIED TO GERMANY

LONDON, September 13 — Polish authorities here today said the Primate of Poland, Cardinal Hlond, has been carried off to Germany from Bar le Duc, in France, where he had been held by the Gestapo.

The Cardinal, who has been in German hands since 1940, is said to have refused to become Regent of Poland, under Nazi authority, two months ago. Hlond has been a consistently bitter critic of the Nazi regime. (Reuter)

TITO ANNOUNCES "BIG VICTORY"

LONDON, September 13 — Marshal Tito said today that his Partisan troops have won a "big victory" over German forces in the Prozor sector, 70 miles southwest of Belgrade.

The Yugoslav communique said 500 Nazis were killed and more than 200 captured. The remainder of the German force was routed, with Partisan troops still in pursuit late today.

In southern Morava, the communique added, Yugoslav fighters occupied a number of towns along the main German escape route from Greece. In the course of operations in this area, 3,000 Bulgarians were said to have been disarmed.

Tito's troops were also reported to be fighting bitterly in Macedonia, just across the Yugoslav frontier. Clashes with German units in this sector were described as intense.

CARRIER-BASED BOMBERS HIT PHILIPPINES AGAIN

PEARL HARBOR, September 13 — United States carrier-based bombers have struck for a second time at the Japanese in the Philippine Islands, destroying more than 200 Japanese planes in attacks Monday on the islands of Cebu, Negros, and Panay, a communique from the headquarters of Admiral Chester Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, reported tonight.

The attacks, which were opened Monday by carrier forces of Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet, are continuing against strong Japanese air opposition.

More than 50 enemy planes were shot down in air battles over the islands, and over 160 were destroyed on the ground in American bombing attacks.

A large number of Japanese cargo ships and other small vessels were sunk, but details of these operations have not yet been received.

General MacArthur's communique today stated that Liberators dropped 202 tons of bombs on the Menado area, on the northern tip of Celebes on September 9. The Allied planes were not intercepted.

Other Liberators struck in strength against Halmahera Island on September 7 and again yesterday. The attack on Celebes was the third attack in as many days. Ceram and Boeroe islands were also hit.

Three 1,000-ton vessels, two freighters, and one large barge were sunk or seriously damaged off Ceram, and a 2,500-ton freighter was sunk and a 4,000-ton freighter was beached off Celebes.

Pagan Island was the target for Allied aircraft on September 10, when rockets were launched at buildings and gun emplacements. (OWI)

Command in Chungking yesterday.

A communique from General Stilwell yesterday announced that in support of the Chinese forces, American aircraft destroyed six enemy landing craft and killed many troops in the Wenchow area.

Fourteenth Air Force planes have also been active in southwestern China, bombing and strafing Japanese troop concentrations and river installations between Hengyang and Lungling in Yunnan Province, while heavy bombers flew to the Burma Road to attack Wanling. Large fires and explosions were observed, the communique said. (OWI)

QUEBEC CONFERENCE MAKES "SPLENDID PROGRESS"

QUEBEC, September 13 — Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said today that Mr. Roosevelt expects to finish his part of the Quebec Conference this coming weekend, having thus far made what was described as "splendid progress" in outlining plans for the coming annihilation of the Japanese and German war machines.

The President issued the following statement on behalf of Prime Minister Churchill and himself:

"This conference is to get the best we can out of the combined British and United States war efforts in the Pacific and in Europe. We are working in consonance with the situation in the Pacific and in Europe, coordinating our efforts with those of our Allies, and particularly with the Chinese and the Russians."

This eighth conference of the American President and British Prime Minister was begun Monday, with the avowed prime purpose of plotting the destruction of Japan's military and naval might.

Simultaneously with the President's statement, the global-war aspect of his conference with Churchill was emphasized by the following developments:

A British announcement said that Sir William Glasgow, High Commissioner to Canada for Australia, and E. M. Firth, acting High Commissioner for New Zealand, would arrive in Quebec from Ottawa today to participate in the conferences.

Richard Law, British Minister of State who is en route to the UNRRA conference in Montreal, will see Mr. Churchill.

U. S. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau will arrive from Washington today or tomorrow. He and Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of War Henry Stimson make up a cabinet committee on economic problems arising from the war.

Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, U. S. War Shipping Administrator, will join the conference. Lord Leathers, Britain's War Transport Minister, is already in Quebec.

ANGLO-AMERICAN STAFFS PLAN PACIFIC MOVES

QUEBEC, September 13 — British and American chiefs of staff conferred again today to consider several master plans designed to bring the war against Japan to the speediest possible conclusion.

It was stated authoritatively that there was no question of appointing an "Eisenhower of the Pacific" at this stage, since the choice of a supreme commander will depend entirely on which of three plans under consideration is approved. "The method of attack will decide the commander," it was said. (Reuter)

JAPANESE NAVAL CHIEFS SHIFTED

SAN FRANCISCO, September 13 — The Japs have made further shifts in their naval command.

Domei reported the shift of Vice Admiral Eiji Goto, former commander of a garrison along the strategically important Korean coast, to a post on the Imperial Navy's General Staff.

LIBERATED JEWS TO HOLD NEW YEAR'S SERVICE

ROME, September 13 — The Jews of Rome, Florence, and Leghorn will hold their first Rosh Hashanah (New Year) and Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement) services under Allied liberation beginning Sunday evening at sundown. The New Year services will continue through Monday and Tuesday, while the Day of Atonement services will be held at sundown September 26 and continue on September 27.

The services were arranged by the American Joint Distribution Committee, a U. S. philanthropic group, which also is making possible holy day services in Naples and Bari.

The principal service for the Jews of Rome will be held in the Grand Synagogue, on the south bank of the Tiber, Italy's largest Jewish house of worship. The Grand Rabbi of Rome, Israel Zolli, will officiate during the high holiday services.

The advent of the Jewish New Year recalled that a year ago, almost to the day, the Jews of Rome went into hiding after the Nazi Storm Troops had extorted 50 kilos of gold from the Jewish community under the threat of a massacre or deportation. The Jews were given from 1900 hours September 26 to 1200 hours September 28th to raise the ransom at the order of Major Kappler, Nazi SS Chief in Rome.

The sum extorted from the community was valued at thirty million lire. When representatives of the community delivered the gold to the Nazis, the extorters refused to give receipts, stating: "We don't give receipts for war indemnity." The excuse for obtaining the money was "the inconvenience caused the Nazis by Italy's exit from the war." What happened to the gold after being turned over to the Nazis was never known.

The American Joint Distribution Committee has been assisting Jews in jeopardy in Italy since 1938. It was the sole support of 12,000 Jews in Rome for nine months of Nazi occupation.

Jews of the Allied armies will hold services in Rome and in all large military establishments of the same type. (UNN)

AFHQ, September 13 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

North of Florence and Pistoia, American and British troops continued to make progress into the high ground and are now in close contact with the Goth Line at several places.

On the left of the Adriatic sector, British and Indian troops of the 8th Army have made progress in the Apennines

Augsburg, a jet-propelled aircraft factory at Ulm, and an aircraft engine works at Munich.

Tactical aircraft, including medium, light, and fighter-bombers, attacked rail and road communications in north-western Italy and the Po Valley, as well as enemy strong points, guns, troop concentrations, and other close-support targets all along the Italian battle front.

Coastal aircraft carried out attacks against shipping in the Adriatic and the Gulf of Genoa.

Last night medium and heavy bombers attacked the rail yards at Bologna.

From these operations, 18 of our aircraft are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 2,000 sorties.

Complete reports show two additional aircraft missing from operations of September 8. One enemy aircraft was destroyed and six of ours have been reported missing in operations of September 9. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 13 — Today's communique:

Land:

Le Havre is now in Allied hands. On the Belgian coast, mopping up continues between Furnes and Zeebrugge. Further progress has been made beyond the Albert Canal.

North of Liège, we have taken Fort Eben Emael. Forces advancing east and southeast of Liège, after meeting strong resistance from German infantry, anti-tank guns, and mines in the Limbourg area, captured Eupen and Malmédy. Units crossed the German frontier east of Eupen.

In the Ardennes, troops which liberated Bastogne have advanced to the vicinity of Clervaux, in northern Luxembourg. In the Moselle Valley, we have enlarged our bridgeheads across the river against heavy enemy resistance.

Air:

Concrete emplacements in the Siegfried Line in the neighbourhood of Scheid, 50 miles west of Coblenz, were attacked by medium and light bombers yesterday. Other formations struck at railway yards at St. Wendel, artillery positions and observation posts in the vicinity of Nancy, and the railway and road bridge between South Beveland and the Dutch mainland.

Enemy transportation was attacked by fighters and fighter-bombers operating from Holland to the Moselle River and from Strasbourg to Karlsruhe. Close support for our ground forces was also given by attacks on gun positions.

According to reports so far received, 39 enemy aircraft were shot down and nine destroyed on the ground. Two of our aircraft are missing. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 13 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriots have undertaken a general offensive on wide sectors in Lombardy, Piedmont, Liguria, and Aemilia.

In the Lake Maggiore area, they compelled the enemy to withdraw and occupied a considerable extension of territory along the Alpine frontier, including the pass from Madonna di Ponte to Valpara, near Brissago.

On September 2 well-armed groups of Patriots descended from the mountains around Brissago and attacked German troops stationed at Cannobio. At first, the Germans countered with heavy machine-gun fire, without, however, bringing into action their artillery. The noise of battle, which lasted for five hours, was heard as far away as Locarno. Finally the Germans surrendered.

The German customs house on the Swiss frontier was hotly contested. After heavy losses in dead and wounded the Germans attempted to flee, some of them in boats across the lake, but they were overtaken by the Patriots and killed. Fascist officers present fled into Switzerland without taking part in the battle. Towards evening the soldiers comprising the German garrison asked for, and obtained, permission to cross the frontier and accepted the condition that they would be interned. They were in fact immediately disarmed by Swiss military authorities. Next morning the Italian Patriot flag was raised on this sector of the Italian frontier.

Mopping-up operations undertaken by the 7th, 18th, and 22nd Fascist Black Brigades in the provinces of Vercelli, Padova, and Vicenza have been totally unsuccessful. In a clash which took place near Staffola, five Republican Fascist guards and an officer were killed. At Carpi, in Modena Province, Patriots killed the former commander of the Verona Legion of the Fascist Militia, Nannini, who has been found guilty of serious crimes against the people in that area.

In a Bergamo Province village telegraph poles were destroyed along a line serving the Wehrmacht.

A locomotive was blown up on the Rovigo-Padova right of way.

Telephone communications were cut between Chiavari and Parma. High-tension wires serving the Genoa railway district were also cut.

The mine-producing «Monte Bianco» industrial establishment, in the province of Brescia, ceased to operate because of sabotage. (UNN)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 13 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the west, bitter defensive fighting continues on the present focal points. Stubborn resistance of our troops frustrated enemy break-through attempts north of Hasselt, as well as from the Verviers sector into the area of Aix-les-Chapelle (Aachen).

During the fighting which took place north of Luxembourg for the last few days, 142 enemy tanks and armored cars were knocked out, and 40 anti-tank guns were either captured or destroyed.

In the Upper Moselle district, American units have crossed the river and are advancing toward Luneville. Heavy fighting also is in progress for Neufchateau.

Enemy pressure continues against our protective forces between Vesoul and the Swiss border.

The attacks against the fortified western ports are increasing in intensity. The enemy has launched seven

On the Adriatic Coast, our divisions again scored a full defensive success against the opponent, who attacked in vain between Pian de Castello and Riccione.

Eastern Front:

German and Hungarian troops in South Siebenbürgen repulsed stronger enemy attacks, destroying a number of tanks.

At Sanok and Krasno, fierce Soviet attacks are still in progress.

Southeast of Warsaw, heavy fighting took place. In the course of these battles, the Soviets, supported by numerous Air force and tank formations, succeeded in achieving a penetration of our lines. Further north, all enemy attacks collapsed, with the loss of 19 tanks.

Northeast of Ostrolenka, our troops in fierce fighting prevented the enemy's scoring a break-through which had been planned on a wide front. The town of Lomza was lost.

Vivid local fighting activity is reported from the Rasenen, Schagarren, and Pauske area.

In central Finland, the Soviets attempted to interfere with our disengaging movements. They were repelled with heavy losses.

In the Balkans, counter measures have been taken against the enemy advancing towards the western border of Rumania and Bulgaria.

Air:

Anglo-American bomber formations, during their daylight attacks of September 12 on several localities inside Germany, inflicted especially heavy damage upon residential sections in Munster and Munich. The town of Fulda, too, was the target of an attack on September 11.

Last night, the enemy launched terror attacks against Frankfort-Main and Stuttgart. Bombs were also dropped on Wiesbaden and Berlin.

One hundred thirty-nine enemy planes, including 107 four-engined bombers, were shot down in air battles, as well as by anti-aircraft batteries of the Luftwaffe and Flak.

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 13 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the west, bitter defensive fighting continues on the present focal points. Stubborn resistance of our troops frustrated enemy break-through attempts north of Hasselt, as well as from the Verviers sector into the area of Aix-les-Chapelle (Aachen).

During the fighting which took place north of Luxembourg for the last few days, 142 enemy tanks and armored cars were knocked out, and 40 anti-tank guns were either captured or destroyed.

In the Upper Moselle district, American units have crossed the river and are advancing toward Luneville. Heavy fighting also is in progress for Neufchâteau.

Enemy pressure continues against our protective forces between Vesoul and the Swiss border.

The attacks against the fortified western ports are increasing in intensity. The enemy has launched seven consecutive attacks against Calais and Dunkirk. These attacks failed. Enemy tanks, after heaviest artillery fire and an all-day air bombardment, succeeded in entering Le Havre. The garrison of the city bravely resisted to the last. In the main fighting zone of Brest, continued enemy attacks are also being warded off by troops of all Wehrmacht branches. Near Lorient, our own counter-attacks dislodged the enemy at several points, inflicting heavy damages.

Local fighting continues in the Alp passes of the Franco-Italian frontier area. Several enemy attacks were thrown back.

In Italy, numerous enemy attacks north of the Arno hopelessly collapsed under the impact of the fire of our rear-guards' superior fighting.

AMERICANS IN GERMANY IN STRENGTH LE HAVRE GARRISON SURRENDERS

SHAEF, September 12 — An armored division of the American 1st Army entered Germany in strength last night, after forward elements had crossed the last frontier, and is now fighting in an area north of Trier. Tanks went forward in a series of strong, audacious, and skilfully organized exploratory thrusts and have since been reinforced with heavy artillery.

Americans rolled in, bearing German prisoners picked up en route, the great mass of people simply stood and stared — silently. A few waved, but very few raised their fingers in the Victory sign. There was no feeling of a liberated town.

American units, by-passing Limbourg, where there is intensive fighting, pushed through road blocks and built pontoon bridges to catch the Germans by surprise in the swift advance to Eupen.

Radiating from Liege, other units driving southeastward liberated Spa and have entered Malmedy, 10 miles from the German frontier. Both Eupen and Malmedy were incorporated into the German Reich in 1940, after German troops invaded the Low Countries.

Other troops, driving north from Liege, have captured Fort Eben Emael, four miles south of Maastricht and one mile from the Dutch frontier.

To the south along the Luxembourg border, an American 3rd Army force captured large sections of the Maginot Line at Crusnes and Aumetz, and found the big, electrically operated guns in perfect working order. The troops found the entrance to the Maginot Line's underground network of communications, and last night the electric supply trains and lifts were already being run by American soldiers, with the guidance of some Frenchmen who had been kept by the Germans to help with their maintenance.

There were no signs of demolition along the five miles of track laid 100 feet below ground. Plants, lifts, gun-emplacements and storerooms were all intact. The Germans made no effort to defend the Maginot forts at these points.

Battle for Thionville

On the west side of the Moselle River, 3rd Army forces smashed through the Maginot Line and are battling for Thionville, above the five bridgeheads already forged across the last German defense line in northern France. It was reported that they are meeting with stubborn enemy resistance.

There have been no reports from General Patton's forces operating across the Moselle at Metz, Nancy, and Toul. Operational silence has also been maintained over those units which joined with General Patch's, northwest of Dijon.

Patrols and reconnaissance troops of the British 2nd Army are probing into Holland after slashing across the Dutch frontier in a drive aimed at the weak northern end of the German line. They are reported to be on the road leading to Eindhoven.

After destroying many 88-millimeter and self-propelled guns and tanks at the crossroads at Hechtel, where bitter fighting had been reported, British troops advanced nine miles to the vicinity of the Dutch border. Brisk actions were fought before the British forced a crossing of the L'Escaut Canal and pushed armor across.

Heavy fighting has continued north of the Albert Canal, and Beurg Leopold has been recaptured by the British. A wide dent was forced into German positions, but all along the perimeter the Germans are still resisting. Some German units are reported to be very short of rifles and equipment.

SHAEF, September 12 — An armored division of the American 1st Army entered Germany in strength last night, after forward elements had crossed the last frontier, and is now fighting in an area north of Trier. Tanks went forward in a series of strong, audacious and skilfully organized exploratory thrusts and have since been reinforced with heavy artillery.

For the first time in almost a century and a half, the German people are experiencing invasion — invasion, which the German war machine has inflicted on many neighboring states in the intervening years.

The Allies are driving through the Siegfried Line in the area east of Luxembourg, and in Belgium and Holland they are preparing to loose new armies against Germany.

To the south, along the eastern borders of France, two other Allied armies have linked for a concerted drive against Germany. Generals Patch and Patton, having virtually driven the Germans from France, are attacking the hard outer shell of the German defense lines near the border with overwhelming resources. This drive cannot be long denied.

Within 24 hours of the entry into the Third Reich, American bombers today opened a direct attack on the Siegfried Line, blasting anti-tank traps, shelters, and reinforced concrete pillboxes.

Armor Enters Eupen

Seventy miles to the north, another armored column entered Eupen, five miles from the German frontier and is bombarding Germany itself. Eupen is a key fort in the Belgian defense chain, on which the Germans dropped parachutists in their break-through in 1940. It required several hours of fighting with German rear-guards to clean out the city, and it was the first city entered by Allied troops since D-day where they were not welcomed. As the German frontier, Both Eupen and Malmedy were incorporated into the German Reich in 1940, after German troops invaded the Low Countries.

WASHINGTON, September 12 — Battleships and cruisers of the United States Pacific Fleet joined with carrier-based aircraft in a shattering bombardment of Japanese installations on the Palau Islands yesterday.

The islands, which lie about 550 miles east of Mindanao in the Philippines, have been under attack by fleet bombers and rocket firing aircraft for a week.

Yesterday (west longitude, U. S. date), said a Navy Department communique, battleships unloosed hot steel on the islands from their 16-inch batteries.

the commander had been seriously wounded. The surrender came 36 hours after the British launched an all-out assault on the vital port and after 5,000 tons of bombs had been dropped. Of the original garrison of over 5,000 troops, 3,000 have been captured, and the rest suffered heavy casualties from the bombing and shelling.

Canadian troops have cleared the entire coastal area from Gravelines to Zeebrugge, with the exception of Dunkirk. Their bridgehead over the Ghent Canal continued to be expanded, but there is still heavy resistance.

10,000 TONS OF BOMBS ON GERMANS TUESDAY

LONDON, September 12 — About 3,000 British and American aircraft dropped an estimated 10,000 tons of explosives on German targets today. While heavy bombers, in their fifth straight day of air attacks on German oil and industrial targets, bombed eight oil plants in different parts of Germany, Allied medium and light bombers dropped on the Reich today their first bombs in the opening battle for the Siegfried Line.

The 8th USAAF sent a fleet of bombers lumbering over 1,000 this morning to strike at synthetic oil plants at Ruhland, northeast of Dresden; Bohlen, near Leipzig; Magdeburg; Misburg, and Memmingstedt. Brux on the Czechoslovak border, an engine plant near Kiel, and an ordnance depot at Fridrichstadt, near Magdeburg. This afternoon RAF Halifaxes, with fighter cover, concentrated their bombs on two synthetic oil plants in the Ruhr, at Scholven-Buer and Wanne-Eickel, not far from the three plants they attacked yesterday. Weather was good for today's attacks.

Meanwhile, Moscow announced that scores of the 8th USAAF bombers which took part in yesterday's daylight attack landed on Russian bases yesterday after bombing Chemnitz, 50 miles south of Leipzig. Mustang fighters made the long trip from British bases to Russia with the bombers. One fighter is missing, but the bombers made the shuttle run without loss, completing the 15th mission using Russian bases since June.

No respite was given in the air offensive over Germany during the night. RAF bombers visited the upper Rhineland town of Darmstadt, the center of the German chemical industry, and Lancasters dropped more than 286,000 incendiaries and many high explosive bombs, including 200 four-thousand-pounders. A small force of Mosquitoes bombed individual factories from 500 feet, while other squadrons of Mosquitoes dropped many 4,000 pound bombs on Berlin, and yet others carried out mine-laying operations on a large scale. At least seven German fighters were destroyed. Sixteen Allied bombers are missing.

The continued heavy attacks on German oil-producing centres and refineries are estimated to have diminished the oil-producing capacity of Germany and German-held territory by 61 per cent.

Strong Luftwaffe Opposition

The Luftwaffe again came up strongly today to attack the heavy bombers, but not in such great numbers as yesterday. German fighters in packs of 35 to 50 attacked as the planes flew near Berlin today, but planes striking at Misburg and Memmingstedt were unmolested.

At least 70 German interceptors were shot down today by bombers with their fighter escort of approximately 750 planes, according to an Associated Press report. It added that in all 203 German planes were destroyed in western Europe yesterday, and in the last three days, Sunday to Tuesday, American planes alone have destroyed 388 enemy aircraft.

landings in France on D-day. This has resulted in the death of many of Germany's best staff officers, and has greatly aided the Allied advance on the western front.

The broadcast said this «strafing of German war centers» was planned months ago «as part of the Allied design to disrupt the German Army, to destroy its communications, and to turn it from an organized force into a number of isolated groups.»

RUHR, RHINELAND CITIZENS URGED TO LEAVE

SHAEF, September 12 — The peoples of the Ruhr and Rhineland areas were warned today in a broadcast by General Dwight Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander, that these regions would soon become a theater of operations.

They were told that to avoid useless civilian casualties, they should evacuate the areas immediately.

The broadcast enumerated some of the military targets, such as camps, factories, and installations and communications of all kinds, and warned all civilians to take refuge in the countryside away from these areas.

The people were further warned that perpetrators of all atrocities committed against all non-Germans in these areas will be brought to trial for their crimes.

DE GAULLE SAYS FIVE-SIXTHS OF FRANCE FREED

PARIS, September 12 — Five-sixths of France has been freed from the Germans, General Charles De Gaulle stated in a speech broadcast here today, in which he reviewed French participation in the war, declaring, «our contributions to the war give us the right to be heard in the settlement of the conflict.»

De Gaulle reported that 105,000 Germans had surrendered to the French Army and 35,000 to the French Forces of the Interior from D-day, June 6, to September 10.

«The French flame of resistance... never died, despite oppression, treason and propaganda,» the French leader said.

Those who intended to impose themselves on oppressed France at any price are now definitely crushed, said De Gaulle.

«Notwithstanding the oppression and depths of servitude under the heel of usurpers of power, never has the French nation been absent from the battlefields,» he said. «Hardly had misfortune befallen it than the nation started to kindle the fight anew. French forces played an important part in the battle of the Mediterranean. They played a decisive part in the battle of Africa, and in the Italian victory.

«Finally, the French Forces of the Interior played an essential part in common Allied successes in the great battle of France,» adding that these contributions give France a voice in the settlement of the war, he said. «It is difficult to see how security or a world-wide organization for peace could be effective and lasting without her.»

The 9th USAAF Marauders and Havocs which attacked German targets for the first time today singled out Siegfried Line pillboxes on the frontier 10 miles from Trier, and concrete emplacements and marshalling yards between Aachen and Saarbrucken, ahead of the advancing American troops. Not a single burst of flak nor a solitary German plane opposed them.

The Marauders, flying from British bases, dropped more than 200 tons of bombs on anti-tank traps and troop shelters at Scheid, 32 miles south of Aachen, while two forces of Marauders smashed at the marshalling yards at Saint Wendel, 17 miles north of Saarbrucken. French-based bombers also dropped half-ton bombs on fortifications near Echternach, on the Luxembourg-German frontier.

Maintaining their attack against enemy communications in Holland, Mitchell and Boston bombers of the RAF's 2nd TAF today wrecked the railway and road bridge linking the island of South Beveland and the mainland of Holland. Participating in the attacks was a Mitchell squadron of the Royal Dutch Naval Air Service, led by its own Dutch commanding officer.

Spitfires have severely held up German escape traffic across the Scheldt Estuary, and with Mosquitoes have taken a steady toll of transport in Holland and shipping in Dutch harbors. A destroyer was among the vessels shot up with cannon and machine-gun fire.

The general paid tribute to the deeds of the British Empire, Russia, the United States, and the Resistance Forces in German-occupied countries.

«The Government today,» said De Gaulle, «appeals to the French people for their support in the Government's task of serving the country. It will be necessary to make profound reforms in our institutions. We shall re-establish the sovereignty of the people.

«As soon as all national territory is liberated and prisoners are home, we shall lead the nation to the ballot box and, by the universal suffrage of all men and women, we shall re-establish the National Assembly. F.F.I. CAPTURE COLUMN OF 18,000 GERMANS

LONDON, September 12 — French Forces of the Interior compelled a column of 18,000 Germans to surrender in the Issoudun region, south of Orleans, General Koenig's communique announced tonight. In accordance with the conditions of surrender, these troops were directed toward Orleans, where they were handed over to the American Army.

In Burgundy and in the Franche-Comté, formations of the FFI took an active part in the fighting yesterday, especially at Dijon and in the Valley of Ognon.

In the southwest, the Resistance forces have set out to surround the town of La Rochelle, where a considerable force of the enemy have taken refuge. (Reuter)

UNBROKEN LINE FORMING AS 7TH ARMY ADVANCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 12 — The consolidation of an unbroken Allied line across France was in the making today as 7th Army forces pushed forward beyond the junction point where 3rd Army troops were met yesterday.

It was officially announced this evening that the junction point was in the area of St. Seine L'Abbaye, 15 miles northwest of Dijon.

In their drive north and northwest of Dijon, French troops, after passing St. Seine L'Abbaye, occupied Valaurion and Courtivron without meeting enemy resistance. Farther east, Orville, 18 miles north of Dijon, and Champlitte, 30 miles northeast of Dijon, were taken, after light enemy opposition was overcome.

North of the Saône River, between Gray and Vesoul, American troops advanced northward at several points, with forward units reaching Port sur Saône, some 30 miles north of Besançon. Meanwhile, north of Vesoul, the enemy continued to fight back stubbornly.

On the western flank, French troops repulsed a vicious enemy counter-attack near Mersault, and later captured 3,200 prisoners in the vicinity of Autun. In the battle around Mersault, 300 Germans were killed, the same number were taken prisoner, and 300 vehicles and 12 guns of various caliber were destroyed.

West of Dijon, French forces crossed the Ouche River at several points, taking Ancey, 10 miles west of Dijon. Sombernon, some six miles farther west, was occupied against slight enemy resistance.

American troops have advanced farther north and have reached the outskirts of Vesoul, 28 miles north of Besançon, and 32 miles directly west of the Belfort Pass.

In the drive north and east from Besançon, the enemy fought desperately, using infantry, artillery, and tanks, but was forced to give ground to the hard driving Americans who made substantial progress in the entire sector.

Enemy artillery attempted to stem the Allied push farther east, but French units occupied Dambelin, southeast of Belfort, and appear to be headed for the extreme southern flank of the Siegfried Line.

Vesoul is an important local communications center, and has a population of 10,000. At the approaches of this town, Major General Albin Nake, commander of the German 159th Reserve Division, was critically wounded when his car was strafed and wrecked by Allied aircraft. (PRO)

MARSHALL, PATCH CONGRATULATE FRENCH FORCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 12 — In a letter to General de Lattre de Tassigny, Commanding General of the French forces in southern France, Lieutenant General Alexander Patch, Commanding General of the 7th Army, expressed his congratulations upon the achievement of the French in the southern operation.

General Patch also disclosed the contents of a letter he had received from General George C. Marshall, in which circumstances, immediately visited the village to see with his own eyes what had taken place.

Upon his return, he promptly wrote his letter to the Gestapo chief, and delivered it personally.

It was circulated by the Resistance movement in Lyon during the German occupation, and was reprinted here today in the Catholic newspaper Reveil. (PWB)

GESTAPO CHIEF ARRESTED AT SWISS FRONTIER

ALGIERS, September 12 — Radio Algiers said today that Walter Beller, Gestapo chief for the Isère Department of France, and his aide, were arrested by the FFI as they were attempting to cross the border into Switzerland.

5TH ARMY PATROLS PENETRATE GOTH LINE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 12 — Patrol forces of the 5th Army, thrusting in advance of Allied troops surging forward to attack the center of the enemy Goth Line, have penetrated forward positions of these mountain defenses at a point some 16 miles north of Florence, it was announced here today.

Moving forward on a 21 mile-wide front, Allied forces have pushed three miles north of the Sieve River to take up positions all along the face of the enemy mountain bastions guarding the five main passes through the Apennines from Florence to Bologna and the Po Valley.

The broad Allied advance, in which British, Indian, and American troops have been reported to be participating, has swept forward between the valleys of the two principal northern tributaries of the Arno River, the Biscenzio, which joins the Arno west of Florence, and the Sieve, which makes its junction to the east of the Tuscan city. After negotiating the lateral valley formed by the upper waters of the Sieve, which parallel the Arno for nearly 15 miles before turning abruptly southward to join the main stream at Pontassieve, the Allied forces are at the threshhold of five main roads into the Po Valley. It is to guard these roads through the Apennines' defiles that the Germans have constructed the elaborate system of concrete pillboxes and gun emplacements, which forms this stretch of the Goth Line extending across the whole of Italy.

The easternmost Allied forces in the advance have followed the Sieve River up from its junction with the Arno to advance beyond Dicomano, nine miles northeast of Pontassieve. Indian troops are pushing forward due north of Pontassieve, and have established a bridgehead across the upper Sieve just south of Vicchio, 11 miles north of Pontassieve.

Farther west, Allied forces were reported to be across the river "in some strength" to a distance of two miles. Allied forces were north of Borgo san Lorenzo, 14 miles northeast of Florence, and a little over two miles north of the Sieve River at this point.

The greatest advances were made directly north of Florence, the official reports said. Here a number of Allied units crossed the river to take up positions near Scarperia, 16 miles north of Florence, and three miles north of the Sieve's banks. Fifth army units were specifically identified in the extreme western edge of the advance, at Barberino, 18 miles north of Florence, and at Poggio Montecuccoli, 18 ½ miles northwest of Florence. Most of the high ground of the Monte della Calvana range, paralleling the Biscenzio River, is now in 5th Army hands, it was reported.

In these advances against the center of the enemy line, official reports made no specific mention of any engagement with enemy troops, which were reported previously to have begun withdrawal to their fixed defenses of the Goth Line. Demolitions were reported both near Borgo san Lorenzo and Dicomano, with roadways heavily cratered, apparently by retreating enemy forces.

northwest of Dijon.

In their drive north and northwest of Dijon, French troops after passing St Seine L'Abbaye occupied Velexnon and Courtivron without meeting enemy resistance. Farther east, Orville, 18 miles north of Dijon, and Champlette, 30 miles northeast of Dijon, were taken after light enemy opposition was overcome.

North of the Saône River, between Gray and Vesoul, American troops advanced northward at several points, with forward units reaching Port sur Saône, some 30 miles north of Besançon. Meanwhile, north of Vesoul, the enemy continued to fight back stubbornly.

On the western flank, French troops repulsed a vicious enemy counter-attack near Mersault, and later captured 3,200 prisoners in the vicinity of Autun. In the battle around Mersault, 300 Germans were killed, the same number were taken prisoner, and 300 vehicles and 12 guns of various caliber were destroyed.

West of Dijon, French forces crossed the Ouche River at several points, taking Arcey, 10 miles west of Dijon. Sombernon, some six miles farther west, was occupied against slight enemy resistance.

American troops have advanced farther north and have reached the outskirts of Vesoul, 28 miles north of Besançon, and 32 miles directly west of the Belfort Pass.

LYON ARCHBISHOP DENOUNCED GERMAN TERROR

GRENOBLE, September 7 (Delayed) — German terrorist methods and the massacre of hundreds of people, in dozens of villages, were denounced by Cardinal Gerlier, Archbishop of Lyon, in a letter written during the German occupation and carried personally by him to the chief of the Gestapo for the Rhône and Isère areas.

Denouncing the execution of a group of innocent civilians at Saint Genix-Laval, a small village near Lyon, by one of the many Gestapo terrorist bands which roamed this entire area in a desperate attempt to frighten the FFI to cease military operations against the German forces, Cardinal Gerlier said that such atrocities were «unworthy of Christian or simply human civilization,» and that those who bear the responsibility are «forever dishonored in the eyes of humanity.»

On August 20 a group of Patriots were taken prisoner in the village of St. Genix-Laval and tortured before being killed in an inhuman manner. Cardinal Gerlier, told of the

Fierce German Resistance

Heavy and bitter fighting continued yesterday on the Adriatic front, where 8th Army troops have met some of the fiercest resistance of the Italian campaign in their attempt to turn the Goth Line defenses and overrun the Valley of the Po.

British troops west of Gemmano made gains of up to 800 yards yesterday to gain a foothold on high ground identified only as Point 449, near Monte Gardo. Enemy troops counter-attacked twice following the initial advance, but no details were given of the outcome of the engagement.

More than 3,500 prisoners have been taken by 8th Army since the start of the battle of the Adriatic coastal corridor on August 26.

British naval forces have given considerable support during the past two days to the hard-engaged British troops. Both destroyers and gunboats have shelled heavily enemy gun positions and coastal batteries in the Rimini area, without suffering damage from sometimes intense return fire.

On the remainder of the Italian front, patrol actions were the principal activity. (PRO)

SOUTHERN FRANCE, GOTH LINE TARGETS BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 12 — Luftwaffe targets in southern France were attacked today by up to 500 heavy bombers escorted by Mustangs and Lightnings of the 15th AAF, it was announced tonight.

The heavies ranged over southern Germany and bombed a jet-propelled airplane factory, an aircraft engine works, and an aerodrome. Liberators attacked the Wasserberg aircraft factory at Ulm, 70 miles west of Munich, and Flying Fortresses and Liberators struck an aerodrome at Lechfeld, 30 miles west of Munich. These plants manufacture Me-262 jet-propelled planes. The Allied air assaults were reportedly successful at both targets.

Other formations of Liberators struck at the Allach B.M.W. aircraft engine factory, just outside of Munich.

Neither of the jet-propulsion factories had been attacked before by the 15th AAF, but both have been bombed by the 8th AAF.

In Italy, gun positions north of Florence were attacked today by medium and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force, while other formations ranged over northern Italy to continue the endless assault upon Germany's supply lines.

Early this morning, many waves of Mitchells, Marauders and Thunderbolts struck the Goth defenses, with results considered excellent. Later today, railroad bridges at Piacenza, Parva, and Solignano, and a road bridge at Pavia were attacked. Other road bridges were bombed near Molare, south of Alessandria, at Fornovo, south of Parma, and at Traversa, north of Florence.

Railways Blasted

A delayed report stated a heavy toll of German transportation was taken in the attack on the Mulhouse area, on the German border last Saturday. During 17 missions, 30 locomotives were destroyed, 19 damaged, and several enemy planes destroyed or damaged on the ground. In strafing attacks, 10 motor vehicles were destroyed and eight damaged, while four railroad cars were left in flames and nine others damaged.

Yesterday, northern Italy and targets in the Belfort area of eastern France, on the German frontier, bore the brunt of Allied air attacks.

Near Belfort, 18 miles northeast of French land forces P-47 Thunderbolts of the Tactical Air Force strafed trains.

Behind the battle-lines in northern Italy, successful attacks were made on enemy communications. Rail bridges were hit in the Modena area and northwest of Bologna. Roads and rail tracks near Bologna were also cut. A bridge over the Po north of Castel Giovanni was destroyed, as were 17 vehicles, three rail cars, three trailers, and an 88-millimeter gun. A locomotive and more than 12 rail cars were damaged.

The Desert Air Force destroyed 12 locomotives, set a 2,000-ton enemy merchant vessel on fire in the Gulf of Trieste, and attacked airfields at Campoformido, Vicenza and Verona. (PRO)

POLISH COMMANDER VISITS CLARK

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 12 — Lieutenant General Wladyslaw Anders, Commanding General of the Polish 11th Corps, which has been through some of the hardest and most successful fighting in Italy, yesterday visited Lieutenant General Mark Clark, 5th Army commander.

General Clark presented the Polish general the citation, signed by President Roosevelt, for the Legion of Merit, order of commander, which General Anders won some time ago. (PRO)

«None who has been, or may still be looking to the enemy for support to the detriment of the interests of his own people and their future, and who remains deaf to this appeal, shall escape the brand of traitor before his people and before history. By this message to you, I strongly condemn the misuse of the name of the King and authority of the Crown by which an attempt has been made to justify collaboration with the enemy and to provoke discord amongst our fighting people in the very gravest days of their history, thus solely profiting the enemy.» (Reuter)

SOVIET ADVANCE INTO TRANSYLVANIA CONTINUES

MOSCOW, September 12 — Russian and Rumanian troops pushing forward into Transylvania put their forward positions at the town of Deva tonight, 212 miles from the Hungarian capital of Budapest.

Except for the improvement of Russian positions around Lomza, northeast of Warsaw, the Soviet communique reported only patrol activity on other salients of the Russo-German front.

Reuter said tonight that the Russian advance through Rumania was taking shape. Dispatches said the Red Army was not attempting a costly break-through at the Iron Gate, where the Danube is unbridged, but instead was pushing southward toward Sofia along the classical invasion route which the Germans used in their push eastward.

«A crisis,» said Reuter, «may come with unexpected swiftness. The backdoor of the Reich is wide open.»

The Rumanian High Command communique added tonight that Russian and Rumanian troops, striking west across Transylvania, were within a few miles of the Hungarian border. The communique said fierce fighting was in progress. (OWI-Reuter)

HEAVY GERMAN LOSSES IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

LONDON, September 12 — German forces in Slovakia suffered heavy losses in strong attacks against Czechoslovak Patriots in the area of Vrutzy, the junction of the German retreat line from Rumania and Hungary, it was announced in today's Czechoslovak communique.

In the Nitra valley, a German attack was supported by tanks, but was thrown back after seven tanks were destroyed.

The communique stated that fighting and the Partisans' sabotage activities are continuing on an increased scale. (OWI)

NAZIS REPORTED EVACUATING AEGEAN ISLANDS

CAIRO, September 12 — The Germans have definitely evacuated the islands in the northern Aegean, and are apparently in the process of evacuating the central Aegean, a Reuter dispatch stated, quoting reliable reports.

There are still no indications that they are abandoning the bigger islands, such as Rhodes and Crete, but a Stockholm report stated that Lieut. General Mueller had begun to evacuate Crete without orders from the German High Command.

Troops are being sent from southern Greece and the islands to northern sections of Greece to reinforce German lines at Salonika in the face of growing Allied threats.

It has been estimated that there are about eight German divisions in Greece and the Aegeans. They are not first-class troops, and their only battle experience has been gained against the Partisans.

It is considered possible, the report stated, that the Russians are already exerting pressure to ensure the withdrawal of three or four Bulgarian divisions from the Thrace area in Greece. (Reuter)

TITO FRUSTRATING NAZI ESCAPE ATTEMPTS

LONDON, September 12 — Continuing their attacks against railways and communication lines in Yugoslavia, Marshal Tito's forces are repulsing German attempts to escape from the Balkans, said today's Yugoslav communique.

In the Ibar Valley, an attempted enemy break-through to the north and west was hit hard by Tito's men, who killed 165 Germans and took 140 prisoners.

In Bosnia, Patriot forces attacking Bosanski Novi killed 950 enemy troops and took 1,200 prisoners. Three railway stations have been destroyed and the town of Derventa, on the Brod-Sar railway line, has been captured.

Yugoslav troops attacked retreating German forces in Montenegro and in Dalmatia.

Patriots cut the railway lines in Croatia, and rail traffic out of the Slovenian capital of Ljubljana is at a standstill.

The lines from Zagreb to Belgrade have been cut repeatedly, in some cases for distances up to three miles. (PWB)

Another meeting is scheduled today. (Reuter)

ROOSEVELT AND CHURCHILL MEET

QUEBEC, September 12 — After a long conference last night, President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill met again this morning and then held an afternoon session with their joint military staffs, emphasizing that their meetings were primarily «military» and concerned with the Pacific war against Japan.

Presidential Secretary Stephen Early said all Allied governments are being kept fully informed about the discussions. He said that the afternoon meeting with the military leaders «was getting down to the real business of the conference.» (OWI – Reuter)

JAPS START OFFENSIVE DEFENSIVE IN CHEKIANG

CHUNGKING, September 12 — There were indications tonight that the Japanese fear an Allied invasion of the Chinese coast in an area within easy striking distance of the Japanese mainland.

The Chinese High Command said Japanese troops have driven deep into Chekiang, and have taken over more than two-thirds of the province, in an effort to neutralize the central Chinese coastal region.

It is in this region jutting into the East China Sea that heavy Allied bombers have carried out repeated attacks against Japanese installations and supply lines. Chungking said its High Command believes the new Japanese offensive in Chekiang is intended as a defense measure to forestall an Allied landing.

Heavy Bomber Assaults

Meanwhile, the southern end of this coastal strip, at Canton and at Amoy, has been the target for new assaults by heavy bombers of the 14th USAAF. A communique from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters tonight said that many fires were started in the latest raid on Amoy harbor, and that bombs were scattered over a wide area around Canton, Jap supply and communications base.

Still other planes of the 14th USAAF carried out another attack against Japanese forces striking south from Hunan into Kwangsi Province. This Japanese drive threatens Kweilin, hub of Chinese defenses in southern China.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of General Claire Chennault's Chinese-American Wing struck at enemy concentrations and communications lines over wide areas. They shot others were set afire. The attacks were continuous over a period of 33 hours, starting at dawn on Saturday.

The United Press, carrying late dispatches on the results of the American carrier-force attack on a Japanese convoy off Mindanao, in the Philippines, said:

«Never in this war — or in any other — has Japan lost so many ships in a single engagement. It was a rout.»

An entire convoy of 32 ships was blown apart and sunk. Of the total, 32 were identified as loaded cargo vessels. In addition, planes of the same carrier force struck at waterways inland and sank patrol boats and river craft carrying supplies.

These attacks have the Japanese in the Philippines on edge. On Saturday, immediately after the destruction of the convoy, the Japanese radio at Manila warned all civilians to evacuate the city at once — for economic and military reasons. The puppet government was reported already to have left the city. (OWI – Reuter – UP)

NAZIS ATTEMPT TO CONCEAL ATROCITY EVIDENCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 12 — Fearing the results of documentary evidence of Nazi atrocities reaching Allied hands, the Germans recently ordered extreme precautionary measures, particularly in taking pictures of executions.

A captured enemy order which was issued from the Headquarters of the German 19th Army, and dated June 19, indicated that even at that time it was fully realized that the war was not going well for Germany, and that records of atrocities would be damaging if taken by the Allies.

The German order stated that taking a photograph of any execution by shooting is strictly forbidden. The order added that in certain individual cases where it was absolutely necessary to take a picture for reason of the service, authorization might not be granted by anyone of lower rank than division commander. Films made by specific requests are to be sent undeveloped, under the classification «Secret,» to the authorities.

Military services charged with such executions are required to take all necessary measures, and to forbid presence of spectators. Pictures and rolls of films showing previous executions are to be taken in as soon as possible, and to be handed over to the proper authorities. (PRO)

GENERAL BRADLEY RECOMMENDED FOR PROMOTION

WASHINGTON, September 12 — President Roosevelt today nominated Lieut. Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, commander of American ground forces in northern France, for promotion to the permanent rank of major general in recognition of his achievements on the battlefields of France.

The President also recommended the promotion of Brigadier General Frank E. Merrill, at present theater liaison officer with the Southeast Asia Command and famed as the commanding general of «Merrill's Marauders,» to the temporary rank of major general.

In addition, the President nominated three officers to be advanced to temporary rank of lieutenant general:

Major General Thomas T. Handy, who has been chief of operations in all theaters since General Dwight D. Eisenhower assumed command of Allied forces;

Major General Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., commander of the 6th Corps in southern France;

Major General Daniel I. Sultan, deputy commander of the China-Burma-India Theater. (OWI)

Convoys and river shipping in the areas of Talpangtan, Szetang and Tungan, and in the Poyang Lake region, were bombed heavily throughout Sunday and early yesterday. Chennault's planes also struck at enemy objectives north of Canton, and at landing barges in the Wenchow area of Chekiang.

In central Burma, heavy bombers attacked important railway facilities, set fire to Jap rolling stock, and caused a large explosion.

On the ground in lower Burma, Gurkha troops were said to have driven the Japanese from the strategic ridge for which they had been fighting for four days, in the area southwest of Buthidaung. The Gurkhas were reported to have had strong aerial support from Allied units recently arrived on the Arakan battlefront.

Further progress of Allied troops down the Tiddim Road was reported.

From Allied headquarters at Kandy, Ceylon, Reuter dispatches said that RAF Beaufighters carried out 21 separate attacks against the Japanese convoy destroyed in the Andaman Sea on Saturday and Sunday.

Final reports said that 14 merchantmen, two sloops, and one gunboat were hit and presumably left sinking, and that hands, the Germans recently ordered extreme precautionary measures, particularly in taking pictures of executions.

The order added that in certain individual cases where it was absolutely necessary to take a picture for reason of the service, authorization might not be granted by anyone of lower rank than division commander. Films made by specific requests are to be sent undeveloped, under the classification «Secret,» to the authorities.

Military services charged with such executions are required to take all necessary measures and to forbid presence of spectators. Pictures and rolls of films showing previous executions are to be taken in as soon as possible, and to be handed over to the proper authorities. (PRO)

GENERAL BRADLEY RECOMMENDED FOR PROMOTION

WASHINGTON, September 12 — President Roosevelt today nominated Lieut. Gen. Omar Nelson Bradley, commander of American ground forces in northern France, for promotion to the permanent rank of major general in recognition of his achievements on the battlefields of France.

The President also recommended the promotion of Brigadier General Frank E. Merrill, at present theater liaison officer with the Southeast Asia Command and famed as the commanding general of «Merrill's Marauders,» to the temporary rank of major general.

In addition, the President nominated these officers to be advanced to temporary rank of lieutenant general:

Major General Thomas T. Handy, who has been chief of operations in all theaters since General Dwight D. Eisenhower assumed command of Allied forces;

Major General Lucian K. Truscott, Jr., commander of the 6th Corps in southern France;

Major General Daniel I. Sultan, deputy commander of the China-Burma-India Theater. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

GERMANS KILL 230 MORE ITALIANS IN REPRISAL

FLORENCE, September 12 — This is the story of the tiny town of Civitella Della Chiana, 50 miles southeast of this city, which today mourns the loss of approximately 230 of its little community, who, the sad people testify, were murdered in cold blood by German soldiers on June 28 and July 2.

The story begins on June 18, when German soldiers garrisoned near the town went on a looting spree. They entered homes and stole watches, wireless sets, clocks, and linen. Later that day, Italian Patriots, their red neckerchiefs of Garibaldi flashing in the sunlight, made their way up the town's principal street to the Dopolavoro building, where three of the looting Germans were examining their haul.

The Patriots fired, and two of the looters died instantly. The third German lingered. Then he died, too.

There were no immediate reprisals. Instead, the Germans waited until June 27, when they returned for another looting spree. This time they took more wireless sets and a few typewriters. The second German looting team assured the panic-stricken villagers that this additional looting would be the only reprisal.

The German promise was good for only two days. On June 29, the Germans returned in force with machine guns. They said little as they marched across the village square to the church. The villagers were there, celebrating

St. Peter's Day at an early morning mass. The Germans mounted two machine guns on the church steps and entered the building.

From the altar, Father Alcide Lazzari pleaded with the Germans:

"Don't kill my people. If you want bloodshed, kill me!"

The Germans did not listen. From the church they took Father Lazzari, two altar boys, and some of the men in the congregation — about 30 in all, and marched them across the village square toward the school courtyard.

The helpless hostages were lined up against the school wall and machine gunned. All died but one. He was the 14-year-old altar boy, Daniele Tizzi, who became so panicky, he fled blindly from the massacre line toward the rear of the schoolhouse. Two German soldiers fired at him. He was struck twice, but continued to run on.

Today he lives to tell the story of how the others, including another altar boy, Giuseppe Pasqui, died.

The Germans turned their backs on the heaped bodies in the school courtyard and marched toward the village. They knocked on front doors at random. As each villager replied to the knock, he was killed in the doorway.

Some villagers did not answer the knock quickly enough. They were shot as they descended the stairs toward the front door. That is how Doctor Gastone Poggi, a physician, died. The Germans shot him in the stomach. He fell forward down the stairs and his wife, Elda, rushed to him. While she held him in her arms, a German soldier put a bullet through the doctor's head. The fury of the Germans knew no bounds. They went through the house and killed Dr. Poggi's father, Professor Carlo Mottini, former prefect of the province of Siena, and his wife.

Almost the same scene was reenacted in the Bonichi home, except that it was Signor Bonichi's daughter who held him in her arms while the Germans shot her father through the head.

Invalid Shot

Guido Mammoli, secretary of the village municipal government, was one of those killed during the German house-to-house murder march. Even invalids were not spared. Bruno Tilozzi and his invalid son were shot as he was helping his son down the stairs.

The Germans were not finished. They dragged the bodies of their victims to a building next door to the church, piled them in the rooms, splashed gasoline over the bodies and in and around the house, and then set the building on fire.

Earlier that morning, part of the German force marching toward the town picked up 21 boys they found on the road and held them at a place called Ponte Della Palazzina. When the smoke rose from the burning pyre in Civitella Della Chiana, the boys could see it. It was the last they saw of their village. The Germans machine gunned the 21 boys.

Still the Germans were not finished. They returned to the village on July 2. They picked 10 men at random from the town and set them to work digging a trench 15 feet long and six feet wide. The trench dug, the Germans lined up the diggers and machine-gunned them. There was only one survivor — Othello Assarresi, whose father was among the nine who died. Othello was only slightly wounded, and was rescued by other villagers after the Germans left.

On July 16 the reign of terror was at an end. On that day, British troops liberated the town. Only then did the villagers count their dead and the dead of their neighbors. 105 killed in Civitella Della Chiana; 65 killed in the nearby districts of Gebbia and Cornia; 29 killed in the nearby district of Burrone; and 40 killed in isolated farmhouses in the immediate neighborhood. About 50,000 pairs of shoes, also, will be shipped at the same time, the organization announced today.

Items scheduled to be shipped to Italy so far, said the president of the organization, Judge Juvenal Marchisio, have reached a value estimated at 250,000 dollars. (OWI)

DEMOCRATIC CHRISTIAN COUNCIL ENDS SESSIONS

ROME, September 12 — The National Council of the Democratic Christian Party, which met under the chairmanship of Guilio Rodinò, has concluded its sessions here.

Resolutions were adopted favoring an agrarian policy giving wider scope to small rural properties and the promotion of family or group ownership as the most desirable form of land distribution. Measures were also urged to enforce temporary land concessions by the owners of large estates. (UNN)

GRAIN LAW EVADERS PENALIZED

ROME, September 12 — Further penalties were announced today to have been imposed against violators of the Granai del Popolo regulations.

At Catania, in Sicily, one Benedetto Scolopero Scammacca was given four years in prison and a 215,000-lire fine. Another, Giuseppe Pabluzzo, was sentenced to 5 years' imprisonment and fined 33,000 lire. Ten other violators were given lesser sentences.

In Syracuse, Filadelfo Pulvirenti got six years and a fine of 1,168,000 lire. (UNN)

WATCHFULNESS BASIS OF GRANAI SUCCESS

ROME, September 12 — In an interview appearing in the Corriere di Roma, the president of the Ragusa provincial council, Giovanni Lupis, said the success of the Granai del Popolo in his province was primarily a success of the political parties which initiated the program, and was due to efficient organization and control.

Fascist and separatist elements, he said, were prevented from boycotting or sabotaging the Granai, which he described as something quite different in conception and execution from the Battaglia del Grano (Battle for Grain) of the Fascist regime. (UNN)

CATTOLICA RESIDENTS SHOW SPLENDID SPIRIT

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 12 — Cattolica residents are giving a magnificent example of independence and enterprise in rehabilitating their war-devastated town, a UNN correspondent wrote today.

They are cooperating efficiently and energetically with AMG officials in helping not only themselves, but refugees from nearby Riccione. Families are being evacuated from the battle areas in trucks provide by the Allies. At Cattolica they find a temporary transit camp, where every possible care is taken of them and their children.

Miss Evelyn Antonelli, American born, and now attached to the British Red Cross, is leading the band of Cattolica workers. She was born in San Francisco, where her father still resides. She came to Italy 10 years ago to study music, accompanied by her mother, and was trapped in Italy at the outbreak of the war. (UNN)

RESISTANCE DELEGATES LIST REQUIREMENTS

GRENOBLE, September 6 (Delayed) — Listing their requirements «for the renewal of all political, social, and economic structures» of France, delegates from the Resistance movements of six French departments, meeting in the little town of Vizille, have signed a resolution affirming their determination «to carry through true republican liberties and the establishment of a regime of social justice meeting the aspiration of the French nation, reforged after four years of intense struggle.»

Among the «requirements» named by the Resistance delegates from the Rhone, Isere, Upper Alps, Drome Savoy, and Upper Savoy departments are pursuance of the war until Nazism is crushed; the Metropolitan Resistance Movement in the majority in the Consultative Assembly; immediate execution of all traitors to the country found guilty by courts martial; and epuration «in the political, administrative, economic, and military domains.»

Turning to the reconstruction of France, the delegates called for improvement of the food supply to the civilian

BRITISH, DOMINION LABOR LEADERS MEET IN LONDON

LONDON, September 12 — Deputy Prime Minister Clement Atlee, recently back from his Italian tour, opened a conference of British and Dominion labor leaders in London today.

Mr. Atlee said that the labor movements of the British Commonwealth have taken their full share in the war, and were determined not to falter until German and Japanese aggression have been utterly defeated.

But they had now reached a stage where they could look beyond the war to the peace. Many labor views have been generally adopted in recent years by economists and statesmen, and the workers of the occupied countries, in particular, now look to the labor parties of the Commonwealth for a lead in planning the post-war world.

Mr. G. D. Davis, the secretary for the Western Australian Labor Party, said that he was sure that by international consultation they would achieve peace and social security.

The conference, under the chairmanship of Miss Helen Wilkinson, is attended by delegates from Australia, New Zealand, Canada and South Africa. It will continue in private session until the concluding meeting in about 10 days. (BBC)

U. S. AMBASSADOR CONFERS WITH FRANCO

MADRID, September 12 — Carleton Hayes, U. S. Ambassador to Spain, who returned here yesterday from the United States, had a 75-minute interview with General Franco yesterday.

Though no statement was made on subjects discussed, it is surmised that the Spanish situation and European and world politics at the present and in the immediate future were considered, a Reuter dispatch said.

Spain is publicly taking a stiffer attitude toward Germany and Japan, as evidenced by newspaper articles, the report added, while at the same time the Spanish Government is manifestly interested in further improving relations with the United States. (Reuter)

WAR COMMUNIQUES

MEDITERRANEAN

AFHQ, September 12 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy.

North of Florence, British and American troops have now penetrated between two and three miles into the high ground north of the upper Sieve, and both the 5th and 8th Armies are now in contact with Gothic Line positions in many places along the entire front.

On the Adriatic sector, heavy fighting continues.

On September 11, a further 300 rounds were fired by the Erebus and Scarab, the first-named knocking out gun positions and a battery, and the Scarab plastering field guns and destroying a building used by German troops. The return fire was less accurate than usual.

Mine-sweepers are still at work in this same area, and are making good progress.

British and U. S. light coastal craft on patrol in the Gulf of Genoa on the night of September 10/11 attacked a small enemy convoy with torpedoes. An «F» lighter and a barge were sunk, and a second barge probably sunk.

The naval commander off the south coast of France reports that naval gunfire support on the right flank of the Army in the Mentone area continued on September 9. Firing nearly 1,400 rounds during the day, the U. S. destroyers Hilary P. Jones and the Madison broke up counter-attacks, killing many enemy troops and knocking out tanks. Later, they delivered harassing fire against enemy machine-gun nests and other installations.

The French crisers Duguay Trouin engaged light enemy batteries at Bordighera with 85 rounds while covering mine-sweepers. The result of all these bombardments were reported as excellent.

Mine-sweeping continues in and off the beaches and harbors and their approaches. The weather has improved, and the work of landing men and stores throughout the assault area continues satisfactorily.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force

Medium and light bombers yesterday carried out attacks against rail and road bridges, gun positions, and other battle zone objectives in northern Italy.

Fighter-bombers and fighters attacked rail lines, bridges, rail and motor transport, a supply dump, a command post, guns, and other close support targets on the Italian battle area.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force were active over Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece, attacking rail and road communications, an enemy garrison, gun positions, and shipping in the Adriatic.

Heavy bombers did not operate, due to unfavorable weather.

MAAF flew approximately 1,200 sorties.

In these operations, three enemy aircraft were destroyed, and three of ours are missing. In operations of the night of September 10/11, one enemy aircraft was destroyed. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 12 — To-day's communique:

Land.

Allied troops crossed the Luxembourg-German frontier, and to the south have established contact with Allied forces advancing from southern France.

In the Moselle Valley, we are continuing to meet stubborn resistance along the river. Farther north, the troops which made a crossing of the German frontier in force are now in the area northwest of Trier.

Earlier, the forces which liberated the city of Luxembourg had encountered enemy delaying action northeast of Mersch. In the Ardennes, gains have been made in the vicinity of Bastogne.

Advances south of Liege have taken our troops across the road between Harre and Aywaille.

Ten miles east of Liege, we have occupied Herve, after encountering scattered enemy resistance. We also reached the Jupreleone, Liege-Tongres road. The bridgehead over the Albert Canal has been enlarged, in spite of stubborn enemy resistance.

East of Ghent, we have liberated Lokeren and St. Ni-

On the Adriatic sector, heavy fighting continues.

Seventh Army:

The 7th Army has established contact with the 3rd Army in eastern France, where further northward advances have been made into areas from which the enemy continues to try to withdraw his remaining forces. After occupying the important communications center of Dijon, French troops have kept up the momentum of their drive, and forward elements have reached Is-Sur-Tille, 14 miles beyond. The town of Sombernon in this sector has been occupied with little resistance. Approximately 2,500 prisoners were taken in a clash with enemy columns in the vicinity of Autun, 40 miles southwest of Dijon. American forces have reached the outskirts of Vesoul in the northward advance from the Doubs and Ognon rivers. Substantial progress has been made in this sector against heavy resistance, which includes artillery and tanks.

Naval:

Bombardments on the east coast of Italy in support of the Army in the Rimini area are being continued by units of His Majesty's Navy. The results were reported as excellent. Nearly 600 rounds were fired by the destroyers Loyal and Undine on September 10 at gun positions and field batteries. There was accurate return fire from the shore, but our ships suffered neither casualties nor damage.

Mine-sweeping continues in and off the beaches and harbors and their approaches. The weather has improved, and the work of landing men and stores throughout the assault area continues satisfactorily.

Air:

Enemy gun positions and strongpoints between Metz and Thionville were attacked by strong forces of medium and light bombers yesterday. One bomber is missing.

Railway targets from Saarbrucken to Cologne were hit by fighter-bombers, which destroyed and damaged many locomotives and railway cars. Other fighter-bombers attacked enemy guns and fortifications in eastern Belgium.

Airfields at Leeuwarden, and ferry installations at Brenkens, were targets for medium and light bombers over Holland. The fortified area of Le Havre was again pounded by heavy bombers, and fighter-bombers continued the attack on Brest.

Coastal aircraft yesterday afternoon attacked four large minesweepers off Christiansand and left them on fire. Late on Sunday afternoon, a formation of trawler-type auxiliaries was hit with rocket and cannon. One vessel was probably sunk and four others damaged. One coastal aircraft is missing.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 12 — Tonight's communique:

During today, south and southwest of Lomza, our troops engaged the enemy in fighting and improved their positions, and also occupied several populated localities.

In Rumania, our troops, jointly with Rumanian troops, continued their advance and captured the towns of Mercurea-Ciuksini in Transylvania, Blaj, Alud, and Deva, and also occupied over 150 other populated localities, including Shashkezd, Segmantur, Sauka, and Diche-Szent-Marton, and the railway stations of Homorod, Kaza, and Palloh.

On the other sectors of the front, reconnaissance activities and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 11, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 49 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, six enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 12 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriot groups have liberated Domodossola. The German garrison, comprising 500 men, surrendered without offering resistance.

In Val Sesia, engagements have taken place between Garibaldi Brigades and strong detachments of Nazi-Fascists. Sizeable contingents of enemy troops are also engaged in operations against Patriots in the Canavese, Biellese, and Novara plain regions. A Fascist attack was repulsed, with heavy losses, at Val Seriana di Bergamo. In the elevated section of the city of Bergamo, Patriots have cut the Presolana road, and have caused the suspension of work on fortifications begun there by the Germans. Other Patriot groups have occupied Langhirano, after reducing its garrison.

Activity is developing in the Val d'Aosta. The Germans and Fascists were driven from Ronchi, where they left behind 60 dead and wounded. Three spies were taken into custody at Marra; and at Bresso military food supplies were confiscated. Twelve German motor vehicles were destroyed by Patriots at Val Chisone.

In the course of an engagement near Carpineti, an Aemilian Patriot Division now operating in the La Spezia area took nine German prisoners, after inflicting losses in dead and wounded on the enemy.

Railway communications between Novara, Varallo, Sesia, Borgomanero, and Arona have been cut. In Milan Province, a civil war situation has been created by Patriot attacks, sabotage, and consequent German reprisals. Partisan assault brigades have destroyed telegraph stations and damaged railway lines. They also hampered enemy road movements at Monsano, Robecco, Lodi, Busto Garolfo, Casalpusterlengo, and Ponte Lambro. At Magenta and two other localities, Patriot assault brigades destroyed enemy batteries and their personnel.

Fascist spies who had committed acts of cruelty were killed in the city of Milan. Among these were members of the Fascist Muti Brigade, which operates a torture chamber in the city.

Nine hundred Fascist militiamen looted the village of San'Angelo Lodigiano and killed a number of civilians, including a woman, under the pretext of seeking out army deserters. Patriots countered with the killing of the federal commissioner, Barlocchi.

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 12 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

being shelled by heavy enemy artillery. The Lorient garrison, during successful raids, destroyed enemy ammunition and supply depots.

Italy:

In the course of the great defensive battle which — for a fortnight now — is being fought along the Adriatic coast, our troops, time and again, inflicted heaviest losses on an opponent far superior to our own forces in men and material. His break-through attempts failed. Under the impact of his tremendous losses, the enemy yesterday launched only weak local attacks there, which were all repelled. Behind the front, in Italian rear areas, numerous bandit camps were destroyed and over 750 bandits were killed in battle. Approximately 500 prisoners were taken.

Eastern Front:

In the South of Siebenburgen and in the eastern Carpathians, enemy attacks were held and repulsed by our troops in immediate counter-attacks.

Heavy defensive fighting is still in progress at Sanok and Krasno. The enemy did not achieve the intended break-through.

East of Warsaw, and northeast of Ostrolenka, our divisions fiercely resisted the renewed strong Bolshevist drives, here also frustrating all Soviet break-through intentions.

No important fighting activity is reported from the remaining sectors of the eastern front.

Air:

During Anglo-American daylight attacks against western and central Germany, the cities of Hannover, Magdeburg, and Eisenach suffered especially heavy damages.

Last night, Darmstadt was the target of a British terror raid.

Isolated enemy planes again dropped bombs on Berlin.

In the course of bitter air battles, as well as by anti-aircraft fire, the enemy, according to incomplete reports, lost 133 planes, including 104 four-engined bombers.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN OVERSEAS RADIO

Dutch Nazi Speaks: Amsterdam: «Mussert, the leader of the Dutch National Socialist movement, spoke on the radio. 'We, Dutch National Socialists,' declared Mussert, believe that National Socialism was brought to us in order to save Europe from Bolshevism and from American imperialism. We are standing together, firmly confident in Adolf Hitler, who will succeed in keeping the New Europe upright under his leadership.'»

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Western Front: D.N.B. speaks of «German successes at the western front, such as the failure of enemy attacks at Bruges, Ghent, and Antwerp, as well as the smashing of the bridgehead across the Albert Canal near Hasselt and the taking of prisoners north of Nancy.» It is added that these «successes» may «not be decisive» but that, nonetheless, they indicate «the beginning of a change in the situation, particularly as regards that immense effort now being prepared in Germany in order to keep the enemy off German frontiers.» There is no mention so far of an Allied advance across the frontier.

Eastern Front: «Fighting at the east front has been around three focal points. In the Sanok area, Krosno has been lost without the Soviets obtaining a break-through. East of Warsaw and between the Bug and the Narev, the Soviets could not realize their intended break-through. Three Soviet armies... are advancing toward Sofia and the man garrison, comprising 300 men, surrendered without offering resistance.

In Val Sesia, engagements have taken place between Garibaldi Brigades and strong detachments of Nazi-Fascists. Sizeable contingents of enemy troops are also engaged in operations against Patriots in the Canavese, Biellese, and Novara plain regions. A Fascist attack was repulsed, with heavy losses, at Val Seriana di Bergamo. In the elevated section of the city of Bergamo, Patriots have cut the Presolana road, and have caused the suspension of work on fortifications begun there by the Germans. Other Patriot groups have occupied Langhirano, after reducing its garrison.

Activity is developing in the Val d'Aosta. The Germans and Fascists were driven from Ronchi, where they left behind 60 dead and wounded. Three spies were taken into custody at Mazze, and at Bresso military food supplies were confiscated. Twelve German motor vehicles were destroyed by Patriots at Val Chisone.

In the course of an engagement near Carpineti, an Aemilian Patriot Division now operating in the La Spezia area took nine German prisoners, after inflicting losses in dead and wounded on the enemy.

Railway communications between Novara, Varallo, Sesia, Borgomanero, and Arona have been cut. In Milan Province, a civil war situation has been created by Patriot attacks, sabotage, and consequent German reprisals. Partisan assault brigades have destroyed telegraph stations and damaged railway lines. They also hampered enemy road movements at Monzano, Robecco, Lodi, Busto Garolfo, Casalpusterlengo, and Ponte Lambro. At Magenta and two other localities, Patriot assault brigades destroyed enemy batteries and their personnel.

Fascist spies who had committed acts of cruelty were killed in the city of Milan. Among these were members of the Fascist Muti Brigade, which operates a torture chamber in the city.

Nine hundred Fascist militiamen looted the village of Sant'Angelo Lodigiano and killed a number of civilians, including a woman, under the pretext of seeking out army deserters. Patriots countered with the killing of the federal commissioner, Racioerbi. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 12 — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

Western Front:

In the West, enemy attacks near Bruges, Ghent, and north of Antwerp failed. One enemy bridgehead across the Albert Canal, northwest of Hasselt, has been eliminated. Only on the northern bank, weak enemy formations still remain entrenched.

North of Hasselt, the enemy, supported by strong infantry and tank forces, succeeded in advancing towards Eindhoven. Counter-attacks have been ordered. East and southeast of Liege, as well as in the Metz area, there was especially heavy fighting. Here our troops stubbornly resisted the advancing enemy offensive forces.

South of Nancy, several hundred prisoners were taken in a successful German attack. Strong enemy pressure against the town of Vesoul continues from the south.

During the last two days, over 100 enemy tanks were knocked out on the western front.

The garrisons of Dunkirk and Le Havre resisted strong enemy attacks. West of Brest, at Le Coquet, a small German group, led by Lieutenant Colonel Fuerst, is holding its position with exemplary bravery. The fortress of Brest itself is

No important fighting activity is reported from the remaining sectors of the eastern front.

Air:

During Anglo-American daylight attacks against western and central Germany, the cities of Hannover, Magdeburg, and Eisenach suffered especially heavy damages.

Last night, Darmstadt was the target of a British terror raid.

Isolated enemy planes again dropped bombs on Berlin.

In the course of bitter air battles, as well as by anti-aircraft fire, the enemy, according to incomplete reports, lost 123 planes, including 104 four-engined bombers. (Radio Berlin)

Dutch Nazi Speaks: Amsterdam. «Mussert, the leader of the Dutch National Socialist movement, spoke on the radio: 'We, Dutch National Socialists,' declared Mussert, believe that National Socialism was brought to us in order to save Europe from Bolshevism and from American imperialism. We are standing together, firmly confident in Adolf Hitler, who will succeed in keeping the New Europe upright under his leadership.»

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Western Front: D.N.B. speaks of «German successes at the western front, such as the failure of enemy attacks at Bruges, Ghent, and Antwerp, as well as the smashing of the bridgehead across the Albert Canal near Hasselt and the taking of prisoners north of Nancy.» It is added that these «successes» may «not be decisive» but that, nonetheless, they indicate «the beginning of a change in the situation, particularly as regards that immense effort now being prepared in Germany in order to keep the enemy off German frontiers.» There is no mention so far of an Allied advance across the frontier.

Eastern Front: «Fighting at the east front has been around three focal points. In the Sanok area, Krosno has been lost without the Soviets obtaining a break-through. East of Warsaw and between the Bug and the Narev, the Soviets could not realize their intended break-through. Three Soviet armies... are advancing toward Sofia and the Aegean.»

FASCIST RADIO

New Weapons: The superior quality of the German soldiers, who are using new weapons particularly suitable for hand-to-hand fighting, has compelled the enemy to slow down his advance.

A German Victory: After 17 days of an Allied offensive, the battle of the Adriatic front has ended with a complete German defensive victory. The Anglo-Canadians, who originally replaced Polish units, lost several thousand men and at least 400 tanks. The 8th Army is now being reinforced by Greek mercenaries.

Anniversary of the Duce's Rescue: On 12 September 1943, the Fuehrer's paratroopers rescued the Duce. This was the signal for the Italian and Fascist resurrection, for the resumption of the fight against the enemy, both internal and external. It is significant that this anniversary coincides with another one, equally important: on 12 September 1919, D'Annunzio liberated Fiume.

AMERICANS FIGHTING IN GERMANY 7TH AND 3RD ARMY FORCES JOINED

SHAEF, September 11 — General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army troops have entered Germany, and are reported to be fighting five miles within the Reich, north of Trier, slightly northeast of Luxembourg, it was announced late tonight.

The first junction of forces of the American 7th and 3rd Armies was established today in the area of Sombernon, west of Dijon, when officers leading forward patrols shook hands, it was officially announced tonight by Advance Allied Force Headquarters in Italy.

Armored troops of General Miles Dempsey's 2nd Army are today within sight of Holland after crashing through the German defense positions at the Beeringen bridgehead and are within 25 miles of the German city of Saarbourg. One unit fanning out to the north is fighting in the vicinity of Mersch, 10 miles north of Luxembourg.

Another column is driving southeast toward the Moselle River, threatening to roll up the flank of the strong German forces defending the Moselle River crossing in the Metz-Nancy area, where General George Patton's 3rd Army has launched a new offensive.

Other forces of the American 1st Army, to the north, are advancing in the area of Limbourg against heavy minefields, tanks, and anti-tank guns. American artillery near Verviers, four miles southwest of Limbourg, have brought Aachen under heavy fire, it was stated in an unconfirmed report. This German border city is a troop concentration point and is guarded by Siegfried Line forts on the east and west.

Sixth Moselle Bridgehead

Information on the progress of General Patton's forces was withheld today, but press reports stated that armor and artillery reinforcements had been brought up, and that a sixth bridgehead was thrown across the Moselle River against full-scale German resistance. The hills east of the river are bristling with artillery, and all indications are that a major battle is impending in this region at the approaches to the Third Reich.

Last night, American forces captured a heavily gunned Maginot Line fortress, Fort de Ville-le Sec, southwest of Nancy, which gives them a commanding position along a wide stretch of the Moselle River.

The Canadian 1st Army have improved their bridgehead across the Ostend-Ghent Canal south of Bruges, and it appears that the Germans are falling back to the line of the Leopold Canal, closer to the Scheldt. It was reported that a third bridgehead was established over the Ghent Canal.

The German escape corridor at the mouth of the Scheldt River is constantly under attack by Allied aircraft, but there is no sign of a large concentration of barges.

German resistance at Ostend, Nieuport, and Ghent has been overcome, and the whole coast between Ostend and France has been swept clean by Canadian patrols.

MAGINOT LINE FORTRESS CITY CAPTURED INTACT

SHAEF, September 11 — American troops advancing across Lorraine, captured the fortress city of Aumetz, southwest of the city of Luxembourg, and a large part of the Maginot Line intact, it was reported late tonight.

Armored troops of General Miles Dempsey's 2nd Army are today within sight of Holland after crashing through the German defense positions at the Beeringen bridgehead.

Breaking out of the bridgehead after heavy battles at a vital crossroad, the British troops crossed the important L'Escaut Canal, four miles from the Dutch border, and are apparently on the road to Eindhoven. Forward patrols have entered Holland, it was reported late tonight.

The Germans resisted stubbornly, but British tanks were on the far side of the L'Escaut Canal before the enemy had time to react. The enemy lost 300 dead, and more than 500 German soldiers were taken prisoner. This deep thrust has weakened the whole German line around the bridgehead.

Farther back, at Bourg Leopold, there is stiff German opposition and no Allied progress was reported tonight. At Gheel, however, British infantry are holding and extending their bridgehead and took over 750 prisoners yesterday.

General Dwight Eisenhower, Supreme Commander, held a conference in Brussels yesterday with Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery and Major General Middleton, commanding the American 8th Corps at Brest.

Luxembourg Liberated

Well to the south, General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army today liberated the capital city of the Duchy of Luxembourg in a drive of over 30 miles from Montmedy. The Germans must now consider the possibility of an attack through the Ardennes on a wide front. The units moving through the Duchy have advanced to within 10 miles of the Saar border.

Verviers, four miles southwest of Limbourg, have brought Aachen under heavy fire, it was stated in an unconfirmed report. This German border city is a troop concentration point and is guarded by Siegfried Line forts on the east and west.

175 GERMAN AIRCRAFT DESTROYED

LONDON, September 12 (Tuesday) — One hundred-and seventy-five German aircraft were destroyed in yesterday's American air attacks on German oil plants, an American communique announced here early today. This brings to 300 the total number of German aircraft destroyed over Germany on Sunday and Monday. (Reuter)

U. S. N. PLANES SINK 89 JAP SHIPS AT PHILIPPINES

PEARL HARBOR, September 12 (Tuesday) — At least 89 Japanese vessels were sunk or probably sunk on Friday, in the Allies first naval air attack on the Philippines, by carrier-based aircraft, supported by cruisers and destroyers, under the command of Admiral William Halsey, the Navy announced here this morning.

In addition, about 68 enemy aircraft were destroyed in the attack, which swept over the Island of Mindanao and adjacent waters.

The Navy announcement said that the total number of ships destroyed included an entire enemy convoy, which was sunk off Illanfam Bay.

An earlier announcement from Washington stated that nine other Japanese ships, three of them combat vessels, have been sunk by American submarines operating in the Pacific and Indian Oceans. (OWI - Reuter)

The ports of Calais, Dunkirk, and Boulogne are now completely isolated, and strong infantry patrols have closed in on the defenses, but the main attacks have not yet begun. Street fighting is now going on in the outskirts of Brest, where a fanatical German garrison is still holding out.

The great port of Le Havre received a severe attack from land and sea yesterday. RAF bombers dropped nearly 5,000 tons of bombs on enemy positions, while the British warships HMS Warspite and Erebus poured shells in from the sea. (OWI - Reuter - BBC - AP)

AERIAL BATTLE OF GERMANY OPENS

LONDON, September 11 — The first major engagement in the air battle of Germany was fought in the skies over the Reich today. Luftwaffe fighters came up by the hundreds around midday to attack a strong force of American bombers striking at oil plants in the heart of Germany. At least 136 German fighters were shot down by the fighter escort. Still others were shot down by American bombers. Yet others were destroyed on the ground. The total day's bag has not yet been tabulated.

It was the fourth consecutive day that 1,000 or more 8th USAAF heavy bombers swooped down on German war production targets, and today's chief objectives were the synthetic oil plants at Merseburg and Lutzendorf, and the natural oil plant near Misburg, not far from Hanover. They were bombed in clear weather. Other targets in central Germany were bombed through clouds.

The fighter escort today consisted of 800 Thunderbolts and Lightnings, compared with previous escorts of between 200 and 300 fighters. The air battles were fought over a wide area from Hanover to Leipzig. The score of 136 German fighters destroyed is the greatest number ever destroyed by American fighters over Germany.

The loss of this vast force of fighters, coming close upon yesterday's loss of 125 planes, most of them destroyed on the ground, represents a tremendous blow to the Luftwaffe on the eve of General Eisenhower's assault on the Siegfried Line, a London commentator said today. These are the planes the Luftwaffe has husbanded since D-day to throw into the last desperate battles in defense of the Reich.

Meanwhile, the 9th USAAF began the opening phases of the aerial battle for the German frontier, attacking transport targets around Aachen, Luxembourg, and Verrier. Marauders and Havocs today attacked defensive positions along the Moselle and a German headquarters in Metz, in support of the U. S. 3rd Army.

Early this morning, big forces of Halifaxes and Liberators were over Le Havre again, pounding the beleaguered German garrison. Yesterday, 1,000 bombers hit the port with 5,500 tons of explosives.

Last night, RAF Mosquitoes again bombed Berlin. It is now revealed that in Saturday night's raids on Brunswick and in the Munchen Gladbach in the industrial Rhineland, RAF Lancasters dropped 269,000 incendiary bombs. (OWI-Reuter)

ROOSEVELT CONGRATULATES LUXEMBOURGEOIS

WASHINGTON, September 11 — President Roosevelt today saluted the "brave people of Luxembourg" upon their liberation from their Nazi oppressors.

His statement said:

"To no people who have borne the Nazi yoke can liberation mean more than to those of the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg.

"Ruthlessly attacked and occupied by the German military in May, 1940, their country was not only incorporated into the Third Reich and German citizens thrust upon them but their sons were forced to serve in the ranks and wear the hated insignia of their oppressors.

"With unparalleled sacrifice and fortitude, the heroic

Using jeeps with machine guns for advanced work, they raced around in a wood to lure several 58-ton Tiger tanks out of the forest so that they could be engaged by heavier units. A German motorcyclist heading the German tank column was permitted to go by, and when tanks came abreast of the American units, the first tank was knocked out, tying up the whole column.

An American corporal with the group said:

"We opened up on one side of the German column and then the assault guns knocked out the rear vehicles, working methodically up to the front. What Germans were left ran into the woods."

The American armored column circled the wood at high speed, firing on the Germans as in Custer's last stand, the report said, concluding that the tactics proved good, for the American casualties were one killed, against the killing and capturing of nearly 200 Germans. (AP)

FRENCH BALL BEARING INDUSTRY SHATTERED

LONDON, September 11 — United Press correspondent, Joseph W. Grigg, told today how three shattering American 8th Air Force raids on two of the most important ball-bearing factories in the Paris area, late in 1943, compelled the Nazis to shift operations to damp caverns nearby in their desperation to maintain production.

The factories were those of the SKF works at Ivry and Bois de Colombes, west of Paris. They formed a vital link in Germany's ball-bearing production. Even before American raids on Schweinfurt and Regensburg knocked out 50 per cent of the Reich's home production, French factories contributed some 15 per cent of the Nazis total ball-bearing needs.

In another production field, Allied raids combined with French schemes to frustrate production schedules. Output at the Renault motor transport factory was held down to 25 per cent of capacity. The main plant was first attacked by the Royal Air Force in March 1942. Then American Flying Fortresses took over the work.

During the period of German occupation, production graphs showed big ups and downs, and three times the plant was forced to close down for as long as a month. This occurred while Germans worked feverishly to stimulate production.

The Renault factories cover more than 300 acres of floor space. The death rate among civilian workers was low because it was Allied policy to attack on Sundays or other days when a minimum number of workers were there. Excellent shelters were provided for the workers, wrote Grigg. (OWI - UP)

39,000 FRENCH REFUGEES AIDED

LONDON, September 11 — In the two months since D-day, more than 40 civil affairs detachments have handled approximately 39,000 refugees and have assisted in towns in France liberated by units of the advancing 1st United States army, the United States War Department announced yesterday.

Staffed by specially trained officers and enlisted men, both American and British, the civil affairs detachments throughout the U. S. Army area have helped the French authorities to establish local government, maintain law and order, and organize the liberated territory behind the Allied lines along the policy laid down by SHAEF. A military government has not been set up in liberated France, and the control of civil administration is remaining with the local authorities.

A group of French officers, selected by the French authorities and attached to civil affairs staffs and detachments, maintain liaison between the army and the civil authority and the civil population.

S.H.A.E.F. WARNS FRENCH CIVILIANS OFF ROADS

SHAEF, September 11 — Supreme Allied Headquarters issued another warning Sunday to French civilians to keep off the roads in the German line of retreat, to avoid Allied air attacks.

GERMANS IN NORWAY HAVE NO TRANSPORT SOUTH

LONDON, September 11 — German troops entering Norway from Finland will find themselves in an awkward predicament, as they cannot remain in the two northern counties of Norway, and means for moving south are inadequate, the Norwegian Telegraph Agency reported.

Some 25,000 German troops are already stationed there, and to these must be added large numbers of prisoners of war, as well as conscripted labor of many nationalities. The housing shortage is so acute that in the Kirkenes area, six to seven persons, on the average, are sharing one room.

The army of 100,000 men coming from Finland will find no accomodations.

The Germans do not possess the necessary transport for moving such an army along roads, and the means of transport by sea are also scarce. There are no indications that transport by sea is being arranged.

Consequently, troops will have to make their way to southern Norway on foot — which will impose a severe strain on them, as snow can be expected in northern Norway soon. (Reuter)

7TH AND 3RD ARMIES MEET
DIJON LIBERATED BY FRENCH OF 7TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 11 — The Allied 3rd and 7th armies, streaming across France toward the German frontier, made their first contact today at an undesignated point in eastern France, it was officially announced here late tonight.

The link-up of the two Allied forces, which now creates an Allied line across the whole of France and across Belgium from the Mediterranean to the North Sea, took place when two officers of the respective forces shook hands, the official announcement said.

Although no hint was given as to the likely place of the junction, it probably occurred somewhere along the 55-mile stretch between Dijon and the town of Chaumont, General John J. Pershing's headquarters in the last war, in the valley of the Marne.

The announcement of the link up of the Allied forces followed within an hour an official report that French troops of the 7th Army had liberated today the important road and rail center of Dijon.

Meanwhile, it was reported, American troops thrust north from Besançon to reach the outskirts of Vesoul, 28 miles to the north. This swift American advance some 15 miles beyond the Ognon River brings Major General Alexander Patch's troops within striking distance of the main east-west road through the Belfort Gap, along which German forces have been striving to escape into their homeland.

Strong enemy resistance, apparently from rear-guard forces which unsuccessfully attempted to stave off the American thrust across the valley corridor leading to the south German frontier, was reported north of Rioz, 12 miles north of Besançon on the road to Vesoul.

As German rearguard resistance weakened, General de Lattre de Tassigny's French forces advanced rapidly to close in on the capital of the famed Cote d'Or Department from both south and west, it was reported.

Belfort Gap

Both west and east of Dijon, 7th Army forces pressed northward along a 100-mile front, tightening their throttle hold on the Belfort Gap escapeway of the German forces still west of the Vosges Mountain barrier of the French-German frontier south of Strasbourg.

The advance of the French forces to the outskirts of Dijon, a city of some 85,000 population and center of the Burgundy wine industry, followed the capture of the two villages of Ucry and Chanibeuf, nine miles southwest, yesterday.

Battered enemy rear-guards, exhausted by days of stubborn fighting, were falling back and offering only weak resistance, it was reported.

Other French forces were moving at an equally rapid pace some 40 miles west of Dijon, and had reached the vicinity of the village of Sauilieu Arnay-le-Duc, 30 miles southwest of Dijon, and on the road from Beaune to Saulieu was also occupied. Little over 60 miles east of Dijon, American forces were reported to be making "a general northward movement" from the line of the Doubs River and the Rhone-Rhine Canal, to reach the Ognon

F.F.I. LIBERATE CHATILLON

LONDON, September 11 — French Forces of the Interior have liberated Chatillon, a large town on the River Seine about halfway between Troyes and Dijon, a communique from General Koenig's headquarters announced tonight.

Resistance forces have been extremely active in the Cote d'Or and Haute Marne departments.

In the center of France, clearing-up operations continue. During an engagement near Issoudun, west of Bourges, 200 German cyclists were killed.

The French Forces of the Interior are operating with their first air squadron, Radio France reported today. Between August 21 and September 1, this unit carried out more than 350 reconnaissance flights from Marseilles to Bordeaux and up to Clermond Ferrand, keeping all the regions south of the Loire under observation.

The squadron, consisting of 18 planes, is led by the well-known French airman Doret. Ten mechanics and four others who had previously served under Doret have trained the crews. (OWI)

AMERICANS CROSS SIEVE RIVER

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 11 — American forces of the 5th Army, revealed for the first time as holding the center of the Allied line across Italy, have crossed the Sieve River some 15 miles north of Florence, in a rapid and surprise advance, it was announced here this morning.

The American troops are now on the line of the Sieve River, with patrol forces already across the river and probing into the mountains within three miles of the main positions of the enemy's Apennines fortress line, it was reported.

British troops are also on the Sieve River, pushing northeast from Pontassieve to near the town of Diacomano, nine miles upstream from the junction point of the Sieve and the Arno rivers, it was declared.

These large advances in the center of the Allied line came as the German forces seemed momentarily to have stabilized their positions across the 11 mile-wide Adriatic coastal corridor leading into the Valley of the Po. Although official reports stated that the fighting was heavy and bitter, with casualties on both sides high, the Germans still clung to their ridge line south of Rimini, where after a week's savage fighting, they have brought to a halt, at least temporarily, the spectacular 8th Army advance which threatened to over-run the broad Valley of the Po.

Prato, Pistoia Cleared

Fifth Army troops were also reported to have made big gains northwest of Florence, clearing the important cities of Prato and Pistoia, 10 and 20 miles respectively from Florence. Lt. General Mark Clark's forces were pushing northward into the Apennine heights between the Ombrone and the Serchio rivers, and have already made contact with the enemy's Goth Line defenses at least five points along this 16-mile stretch, the official report said.

Fifth Army troops were reported to be in contact with the outer defenses of the Goth Line around Montagnana, four miles northwest of Pistoia, and two miles north of Vellana, a village 10 miles northwest of Pistoia. Other troops had reached the Goth defenses at Zarzera, six miles northeast of Lucca, and at Colognora, 13 miles northeast of this town. Elements of the 92nd Infantry Division, an all-Negro unit, have pushed 3½ miles beyond Lucca in a concerted push up the Serchio River Valley.

Fifth Army forces also crossed the Serchio River north of Pisa in several places, besieging the town of Vecchiano, five miles due north of Pisa. One of the river crossings was made near the Ligurian Sea littoral Highway No. 1, near its junction point with the autostrada running west from Florence. Extensive minefields were encountered throughout this sector, and enemy aircraft staged night raids in the the junction. It probably occurred somewhere along the 50-mile stretch between Dijon and the town of Chaumont, General John J. Pershing's headquarters in the last war, in the valley of the Marne.

The announcement of the link up of the Allied forces followed within an hour an official report that French troops of the 7th Army had liberated today the important road and rail center of Dijon.

Meanwhile, it was reported, American troops thrust north from Besancon to reach the outskirts of Vesoul, 28 miles to the north. This swift American advance some 15 miles beyond the Ognon River brings Major General Alexander Patch's troops within striking distance of the main east-west road through the Belfort Gap, along which German forces have been striving to escape into their homeland.

Strong enemy resistance, apparently from rear-guard forces which unsuccessfully attempted to stave off the American thrust across the valley corridor leading to the south German frontier, was reported north of Ruz, 12 miles north of Besancon on the road to Vesoul.

As German rearguard resistance weakened, General de Lattre de Tassigny's French forces advanced rapidly to close in on the capital of the famed Cote d'Or Department from both south and west, it was reported.

Belfort Gap

Both west and east of Dijon, 7th Army forces pressed northward along a 100-mile front, tightening their throttle hold on the Belfort Gap escapeway of the German forces still west of the Vosges Mountain barrier at the French-German frontier south of Strasbourg.

The advance of the French forces to the outskirts of Dijon, a city of some 85,000 population and center of the Burgundy wine industry, followed the capture of the two villages of Velry and Chambceuf, nine miles southwest, yesterday.

Battered enemy rear-guards, exhausted by days of stubborn fighting, were falling back and offering only weak resistance, it was reported.

Other French forces were moving at an equally rapid pace some 40 miles west of Dijon, and had reached the vicinity of the village of Saulieu Arnay-le-duc 30 miles southwest of Dijon, and on the road from Beaune to Saulieu was also occupied. Little over 60 miles east of Dijon, American forces were reported to be making a general northward movement from the line of the Doubs River and the Rhone-Rhine Canal, to reach the Ognon River, roughly 10 miles farther north.

How far eastward into the famed Belfort Gap, historic passageway from France into southern Germany, this American push extended, was not indicated, although the Rhone-Rhine Canal does not begin in this sector until near the village of Montbellard, only 10 miles southwest of the fortress city of Belfort itself.

Only two towns north of the Doubs River were specifically mentioned in official reports of fighting in this area, and neither of these appeared to have been captured. Easternmost town mentioned was Rougemont, nine miles north of Baume-les-Dames, scene of hard fighting during the past week. Troops, identified only as forward elements, were reported to have reached the vicinity of this town, some 14 miles from Belfort. Auxone, just north of the town of Dole reported captured yesterday, was being approached by American forces moving in the general direction of Dijon, it was said.

French forces were still meeting heavy resistance east of St. Hippolyte, between the Swiss frontier and Belfort, as German forces fought stubbornly to prevent their retreating army from being choked off in the Belfort Gap. At its nearest point, the fortress City of Belfort is only 10 miles from the Swiss frontier, and some five miles form the German frontier to the east. (PRO) the center of the Allied line across Italy, have crossed the Sieve River some 15 miles north of Florence, in a rapid and surprise advance, it was announced here this morning.

The American troops are now on the line of the Sieve River, with patrol forces already across the river and probing into the mountains within three miles of the main positions of the enemy's Apennines fortress line, it was reported.

British troops are also on the Sieve River, pushing northeast from Pontassieve to near the town of Dicomano, nine miles upstream from the junction point of the Sieve and the Arno rivers, it was declared.

These large advances in the center of the Allied line came as the German forces seemed momentarily to have stabilized their positions across the 11 mile-wide Adriatic coastal corridor leading into the Valley of the Po. Although official reports stated that the fighting was heavy and bitter, with casualties on both sides high, the Germans still clung to their ridge line south of Rimini where after a week's savage fighting, they have brought to a halt, at least temporarily, the spectacular 8th Army advance which threatened to over-run the broad Valley of the Po.

Fifth Army troops were also reported to have made big gains northwest of Florence, clearing the important cities of Prato and Pistoia, 10 and 20 miles respectively from Florence. [4 General Mark Clark's forces were pushing northward into the Apennine heights between the Ombrone and the Serchio rivers, and have already made contact with the enemy's Goth Line defenses at least five points along this 18-mile stretch, the official report said.

Fifth Army troops were reported to be in contact with the outer defenses of the Goth Line around Montagnana, four miles northwest of Pistoia, and two miles north of Vellana, a village 10 miles northwest of Pistoia. Other troops had reached the Goth defenses at Zazzera, six miles northeast of Lucca, and at Colognora, 11 miles northeast of this town. Elements of the 92nd Infantry Division, an all-Negro unit, have pushed 3½ miles beyond Lucca in a concerted push up the Serchio River Valley.

Fifth Army forces also crossed the Serchio River north of Pisa, in several places, occupying the town of Vecchiano, five miles due north of Pisa. One of the river crossings was made near the Ligurian Sea littoral Highway No. 1, near its junction point with the autostrada running west from Florence. Extensive minefields were encountered throughout this sector, and enemy aircraft staged night raids in the area northeast of Lucca.

On the Adriatic front, although the entire coastal sector was quieter after the savage enemy counter-attacks of saturday, only small gains were reported by British and Indian forces at the inland end of the fiercely-defended 11-mile coastal corridor. These gains were all west or south of Gemmano, captured German stronghold eight miles inland.

T.A.F. BOMBERS HIT GOTH LINE

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 11 — Tactical Air Force medium bombers continued for the third successive day today their heavy attacks against the defenses of the enemy's Goth Line northeast and northwest of Florence, it was announced here late this afternoon.

In close support of 5th Army troops, which have taken over the central sectors of the front both to the northeast and northwest of Florence, Mitchell and Marauder bombers struck at enemy troop concentrations, supply areas, gun emplacements, and road and rail bridges, the Air Force announcement declared.

Anti-personnel bombs were mixed with high explosives in the attack supporting the 5th Army drive, which comes as 8th Army forces were fought to a temporary standstill on the Adriatic coast.

The bridges attacked are at Vigevano, 20 miles northeast of Florence, at Canneto, 60 miles southeast of Milan, and near Vergato, southwest of Bologna.

RAF Mustangs dealt one of their hardest blows at enemy forces yesterday when they wrecked nearly 1,500 tons of supplies on their way to the Goth Line, it was revealed tonight. The military equipment was destroyed in an attack on the Casarsa railway yards, northwest of Trieste, it was stated.

Tactical Air Force bombers yesterday bombed six rail bridges in the Po Valley, and attacked enemy strong-points, gun positions, troop concentrations, and communications in the battle areas, it was announced here today.

In attacks on rail routes, 19 locomotives and 130 railway cars were destroyed, and 18 motor trucks were hit in road assaults.

Balkan Air Force planes attacked bridges, shipping, and rail and road transport in Yugoslavia and Albania. Two enemy planes were shot down in these missions, while one other enemy fighter was destroyed over Italy. (PRO)

"REX" CAPSIZED AND BURNING

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 11 — The 51,000-ton Italian luxury liner Rex, battered and aflame from 120 rocket hits from RAF and Balkan Air Force Beaufighters, has capsized in shallow water off Capo d'Istria, it was announced here this afternoon.

The crack Italian liner, which the Germans had hoped to employ to block the entrance of Trieste Harbor, was lying on her port side, with decks awash, a reconnaissance pilot over the scene reported this morning. Although it was more than 48 hours after the attack, the giant ship was still burning, the pilot said. (PRO)

B.A.F. EVACUATES PARTISAN WOUNDED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 11 — Balkan Air Force planes have rescued 10,000 Partisan wounded, sick, and children in little over four months mercy service, it was announced here today.

The service has been maintained by both British and American flyers, acting in cooperation with Marshal Tito's forces. (PRO)

R.A.F. OPENS PARTISAN TRAINING SCHOOL

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 11 — The Royal Air Force has opened schools for training Yugoslavs of Marshal Tito's Partisan Forces to service and maintain military aircraft, it was announced here today.

The men, many of them Slovenians drafted into the Italian Army and taken prisoner, are being trained as a result of an agreement between Marshal Tito and the British Government signed in Cairo early this year. The most promising of the student Partisans are sent to flying schools, with option of joining the RAF or the Royal Yugoslav Air Force. (PRO)

CORDELL HULL WARNS AUSTRIA

WASHINGTON, September 11 — A warning to Austria that she will have to regenerate herself by actively aiding the United Nations' armies of liberation was made today by U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The time is almost up for Austria to prove herself a worthy member of the post-war world, Mr. Hull declared. Her efforts toward her own liberation will be taken into account when her status comes under consideration, he added. (PWB)

JAP DRIVE THREATENS SOUTH CHINA DEFENSES

CHUNGKING, September 11 — Strong Japanese forces have crossed the borders of Hunan Province and have taken the Cassia River town of Chuanhsien, in northern Kwangsi, thus threatening the vital stronghold of Kweilin, 67 miles to the south.

A communique from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters tonight said Jap convoys and bridgehead concentrations had been attacked by the 14th USAAF at the Chuanhsien ferry-crossing, giving the first indication that Jap forces had driven seven miles into Kwangsi Province territory, 25 miles southwest of their last reported position in Hunan.

The Stilwell communique said also that American bombers renewed their attacks on the Jap-held coastal areas around Amoy and Canton, where enemy air fields and supply bases protect the South China Sea approaches to the Philippines.

Meanwhile, American bombers, striking at Japanese communications lines in the strategically important Mandalay area, have smashed a span of the Kyaukse railway bridge south of the city, and have cut another bridge on a by-pass route to the west.

These attacks were apparently aimed at disrupting Jap supply lines running over the Burma Road route up from Rangoon into Yunnan Province, and into the Chindwin area to the west.

A communique from southeast Asia headquarters added today that other planes continued heavy bombing and strafing attacks in the Tiddim Road and Chindwin River areas, and in the Arakan region of the central Burmese coast, where the British 14th Army has begun a new offensive, despite heavy monsoon rains.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

The battle in Arakan is entering its fourth day, with reports of heavy enemy losses. Empire troops were said to be storming a strategic ridge commanding a broad stretch of Japanese-held territory. This front has been quiet for six months.

RAF long-range fighters yesterday carried out further attacks on Jap shipping lanes off the southern Burma coast. They damaged six cargo vessels and one gunboat, all of which were beached by the Japs. Several other vessels were strafed and badly shot up.

Catalina flying boats sank a 10,000-ton Japanese tanker near Samboanga on Mindanao Island in the southern Philippines on Friday, General MacArthur's communique said today.

Liberator bombers on the same day dropped a record load of 180 tons of bombs on Celebes, starting huge fires among Japanese defense installations and wrecking three parked planes at Langoan aerodrome.

Escorting Lightning fighters sank two small vessels.

Another flight of Liberators swept over the Banda Sea and destroyed or damaged five grounded Japanese planes in the Kai Islands, between Timor and New Guinea.

Continuing their neutralization of Halmahera Island, the southern stepping-stone to the Philippines, strong forces of Liberators, Mitchells, and Thunderbolts hammered installations. There was no aerial interception, but anti-aircraft fire was heavy.

Huge Airport

Honolulu's John Rogers Airport has been converted into the world's largest seaplane and airplane base in the world, wrote Christian Science Monitor correspondent John Beaufort, Friday. The airport is now capable of handling several hundred passengers daily, and in the current month will probably ship more than 100,000 pounds of air freight to the front line bases. As the Pacific war extends, Honolulu will carry more and more traffic. At present, the John Rogers Airport handles supplies for the entire Allied organisation through the Pacific with the exception of Alaska and the Aleutians.

Radio Chungking said Sunday that Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek gave a dinner Saturday in honor of U.S. Major General Patrick Hurley and Donald Nelson, President Roosevelt's personal emissaries, at his official residence in Chungking.

The broadcast said other guests included U.S. Ambassador Clarence Gauss, General Joseph Stilwell, Major General D.I. Sultan, Major General Thomas G. Hearn, Doctor T. V. Soong, and General Ho Ying Chin, Chinese Minister of War.

The dinner followed a two-day series of military conferences between Hurley and the Generalissimo and General Stilwell. Nelson, the radio said, held separate conferences with high Chinese officials on economic problems.

A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph in London Sunday reported that General Stilwell is to fly to the United States shortly to take part in a conference to plan the Allied offensive against Japan.

The dispatch quoted General Stilwell as saying before his departure that once the combined strength of the Allies is directed against Japan, after the defeat of Germany, nothing will be able to withstand it. (OWI–Reuter–BBC)

ROOSEVELT-CHURCHILL CONFERENCE BEGINS

QUEBEC, September 11 — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, accompanied by top government executives and heads of their military and naval staffs,

The conference which began today is the eighth in a long series of meetings between the Prime Minister and Mr. Roosevelt. Their first meeting was held aboard a British battleship in August, 1941. Two more conferences followed in Washington, in December of 1941, and in June, 1942. In August of last year, they held their first meeting in Quebec, and since that time have met in Casablanca, Teheran, and Cairo.

Among those in Mr. Roosevelt's conference group are General George Marshall, United States Army Chief of Staff; General Henry Arnold, Chief of the USAAF; Admiral Ernest King, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Fleet; Admiral William Leahy, the President's Chief of Staff, and Stephen Early, presidential secretary.

With Mr. Churchill are the British chiefs of staff: the First Sea Lord and Admiral of the Fleet, Sir Andrew Cunningham; Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, Chief of the Imperial General Staff; and Air Marshal Sir Charles Portal, of the RAF.

Reuter said tonight that British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull would probably join the conference during its later stages. Canadian Prime Minister Mackenzie King was also expected to take part in the discussions, along with Canadian chiefs of staff. (OWI)

CHURCHILL CROSSED ON TROOPSHIP

QUEBEC, September 11 — Prime Minister Churchill came to Canada on a troopship carrying wounded and furloughed American soldiers, it was disclosed here today.

ROOSEVELT-CHURCHILL CONFERENCE BEGINS

QUEBEC, September 11 — President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, accompanied by top government executives and heads of their military and naval staffs, began their conference on Asiatic and European war strategy here today.

Late Canadian dispatches said that Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt arrived shortly before the Prime Minister and were at the station to meet Mr. and Mrs. Churchill when their train arrived from Halifax.

Both the Prime Minister and Presidential Secretary Stephen Early revealed that the prime intention of the conference was to plot combined Anglo-American operations for the annihilation of the Jap war machine.

The Associated Press reported, while the Prime Minister was en route to Quebec, that Churchill had suggested the meeting to outline « Britain's intention to fulfill to the hilt her promise that Japan will be defeated utterly. » The AP said European war problems will also be discussed.

A Roosevelt-Churchill statement said tonight that Premier Stalin had been invited to attend the European side of the Allied talks, but that he had declined, « because Soviet armies were on the march. » Revealed as three distinct phases of the European problem on the conference agenda were: (1) The extent of military government to be imposed on Germany immediately after the defeat of her armies; (2) A Plan for ruling Europe between V-Day and the establishment of a permanent peace organization; (3) Economic rehabilitation of war-torn nations.

WORLD FREEDOM OF NEWS PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, September 11 — A proposal that all nations should join to guarantee world freedom of news as one means of preserving future peace has been drawn up here and may be submitted soon to the other United Nations.

The proposed policy, worked out by the State Department, is known to have been under consideration for some time. Persons high in the administration, congressmen, and other officials are known to have been deeply impressed by evidence from inside liberated Europe, and from German prisoners, of the extent to which the Nazis have been able to mislead people politically by poisoning their minds with « lying propaganda and half-truths. »

The final draft to be presented to the other United Nations is understood to cover two main points:

First, that newsmen should have the right to gather news wherever it develops or exists, and also to write and transmit it out of any country without hindrance.

CARDINAL OF FLORENCE PRAISES A.M.G.

FLORENCE, September 11 — Cardinal Della Costa, Archbishop of Florence, yesterday praised the work of the Allied Military Government in establishing a refugee center here almost immediately after the city's liberation and caring for more than 700 homeless citizens.

His Eminence was astonished when shown through the buildings of the Caserma dei Carabinieri in the Via Della Scala, which, in a period of six days, had been transformed from filth-laden buildings, partially destroyed by the fleeing Germans, into a sanitary, comfortable refugee center complete with kitchens, a hospital, and decent living quarters.

After touring the center, Cardinal Della Costa said that it "was most certainly an excellent example of the wonderful work being done by Allied Military Government among the people of Italy."

The Cardinal was escorted on his tour of inspection by Lieut Col. Thomas J. Michie, senior civil affairs officer of AMG, and Capt Richard C. Lambert, in civilian life a police detective in the city of Manchester, England. The Cardinal told press representatives:

"I have visited the Allied refugee center of Florence. I have admired the orderliness, the cleanliness, and the regularity of all arrangements. I have seen the kitchen, the hospital, and the schoolroom which has been transformed into a church. It is an excellent organization all over. The refugees have been spiritually assisted by the work of Father Francisco (the priest assigned to the center). To the Allied governments, I give my heartfelt thanks, and especially to Captain Lambert for establishing and operating this wonderful center."

The refugees, who have come to Florence from every section of Italy, themselves performed the work of cleaning up their temporary home and rebuilding and repairing the equipment destroyed by the Germans. They rebuilt the smashed ovens, cleaned up the debris in rooms where the Germans had exploded hand grenades, and put in order hallways torn up by the enemy.

Cooks were chosen from among the refugees. The meals are prepared with food furnished by the Allies and include flour, pasta, sausage meat, milk, ben scan, and bread. The refugees have also established their own barber shop. There is a dispensary and hospital staffed by Florence doctors and medical students, in addition to professional nurses and several Italian Red Cross volunteers.

Colonel Michie said that all refugee camps established by the Allied armies were run on a principle of self-help. He added: "We operate in such way as to help the people to help themselves. Those refugees in the Florence center have done just that, and deserve the highest praise for their cooperation." (UNN) and south sides of the Arno were destroyed by the Germans. Also destroyed were the hotels Grande Brittania and Arno.

FLORENCE, September 11 — From under the rubble of German-blasted buildings flanking the 10th-Century Ponte Vecchio, workmen today extricated the first group of

Not a single possession except the clothes they were wearing was saved by the citizens who lost their homes. When they were ordered to leave by the Germans on the night of July 30, they were forbidden to take anything with them. The Germans told them that they were being evacuated temporarily for your own safety because the British are about to shell the city."

Immediately after the people left their homes, the Germans began systematic looting. During the night of August 3, the buildings were blown up by electrically-controlled mines set by German engineers. One death resulted. An 80-year-old invalid, forgotten in the evacuation, was buried in the debris on the south bank. (UNN)

MANUSCRIPTS BURIED BY GERMANS RESCUED

FLORENCE, September 11 — From under the rubble of German-blasted buildings flanking the 10th-Century Ponte Vecchio, workmen today extricated the first group of 3,000 priceless books and manuscripts from the 13th and 14th centuries, part of the famous Colombaria Society collection.

The building housing the Colombaria collection was one of the 25 buildings flanking the Ponte Vecchio on either side of the Arno which the Germans destroyed when they «spared» the Ponte Vecchio, which is the only one of Florence's six bridges which they did not blast. Instead, they blew up the buildings to block the Ponte Vecchio's approaches.

In lieu of destroying the bridge, they looted and destroyed the living quarters of about 2,000 Florentines, destroyed part of the Pisa collection of ceramic art, valued at about 50,000 dollars, and buried the Colombaria collection of irreplaceable books and manuscripts.

Fifteen expert workmen from Florence's Department of Monuments, Arts and Letters have been digging for nearly a week under the direction of Captain Edward Croft-Murray of the Allied Control Commission's Fine Arts Section. Captain Croft-Murray is on leave from the British Museum's Prints and Drawings section.

A volunteer art expert, Mario Bellini, is supervising the work for the city of Florence, and is being assisted by two architecture students, Bruno Peducti and Renato Baldi.

FORMER LEIPZIG MAYOR SENTENCED TO HANG

LONDON, September 11 — Dr. Karl Goerdeler, the former Mayor of Leipzig, accused of taking part in the plot of July 10 to kill Hitler, is one of seven people sentenced to hanging by the Nazi People's Court, the German Overseas News Agency said today.

The other six are: Ulrich von Hassell, former German Ambassador to Italy; Count Helldorf, former police president of Berlin, and Reichstag deputy; Wilhelm Leuchner, former Minister of the Interior of the Province of Hessen; Trott Zu Solz, former counsellor in the German Foreign Office; Paul Lejeune, a former member of the Reichstag, and Josef Wirmer, a lawyer.

Karl Goerdeler, who vanished on July 20, the day of the bomb explosion at Hitler's headquarters, and who was arrested after a reward of 1,000,000 marks had been offered, was to have been Chancellor in a new German government to be set up by the plotters, according to the German News Agency. Leuchner was to have been Vice-Chancellor; Von Hassell, Foreign Minister; Lejeune, Industrial Minister; and Wirmer, Minister of Justice, said the Nazi Agency.

AFHQ, September 11 — Today's communique.

Allied Armies in Italy:

North of Florence, large advances have been made by both British and American troops. British troops are now approaching the town of Dicomano, and west of this town they have reached the upper Sieve. North of Florence American troops of the 5th Army have made a wide advance northward from the Doubs River, and are now on the line of this river with patrols across into the high ground, where they are within three miles of the main Goth Line positions.

Farther west 5th Army troops have made further big gains, clearing the important cities of Prato and Pistoia, and are proceeding up to the high ground toward the Goth Line. North of Lucca, American patrols are already in contact with the forward positions of this line.

British and Indian troops of the 8th Army continue to push forward against determined enemy resistance in the high ground on the left of the Adriatic sector.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forces have further narrowed the enemy escape corridor in eastern France by scoring important northward advances over a front of approximately 100 miles.

French forward elements have driven forward to the outskirts of Dijon against weakening resistance, and farther on have reached the vicinity of Seurre.

American troops have made a wide advance northward toward the Doubs River in the roughly parallel line of the Ognon River, liberating a substantial additional area.

French troops south of Belfort between the Doubs and the Swiss border have been meeting with stubborn opposition.

Last night, medium and heavy bombers attacked the rail yards at Milan.

In these operations, three enemy aircraft were destroyed. Twenty-one of ours are missing.

MAAF flew over 1,700 sorties.

It is now known that in operations of 8 September, four enemy aircraft were destroyed, and one additional aircraft has been reported missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 11 — Today's communique:

The city of Luxembourg has been liberated by Allied forces advancing toward the Moselle.

Northwest of Nancy, our troops are in the northern part of Liverdun.

Further north in the Ardennes, we are at Neufchateau, 22 miles northeast of Sedan. Allied units are along the Ourthe River in the area east of Marche, and elements have moved east of Saint Hubert.

Southeast of Liège, our troops are in the vicinity of Theux, and enemy resistance has increased in the area immediately to the southeast. Northwest of Liège, our forces have occupied Rem Court, and have reached Hex, seven miles southeast of Saint Trond.

Stiff enemy opposition continues in our Albert Canal bridgeheads.

Enemy resistance at Ghent has been overcome, and our troops are in possession of the town.

Ostend and Nieuport have been cleared of the enemy, and the coast between Ostend and Furnes is in our hands.

In Brittany, house-to-house fighting is in progress on the outskirts of Brest. The German commander at Lochrist has surrendered, but isolated enemy troops continue to resist in the area. Resistance also continues on the Crozon Peninsula, which forms part of the southern shores of the Bay of Brest. HMS Warspite and HMS Erebus yesterday subjected the defenses of Le Havre to a heavy bombardment in support of ground operations. The attack against the garrison and fortified positions at Le Havre was also continued yesterday morning, afternoon, and evening by heavy bombers. Visibility was excellent, and the bombing was highly concentrated.

Fighters and fighter-bombers gave support to the ground forces and attacked locomotives and motor transport in the Low Countries, barges in Holland, and the airfield at Leeuwarden.

Coastal Command aircraft attacked enemy shipping in the North Sea between the Hook of Holland and Ameland.

During the night, light bombers attacked motor transport, a bridge, and a train in Holland, and small surface vessels near Flushing. (Reuter)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ROME, September 11 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the western Alps, strong enemy contingents are attempting to force their way through the road barriers placed there by Patriots to impede the enemy, especially in the Val d'Aosta sector. New German reinforcements were called out.

In Val Stura Demonte, Patriots pushed beyond the French frontier, where they joined Allied forces in spite of German efforts to block the frontier. The enemy has been compelled to admit the importance of these operations in an official communique.

The insurrectional movement has spread to the interior of Piedmont.

Patriots destroyed the draft lists in many sectors. At Nizza Monferrato, Patriots distributed food reserves that had been requisitioned by the Nazi-Fascists, and executed several spies.

At Algiano, in Aosta Province, Patriot forces derailed a train of German supplies.

At Verbano, numerous German soldiers deserted, while soldiers of Polish and Slav origin gave themselves up to Patriot groups, turning over their arms and munitions and asking to be enrolled in Patriot ranks.

At Candoglia, on the Simplone line, Patriots stopped a train and freed 150 Polish prisoners.

At Mergozzo a German garrison of 35 surrendered to Patriots. Their example was followed by garrisons in the Fondo-Toce and Omegna sectors. This latter garrison numbered 100, mostly Germans.

In the Veneto sector the Germans are even forcing groups of prisoners of war to fight.

In Treviso Province the Germans lost in recent fighting approximately 300 dead, in addition to many prisoners and much war booty.

In Vicenza Province, the enemy took revenge on the civilian population by deporting the workers among them to Germany.

Patriots blew up a bridge near Pallanza, the Milan-Domodossola railway, which was working even after the recent acts of sabotage at Arona. All traffic has been suspended. Numerous cars of war material for Germany remained immobilized.

In Piacenza Province, a brigade of Patriots of the Emilia Region raid a military depot at Momeliano, seizing great quantities of arms and munitions. The Fascist garrison, overwhelmed, surrendered.

Patriots attacked the Fascist Party headquarters at Arzenato, in Bologna Province, blowing up the building which had been prepared for defence. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, 11 September — The High Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the Bruges sector, as well as in the area northwest of Hasselt, our combat units frustrated all enemy attempts to widen the bridgeheads across the Albert Canal. At the penetration point of Beringen, German parachutists launched a surprise attack against the British flank, destroying one great transport column, loaded to capacity, and blowing up ammunition and fuel depots. In this sector alone, 32 British tanks were knocked out, mainly by light and medium weapons, during the past few days. Bitter fighting with the enemy, attempting to push further Northward with his armored units, is here still in progress.

The enemy is advancing on a wide front, toward the Verviers-Metz line, engaging our rear-guards. Numerous attacks were repelled.

Strong enemy attacks against the land front of the fortress of Le Havre were repulsed during the day and at night. Only after fierce fighting and serious losses, the enemy succeeded in achieving a small penetration, which immediately was sealed.

South of the Mont Cenis and at Moddilena Pass, our troops secured mountain positions of high military importance.

Along the English coast and in the Channel, German U-boats destroyed 11 enemy ships totaling 43,000 BRT, as well as one destroyer, one corvette, and one mine-sweeper. Three more transport ships, and one destroyer, were heavily damaged by torpedo hits. Part of these ships can be regarded as lost.

Six enemy fighter-bombers were shot down over the German Bay and in the Mediterranean, by escort vessels of the Fleet.

On the Italian south front, our disengaging movements [illegible] formations. Thanks to the stubborn resistance of army units and formations of Waffen SS the enemy's onslaught failed. Northwest of Ostrolenka, strong Soviet attacks were also repulsed. Some penetration points were sealed by counter-attack.

In the far north, numerous enemy attacks were frustrated in the Kandalaksha sector. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

During the night, bomber and night-fighter formations successfully attacked Soviet supply traffic in the Baltic front area.

Enemy terror bombers launched new attacks against southwestern and southeast Germany. Especially hard hit were the cities of Ulm, Heilbronn, Stuttgart, Nuernberg, and Vienna.

Forty-five enemy planes, including 29 four-engined bombers, were shot down. During the night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Berlin. (Radio Berlin)

Croatia: Wadroslav Wesse reports from Zagreb that «the Reuter report, according to which the Croat chief of state, Dr. Pavelitch, was arrested and delivered to Tito, was officially denounced on Monday evening as an incredible lie.»

Western Front: The correspondent Max Knut writes: «The battle for France is gradually settling down along a consolidated German defence line. However, this fact reveals nothing definite regarding a new defence line. The Allies are trying to dislodge the German defence system before it can come into full effect. It cannot yet be said that the fighting in the Liege, Metz, and Belfort areas is already of decisive importance. But it may be assumed that the defence system is sufficiently elastic and deep. The fighting at the gateway to Burgundy deserves interest, because the enemy there evidently aims at entering the plain along the upper Rhine and blocking the road of the retreating German 19th Army.»

Eastern Front: «In the south Carpathians and Transylvania, new attacks may be established.» There is heavy fighting in the Krosno-Sanok area and between the Narev and Bug.

A Tremendous Trap: The position of the Allied armies in France is becoming critical. They are wholly dependent on beachheads, as they have no ports at their disposal. Their lines are so far away from their advanced posts, and their armies are moving in a territory which, depending upon supplies from overseas and from across the Channel, will be transformed into a tremendous trap, once the German counter-offensive has started.

A Missed Opportunity: Corrado Zoli strongly criticizes the Allied Command for having missed their unique chance of sending the 3rd Army, with its powerful armor, in a southwestern direction, and cutting off the German 19th Army. The Allied Command, writes Corrado Zoli, preferred the illusory prospect of advancing into Germany to a less glamorous, but far more serious move of destroying a large German force.

Western Front: The correspondent Max Krull writes: «The battle for France is gradually settling down along a consolidated German defence line. However, this fact reveals nothing definite regarding a new defence line. The Allies are trying to dislodge the German defence system before it can come into full effect. It cannot yet be said that the fighting in the Liege, Metz, and Belfort areas is already of decisive importance. But it may be assumed that the defence system is sufficiently elastic and deep. The fighting at the gateway to Burgundy deserves interest, because the enemy there evidently aims at entering the plain along the upper Rhine and blocking the road of the retreating German 19th Army.»

Eastern Front: «In the South Carpathians and Transylvania, new attacks may be established.» There is heavy fighting in the Krosno-Sanok area and between the Narev and Bug.

FASCIST RADIO

A Tremendous Trap: The position of the Allied armies in France is becoming critical. They are wholly dependent on beachheads, as they have no ports at their disposal. Their bases are so far away from their advanced posts, and their armies are moving in a territory which, depending upon supplies from overseas and from across the Channel, will be transformed into a tremendous trap, once the German counter-offensive has started.

A Missed Opportunity: Corrado Zoli strongly criticizes the Allied Command for having missed their unique chance of sending the 3rd Army, with its powerful armor, in a southwestern direction, and cutting off the German 19th Army. The Allied Command, writes Corrado Zoli, preferred the illusory prospect of advancing into Germany to a less glamorous, but far more serious move of destroying a large German force.

Counter-Offensive in Italy: German grenadiers in determined hand-to-hand attacks pressed back the Allied armies, capturing and destroying great quantities of war material. Out of 1,200 tanks, deployed by the British in their offensive, more than half have now been destroyed.

Time is Up: The early beginning of autumn rains brings to an end the summer of 1944. With the passing of the summer, we see also the end of all Allied hopes to bring the war to a victorious end. The Allies' time is up.

WAR FRONTS

BRITISH MAKE SECOND CROSSING ALBERT CANAL

SHAEF, September 9 — The British 2nd Army has forced another crossing over the Albert Canal at Gheel, 25 miles east of Antwerp, it was reported late tonight. The main battle, however, is around Bourg Leopold, about five miles north of the first bridgehead at Beeringen.

The Germans have brought up every man they could spare from Holland to hold this vital strip of water, the main line of their defense in Belgium, in order to hold the Allied advance to the Reich and give time to prepare and man frontier defenses. The Germans have dug in along a line of high ground commanding the flat country for five miles beyond the first crossing point.

It is a battle of bridges, pontoons, and amphibious operations against 88-millimeter guns and tanks. The build-up of Allied forces for the battle presents some difficulties, as Allied supply lines stretch hundreds of miles to the Normandy beaches.

Army is now in a position to build pontoon bridges for heavy armor.

The Germans, precipitating their first full-scale battle since the American break-through in Normandy, threw major forces against the bridgeheads, but were repulsed. One attack with armor was smashed in the Thionville area, 15 miles from the borders of the Saar industrial region.

An Associated Press dispatch stated that more than 700 prisoners were taken in the first few hours of the counter-attack. The Germans are rushing reinforcements to their Siegfried Line, but there are no reports of German armor's being sent into action in any strength. The problem of where to send reinforcements must be a serious one for the Germans, as Allied forces are in a position to attack anywhere along a 200-mile front. The problem is aggravated by Allied air attacks on transport and rail centers.

Involved in the heavy fighting from the Moselle to Liege to Bourg Leopold is the biggest Allied fighting force ever assembled. In the first 28 days following the Normandy landing, over a million men debarked in France and they have been steadily moving in since then.

A sky train of C-47 transports brought in gasoline two days ago, for General Patton's trucks, prime movers, jeeps, and armor. The cargo craft landed on forward air strips to supplement the flow of gasoline going over the constantly lengthening highway supply line from the Normandy beaches.

An American radio correspondent in France stated that a German chemical warfare depot with a large supply of poison gas was captured in the Nancy sector. It was believed, however, to be there for training purposes only.

1st Army Attacks

General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army, east of Namur, attacked with armor and infantry along the Meuse River where it turns south from the city. German resistance was slight, with scattered pockets of machine-gun nests and artillery.

To the northeast, American infantry columns have spread several miles beyond the Meuse from Liege and are now in Ronsore, 17 miles from Germany. (The German News Agency said tonight that Allied troops were in the area of Verviers.)

The two Belgian ports of Antwerp and Ostend will soon be in working order, and investigation has shown that the lock gates at Antwerp are undamaged. The port, however, cannot be used until German escape routes at the mouth of the river have been cleared.

Polish troops are fighting to the north of Ghent, and the Germans holding out there are using the town's power station as a strong-point. South of Ghent, RAF planes destroyed 300 to 400 horse-drawn vehicles trying to break out of the coastal pocket.

There is little news of the progress of the Allied siege of the German garrison holding out at Brest, far west of the main battle line. German prisoners taken in the area report that a mutiny has been beaten down in the garrison. A number of officers on the staff of General Hermann Bernhard Ramcke, German commandant, had planned to

50,000 Aimless Germans

After the rapid Allied advance from France into Belgium, with its by-passing of large groups of German troops, it has been estimated that 50,000 Germans are roaming about in disorganized groups. Last night, a desperate attempt was made by one group to break out of the coastal pocket between Dunkirk and Ostend. The attack was directed across the Allied rear between Lille and Ghent, and threatened Allied communications. After a fierce battle, which lasted all night, the attack was repulsed.

Heavy fighting has developed in the coastal area, where the Germans are being steadily pressed back into diminishing pockets. At Boulogne and Calais, the German garrisons, apparently intending to fight to the last, are now well hemmed in by vigorous Allied patrols pushing toward the sea. All roads leading to the ports have been cut off or are under Allied control. Patrols are reported at Loon Plages, on the main Dunkirk-Calais road.

Along the Moselle River, the German line of defense is slowly crumbling under merciless pounding by American artillery and the penetrations by American infantry. With infantry on both sides of the river, General Patton's 3rd Army is being sent into action in [illegible] to send reinforcements must be a serious one for the Germans, as Allied forces are in a position to attack anywhere along a 200-mile front. CANADIANS CROSS OSTEND-GHENT CANAL AMERICANS ADVANCE 15 MILES

SHAEF, September 9 — Canadian troops who liberated Ostend have cut the canal between Ostend and Ghent, and have established a bridgehead on the northern bank, it was reported late tonight.

American troops, advancing southeast of Givet, have reached St. Hubert in a 15 mile drive.

Planes of the Tactical Air Force today attacked German troops attempting to cross the Scheldt Estuary. Devastation has reached proportions comparable with that suffered by German troops crossing the Seine. Rocket-firing Typhoons attacked waterborne traffic of all descriptions attempting to cross this river, « Dunkirk. » (Reuter)

ALLIED HEAVIES BOMB RUHR AND RHINELAND

LONDON, September 9 — German rail and industrial targets near Mainz and Mannheim on the Rhine, and at Duesseldorf and elsewhere in the Ruhr, were attacked today by more than 1,000 Flying Fortresses and Liberators of the 9th USAAF.

Some of the bombing was visual, and some by means of instruments.

Twenty-three bombers and four fighters were lost, said a USAAF communique tonight. No enemy aircraft was encountered.

This latest attack against the western outposts of Germany followed a swift and concentrated attack on Nuremberg by RAF Mosquito squadrons last night. They dropped 4,000-pounders and left fires burning which could be seen 60 miles away. All planes returned safely.

Thunderbolts and Lightnings of the 9th USAAF were also out last night, bombing and strafing Brest following an attack on the besieged fortress earlier in the day. Aircraft of the same command operated in central France in the area of Bourges, Chateauroux, and Charite. At Brest, there was no AA fire, air crews said. All guns were directed against Allied ground troops.

Rockets over Germany

Although rain and mist shrouded the Low Countries and western Germany yesterday, Allied fighter-bombers maintained the offensive against German troop movements and communications. During these operations, RAF Typhoons fired the first rockets to be unloosed over Germany. American Mustangs and Thunderbolts knocked out 18 enemy planes on airfields in western Germany and wrecked 173 rail cars and 73 locomotives. Ten U.S. fighter-bombers failed to return to Britain, although some were believed to have landed at French forward aerodromes.

A BBC correspondent reported that a Spitfire squadron on a dawn patrol knocked out a number of German midget submarines off the Normandy coast Thursday. Allied naval headquarters last night announced the destruction of more than 300 German naval craft, including about 100 «human torpedoes» and explosive motorboats, along the coast of France since D-day.

One German flying-bomb landed at a point in the Paris basin within 40 miles of the capital yesterday, killing at least four persons and injuring 12. It was the second flying-bomb attack on Paris this week.

The accuracy of Allied visual bombing is evidenced by the twisted and burned-out storage tanks, gutted buildings, and shattered transport of what were once two of the most important oil installations in the Paris area, a BUP correspondent wrote. These two targets at Gennevilliers were bombed by 72 Fortresses of the 8th USAAF on June 22.

MARTIAL LAW DECLARED IN S. W. FRANCE

LONDON, September 9 — Martial law has been declared in the departments of Gironde, Landes, and Basses Pyrenees, in southwestern France, because of the danger from German troops, the British United Press reported tonight. The decree was ordered by the Commissioner of the French Republic in accordance with military authorities.

One division of German troops is believed to be in the Bordeaux area, the dispatch stated, adding that German soldiers in civilian clothes and members of Darnand's militia are still at liberty, and are a threat to the French population.

The V-4 was a high-speed motor launch filled with huge explosive. Its crews set their course for Allied merchant ships, which were anchored off the beaches in groups of 300 to 400.

Aircraft, bombs, and cannon-fire, coupled with anti-aircraft guns, destroyed the incoming V-4's. (OWI)

OCCUPATION OF GERMANY URGED BY PERSHING

WASHINGTON, September 9 — General John J. Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Force in the last war, urged military occupation of Germany «for a definite period» after the end of the war, the U. S. Army and Navy Journal said in an editorial paying tribute to General Pershing as he nears his 84th birthday on September 13.

The military journal said:

«From his eminence of achievement, and with the clarity of vision which he possesses, General Pershing sees but one end to the war — total German defeat.»

The article said that the campaign being waged in Europe today is the same that General Pershing planned back in 1918, when he forced the Allies to abandon trench warfare for an open attack on German positions. General Pershing wanted to march troops into Berlin at the end of the last war, the editorial said. (OWI)

PARIS, September 9 — General Eisenhower called on General Pierre Koenig yesterday and decorated him with the insignia of commander of the Legion of Merit, one of the highest American awards, Radio Paris reported today. (Reuter)

FRENCH NAVY STILL HAS 300 SHIPS

LONDON, September 9 — The French Minister for the Navy, M Jacquinot, stated today that the French Navy still has some 300 ships, in spite of everything it has suffered.

Some of these ships have been completely modernized, he said, and added that there were 3,000 officers and 50,000 ratings fully trained by four years of fighting. (OWI)

U. S. APPOINTS PARIS CONSUL

WASHINGTON, September 9 — Gerald A. Drew of San Francisco, California, has been named the first American Consul to liberated Paris, the State Department announced today.

20,000 VICHY OFFICIALS OUT OF WORK

WASHINGTON, September 9 — Vichy, capital of collaborationist France, is a gloomy, nervous ward of the FFI today, cabled a United Press correspondent from Vichy today. There are 20,000 idle Vichy officials there and 60 isolated friendly and enemy diplomats awaiting the arrival of the Allied armies.

Pétain, said the correspondent, sought to surrender to the FFI at the last minute, but was taken prisoner by the Germans.

Radio Paris announced today that General de Gaulle, at a meeting of his council, reviewed the military situation, and said that the recent great successes of the Allied forces did not exclude the possibility of new and hard tests before final victory.

Approval was given by the council to the emergency measures suggested in respect of the return of Frenchmen now detained in Germany. A commission was constituted to study the allowances and aid which have to be distributed to the families of deported persons.

VON KLUGE DEATH, ROMMEL INJURY CONFIRMED

WITH THE BRITISH 2ND ARMY, BELGIUM, September 9 — A Nazi general confirmed for his British captors here today the story of the death of German General Guenther von Kluge, commander of the Reich's 7th Army that was cut apart and annihilated in the rout from the Falaise Pocket to the Seine. He confirmed also that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had been badly wounded.

Reuter quoted the captured general as saying that von Kluge spent 24 hours of hell in the Falaise Pocket, under Allied aerial and artillery bombardment, and that he died of wounds received during his ordeal in the trap. General von Kluge was said to have found orders dismissing him from his command when he returned to headquarters. He died shortly after boarding a train for Germany.

Rommel was said to be convalescing at Kreudetalt. His captured fellow-general said the former Wehrmacht field commander probably would be fit to take the field again in three or four months.

V-1 SECRET WEAPON WAS EXPLOSIVE MOTORBOAT

LONDON, September 9 — An explosive motorboat, launched in scores against Allied shipping unloading on the Normandy beaches, was Germany's V-4 weapon, a Daily Express reporter stated today.

Allied naval defenses smashed this threat, destroying more than 100 of the explosive boats and of the V-2, the one-man torpedo, the dispatch stated.

Pershing wanted to march troops into Berlin at the end of the last war, the editorial said. (OWI)

The Paris Prefect of Police has announced the arrest of a group of theatrical, financial, journalistic, and other celebrities, including the French quislings who were said to have amassed an illicit fortune of 10,000,000 dollars while operating with the German Gestapo.

Among those arrested, the Prefect announced, were the Vichy Supply Minister, Max Bonnafoux, called «The Starver,» by the French, and the Vichy Colonial Minister, Jules Brevie, a close friend of Pétain's.

A gold cache was found buried in a garden. It was said to have been acquired while the Germans ostensibly were smuggling funds out of France for other persons.

EISENHOWER PAYS TRIBUTE TO BELGIANS

«I know that I can count on your cooperation to hasten the day of complete liberation of your country. In anew where the military operation is in progress, the supreme responsibility and executive power will be assumed by myself for reasons of military expediency.

"Your local government will, however, enact and make known its own laws."

General Eisenhower appealed to the Belgians to assist in the restoration of law, order, and discipline. Everything possible will be done, said General Eisenhower, to "insure supplies being brought into the country, subject to military priority." (BBC)

NORWEGIAN PATRIOTS CAUTIONED

LONDON, September 9 — Norwegian Patriots have been warned against premature action in a broadcast by an officer in the Norwegian Supreme Command, it was reported here today.

The broadcast said:

"The French Forces of the Interior achieved their successes because they were influenced only by rational military considerations, and acted on the instruction of the Allied Supreme Commander. Had the rising occurred on D-day, it would probably have been a catastrophe."

Stating that the patience and discipline of the FFI should be imitated, and that the position in Norway differs as there are now no regular military operations, the broadcast declared:

"The Norwegian Home Forces will be given important tasks when the country is being liberated. They must not spoil their chances by premature action. We shall need these intact, and as well-trained and hardened as possible."

NAZIS REPORT PANIC IN NORWAY

ALLIES ADVANCE IN ALL SECTORS OF S. E. FRANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 9 — After two days of fighting, French forces cracked enemy resistance yesterday to continue their drive northward and west of the Saône River, reaching Beaune, some 23 miles south of Dijon, as American troops on the right broke through the German defenses at Besançon to advance more than 10 miles northeast in the direction of Belfort. Meanwhile, other French units on the extreme right flank made further progress between the Doubs River and the Swiss border, occupying the Jura Mountain towns of Pierrefontaine and Maiche, less than five miles from the border.

Reaching Beaune and Autun, a town of some 11,600 population 43 miles southwest of Dijon, the French cleared and occupied several towns on the way, including Larreusol, with a population of 2,000, well known as the seat of the Schneider Metallurgical Works with a normal annual output capacity of about 30,000 tons of steel. Other towns taken in this march were Chagny and Montchanin les Mines.

The Germans fought fiercely all along the line running from Montchanin to Chagny and Beaune, in an attempt to protect their flank of columns retreating from the area of Autun toward Dijon. In the Besançon area, where enemy opposition was last reported stiffening, American forces smashed the heavy opposition to clear Besançon and advance northeast to the vicinity of Roulans le Grand, on the Doubs River. Attempting to delay the occupation of Besançon and its surrounding areas, the Germans fought desperately, using small arms, mortar, and machine-gun fire, supported by tanks and self-propelled guns.

Southwest of Besançon, American troops penetrated the German defenses into the Forêt de Chaux and reached the

F.F.I. TO JOIN REGULAR FRENCH ARMY

LONDON, September 9 — French Forces of the Interior have captured a number of towns lying within the Poitiers-Limoges-Bordeaux-La Rochelle square. The best known of the places they have taken are Angoulême, Melle, Confolens, Civray, Sainte, and Barbezieux. In the Loire Valley, FFI have taken Saumur in cooperation with American troops.

In the Doubs area, between the Belfort Gap and the Swiss frontier, the Maquis are showing great activity and are being reinforced from other departments.

Since August 15, D-day in the south of France landings, and up to September 4, the FFI killed 5,899 German officers and men, killed or wounded 7,593, wounded 778, and took 32,819 prisoner. The number of German troops put out of action by the FFI in southern France thus totals 47,089.

Completely disorganized German troops are now fleeing from Strasbourg after abandoning their arms and evading their officers, the Swiss paper Basler Arbeiter Zeitung said Wednesday. Both civilian and army refugees are being picked up by the Berlin and Hamburg expresses from Switzerland, which were re-routed by way of Strasbourg instead of via Karlsruhe.

Sweden's Aftonbladet reported from Berne that the German authorities have ordered the complete evacuation of the western bank of the Rhine, which includes the large industrial centers of Cologne, Bonn, and Coblenz. The paper said that the roads leading to the Rhine are crowded with refugees and lorries carrying Nazi documents.

The incorporation of the FFI into the regular French Army has now begun, Andre Diethelm, De Gaulle's War Minister, announced during a tour of FFI barracks in Paris. They will be incorporated into the regular army on equal terms with other units, and FFI officers will retain their present rank after transfer. (OWI - Reuter)

SOVIETS CAPTURE BURGAS, SHUMEN IN BULGARIA

MOSCOW, September 9 — Soviet forces in Lithuania today crossed the border into East Prussia and returned with prisoners.

In the south, Russia's two-day campaign in Bulgaria has ended with the Soviet conquest of the big Black Sea port of Burgas, and the occupation of the communications center of Shumen, after advances averaging over 50 miles a day.

In Rumania, Soviet forces have penetrated deeper into northern Transylvania in a number of sectors, and occupied Targul Sacuesk, Alba Julia, and more than 100 populated places.

These are the main event on the eastern front as reported in tonight's Soviet communique.

The whole German defense in the Carpathians is now enclosed in a "deep sack," the Soviet military commentator, Colonel A. Karpov, declared today. In western Rumania, Soviet troops have reached areas located on almost the same meridians as areas where the Red Army is operating in the northern Carpathians. [The German News Agency reported today that the Russians had launched a new offensive in the areas of Przemysl and Krosno in the Polish Carpathians, and were using tanks on a massive scale.]

South of the Danube, in two days' fighting, troops of the 3rd Ukrainian front captured over 21,000 Bulgarian prisoners. More than 4,000 German prisoners were taken at Ruschuk.

A special order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin to General Tolbukhin and Admiral Oktyabersky on the two-day campaign in Bulgaria announced the occupation of Varna and Burgas by Soviet land and naval forces and the capture of Shumen and Ruschuk (Rusé), and ordered victorious units to take the names of Ruschuk, Shumen, Varna, and Burgas.

Reaching Beaune and Autun, a town of some 11,600 population 43 miles southwest of Dijon, the French cleared and occupied several towns on the way, including Le Creusot, with a population of 22,000 well known as the seat of the Schneider Metallurgical Works with a normal annual output capacity of about 20,000 tons of steel. Other towns taken in this march were Chagny and Montchanin les Mines.

The Germans fought fiercely all along the line running from Montchanin to Chagny and Beaune, in an attempt to protect their flank of columns retreating from the area of Autun toward Dijon. In the Besancon area, where enemy opposition was last reported stiffening, American forces smashed the heavy opposition to clear Besancon and advance northeast to the vicinity of Roulans le Grand, on the Doubs River. Attempting to delay the occupation of Besancon and its surrounding areas, the Germans fought desperately, using small arms, mortar, and machine-gun fire, supported by tanks and self-propelled guns.

Southwest of Besancon, American troops penetrated the German defenses into the Forêt de Chaux and reached the banks of the Doubs River east of Dole.

Farther south, in the Alps, a new flare up of fighting has occurred at Briancon, near the Mt. Genevre Pass. Earlier in the campaign, our forces had occupied this place, but were forced to withdraw 10 days ago by superior enemy forces.

With the death of Major General Schmidt, who was killed on September 6, and the capture of Brigadier General Paul von Felbert, the number of German generals killed or captured in southeastern France has been raised to eight, it was stated today.

ADMIRAL CUNNINGHAM VISITS SOUTHERN FRANCE

ADVANCE AHFQ, September 9 — Admiral Sir John Cunningham, Commander-in-Chief, Mediterranean, flying his flag in the cruiser Ajax, has just visited the beachhead area in southern France, it was announced today.

He was accompanied by Vice Admiral H. Kent Hewitt, naval commander of the western task force, and Admiral Lemonnier, chief of staff of the French Navy.

They made a thorough examination of the whole port area, inspecting Marseilles and the French naval base at Toulon.

SOVIETS CAPTURE BURGAS, SHUMEN IN BULGARIA

MOSCOW, September 9 — Soviet forces in Lithuania today crossed the border into East Prussia and returned with prisoners.

In the south, Russia's two-day campaign in Bulgaria has ended with the Soviet conquest of the big Black Sea port of Burgas and the occupation of the communications center of Shumen, after advances averaging over 50 miles a day.

In Rumania, Soviet forces have penetrated deeper into northern Transylvania in a number of sectors, and occupied Targul Secuesk, Alba Julia, and more than 100 populated places.

These are the main events on the eastern front as reported in tonight's Soviet communique.

The whole German defense in the Carpathians is now enclosed in a "deep sack," the Soviet military commentator, Colonel A. Karpov, declared today. In western Rumania, Soviet troops have reached areas located on almost the same meridians as areas where the Red Army is operating in the northern Carpathians. [The German News Agency reported today that the Russians had launched a new offensive in the areas of Przemysl and Krosno in the Polish Carpathians, and were using tanks on a massive scale.]

South of the Danube, in two days' fighting, troops of the 3rd Ukrainian front captured over 21,000 Bulgarian prisoners. More than 4,000 German prisoners were taken at Ruschuk.

A special order of the day issued by Marshal Stalin to General Tolbukhin and Admiral Oktyabersky on the two-day campaign in Bulgaria announced the occupation of Varna and Burgas by Soviet land and naval forces and the capture of Shumen and Ruschuk inland, and ordered victorious units to take the names of Ruschuk, Shumen, Varna, and Burgas.

Patrols in East Prussia

Russian patrols which crossed into East Prussia returned with prisoners. They crossed the Szeszupe River border between Lithuania and East Prussia. Dispatches from here speak of heavy Russian concentrations ready to strike in this area.

Meanwhile, Soviet troops in Poland are overcoming savage German resistance and are steadily gaining ground on the eastern bank of the River Narew, in the vicinity of Ostrolenka, within 30 miles of the Polish frontier with East Prussia. The Germans have brought up numbers of their new "Royal Tiger" tanks to the front southwest of Lomza, the last German stronghold before the frontier, and are throwing in Luftwaffe squadrons in a bid to support their counter-attacks, Radio Moscow said. "Our troops find that Royal Tigers burn in just the same way as ordinary tigers, panthers, and the rest."

General Bor, comandder-in-chief of the Polish Home Army, said that the noise of the distant battle east of Warsaw can now be heard in the city. "Fighting continues in Warsaw and on the west bank of the Vistula River," his communique stated. In the Warsaw suburb of Zoliberz, the initiative remains with the Polish troops.

In the reconnoitering of a continuous 2½-mile front line to the north and northeast of the suburb of Marymont, Hungarian and Ukrainian troops were identified as fighting in enemy relief units.

RUSSIANS CEASE HOSTILITIES AGAINST BULGARIA ALLIES WORKING OUT ARMISTICE TERMS

MOSCOW, September 9 — Soviet troops ceased military operations against Bulgaria at 2200 hours tonight (Moscow time), and Russia, Great Britain, and the United States are «at this moment figuring out terms for the Bulgarian armistice,» Radio Moscow said tonight, quoting a special announcement from the Soviet Commissariat of Foreign Affairs.

Marshal Stalin, in an order of the day explaining the cessation of hostilities, said operations in Bulgaria were started because the Bulgarian Government did not want to break with Germany.

Yesterday Bulgaria's border was crossed and Soviet forces advanced 100 kilometers, the order stated. When Bulgaria broke off relations with Germany and declared war on Germany, Soviet aims had been achieved, and Bulgaria ceased to be a German base.

The cessation of hostilities came four days after Russia had declared war on Bulgaria.

Soviet troops entered Bulgaria under the command of General Tolbukhin, who issued a proclamation to the Bulgarian people and army, stating that the Red Army did not intend to fight against the Bulgarians, who were considered members of a brother nation, but sought only to rout the Germans.

The Bulgarian Government a short time later announced that it had accepted Tolbukhin's terms that all German troops in Bulgaria be handed over as prisoners of war and German ships in Bulgarian ports be turned over to the Soviet Union.

The declaration of war against Germany, the Bulgarian Government said last night, resulted from unprovoked German action against Bulgarian troops when the government was taking steps to disarm and detain German military units crossing into Bulgarian territory.

The Germans, having disarmed some units of the Bulgarian Army and captured the staffs of the Bulgarian occupation troops, war was declared «in defense of the honor of the Bulgarian Army and the prestige of the Bulgarian State,» the proclamation said.

New Bulgarian Premier

Just prior to the Russian announcement of the cessation of hostilities tonight, former premier Kimon Georgiev took over the premiership of Bulgaria, replacing Konstantin Muraviev, and formed a new cabinet.

No explanation of the change was given in the Sofia broadcast making the announcement.

Georgiev became Premier and Minister of Justice of Bulgaria in 1934, following a coup d'etat. Rightist opposition forced him to resign a year later. He was recognized as an outstanding opponent of the pro-Nazi governments that preceded those of Ivan Bagrianov and Muraviev, and was reported arrested earlier during the war.

The resignation of Bogdan Filoff, one of the three Bulgarian regents and former Premier, was reported last night by Radio Sofia.

Filoff was Prime Minister when Bulgaria signed the Tripartite Pact with Germany, Fascist Italy, and Japan.

New members of the Bulgarian cabinet under Georgiev include Petko Staynov, Minister of Foreign Affairs and Finance; Colonel Damian Velchev, Minister of War; Professor Mikhailchev, Minister of Education; Nikola Popov, Minister without Portfolio; and Boris Stefanov, Minister of Public Works. Major General Ivan Marinov has been appointed commander-in-chief of the Bulgarian troops in the war against Germany.

The German News Agency said tonight that the new Bulgarian Minister of Propaganda, whom it identified as [illegible] Bulgarian radio today, the Nazi mania of war crimes and the magnitude of Hitler's plans for the domination of Europe, Czechoslovakian President Edward Benes declared in a radio broadcast from here to his homeland last night.

President Benes said that Czechoslovakia, by a determined, dignified, and courageous national revolt, had made her stand with the Czech Republic. He appealed to all Bohemia and Moravia to assist Czech forces.

Czechoslovakian Forces of the Interior are continuing the fight in the area of Zilina-Vrutky, two important junctions on the Germans' retreat line from Hungary. The town of Zilina is held by Czechoslovakian forces. (BBC-Reuter)

GERMANS CONTINUE COUNTER-ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 9 — German forces, clinging savagely to the last high ground south of Rimini and the entrance into the Po Valley, counter-attacked again yesterday in costly efforts to stem the 8th Army advance along the Adriatic coastal corridor.

In bitter fighting, in which both sides suffered heavy casualties, Lieut. General Sir Oliver Leese's forces made limited gains, mainly between the German strongpoints of San Savino and Gemmano, where British troops pushed forward for more than a mile to capture Hill Feature 151, just north of the Conca River. The village of Croce, a half-mile north of the Conca River and about 7 1/2 miles inland, was also captured after a day and an evening's battle.

Violent thunderstorms, which for the past three days have lashed the entire battle area into a streaming, treacherous mud mass, immobilized Allied armour and cut the 8th Army's close air support to a fraction, to put upon the infantry and supporting artillery the burden of the savage fighting.

German forces, with tanks massed on the low ridges north of Coriano and at San Savino, were still able to prevent any advance between these ridges, some two miles apart, and the Adriatic coast, where 8th Army troops were last reported at Riccione Marina, five miles southeast of Rimini. Where 8th Army forces did make progress, south of these strong German positions, the enemy struck back with heavy counter-attacks.

German Strongpoint

Around Gemmano, German strongpoint just south of the Conca River and eight miles inland, the fighting which has raged for the past few days continued unabated. Eighth Army forces have occupied the hamlet of Villa, at the eastern edge of the town, and also hold the eastern half of Gemmano itself, although German forces are strongly entrenched in the higher, western half of the town and the hills about. Farther south, Indian troops captured a hill feature and the two hamlets of Serra di Sotto and Colle, and were reported to be mopping up German resistance in the vicinity of Pian di Castello, 11 miles inland and just northwest of the Ventena River.

In the central sector of the Italian front, Allied troops have pushed nearly 10 miles north of the Arno in the Florence sector to seize Monte Senario, while other troops occupied Monte Morello, a 3,000-foot peak five miles north of the Arno, and five miles southwest of Monte Senario across the Carza River Valley.

Patrol forces of the 5th Army, thrusting northward all along their front yesterday reached a point only 2,000 yards south of Pistoia, on the edge of the airport just north of the Ombrone River. Other patrols pushed two miles north of Prato, some 10 miles northwest of Florence, and penetrated four miles north of Lucca.

In the 5th Army coastal sector, sniper and machine-gun fire was reported as enemy forces continued their withdrawal northward, beyond the Serchio River, to the fixed defenses of the Gothic Line. American patrol forces have [illegible] probed across the Serchio River, it was said. (PRO)

GERMAN BLACK SEA POWER ENDS

LONDON, September 9 — As a result of the declaration of war on Germany by both Rumania and Bulgaria, German naval forces operating in the Black Sea have lost their bases and crews have scuttled their ships in order to prevent their falling into Allied hands, said the naval commentator of the German Overseas News Agency today.

The commentator added: «German naval warfare in the Black Sea has thus come to an end.»

The German Naval Command also expects trouble in the Baltic, following Finland's exit from the war. It forsees the appearance of Russian submarines and light naval forces in the eastern Baltic which, it says, can be reached at slight risk by clearing a path through German minefields, whose location is known to the Finns. 70 GERMAN PLANES DESTROYED ON GROUND

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 9 — Over 70 enemy planes were destroyed on the ground yesterday and many others damaged when Mustangs of the 15th AAF strafed four aerodromes north of Belgrade, it was announced today. Photo-reconnaissance revealed the accuracy of the damage done.

Medium forces of Liberators and Flying Fortresses, escorted by Lightnings, continued to wreck enemy communications by attacking railyards at Nis, Brod, and Sarajevo, and rail bridges at Belgrade and Brod. In northern Italy, Thunderbolts and Mustangs destroyed 12 vehicles, hit two road bridges in the Rimini area, and cut the approaches of a bridge near Imola. Kittyhawks shot-up gun positions and communications in the battle area, and destroyed six locomotives and several vehicles. Over southern France, Thunderbolts destroyed five locomotives and 12 rail cars, and damaged other locomotives, rail cars, and vehicles.

In coastal operations, rocket-firing Beaufighters attacked the Italian liner Rex off Capo d'Istria, in the northern Adriatic. More than 120 hits were reported, many of them below the water line. (PRO)

STORY OF ATTACK ON "REX"

LONDON, September 9 — The former Italian liner Rex, hit by rocket-firing RAF Beaufighters in the northern Adriatic Sea, is now listing 60 degrees to port and is still ablaze.

On Thursday, RAF Marauder bombers saw the Rex being towed south of Trieste and listing slightly. It was believed that she had been prepared by the Germans as a blockade ship for Trieste harbor.

Rocket-firing Beaufighters attacked the ship when she was off Capo d'Istria in the north Adriatic yesterday morning, scoring 39 hits. Another attack last night scored 64 hits.

"We left her with her decks vertical and two-thirds submerged, and flames and smoke were gushing out of the entire length of her which was still above water," an Allied pilot said. (Reuter)

SALERNO DAY CELEBRATED

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY, September 9 — U. S. Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson today sent a message to Lt. General Mark Clark on the occasion of the first anniversary of the Salerno landings, first to breach the Nazi "Fortress Europe".

Undersecretary Patterson said that the landings, "were more bitterly contested" than any other in this war, and would take a "high place" in the history of the European war.

General Clark presented Sergeant John H. B. Radford, a British Army photographer, the British Military Medal on the anniversary of the newsman's heroic filming of the hard-fought landings and subsequent battles. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS ON MOVE ON ALL SECTORS

LONDON, September 9 — A communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters broadcast over the Free Yugoslav Radio today said that "on all Yugoslav battlefields, our units are destroying enemy communications, liberating towns and clearing terrain of occupiers and traitors."

In eastern Serbia, driving north along the Timok River Valley, Tito's men have taken Knjazevac and cleared the valley as far as the town of Zajecar, close to the Bulgarian border. The Timok River runs roughly parallel to the Bulgarian frontier and empties into the Danube only some 30 miles south of the Russian-captured Rumanian town of Turnu Severin, and Yugoslav troops at Zajecar are therefore only a little over 60 miles from Soviet forces.

In the western Morava sector, the communique said, the town of Bajina Basta has been liberated, while in Montenegro, heavy battles are being fought along lines of communications.

In Herzegovina, Yugoslav Liberation forces have taken an enemy stronghold. The town of Prijedor, in western Bosnia, has also been captured.

A second communique from Marshal Tito broadcast today said that Patriot forces have cut all important lines of communications leading to northern Serbia.

The communique said that the Yugoslav 14th Serbian Corps is continuing offensive and clearing up operations along the Danube in the direction of the approaching Red on September 5, 6, and 7, when Allied planes dropped over 110 tons of bombs.

General Douglas MacArthur stated today that the Allied air forces "now dominate the southern Philippines." Devastating blows by American aircraft against Davao and other points on Mindanao were made virtually without air opposition. The latest raid was made last Wednesday, when Liberators wrecked the Santa Ana seaplane base, while Mitchell bombers attacked the Busuyan airfield, both on Mindanao. The planes dropped over 100 tons of bombs and encountered no air opposition.

New attacks were also made on Japanese positions in the northern Marianas and Marshall Islands, and at Marcus Island, 1,000 miles from Tokyo.

The Navy Department announcement tonight reported that Liberators of the 7th AAF bombed airfields and installations at Iwo Jima, in the Volcano Islands, on September 6 and 7. Anti-aircraft fire was moderate and of four enemy fighters, one was destroyed.

General MacArthur also announced that Allied aircraft were roaming at will over the Moluccs group, south of the Philippines, and that the Japanese 6th Air Division had been virtually annihilated. (OWI)

INDIAN TROOPS BREAK UP JAP REAR-GUARD

KANDY, CEYLON, September 9 — Indian troops, supported by artillery, fighter planes, and bombers, made a two-mile bayonet charge along the Tiddim Road to break up strong Japanese rear-guard positions which have held up the 14th Army's advance for the last two days, an Allied announcement said today.

The advance brought the Allies to within 46 miles of Tiddim and eight miles of the Manipur River crossing, where contact was established with the main body of retreating Japanese forces.

Nothing was reported from other sectors in Burma by today's Southeast Asia Command communique.

Air attacks were continued against enemy objectives and communications in the Arakan, Tiddim Road, and Chindwin areas, despite unfavorable weather.

Liberator bombers attacked the important Thailand rail junction of Bhonngpladuk, an Eastern Air Command headquarters announcement said.

Meanwhile, in China, Japanese forces smashing down the Hunan-Kwangsi railway have broken into the important town of Tungan, 90 miles north of Kweilin provincial capital of Kwangsi, the Chinese High Command announced.

The Japanese penetrated the city after a 95-mile advance from Hengyang, during which they captured Lingling, an American air base near the Kwangsi border.

The Chinese conquest of Songshan, Japanese tunnel fortress astride the Burma Road in the Yunnan province, is virtually completed, the Chinese announcement said. Two pockets of resistance remain to be cleared before the Burma Road west of the Salween can be used as far as Lungling.

In the main Yunnan enemy base of Tengchung, Chinese forces are almost in complete control, with Japanese remnants backed into the eastern corner of the city.

SUPER FORTRESS ATTACK BIGGEST YET

NEW YORK, September 9 — The target of Friday's Super Fortress attack on Manchuria was officially revealed today as the industrial city of Anshan, which was hit by what press dispatches received here described as the largest force of the huge bombers yet to go out.

The War Department in Washington announced that targets at Anshan — attacked for the second time — were hit with «good results» by the Super Forts, which destroyed or damaged 26 Japanese fighters; one Super Fortress is missing and presumed lost.

The Associated Press said that returning airmen reported that the Japanese had failed to increase their fighter defenses and anti-aircraft since previous attacks. They described fighter interception as «weak,» and flak as «weak to moderate.»

Crew members said that evidence of destruction done in the first attack was clearly visible at Anshan, with repairs having only begun. Anshan is the second-largest steel producing and largest coal by-products center in the Japanese Empire. The Associated Press said that principal targets in the latest attack were chemical and explosives factories.

The B-29s carried their biggest bomb load to date, as the result of technical improvements. No official statement as to the number of bombers participating was forthcoming, but the Japanese Radio, quoted by the United Press, said that more than 100 Super Fortresses took part. The radio admitted that the planes had inflicted «some damage.» In Japanese phraseology, the UP said, that usually means considerable destruction.

In addition to the main attack, diversionary raids were made on railroad yards at Sinsiang and on the Peiping-Hankow railway.

Within a few hours of the return of Allied bombers from their attack on Anshan, Japanese planes attempted to bomb two of the west China bases last night, but [illegible] one of the Super Fortresses was lost, nor were the runways hit, the Associated Press reported.

The enemy planes spent more than two hours trying to find the bases, and finally dropped about half-a-dozen heavy bombs and a few strings of fragmentation bombs in rice fields and open country. (OWI-Reuter - UP-AP)

STOCKHOLM, September 9 — The German troopship Westfalen with nearly 300 men on board, has been sunk in the Kattegat, off the west coast of southern Sweden, after striking a mine while on the way from Norway to Germany, a British United Press dispatch said today.

Sixty men were saved by Swedish warships, and a pilot boat from Marstrand saved five men from a raft, a London Times correspondent reported. All survivors were German soldiers.

The DNB correspondent said 30 of the men aboard were Norwegians, according to Gothenburg reports of survivor stories. (PWB)

CANADIAN CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

OTTAWA, September 9 — Canadian Army casualties in all war theaters since the outbreak of war totalled 33,239 on July 31, the Defense Department announced Friday night.

The figures included 9,561 dead, 287 presumed dead, 1,308 missing, 3,886 captured, and 18,343 wounded, the Associated Press reported. (OWI-AP)

NEW JET DEVICE AIDS CARRIER PLANES

WASHINGTON, September 9 — The United States Navy Department yesterday disclosed the perfection of a new rocket device which enables carrier planes and flying boats to take-off with heavier loads with a minium of take-off run.

The rocket unit, known as "Jato," is an engine in itself. Fastened to the fuselage, it can be jettisoned at will.

The rocket is a cylinder full of a solid propellent which includes oxygen in the mixture so that it can burn without air. It has an electrically-controlled sparking plug which sets it off, and a vent through which the jet gases give their thrust. Each unit develops more than 300 H.P. during the take-off. (OWI)

ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR ITALY MEETING

ROME, September 9 — Captain Ellery Stone, USNR, Acting Chief Commissioner of the Allied Control Commission, at the 20th meeting of the Advisory Council for Italy, held in Rome yesterday, under the chairmanship of George Exintaris, Greek representative on the Council, reported to the Council on recent political events in Liberated Italy. Colonel D. S. Adams on the current transportation problems; and Colonel Charles Poletti, on problems of the AMG administration, according to an ACC announcement.

The representatives of the five other Allied Nations were Couve de Murville, for the French Committee of National Liberation; General Vasiliev, for the Soviet Union; Sir Noel Charles, for the United Kingdom; Alexander Kirk, [illegible]

The stand-by thermal station at San Paolo are now, therefore, the chief source of supply.

To produce maximum power from the plant, hundreds of tons of coal and diesel oil are required daily.

Military requirements and essential civilian needs must have first priority.

Among essential civilian needs can be listed power for pumping water, hospitals, telephone exchanges, tram service, essential flour mills, and certain factories. These impose a big load on the available resources.

It will readily be seen that the balance available for other civilian necessities is small, and for luxuries is non-existent. Power is definitely not available for heating water or rooms, nor for operating elevators.

The essential services, both civil and military, must if possible be given a 24-hour supply, until the present turno system is devised to share the remaining available current as equally as possible. Investigations are in hand to ascertain if any improvement on the turno rationing system can be devised, but the technical difficulties are great.

An appeal is therefore made for cooperation by voluntary economy. Every light left burning, the use of any electrical appliance not absolutely necessary, however convenient, aggravates the problem.

Unless rigid economy is practised, there is a real danger that the present inadequate supply will be further jeopardized. (UNN)

ONE-THIRD OF CATTOLICA DESTROYED

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 9 — One-third of the Italian seaside resort of Cattolica was destroyed in the recent fighting on the Adriatic, wrote a UNN correspondent today.

On September 6 the town had its first respite from enemy shelling for several days. Although Cattolica was shelled from the third, when it was liberated, until the sixth, the reconstruction of civil life is proceeding smoothly and efficiently.

Some 14 days before the liberation, the Germans enforced an evacuation of the 9,500 residents. Already 3,000 have returned to resume their normal lives.

Before the Germans left, they looted all the houses and shops. Some inhabitants who ignored the German order to evacuate had all their clothes, watches, and jewelry taken from them by the Germans.

The first consignment of food, weighing 10 tons, arrived September 6. Shipments will continue regularly. Repairs to the water system will be finished in a few days, but the electric power will not be resumed until the generating station is taken out of German hands. (UNN)

FLORENCE BANKS RE-OPEN; SAPPERS CLEAR MINES

FLORENCE, September 9 — The banks of this city have re-opened, with the permission of the Allied Military Government.

The clearing of mines from houses in Florence still continues, and the inhabitants of all regions around Florence recently liberated have been warned not to return to their homes until Allied sappers have cleared the region of mines and booby traps.

When the Germans first began withdrawing north of the city, many civilians at once returned to their houses, which the Germans had left heavily mined. As a result, a large number of victims of explosions were reported. Italian Patriots rendered valuable assistance in helping those victims. (UNN)

CANADIAN CASUALTIES ANNOUNCED

OTTAWA, September 9 — Canadian Army casualties in all war theaters since the outbreak of war totalled 33,220 on July 31, the Defense Department announced Friday night.

The figures included 9,561 dead, 287 presumed dead, 1,502 missing, 3,800 captured, and 17,345 wounded, the Associated Press reported. (OWI-AP)

NEW JET DEVICE AIDS CARRIER PLANES

WASHINGTON, September 9 — The United States Navy Department yesterday disclosed the perfection of a new rocket device which enables carrier planes and flying boats to take-off with heavier loads with a minium of take-off run.

The rocket unit, known as "Jato" is an engine in itself. Fastened to the fuselage, it can be jettisoned at will.

The rocket is a cylinder full of a solid propellent which includes oxygen in the mixture so that it can burn without air. It has an electrically-controlled sparking plug which sets it off, and a vent through which the jet gases give their thrust. Each unit develops more than 300 H.P. during the take-off. (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

ADVISORY COUNCIL FOR ITALY MEETING

SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA VISITING ITALY

LONDON, September 9 — The British Secretary of State for India, L. S. Amery, is now visiting Italy, principally to see the Indian divisions on the Italian front, the BBC reported today.

The BBC broadcast said Mr. Amery spoke for an hour with Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi last night, and is also to see President Roosevelt's special envoy to the Vatican, Myron C. Taylor. (BBC)

GERMANS DESTROYED HYDRO-ELECTRIC STATIONS

ROME, September 9 — Military and civilian consumers should fully understand the reasons for the present shortage of electrical current in Rome and the difficulties under which the present limited supply is being maintained, Brigadier General Thoburn K. Brown, Rome Area Commander, stated today.

All the main hydro-electric stations at Tivoli and Terni were destroyed by the Germans, leaving only a supply available from small stations, that the present inadequate supply will be further jeopardized. (UNN)

SWEDEN SUSPENDS GERMAN TRANSIT TRAFFIC

STOCKHOLM, September 9 — Sweden has suspended all German transit traffic to and from Norway via Sweden, it was officially announced today. Transit from one port of Norway to another via Sweden is also banned.

The only exceptions to the ban, the announcement said, are the transport of sick persons or wounded soldiers.

This ban removes the last vestige of a grievance held by Norway and other Allied countries against Sweden. Sweden previously permitted German war material and soldiers on leave to pass through Sweden to Norway. In August, 1943, the transit of German soldiers and war material stopped. (Reuter)

DELAYED HOSPITAL SHIP ARRIVES AT GOTEBORG

GOTEBORG, September 9 — The British hospital ship Arundel Castle, which had been delayed by strong headwinds, entered the harbor here last night, said a dispatch to Reuter.

The ship carried about 800 prisoners of war captured at El Alamein, in Lybia, and in Tunisia, besides several hundred others taken as recently as a month ago in France. (Reuter)

GLUM GERMANS EXCHANGED FOR CHEERFUL ALLIES

GOTEBORG, SWEDEN, September 9 — The exuberance of Allied prisoners of war who arrived here Friday was in marked contrast to the German prisoners of war for whom they were being exchanged, said a United Press dispatch today.

The German prisoners presented a generally glum picture, and admitted fears about conditions in Germany.

The Allied prisoners told the United Press correspondent that their treatment in German prison camps had improved steadily in proportion to the Allied successes. An unusually good train and a good meal were features of their journey from Prussia.

Allied prisoners for repatriation number 239 Americans and 1,572 British. (OWI)

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 9 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Heavy fighting in the Adriatic sector continues, and 8th Army troops have repulsed a further series of enemy counter-attacks without any loss of ground. The village of Croce, the center of much of the recent fighting, is now in our hands. Progress continues to be made in the mountainous country on the left of this sector.

North of Florence, important advances have been made destroying or damaging a large number of enemy aircraft on the ground.

Fighters and fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force attacked pontoon bridges over the Po River, road bridges, barges, motor transport, gun positions, and strong-points in and north of the battle area. Over France, fighter-bombers carried out attacks against rolling stock, motor transport, and trucks.

Rocket-firing fighters of the coastal air force attacked the former liner Rex in the north Adriatic.

Medium bombers did not operate.

From these operations, six of our aircraft are missing. MAAF flew approximately 850 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 9 — To-day's communique:

Land:

The expansion of the Allied bridgehead over the Albert Canal has met with growing resistance. The capture of Bourg Leopold was completed against strong opposition.

Our patrols continued to advance through Bourlers and reached Thiel yesterday, where sharp fighting continues. Another armor thrust from this area advanced some miles toward Bruges. Farther north, Allied armor has captured Dixmude.

Our troops continue to close in on the ports of Calais and Boulogne. In eastern Belgium, Allied troops occupied Liege, 21 miles from the German frontier, after advancing along the north bank of the Meuse River against scattered enemy resistance. Elements have moved to Ronsee, three miles southeast of Liege.

In the area south of the Meuse, between Namur and Liege, our troops have reached the village of Neuville en Condroz, 10 miles east of Huy. In the Ardennes Forest, our troops are advancing eastward between Givet and Sedan against resistance from isolated strong-points. Elements have reached Haut Pays and Maisnil, East of Sedan, we are at St. Cecile after an advance of 12 miles.

Air:

Allied bombers were sent against three resisting harbor defences in France yesterday, and fighter-bombers continued to harass enemy movement, transport, and communications in the Low Countries.

Yesterday morning, heavy bombers attacked Le Havre, and strong-points and gun positions at Brest were targets for fighter-bombers. In the evening, medium bombers attacked fortifications at Boulogne.

Ten enemy aircraft were destroyed on the ground during attacks by fighters and fighter-bombers on enemy movement in the Low Countries and against airfields and transport in western Germany. A Road bridge east of Rotterdam was attacked during the night by light bombers. (Reuter)

The village of Croce, the center of much of the recent fighting, is now in our hands. Progress continues to be made in the mountainous country on the left of this sector.

North of Florence, important advances have been made by British troops into the high ground north of the city and the two key features of Monte Senario and Monte Morello, which overlook the town, have been occupied.

West of Florence, patrols of 5th Army continue to make progress. The town of Lucca is now firmly in our hands.

Seventh Army:

French and American forces have inflicted new hard blows on the retreating enemy in eastern France and liberated additional important areas. West of the Saône River, the French took Beaune after two days of fighting with forces attempting to screen German withdrawal. Other towns occupied in the area included the industrial center of Le Creusot, Chagny, and Montchanin les Mines. Farther east, American troops have reached the Doubs River at several points, have overcome enemy opposition at Besançon and made further advances. French forward elments have occupied Pierrefontaine and Maiche, near the Swiss frontier.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Maintaining the Allied offensive against enemy communication lines in Yugoslavia, medium forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday attacked rail yards at Nis, Brod, and Sarajevo, and rail bridges over the Sava River at Brod and Belgrade. Fighters of the Strategic Air Force carried out strafing attacks against airfields in the Belgrade area.

In Bulgaria, troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front, forging forward, occupied the town and railway junction of Shumen (Shumla), the town of Razgrad, and, together with the Black Sea Fleet, captured the city and port on the Black Sea, Burgas. During two days of operations, our troops captured over 21,000 Bulgarian officers and men. In the area of Razgrad, our troops captured over 4,000 German officers and men.

On other sectors of the front, patrol activities and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 8, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 35 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, eight enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 9 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

In the Spezia sector, the 2nd Brigade of the Lunense Patriot Division attacked German troops. The enemy lost 30 men in killed. An unverified number were left lying on the field. The brigade continues to hinder the enemy, in spite of brutal reprisals against the civilian population.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Other groups of Patriots blew up bridges and interrupted highways at Pontolo, in Parma Province, and at Tagila, in Massa Province.

Patriot forces attacked a German military train near Bormio.

The Garibaldi Divisions operating in the provinces of Vicenza, Padua, and Treviso have begun a violent campaign against all enemy railway communications. Some trains were derailed and many switches destroyed or damaged. As a result of frequent Patriot attacks against enemy motor columns, the Germans were forced to suspend night traffic. Patriots of a Garibaldi Division operating in Udine Province have launched an attack against Nimis. With the support of the concentrated and accurate mortar fire, Patriots forced the Germans to retire towards Tarcento. On the Tarcento highway, Patriot forces blew up a bridge and captured much war booty, including freight trains loaded with goods, 30 horses, 10 machine-guns, munitions, and arms. Patriots killed 50 men and took 20 prisoners.

In an encounter near Lake Orta, Fascist militiamen were killed.

Germans proclaimed martial law in the capitals of the Region of Emilia in an effort to prevent attacks and acts of sabotage by Patriots. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 9 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In northern France, enemy assaults failed against the naval fortresses of Brest, Boulogne, and Dunkirk. In the fortification area of Le Havre, 29 enemy tanks and 12 armored reconnaissance cars were destroyed on the previous day. In Flanders, our rear-guards continue to be engaged in fierce defensive fighting against the enemy who is following them.

Attacks by the enemy from his bridgehead of Antwerp toward the north were smashed, and enemy bridgeheads north west of Hasselt, were narrowed down in a counter-attack. The enemy suffered there particularly heavy losses, and lost 21 tanks.

Fierce fighting is going on for the citadel in Liege, and in the area north west of Metz. Counter-attacks are being launched against the advancing enemy troops.

Near Besancon and farther to the east on the Doubs, our units taken back from southern and south western France are engaged in fighting against the enemy attacking from the south, who with strong forces attempts to break through to the Burgundy Gate.

Fighting on the Adriatic coast, which had temporarily abated in vehemence, increased in fierceness during the day. Our troops, however, smashed all enemy attacks, which partially were repeated up to six times. A penetration point was narrowed down in a counter-attack. The enemy, who again stormed, collapsed in front of our lines, which were recaptured.

On the Szekul Tip, in southeastern Transylvania, numerous fierce enemy attacks were warded off. Counter-attacks launched by German and Hungarian formations drove the enemy back at several places. Luftwaffe formations effectively attacked the enemy supply traffic in Rumania. On the northern border of the (Wallo) Carpathians, renewed enemy attacks failed in the face of stubborn resistance by our divisions. No major fighting is reported from the remainder of the eastern front.

U.S. bomber formations carried out terror attacks on localities in southwestern Germany. Damage and casualties were caused, particularly in the towns of Karlsruhe, Mainz, Mannheim, and Ludwigshafen. Twenty-two enemy planes were shot down. During the night, a formation of British planes dropped bombs on Nuremberg. (Radio Berlin)

GERMANS OVERSEAS SERVICE

Flying Bombs Will Fly Again: «It is learned from the Reich capital that V-1 is going to start operating again. The British hopes that V-1 operations would stop temporarily would thus prove to be premature.»

Western Front Stabilizing: «The wide disengagement movements, which the German High Command had decided upon, can now be considered to have ended, generally speaking.

«Under the rear-guard of a number of well constructed and strongly defended fortresses in Brittany and Pas de Calais, and strong resistance formations between the far advanced Allied armored forces, the German divisions have now taken up a line including the lower course of the River Scheldt, the Albert Canal, the River Mouse, and, in general, the upper course of the Moselle. From here, this line joins the Swiss frontier north of the Lake of Geneva in a wide circle advancing towards the west.»

No Confirmation of New Landing: «No confirmation has been received regarding a landing said to have been made on the Yugoslav coast by Anglo-American naval forces. German military authorities state that perhaps some parachute troops have been dropped in Yugoslavia to assist Tito...»

Eastern Front: The military commentator, Max Krull writes today: «The situation on the eastern front has changed again... The Soviets are beginning to launch largescale break-through attempts north of the Carpathians in the area of Przemysl, Reichshof, and Krosno... in the direction of Cracow.»

The Indomitable Spirit: The latest German successes which halted the Allied advance in Belgium, in Lorraine, and in Burgundy are more than military victories; they prove once again the indomitable spirit of the Wehrmacht.

Allied Losses in Italy: The tremendous losses suffered by the Allies during their offensive on the Adriatic sector of the front have compelled them to shift their front to the west. The British forces, while passing a narrow valley, were subjected to the fire of German artillery and compelled to withdraw to their original positions. German troops took a great number of prisoners in the central and western sectors of the front.

Disarming of Patriots: The patriots, used by the Anglo-Saxons as cannon fodder in the fighting in the streets of Florence have now been disarmed. In Perugia, the patriots, when disarmed, loudly protested, but colored troops and tanks compelled them to comply with the Allied orders.

BRITISH CROSS ALBERT CANAL. PATTON HOLDS TWO BRIDGEHEADS OVER MOSELLE

SHAEF, September 8 — British forces, under General Miles Dempsey today established a firm bridgehead across the Albert Canal at Beeringen, in spite of bitter resistance and have reached Bourg-Leopold. The Germans, with reinforcements from Holland, are grimly holding the opposite banks in an effort to stem the British advance, which is now only 25 miles from the nearest point in Germany.

[illegible] NEW BRIDGEHEADS OVER MOSELLE

heavy artillery in high ground overlooking the Allies, due to the Allied pause to await outdistanced supplies.

The Germans are using all available forces in the Moselle base, and German officers from six different divisions have so far been captured. Some have been identified as members of divisions now on the Russian front who had been attending officer candidate school in Metz.

Reports continue to come in of individual junctures of units of the 3rd Army and the 7th Army driving up from the south, but there is no official word of a union of the main forces.

There is nothing official on the progress of the British 2nd Army's advance into Holland. Security silence is being observed on movements of the Allied armies now approaching the German frontier, and an official spokesman stated that the known positions of the Allied armies will be the last that will be disclosed for the time being.

Stiffening resistance southeast of Gheel and northeast of Sedan has slowed the advance of General Hodge's 1st Army, but several secure bridgeheads have been established across the Meuse. The newest crossing was made at Lorette St. Pierre.

On the Canadian sector, tank and infantry forces reached Dixmude, 16 miles southwest of Ostend, in a 35-mile advance from St. Omer. Polish forces on the Canadian southern flank have pushed on 25 miles from Ypres, liberated Roulers, and are now in the outskirts of Thielt, 15 miles west of Gheel.

Antwerp Still Useless

To the northeast, where the Germans are escaping across the mouth of the Scheldt, there are signs of intense German opposition. They hold several bridgeheads there, and are trying to keep a way open. So long as they hold the mouth of the river, the great port of Antwerp is useless to the Allies.

On the Channel coast, the Allies have closed in on Boulogne and Calais, which have both been sealed off but are still potent strongpoints. While the big coastal guns at these ports are not sighted inland, they are embedded in huge concrete forts which are part of all-around defenses. Apart from these coastal guns, the Germans have large numbers of field guns in both places to protect the landward approaches.

Hitler's supply of generals, already depleted by peace movement counter-measures and battle losses, was decreased by two more. Belgian Patriots led four British soldiers to the home of General Graf von Stolberg, commander of the garrison at Antwerp; and General Seyfett, commander of the 348th Infantry Division, was captured by General Dempsey's forces.

BRITISH CROSS ALBERT CANAL PATTON HOLDS TWO BRIDGEHEADS OVER MOSELLE

SHAEF, September 8 — British forces under General Miles Dempsey today established a firm bridgehead across the Albert Canal at Beeringen, in spite of bitter resistance and have reached Bourg Leopold. The Germans, with reinforcements from Holland, are grimly holding the opposite banks in an endeavor to stem the British advance, which is now only 25 miles from the nearest point in Germany.

The Albert Canal was Belgium's main defense line, and apart from flooding there seems to be no major barrier in the path of the Allies until they reach the Meuse River and the Rhine behind it.

Troops of the American 1st Army, in parallel thrusts, have fought their way to immediately west of Liege, 25 miles from Aachen.

Despite the speed of the American advance from Namur, there has been no interruption in the flow of gasoline, munitions, and food. Allied equipment is holding up well under the strains of the fast-moving offensive, and whenever breakdowns occur they are repaired on the spot.

To the south, between the Ardennes and the Vosges, the battle is becoming harder, as the American 3rd Army builds up its forces along a 50-mile stretch on the Moselle River. General Patton's forces have made two crossings of the river — below Metz, at Pont a Mousson, and in the Toul area east of Nancy — after overcoming strong enemy artillery and mortar fire. The bridgeheads were held during the night against bitter attacks.

Some armor is already established on the eastern bank, and the mopping up of German resistance pockets on the western side is progressing. Allied reinforcements are moving up for an all-out assault on the German defense line. The Germans were able to man the river in strength and place

2nd Army's advance into Holland. Security silence is observed on movements of the Allied armies now approaching the German frontier, and an official spokesman stated that the known positions of the Allied armies will be the last that will be disclosed for the time being.

Stiffening resistance southeast of Givet and northeast of Sedan has slowed the advance of General Hodges's 1st Army, but several secure bridgeheads have been established across the Meuse. The newest crossing was made at Lumette St. Pierre.

On the Canadian sector, tank and infantry forces reached Dixmude, 16 miles southwest of Ostend, in a 35-mile advance from St. Omer. Polish forces on the Canadian southern flank have pushed on 25 miles from Ypres, liberated Roulers, and are now in the outskirts of Thielt, 15 miles west of Ghent.

Antwerp Still Useless

To the northeast, where the Germans are escaping across the mouth of the Scheldt, there are signs of intense German opposition. They hold several bridgeheads there, and are trying to keep a way open. So long as they hold the mouth of the river, the great port of Antwerp is useless to the Allies.

On the Channel coast, the Allies have closed in on Boulogne and Calais, which have both been sealed off but are still potent strongpoints. While the big coastal guns at these ports are not sighted inland, they are embedded in huge concrete forts which are part of all-around defenses. Apart from these coastal guns, the Germans have large numbers of field guns in both places to protect the landward approaches.

THREE NEW BRIDGEHEADS OVER MOSELLE LIEGE LIBERATED, LE HAVRE REPORTED TAKEN

SHAEF, September 8 — The American 3rd Army has established three new bridgeheads across the Moselle River in the Metz-Toul sector, and enlarged two others against stiff resistance, it was reported here late tonight.

An attack by a force of 6,000 Germans and 35 tanks trying to cut behind the 3rd Army's flank between Metz and Verdun has been repulsed.

It was officially announced that American forces captured the Belgian fortress of Liege, and have pushed about three miles beyond, to Romsee.

Radio Brussels reported late tonight that Le Havre has been liberated. (OWI-Reuter)

2,000 HEAVIES POUND SOUTHWEST GERMAN TARGETS AND GARRISON IN LE HAVRE

LONDON, September 8 — Almost 2,000 American and British heavy bombers attacked installations in southwest Germany and the besieged German garrison at Le Havre in daylight today, as weather cleared to permit the first large-scale operations for nearly a week.

A force of more than 1,000 Liberators and Fortresses of the 8th USAAF struck at chemical installations and synthetic oil plants in Ludwigshafen and other targets in southwest Germany, including an ordnance depot at Kastel, near Mainz, and an armored vehicle plant at Gustavsburg, southwest of Frankfurt. All these objectives were in the upper Rhineland in the path of the American forces massing in the Moselle River basin for a drive into Germany. The bombers were escorted by Mustangs.

The strong force of Lancasters of RAF Bomber Command which flew to bombard the German garrison of 5,000 bottled up in Le Havre, flew without escort. Neither the American nor the British planes reported any enemy interception.

Karlsruhe, the important German Rhineland bastion only a few miles inside the frontier, was attacked last night by RAF Mosquitoes without the loss of a single plane. This was the second attack on Karlsruhe this week.

Mosquitoes also carried out offensive patrols in the area north of Antwerp and Ghent, attacking shipping among the Dutch islands at the mouth of the River Scheldt. They destroyed 40 rail cars.

RAF Beaufighters, also out in search of enemy shipping, made a torpedo and rocket attack on a 12-ship German convoy between the Frisian Islands and the mouth of the River Weser on Wednesday night. Three supply ships were left on fire, and the fourth was hit by a torpedo and eight rockets. Five Beaufighters were damaged by shore fire, but all returned to their base 350 miles away.

Colossal Destruction

Yesterday was a field day for Thunderbolts and Lightnings of the 19th Tactical Air Command of the 9th USAAF, which strafed between 500 and 1,000 German vehicles jammed bumper-to-bumper on roads leading to Germany from Mons. Preliminary reports put the score of damage inflicted by these planes as at least 438 trucks, 217 horse-drawn vehicles, 20 armored vehicles, and hundreds of enemy personnel hit during low-level attacks.

Allied aircraft frequently had to circle their targets until Allied columns pursuing the enemy had pulled clear. Then, while the planes were strafing the German convoy, Allied tanks raced into its midst and within a few minutes, dozens of German vehicles were abandoned by their crews. The fighters were not even challenged by the German Air Force.

Fighter-bombers based in France are also hitting the Reich in low-level attacks, and Allied armed reconnaissance planes are ranging well behind the Siegfried Line.

Western Europe is now completely blanketed by Allied planes. The jaws of a great aerial pincers have been closed by the overlapping operational areas of the 9th USAAF in the north and the 12th TAF from the Mediterranean. One dispatch said, "There is so much activity that it has been necessary to draw an imaginary line through France to keep planes from these two air forces from hitting targets in each other's territory."

The British Air Council has congratulated the RAF Bomber Command and the United States Army Strategic Air Force on their continuous and heavy bombing of experimental stations, production plants, launching sites, and storage depots for the German flying-bombs. The message pointed out that the most careful planning and imaginative deployment of air defenses had done much to limit the flying-bombs' effectiveness.

American bombers alone dropped 43,889 tons of ex-

trawlers. There was heavy fire from the trawlers and enemy shore batteries. One of the trawlers was reported to be sinking when the action ended. (PWB)

PLANES FORCE SURRENDER OF 1,000 GERMANS TO F.F.I.

LONDON, September 8 — American Thunderbolt fighters, some of them carrying rockets, yesterday smashed a German column of more than 300 vehicles and forced the surrender of 1,000 dazed survivors to the French Forces of the Interior, 9th USAAF headquarters reported tonight.

The 20-mile-long column was discovered 70 miles south of Orleans. (OWI)

SOVIETS ENTER BULGARIA CAPTURE RUSCHUK AND VARNA

MOSCOW, September 8 — Soviet troops today crossed from Rumania into Bulgaria on a 130-mile sector between Giurgiu, the Danube oil port, and Mangalia, on the Black Sea. They advanced from 20 to 40 miles, and occupied Ruschuk, the Bulgarian grain port opposite Giurgiu on the south bank of the Danube, and Silistra, farther east. They also took Bulgaria's largest Black Sea port, Varna, and a number of other large inhabited places. Bulgarian troops offered no opposition.

In Rumania, Soviet troops cooperated with Rumanian forces and occupied more than 100 places, including one large town. Tonight's Soviet communique, announcing these victories, also revealed that troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front had captured the German commander of the Ploesti oilfields, Major General Brandenburg, as well as the commander of a German brigade in the Ploesti area, Major General Teichner.

Cossack units have entered the Transylvanian Alps, where Soviet tanks in some sectors are already running on Rumanian oil, a dispatch from Moscow said today. Soviet alpine infantry troops, leading small, wiry horses laden with mortars and ammunition, are driving deeper into the mountains.

Meanwhile, the Soviet command is bringing up reinforcements to consolidate the successes of its mobile units. Soviet gunboats and armored motorboats, sailing the Danube after an absence of more than three years, are pushing higher up the river, said the London Times Moscow correspondent. As they advance, they are smashing the enemy's riverside strong-points and shelling retreating German columns. There is exceptionally heavy traffic on the lower reaches of the Danube. Besides a flotilla of warships, including many new vessels, fleets of river steamers and barges are sailing downstream loaded with captured tanks and guns as well as foodstuffs.

Roundup in Bucharest

In the Rumanian capital, Russian military and Rumanian municipal police last night made a large sweep and rounded up over 1,000 Gestapo agents, legionaries, army deserters, and hooligans, the Daily Telegraph correspondent in Bucharest wrote today. "I can confirm the reports that the Russians have taken away the former dictator, Antonescu, together with a great number of other undesirable individuals, some German, some Rumanian," he added.

On the Polish front, Soviet forces southwest of Lomza continued to fight for the improvement of their positions, tonight's communique stated, and dislodged the enemy from a number of inhabited localities. German batteries are engaged in heavy duels across the Narev River in the sector of the recently captured city of Ostroleka, the key to the Germans' East Prussian defences, in an attempt to make Ostroleka untenable by shellfire.

The situation in Warsaw is now very serious, said a communique today from General Bor, commander-in-chief of the Polish Home Army. "After the occupation of the Old Town," it said, "the Germans are now carrying out the

ENEMY BOATS ATTACKED IN CHANNEL

LONDON, September 8 — A formation of six enemy boats was attacked and dispersed by two Canadian motor torpedo boats in a recent night action in the Straits of Dover, it was officially announced today.

The Canadian craft attacked at a range of less than 100 yards and the enemy vessels were thrown into confusion. One of the enemy boats was reported damaged. Enemy E-boats in the formation soon disengaged and fled behind a smoke screen. The Canadians followed and saw the Germans firing at one another in the dark as they approached Calais harbor.

The Canadian craft then joined a group of British vessels and made a torpedo attack on eight German armed

The civilian population which left the districts most affected by the fighting is now crowding into the adjacent districts. The food situation is becoming worse. There is no electric light in the city and the water supply has also been cut off.»

Despite the enemy's attacks, however, General Bor's communique said the Polish Patriots repulsed a strong enemy attack in the centre of the city, made considerable gains in the suburb of Zoliborz, and seized the district of Marymont. The enemy is preparing further defense positions in this sector. The suburbs of Mokotow and Szcrnialow are holding out.

On other sectors of the east front, there was only patrol activity, the Soviet communique said. (Reuter)

BULGARIA DECLARES WAR ON GERMANY

LONDON, September 8 — Bulgaria has declared war on Germany, Radio Sofia said tonight, quoting an official statement.

Following its declaration of war, Bulgaria is taking measures to show the goodwill of the present government toward the Allies, according to Bulgarian radio and news service reports today.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

Radio Sofia today said the Bulgarian national assembly is to be dissolved « because it was constituted against the will of the Bulgarian people, and because of its historical responsibilities in supporting a false policy. »

All organizations with Nazi or Fascist tendencies are to be banned, the broadcast added, and all Allied prisoners of war are to be released.

The dismissal of General Phitipov, chief of staff of the Bulgarian Army, was reported by the Bulgarian Telegraph Agency today. He has been replaced by General Yantchulev. General Stoyanov, commander of the Bulgarian 5th Army, has been relieved of his command.

Consuls and personnel of Bulgarian consulates in Milan, Belgrade, and Athens, and representatives sent to the former collaborationist regimes in Paris and Brussels, are to return to Bulgaria Radio Sofia said.

A London Times dispatch from Ankara yesterday said the Bulgarian Minister in Ankara had informed the Ambassadors of the United States and Great Britain that the new Bulgarian Government of Premier Konstantin Muraviev has confirmed the power of the Bulgarian delegation in Cairo to conclude an armistice. BULGARIANS WELCOME RUSSIANS

LONDON, September 8 — The Bulgarian Government, in a special proclamation broadcast over Radio Sofia tonight, welcomed the Red Army as « an army of brotherly peoples, » and announced that Bulgaria had accepted Russian demands that she hand over German troops and ships to Russia.

Radio Sofia said that Bulgaria is now prepared to begin armistice negotiations on the basis of her compliance with these demands, and Radio Moscow tonight said that at the present moment, the Soviet Government has « found it possible to examine the appeal of the Bulgarian Government for armistice. »

The Bulgarian Government has ordered that no resistance be offered to the Russians, and that the Soviet advance should be facilitated.

Dispatches from Cairo tonight said fighting between Bulgarians and Germans had broken out on the Serbian border.

Martial law has been declared in Bulgaria following the declaration of war against Germany. The government also announced the dismissal of a number of Bulgarian provincial governors and their officials.

In its special proclamation welcoming the Russians, the Bulgarian Government stated it had decided to restore a democratic regime to Bulgaria. (OWI-Reuter)

RUMANIA AT WAR WITH HUNGARY

BUCHAREST, September 8 — An Associated Press dispatch from here today said that the Rumanian Foreign Ministry announced last night that Rumania now considers herself at war with Hungary as a result of Hungarian participation in a German attack in Transylvania.

[Hungary had already declared war on Rumania.]

The AP said the Foreign Ministry stated that the Rumanian government had hoped that Hungary would take the initiative « in recognizing the injustice » of the 1940 « Vienna Award » whereby Germany took the northern part of Transylvania and gave it to Hungary. However, the Foreign Ministry said, Hungary refused to give up the land, indicated its solidarity with the Germans by joining a German drive which has reached the Turnava Mare River.

The Turnava Mare is 50 miles northwest of Brasov, Transylvanian city held by the Rumanians and Russians, and runs through both Rumanian territory and the Hungarian-annexed part of Transylvania. The AP said Russian troops are moving north to meet the Germans and Hungarians, and a Rumanian High Command communique yesterday reported continued fighting at various localities, with today reported continued fighting at various localities, with [illegible] special points in central Tran-

Hull said that the United States holds the view that members of the armed forces of countries at war with Germany « should be treated by the German military authorities in accordance with the rules and customs of war. »

The International News Service said that Hull's statement took note of the proclamation by the Czechoslovak Government in London on September 2 that all military forces fighting the Germans in Czechoslovakia had been incorporated into the regular Czechoslovak Army.

Calling attention to the fact that soldiers of the Czech Army are instructed to conduct warfare in accordance with the rules of war, and that they bear arms openly, Hull's statement warned that any reprisals by the German military authorities would be considered a violation of the Geneva Convention, of which Germany is a signatory.

A similar warning was issued by the United States recently in the case of the Polish armed forces fighting the Germans on Polish territory. (OWI-INS)

ENEMY RESISTANCE STIFFENS IN S. E. FRANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 8 — French troops yesterday advanced 32 miles northeast from Arbois to reach the vicinity of Le Valdahon, where heavy enemy resistance was overcome and the advance continued.

About 15 miles to the northwest, American forces encountered stubborn opposition in the Besançon area as well as farther west along the Loue River and at other scattered points, it was reported today.

The rapid American drive northward was held up for the first time in several days during which they met only scattered enemy gunfire from German rearguards. Fearing the dangers threatening their line of retreat, substantial enemy troops met American advance units with machine-gun, mortar and tankfire at Besançon. After fierce exchanges of gunfire, our troops rounded the western, southern, and [illegible] outskirts of Besançon, an important communications center, on the Doubs River and the Rhône-Rhine Canal, having a peacetime population of some 50,000.

Our troops breached a temporary defense line west of Besançon set up by the Germans in their hasty retreat. Our forward elements penetrated the line into the Chaux Forest, the central area of the defenses. The line ran, generally, along the Loue River south of the Forêt de Chaux, between the village of Parcy, south of Dole, and Quingey, about 20 miles to the east.

In their rapid advance, the American forces took several towns including Mont Sous Vaudrey, Quingey, Villers Farley, and Salins, and met an assortment of road blocks at a number of points. The retreating Germans frequently resorted to felling trees and piling them across the roads.

The French advances were on the west and east flanks of the Allied armies. Over on the east where they took Le Valdahon, other French forces pushed further east to occupy the town of Pontarlier after stiff street fighting. Meanwhile, on the west flank, after overcoming the enemy, they made further substantial gains.

Le Valdahon was the site of a great artillery training center for French and Americans during the last war. (PHO)

EIGHTH ARMY FOUR MILES FROM RIMINI

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 8 — Eighth Army forces, battering their way forward against increasing enemy resistance, yesterday fought to within four miles of Rimini along the Adriatic coastal highway.

In some of the most savage fighting of the Italian campaign, strongly reinforced German troops lashed back in heavy counter-attacks launched from the high ground north and south of Coriano, which massed German tanks have made into a fortress line.

Heavy rains and thunder-squalls, which reduced the 8th Army's close air support from the Desert Air Force to a mere fraction of its normal strength, turned the Adriatic coastal plain into a treacherous quagmire in which men and armor could barely move, and definitely slowed the pace and the power of the offensive which threatened to break through into the broad Valley of the Po.

Only along the coast, where Highway 16 skirts the Adriatic, did the 8th Army make any considerable progress yesterday. Here, they were reported to have reached the Marano River, only some four miles south of the seaport of Rimini, terminus of the Po Valley highway.

Even in this sector, strong German rearguards were reported south of the Marano, and official reports indicated that the enemy's main forces were «firmly established» on the north banks of the river. Eighth Army forces were reported to be near both the coastal village of Fogliano, five miles south of Rimini, and San Lorenzo, half a mile or so inland and farther south, but whether German troops held these places in strength was not revealed.

German forces have held on to the ridges north of Coriano, and near San Savino, to the south, « by main weight of tanks, » official reports here declared. By massing armor on this high ground between the Marano and the Conca rivers at a point about four to five miles inland, the enemy has been able to stem, at least temporarily, the surge of 8th Army forces through the coastal gap in the shattered Goth Line. It is from these dominating positions that the heaviest German counter-attack was launched yesterday south from San Savino, and supported by heavy tank fire. Eighth Army artillery and tanks beat back this savage lunge, and inflicted heavy casualties, said by veterans to be the heaviest toll taken of a single German force in the present campaign.

Farther inland, fighting centered around the town of Gemmano, eight miles inland and south of the Conca River. British forces attacked this ridgetop town dominating the inland fringe of the coastal corridor, but enemy forces were reported to have been strongly reinforced by motorized infantry and artillery units, and heavy fighting still continued at last reports. British troops were also fighting to gain the village of Croce, just north of Gemmano, on the north bank of the Conca River. Large numbers of enemy prisoners had been taken in this latter action, it was said.

Eighth Army forces have taken a total of more than 2,700 prisoners in the past 12 days, it was announced today. Of [illegible] number, more than 600 were from the 1st German Parachute Division, which had fought so bitterly in Pesaro and along the coast until relieved a couple of days ago.

Heavy rains along the entire central and western Italian fronts slowed the Allied advance in these sectors, where the enemy has been slowly withdrawing to main Goth Line defenses in the mountain masses north of the Arno, Serchio, and Pesca valleys. Official reports stated that a number of bridges had been flooded by rising waters, and temporary by-passes converted into deep muddy streams.

ADVANCE [illegible] Sept[illegible] to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF today continued their all-out pounding of German escape routes from the Balkans in attacks on four rail yards and two rail bridges in Yugoslavia, it was announced here this evening.

The rail yards attacked were at Nis, Brod and Sarajevo, while bridges at Brod and at Belgrade were struck.

More than seven bridges have been cut in the 15th AAF attacks on Balkan communications since the capitulation of Rumania on August 23 and all main lines from Vienna and Budapest to Bulgaria and Greece are now blocked at key points, it was announced today.

More than 53 attacks, in which 3,000 tons of bombs were dropped, have been carried out in the effort to cut off the German forces withdrawing from the Balkans in the face of Russian advances and the defection of the Nazi allies.

15th AAF planes have also mined the Danube River for the third time in recent months, in order to stop traffic up this vital artery. (PRO)

Huge numbers of volunteers are swelling Marshal Tito's armies in eastern Serbia, the Free Yugoslavia Radio reported today. The number of patriot forces in Serbia had recently trebled, it said, adding: «the people have been deeply impressed by British, Russian, and American aircraft continuously bringing ammunition and weapons into Servia and carrying the wounded out.»

Marshal Tito issued an order of the day on the occasion of the arrival of the Red Army on the Yugoslav Frontier, urging the patriots to destroy German lines of communication and manpower, and contribute towards an early termination of the war. (Reuter)

MESSAGE SENT ON SALERNO ANNIVERSARY

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 9 (Saturday) — General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff of the American Army, today declared: «The last phase of the German debâcle is now at hand.»

General Marshall's statement was contained in a message to Lieut. General Mark Clark, Commanding General of the American 5th Army, on the first anniversary of the Allied landing at Salerno.

General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean Theater also congratulated General Clark on the Salerno anniversary.

Commemorating the first landing made on European soil, special formations and ceremonies will be held by the 5th Army and its various corps and front-line divisions. The 5th Army Mobile American Expeditionary Station will broadcast a re-enactment of highlights of the advance from Paestum, in Salerno Bay, to the Arno River. (PRO)

SUPER-FORTS ATTACK TARGETS IN MANCHURIA

WASHINGTON, September 8 — Super-Fortresses of the U. S. 20th Bomber Command today attacked Japanese industrial target, in Manchuria, on the Asiatic mainland, it was officially announced here, but no details have yet been reported.

Meanwhile, at Chungking, the Chinese High Command announced today that five Japanese divisions driving forward in Hunan Province have captured the American air base at Lingling, 70 miles southwest of Hengyang, where another American forward airfield was lost recently.

The Japanese are driving forward on a 60-mile front, and are less than 100 miles from Kweilin, the Chinese communique said.

In Tengchung, the communique said, Chinese forces control two-thirds of the city, with Jap units holding out in the northeastern corner.

In recent action on the Burma Road, the Chinese captured large quantities of enemy ammunition, the communique states. It also reported that Chinese forces have halted an enemy advance on Lungling on the Yunnan front. Fierce fighting is in progress about 12 miles northwest of the city.

Japs Massing Troops

A Chinese military spokesman said today that the Japanese are massing troops in northern Indo-China for a possible invasion of Kwangsi's southwestern borders, and are also moving troops into Hunan from central and north China.

In Burma, units of the British 14th Army are operating to clear strong Japanese rearguard forces from positions on the Tiddim Road, today's Southeast Asia Command com-

JAPANESE PRISONERS' MUTINY IN AUSTRALIA

LONDON, September 8 — O grim story of « suicidal combat » between 900 Japanese prisoners of war and their guards in a camp in Australia in the early hours of August 5 was disclosed by Australian Prime Minister John Curtin in a statement issued in London today.

Curtin described it as unprovoked and premeditated mutiny, and said that, despite the excellent discipline and restraint of the guards, 231 prisoners were killed, or died of wounds, or committed suicide, and 103 were wounded. Australian casualties were few. The statement said that 18 out of 20 sleeping huts and two administration buildings were burnt down. Inside were found the bodies of a number of Japanese who had burned to death. Thirty-six prisoners committed suicide by various methods, and 16 of the wounded also showed evidence of attempted suicide.

The premeditated nature of the mutiny was shown by the fact that the Japanese were armed with mess knives, baseball bats, and other improvised weapons. They also prepared themselves with extra clothing, gloves, and padding for getting through the wire fences. Large numbers of prisoners who escaped through the outer fences of the camp attacked and killed an Australian machine-gun crew and attempted to storm the garrison quarters. These attacks were met by fire from guards.

Curtin said that a military inquiry into the mutiny established that conditions at the camp were fully in accordance with the provisions of international conventions; that no complaints of ill treatment had been made on behalf of the Japanese before the mutiny, and that the revolt was carried out according to a premeditated and concerted plan formulated by the Japanese and put into effect after a meeting held secretly in the camp at midnight. DEFEAT OF AXIS WITHIN SIGHT, SAYS ROOSEVELT

TRELLEBORG, SWEDEN, September 8 — Confident from what they have seen inside Germany that the Allies have won the war, 2,693 British and American war prisoners and civilian internees arrived at this port today to be exchanged for a like number of German prisoners, said a dispatch to the International News Service.

U. S. CASUALTIES LIGHTER THAN EXPECTED

WASHINGTON, September 8 — Secretary of War Henry Stimson yesterday reported that American Army casualties during the first three weeks after D-day in northern France were half of the pre-landing estimates, and casualties for July and August were « slightly less » than had been originally estimated.

Stimson's report, made at his weekly press conference, said that the High Command had estimated that the original landings and bitter early fighting on the beaches would cost approximately 80,000 dead, wounded and missing. Actual losses were about 42,000, of which 33,000 were battle casualties. The remainder were accident and illness cases.

Stimson listed the overall Army casualty figures for all theaters of war through August 21 as 305,795, an increase of 20,297 since the casualty report a week ago.

Navy casualties reported up to now, including the Marine corps and Coast Guard, total 50,964, an increase of 1,811

Italy's 45,000,000 people are living in an area less than that of California, and with poor natural resources, Mr. Roosevelt stated.

The Germans, fleeing northward in Italy, he said, have destroyed many utilities, and north of Rome they have wiped out 90 per cent of the electric power plants.

Roads and bridges have been torn up and the whole work of devastation has created a shortage of food, clothing, and medical supplies, and a problem of distribution to prevent starvation.

Mr. Roosevelt stated that the Army has been called upon to take into Italy vital civilian supplies as an emergency measure, and medical supplies are being moved in by military authorities.

So far, Great Britain and the United States have sent in more than $100,000,000 worth of all kinds of supplies, he reported. Fuel supplies have been furnished mainly by England, with the big part of the food shipments coming from the United States.

These supplies, the President added, are being placed in the ordinary channels of trade, and are being sold for Italian lire with a view to eventual repayment by Italy to the Allies. He emphasized that such supplies are not gifts, and that civilian goods moved in are incidental to the military situation.

The President said there is a possibility that the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration will move into Italy, but that this has not been decided. (OWI)

CALL TO ITALIAN LABOR BY T. U. DELEGATES

TARANTO, September 8 — Italian Labor was reminded today that the Allied nations are still fighting a war with the Nazi-Fascist enemy, and that few peoples in all of Europe do not face continued latter suffering for an inestimable time to come.

Italian workmen were urged to contribute all their strength to the task of returning Italy to the fold of the free nations of the world by organizing a democratic, free, and united national Trades Union Movement.

The reminder and the advice were addressed to more than 5,000 persons assembled in the sports stadium at Taranto by delegates of American, British, and International Trade Union organizations who came to Italy to make a survey of the Italian Labor Movement.

The crowd responded enthusiastically to calls for unity in a new Labor structure, and to calls for the expulsion of political influences which, the speakers said, now confound and divide the workmen of the nation.

First of the delegate's speakers was Walter Schevenels, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trades Unions, who said that the World Labor Movement regretted its inability to give Italy large and immediate assistance. This cannot be done, he said, « because we are still at war with the most dangerous enemy of mankind — an enemy which must be crushed first, before we can bring back to Italy, or to France, or to Holland, or to Belgium, or to any other Nazi — ridden nation, the means of a complete life. »

Spontaneous Free Assembly

At the start of his speech, Schevenels told the mass of Italian workmen standing in the hot sun in the field below him that he remembered seeing other meetings of laborers called at the command of Nazi bosses in Germany. The German workers came, he said, out of fear. « But here, » he said, « we have a spontaneous free assembly. The road to the unification of your Trades Union Movement, while a hard one, is a road on which you are free to travel. »

Earlier in the day, the International Federation executive told a group of labor committees meeting in the Taranto Municipio, that in all the years of the great war the Trades

CALL TO ITALIAN LABOR BY T. U. DELEGATES

TARANTO, September 8 — Italian Labor was reminded today that the Allied nations are still fighting a war with the Nazi-Fascist enemy, and that few peoples in all of Europe do not face continued, bitter suffering for an inestimable time to come.

Italian workmen were urged to contribute all their strength to the task of returning Italy to the fold of the free nations of the world by organizing a democratic, free, and united national Trades Union Movement.

The reminder and the advice were addressed to more than 5,000 persons assembled in the sports stadium at Taranto by delegates of American, British, and International Trade Union organizations who come to Italy to make a survey of the Italian Labor Movement.

First of the delegate's speakers was Walter Schevenels, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trades Unions, who said that the World Labor Movement regreted its inability to give Italy large and immediate assistance. This cannot be done, he said, «because we are still at war with the most dangerous enemy of mankind — an enemy which must be crushed first, before we can bring back to Italy, or to France, or to Holland, or to Belgium, or to any other Nazi — ridden nation, the means of a complete life.»

At the start of his speech, Schevenels told the mass of Italian workmen standing in the hot sun in the field below him that he remembered seeing other meetings of laborers called at the command of Nazi bosses in Germany. The German workers came, he said, out of fear. «But here,» he said, «we have a spontaneous free assembly... The road to the unification of your Trades Union Movement, while a hard one, is a road on which you are free to travel.»

Earlier in the day, the International Federation executive told a group of labor committees meeting in the Taranto Municipio, that in all the years of this great war the Trades Union of the United States and Great Britain have remained «absolutely free.» He said they had at times accepted representations from their governments; that they had conferred; but that «final action has always been of their own choosing.»

Schevenels declared that the delegation's studies had revealed a common acknowledgement among Italian workmen of a necessity to divorce the Union Movement from all political parties. He said this is of chiefest importance if Italy is to have a Labor Movement comparable to those existing in other free countries. He added:

«In view of the divisions in the Italian Labor structure, it is more necessary in Italy than anywhere else to avoid the division which comes from outside interference... Many leaders are now self-appointed — not elected by the masses of workmen. Functioning Union democracy must start in the Labor Movement itself... The structure of Unionism must be based on respect for the will of those masses. Leaders must be elected — not named by bosses.»

William Lawther, President of the British Miners' Union and executive member of the British Trades Union Council, said that the immediate task of Italian Labor was «once and for all, to get rid of the Nazi menace, in order that freedom, not abstract but concrete, may be realized in our generation.» Lawther warned the Italian people of difficult times lie ahead. He reminded the workmen of southern Italy that Allied soldiers are still fighting and dying to free the northern provinces of the nation.

The British Union leaders pointed out that laboring men of the nation «have stood as a single body to overcome the Nazi threat against which the United Kingdom once stood alone. I wish to pass on to you the assurance we in Britain gave the world four years ago. We said: "Whatever thing we face, we face regardless of the consequences." To you I say, whatever may be the nature of your difficulties, it is your duty to face them and to overcome them.»

The remaining speakers were Thomas O'Brien, second member of the British Trades Union Council delegation; Luigi Antonini of the American Federation of Labor, and George Baldanzi of the American Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Baldanzi declared that the problems of Italy are not to be separated from the problems of Belgium, England, Poland, and France.

«I have seen Cassino. I have seen that a great deal of Italy has been destroyed. To rebuild over this destruction is your greatest problem. To help solve this problem all the forces of Labor throughout the Italian nation must be rallied to give the nation its fullest strength. If the men who died are not to have died in vain, all the people of Italy must work together to resume a free and democratic nation beside all the other peoples of a free world.»

Antonini assured the workers that the Labor Movement in America realizes that moral support without material assistance is of little value. He assured the meeting that the delegates would carry back to their countries an urgent appeal for studied consideration of Italy's problems, as well as those of those other nations now wrecked by war, and that Italian-American workmen will give all the assistance they can to help resurrect the working classes and the Union Movement in Italy.

First in Italy

O'Brien said it was significant for Italy that the first of the International Labor meetings such as that held today was held in Italy.

«That fact,» he said, «means that the effect of any effort to rehabilitate the Trade Union Movement in Italy will be held up as an example to those other peoples of Europe for whom the freedom of democratic institutions has not existed in the years of Nazi domination.

«The Italian people are a part and parcel of the workers of the world. They have a responsibility and a duty to practice their right to take a place among the free laborers of the world. We of the American, British, and international Trade Union Movements will see that Italian workers receive their share of justice.»

The visiting Labor delegates concluded their survey of the southern Italian mainland with a meeting in Taranto. They are scheduled to leave Bari tomorrow for Catania and Palermo, where meetings with Sicilian labor leaders will be held. The final stages of their survey will be completed with conferences in Rome on September 15 and 16. (UNN)

ALLIES AID ITALY'S REHABILITATION

ROME, September 8 — With the constant aid of the Allies, liberated Italy has marched steadily and courageously along the road toward rehabilitation since the announcement of the armistice one year ago today.

A United Nations News survey today showed that in the last 12 months this Allied assistance has resulted in notable gains in restoration not only of democratic institutions and freedoms, but also in the physical world of railways, bridges, and highways, and in the public services such as telephone, telegraph, and mail, and in supplies of water and light.

In turn, the restoration of such public services has

Hog cholera has been checked on the Campobasso, Foggia, and Chieti provinces, largely through the immunization of 21,000 swine with crystal violet vaccine, a new product in the United States and Great Britain, which has never before been used in Italy, today's announcement added.

More directly in the field of human relations, progress has been made in control of malaria and typhus, the care of a quarter million refugees, and the rehabilitation of hospitals.

Police and courts have been placed on a plane of equal justice for rich and poor; damaged churches and other fine arts treasures have been restored; the printing of 5,000,000 defascistized school textbooks has begun.

Ports demolished with vaunted German thoroughness have been restored; areas planted with German anti-personnel mines are being cleared; industrial plants are being rehabilitated as quickly as possible.

Record in Sicily

To gauge Allied contributions to Italy's reconstruction, examine the records of an easily visualized portion like Sicily.

In one month this summer, 1,227,360 liters of fuel were brought into Sicily solely for plowing, harvesting, threshing, and crop marking. Other harvesting materials imported included binder twine, tacks, and hemp acid for tanning the belting used in thrashing machines and grain mills.

Sicily alone received in the last year 270,000 kilograms of copper sulphate (an insecticide for plants), while fertilizers included 906,000 kilograms of ammonium nitrate and nearly 900,000 kilograms of muriate of potash.

Also brought to Sicily in the first year of its liberation were seed potatoes totaling 4,245,516 kilograms; flour 684,630 quintals; and 460,990 quintals of wheat.

For Sicilian railroads, for example, precious Allied shipping space brought 108,720,000 kilograms of coal, 36,000 kilograms of diesel oil, and 453,000 kilograms of lubricating grease.

To Italy as a whole, Allied ships have brought also medical supplies, clothing, soap, matches, nails, and roofing.

Foodstuffs brought to Italy included biscuits, dried vegetables, sausages, corned beef, pasta, sugar, tinned milk, and soups.

Amid the scarcity of shipping space, even newsprint paper has been included to insure to Italy the freedom of speech and press.

Now in the course of their liberation, the starved millions in other parts of occupied Europe are crying for similar help. To attempt to fill those mouths will put an astronomical demand upon Allied production and shipping, the analysis showed. (UNN)

PROGRESS MARKS YEAR SINCE ARMISTICE

ROME, September 8 — The noteworthy and steady gains achieved by the Italian people in their day-by-day march toward rehabilitation of their country are not being truly evaluated in other countries, Captain Ellery Stone, USNR, acting chief commissioner of the Allied Control Commission stated.

Surveying the steps made toward reviving democratic institutions since the announcement of the Italian armistice one year ago today, Captain Stone pointed out that every inch climbed by the Italian people had been beset by pitfalls fashioned by the Germans who went out of their way to destroy Italy.

«People just don't understand what these people have accomplished in the last 12 months, not only in civil affairs, but also in the battles of liberation on land, sea, and air,» Captain Stone said.

«As a demonstration of democracy at work among more than half of Italy's population,» he added, «there is Gra-

In turn, the restoration of such public services has implied the importation of other goods such as tires, gasoline, and coal.

These materials, and the more personal needs such as food and clothing, the Allied nations have attempted to supply to Italy and other liberated peoples, although the Allied nations themselves are under severe rationing of all such goods in their own homelands, UNN analysts pointed out today.

The Allies, in going out of their way to revive an Italy that the Germans went out of their way to destroy, have done so at painful costs.

Today, the Allied peoples are scraping the bottom of the tax barrel to raise the billions being spent each day to win freedom from tyranny for the world.

As a recent example of Allied efforts to protect the future food supply of Italy, more than 1,500,000 domestic animals in southern Italy have been immunized against anthrax through materials supplied by Allied Control Commission, an announcement said today.

The animals vaccinated included cattle, sheep, horses, and goats. Besides these, more than 50,000 swine were immunized against erysipelas, and 55,000 cattle against black leg.

brought into Sicily solely for plowing, harvesting, threshing, and crop trucking. Other harvesting materials imported included binder twine, tacks, and hemp sold for tanning the belting used in threshing machines and grain mills.

Sicily alone received in the last year 270,000 kilograms of copper sulphate (an insecticide for plants), while fertilizers included 906,000 kilograms of ammonium nitrate and nearly 900,000 kilograms of muriate of potash.

Also brought to Sicily in the first year of its liberation were seed potatoes totaling 4,245,516 kilograms; flour 684,630 quintals; and 480,990 quintals of wheat.

For Sicilian railroads, for example, precious Allied shipping space brought 108,720,000 kilograms of coal, 36,000 kilograms of diesel oil, and 453,000 kilograms of lubricating greases.

To Italy as a whole Allied ships have brought also medical supplies, clothing, soap, matches, nails, and roofing.

Foodstuffs brought to Italy included biscuits, dried vegetables, sausage, corned beef, pasta, sugar, tinned milk, and soups.

Amid the scarcity of shipping space even newsprint paper has been included to insure to Italy the freedom of speech and press.

Now in the course of their liberation, the starved millions in other parts of occupied Europe are crying for similar help. To attempt to fill these mouths will put an astronomical demand upon Allied production and shipping, the analysis showed. (UNN)

PROGRESS MARKS YEAR SINCE ARMISTICE

ROME, September 8 — The noteworthy and steady gains achieved by the Italian people in their day-by-day march toward rehabilitation of their country are not being truly evaluated in other countries, Captain Ellery Stone, USNR, acting chief commissioner of the Allied Control Commission stated.

Surveying the steps made toward reviving democratic institutions since the announcement of the Italian armistice one year ago today, Captain Stone pointed out that every inch climbed by the Italian people had been beset by pitfalls fashioned by the Germans who went out of their way to destroy Italy.

«People just don't understand what these people have accomplished in the last 12 months, not only in civil affairs, but also in the battles of liberation on land, sea, and air,» Captain Stone said.

«As a demonstration of democracy at work among more than half of Italy's population,» he added, «there is "Granai del Popolo" (Granaries of the People), a system of community warehousing of the wheat crop which up to August 12 had collected 340,000 tons of grain that otherwise would have gone into the black market.

«This was accomplished with the aid of an agricultural administration from which the Fascist elements have been eliminated.

«Town schools have been reopened with millions of defascistized textbooks. Exports have been developed to the point where for June-July they totaled in value 138,000,000 lire. Fascist injustices have been erased from wage agreements.»

Turning to the development of Italy's more direct participation in the conflict for liberation, Captain Stone recalled the praise it had evoked among Allied military leaders.

«Troops of the Italian Liberation Corps, that aided in liberation of Rome, and have captured many towns — the Italian Navy, that has completed hundreds of missions in convoying and transporting Allied ships — the Italian Air Force that, starting a year ago with a mere 300 planes, has since completed hundreds of missions and flown millions of miles — Patriots fighting behind the German lines despite heavy casualties — these were among the contributions lauded by Allied generals and admirals. ALLIED PLANES TURNED AGAINST MOSQUITOES

WASHINGTON, September 8 — The War Department announced yesterday that some American pilots in Italy have been ordered to stop strafing German troops and have been assigned to killing mosquitoes instead.

The pilots have been using the dust-dropping methods in an effort to stamp out the malaria-carrying pests in marshlands and other breeding grounds in Italy, Corsica, and Sardinia.

The operations are under Army malariologists Lieutenant Colonel Justin M. Andrews and Lieutenant Robert H. Dyer. (OWI)

PATRIOTS TURN TO REBUILDING OF FLORENCE

FLORENCE, September 8 — The fighting citizen patriots of Florence, laying down their arms, were told Thursday by AMG 5th Army chief, Brigadier General Edgar Erskine Hume, that there was «work for all» in restoring their city, a UNN correspondent reported today.

Drawn up in the Fortezza Da Basso, the patriots were told by General Hume that «Italy must be rebuilt. The cruel wounds that the city of Florence has received must be healed. There is work for all of you, just as we of the Allied forces still have a part of our mission yet to perform.

«You now have the opportunity to show the world that you young men of Florence can serve your city and your country in peaceful, as well as military pursuits. In the days that are to follow, we will work with you to aid Florence and the Florentine people. We will help each other... and I trust that a rebuilt and restored Florence will itself be for all time a lasting memorial of the success of your efforts.»

The British general whose forces participated in the liberation of Florence was present to tell the patriots in the name of General Alexander how well they had done.

«During the fighting around Florence,» he said, «you have fought in the most determined manner against the Germans. You have assisted in driving them out of your ancient city. In doing this you have undoubtedly killed many Germans. You have done well as soldiers, and we know that during the difficult days that lie ahead you will prove yourselves to be equally good as citizens.»

The British general presented the patriot commander, Lieutenant Colonel Niccoli Nello, with certificates of award by the United Nations, which concluded: «In restored Italy, the possessor of this document will be acclaimed as a patriot who has contributed to honor and to liberty.»

ROOSEVELT SAYS CARTELS MUST BE ERADICATED

WASHINGTON, September 8 — President Roosevelt declared today that the defeat of Germany must be followed by the eradication of cartels as «weapons of economic warfare.»

The President released a letter written to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in which he said this could be done only through collaborative action by the United Nations.

The Department of Justice, he said, has been presenting testimony to a Senate military subcommittee about the cartel situation.

The text of Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Secretary Hull follows:

During the past half-century, the United States has developed a tradition in opposition to private monopolies. The Sherman and Clayton acts have become as much a part of the American way of life as the Due Process clause of the Constitution. By protecting the consumer against monopoly, these statutes guarantee him the benefits of competition. I hope that you will keep your eye on this whole subject of international cartels, because we are approaching the time when discussions will almost certainly arise between us and other nations. MINISTER ENDORSES PACIFIC SECURITY PLAN

CANBERRA, September 8 — Commonwealth Minister of External Affairs Doctor H. Evatt has given Australian endorsement to President Roosevelt's Puget Sound statement on measures the United States, in collaboration with France and Britain, should take to secure the Pacific against future Japanese aggression, a Reuter dispatch said today.

«We warmly welcome the statement. Arrangements will cover the use of bases over a wide area, including former Japanese mandated islands,» Evatt said, adding that full British and United States participation for Pacific development was «absolutely essential.»

Evatt also stated that Australia would shortly complete a diplomatic exchange with the De Gaulle Government and consider diplomatic representation in the Middle East.

MEDITERRANEAN

AFHQ, September 8 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Offensive operations in Italy have been hampered by extremely bad weather.

Heavy fighting continues on the Adriatic sector, where troops of the 8th Army have defeated a number of strong counter-attacks with heavy losses to the enemy.

Progress continues to be made in the difficult mountainous country in the Apennines.

In the high ground between the upper Tiber and Arno valleys, further advances have been made and the enemy has been forced to counter-attack in an attempt to maintain his position. This was beaten off, with severe casualties to the enemy.

North of Florence, active patrolling continues.

West of Florence, American patrols of the 5th Army have made deep advances into the high ground north of the Lucca-Prato road, and are now gaining contact with the outposts of the Goth Line in this sector. Some of the most extensive demolitions yet seen have been met in this sector.

Seventh Army:

American troops of 7th Army have reached Besançon in their rapid advance in Eastern France, and are meeting with stubborn resistance from the enemy, who is trying to protect his line of retreat.

Stiff fighting has taken place also along the Loue River, southwest of Besançon.

French troops have made further substantial gains and have taken Pontarlier, near the Swiss border, after overcoming enemy opposition.

Further progress also has been made northeast of Chalon sur Saône.

Naval:

The naval commander off the South Coast of France reports that on 5 September further naval bombardments were carried out against enemy batteries and troop movements on the right flank of the army in the Mentone area. The U. S. destroyer Ludlow with the French cruisers Montcalm and the Le Malin were all in action, the two French ships firing more than 500 rounds. There was some return fire from the shore.

ROOSEVELT SAYS CARTELS MUST BE ERADICATED

WASHINGTON, September 8 — President Roosevelt declared today that the defeat of Germany must be followed by the eradication of cartels as «weapons of economic warfare.»

The President released a letter written to Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in which he said this could be done only through collaborative action by the United Nations.

The Department of Justice, he said, has been presenting testimony to a Senate military subcommittee about the cartel situation.

The text of Mr. Roosevelt's letter to Secretary Hull follows:

During the past half-century, the United States has developed a tradition in opposition to private monopolies. The Sherman and Clayton acts have become as much a part of the American way of life as the Due Process clause of the Constitution. By protecting the consumer against monopoly, these statutes guarantee him the benefits of competition.

This policy goes hand-in-glove with the liberal principles of international trade for which you have stood through many years of public service. The trade-agreements program has as its objectives the elimination of barriers to the free flow of trade in international commerce, the anti-trust statutes aim at the elimination of monopolistic restraints of trade in interstate and foreign commerce.

Unfortunately, a number of foreign countries, particularly in continental Europe, do not possess such a tradition against cartels. On the contrary, cartels have received encouragement from some of these governments. Especially is this true with respect to Germany. Moreover, cartels were utilized by the Nazis as governmental instrumentalities to achieve political ends. The history of the use of the I. G. Farben trust by the Nazis reads like a detective story. The defeat of the Nazi armies will have to be followed by the eradication of these weapons of economic warfare.

But more than the elimination of the political activities of German cartels will be required. Cartel practices which restrict the flow of goods in foreign commerce will have to be curbed. With international trade involved, this end can be achieved only through collaborative action by the United Nations.

On the East coast of Italy on 7 September enemy gun positions near Rimini were again bombarded by the British destroyer Logal and the gunboat Scarab. Spotting was difficult because of low visibility and heavy rain.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Operations were curtailed yesterday by bad weather.

Tactical fighter-bombers attacked rail tracks, a road bridge, and a strong point in the Rimini area.

Aircraft of the Balkan Air Force were active in Yugoslavia, attacking an observation post, roads, a rail bridge and tracks, rolling stock, and motor transport.

Heavy and medium bombers did not operate.

MAAF flew approximately 250 sorties. From these operations, one of our aircraft is missing. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 8 — Today's communique:

Allied forces pressing northeast from Louvain crossed the Albert Canal in the vicinity of Beeringen, and advanced elements reached the area of Bourg-Leopold yesterday.

Ypres has been captured, and our forces have advanced to the vicinity of Roulers. Another armored column has reached a point 10 miles northwest of the town.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 789021

We have continued to close in on Boulogne and Calais. The area of these ports was further sealed off yesterday by the advance from the area of the Forêt de Crayelines.

Troops operating farther south in Belgium have taken Wavre, southeast of Brussels. Other forces moving along the Meuse from Namur have freed Huy, and elements are in the area immediately west of Liège.

East of Dinant, gains have been made, and troops advancing from the vicinity of Ardennes have taken Launette-Saint Pierre, and Bievre. Our forces are near the Moselle River a few miles north of Metz. Farther south, we have crossed the Moselle north of Pont-à-Mousson against stiff enemy resistance.

Adverse weather yesterday restricted air operations.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 8 — Tonight's communique.

During today, southwest of Lomza, our troops continued their operations to improve their positions, and dislodged the enemy from several localities.

In Rumania, our troops, forging forward, jointly with Rumanian troops occupied the city of Sibiu, and also over 100 other populated localities, including Fereshany, Bogdaneshi, Slavitseshki, Tereshenye-Pezhoi, Leoma, and Ioshki.

According to a complete report, the Commandant of the air region of Ploesti, German Major General Franz Arthur, and the Commander of the German Brigade of the same area, Major General Teshner, were captured by troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front.

On September 8, our troops crossed the Rumanian-Bulgarian boundary, in the area of Giurgiu-Mangalia, and advanced up to 30 to 60 kilometers, occupying the following cities: Ruschuc, Turtucaia, Silistra, Dobrici, the city and port on the Black Sea, Varna, and the localities of Sarbisc, Krevilloko, Allatar, Tofar, Kamurlve, and Balagzha.

The Bulgarian troops made no attempt to resist our troops.

On other sectors of the front, scout activities and fighting of less importance took place.

During September 7, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 13 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, nine enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 8 — Patriot forces are continually attacking German troops behind their lines and hindering their retreat.

In the provinces of Genoa and Spezia, Patriots exploded three munition depots and carried out acts of sabotage against various military objectives, electric lines and high-tension telegraph and telephone lines.

Groups of Patriots surrounded and annihilated German soldiers who had remained in Prato, in the hours preceding the liberation of the city.

On the Italian-Swiss border, the zone of Porta di Madonna is controlled by Patriots. In the Cumiana sector, 60 SS Fascists, who had been sent to surprise a group of Patriots, were in turn surrounded and taken prisoner.

Lieut. Col. Egger, commander of the 4th German Parachute Regiment, was taken prisoner by the Patriots.

During the night of August 2, he was to visit a unit between Borgo San Lorenzo and Dicomano. In the vicinity of Vicchio, the German commander, who had stopped to examine a military sign, was surrounded by six Patriots armed with machine guns, and captured. He said he was astonished that he was not immediately killed, because he had given orders to kill all armed Patriots as soon as captured.

We can now summarize the activities of the four Rosselli Brigade, who have operated in Tuscany. They killed 400 Nazi-fascists in battle, destroyed or damaged 100 enemy [illegible] damaged 45 highways and burned

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, 8 September — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the Ypres region, our rearguards, fighting heavily against enemy tank columns, protected the disengagement of our divisions in a Northern direction. Thirty-four enemy tanks were destroyed.

On both sides of Liège, strong enemy pressure eastward continues. Enemy attacks in the region of Tirli, near and to the east of Besançon were crushed.

On the Franco-Italian border, fighting for possession of the pass roads continued. The enemy did not achieve any success. On the western part of the Italian front, local attacks of the enemy broke down. The fighting along the Adriatic coast was conducted with the utmost violence during the whole day yesterday as well. Our troops frustrated all renewed enemy break-through attempts, in the course of which the enemy suffered particularly heavy sanguinary losses. Twenty-seven enemy tanks were crippled.

In the southeastern part of Transylvania, and in the eastern Carpathians, a large number of enemy attacks were repelled, and penetrations were cleared by immediate counter-attacks. In this battle region, German battle planes launched successful attacks against enemy supply traffic.

On the lower Narev, our troops frustrated break-through attempts of the Bolsheviks, in fierce fighting.

In the remaining sector of the eastern front, there was no fighting activity of any importance.

Last night, several British aircraft dropped bombs on Karlsruhe.

U. S. 3RD AND 7TH ARMIES REPORTED JOINED PATTON'S ARMOR CROSSES MOSELLE

SHAEF, September 7 — Allied 7th Army units driving northward from southern France have joined forces with the American 3rd Army in eastern France at a point very close to the German borders, Eric Sevareid, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, said today. The actual point of the meeting was not disclosed, but the battered German 19th Army is likely to be caught roughly in the area of Belfort.

General George Patton's armor and infantry forced the Moselle River below Metz today, gaining a foothold on the river's east bank. Meeting increasing resistance, American forces farther down the river in the Pont-a-Mousson area were thrown back across the river. The fighting there was described as heavy, and losses were of considerable proportion as the Germans held dominating hills.

The German Army, Swiss reports stated. Fifteen-year-old Hitler Youths have been put to work building fortifications in the Vosges Mountains.

Nazi authorities have ordered the partial evacuation of all non-essential civilians west of the Rhine, and the roads are crowded with refugees and trucks carrying Nazi officials, Swedish dispatches stated.

The American 1st Army is driving east of the Meuse River from three crossings from Namur to Auchamps in France on a 40-mile front extending into the Ardennes Forest. Farther south, advance elements have crossed the Meuse, and have reached the vicinity of Thilay on the Semoy River, nine miles northeast of Charleville, while other units pushed southeast of Sedan and have captured the town of Yoncq.

In Belgium, elements of General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army have reached Jodoigne, astride the main Louvain — Namur highway in a drive of 33 miles from Charleroi. Material is being built up in the neighborhood of Nivelles, south of Brussels, for the drive in the east and northeast. The 1st Army appears to be pointed at the German border town of Aachen, through the Belgian city of Liege.

Last official reports had General Dempsey's 2nd Army in Holland, presumably streaking toward Rotterdam, but operational secrecy has descended upon their position.

The Canadian 1st Army is seven miles west of Dunkirk, while Polish troops which moved through Cassel, north of St. Omer, have crossed the Belgian border and are in the vicinity of Ypres, a famous battle town of the last world war.

Foulest Weather

The foulest weather since D-day, including cold rain and fog, failed to hold up the advance as Canadian troops by-passed Calais and raced eastward toward Dunkirk, Ostend, and Zeebrugge. The German garrison at Calais is expected to make a suicide stand similar to those being made in Le Havre and Boulogne. Allied planes were mingling surrender leaflets with their hail of block-busters on the besieged coastal ports, but the Germans are continuing their fanatical stands.

In the area of St. Omer, a bridgehead over the Lys River is being built up for the final clearance of the Pas de Calais sector. The column driving on Calais has split, and one part of it is moving northeastward and was reported to be in the coastal city of Gravelines. In Boulogne, the investment is moving slowly with reconnaissance elements in the city.

Fleeing eastward from Pas de Calais, remnants of the German 15th Army are crossing the Scheldt in ferries, while others are trying to fight their way south through the British armies. Yesterday, the airforce knocked out a good-sized steam ferry near Flushing. The main escape route seems to be from Waterloo to Flushing, and from Terneuzen to Kiewoutsdijk.

Ghent and Armentieres were liberated, and Courtrai on the River Lys was found clear of the Germans. The area west of Lille as far as Merville has now been cleared.

U. S. 3RD AND 7TH ARMIES REPORTED JOINED PATTON'S ARMOR CROSSES MOSELLE

SHAEF, September 7 — Allied 7th Army units driving northward from southern France have joined forces with the American 3rd Army in eastern France at a point « very close to the German border », Eric Sovareid, Columbia Broadcasting System correspondent, said today. The actual point of the meeting was not disclosed, but the battered German 19th Army is likely to be caught roughly in the area of Belfort.

General George Patton's armor and infantry forced the Moselle River below Metz today, gaining a foothold on the river's east bank. Meeting increasing resistance, American forces farther down the river in the Pont-à-Mousson area were thrown back across the river. The fighting there was described as heavy, and losses were of considerable proportion as the Germans held dominating hills.

Greatest Armored Force

The battle is flaring up tonight along the 50 mile river front from Thionville through Metz to Nancy. General Patton is swinging his troops forward for determined assaults, following the exploratory thrusts made last night. He is reported to have the greatest armored force ever assembled under one field commander.

Across the Lorraine gap, the German High Command has drawn up its crack troops, and the German Army is expected to give stiff resistance between there and the German border. They have assembled plenty of men, artillery, and tanks, including some of their heavy armor to counter the American assault. They are making full use of the steel and concrete pillboxes erected in the last four years. The small American advance units which crossed the Moselle yesterday suffered considerable losses in the face of superior German forces.

Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and Air Marshal Hermann Goering have arrived in the Rhineland to inspect the defenses hastily being thrown up by women and children under SS supervision, and manned by demoralized remnants of Forest. Farther south, advance elements have crossed the Meuse, and have reached the vicinity of Thilay on the Semoy River, nine miles northeast of Charleville, while other units pushed southeast of Sedan and have captured the town of Yoncq.

In Belgium, elements of General Courtney Hodges' 1st Army have reached Jodoigne, astride the main Louvain — Namur highway in a drive of 33 miles from Charleroi. Material is being built up in the neighborhood of Nivelles, south of Brussels, for the drive to the east and northeast. The 1st Army appears to be pointed at the German border town of Aachen, through the Belgian city of Liege.

Last official reports had General Dempsey's 2nd Army in Holland, presumably streaking toward Rotterdam, but operational secrecy has descended upon their position.

The Canadian 1st Army is seven miles west of Dunkirk, while Polish troops which moved through Cassel, north of St. Omer, have crossed the Belgian border and are in the vicinity of Ypres, a famous battle town of the last world war.

Foulest Weather

The foulest weather since D-day, including cold rain and fog, failed to hold up the advance as Canadian troops by-passed Calais and raced eastward toward Dunkirk, Ostend, and Zeebrugge. The German garrison at Calais is expected to make a suicide stand similar to those being made in Le Havre and Boulogne. Allied planes were mingling surrender leaflets with their hail of block-busters on the besieged coastal ports, but the Germans are continuing their fanatical stands.

In the area of St. Omer, a bridgehead over the Lys River is being built up for the final clearance of the Pas de Calais sector. The column driving on Calais has split, and one part of it is moving northeastward and was reported to be in the coastal city of Gravelines. In Boulogne, the investment is moving slowly with reconnaissance elements in the city.

Fleeing eastward from Pas de Calais, remnants of the German 15th Army are crossing the Scheldt in ferries, while others are trying to fight their way south through the British armies. Yesterday, the airforce knocked out a good-sized steam ferry near Flushing. The main escape route seems to be from Waterloo to Flushing, and from Terneuzen to Ellewoutsdijk.

Ghent and Armentieres were liberated, and Courtrai on the River Lys was found clear of the Germans. The area west of Lille as far as Merville has now been cleared.

Remnants of the German garrison in Antwerp and a number of Belgian quislings are being interned in the Zoo. Bedraggled German soldiers and frightened traitors are being rounded up by the White Brigade — Belgian Forces of the Interior. (OWI-Reuter – AP-BBC)

LATE BULLETIN

BRITISH REACH ALBERT CANAL AMERICANS HALFWAY TO LIEGE

SHAEF, September 7 — The British have reached the Albert Canal at a point about 30 miles east of Louvain, Radio Brussels reported tonight. Reuter reported that they are in the area of Hasselt, 30 miles from the German frontier and 70 miles from Cologne.

American infantry and cavalry are now at Huy, 18 miles northeast of Namur, and have driven halfway to Liège.

Wavre, 12 miles southeast of Brussels on the Dyre River, has been occupied.

Sedan has been liberated, and the town of Bièvres, 18 miles to the southeast has been occupied. (OWI-Reuter)

HAMBURG, EMDEN, LE HAVRE, BREST BOMBED

LONDON, September 7 — Hamburg and Emden were the Allied strategic air targets last night, and Brest and Le Havre, where German garrisons still hold out, were tactical missions earlier during the day.

Little opposition was encountered.

Mosquitoes hit Hamburg last night and mines were laid in enemy waters.

By daylight last evening, a strong force of Halifaxes and Lancasters, escorted by fighters, attacked Emden. The bombs were clustered around the dock area. No fighters were encountered, and flak was only moderate. Smoke rose from the targets so high that it could be seen by crews 80 miles away during the return flight.

Emden is the nearest base to which the Germans can hope to evacuate naval personnel from the Channel ports.

From the Hamburg and Emden operations, two RAF aircraft are missing.

The Emden mission marked the RAF's second heavy bomber daylight attack over Germany with fighter escort. The first attack was on a synthetic oil plant in the Ruhr last month. It is the Americans who specialise in heavy bomber daylight attacks.

500 Tons on Brest

In three attacks on Brest yesterday, USAAF Marauders and Havocs dropped 500 tons on the German garrison. Some 25,000 Germans have been holding out here since September 1. They have already felt the effects of 3,500 tons of high explosive delivered from the air.

After the German garrison in Le Havre refused to accept a surrender ultimatum Wednesday, RAF Lancasters carried 1,500 tons of persuasion to targets within the port. Some 6,000 enemy are holding out in this town.

The RAF attack lasted two hours. As there was cloud cover over the port, the bombers went down to 6,000 feet. Good results were reported.

Throughout Wednesday, United States fighters continued to strafe the fragments of the scattered and fleeing German Army, finding targets ranging from Zuider Zee in the Netherlands to Koblenz in Germany. No flak came up from Koblenz, which town has for a long time been particularly vicious with anti-aircraft guns.

Tanks and trucks 15 miles northeast of Aachen were hit. Two gun positions were erased on the Aachen-Maastricht road. In northern Holland, a train of 35 oil cars and 15 passenger coaches filled with German troops was destroyed. An early count showed that the fighters had destroyed 135 motor vehicles, damaged 65 others, and riddled 50 locomotives with cannon shells. (GWI-Reuter - MOI)

GERMANS LOSE 600,000 MEN IN FRANCE

LONDON, September 7 — Robert Sherwood, Director of the Overseas Branch of the United States Office of War Information, said Wednesday that Germany has lost 600,000 soldiers in killed, wounded, and prisoners in western Europe in the past three months.

Sherwood made this statement over the American Broadcasting Station in Europe. (OWI)

ANTWERP, September 7 — General Graf von Sodenberg, commander of Antwerp, was captured by four British privates on Monday while he was at lunch in his home, correspondents reported.

London area. It was stated here today at an Information Ministry press conference by the chairman of the Committee for Countering Flying-Bombs.

The Committee chairman, Mr. Duncan Sandys, added that it had been realized right from the beginning that the real answer to the flying-bomb was to capture the sites from which they were being launched.

This, he said, has been going on during the past week, and although there was no absolute guarantee that there would be no more such missiles, it was anticipated that any recurrence would not be on a heavy scale.

Mr. Sandys disclosed that precisely British and American air forces had jointly wiped out partly installed launching sites which would have been ready to operate against southern England last spring.

In the battle to bring the vaunted German secret weapon under control, the British and American air forces combined lost nearly 450 aircraft and 2,500 men. During the first week, about 33 per cent of the bombs were brought down, while a slightly higher percentage reached London. After 2 1/2 months, 70 per cent were being destroyed in the air, and only nine per cent were reaching the city. The record bag was registered on August 28, when, out of 101 bombs which approached the coast of England, 97 were brought down by defense weapons and only four reached London.

Mr. Sandys revealed that a tiny blurred speck in an air reconnaissance photograph taken over a German air experimental station in the spring of 1943 gave British experts their first clue to the existence of a new weapon which was to turn out to be the flying-bomb. (Reuter)

BRITAIN'S HOME GUARD TRAINING ABOLISHED

LONDON, September 7 — Two million British part-time soldiers face only one more Sunday of training to defend their homes from enemy action, the War Office announced last night. On Monday, compulsory drills and training for the Home Guard will be discontinued.

This is "big news" for the civilian army which has trained arduously for four years.

Also announced last night was the easing of the blackout and cutting down of fireguard duties. Britain has been "liberated" from invasion, parachute attacks, air raids, flying-bombs and rockets. This popular reaction may not be strictly accurate, but the announcements are the clearest hint yet given that authorities do not consider the risk of any of these forms of attack to be very serious.

Training to deal with flying-bombs, rockets, air raid, and airborne attacks will no longer be compulsory, but "such operational duties as are still required of the Home Guard will be carried out on a voluntary basis."

In announcing the relaxation of the Home Guard duties, Minister of War Sir James Grigg declared:

"The end, so far as Germany is concerned, cannot be far off, but it may be before that end arrives even voluntary duty in the Home Guard can be discontinued."

As an indication of the Luftwaffe's collapse, Sir James said he was in Cairo Tuesday, and Naples yesterday morning, reaching Britain a few hours before his broadcast last night, after flying in an unarmed, unescorted plane across France. (Reuter)

FRANCE IS NAZI'S BIGGEST ECONOMIC LOSS

WASHINGTON, September 7 — The Germans' loss of France deprives them of the most important of the occupied countries as a source of raw materials, manufactured products, and foodstuffs, United States Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley said yesterday.

BRITISH AIRCRAFT ATTACK SHIPS OFF HOLLAND

LONDON, September 7 — Beaufighters of the RAF and Swordfish of the Fleet Air Arm combined to attack enemy shipping off Holland early today, the Air Ministry announced tonight.

A Beaufighter pilot sighted 25 enemy vessels off Ijmuiden and reported he dropped bombs in the centre of three of them. He was unable to observe results of the attack.

Fleet Air Arm aircraft attacked several concentrations of ships off Zeebrugge, but poor visibility prevented assessment of results. (Reuter)

LONDON EVACUATION SUSPENDED

LONDON, September 7 — The end of the flying-bomb menace in England was indicated in an official statement tonight that the British Government have decided to suspend evacuation from the Greater London area and southern England.

"Should the necessity arise, all arrangements for evacuation will be brought into operation again," the statement added.

Ninety-two per cent of all fatal casualties resulting from flying bomb activity over southern England occurred in the [illegible] by cruise weapons and only four reached London.

Mr. Sandys revealed that a tiny blurred speck in an air reconnaissance photograph taken over a German air experimental station in the spring of 1943 gave British experts their first clue to the existence of a new weapon which was to turn out to be the flying-bomb. (Reuter)

FRANCE IS NAZI'S BIGGEST ECONOMIC LOSS

WASHINGTON, September 7 — The Germans' loss of France deprives them of the most important of the occupied countries as a source of raw materials, manufactured products, and foodstuffs, United States Foreign Economic Administrator Leo Crowley said yesterday.

In important strategic materials, Crowley said, Germany loses over 30 per cent of the Reich's iron ore supplies, over 40 per cent of its bauxite, and 14 per cent of the steel at its disposal outside of Germany itself.

France had the largest aircraft industry of the occupied countries, producing over 12 per cent of Germany's airplane engines and over 10 per cent of its finished aircraft. More than 20 per cent of Germany's trucks and over 10 per cent of its locomotives were once drawn from France. Guns, ammunition, and tank parts were also manufactured in quantity for the Wehrmacht.

More than 15 per cent of all rubber tires manufactured in German-controlled Europe were once available to Germany from the southwestern region of France, the liberation of which now also severs all land communications for imports from Spain and Portugal.

Crowley stated that foodstuffs taken from the French people were second in importance only to those formerly obtained from occupied Russian territories. France not only had to feed the German Army of Occupation, but had to send quantities of wheat, oats, and potatoes to Germany as well. (PWB)

7TH ARMY NEARS SWISS FRONTIER

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — American and French troops of the 7th Army driving north and east yesterday occupied the towns of Chaumercy, Bletterans, Poligny, Arbois, and St. Claude, it was announced today.

Making rapid progress to catch the hastily withdrawing enemy our troops are narrowing the gap between the Saône River and the Swiss frontier. They have not encountered enemy ground fire. The remnants of the German 19th Army is in frantic flight up the Saône Valley, and is offering no resistance to the advancing armies.

The American troops pushed north from Lons le Saunier and fanned out somewhat in several directions, taking Bletterans, eight miles northwest. They passed Chaumercy, 12 miles north of Lons le Saunier, and took Poligny and Arbois in a 20-mile drive northeast. Most of the eastern towns in American hands are small, but Poligny and Arbois are of some importance. Just five miles north is the Doubs River, and the strategically important Doubs Valley through which runs the Rhone-Rhine Canal.

The French troops reaching Allerey yesterday advanced more than 30 miles northward from Lyon, where on Monday they last met enemy resistance.

Chalons, which was captured Wednesday, is the site of one of the Schneider concern's metallurgical works, where submarines and fast motor boats were once manufactured. (PRO)

F.F.I. LIBERATE POITIERS

PARIS, September 7 — General Koenig's headquarters in London reported today that French Forces of the Interior entered Poitiers yesterday, and have captured Montceau-les-Nimes. Poitiers is 60 miles south of Tours, and Montceau is 20 miles south of Chatres.

In fighting in the Vendée region a German general has been killed, Koenig's announcement said.

FFI activities are being concentrated in the sector between Besançon and Belfort, where German convoys are being attacked. Seven units of the FFI have converged on the narrowing bottleneck through which German troops are withdrawing from the southwest.

In the west, near Tours, the FFI have occupied Chabris in the Indre Department and Selles-sur-Cher, five miles to the west.

The Germans have evacuated Vierzon, east of Chabris and northwest of Bourges. "Today and for days there have been heavy engagements with German columns seeking to cross the Loire River. Fighting was particularly bitter at La Charité, northeast of Bourges, and Prouilly, north of La Charité.

In the region of Chaumont, in the Haute Marne Department, the FFI raided a large German oil supply depot and set afire what stocks they could not carry away.

French correspondent Pierre Sandali reported from Grenoble yesterday that nearly 1,500 members of the FFI gave their lives in combat for the liberation of that city during the past three months. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS DRIVING FOR JUNCTION WITH TITO

MOSCOW, September 7 — A junction between the Red Army and Tito's Army of Liberation appeared probable as a communique said that, according to additional information received, prisoners captured on the Second Ukrainian Front on September 3 in the area of Bacau in Rumania included the deputy commander of the German 4th Army, Lieutenant General Burghart, the commander of the 170th Infantry Division, Lieutenant General Schwarz; and the former commandant of Roslawl, Major General Von Denitz.

Another United Press dispatch said that the Big-Narew salient, now cleared of German forces, had been protected by five belts of trenches and hundreds of pill-boxes and extensive minefields.

Russian troops are now only 80 miles from the Athens-Berlin railway at a point south of Belgrade, and should this line be cut, the whole of the southern Balkans, where 25 German garrisons are reported to be stationed, would be isolated.

An official Rumanian announcement last night said Rumanian troops are fighting the Hungarians and Germans in Transylvania, just inside the borders of the territory ceded to Hungary under Hitler's "Vienna Award."

The supplement to last night's Moscow communique said 2,000 Germans were killed during the battle resulting in the capture of the fortress town of Ostrolenka, on the Narew River west of Lomza.

The victory at Ostrolenka represented a gain of only a little more than two miles, but it was pressed through some of the thickest defensive positions on the whole eastern front. (TASS-Reuter)

WILSON WARNS AGAINST AIDING GERMANS

LONDON, September 7 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean, today issued a stern warning that anyone in the Balkans aiding the Germans will be punished.

The warning message, as broadcast over the Yugoslav and Albanian services of the BBC, said:

It is reported to me that some persons and political organizations in the Balkans are assisting the Germans to escape. These persons and organizations are all stopping Patriots from performing their duties.

Such actions, of course, directly benefit the Germans. The Allies will not be tolerant of such persons or political groups giving assistance to the Germans. This war will soon be over, and when it is over, you may be certain that war criminals, no matter what their nationality, will be punished.

If there are misguided or badly informed persons or organizations in the Balkans who have in the past, through error, worked against the real interests of the Allies, let them desist now, before it is too late.

The day of reckoning with the Germans, and those who assist the Germans, is at hand. You have your warning! (Reuter)

COMBINED ALLIED OFFENSIVE IN YUGOSLAVIA

ADVANCE AFHQ ITALY September 7 — A combined Allied land, sea, and air offensive has been in progress against enemy lines of communication in Yugoslavia during the past week, it was officially stated here tonight.

The National Army of Liberation in Yugoslavia, the Balkan Air Force, the 15th USAAF, Adriatic land forces, and Allied naval forces have been carrying out the Allied common strategy against the enemy.

On land, the Yugoslav Army under Marshal Tito has systematically attacked the main communications lines of Croatia, while farther south a central attack has been launched on the Brod-Sarajevo-Mostar line, and on the line from Uzice to Visegrad.

In Serbia and Macedonia, demolitions were made on the line from Belgrade to Skoplje, and on the famous Skoplje-Zeles bottleneck where a heavily-laden troop train was derailed and crashed into the Bozer River, killing and

In fighting in the Vendee region, a German general has been killed, Koenig's announcement said.

RUSSIANS DRIVING FOR JUNCTION WITH TITO

MOSCOW, September 7 — A junction between the Red Army and Tito's Army of Liberation appeared probable as Russian troops sweep relentlessly forward in a mighty drive that threatens to isolate German forces in Bulgaria, Greece and Yugoslavia, said a dispatch to the United Press here last night.

Added weight was given to this view by an announcement over the Yugoslav Radio last night that the Russians have crossed the Yugoslav border and have reached the town of Kladovo. Turnu-Severin and other Rumanian towns and villages near the Yugoslav border had been reported in last night's Soviet communique, following a swift 50-mile drive in the direction of Yugoslavia.

Yugoslav forces under Marshal Tito have already linked up with Russian armored spearheads, Radio Cairo said tonight.

Tonight's Soviet communique, while failing to mention any new gains in the drive into Yugoslavia, reported that the troops of the 2nd Ukrainian army captured 3,000 German officers and men yesterday. Russian troops continued their advance in Rumania and occupied four large towns, the communique said.

The only other specific action mentioned in the communique was northeast of Warsaw, where Russian troops southwest of Lomza fought their way into several inhabited localities.

The capture of Ostrolenka represented a gain of only a little more than two miles, but it was pressed through some of the thickest defensive positions on the whole eastern front. (TASS-Reuter)

MOLOTOV REVIEWS BULGARIAN RELATIONS

LONDON, September 7 — Radio Moscow today broadcast a long statement by Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov reviewing the events which led up to the break with Bulgaria, the BBC said.

The statement accused the Bulgarian Government with helping the Germans in their war against the Soviet Union, and recalled the many protests the Russians made on this matter. Among many other things, the Foreign Commissar pointed out, Bulgaria had placed her ports and airfields at the disposal of Germany for military operations against the Soviet Union.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Concerning the demand of August 30 that Bulgaria cease letting German troops pass through into Rumania, the Moscow statement said that the Bulgarian Government did not draw the necessary inference from this declaration, and continued to harbor German troops.

The statement added that the exchange of notes confirmed that Bulgarian governing circles did not want to break with Germany. (BBC)

GERMAN-BULGAR RELATIONS OBSCURE

LONDON, September 7 — In spite of persistent reports that Bulgaria had declared war on Germany, the state of relations between the two countries was still obscure late tonight, in the absence of any official Allied statements.

The German Overseas News Agency, which earlier in the day quoted a Berlin spokesman as saying that Bulgaria had declared war against the Reich, later issued a correction which said that Bulgaria had merely broken off relations.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Ankara, however, said that Bulgaria had followed up a breach of relations with a declaration of war.

The declaration of war, it was said, was made because of German efforts to disarm Bulgarian troops withdrawing from the Yugoslav city of Nish. The Ankara report added that the United States, Great Britain and Russia have been informed of Bulgaria's action, but there has been no official confirmation of this.

A United Press dispatch from here said that Radio Paris also reported today that Bulgaria had formally declared war.

Another United Press dispatch said yesterday that German and Bulgarian troops were clashing inside the country, while the peasants of Macedonia were in revolt against the Bulgarian occupation forces. (OWI-Reuter-INS-UP)

GERMANS LEAVING THE BALKANS

ISTANBUL, September 7 — It was announced today, said an Associated Press message, that the German garrison holding the town of Pythion, in the Greek triangle between Turkey and Bulgaria, has surrendered to Turkish forces after crossing the frontier. The garrison of 68 officers and 300 men will be interned in a camp in the interior of Anatolia.

A correspondent of the London Daily Mail said today that large areas of the southwest Balkans are rapidly emptying of Germans. The evacuation of Greece has begun. The German position in Greece has become more precarious every day, the correspondent added.

Most of the evacuation goes on at night to avoid the storm of bombs being launched by Allied aircraft. (OWI)

FINNISH PEACE MISSION IN MOSCOW

WASHINGTON, September 7 — The Finnish peace mission arrived in Moscow today. A United Press dispatch reported today that the delegation, appointed by Marshal Mannerheim, President of Finland, left Helsinki by train last night on its way to the Soviet capital.

Besides Premier Antti Hackzell, who heads the mission, the delegation includes Major General Carl Rudolf Walden, Defense Minister; General Oscar Enckell, brother of Foreign Minister Carl Enckell; General Erik Heinrichs, Chief of the General Staff and close friend of Marshal Mannerheim; P. J. Hynninen, Foreign Office chief; Captain E. Castren, Foreign Ministry judicial expert; and B. Groenhom, economic expert.

The United Press dispatch added that German diplomats in the Finnish capital are preparing to leave for home by way of Stockholm. (AP) troops, crossing the Ventema River, a tributary of the Conca, pressed to within a mile of Gemmano in stiff fighting. British and Indian troops, farther southwest, crossed the Ventema River to capture 2,000-foot-high Monte San Giovanni, dominating the upper reaches of both the Conca and the Ventema river valleys.

On the 5th Army front, Allied forces yesterday entered the city of Prato, 10 miles northwest of Florence, and the last of the large towns linked by the autostrada skirting the northern edges of the Serchio and Pesca valleys. Italian Patriots aided in rounding up German stragglers in the town. The town of Lucca, 22 miles to the southwest, was cleared of enemy resistance yesterday.

Enemy forces are withdrawing along the entire central and western Italian front, it was reported here. Fifth Army forces, now within six miles of the main Goth Line defenses in their sector, probably will meet with stubborn enemy resistance when these positions are contacted, it was said. (PRO)

DAF ONSLAUGHT FROM DAWN TO DUSK

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — Driven from the Goth Line and forced to dig in on the Coriano Ridge, Field Marshal Albert Kesselring and his harassed German forces are making final and frantic efforts to hold Rimini. But the enemy troops and defense concentrations, often too hastily prepared to be well camouflaged, are withering under the constant Allied bombardment, particularly the dawn-to-dusk air attacks of the Desert Air Force.

In the last 24 hours, the DAF has made 400 sorties, mainly against the battle line targets. On Wednesday/Thursday night, Bostons and Baltimores bombed the enemy defenses south of Rimini, starting several fires. At dawn, fighter-bombers took up the attack, and throughout the day Spitbombers, Kittybombers, and Mustangs kept up the ceaseless attack.

An official statement released today disclosed that in the first five days of September, when the Goth Line was penetrated on the Adriatic and enemy forces were driven from the Lyon area in southern France, TAF planes destroyed or damaged 1,563 enemy motor transports and horsedrawn vehicles, 130 locomotives, 746 railroad cars, 12 small boats on the Po River, and 49 pontoon bridges (mostly on the Po.) 15TH U.S.A.A.F. ATTACKS IN BALKANS AND ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — Up to 750 heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF yesterday swarmed over the Balkans and northern Italy to attack bottle-necked enemy communication lines at junction points, while medium and fighter-bombers strafed gun positions and communications, and other formations attacked the rail yards at Bologna last night.

In Yugoslavia, Liberators bombed enemy troops concentrations and links on the railroad yards at Leskovac. Meanwhile, the Balkan Air Force, cooperating with the Yugoslav Army of Liberation, intensified its attacks on German troop movements in Yugoslavia, striking the Konjic River bridge and damaging an enemy headquarters at Trebo. Beaufighters bombed the Zenika River bridge, and shot up locomotives and rolling stock. Mustangs attacked a troop tram near Osijek.

Flying Fortresses hit the Oradea east and west rail yards southeast of Budapest, and other Fortresses hit two nearby bridges, getting good results on all targets.

Liberator bomber formations hit the Belgrade bridge spanning the Sava River and both of its approaches, as well as the railyards to the southeast of the bridge. The Novi Sad rail yards, northeast of Belgrade, and the rail yards at Nyiregyhaza, northwest of Budapest, were also bombed.

GERMANS LEAVING THE BALKANS

ISTANBUL, September 7 — It was announced today, said an Associated Press message, that the German garrison holding the town of Pythion, in the Greek triangle between Turkey and Bulgaria, has surrendered to Turkish forces after crossing the frontier. The garrison of 68 officers and 300 men will be interned in a camp in the interior of Anatolia.

A correspondent of the London Daily Mail said today that large areas of the southwest Balkans are rapidly emptying of Germans. The evacuation of Greece has begun. The German position in Greece has become more precarious every day, the correspondent added.

Most of the evacuation goes on at night to avoid the storm of bombs being launched by Allied aircraft. (OWI)

8TH ARMY PUSHES FORWARD ON 13-MILE FRONT

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — Eighth Army forces battling stubborn Germany forces clinging to the last high ground south of Rimini, made only limited progress yesterday in their advance along a 13-mile-wide front up the Adriatic coastal corridor toward the broad Valley of the Po.

Enemy forces, consisting of tanks and anti-tank gun emplacements, still held the high ridge north and the south of these positions.

On the littoral road, 8th Army troops entered the seaside town of Riccione Marina, and crossed the mouth of the Melo River at a point only five miles southeast of Rimini. Just inland, Allied infantry and tank forces captured the village of Besanigo, 2½ miles southwest of Riccione Marina. The town of Riccione, midway between these two localities, remained in enemy hands.

South of the Coriano ridge, the hillock known as Monte Croce, seven miles southwest of Riccione and little over a mile north of the Conca River, was captured after stiff fighting, although enemy forces still held out at San Savino, a mile to the north.

At the inland edge of the 13-mile coastal advance, German forces were strongly entrenched in the town of Gemmano, eight miles southwest of Riccione Marina. British [illegible] enemy troops and defense concentrations, often too hastily prepared to be well camouflaged, are withering under the constant Allied bombardment particularly the dawn-to-dusk air attacks of the Desert Air Force.

B-26 WING AWARDED CROIX DE GUERRE WITH PALM

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — The French Croix de Guerre with Palm was awarded a B-26 Marauder wing of the MAAF yesterday for its outstanding part in the Allied offensive in central Italy during the months of April, May, and June.

General Charles de Gaulle cited the wing for its distinguished part in the preparation and support of the Allied offensive. The citation noted that during the three-months period, the wing often operated in direct support of the French corps, and attacked and destroyed important targets in the French sector.

The B-26 Marauder wing is the first Allied unit, air or ground, to be cited in this war by the Provisional Government of the French Republic. (PRO)

CLARK GREETINGS ON BRAZIL INDEPENDENCE DAY

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — On the 122nd anniversary of Brazil's independence, General Mark Clark congratulated the 5th Army officers, men, and nurses of the Brazilian Expeditionary Force, and said, in part:

Yours is the first expedition ever to leave your homeland and cross the Ocean, to join in the battle against those who would oppress freedom and independence.

Just as your fathers fought to establish an independent Brazil, so too, you are fighting to restore freedom and independence to other nations of the world.

We of the 5th Army rejoice with you on this glorious holiday, dedicated to the independence of Brazil. (TRO)

U.S. TASK FORCE ATTACKS PALAU ISLAND

PEARL HARBOR, September 7 — A powerful United States task force and fighter planes carried out a heavy attack on the Palau Islands on Wednesday, Admiral Chester Nimitz announced here late tonight.

Palau, which is situated 600 miles west of Davao in the Philippines, was bombed and strafed and an unestimated number of Japanese planes were destroyed. Seventeen small enemy ships were also left burning. (GWI-Reuter)

ALLIED HEAVIES AGAIN ATTACK PHILIPPINES

ALLIED HQ SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 7 — Allied heavy bombers continued the relentless pounding of Japanese aerodromes and defense installations at Davao, capital of Mindanao, southernmost of the Philippines, and caused considerable damage and extensive fires in the latest attack, General MacArthur's communique announced today.

The assault on Japanese shipping was also kept up by Navy planes which sank three small Japanese freighters off Mindanao, the communique said.

Simultaneously, strong forces of Australian and American fighter bombers smashed Japanese positions on Vogelkop Peninsula in western Dutch New Guinea. They encountered no enemy opposition, and dropped 36 tons of bombs.

The communique also announced other air attacks by Allied planes in western Dutch New Guinea. Aerodromes and small shipping along the coast were the principal targets.

A Pacific Fleet announcement from Pearl Harbor today disclosed that Iwo Jima, in the Volcano islands, was hit by heavy bombers on September 4, while other planes attacked Marcus Island on September 3 and 4.

Anti-aircraft fire at Iwo Jima, which lies some 700 miles south of the Japanese mainland, was moderate, and two enemy fighters seen in the air made no attempt at interception.

In the attack on Marcus, 1,167 miles southeast of Tokyo, a building apparently used for ammunition storage was hit and destroyed. Anti-aircraft fire was intense.

Pagan, Rota Hit

The communique also announced air attacks on Pagan and Rota, which flank the Marianas, on Yap Island, and on the remaining Japanese positions in the Marshalls.

The communique also said that on Monday, a Liberator intercepted and shot down an enemy transport plane near Iwo Jima. A medium bomber escorting the transport managed to escape. This announcement, following close on an enemy broadcast which said that six Japanese admirals had been killed by « Allied action, » aroused speculation in Washington that they might have been on board the transport.

Earlier speculation, the United Press said, had dwelt on the possibility that the six naval leaders had died in a recent American Super-Fortress attack on the Japanese mainland. The enemy broadcast said that the six — a vice admiral and five rear admirals — were killed in the com-fair to advancing Japanese forces. The Japanese drive threatens the American air base at Lingling, 30 miles southwest of Kiyang.

A 14th USAAF communique today, however, told of widespread air attacks on Japanese ground troops and other targets. In addition to daylight support of Chinese forces, the communique said, successful night missions were carried out. From all operations, three American planes are missing. One Japanese fighter was destroyed and another probable was claimed. (GWI-Reuter)

JAP DIET SESSION TO BUTTRESS MORALE

WASHINGTON, September 7 — In order to discuss means of improving Japanese morale, both of the government and of the people, increase Japanese war production, and co-ordinate more closely political and military and naval policy, an Extraordinary Session of the Japanese Diet opened today.

A supplementary budget totalling more than 6,000,000,000 yen has been approved by the Cabinet, and is to be submitted to the Extraordinary Session, Domei announced yesterday. Domei also said that Premier Kuniaki Koiso will issue a statement of unprecedented importance on government policy in his address to the Diet today.

In order to keep the Japanese people from losing faith in the political machinery, Domei reported Monday members of the Diet have been requested to act « in a magnanimous spirit in correcting and changing whatever needs to be changed in the administrative machinery of the Government. »

The forthcoming Extraordinary Session will be the 18th in the history of Japan, five of which have been necessitated by the present war. Radio Tokyo said Sunday that the six chief problems for discussion will be:

1. The improvement of the fighting spirit for the protection of the homeland.

2. Improvement of the morale of government officials.

3. Strengthening of the defense structure, particularly to enable production to function during air raids.

4. Increase of munitions production and labor mobilisation.

5. The urgent matter of security in foodstuffs.

6. The formation of a powerful cabinet secretariat attached to the Premier.

Premier Koiso's speech was expected to discuss the need for closer cooperation between the national leaders and the people, as well as between the Army and Navy. (OWI)

This base lies at the entrance to Tokyo harbor, but the command extends thousands of miles out to sea, and is believed to encompass the Bonin and Volcano Islands, of which Iwo Jima is one. Yokosuka was one of the targets in a recent Super-Fortress attack, and some Washington sources, the UP said, believe the admirals may have been killed by bombs dropped by the planes. (OWI-UP)

ALLIES ADVANCE DOWN TIDDIM ROAD

KANDY, CEYLON, September 7 — The Southeast Asia Command communique today said that, after a four-mile advance against slight resistance, British 14th Army troops made contact with strong Japanese rearguards.

In a night attack, the communique said, RAF heavy bombers hit railway targets 40 miles west of Bangkok.

An announcement from Chungking Wednesday said that Chinese troops on the Salween River front in Burma have cleared the enemy from the main ridge of Sungshan, which lies just west of the river. TWO VICTORIA CROSSES AWARDED

LONDON, September 7 — The award of two Victoria Crosses, to Company Sergeant Major Peter Herold Wright, of the Coldstream Guards, and to Rifleman Ganju Lama of the 7th Gurkha Rifles, Indian Army, was announced tonight.

Wright's V. C. was awarded for gallantry when the Coldstreams attacked a steep, wooded hill near Salerno on 25 September 1943. Officers in the company became casualties in the fighting and Wright, taking charge, found three Spandau posts holding up the advance. Giving the word for covering fire, he attacked and single-handedly silenced each post in turn with hand grenades and bayonet. Then, regardless of heavy German fire as the company reached the hillcrest, he reorganized what was left of the company and took a position to consolidate the objective. A German counter-attack was beaten off and later, defying shell and machine-gun fire, Wright brought up extra ammunition for the company.

Rifleman Lama won the V.C. for action in Burma. (Reuter)

NEW SEAGOING SPITFIRE

LONDON, September 7 — British technicians have created a major increase in the seagoing airpower of the Royal Navy by designing the new "Praying Mantis" the world-famous Spitfire plane which can fold its wings without losing its very high efficiency.

Declassified E.O. 12356, Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

The full significance of the resulting space-saving will be realized when the designs are applied to the fleets of aircraft carriers operating far from home bases, particularly in the Pacific.

Spitfires, with an adjustment for landing on carriers, have long been in use under the name of Seafires, but up to now it had not been possible to solve the problem of folding their highly complex wings. But when the Admiralty urgently demanded top-ranking fighter protection at sea far beyond the range of land-based aircraft, Vickers-Armstrong beat the "insoluble problem" in three weeks.

In the Seafire III, as the new machine is officially known, the wings are cut twice, and the section next to the fuselage is fixed. When the other two sections of the wings are folded upward, the Seafire looks like the insect from which it gets its popular name. (Reuter)

T. U. LEADERS ASK AID OF ALLIED LABOR

BARI, September 7 — Italian Trades Union leaders, with almost 2,000 workmen of Puglia Province, assembled in the Teatro Umberto here today, appealed to delegates of the British and American Labor movements, and to a delegate of the International Federation of Trades Unions, for assistance to resurrect a free and united Trades Union Movement in Italy.

Fascism, they said, remains still in high places in labor councils. Both Fascism and politics, they said, must be expelled, if Labor is to regain its democratic strength. They recalled the memory of Bruno Buozzi, declaring that the faith and will of the Italian people have not been lost — and that some men remain who are prepared to sacrifice their lives for ideals.

Among the speakers were, Raffaele Pastore, General Secretary of the General Confederation of Workers; Eugenio Laricchiuta, member of the Executive Council of the C.G.I.L.; Natale Lo Iacono, Mayor of Bari, and Domenico de Leonardis, Secretary of the Bari Chamber of Labor.

Members of the foreign Labor group, making a tour of Italy for the collection of statistics on Italian Labor conditions, are: Luigi Antonini, of the American Federation of Labor; William Lawther and Thomas O'Brien, of the British Trades Union Council; Walter Schevenels, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trades Unions, and George Baldanzi, Representative of the American Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Fascism Still Present

"Fascism is still in our midst," said Pastore. He warned Italian Workmen to be on their guard, said they are anxious to have democratic political, social, and economic institutions, and appealed for guidance and moral support of the United Nations.

Responding to Pastore's appeal, A.F. of L. leader Antonini declared that International Labor groups have given considerable attention to the Italian problem. He advised Italian laborers to start reconstruction of a free, democratic Trades Union Movement by clearing out any political party influences in their ranks.

Antonini declared that every man must insist on respect declares that it is not the least of the duties of Italian Labor, to decry Fascism and all the influences that brought it about.

The Mayor of Bari said Allied intervention alone had freed Italy of her yoke, and declared that the Italian people must now prove equal to the task of defending the liberty "restored to us by the blood of Allied soldiers."

Walter Schevenels told the mass meeting that the Labor delegates came to Italy to help the nation's workmen restore a labor movement of national importance and national unity — unhampered by political forces. He said the International Federation would give every assistance "in our hands," and that Italy may expect as much help from International Labor as may be given to any other country which has suffered under Nazism.

"I appeal to your courage," said Schevenels. "It will be a hard and arduous task to achieve complete liberty."

The Trade Union group continued its survey of labor conditions by visits to factories in the Bari area this afternoon. Tomorrow, the group was scheduled to meet with Union representatives in Taranto, and from there they were to go on to Sicily. The survey will end with a national conference in Rome on September 10. GRANARIES OF PEOPLE CAMPAIGN SUCCESSFUL

ROME, September 7 — The Granaries of the People campaign continues to show good results. In Puglie, Umbria, and Lucania provinces, cereals delivered to the granaries amount to 1,000,000, 600,000 and 360,000 quintals, respectively.

The work of harvesting and threshing was made possible through the efforts of ACC which collaborated with Italian authorities.

A booklet, in English and Italian containing instructions and legislative decrees of use to Allied officers and Italian technicians, has been published by the Ministry of Agriculture in agreement with Allied authorities. (UNN)

ALLIES AID FARMERS

ROME, September 7 — The Allies have distributed to the farmers in the Provinces of Latium and Umbria 15,000 liters of petrol, 300,000 liters of petroleum, and 100,000 liters of naphtha during the month of August, it was stated here.

As a result of Allied assistance, the provinces of these regions present definite signs of recovery. The work of threshing is now proceeding. The corn and grape harvests have been excellent and a good olive crop is expected. (UNN)

DISABLED ITALIAN WAR PRISONERS TO RETURN

ROME, September 7 — The repatriation of disabled Italian prisoners of war has been arranged with the consent of Allied authorities. Prisoners of war from North Africa and England have already arrived, and more are expected from India and East Africa. Civilians interned in Rhodesia, numbering 190, will be soon be free to return to their homes in Italy.

All prisoners of war who are over 60 years of age, those over 50 who have been prisoners for more than two years, and those who are deemed necessary for the work of reconstruction may be repatriated immediately. (UNN)

As a result of Allied assistance, the provinces of these regions present definite signs of recovery. The work of threshing is now proceeding. The corn and grape harvests have been excellent and a good olive crop is expected. (UNN)

DISABLED ITALIAN WAR PRISONERS TO RETURN

ROME, September 7 — The repatriation of disabled Italian prisoners of war has been arranged with the consent of Allied authorities. Prisoners of war from North Africa and Lombardi have already arrived, and more are expected from India and East Africa. Civilians interned in Rhodesia, numbering 190, will be soon be free to return to their homes in Italy.

All prisoners of war who are over 60 years of age, those over 50 who have been prisoners for more than two years, and those who are deemed necessary for the work of reconstruction may be repatriated immediately. (UNN)

REGULATIONS REGARDING CIVILIAN MOVEMENTS

ROME, September 7 — Three zones have been set up in Liberated Italy for the control of civilian movements, according to an ACC announcement.

These zones are the Army, the Restricted, and the Free zones. The Army Zone is bounded on the north by the actual line of battle, and on the south by a line running from Porto Civitanova to Orbetello. The southern boundary of the Army Zone is called the Rear Army Control Line. In this zone, no civilian may travel more than 10 kilometers or enter or leave the zone without a pass approved by AMG officers in the zone. The only basis for making a request to enter the Army Zone is that such travel will directly benefit the war effort.

The Restricted Zone, which follows the southern boundaries of the provinces of Campobasso, Foggia, Frosinone, and Littoria, includes both Italian Government and AMG territory, that is, territory not yet handed over to the jurisdiction of purely Italian administration. The request for passes in this zone must clearly demonstrate the urgency for travelling.

The Free Zone is all Italy south of the Restricted line. Passes, which will be issued by the Questura, are required for movement from the islands of Elba, Sardinia, and Sicily to the mainland, or from the Free Zone to another zone. The only other pass recognized will be the green cards issued by the Public Relations Branch of ACC to Italian Journalists, which authorize them to travel in the Restricted and Free zones but a special yellow pass is required for travel into the Army Zone.

Italian military personnel on leave must also conform to the above regulations. (UNN)

HULL SAYS "INFECTION" OF FASCISM IN ARGENTINA

WASHINGTON, September 7 — Secretary of State Cordell Hull said at a press conference today that there is an « infection » of Fascism in Argentina.

He said that some organized source keeps disseminating false rumors and false information intended to confuse the question on which all South American countries, except Argentina, are united. As to the source of the rumors, Hull said that the press could guess as well as he could, but added that the rumors came from the most distant area, and that observers can tell from which direction they come.

Hull said that anyone loyal to the Fascist movement in Argentina and willing to forgive that country's desertion of the Allied cause would collaborate in sending rumors. He added that there are malcontents in the Western Hemisphere.

The Secretary told the press that Argentina or Argentine officials would have to supply more clarification of their attitude toward receiving refugee Nazis before he could make any comment on the recent assurances of Argentine diplomatic officials in the United States that no refuge would be given to escaped German leaders.

Hull added that the United States is hopeful that Portugal and Switzerland will take such action as well, to prevent war criminals from going into their countries. (OWI)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 7 — Today's communique:

Navy:

For 24-hours ending midnight, September 4/5, the naval commander off the south coast of France reports that destroyers of the U.S. Navy continued to give powerful gunfire support on the right flank of the Army. On September 4, the USS Ludlow fired 366 rounds against enemy batteries, strong points, and troops in the area between Cape Martin and Monaco; the results were very good. There was some retaliation from the shore. The work of clearing the harbours of Marseilles, Toulon, and the smaller ports continues.

On September 6 the British destroyer Undine and the gunboat Aphis both bombarded in support of the Army in the Rimini area. The results were good, enemy batteries and guns being frequently straddled, and direct explosions observed. Over 600 rounds of 6-inch and 4.7-inch ammunition were fired.

Minesweepers working off the coast were hindered by enemy guns in concrete emplacements. These are being dealt with.

Allied Armies in Italy:

On the Adriatic sector, very heavy fighting continues.

In the ground between the upper Arno and upper Tiber valleys, Indian troops of 8th Army have captured the village of La Verna, from which the enemy had excellent observation into both valleys.

North of Florence, further progress into the high ground has been made.

In the 5th Army sector, American patrols have entered the city of Prato, and have made further advances toward the high ground north of the Prato-Lucca road.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forces have liberated an additional number of towns in eastern France in their rapid pursuit of the withdrawing enemy.

French troops, after occupying Chalon-sur-Saône, have reached nearby Givry, and advanced up the west bank of the Saône to Allerey, with little resistance.

Further east, American troops have driven northward to the Doubs and upper Saône Valley, occupying Poligny, Arbois, and other localities.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday again concentrated on targets in the Balkans. In Yugoslavia, they attacked troop concentrations, tanks, and motor transport at Leskovac, rail yards at Novi Sad, and the Sava bridge near Belgrade. Other formations carried out attacks on rail yards and bridges at Oradea, in western Rumania, and rail yards at Nyiregyhaza, in northeastern Hungary.

Fighters and fighter-bombers ranged over a wide area between the battle front and the Po Valley, attacking gun positions, rail bridges, and motor and rail transport. Other tactical operations were prevented by bad weather.

Last night, medium and heavy bombers attacked rail yards at Bologna.

In these operations, three enemy aircraft were destroyed and five of ours are missing.

MAAF flew approximately 1,500 sorties.

From operations of September 5, an additional four of our aircraft have been reported missing.

From operations of September 3 one additional aircraft is missing. (PRO)

ANTI-HITLER DEMONSTRATIONS REPORTED

LONDON, September 7 — Shouting «Down with Hitler!» and «We want peace!» crowds of soldiers, women, and workers demonstrated in the streets of several German cities, the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet reported Wednesday.

The same dispatch described clashes between civilian rioters and SS Guard units. The German garrison at Doeberitz, near Berlin, was said to have mutinied during the showing of a film of the execution of Field Marshall Erwin von Witzleben. Shots were fired, said the correspondent.

Quoting well informed sources inside Germany, the Swiss newspaper Der Tag said Wednesday that all former members of the German Reichstag who had never joined the Nazi Party had now been arrested and taken to an undisclosed destination. Der Tag said this method is apparently being used to hinder the revival of the old political parties.

Other neutral reports said Wednesday that Hitler, in a desperate effort to calm the country and stave off defeat as long as possible, has called a conference of his generals and Nazi Party leaders. The Madrid correspondent of the Daily Mail described this as Hitler's «greatest crisis conference yet.»

SHAEF, September 7 — Today's communique:

Ghent has been captured, and Courtrai is reported clear of the enemy. Allied forces have taken Armentières, and the area west of Lille as far as Merville. Our armor has thrust eastward from Saint Omer to the vicinity of Cassel.

Our troops are in the outskirts of Boulogne, and forward elements have surrounded Calais. Mopping up continues in the Brussels and Antwerp areas. To the south, our forces are advancing beyond the Meuse southeastward from Namur and northeastward from Givet. They are encountering mortar and small arms fire.

Troops moving through the Forest of Ardenne are east of Authamps. The advance east and northeast of Verdun continues.

Enemy strongpoints in Le Havre and Brest were attacked by heavy, medium, and light bombers yesterday. Targets over a wide area in the Low Countries and western Germany were bombed and strafed by fighters and fighter-bombers which successfully attacked motor transport, locomotives, rail cars, and troops.

During the night, a small force of light bombers attacked road and rail movements in Holland and on the Dutch-German border.

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 7 — Tonight's communique:

During today, southwest of Lomza, our troops occupied in fighting several populated localities, including Tarnova, Viastunky, Rogvory, Zhituli, Oldaky, and Volzekovize.

In Rumania, our troops continued to advance and occupied the cities of Ramnicul-Valcea, Gregeshani, Corabia, and Turnu-Magure.

On September 6, troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front captured 3,000 German officers and men. According to complete reports, the acting Commander of the German 6th Army, Lieutenant-General Burghart, of the rear troops; the Commander of the German 376th Infantry Division, Lieutenant-General Schwarz, and the former Commandant of the city of Kishinev, Major-General von Denitz, were among the prisoners captured by these troops in the area of Bacau during September 3.

On the other sectors of the front, patrol activities and fighting of local importance took place.

During September 6, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts 30 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 17 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 7 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

A general uprising of the population and Patriots took place on a long stretch of the Italian-Swiss Alpine border, in the region between Domodossola and Lake Maggiore. Many localities fell into the hands of Patriots. Violent clashes took place east of Lake Maggiore. Patriot forces encircled and annihilated a German garrison.

In the Genoa sector, divisions of the Garibaldi Brigade extended the zones under their control. In Spezia Province, a column of 30 German vehicles was ambushed. Two truckloads of Germans were destroyed after bitter fighting. An enemy convoy of transports was immobilized for 48 hours. A train was derailed near Isola. An attack carried out against an enemy high-tension electric line, along the Spezia-Genoa railway, impeded enemy troop movements.

In the Varese sector, on the road leading to Cento Croci, Patriots blew up a bridge. A train bearing military supplies was derailed.

Units of the Ossopo Brigade, which is one of the Garibaldi Brigades, attacked a factory producing bullets, and spare parts for locomotives and railway tracks. All the machinery was destroyed.

Carlo Biaggini, Federal inspector of the 7th Republican Fascist region, was executed by Patriots. Fascists had shot four Patriots, among them a doctor.

Two thousand Italian officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of the Border Customs Officials, who had refused to join the Fascist Militia, were deported to Germany. During the trip, approximately half of them fled to join the Patriots. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 7 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

North of Antwerp, an enemy bridgehead was eliminated by counter-attack. Strong enemy pressure continues in the Louvain-Sedan area. South East of Sedan, a German armored unit launched a surprise attack on enemy positions and annihilated them. Prisoners were taken.

East of Verdun, at Pont-a-Mousson and Toul, strong enemy attacks failed. At Baume-les-Dames, the enemy for a short time succeeded in gaining ground on the northern bank of the Doubs. German counter-attacks, which were immediately launched, forced the enemy to withdraw.

After heaviest artillery preparation and air attacks, the North Americans yesterday resumed their offensive against

In the Southern part of Siebenbuergen, Hungarian counter-attacks against increasing Rumanian resistance made further progress. In the south eastern sector of Siebenbuergen, as well as in the East Carpathians, Bolshevist attacks were repulsed. On the remaining sectors of the eastern front, heavy fighting developed only in the lower Narev district. After fierce resistance, the town of Ostrolenka was lost.

In Warsaw, the entire Vistula district has now been cleared of enemy bandits.

During the night, strong formations of German bombers and fighter-bombers attacked Soviet troop concentrations in the Baltic area.

The enemy launched air attacks against several localities in Serbia and Hungary.

Enemy fighters were over western Germany in a daylight attack. Under the cover of clouds, enemy bombers in a terror raid struck at the city of Emden. Damages to buildings are reported. The population suffered losses.

During the night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Hamburg. (Radio Berlin)

ALLIED RECONNAISSANCE PATROLS ENTER GERMANY BRITISH IN NETHERLANDS

SHAEF, September 6 — American patrols of General George Patton's 3rd Army today crossed the borders of the Third Reich. Operating 20 to 30 miles in advance of the main force, the reconnaissance units came under heavy artillery fire, and withdrew safely to American positions on the Moselle River.

The Allied armies are now facing the western defenses of Germany - the Siegfried Line — running along the frontiers of France, Luxembourg, Belgium, and Holland from the Rhine at Karlsruhe. They have crossed the Moselle in strength between Nancy and Metz, breaching the last natural barrier short of the border. The German High Command ordered that defenses be constructed along this line, but the German retreat was so precipitous that they had no time.

toward Aachen in the Siegfried Line. The crossing of the Meuse River was made at Givet in France, and at Dinant in Belgium, both directly south of Namur. Enemy opposition was light. To the northwest, forward armored elements have entered Ghent.

It was officially reported today that British troops have crossed into the Netherlands, but it was not disclosed at what point and in what strength the penetration was made. The Netherlands Prime Minister recently stated that Allied troops were in Breda, 30 miles northeast of Antwerp on a main highway.

Farther back, Polish troops captured Cassels, 10 miles northeast of St. Omer, and unofficial reports said that Polish spearheads had reached the vicinity of Ypres.

Canadian forces are closing in on the outskirts of Boulogne, and other units have by-passed the city and are now operating in the Foret de Guines, south of Calais.

Canadians Encircle 50,000

Canadian troops have now reached the Channel coast on both sides of Calais, and have encircled an estimated 50,000 Germans. The Germans retreating along the coast have been ordered to hand over their arms and equipment to rear-guard troops, and to make their way back to Germany as best they can.

For the first time, the German Army is starved of equipment. Its tanks, guns, trucks, carts, and equipment are scattered wholesale along roads and fields, burned out and wrecked. The train of supplies from Germany has ceased.

The Germans unable to get out of the area, east, west, and south, of Mons are being eliminated in divisional-scale mopping-up operations. An additional 10,000 prisoners were taken today, making a total of 55,000 troops captured so far in this pocket.

The German garrison of Le Havre was issued another ultimatum to surrender or receive further severe bombing.

No reports have been received as to the fighting at Brest. [The German news agency said that demolitions are being carried out and are almost completed. Quay installations and piers are being demolished.]

The total number of prisoners taken since D-Day is 205,000, including those taken by the American 1st and 3rd armies. (OWI-Reuter)

AIR ASSAULT ON BREST CONTINUES

LONDON, September 6 — Waves of American medium bombers flying from French bases resumed the Allied air assault on Brest this morning. About 300 Marauders and Havocs attacked gun positions and defense lines in the port area for a solid hour.

One bomber failed to return. It was the first 9th USAAF bomber to be lost in nearly 1,000 sorties against beleaguered Brest since September 1.

The German High Command ordered that defenses be constructed along this line, but the German retreat was so precipitous that they had no time.

An official spokesman stated that the patrol penetrations of Germany were not to be regarded as preludes to an immediate invasion, which, he said, will come when the troops are ready and the material is all forward.

Patrols known to be operating from Thionville would have had to move forward only about 12 miles to reach the German town of Perl, near the southeast corner of Luxembourg. They were unofficially reported to have reached this town last week.

Increasing Enemy Resistance

The 3rd Army is meeting increasing German resistance on the approaches to Germany. All the way eastward, bridges have been blown. They have taken 78,000 prisoners and have killed 19,500 Germans, a press report stated.

The Germans retreated to the Siegfried Line in a disorderly fashion. Allied fighters and fighter-bombers have so effectively been smashing their transport running eastward that the Germans are piling onto every vehicle they can, seizing all kinds of transport from the French.

South of the Loire, Allied air force units are harassing enemy groups who are trying desperately to get back to Germany.

In Belgium, British and American forces have linked up between Namur and Louvain, and are swinging eastward northeast of St. Omer, and unofficial reports said that Polish spearheads had reached the vicinity of Ypres.

AIR ASSAULT ON BREST CONTINUES

LONDON, September 6 — Waves of American medium bombers flying from French bases resumed the Allied air assault on Brest this morning. About 300 Marauders and Havocs attacked gun positions and defense lines in the port area for a solid hour.

One bomber failed to return. It was the first 9th USAAF bomber to be lost in nearly 1,000 sorties against beleaguered Brest since September 1.

LARGEST CONVOY OF WAR ARRIVES IN BRITAIN

OTTAWA, September 6 — The largest convoy of war has arrived in Great Britain under the escort of the Royal Canadian Navy, it was announced tonight by Angus MacDonald, Minister of the Navy.

The convoy consisted of 150 ships, and carried more than a million tons of cargo, the announcement said. (Reuter)

25,000 PRISONERS TAKEN IN MONS POCKET

SHAEF, September 6 — It was announced here tonight that the American 1st Army has captured 25,000 Germans in a pocket south of Mons, Belgium, making the total 154,000 for the 1st Army since D-day. Two major generals are included among the new captives. (OWI)

Meanwhile Allied fighter-bombers ranged behind the German front and into Germany and Holland, tangling enemy communications and transport, and attacking radar installations, enemy headquarters, and factories.

Mosquitoes were out on similar missions last night. They ranged from the English Channel to Hanover and south to Cologne, and bombed trains, five of them between Liège and the Ruhr. One train near Apeldoorn in Holland was totally destroyed. Large fires were left burning in Maestricht and Krefeld rail yards. Mosquitoes also attacked shipping off the Dutch coast.

Weather over the Channel today was bad, but British coastal and naval planes kept up their attacks on German shipping along the coast.

No heavy bomber operations were reported today over Germany, where a strong force of Fortresses yesterday attacked the rail hubs of Karlsruhe, Stuttgart, and Ludwigshafen. Escorting fighters destroyed 75 enemy planes on or over unprotected German airfields yesterday. During the day's operations 59 locomotives and over 400 vehicles were destroyed.

Commenting on the increased range of Allied medium bombers since they transferred to Continental air bases, the BBC air correspondent said: «Medium bombers now have the Reich within their range. To date, they have never reached out farther than 10 miles from the German frontier. But now these bombers, many hundreds strong, operating from medium height and carrying two to three tons of bombs, can cover western Germany. These medium bombers are every bit as powerful as the German bombers which attacked England throughout the winter of 1940.»

No flying-bomb attacks were reported over England today. During a recent attack, it is now revealed, one bomb struck the home of Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, but she escaped injury. (OWI - Reuter)

EISENHOWER URGES ENEMY TO SURRENDER

LONDON, September 6 — German soldiers were urged to lay down their arms and their officers were urged to order troops to cease firing by General Dwight Eisenhower in a broadcast today to members of the German Wehrmacht in the west.

The text of the appeal to German officers said:

«You know that the defeat of Germany is a military fact. To you, the inevitable consequences of party politics are clear: the senseless deaths of thousands of your men, and the destruction of German cities. You alone in Germany are now responsible if these things are not prevented. You alone in Germany have the power and authority to prevent them. Give orders to the soldiers under your command to cease fire.»

Appealing to the German soldiers, General Eisenhower stated:

«Your high ranking officers know that the war is lost. Those among them who realize their responsibility have given orders to cease fire. Only those who are utterly desperate and the Party fanatics insist that you have to sacrifice yourselves.

«From today until the time when everything is over, which means the official general capitulation, many soldiers will go to their deaths. Why should you be one of them? The outcome of the war has been decided. You have done your duty as soldiers, now you have duties at home.

«In American or British prison camps, you will receive the correct treatment soldiers deserve. Over 300,000 of you

3. If you are unable to escape to the country, do everything in your power to prevent the destruction of communications and industrial installations. As far as possible see that they are in good order when they fall into the hands of the Allies. Protect especially stores of petrol, oil, and lubricants against destruction by the enemy. All these facilities will soon be needed by the Allied armies.

4. On the arrival of Allied troops, obey precisely the instructions which are given to you by the Allied military authorities.

This is the second of a series of instructions which will come to you by radio. (BBC)

BRITAIN'S TOTAL BLACKOUT ENDS

LONDON, September 6 — After five years and a fortnight of blackout in Britain, the country is to be «half lit up» on September 17.

The British Home Secretary, Sir Herbert Morrison, in a series of sweeping relaxations of war regulations, announced that when British double summer time ends people all over Britain, except in a few special coastal areas, need no longer pull blackout curtains. If an air warning sounds, the lights must be turned out, or the old blackout curtains drawn.

Streets are to be brighter, and in some cases they will be practically back to the pre-war standard of lighting. More lighting will be permitted vehicles and bicycles also.

From September 12, all daylight fire-guard duties end throughout Britain. Night duties are also suspended, but the administrative machinery is to remain, and fire-guards will resume duties if incendiary bombs should come again.

Most of the whole-time civil defence service personnel in much of Britain will be released, and the services put on a part-time basis. There will also be a big release of part-timers, and those who remain must do a maximum of only 12 hours, instead of 48 hours, in four weeks.

Fire-guard and civil defence relaxations do not apply in full to London and eastern and southern parts of England, nor do they cover national fire service and police auxiliary services. (Reuter)

NO GERMAN PEACE APPROACHES

LONDON, September 6 — «To dispel peace rumors of the past 48 hours, I learn reliably that the Germans have made no peace approaches of any kind up to the present moment,» E. France Wighton, Reuter correspondent, said in a dispatch this afternoon.

Wighton said that the only person who can be approached is General Eisenhower, the Supreme Commander, and the only offer which he will accept is unconditional surrender, which must come from the German commander in the field.

The Reuter correspondent added that there will be no negotiation as a prelude to armistice, and there will be no dealing of any kind with Hitler or his Nazi colleagues. (Reuter)

AMERICANS ADVANCE 37 MILES IN SOUTH FRANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — American troops, making rapid progress up the Saone Valley, yesterday reached the very important road junction of Lons-le-Saunier, marking an advance of 37 miles northeast of Bourg-en-Bresse, it was announced today.

Other American troops took the village of Louhans, also an important road junction about 25 miles directly north of Montrevel, where sharp enemy counter-attacks were beaten off the day before. S.H.A.E.F. CALLS TO WORKERS IN GERMANY

SHAEF, September 6 — The following message was issued at the order of General Eisenhower today, addressed to foreign workers in Germany:

This is the second of a series of instructions by radio. These instructions will be repeated in leaflets dropped to you by Allied planes. The collapse of the German armies in the west means that battles will soon be fought on German soil. In view of this fact, I am issuing the following instructions to all foreign workers in combat areas.

1. Do not permit yourselves to be dragged deeper into Germany by the retreating Germans. As the Allied armies advance toward the area in which you are working, seize the best opportunity to go into hiding in the country and await their arrival.

2. Use every opportunity to gather information concerning movements of German troops, the identity of German units, in particular information concerning movements of German troops, the position of minefields. Watch carefully also the behaviour of the Germans, and be ready to supply evidence of any atrocities you may see committed.

Streets are to be brighter, and in some cases they will be practically back to the pre-war standard of lighting. More lighting will be permitted vehicles and bicycles also.

From September 12, all daylight fire-guard duties end throughout Britain. Night duties are also suspended, but the administrative machinery is to remain, and fire-guards will resume duties if incendiary bombs should come again.

AMERICANS ADVANCE 37 MILES IN SOUTH FRANCE

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — American troops, making rapid progress up the Saône Valley, yesterday reached the very important road junction of Lons-le-Saunier, marking an advance of 37 miles northeast of Bourg-en-Bresse, it was announced today.

Other American troops took the village of Louhans, also an important road junction about 25 miles directly north of Montrevel, where sharp enemy counter-attacks were beaten off the day before. Yesterday there was little fight left in the German forces who were retreating hastily up the valley and offering little or no opposition to the advancing Allied armies.

Both the village of Louhans and the town of Lons-le-Saunier, which has a population of some 13,000, are important road junctions leading north-south and east-west, offering our forces excellent transportation routes for the movement of men, supplies, and equipment.

Latest reports tonight disclosed that French troops continuing their advance northward up the Saône Valley occupied Chalon-sur-Saône, 35 miles north of Macon while some eight miles to the southeast American troops knocked out enemy resistance to take St. Germain du Plain.

Besides being a strategic crossroad center, Chalon-sur-Saône, with a population of about 28,000, is popular for its production of good wines and liquors. (PRO)

F.F.I. NARROW ESCAPE GAP FROM SOUTH FRANCE

LONDON, September 6 — French Forces of the Interior have concentrated on reducing the bottleneck through which German troops are withdrawing from southwest France.

Resistance forces have occupied Chabris, in Indre Department, and Selles-sur-Cher, both southwest of Tours. The Germans have evacuated Vierzon, northwest of Bourges, while east of Bourges they are engaged in heavy fighting near La Charite and Pouilly, where they are trying to cross the Loire.

Energetic action from FFI men of the Saône et Loire Department saved from destruction by fire relief shipments in Mâcon railway station intended for French prisoners of war. The relief packages, mainly from the United States and Canada, were loaded in 25 freight cars, and were in danger of being burned when the Germans set fire to the station the night before they left Mâcon. The supplies were discharged from eight cars, and the 17 remaining cars were removed from danger by train crews and French Resistance members.

A delegate of the French Red Cross publicly thanked those responsible for saving the foodstuffs, which will go forward to their destination as soon as possible. (PWB)

RUSSIANS REACH YUGOSLAVIAN BORDER CAPTURE TURNU-SEVERIN

MOSCOW, September 6 — While Russian troops racing eastward across Rumania today reached the Yugoslavian border and captured Turnu-Severin, Soviet forces northeast of Warsaw captured the river fortress town of Ostroleka, and cleared the east bank of the River Narew over the last 50 miles before its junction with the River Bug. To celebrate the storming of Ostroleka, Marshal Stalin ordered red, white, green, and blue flares to be thrown up by the guns of Moscow firing victory salvos.

Marshal Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army today made one of the most impressive one-day advances of the entire 18-day Soviet offensive in Rumania, and after a drive of some 30 miles, captured not only Turnu-Severin, but also Camnu-Lung, Alexandria, Caracal, and over 100 other towns and villages.

Marshal Malinovsky's forces are now within a few miles of the Iron Gate, the great Danube defile where the river cuts through the narrow gap in the Transylvanic Alps. They are about 110 miles from Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital.

German Counter-Attacks

Troops of General Zakharov's 2nd White Russian Army, who developed their great new offensive against southern East Prussia with the storming of Ostroleka and the clearing of the Narew river's eastern banks, are waging furious battles against German counter-attacks bent on holding up the Soviet advance at all costs.

The Germans are now throwing in Tiger tanks and Ferdinand guns in groups of 20 to 30 at a time. They are mining every road, every village, and every river-crossing and copse. A front-line dispatch said special German units were patrolling the German rear to force their men to fight to the last, and to curb the increasing desertions on the northern front.

Northeast of Warsaw, Soviet troops improved their positions in the vicinity of Praga as a result of counter-attacks. Wolowin, a suburb of Praga, which changed hands several times, is now firmly in Russian possession.

On one narrow sector here, hundreds of German lorries were caught jammed together at a river crossing and were systematically smashed to pieces by Soviet Stormoviks. Hedgehopping Soviet pilots pursued the fleeing Germans to the river, and machine-gunned them in the water.

Meanwhile, inside Warsaw, the Polish Home Army has broken up the first large-scale attack against the central part of Warsaw, a communique from the embattled city announced today. General Bor said the Germans based their operations in the Old City which the Poles evacuated yesterday, and attacked under a screen of artillery fire. Their attack was repulsed by Polish Patriots with heavy losses to the Nazis.

On the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier, dispatches report continued hostilities with the Red Army troops pressing

Asked whether the Red Army already had crossed the Bulgarian border, M. Molotov replied that the note had been handed to the Sofia Emissary only a few hours previously.

In reply to a question as to whether the governments of Great Britain and the United States were aware of the declaration, the Soviet Commissar answered that before handing the note to the Bulgarian Minister, he had communicated its contents to the ambassadors of those two governments. RADIO MOSCOW APPEALS TO BULGARIANS

MOSCOW, September 6 — Radio Moscow today broadcast an editorial from the newspaper, Pravda, appealing to the Bulgarian people to take their fate into their own hands and free themselves from the «ruling clique.»

The editorial from Pravda, official journal of the Communist Party, was entitled «Let Us Settle With Hitler's Bulgarian Lackeys,» and said:

It seems clear now that the Bulgarian ruling clique does not want to break with Germany and bring Bulgaria into the democratic camp. All these Bozilovs, Bagrianovs, and Muravievs do not wish the German yoke to be removed from the Bulgarian people, and are unable to remove it themselves.

This is the second time in 30 years that Bulgarian rulers have indulged in war on Germany's side against the great Slav power of Russia and her allies; but, as in the last war, the Bulgarian people have opposed these adventures by the ruling clique.

Bulgaria must free herself from this clique. The Bulgarian people must take its fate in its own hands for the final smashing of Hitlerite Germany, and for Bulgarian freedom and independence. (Reuter)

FINNISH PREMIER HEADS ARMISTICE GROUP

LONDON, September 6 — Finnish Premier Antti Hackzell is heading the Finnish armistice delegation to Russia, the Finnish radio reported today.

The delegation includes the Finnish Defense Minister, General Walden, and the Finnish chief of staff, General Heinrich, the broadcast said.

BULGARIA QUICKLY REQUESTS ARMISTICE

LONDON, September 6 — «Bulgaria has reacted quickly to the Russian declaration of war,» said the BBC today. The broadcast continued:

«In the early hours of this morning, four Bulgarian ministers called at the Soviet Legation in Sofia and asked the Charge d'Affaires to pass on to Moscow the Bulgarian government's request for an armistice.

«They had come straight from an all-night session of the Bulgarian Council of Ministers.

«This Council had been summoned early in the afternoon when news was received in Sofia that German troops had been in action against the Bulgarians.

«According to the Bulgarian radio, the German troops attacked Bulgarian Army units and had captured a corps commander with his staff.»

In Moscow, Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov held one of his rare press conferences 15 minutes after he had dismissed the Bulgarian Minister, and read to Russian and foreign correspondents the Soviet statement declaring war on Bulgaria.

MOSCOW CALLS GERMAN WORKERS TO STRIKE

MOSCOW, September 6 — German armament workers were called upon yesterday by a Free Germany Broadcast from Moscow to paralyze Hitler's war machine by striking before it is too late.

The broadcast said that the German people are duty bound to put a stop to misery and death by a general national strike.

«The task is not an easy one, but it can be done, and it must be done», the radio said.

Employers, workers, and employees were told to set up people's councils within the Free Germany Movement, to appeal to foreign workers, who practically everywhere constitute a majority of the employees, and to contact other factories with a view to establishing unity in organization and leadership.

The broadcast concluded:

«The mood for a general strike is ripe; it is becoming more so every day with every new defeat on the fronts and every new act of terror.

«If you act now in your own interest and in the people's interest, then the day will be near when the accursed Hitler regime will be overthrown and peace secured.

«If you want to act at all, you will have to act now, as it will be too late in a few months.» (PWB)

8th AND 5th ARMIES CONTINUE ADVANCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — Fifth Army forces, sweeping northward into the Serchio and the Pesca valleys, Tuesday entered the ancient walled town of Lucca and occupied the important road center of Altopascio, as 8th Army troops pressed on against weakening German resistance on the Adriatic coast of Italy.

Lt. General Mark Clark's troops, meeting only scattered enemy forces, Tuesday captured the dominating heights of Monte Albano, easternmost of the two mountain masses flanking the low Pesca Plain north of the Arno, and thrust to within six miles of Pistoia, 22 miles northwest of Lucca, to gain control of all the dominating terrain between Florence and the sea.

On the Adriatic coast, the savage German resistance of the past two days fell off Tuesday, as the battered and weary parachute veterans, who had fought so bitterly to stem the Allied advance, were relieved and replaced by troops of the 362nd Turkoman Division, officially described here as a mere "hotch-potch" of men.

Canadians Near Rimini

Eighth Army Canadian forces continued their hammering attacks to drive the enemy from their ridgetop positions between Abissinia and Misano, and in the area of Coriano, a small town four miles in from the coast, they drove forward to within 1,000 yards of the Marano River and within five miles of the port of Rimini.

Although Canadian patrol forces have penetrated Coriano, this German stronghold remained in enemy hands Tuesday, with heavy fighting both north and south. German forces counter attacked just south of the Marano River, with undisclosed results. At the village of San Savino, not quite two miles to the south of Coriano, 8th Army tank and infantry forces clashed in heavy fighting with German infantry and anti-tank guns.

Farther south along the coastal corridor, British troops reached the village of Cevplabbate, seven miles inland and on the north bank of the Conca River against only moderate opposition. German forces holding out in the Montefiore-Conca sector were driven northward. The town of Auditore, 11 miles inland and a mile north of the Foglia River, has been cleared of enemy opposition, it was reported.

In the valley of the Apennines, and the upper Tiber and Arno River valleys, no change in the main position of Allied forces was reported.

North of Florence, British troops were making steady progress, with leading elements six miles north of the Arno River. (PRO)

8th ATTACKS AT RIMINI

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 6 — Rimini is the gateway to the plains of Lombardy, and is thus the next Allied objective in the task of clearing the Germans out of the whole of Italy.

The town of Pesaro was skilfully liberated by the Allies, although the 1st German Parachute Division was ordered to defend it to the last man and the last round. Evidently the parachutists preferred to live, rather than to die bottled up in the Pesaro trap. Such, too, was the case at Cattolica, which was speedily by-passed by the Allies, but not before the slippery parachutists had again packed up and departed hurriedly.

A UNN correspondent had a grand-stand view of the onslaught on Rimini. Explosives of every sort were rained on the German positions and fortifications. From the ground, from the sea, and from the air, the enemy was pounded.

Puffs of exploding shells were everywhere. Then came the air attack. Now flights took up the onslaught in quick succession, disregarding the anti-aircraft fire of the defences. [illegible] was followed by high plumes of and also pounded the Novi Sad rail yards, 45 miles northwest of Belgrade on the main route from Hungary.

In Hungary, Liberators escorted by Mustangs bombed the Nyiregyhaza rail yards 120 miles northeast of Budapest, on the main line from Rumania to Hungary and Central Europe. A good concentration of bombs landed on the target.

Flying Fortresses, escorted by Mustangs of an all-Negro fighter group, bombed the Oradea rail yards, 125 miles southeast of Budapest, near the Hungarian border of Rumania, getting good results. No enemy fighters were met, said early reports. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. POUNDS NORTH ITALY, BALKAN TARGETS

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — Up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF yesterday attacked enemy communications lines in northern Italy and Hungary, as medium and fighter-bombers attacked roads, rails, and supply points in direct support of Allied ground troops in Italy.

Enemy escape routes through Yugoslavia, Albania, and Greece were steadily being cut by the Balkan Air Force, which is concentrating on throttling the enemy movements northward. According to an official report today, there are already signs of paralysis in the Serbian railway system on which the Germans largely rely to get their troops from Greece.

In Italy, heavies bombed the Ferrara bridge for the sixth time in less than two weeks, and last night the Ferrara railway yards were attacked.

In Hungary, escorted heavy bombers dropped a heavy concentration of steel on the Budapest north and south railroad bridges, and 15 miles north of Budapest, Liberators with Mustang escort bombed the Saib railroad bridge for the first time, with a good concentration reported on this important link between Vienna and Budapest. Other heavy formations covered the Szolnok bridge, 60 miles southeast of Budapest. (PRO)

15th A.A.F. BOMB AND FIGHTER GROUPS DECORATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — America's highest award for a combat organization, two battle streamers representing two unit citations and the distinguished unit badge with one cluster, was presented to the 451st B-24 Liberator Bomber Group by Major General Nathan Twining, commanding general of the 15th AAF on Sunday at an Italian air base.

The decorations were for the February 25 attack on Regensburg's Prufening aircraft factory in Germany, and for the April 5 mission to the Ploesti oil refineries. Combat and ground men alike were commended for their untiring work to insure the success of the operations.

In its 3,916 individual combat sorties, the 451st Bomber Group dropped 7,660 tons of bombs on 10 enemy-occupied countries of southern Europe, while gunners shot down 150 of the Luftwaffe's prized fighters.

General Twining also awarded the blue ribbon of a distinguished unit citation to the veteran 15th AAF 31st Fighter Group.

Pioneer and top-scoring P-51 Mustang Fighter group in the Mediterranean Theater, the 31st was cited for its outstanding performance of duty on April 27 during bombing operations over Ploesti. On that date, the Mustangs provided target cover for seven groups of heavy bombers, and, though considerably outnumbered by enemy fighters, the 31st Fighter Group successfully warded off the enemy attacks against the bombers and shot down 16 enemy planes and probably destroyed or damaged many others.

The 31st has shot down approximately 500 enemy planes of all types. (PRO)

At the village of San Savino, not quite two miles to the south of Coriano, 8th Army tank and infantry forces clashed in heavy fighting with German infantry and anti-tank guns.

Farther south along the coastal corridor, British troops reached the village of Cevolabate, seven miles inland and on the north bank of the Conca River, against only moderate opposition. German forces holding out in the Montefiore-Conca sector were driven northward. The town of Auditore, 11 miles inland and a mile north of the Foglia River, has been cleared of enemy opposition, it was reported.

In the valley of the Apennines and the upper Tiber and Arno River valleys, no change in the main position of Allied forces was reported.

North of Florence, British troops were making steady progress, with leading elements six miles north of the Arno River. (PRO)

8th ATTACKS AT RIMINI

WITH 8TH ARMY, September 6 — Rimini is the gateway to the plains of Lombardy, and is thus the next Allied objective in the task of clearing the Germans out of the whole of Italy.

The town of Pesaro was skilfully liberated by the Allies, although the 1st German Parachute Division was ordered to defend it to the last man and the last round. Evidently the parachutists preferred to live, rather than to die bottled up in the Pesaro trap. Such, too, was the case at Cattolica, which was speedily by-passed by the Allies, but not before the slippery parachutists had again packed up and departed hurriedly.

A UNN correspondent had a grand-stand view of the onslaught on Rimini. Explosives of every sort were rained on the German positions and fortifications. From the ground, from the sea, and from the air, the enemy was pounded.

Puffs of exploding shells were everywhere. Then came the air attack. New flights took up the onslaught in quick succession, disregarding the anti-aircraft fire of the defences. The thud of the bombs was followed by high plumes of smoke.

Away to the right, where the Adriatic spilled lazily on the coast, warships appeared cutting through the sea. They hove-to and opened a terrific barrage on enemy positions, covering them with belching smoke.

The whole attack was a mighty spectacle of power and superiority. The enemy was helpless in dealing with the avalanche of steel from the land, air and sea. They were out-weighted, out-manned, and out-fought. (UNN)

HEAVIES ATTACK BALKAN TRANSPORT LINES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — Up to 750 heavy bombers of the 15th AAF, escorted by Mustangs and Lightnings, today attacked enemy troops, transport, and communications lines in a crushing blow to bottlenecked enemy withdrawals northward from below the Danube in the Balkans, it was announced tonight.

In Yugoslavia, a large formation of Liberators sighted a concentration of German troops, tanks, and other vehicles all jammed up in the small town of Leskovac, 150 miles southeast of Belgrade, and promptly attacked them with full loads of bombs.

Another Liberator formation over Yugoslavia successfully bombed the Sava rail bridge just outside of Belgrade, while the Germans largely rely to get their troops from Greece.

In Italy, heavies bombed the Ferrara bridge for the sixth time in less than two weeks, and last night the Ferrara railway yards were attacked.

In Hungary, escorted heavy bombers dropped a heavy concentration of steel on the Budapest north and south railroad bridges, and 15 miles north of Budapest, Liberators with Mustang escort bombed the Szob railroad bridge for the first time, with a good concentration reported on this important link between Vienna and Budapest. Other heavy formations covered the Szolnok bridge, 80 miles southeast of Budapest. (PRO)

15th A.A.F. BOMB AND FIGHTER GROUPS DECORATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — America's highest award for a combat organization, two battle streamers representing two unit citations and the distinguished unit badge with oak cluster, was presented to the 451st B-24 Liberator Bomber Group by Major General Nathan Twining, commanding general of the 15th AAF on Sunday at an Italian air base.

The decorations were for the February 25 attack on Regensburg's Prufening aircraft factory in Germany, and for the April 5 mission to the Ploesti oil refineries. Combat and ground men alike were commended for their untiring work to insure the success of the operations.

In its 3,616 individual combat sorties, the 451st Bomber Group dropped 7,890 tons of bombs on 10 enemy-occupied countries of southern Europe, while gunners shot down 159 of the Luftwaffe's prized fighters.

General Twining also awarded the blue ribbon of a distinguished unit citation to the veteran 15th AAF 31st Fighter Group.

Pioneer and top-scoring P-51 Mustang fighter group in the Mediterranean Theater, the 31st was cited for its outstanding performance of duty on April 2 during bombing operations over Ploesti. On that date, the Mustangs provided target cover for seven groups of heavy bombers, and, though considerably outnumbered by enemy fighters, the 31st Fighter Group successfully warded off the enemy attacks against the bombers and shot down 16 enemy planes and probably destroyed or damaged many others.

The 31st has shot down approximately 500 enemy planes of all types. (PRO)

GENERAL FREYBERG INJURED

WELLINGTON, September 6 — Lieutenant General Sir Bernard Freyberg, V. C., general officer commanding the 2nd New Zealand Expeditionary Forces, was injured when his reconnaissance aircraft crashed while landing at a forward airfield in Italy Sunday, Prime Minister Peter Fraser announced today.

General Freyberg suffered an injury of his right side, but after an operation his condition was reported satisfactory. (Reuter)

YUGOSLAV OFFENSIVE AGAINST COMMUNICATIONS

LONDON, September 6 — Today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters disclosed that Yugoslav Patriots are successfully continuing their widespread attacks on communications and supply routes throughout Yugoslavia.

The communique, broadcast by the Free Yugoslav Radio, said an all-out offensive has been launched, with Patriots cutting lines and blowing up bridges. Heavy demolitions were reported to have occurred along routes leading from Serbia and Croatia toward the Adriatic. Traffic between Dalmatia and the interior of the country is said to be at a standstill.

In the Uzice sector, the Germans are being pushed back so rapidly that they are leaving their wounded behind. The town of Kladanj, southwest of Belgrade, was liberated. Most of the province of Styria, in Slovenia, has now been freed of the Germans.

During yesterday's operations, the communique added, more than 1,000 Germans were killed and a Bulgarian colonel, commanding troops guarding communication lines west of Nish, was taken prisoner.

Radio Moscow reported that the Soviet Supreme Council has awarded Marshal Tito the Order of Suvorov, First Class, as «a recognition for great leadership and skilful handling of the Patriot war against the Germans».

Through a recruiting office set up in Paris by the Yugoslav embassy there, Yugoslavs residing in France will be able to join the Yugoslav Army of Liberation, the French National Radio said yesterday. (Free Yugoslav Radio)

ALBANIANS CUT GERMAN COMMUNICATIONS

LONDON, September 6 — Continuing their systematic destruction of key German communications lines, Albanian Patriots have twice cut the main road from Greece through Korce to the railway at Florina, it was disclosed today.

An official statement said that on August 26, and again two days later (after the Germans had made temporary repairs), units of the Second P.N.C. brigade blew craters up to 100 feet wide in the main road just south of Leskoviq. This road is vital for traffic from northern Greece to the nearest railhead leading back to Germany.

A second success was reported from Dibra, important junction on one of the only three routes linking Albania with the railway supply route in Yugoslavia. Despite reinforcements, the German garrison was driven out after a month-long battle with the First Division P.N.L., supported by Macedonian brigades.

In northern Albania, the patriot leader Gani Kryezmi, whose forces have been continually attacking enemy posts in the last two months, especially around the third and northern route out of Albania (the Kukes), has thrown back a German attack at Dobreti, it was stated. (PWB)

ALLIES KNOCK OUT 36 MORE JAPANESE SHIPS

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 6 — In a two-day series of attacks, Allied aircraft ranging over the southwest Pacific have sunk or damaged a total of 36 more Japanese ships of all sizes, General MacArthur's communique announced today.

Twenty-one of the craft were accounted for off much-bombed Halmahera Island, south of the Philippines. Eight of these were merchant vessels — one a 4,000-tonner — and the remainder were barges, on which the Japanese are steadily becoming more dependent as their merchant fleet dwindles.

In the Philippines themselves, Allied air patrols sank a 1,600-ton freighter. Another freighter was driven ashore elsewhere.

Off Celebes Island, 15 small, troop-filled Japanese craft were sunk or damaged.

The chief of United States Intelligence in the Southwest Pacific, Brigadier General Willoughby, said today that the turning point of the Dutch New Guinea campaign was the Allied landings on the Admiralty Islands early this year, which left the Japanese 17th and 18th armies stranded and broke their air shuttle-service between Wewak and Rabaul.

General Willoughby, a veteran of the Philippines campaign under General MacArthur, made this statement in the course of a review of the fighting in New Guinea. The Intelligence chief emphasized the scope of the operations in the Admiralty landings, and compared the supply problem with that which would be involved in moving an army from the shores of the Black Sea across Europe to Iceland.

In 1943, General Willoughby recalled, the Allies had only a handful of divisions, some landing craft, a few cargo ships, and what he termed an ill-assorted collection of planes, while other heavies hunted a railway station at Moulmein, an important Burmese communications point.

Long-range RAF and USAAF fighters struck at the Ywataung railway yards in the Mandalay area.

RAF and Indian fighters and fighter-bombers of the 3rd Tactical Air Force attacked enemy positions, troop concentrations, and road and river-transport in the Arakan and Chindwin areas.

No Allied planes were lost in all the widespread operations.

The communique reported some (naval) activity along the railway towards Hopin and in the Kaza area.

The Chinese High Command said today that on the Yunnan front, the Japanese continued their attempts to relieve their garrisons at the Burma Road towns of Lungling and Mangshu by attacks on Chinese roadblocks, but the Chinese repelled the assaults. Farther northeast, the Chinese cleared a ridge on Sungshan peak near the south opening of the Burma Road.

U. S. 14th Air Force bombers and fighters carried out concentrated attacks on Kiyang and Hongyang, causing a great number of enemy casualties. P-40 fighter-bombers attacked Japanese troops and installations northeast of Lungling.

P-40's also hit the Charuning area three times Monday, strafing enemy cavalry and blasting installations.

Other Japanese troop concentrations were attacked by P-40's at Kiyang, on the Songyang-Lungling road.

2,344,000 JAP CASUALTIES IN CHINA

CHUNGKING, September 6 — The Japanese have suffered 2,344,000 casualties among their combat troops and 600,000 in their garrison, supply, and transport units during seven years of war in China up to 1 July 1944, it was officially stated here today.

Chinese casualties were said to total 2,302,220. (OWI)

AMERICAN MISSION ARRIVES IN CHUNGKING

CHUNGKING, September 6 — General Joseph Stilwell, Maj. Gen. Patrick Hurley, and Donald Nelson, Chairman of the War Production Board, arrived here today, the Associated Press reported.

The large transport plane carrying President Roosevelt's emissaries was met at a suburban airport by American and Chinese officials. The party included General Chu Shih-Ming, Chinese military attaché in Washington. (OWI)

LONDON, September 6 — One Japanese vice admiral and five rear admirals have been killed in recent fighting, said an official Japanese statement quoted by Radio Tokyo. The admirals were all stationed in the command area of Yokosuka naval base. (Reuter)

"LONG AND HARD" FIGHT IN PACIFIC

WASHINGTON, September 6 — U.S. Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal disclosed today that Japan has lost the use of 50 major island bases in the Pacific, but is now able to mass airpower in a comparatively small area, so that a «long and hard» fight is in prospect.

He said that a year ago the Japanese had their air forces spread over an immense area, but that with the capture, neutralization, and by-passing of some 50 enemy bases by American forces, «the Japanese are relieved of the responsibility of supplying them with planes.»

Forrestal said the Japanese can now center their airpower in the narrowing theater of action: «the Philippines, China, and Japan proper.»

He added that the Japanese have been saving their forces for movements to come, and also have made «many

In 1943, General Willoughby recalled, the Allies had only a handful of divisions, some landing craft, a few cargo ships, and what he termed an ill-assorted collection of planes. Nevertheless, the Japanese recognized the precariousness of their position, and tried to withdraw to Hollandia and Wewak, but the Allies anticipated their move and landed in the Admiralties.

The General paid warm tribute to Australian soldiers and supplies. « The aid given, » he said, « was astonishing. »

The BBC said today that Allied air operations have more than doubled in the Southwest Pacific this year. In the first six months, Allied planes carried out as many operations as they did during all of 1943. Sorties and flying time have quadrupled so far this year, and Japanese losses have been three times as great, the BBC said.

JAPANESE STILL RETREATING FROM INDIA

KANDY, CEYLON, September 6 — American and British planes are continuing to attack Japanese forces retreating from India, and the enemy units have broken off contact with the Allied troops, the Southeast Asia Command headquarters communique reported today.

Strategic Air Force heavy bombers hit Sangkhla, on the Thailand-Burma railway, and also attacked railway yards in the Mandalay area in northern Burma. American bombers heavily bombed targets at Haka, south of Tiddim, Kanjing.

P-40's also hit the Charming area three times Monday, strafing enemy cavalry and blasting installations.

He said that a year ago the Japanese had their air forces spread over an immense area, but that with the capture, neutralization, and by-passing of some 50 enemy bases by American forces, « the Japanese are relieved of the responsibility of supplying them with planes. »

Forrestal said the Japanese can now center their airpower in the narrowing theater of action, « the Philippines, China, and Japan proper. »

He added that the Japanese have been saving their forces for engagements to come, and also have made « many important technical improvements » in their planes.

« Thus, » the Navy Secretary said, « the United States Navy will face a Jap airpower in the coming year that will be stronger both quantitatively and qualitatively. The fight will be a long and hard one. »

It will be a major problem to build up power in the Pacific after the European war ends, Forrestal stated, pointing out that a two-year period was required to attain the margin of power that is defeating Germany in Europe. He expressed his belief, however, that a shorter period of time would suffice to defeat Japan.

The War Department stated today that millions of American fighting men and millions of tons of tanks, planes, guns, ammunition, and food will be shifted to the Far East as soon as Germany is defeated. (OWI)

U. S. ARMY PLANS LIMITED DEMOBILIZATION

WASHINGTON, September 6 — Only a limited demobilization of the American Army is planned when hostilities against Germany cease, a War Department statement said today.

The war against Japan will have first priority in military calculations, the statement added, and said millions of American troops and millions of tons of tanks, planes, guns, ammunition, and food will be shifted to the Far East as soon as Germany is defeated.

Releases of men to civilian life, the War Department said, will be based on length of service, time spent overseas, combat record, and number of dependents.

War Department plans for demobilization were presented yesterday to House of Representatives' Military Affairs Committee.

Meeting with the committee were Major General William F. Tompkins, chief of the Special Planning Branch; Brigadier General Edward Smith, executive for the reserve officers and the ROTC; Major General Lewis B. Hershey, head of Selective Service; and his principal aide, Colonel Francis V. Keesling. The Navy was represented by Captain William R. Terrell, whose job corresponds to that of General Tompkins.

Meanwhile, Senator Elmer Thomas of Utah, acting chairman of the Senate Military affairs Committee, said representatives of the War Department had been discussing with his committee plans for the readjustment of army personnel after the defeat of Germany.

The conferences he stated, were sought by Secretary of War Henry Stimson, whom he commended for «full cooperation with the legislative branch.»

Navy Will Expand

Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal stated today that there will be no demobilization of the United States Navy when Germany is defeated, but that «on the contrary, the Navy is expanding and will continue to expand.»

In a special statement on the subject of Navy demobilization, the Navy Secretary said: «The collapse of Germany will present the Navy with new tasks. One of these will be transporting men and material freed from the European theater into the Pacific, in order to deliver heavier blows against Japan. Germany's defeat will result in a redistribution, rather than a reduction of naval strength.

«The Navy has been at work on demobilization methods for the past year, and has completed tentative plans to meet any contingency. In developing these plans, the Navy has worked in close cooperation with the Army, with the result that present plans agree in principle with those announced by the Army.»

Navy demobilization must await the defeat of Japan, and «a final and precise blueprint is not expected to be drawn until the defeat of Japan is at hand,» the statement declared.

Forrestal told a news conference that Navy strength is now slightly above 3,000,000 and that it will continue to grow until the authorized strength of nearly 4,000,000 is reached next July. (OWI)

WILSON CONFERS WITH T. U. COMMISSION

AFHQ, September 6 — General Sir Henry Maitland Wilson, Supreme Allied Commander in the Mediterranean, conferred Tuesday with members of the Anglo-American International Trades Union Commission now visiting Italy, it was announced today.

The Commission consists of Walter Schevenels, General Secretary of the International Federation of Labor; Tom [illegible] Congress; Will Lawther, the weather since the roof was destroyed by fire on July 27, had already begun, under the supervision of experts of the Allied Military Government.

The cloistered cemetery, which housed one of the most treasured art collections in Italy, was the scene of a fire which was not combatable due to the fact that the German forces in Pisa had previously requisitioned, and removed, all fire fighting apparatus from the city. In addition, they had cut off the water supply.

The entire timber roof of the structure burned away, melting the outer lead covering. The molten metal coated every piece of sculpture and the carved stone floor with lead, and the frescoes on the wall were left exposed to the weather. The crypts all along the walls were burst open from the heat, exposing the bodies of the dead.

According to Archbishop Gabriele Vittorio, only one German soldier attempted to assist in the vain attempts to extinguish the blaze; the others showed no interest.

Among the more notable works which were seriously damaged was the famous «Triumph of Death» on the south wall, and the Mappa Mundi, famous map of the world on the north wall. In addition, all 15 of Benozzo Gozzoli's frescoes, including the noted «Tower of Babel», were damaged. (UNN)

BALDANZI SPEAKS TO NAPLES POPULATION

NAPLES, September, 6 — In a radio broadcast to the people of Naples, George Baldanzi, CIO representative, said:

«There will be many difficulties for you to face in the days to come. Courage, will-power, and determination, of which only a free people is capable, are required of you.

«Your task is to fight until victory is won and then to organize that political and economic order which will permit everyone to live in peace, with respect and security for all.»

ALLIES AID WAR AGAINST ANIMAL DISEASES

NAPLES, September 6 — Professor Carlo Cerruti, Director of an Institute for the Prevention of Disease to Animals, today stated that Allied authorities have aided Italian veterinary officials in the fight against hog cholera.

«In the struggle now in progress against cholera, Allied assistance has been noteworthy, and will contribute to saving an important part of the animal population of southern Italy. «Fifty thousand doses of vaccine and, recently, 327,000 cubic centimeters of curative serum, valued at 1,500,000 lire, have been received,» Professor Cerruti said. Allied authorities have also supplied medicinal and chemical products.

Due to the collaboration between the Allies and Italian authorities, a plan has been approved for the immunization of animals and for the study of parasitic diseases.

In spite of great difficulties, Professor Cerruti said that his institute, since the beginning of this year, produced 1,000,000 cubic centimeters of various vaccines and sera.

This production is almost sufficient to meet the requirements of southern Italy. (UNN)

PISA RESUMING PEACE-TIME EXISTENCE

PISA, September 6 — Pisa was striving to settle down to a normal peace-time existence yesterday, reported a UNN correspondent. Long queues at the various food distribution centers throughout the heavily-ruined city showed that people were coming out from their shelters, despite the fact that the Germans were continuing to shell the city. Several shells dropped in the center of the town yesterday afternoon, following an hour and a half bombardment the previous night.

Despite this, all the roads approaching Pisa from the south, were lined with carts, bicycles, and barrows as Pisans attempted to return to their homes.

All cultural monuments were under guard to prevent looting, and nobody, including Allied troops, was permitted to enter any of these institutions, including the famous Leaning Tower.

Prospects for a good crop of olives are excellent. (UNN)

HARVEST IN FLORENCE PROVINCE GOOD

FLORENCE, September 6 — Lieut. Col. R. L. Ralph, Provincial Commissioner of AMG, today told a reporter of the newspaper, Nazione del Popolo, that this year's grain harvest in Florence Province is particularly good.

It is estimated at 1,000,000 quintals, a third of which is expected to flow into the Granaries of the People.

Already, 90,000 quintals have been threshed.

The major problems to surmount are the shortage of motor transport, and of granaries, which were destroyed by the Germans. AMG is doing its utmost to help by supplying farmers with military transport. (UNN)

SWEDEN TO BAR WAR CRIMINALS

STOCKHOLM, September 6 — Sweden will refuse asylum to war criminals, and return to their own countries for justice any who «slip through» the Swedish frontiers, Minister of Social Affairs Gustav Moeller declared in a speech Tuesday night.

Moeller said: «During this war... there have been committed terrible deeds of such a nature that hardly anybody previously would have thought them possible in a world calling itself civilized. Such deeds have been committed above all in the occupied countries.»

Pointing out the probability that war criminals will attempt to escape to neutral countries «in order to elude punishment,» Moeller stated: «Our policy so far has been to keep our frontiers open for refugees, but it should not be concluded that Sweden will be open, or is prepared to grant asylum to those who, by their actions, have defied the conscience of the civilized world or betrayed their own country.»

In the event of a «large or small invasion of such 'political' refugees,» Moeller said, «it can be taken for granted that Sweden will close its frontiers and should anyone slip through he will be returned to his own country.» (OWI)

ENVOY DENIES ARGENTINA WILL BE NAZI HAVEN

WASHINGTON, September 6 — The Argentine Charge d'Affaires here, Dr. Rodolfo Garcia Arias, issued a statement Tuesday denying reports that Argentina might become a post-war asylum for Nazis.

Arias said that he had «express instructions» from his government to declare that the reports were «entirely unfounded.» (FWB)

Elsewhere, active patrolling continues without any appreciable change in our forward positions.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forward elements have moved forward at several points in eastern France between the Saône River and the Swiss border, while the rapid advance up the Saône Valley continues.

The important road junction towns of Lonhans and Lons-le-Saunier have been occupied by American troops.

In the advance northward in the Saône Valley, the French have occupied Cluny, Seumoxy-le-Grande, and Le Villars, and are approaching Chalon-sur-Saône.

Navy:

It is reported that on September 3, a cruiser of the U.S. Navy and destroyers bombarded enemy batteries in the Monte Carlo area. On September 4, the small German garrison fled from Monaco to the hills after destroying the defenses. Various enemy batteries in the neighborhood are still active and on September 4, one of them opened ineffectual fire on the ships operating off the coast.

Yesterday, September 5, while supporting the 8th Army on the Adriatic coast near Rimini, His Majesty's ships Undine and Urchin fired more than 600 rounds at enemy batteries and gun positions. The results were successful, direct hits being obtained and vital batteries being silenced. There was some ineffectual return fire from the shore. Our minesweepers are at work in the same area.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Yesterday, tactical aircraft continued their assault against enemy communications in northern Italy. Medium bombers attacked 14 rail and road bridges over a wide area from Lake Maggiore to the Po Estuary with good results. Fighter-bombers and fighters carried out attacks on rail yards, bridges, roads, supply dumps, rail rolling stock, and motor transport. Other tactical aircraft attacked defended areas in close support of ground operations in Italy.

Medium forces of escorted heavy bombers attacked railroad bridges near Budapest and Szolnok in Hungary and at Ferrara.

Coastal aircraft attacked shipping in the Gulf of Genoa.

Fighters and fighter-bombers were active against targets in Yugoslavia.

Last night, our bombers attacked the rail yards at Ferrara.

From these operations, 11 of our aircraft are missing. Two enemy aircraft were destroyed.

MAAF flew approximately 1,959 sorties. (PRO)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 6 — Today's communique:

In the Brussels and Antwerp sectors the Allied forces were engaged yesterday in mopping up operations.

Farther west, forward elements of our armor have reached the outskirts of Ghent.

Allied troops continued to make good progress north of the Somme reaching the line Aire to Saint Omar yesterday evening.

Other forces, by-passing Boulogne, have reached the area of the Foret de Guines.

Farther south, our troops, advancing into Belgium, have freed Charleroi and Namur. Crossings of the Meuse River have been made at Dinant and Givet, where enemy opposition was light.

Mopping up continued in the area southwest of Mons, where more enemy troops were surrounded.

Fighters and fighter-bombers strafed and dive-bombed enemy airfields, road convoys and railway trains in Holland and western Germany yesterday.

[illegible] hundred and forty-three aircraft were destroyed

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 6 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Heavy fighting continues on the Adriatic sector where troops of the 8th Army have driven the enemy from positions on a ridge from Coriano to the sea, and are now approaching the Marano River. In the high ground on the left of this advance, heavy fighting is taking place in and around the key town of Coriano.

Further advances have been made by the 5th Army west of Florence, and the town of Altopascio has been captured, and patrols have entered the important city of Lucca.

North of Florence, British troops continue to make progress against stiff resistance in the high ground overlooking the city.

There was some [illegible] return fire from the shore. Our minesweepers are at work in the area.

MOSCOW, September 6 — Tonight's communique:

Troops of the 2nd White Russian Front today captured by assault the important strongpoint of the German defences on the River Narev, the city and fortress of Ostrolenko.

South of Ostralenko, our troops completely cleared the enemy from the eastern bank of River Narev, and also occupied over 40 other populated localities, including the railway station and junction of Ostrolenko, and the localities of Krusheva, Chelsty, Sotnik, Petalova, Samski-Chelnye, Ponykov, and Story.

Northeast of Prago, our troops — as a result of counter-attacks — improved their positions.

The city of Volomin, which several times changed hands, was again recaptured by our troops.

In Rumania, our troops occupied in the course of their advance the cities of Campolung, southwest of Brashov, Caracal, Alexandria, Zimnicea, and also over 100 other populated localities, including Albute, Turtuleshti, Konstesthki, Babaneshti, Trindenye, Rica, Turduleshti, Kalemberu, Turetu, and Suhuiev, and the railway stations of Tukiny, Pepeshti, Burzye, Nitoshye, Paloky, Douka, Papa, Turetu, Bubezku, Tuganeshti, Trindaza, Soimu, and Ulmulest.

Our troops also occupied Turnu-Severin; thus, they reached the Rumanian-Yugoslavian boundary.

On all other sectors of the front, patrol activities took place.

During September 5, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 17 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 32 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 6 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

North of Spezia, Patriots derailed a train laden with food supplies. Thirty German armored cars were attacked and partly destroyed. The enemy suffered losses in men in this clash.

The remainder of the Fascist Monte Rosa Division, already weakened because of desertion, is engaged in violent clashes against the Patriots.

In the Spezia sector, a division of Patriots recently attacked a group of vehicles at Castelnuovo, destroying seven and damaging another five. One Fascist was killed and five were wounded in this operation.

Patriots were very active in the Ossola sector. The destruction of Nazi-Fascist depots increases daily.

A German attack in the Borgotaro sector resulted in failure. The enemy lost 32 men, including eight officers. Patriots captured one mortar and one machine-gun.

The Garibaldi Division, which has been fighting in Yugoslavia for one year is composed of elements of the Taurinense and Venezia units. Together with Marshal Tito's troops, these units took part in severe fighting, and distinguished themselves by their heroic tenacity.

The Chief of the General Staff of the Army sent the following telegram to the Command of the Garibaldi Division in Yugoslavia:

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS 6 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In the Antwerp sector, our troops were ordered to withdraw to the Albert Canal. In the town itself, grim fighting is still in progress. The enemy launched an attack toward the Louvain-Namur-Sedan line on a broad front, but gained only little ground. Enemy attempts at crossing the Moselle, north of Nancy, were frustrated. The garrison of Le Havre repelled an enemy attack supported by tanks, with heavy losses for the enemy. Enemy forces which had penetrated the glacis of Brest were repelled in a counter-attack, and fresh U. S. infantry and tank concentrations were smashed by concentrated artillery fire. Our troops, [illegible] France according to operations. Bombers, in low-level attacks on Rumanian territory, destroyed 60 steam engines and a train fully loaded with fuel.

In the eastern Carpathians, numerous Bolshevist attacks were smashed in grim fighting on the pass roads.

North of the Bug, Soviet attacks, supported by strong tank and bomber formations, were frustrated by counter-attacks at the lower reaches of the Narew. From September 3 to 5, troops of the Army and anti-aircraft batteries destroyed 240 enemy tanks and mobile guns. On the other parts of the Eastern Front, local fighting only is reported from the Dorpat sector. In the course of the last few days, the Soviets lost 73 planes on the Eastern Front.

Enemy bombers, attacking western and southwestern Germany particularly, struck at the towns of Mannheim, Ludwigshafen, Stuttgart, and Karlsruhe. In the night, isolated British planes dropped bombs on Hanover. Over the Reich territory and the battle zone in the west, 31 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Berlin)

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

GERMAN OVERSEAS RADIO

Finland: It has become known that one of the conditions of the Soviet armistice with Finland is an indemnity of 1,500,000 dollars. Payment of this sum must be made in goods.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Antwerp: German resistance formations still hold some important points of the city of Antwerp. They are at present fighting British units. According to the latest German reports, the port of Antwerp is still dominated by the Germans. Small German commands are active in destroying the installations in the town and in the port, which are important for the British.

Denial on Holland: «The rumors circulated by the British Radio and by Eisenhower's headquarters that Anglo-American troops had occupied Dutch territory and the city of Breda have been officially denied by the Reich Commissariat for Occupied Netherlands Territories. - These rumors, says the announcement, are completely invented. The announcement says that the German Wehrmacht communique can be considered reliable regarding the military events concerning the Netherlands.

French Coast: In the fortress area of Pas de Calais, Canadian-British tank forces tried to get nearer to the German lines. Le Havre and Brest are still holding out against the Allies.

Eastern Front: Colonel von Hammer reports that the Soviets again concentrated all their efforts upon the area between the Bug and the Narew. A heavy tank battle ensued. Several temporary breaches were sealed off.

FASCIST RADIO

Fresh reserves: The western front will be stabilized shortly, and the shortening of the German lines will free at least half a million soldiers for combat duties. These fresh troops will oppose the exhausted Allied soldiers, whose lines of communications have been stretched beyond limit.

Successful strategy: In Italy, while the Allies attacked on a narrow front, between the Adriatic coast and the mountains, Kesselring in a most successful strategic move broke down this offensive into a series of small local attacks of greatly diminished importance. In these attacks, the British lost 89 tanks.

False Propaganda: The Allies in spreading false news about important advances in the Alps and elsewhere, are trying to rouse bandits and outlaws in northern Italy to a last desperate venture. All Italians will know that they can trust only Fascist propaganda, based on the principle of unadulterated truth.

U. S. 1ST ARMY 12 MILES FROM AACHEN

SHAEF, September 10 — American 1st Army troops are now only 12 miles from the German city of Aachen after a major operation launched from Liege and are now in the vicinity of Limbourg, it was reported tonight. German resistance is stiffening all along the line in an attempt to slow down the Allied advance.

To the southeast of Liege, American troops have fanned out and have captured Theux. To the north of Liege, American columns are just west of Maastricht and have crossed the Dutch frontier. They are 20 miles from Aachen and apparently form the northern prong of a pincer movement on that city.

The Germans have determined to use at Aachen the defense tactics which they employed at Caen for so long. They will probably protect their flanks by the waterways in the area of the Albert Canal and high ground south of Aachen. The Siegfried line is now within range of almost all field and siege artillery of the Americans thrusting from again after heavy fighting. The Brussels radio stated tonight that German resistance had stopped at Beverloo, southwest of Bourg Leopold.

On the coastal sector, the Canadian 1st Army, striking 12 miles east from Ostend, entered the Belgian port city of Zeebrugge without opposition. It is southwest of the Scheldt estuary, where the Germans have an escape corridor across the mouth of the river, and has good harbor facilities and a mole one and a half miles long.

Three bridgeheads have been made across the Ghent canal at Ostend, at Oostcamp, near Bruges, and at Nouwendam. The Germans are doing all they can to hold this pocket, bounded on the south by Blankenberghe, Bruges and Ghent, and are strongly resisting all along the canal. Allied armored reconnaissance patrols are close to Bruges and they are reported to be closing in on Blankenberghe.

Allied planes are heavily attacking German troops trying to escape from the pocket by crossing the Scheldt in barges. RAF fighter-bombers, operating from forward bases, are taking a heavy toll of these barges, and well over 100 were sunk or damaged yesterday.

Captured Maginot Fort

On the 3rd Army front, the Americans have captured their first Maginot Line fort near Nancy, it was reported late tonight. With bayonets and hand grenades, they stormed their way into Fort de Ville le Sec. It is the first major German fortification to fall east of the Moselle River and its capture after three days of attacks is important. It opens up the road to Nancy, secures the Allied bridgehead across the River Toul and gives the Americans commanding positions along a wide stretch of the Moselle.

A reinforcement of infantry and armor was effected across the river in the Toul area, following night operations in which supplies were sent to forces clinging to their bridgeheads, against strong German resistance. The Allied air force pounded 15 enemy trains moving toward the Toul area, destroying 15 cars and damaging a number of others.

An unsuccessful attack on Friday behind the 3rd Army's lines between Metz and Verdun cost the Germans 40 tanks and 850 prisoners.

Two More Nazi Generals

A force of 100 RAF heavy bombers attacked Le Havre with good results, it was reported today. Psychological loud speakers are being used and 50 Germans have surrendered so far. They reported that other troops in the besieged city were afraid to come out because of heavy German minefields at the entrances to the town. The German overseas news agency said tonight that during the past 24 hours heavy naval guns have assisted hundreds of planes in pounding Le Havre's defenses. The report added that the city was "ripe to be stormed".

To the south, late reports state that American forces have crossed the border into Luxembourg. The place of crossing was not disclosed. To the west of this frontier they have entered Neufchateau, and American units are fighting in the vicinity of St. Hubert. Troops advancing from Givet are along the Ourthe River in the area of Marche, to the north of St. Hubert.

South of this force, other Allied columns are steadily advancing southeastward from Sedan in the Ardennes forest and have captured Ecouviez, directly east of Montmedy on the Belgian border.

British develop Bridgeheads

In the British 2nd Army sector on the Albert Canal, troops are developing their bridgeheads across the canal against stiff German resistance. The Germans are now rushing reinforcements to hold this sector, some units being recalled from as far as Denmark. On Friday, 32 trainloads were seen moving up.

Seasoned parachute troops are in the lines around the bridgehead and the German defense is backed by a big concentration of self-propelled assault guns. They have been counter-attacking, the first offensive move they have made since they lost the line of the Seine. The hotly-contested town of Bourg Leopold has passed out of British control.

FRENCH FORCES CLOSE ON DIJON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 10 — The fall of Dijon, important road and rail center in the Saone Valley, appeared imminent tonight as French forces occupied two villages only nine miles south of the city and approached to within a little over 60 miles of American forces advancing toward Germany.

In a six-mile advance, troops of General de Tassigny's French army occupied the villages of Urcy and Chambeuil, southwest of Dijon, in the world famed Cote D'or estate district.

Further east, where French forces are working toward the German frontier, heavy fighting was reported today in the area of Blamont, two miles from the Swiss frontier, and 36 miles from Basel, where the Swiss, French and German borders meet. Blamont is only a few miles west of Pont de Roide, captured after fighting by French forces yesterday.

American forces today reported the occupation of the town of Dole, 27 miles southwest of Besancon in the lower stretches of the Doubs River Valley.

Hill Towns Taken

Despite the German determined delaying action, French and American troops of the 7th Army advanced on all sectors of the front which spreads over 125 miles on both sides of the Saone River and northeast along the Doubs river.

At one point, French units reached to within 18 miles of Belfort, gateway to Germany, when they took the hill town of St. Hippolyte and Pont de Roide. In their rapid drive, they took several other towns in this area, including Alaisey south of Baume les Dames.

Advancing northeast up the Doubs River and the Rhone-Rhine Canal toward Belfort, American troops overcame enemy resistance and reached Baume les Dames, 18 airline miles past Besançon, and pushed on to Clerval, 24 miles southwest of Belfort.

Flare-up at Briançon

The new flare-up of fighting reported yesterday at Briançon, near the Genevre Pass across the Alpine French-Italian border, resulted in French troops taking the town. This place has changed hands four times since the start of the campaign.

It was announced today that of about 70,000 prisoners taken in southern France thus far, about 40,000 have been credited to the French, largely resulting from the capture of Marseilles and Toulon. (PRO)

GERMAN CASUALTIES 2,000,000 SINCE D-DAY

LONDON, September 10 — The German army has lost more than 2,000,000 men in killed, wounded and prisoners since D-day, or an average casualty rate of 1,000 troops every hour since June 6, according to official sources here, in Moscow and at Mediterranean headquarters, as polled by the United Press.

The estimate, the Press service said, is a conservative

WARSHIPS SHELL NAZI TROOPS

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 10 — The French cruiser Emile Bertin and the U. S. destroyer, Ludlow bombarded German troop concentrations and positions in the Mentone area of southern France on Thursday.

Excellent results were obtained in the continued harassing of enemy positions along the Franco-Italian border, a Navy statement said. A direct hit was scored on an enemy pillbox.

Minesweepers are working without intermission to clear newly occupied ports of mines. (PRO)

FRENCH CHILDREN STRANDED

US 3RD ARMY HQ, September 10 — An American correspondent said that thousands of French children have been left stranded by the Germans, who seized one or both parents, and devastated their homes. «Some of these children are barely old enough to walk,» he said. «Nobody knows who they are.»

The correspondent said that a prominent professional man of Reims, and 15 other leading citizens who had persistently refused to collaborate with the Germans, were arrested 10 days after the Allied landings in Normandy, loaded into a cattle car, and sent to a concentration camp. Their relatives have not heard from them since. (PWB)

LAVAL'S SON-IN-LAW ARRESTED

LONDON, September 10 — Quoting the FFI Radio, today Reuter said that Count and Countess de Chambrun have been arrested, presumably on charges of collaboration with the Nazis.

FFI CAPTURE MANY PRISONERS

LONDON, September 10 — Prisoners taken by the French Forces of the Interior in Upper Savoy totalled 5,300; in Correze 1,200; in Aube, several thousands, including two generals, and in Yonne about 5,000, General Koenig announced yesterday.

In addition a considerable amount of war material has been captured everywhere, which has enabled the Resistance troops to complete their arms supply.

As soon as order has been established, the areas already liberated by the FFI send reinforcement columns to the areas where operations are still going on. In this way the Ain department sent a part of its troops to the Doubs, the Correze did the same for the Allier, and Haute Vienne sent contingents to Vienne and Indre, Dordogne sent help to Charente Maritime, the Pyrenees to Morvan, and Upper Savoy and Ardeche rushed FFI fighters to the Lyons area. HITLER'S BOASTS PROVIDE A LAUGH

LONDON, September 10 — Among the many factors contributing sleepless nights for Hitler, these days must be the memory of his speeches of the past.

For example, just one year ago, Hitler said over the German home radio, «In September, 1939, I said that neither time nor the force of arms will ever bring low the German nation. Since then the enemy has been forced back more than 1,000 kilometers from the German border.»

And just one year after Allied patrols were officially reported to have been operating on German soil.

Looking further back in the records of Nazi boasts provides even greater cause for mutual contemplation by Hitler. Two years ago the German radio said, «If Churchill really means business, we hope he will send over the biggest invading force equipped with the finest materials he can lay

American forces today reported the occupation of the town of Dole, 27 miles southwest of Besancon in the lower stretches of the Doubs River Valley.

Hill Towns Taken

The estimate, the Press service said, is a conservative one because it does not take into account German losses in Maquis and Partisan fighting in southern France, Yugoslavia, Greece and elsewhere in the Balkans, and does not include the German toll during last week's fighting on any of the main fronts.

The United Press release said the casualties form the background for the German disaster in France and substantiate the belief that Germany does not have the necessary manpower for the coming battles on her eastern and western frontiers.

Further proof that Germany's reserves are virtually exhausted has been provided by German propagandists, who yesterday announced that a new division comprised of 16 to 18-year-old Hitler youths is to be thrown into battle.

Germany's greatest losses have been in Russia, where a total of 1,250,000 casualties are reported to have been inflicted since the Normandy landings. Of this number, 826,000 were killed and 427,000 captured.

In France, American and British forces have killed 160,000, wounded 200,000, and captured 312,000 on the northern front and killed or wounded 10,000 and captured 72,000 on the southern front.

In Italy the German toll has been 12,000 killed, 40,000 captured and another 40,000 wounded. (OWI)

NAZI INDUSTRIAL TARGETS BLITZED

LONDON, September 10 — More than 1,000 American heavy bombers with fighter escort smashed at industrial targets in the Stuttgart, Nurnberg and Ulm areas of southern Germany today, after RAF night bombers had delivered heavy attacks on Muenchen-Gladbach and Brunswick last night.

Targets for the 8th USAAF bombers today were aircraft plants and tank and truck factories. The attack on Nurnberg was the second in as many days, RAF Mosquitoes having visited the city on Saturday with two-ton bombs. Stuttgart, 50 miles east of the Franco-German border, is the hub of German rail lines and roads running to the German western defences.

While the Fortresses and Liberators dropped their heavy explosives on southern Germany, Thunderbolts strafed airfields in western Germany, and American medium bombers from both French and British bases attacked barriers in the path of the American 3rd Army's advance toward Nancy. A concentrated bomb load was dropped on two bridges spanning the Moselle River at Pompey and Custines, about five miles north of Nancy, and the highly fortified Foret de Hay, just west of Nancy.

In Belgium, the 2nd TAF harried the Germans retreating eastward, and by noon today had destroyed at least ten trains.

The German frontier area was also attacked yesterday by 9th USAAF aircraft, which destroyed over 250 vehicles in widespread attacks between Aachen, Cologne, Coblenz and Bonn and east of Liege. They also destroyed 19 locomotives, 182 trucks, 30 railroad cars, 35 horse-drawn artillery transport, and three aircraft on the ground. Simultaneously, planes of the 2nd TAF carried out one of their biggest strafes against German troops attempting to escape across the mouth of the Scheldt River. During the day they destroyed or damaged 165 barges, 10 tugs, 18 locomotives and 46 vehicles on the roads.

RAF bombers continued their attacks on the German garrison and fortified positions at Le Havre throughout the day.

A reconnaissance pilot this morning flew over Muenchen-Gladbach, the big German textile and armament center and railway junction, and found the center of the city burning furiously after last night's heavy attack. Muenchen-Gladbach is less than 20 miles from the Belgian border and is one of the big railway links with Germany's western defenses. (Reuter-Owi)

NAZI HOPES OF FLYING BOMBS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — The extent to which the Nazi propaganda machine exploited the offensive value of the robot bomb is seen in the following excerpt from a letter received by a German soldier in Italy from his sister in Germany.

«Well, what do you think of our retaliation? It is for us a satisfaction to hear that the English have sat for 18 hours in their cellars. True, they are human beings, too, but how much sorrow they have brought upon Germany. Well, this will make their heads ring.

«Yesterday Hanz Fritsche spoke about the new weapon. Here, everyone is full of the new events. Everything is being thrown in, and the war will probably soon be over. Just imagine, peace! And victory! Such happiness is almost unimaginable.» (AAI)

NO LUFTWAFFE: GERMANS PERPLEXED

WITH THE 7TH ARMY IN THE JURA, September 10 — The absence of the Luftwaffe in southern France has reached the point where it has become ludicrous even to the retreating Germans themselves, reports a UNN correspondent.

A captured German officer said his company, fleeing northwest from Grenoble, had been strafed by Allied planes for two days. On the second day they saw a Storch observation plane appear, the first German plane that they had seen for a week. His men started to laugh, the lieutenant said, at the thought that this tiny plane was the sole representative of the Luftwaffe, and cheered and shouted, «Hurrah for our wonderful Luftwaffe!»

But their cheers stopped suddenly when the plane dipped and loosed bullets at them.

The plane was not a Stork, but a Piper Cub piloted by an Allied observer. According to the German officer, it was the worst insult that could have been given to his unit. (UNN)

U-BOATS MOVED TO NORTHERN BASES

LONDON, September 10 — The BBC said today that a statement on U-boat warfare issued on Saturday night under the authority of President Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill announced that Allied operations in France last month neutralized German U-boat bases in the Bay of Biscay.

The enemy hold on the towns of Comano and San Savino, spaced between Gemmano and the coast to the north, and forming the two remaining strongpoints guarding the outlet from the coastal corridor, is as yet unbroken.

Heavy German Fire

The German troops, now considerably reinforced with both tanks and fresh infantrymen, have exploited these ridge positions to launch a series of counter-attacks which have been thrown back only after heavy fighting. Enemy artillery, also placed on high ground, has laid down heavy shellfire, both to hinder Allied exploitation of advanced positions and to cover the numerous counter-attacks.

The German defense has been most intense along the Conca River, where a heavy counter-attack, supported by tanks, was launched against the Croce sector yesterday morning. This attack, apparently in a sector the center point of which is more than a mile to the east of the foremost 8th Army positions.

In the hard fighting in this sector just north and south of the Conca River, British forces have taken nearly 300 prisoners in the past three days, one-third of them during the final phase of the battle for Gemmano, which began on Friday afternoon. Three German company commanders, apparently separated from their men in the fierceness of the fighting, surrendered in the Croce area.

Rearguard Action

German forces have now for nearly a week held the 8th Army forces which broke through the Goth Line and advanced northward along the coastal corridor in advances which threatened to overrun the valley of the Po. Parachute troops and tank forces, fighting a rearguard action, have enabled the enemy to reform his forces and make a stand on the high ground some six and a half miles south of Rimini and the entryway into the valley of the Po.

Indian troops, thrusting through the hill country at the inland edge of the coastal corridor, yesterday captured a strong enemy position over a mile west of Castelmonte, south of the Conca River and 11 miles inland. An enemy counter-attack was beaten off.

In the central section of the front, Allied forces have occupied the features of Monte Giovi, Monte Curono and Monte Calvana, all northeast of Florence, to lessen the threat of enemy shelling of the Arno crossings, and to gain a vantage point overlooking the upper Sieve River valley.

On the 5th Army front, patrol forces penetrated to the outskirts of Pistoia, while other elements continued to press forward into the high ground which forms the threshold of the German stronghold in the Apennine massif. (PRO)

BOMBERS SUPPORT 5TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — Mitchell bombers of the Tactical Air Force today carried out the second consecutive day of «close-support bombing» of enemy depots and positions in the Goth Line northwest of Pistoia, it was announced here this afternoon.

The attacks, carried out with fragmentation and high explosive bombs, were directed against enemy installations in the town of Marsesa, eight miles northwest of Pistoia, and at the edge of the mountain gap through which Highway 66 runs.

Fifth Army forces were reported this morning to have reached the outskirts of Pistoia, pressing hard on German forces withdrawing toward their main mountain defenses.

Other medium bombers struck three bridges north of Bologna and also at Fiorenzuola, northwest of Parma.

Strategic air force heavy bombers today hit two refineries in the Vienna area, and shipping and harbor installations in Trieste harbor.

ITALY: BRITISH TAKE GEMMANO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — British infantry forces, battling from house to house in bitter fighting, have captured the town of Gemmano, furthest inland of the three key German strongpoints guarding the Adriatic coastal corridor into the valley of the Po, it was announced here today.

Gemmano, on high ground just south of the Conca River and eight miles inland, was captured only after four days of savage fighting, in the course of which British troops seized the eastern half of the town and in lashing rain, which deprived them of air and armored support, began the reduction of the enemy positions at the western and higher end of the town.

Although the British infantrymen cleared the Germans from Gemmano and pushed on into the hills to the west, to occupy the hamlet of Borgo, enemy counter-attacks, launched on Friday night against both places, left the situation in this sector unsettled.

MAAF HITTING HARD

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — Every type of MAAF strategic and tactical bombers has been employed in a gigantic tactical plan to harass German forces still outside Germany.

In southern France, in northern Italy and in Yugoslavia and Rumania, Mediterranean-based planes have attacked German troop concentrations, transport lines of communication and bridges in a week-long attack.

Pressure on the enemy forces caught in the Balkans as the result of Rumania's capitulation and the threatening link up of Yugoslav Partisan and Russian forces, has resulted in heavy bombing of the escaping German troops.

PILOT TREATED "LIKE A KING"

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — A Mustang pilot of the Balkan Air Force, who had been shot down over Yugoslavia, arrived back at his base in Italy recently after being rescued by Yugoslav Partisans, it was announced here today.

Walking down a country road during darkness, Flight Lieutnant C. S. Vos was captured by a Partisan and taken to the nearest Partisan commandant for interrogation.

"As soon as they were satisfied who I was," Vos said, "they could not do enough for me. They arranged my journey to the nearest landing ground used by the Allies to fly in supplies and take out wounded."

On his way to the airfield he met one Yugoslav who greeted him in perfect English. "He was about 55 and had been educated at Oxford," Vos stated, "and he was anxious to know if it had been bombed." Another Partisan sympathizer, travelling by night from German-occupied Zagreb, told Vos that the Germans dared not use the railways by day because of air attacks but that the train was blown up anyway by a Partisan mine.

"He told me how low German Army morale was in that region. In Zagreb, the German officers were saying that their army was finished, and were predicting the end of the war in a few weeks."

"You have to see the nature of the country to understand why the Partisans have been able to hold out in these large pockets," Vos said. "The Germans can approach only on foot, and then they are at a disadvantage when fighting in the dense woods, constantly in danger of ambush."

Describing the airfield from which he was flown back to Italy, Vos stated that after darkness the partisans gathered in thousands and lit flares to mark out the landing strip. The arriving aircraft were then unloaded by women.

"I want to get back to strafing the Germans in Yugoslavia again," he said, "I feel I owe it to the Partisans. They are poor people, but they treated me like a king."

GERMANS FEAR DANISH SABOTAGE

LONDON, September 10 — Sabotage in Norway flared up again during the past week, while in Denmark the German Army is taking over a number of guard duties in fear of Danish sabotage.

NAZIS INVASION WARNING IN DENMARK

LONDON, September 10 — Nazi authorities have issued an invasion warning in Denmark, according to a Stockholm dispatch to the London Daily Mail. All Nazi district leaders have been told to hold themselves in a state of alert.

The Germans in Denmark are gripped by invasion fever, the Free Danish Press service in Stockholm said today, and reported the following indications:

The Germans are speeding work on a fortification line across southern Jutland from Kolding on the east to Esbjerg on the west, and faced with the refusal of manpower, have conscripted all German men and women living in Denmark, ordering them to report to the nearest railway station with spades, food and blankets.

Land fortifications are also being strengthened across the Skagen peninsula at the northern tip of Jutland. Three rows of mines have been laid along the beach from Skagen to Frederikshaven. Fifty one-man torpedoes have arrived at Skagen.

RUSSIANS NEAR TRANSYLVANIA

MOSCOW, September 10 — Russian forces penetrated closer to Hungarian-occupied Transylvania today, both through the eastern Carpathians and through the Transylvanian Alps.

In northeastern Rumania the town and railway station of Vama, six miles northeast of Campulung, was occupied, and a number of other localities were taken against enemy resistance.

In central Rumania, in co-operation with Rumanian troops, General Malinovsky's units captured Szantul-Gheorghe, 17 miles northeast of Brasov, with 50 other places, including five railway stations. Elsewhere on the eastern front, tonight's Soviet communique reported only patrol activity.

Ankara quoted Hungarian radio reports that Cluj, capital of Transylvania, had been captured by the Soviet Army. Cluj is on the main railway line from Rumania to Budapest, less than 200 miles from the Hungarian capital. DNB announced tonight that Soviet forces had broken into German positions on both sides of Krosno, in the northern foothills of the Carpathians and 19 miles north of the former Czechoslovak-Polish frontier.

In the German Baltic hinterland Red Army patrols have been operating on East Prussian territory for 36 hours.

RUSSIANS APPEAL TO AUSTRIANS

MOSCOW, September 10 — The Moscow radio tonight broadcast an appeal to the Austrian people to assist Yugoslav and Czechoslovak forces in their fight against the Germans, and urged them to take immediate action against the Germans.

The broadcast said: "Austrians have been given a chance by the Moscow Conference to give rebirth to their nation and make it an independent nation. All Austrians must grasp the chance now.

GERMANS FEAR DANISH SABOTAGE

LONDON, September 10 — Sabotage in Norway flared up again during the past week, while in Denmark the German Army is taking over a number of guard duties in fear of Danish sabotage.

A large German petrol store on an island in Oslofjord was blown up, and the Germans' largest motor repair shop in Oestfold was destroyed by sabotage, the Swedish paper Westmanlands Laens Tidning said on Friday. Saboteurs have destroyed many of the files necessary for calling up civilian anti-sabotage guards, the paper added.

A quisling named Sigvard Knutsen was shot dead in the street outside his house in Oslo, the Swedish paper Svenska Dagbladet said yesterday. Knutsen served in the office that liquidated property belonging to Patriots and deported Jews. A notorious informer, Reidar Borgen, and his bodyguard, have both been seriously injured by a bomb, according to a reliable Stockholm source.

In Denmark, the German Army is now guarding all the main railway lines leading to Copenhagen. Troop trains stop at every station while the next part of the line is carefully examined, Morgenbladet said yesterday.

The wave of arrests that is still sweeping through Denmark is directed primarily at patriotic citizens who are not members of the active underground. Policemen, leaders of sports unions, and members of various national associations are among those arrested, another Swedish paper said yesterday. (PWB)

Ankara quoted Hungarian radio reports that Cluj, capital of Transylvania, had been captured by the Soviet Army. Cluj is on the main railway line from Rumania to Budapest, less than 200 miles from the Hungarian capital. DNB announced tonight that Soviet forces had broken into German positions on both sides of Kronno, in the northern foothills of the Carpathians and 19 miles north of the former Czechoslovak-Polish frontier.

In the German Baltic hinterland Red Army patrols have been operating on East Prussian territory for 36 hours. (Reuter)

RUSSIANS APPEAL TO AUSTRIANS

MOSCOW, September 10 — The Moscow radio tonight broadcast an appeal to the Austrian people to assist Yugoslav and Czechoslovak forces in their fight against the Germans, and urged them to take immediate action against the Germans.

The broadcast said: «Austrians have been given a chance by the Moscow Conference to give rebirth to their nation and make it an independent nation. All Austrians must grasp the chance now.

«Operations in southern Europe favor immediate action on your part. Fighting is now going on at many points only a few miles from your border. Help all the Partisans inside Austria and prevent any German regrouping attempts. Cut German communication lines and do your utmost to sabotage the German war effort in Austria. The Allied armies are pushing near.» (OWI)

IRAQ — SOVIET RELATIONS

BAGHDAD, September 10 — Diplomatic relations between Iraq and Russia have been established as from today, reported Reuter tonight.

Soviet Foreign Commissar Molotov, in a note to the Iraq Foreign Minister, said, «The Soviet government will be ready in a very short time to exchange ministers.» (Reuter)

BULGARIAN GOVERNMENT SEEKS RUSSIAN TERMS

LONDON, September 10 — The new Bulgarian Government, headed by Kimon Georgiev, is a coalition government composed of Republican officers, Agrarians, Socialists, Communists and members of minor other radical and cooperative parties, Reuter's Balkan observer said today.

According to an announcement over the Bulgarian Radio last night, one of the first acts of the new Council of Ministers was the appointment of a delegation charged with making immediate contact with General Tolbukhin, commander of the 3rd Ukranian army, for the purpose of establishing terms (1) for the end of the war with Russia, (2) for the resumption of diplomatic relations with Russia, and (3) for collaboration with Russian troops in expelling the Germans from Bulgaria.

An Associated Press dispatch said two former members of the Regency Council, Prince Cyril and General Mikhov, were removed and replaced by Pavlov, a veteran Communist leader who was in a concentration camp during the previous regime, and Professor Daneff, a scholar with no political affiliation.

The new government today issued a proclamation over the Sofia radio denouncing previous regimes for being «servants of Hitlerite Germany» and for having «turned the Bulgarian people into German slaves.»

The broadcast added: «That was not enough. They declared war on Britain and the United States and with their hypocritical and insincere policy exhausted the patience of the Soviet Union.»

The proclamation, which disclosed that two Bulgarian armies, the Macedonian and the Yugoslav Occupation Corps, were taken prisoner by the Germans when «the (previous) government, in its servility, left the Germans armed,» declared for a «free, independent and democratic Bulgaria.»

The Bulgarian delegation which went to Cairo at the end of August to arrange an armistice with Britain and the United States has arrived in Ankara on its way back to Sofia. (Reuter-OWI)

GERMANS LEAVING FINLAND

LONDON, September 10 — Norwegian government-in-exile officials here were informed today by Patriot sources that the Germans are moving large numbers of troops out of Finland into the eastern sections of Norway.

These sources said more than 25,000 soldiers are now quartered in the provinces of Troms and Finnmark, in addition to a large number of forced labor battalions and prisoners of war working in the Todt Organization. (UP)

WARSAW MAYOR ASKS AID

LONDON, September 10 — The mayor of Underground Warsaw has made a request to the Lord Mayor of London and the Mayor of New York for immediate shipments of arms, food and planes, the Polish Telegraph Agency reported today. The appeal was made in a letter transmitted through Polish Premier Mikolajczyk. (Reuter)

GERMANS PRESSING IN SLOVAKIA

LONDON, September 10 — The Germans are strengthening their campaign against the Czechoslovak armed forces, who have repulsed repeated attacks in Slovakia, reported the communique from Czechoslovak Army headquarters today.

In the upper Vah valley along the railway from Ilohamin to Kosice (Kassa, Hungary), the enemy has increased his pressure, and the communique said the Hungarians have occupied a terminus on the line, to the north of Kassa.

Fighting in the Vrutky-Zilina (Sillein) sector has become fiercer, and at some places the Germans are attacking with considerable forces. Defensive fighting is continuing in the valley of Nitra (Neutra) northeast of Bratislava (Pressburg).

At Telgart, in central Slovakia, a repeated German attack was repulsed with heavy losses and the town is firmly in Czechoslovak hands.

In eastern Slovakia, Slovak Patriots outfitted large areas to the west of Presov. Strong Partisan detachments are participating in the fighting in collaboration with military units, the communique said. (PWB) progress up to August 15, Chinese dead were listed at 4,980 and American and British killed totalled 1,167. A total of 11,171 Chinese and 2,923 Americans and British were reported wounded, with 148 Chinese and 321 Americans and British missing.

ANOTHER LANDING IN NEW GUINEA

ALLIED HQ, NEW GUINEA, September 10 — Amphibious Allied patrols landed on Thursday on Soepiori Island, Geelvink Bay, New Guinea, and consolidated their positions without encountering enemy opposition, General MacArthur announced in a communique today.

Soepiori Island is west of Biak, from which it is separated by a narrow channel, and lies about 120 miles east of the by-passed Japanese base at Manokwari. The new landings strengthen the American forces' grip on positions off the northern coast of Dutch New Guinea, in Geelvink Bay, where U. S. Marines hold Noemfoor and Owio islands. Airfields are maintained on all the occupied islands, including Biak.

Continuing their attacks on the southern Philippines, patrol bombers struck in daylight against shipping in Davao Gulf, on Mindanao, and sank or badly damaged a coastal vessel and two small freighters.

Liberators made one of the heaviest attacks of the war on Celebes, dropping 130 tons of bombs on Menado, at the northeastern tip of the island, while another strong force of Liberators, Mitchells and Lightning fighters hit airfields and gun positions on Halmahera Island. No air opposition was encountered in these operations. (Reuter)

YUGOSLAVS NEAR BULGARIA

LONDON, September 10 — Marshal Tito's Partisan army stormed into Zajecar yesterday in their march toward the Danube, the Yugoslav communique announced today. A strategic river and highway town, Zajecar is six miles from the Bulgarian border and 30 miles from the Danube. The city was defended by 4,000 German troops, 1,000 of which were captured and hundreds killed by the 14th Serbian Corps.

Knjazevac also was captured in this drive. The town is 11 miles from Bulgaria and is on the communication line running from Nis toward Zajecar.

Further to the south, Yugoslav forces have cut the main German retreat route from Greece by destroying the bridge of the Morava River at Grdelica on the railway from Nis to Skoplje. The destruction of the bridge will stop traffic for some weeks.

In northwestern Yugoslavia, the Partisans liberated the important city of Prijedor in Bosnia, which is astride the railroad line from Banja Luka to Bos Novi and is 60 miles south of Zagreb. The city was taken by units of the 50th Yugoslav Corps after a fierce battle with 7,000 German troops and a large number of quisling units.

In the valley of the Nisava River a vanguard of Yugoslav units have reached Nis, the Russian news agency reported. All German communications running from Pirot on the Bulgarian border to Velika have been cut. Blown up railway trains, trucks, transports and motorcycles block the roads disorganizing the German retreat from Bulgaria. (PWB)

JAP DESTROYER SUNK

KANDY, CEYLON, September 10 — A 110-mile stretch of the Tiddim Road south of Imphal is now cleared of the Japanese, Southeast Asia Command headquarters announced today. Troops of the 5th Indian Division are continuing to gain ground on the Tiddim Road, the communique said.

Allied heavy bombers on Friday sank a Japanese destroyer southeast of Hong Kong, a communique in Chungking said today. A 1,000-ton sailing vessel in the same area was also sunk by the heavies.

Medium bombers and fighters struck at enemy troops and other targets in Lingling and Kiyang, in southern China. No planes were lost in these operations.

Over Burma, RAF aircraft continued their widespread attacks on enemy communications. Fighters strafed shipping in the Gulf of Martaban.

The Chinese High Command announced Sunday that the Japanese garrison at Tengchung, in Yunnan province, is being compressed into a small sector in the eastern part of the city.

In Chungking today the Chinese National Military Council stated that 21,340 Japanese troops had been killed in northern Burma and China's adjoining western Yunnan province.

NEW MEMBERS FOR FRENCH COMMITTEE

PARIS, September 10 — In a reshuffling of the French Committee, General de Gaulle has brought in two new members to his cabinet. Jules Jeanneney, one of France's noted elder statesmen, as Minister of State, and Georges Ridault, president of the National Council of Resistance, as the new Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Bidault replaces Rene Massigli, and Paris Radio, broadcasting the changes today, did not state whether Massigli would be given another post in the committee cabinet.

Pierre Mendes-France retains his post as Minister of National Economy, but is replaced as Minister of Finance by M. Lequerque.

The new Minister of the Interior is Adrien Tixier, who has been Minister of Social Affairs. Tixier replaces Emmanuel d'Astier.

The new Minister of Transport and Public Works is Rene Mayer, who has been Minister of Communications and Merchant Marine.

Auguste Laurent is Minister of Postal and Telegraph Services and Pierre Tunguy-Prigent is Minister of Agriculture, a new post. The latter was one of the Resistance delegates to Algiers.

The following posts have the same ministers as before: War, André Diethelm; Justice, François de Menthon; Navy, Louis Jacquinot; Production, M. Lacoste; Food, Paul Giacobbi; Colonies, Rene Pleven; National Education, Rene Capitant; Public Health, François Billoux.

It was also announced that General Georges Catroux will be governor of North Africa.

The new Minister of Foreign Affairs, Georges Bidault, is one of the chiefs of the resistance movement in France.

He joined the Underground movement at once, published the clandestine «Bulletin de la France Combattante» and became chairman of the coordinating committee of the political parties and resistance group. Arrested by order of Laval, Bidault escaped again and travelled in disguise all over France to continue his coordination of the Underground movement.

Jules Jeanneney was President of the French Senate in 1940, and together with Edouard Herriot, then President of the Chamber of Deputies, protested to Petain against the Vichy government's pro-Axis policy. After the Allied landings in North Africa it was reported that the Germans had added guards around his residence to prevent his escape across the Mediterranean. (PW - OWI)

FRENCH COLLABORATOR TRIALS UNDER WAY

PARIS, September 10 — Emphasizing that the arrest and trial of Frenchmen held to have aided the Germans is proceeding with thoroughness and order, Correspondent Eric Hawkins of the New York Herald Tribune today described the plans of Edgar Pisani, chief assistant to Charles Luizet, Police Prefect.

The number of alleged traitors thus far rounded up is 7,000, or double the number recorded four days ago.

Commissions have been set up at the Paris Prefecture of police for sorting out the dossiers and dividing them into three categories, first, — those with the greatest evidence of guilt; second, — dubious, and third, — those of no evidence of guilt.

Cases in the first two categories will be turned over to civil and military courts, according to the nature of the charges. The normal French criminal law procedure will then be followed.

The correspondent reported that the 7,000 men and women now detained in the Paris area are housed in half a dozen prisons as the makeshift detention camps of the first days of liberation have been cleared.

A French news agency dispatch yesterday said that the Naval Commission of the National Council of Resistance had demanded the arrest of four admirals who had served with the Germans. (FWB)

COMMISSION TO CONTROL GERMANY

LONDON, September 10 — Two questions which will overshadow all others in the discussions which it is understood are shortly to take place between Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt are the future of Germany and the war against Japan, the diplomatic correspondent of the London Times said today.

Discussing the former subject, he wrote: «There is reason to believe that there is general agreement on the establishment of a supreme commission of control with its seat in Berlin. The proposal is that this shall be composed of the commanders-in-chief in three main theaters of war — General Eisenhower, General Alexander, and presumably Marshal Zhukov — and three civilian members with ministerial status.

«The commission will form a sort of cabinet consisting of the heads of different departments such as finance, interior and health.

«Laws to be introduced are already in print. They will decree complete dissolution of the Nazi party. Political activities will be prohibited for such a period as military security requires.

«It, the industrial field Russia, in particular, demands much of the equipment of German heavy industries to rehabilitate her own ruined plants.»

Quebec will probably be the scene of the conference between Mr. Churchill and President Roosevelt, the BBC said last night.

CAREFUL ABOUT PEACE RUMORS

WASHINGTON, September 10 — The United States Office of War Information and the War and Navy Departments issued a joint statement here yesterday warning against false rumors of German surrender or peace negotiations.

The statement said that some such rumors have already appeared, and warned that while some may be innocently spread, others may be inspired by enemy propagandists «who hope to cause confusion among the United Nations and induce us to relax our efforts.»

It was pointed out that there may be no single day which will mark the end of the war, and that the German armies may «gradually disintegrate and surrender piecemeal.»

The warning emphasized that «no rumors of surrender should be accepted unless confirmed by General Eisenhower.» (Reuter)

FREE PRESS FOR HOLLAND

LONDON, September 10 — The Netherlands Prime Minister, P. S. Gerbrandy, in a letter to Hugh Baillie, President of the United Press, wrote that «the Netherlands Government considers it among its highest duties to safeguard the freedom of the Press and to promote all measures which tend to strengthen that freedom.»

Gerbrandy said that after the war there will be no obstacle to the free flow of news from the Netherlands. (OWI)

FRENCH TO MINT NEW COINS

PARIS, September 10 — The French will mint new coins as soon as possible, M. Michel, secretary-general of the mint, told a reporter of the Paris newspaper Le Soir. There will be no change in the design from the pre-occupation coins.

Meanwhile, old coins, hidden by the people when the Germans made nickel and bronze collections, are coming back into circulation, replacing the Vichy coins.

RUSSIA'S PART IN BALKANS

LONDON, September 10 — Soviet Russia has won the right to play an important part in post-war settlements in the Balkans and southeast Europe, the Manchester Guardian stated yesterday in an editorial on the political importance of Russian operations in the Balkans.

The editorial said: «In the future, as in the past, Slav peoples from Bulgaria and Yugoslavia may look to Russia rather than to the west for help and guidance and there is no reason to think they will not be wisely given.

«The day is long past when Palmerston (English statesman) could say, "If Russia were to stride like a colossus from the Baltic to the Mediterranean, British interests and commerce would be in peril."

«Now as then, autocracy in Russia may stand for progress and civilization in the Balkans, but it will require the combined wisdom of all Allied powers if Balkan unity is to be a reality and if we are to avoid their national jealousies which have hampered all progress in these countries since they gained their independence.

«Here, even more than in Poland, will be the first great test of Allied unity in the task of peace. Here, no less than in Poland, will be a Russian opportunity to show that her statesmen are a match for her generals.» (Reuter)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCED AFHQ, ITALY, September 10 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Heavy fighting continues in the Adriatic sector and troops of the 8th Army have again made progress in the high ground, where they have captured the village of Gemmano, which has been the scene of heavy fighting during the past week.

In the high ground between the upper Arno and Tiber Valleys, Indian troops of the 8th Army have captured several important features hitherto held by the enemy.

North of Florence, big advances have been made and the important features of Monte Giovi, Monte Carosso and Monte Calvano have been occupied. In this sector, British troops for the first time overlook the upper Sieve valley.

West of Florence, American patrols have been active north of the Florence-Prato-Pisa arterial road, which is now entirely in our hands.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forces have made further substantial advances in eastern France against stiff enemy resistance northward toward Dijon and northeastward up the Doubs River valley.

French forces have pushed several miles northward since their capture of Beaune, west of the Saone River.

In their drive up the Doubs River valley toward the German frontier, American troops have cleared the villages of Baume-les-Dames and Clerval. French elements have reached Ponte De Roide and Sainte Hippolyte farther east.

In the Alps, Briancon has again been cleared of enemy forces.

Approximately 70,000 prisoners have been taken since the start of the southern France campaign.

Navy:

In his report for the period ending midnight Sept. 6/7, the naval commander off the south coast of France states that unloading over the beaches on 6 September was somewhat impeded by bad weather. Naval gunfire support on the right flank of the Army against enemy batteries and positions in the Menfane area continued to be given. The French cruisers Emile Bertin and Le Malin with the U. S. destroyer Ludlow were all in action, nearly 800 rounds being fired.

On 8 September, on the east coast of Italy, the enemy batteries and ships in the harbour at Rimini were successfully bombarded by the British gunboats Aphis and Scarab.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Yesterday (Saturday) operations were directed mainly against enemy communication lines and battlefront targets in northern Italy. Medium bombers concentrated on rail and road bridges.

Fighter-bombers attacked bridges, roads, rail lines and yards, rolling stock, motor transport and supply dumps. Both medium bombers and fighter-bombers attacked enemy strong-points and other close-support targets near Rimini.

In France, fighters made strafing attacks on rail communication in the Belfort area.

Balkan Air Force units carried out sweeps over Yugoslavia, Greece and Albania, attacking oil tanks, gun positions, a bridge and motor transport.

Bad weather prevented heavy bomber operations during daylight hours. Last night medium and heavy bombers attacked the wharf at Ravenna.

WESTERN FRONT COMMUNIQUE

SHAEF, September 10 — Today's communique:

Land:

Allied forces clearing the Channel coast have made considerable progress around Bergue, southeast of Dunkirk.

Further east, our units are approaching Bruges. Gains have been made north of Antwerp. The development of the bridgeheads over the Albert Canal is continuing to meet stiff resistance.

Our forces have advanced to Kempt, four miles west of Hasselt, and to Noduwez Marilles and Folx-les-Caves in the Tirlemont-Huy sector. Other forces both east and south of Liege are in Limburge after a 14-mile advance.

After thrusting through the Forest des Ardennes to points 15 to 20 miles east of the Meuse River, our troops reached the vicinity of Saint Hubert. Elements further south have entered Ecouvier, east of Montmedy.

The west bank of the Moselle River has been cleared of the enemy in the vicinity of Pompey, six miles north of Nancy. Allied forces continue to close in on the port of Brest, where the enemy is maintaining stubborn defence.

Air:

Transport, communications and airfields in Holland and western Germany were bombed and strafed by fighters and fighter-bombers yesterday. Nine enemy aircraft were shot down in combat and five others destroyed on the ground.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forces have made further substantial advances in eastern France against stiff enemy resistance northward toward Dijon and northeastward up the Doubs River valley.

French forces have pushed several miles northward since their capture of Beaune, west of the Saone River.

In their drive up the Doubs River valley toward the German frontier, American troops have cleared the villages of Baume-les-Dames and Clerval. French elements have reached Pante De Roide and Sainte Hippolyte father east.

In the Alps, Briancon has again been cleared of enemy forces.

Approximately 70,000 prisoners have been taken since the start of the southern France campaign.

Navy:

In his report for the period ending midnight Sept. 6/7, the naval commander off the south coast of France states that unloading over the beaches on 6 September was somewhat impeded by bad weather. Naval gunfire support on the right flank of the Army against enemy batteries and positions in the Mentone area continued to be given. The French cruisers Emile Bertin and Le Malin with the U.S. destroyer Ludlow were all in action, nearly 600 rounds being fired.

On 8 September, on the east coast of Italy, the enemy batteries and ships in the harbour at Rimini were successfully bombarded by the British gunboats Aphis and Scarab.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Yesterday (Saturday) operations were directed mainly against enemy communication lines and battlefront targets in northern Italy. Medium bombers concentrated on rail and road bridges.

Fighter-bombers attacked bridges, roads, rail lines and yards, rolling stock, motor transport and supply dumps. Both medium bombers and fighter-bombers attacked enemy strong-points and other close-support targets near Rimini.

In France, fighters made strafing attacks on rail communication in the Belfort area.

Balkan Air Force units carried out sweeps over Yugoslavia, Greece and Albania, attacking oil tanks, gun positions, a bridge and motor transport.

Bad weather prevented heavy bomber operations during daylight hours. Last night medium and heavy bombers attacked the wharf at Ravenna.

Incomplete figures indicate that MAAF flew approximately 350 sorties. No losses are reported in these operations.

In operations of Sept. 7th, one enemy aircraft was destroyed and one of ours is missing, in addition to those already reported. (PRO)

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT COMMUNIQUE

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September, 10 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The Garibaldi Divisions operating in the Val di Stura, who distinguished themselves for their heavy attacks against the enemy, have now joined with Allied troops on the Italian-French border. Now supplied with more war material, they have started large-scale actions against German troops who have suffered heavy losses.

Three hundred Fascists supported by German SS troops attempted to eliminate Patriots operating in Fontano, near Bergamasco. More than 100 Patriots of the Garibaldi Brigade, in spite of German superiority in men and materiel, decisively defeated the enemy, whose losses totaled 29 dead and 30 wounded. In addition, 23 Germans were taken prisoner, and 5 large enemy vehicles destroyed. Patriots lost one dead and two wounded.

Near Reana a German train of 23 cars full of gasolene was derailed and then machine-gunned. In the fire that followed a large proportion of the fuel was destroyed. Patriots in that sector also destroyed three poles in a high-tension line. In the battles that followed these acts of sabotage, four Germans and two Fascist militiamen were killed. (PWB)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 10 — Tonight's communique:

During today, on the territory of the north-eastern part of Rumania, our troops surrounding enemy resistance, captured the city and railway station of Vama, and also occupied in fighting the populated localities of Russkaya-Moldavska, Vatra-Moldavska, Kruche, Holde, Proshteny, Yertubeckash.

In the central part of Rumania, our troops jointly with the Rumanian troops captured the city and railway junction of Sfantul-Gheorghe and also occupied in fighting over 50 other populated localities, including Kotalina, Karatna, Buksat, Malnash, Alta-Mizhloki, and the railway stations of Sinta-Kotolna, Sakautek, Sinzeny, and Buksak-Potok.

On other sectors of the front, scout patrolling and on several sectors fighting of local importance took place.

During September 9 our troops have damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 8 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 18 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 10 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

The garrison of the seafortress Brest repulsed after grim fighting yesterday all enemy attacks against the fortress itself which were carried out with greatest employment of material. The peninsula of Le Conquet was lost. Remnants of the garrison are still offering desperate resistance. Enemy bridge heads to the south of Gent and to the northwest of Hasselt were narrowed down in the course of a counterattack; enemy forces which had penetrated into our lines to the south of Maastricht were thrown back.

Between Verviers and Arlon, the enemy thrusted against our positions on a broad front and achieved minor local dents; counter-attacks are under way. In the area of Dôle, which was given up by our troops, as well as to the north and to the east of Besançon, heavy fighting is going on.

On the Franco-Italian border, some heights were taken and cleared from the enemy in the area of the Mt. Cenis and the Maddalena Pass.

On the Adriatic coast, the focal point of the fighting was yesterday to both sides of Gemmano where all day long embittered fighting lasted. All enemy attacks carried out with strong forces failed; local dents were sealed off. Fierce fighting is still in progress for the locality of Gemmano proper which changed hands seven times during the day.

The Bolsheviks carried out vain attacks on the highways of the passes in southeastern Transylvania. Battleplanes dispersed motorized columns of the Soviets in northern Rumania and destroyed several fuel trains. At Sanok and Krosno the enemy attacked with several rifle divisions and tank formations. His breakthrough attempts were frustrated in the course of grim fighting. At Ostrolenka renewed Soviet attacks collapsed by the stubborn resistance of our troops.

Enemy bomber and fighter formations attacked at daytime western German territory particularly Duesseldorf, Mainz and Mannheim making use of a cloud cover. Twenty-nine aircraft, including 23 four-engined bombers, were shot down.

NEWS FROM ENEMY SOURCES

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Fighting in the Carpathians: Soviet Russian pressure in the sector north of the Carpathians is growing. The Soviets on a small front have thrown into the battle several infantry divisions and tank formations. The main pressure is directed against the town of Krosno. Military correspondent Col. Ernst von Hammer says that the battles in the Vistula bridgehead west of Baranov continue, although not with the same violence as on the previous days.

Western Front: The focal points of the enemy attacks in France and Belgium are said to be on the German bridgehead, south of the Scheldt, east of Antwerp, in the Liège area, east of Sedan, on the Moselle at Metz, and in the Besançon area.

German Luftwaffe Activity over the Western Front: A Luftwaffe correspondent writes that on September 10th German battleplane formations were very active over the Western Front, particularly over the Liège area. All day long they controlled the supply traffic in the enemy's rear, where vehicle concentrations were effectively attacked with bombs and by gun fire.

Fighting in Italy: On the Adriatic coast, the British in spite of recent heavy losses, continued their efforts at penetrating into the valley north of Tavoleto.

General Census Ordered in Allied-Occupied Italy: With the consent of the Allied Control Commission, the Bonomi Government have ordered a general census to be taken in Allied-occupied Italy, September 15. The fact that former statistical documents were lost due to war events is evidently accounting for this measure. The reason given by the Bonomi Government is, that the general living standard, conditions of clothing, education and housing as well as damage caused as a result of the war are thus to be investigated.

Law and Order along the Hungarian-Slovak Border: The Hungarian Government has issued a statement denying a number of rumors circulating abroad. The Hungarian Government was quoted as saying «that law and order prevail along the Hungarian-Slovak border, and that no fighting has been undertaken from any side. The ban on border traffic which was put into effect several days ago, because of Partisan activity in Slovakia, has been lifted again and rail traffic in the direction of Bratislava was resumed.

New de Gaulle Cabinet: It is said that the new de Gaulle cabinet is characterized by the participation of a greater number of members of the French domestic resistance movement who, during the political developments of the past few days, entered into certain opposition to de Gaulle.

Western Front: There were no material changes in the general situation on the Western Front, Saturday. It is said that a temporary decrease in the intensity of the fighting is to be observed on almost all front sectors, primarily due to the fact that the enemy, above all American tank wedges, have suffered such heavy losses that they are now compelled to await the arrival of reserves and reinforcements.

Partisan Fighting in Slovakia: Fighting against the Partisans in Slovakia is described as continuing successfully. The whole of western Slovakia is virtually free from Partisans. Twelve towns are said to be liberated in southern Slovakia and in the northern part of central Slovakia. The fact that the Partisans themselves are split into two parties, one of which supports a Republic of Czechoslovakia, while the other favors a Soviet Republic of Slovakia, is said to have proved as an advantage for the Germans.

Nationalist Government Formed in Bulgaria: In Bulgaria, a nationalist government under the leadership of the well-known Bulgarian statesman Professor Cankov has been formed to preserve the real interests of the Bulgarian nation and to continue and consolidate the alliance between Bulgaria and the Greater German Reich.

Riots in Bulgaria: According to reports from Sofia,

WAR FRONTS

ALLIES REPORTED IN HOLLAND; BRUSSELS LIBERATED

SHAEF, September 4 — Allied troops have crossed the Netherlands frontier northeast of Antwerp and are in Breda, the Netherlands Prime Minister, Dr. Gerbrandy, stated tonight in broadcast from London to the people of Holland.

Tonight, General Dwight Eisenhower ordered the people of the port city of Rotterdam to protect their factories, harbor works, railways, and other installations against any action by the Germans. The broadcast, transmitted by Radio Orange in London, stated that everything must be done to protect installations so that they can be used immediately after the Allies have liberated Rotterdam.

General Miles Dempsey's British 2nd Army today liberated Brussels, the fourth great European capital to be freed from German domination, and have swept on 10 miles greatly-needed fuel and material for the racing British and American armies.

There is no sign of stiffening German resistance in Belgium. The German flight continues to be a panic-stricken rout of remnants of demoralized German soldiers. Hundreds are hiding in the woods, afraid to surrender to the Belgian Forces of Resistance because of their crimes, but only too anxious to find a British or American soldier to whom they can surrender.

As they retreat, the Germans are burning villages and towns, homes and churches in their impotent rage. They are leaving behind them a wake of destruction and horror. The roads are strewn with the wreckage of German equipment of all kinds — from tanks and self-propelled guns, to trucks and command cars.

Pilots report that all the way from eastern Belgium to the German frontier, and particularly north and west of Aachen, there is extremely heavy eastbound traffic.

Railways to Berlin

To the south, General Courtney Hodges' American 1st Army was reported in Namur, where it threatens the rail routes leading to Cologne, Dusseldorf, and Duisberg — the main roads to Berlin.

In their advance on Charleroi yesterday, the Americans engaged in a pitched battle with German rearguards attempting to escape to the east. Allied tanks, planes, and artillery pounded the elements of three German divisions which blundered into the Americans, unaware of the extent of the Allied advance into Belgium.

Operational secrecy still guards the position of General George Patton's 3rd Army, which was last reported in the vicinity of Metz and Nancy.

A Berne dispatch late tonight reported that German High Command headquarters in Belgium had been moved to Germany, and that Hitler, Himmler, and Model are now in conference.

Between Brussels and Calais, British forces pushed into the great French industrial city of Lille. Other columns closed in upon Calais, Boulogne, and Dunkirk, all Channel ports.

In the middle of the Allied front, left behind in the backwash of one of the fastest drives in the history of modern war, was an isolated German force of undisclosed size in a by-passed triangle south from Cambrai to the vicinity of Compiegne and Soissons in France.

Toward the coast, the Canadians and Poles have been pouring troops northward across the Somme River to strengthen their drive against the German defenses in the Pas de Calais area. They have pushed on nearly 20 miles east of the river, after liberating Abbeville. Among the prisoners

General Miles Dempsey's British 2nd Army today liberated Brussels, the fourth great European capital to be freed from German domination, and have swept on 15 miles to Boom, in a drive to reach the Belgian seaport of Antwerp.

Another column, swinging northeastward has reached Malines (Mechlin), 13 miles south of Antwerp.

German — Dunkirk —

On the northern flank, a British column pushing northeast from Tournai has been clearing the left bank of the River Scheldt (Escaut), and has reached Audenarde and Alost, virtually penning off German troops in the coastal zone between the Somme and the Scheldt. The German armies are experiencing their Dunkirk.

In one of the most brilliant armored sweeps of the war, British tanks have raced practically across Belgium in less than 36 hours. General Dempsey's advance began last Tuesday, from the area east of the Somme. By Wednesday, Amiens was captured, and the Germans between Le Havre and the Somme were trapped. Twenty four hours later, Arras was liberated, then Douai and Lens. The Belgian frontier was then reached, and Brussels liberated. The 130-mile advance was made in 4½ days.

Brussels has been made into a seaport by the construction of a series of canals and a large docking system. It is crossed by two important canals connecting it with the inland waterways of France, the Netherlands, and Germany. It is 33 miles by canal from Antwerp, whose capture will give the Allies a large seaport for the supplying of bombs, homes and churches in their impotent rage. They are leaving behind them a wake of destruction and horror. The roads are strewn with the wreckage of German equipment of all kinds — from tanks and self-propelled guns, to trucks and command cars.

LATE BULLETINS

ANTWERP, LILLE LIBERATED

SHAEF, September 4 — Antwerp has been liberated by Allied troops sprinting north from Brussels, it was reported here late tonight.

The capture of Belgium's great port city completes another wide circling movement, leaving the Germans that are still in the Pas De Calais area without the slightest hope of getting out.

British troops entered Lille this morning, according to a late report from a Reuter correspondent.

Canadian troops are at Hesdin, southeast of Boulogne.

American fighter-bombers yesterday caught the «biggest traffic jam in history» between Mons and Brussels and destroyed 919 trucks and 737 horse-drawn vehicles.

The roads to the Rhineland are jammed with columns of trucks loaded with food from Alsace, according to a British United Press correspondent. (BUP-Reuter)

13 JAPANESE VESSELS SUNK

PEARL HARBOR, September 4 — Admiral Chester Nimitz announced tonight that 13 Japanese vessels were sunk in a smashing three-day bombardment of Japanese bases in the Bonin and Volcano Islands. United States warships participated in the great offensive action. (OWI) taken in this drive was General Wiese, commander of all the German troops in the Somme area.

An ultimatum has been delivered to the German command at Le Havre, calling for the surrender of the garrison, estimated at 5,000, stating that, if it is rejected, the German fortifications protecting the city will be bombed.

Far behind the Allied line, heavy fighting was raging for the great port of Brest on the Brittany Peninsula, but there is as yet no sign of the German garrison's capitulating. (OWI-Reuter-AP)

BREST BOMBED BY NIGHT AND DAY
BAD WEATHER HAMPERS AIR OPERATIONS

LONDON, September 4 — Medium bombers of the 9th USAAF flew to Brest last night to drop more bombs on the port where already 1,700 tons of explosives had been loosed by 8th USAAF heavies only that morning.

Marauders and Havocs attacked enemy gun positions, anti-tank guns, batteries, and concrete shelters in this beleaguered coastal fortress, where a fanatical German garrison still is holding out.

Weather conditions prevented some of the aircraft from dropping their bombs, but other crews found breaks in the clouds and scored hits on their objectives. The bombers met no enemy fighters or flak, and all returned to their base.

Today, bad weather set in over the Continent and restricted operations, after 5,000 sorties flown yesterday, in which Allied airmen attacked objectives in Germany, Holland, and France. British Lancasters and Halifaxes were out in strength, and bombed six German air bases in the Netherlands used by German night fighters and bombers, both in the defense of Germany and in operations over the battle-front.

The chief target of 500 Flying Fortresses yesterday was a synthetic oil plant near Ludwigshafen.

American fighter-bombers swept over the Boulogne-Ostend-Antwerp areas, and destroyed two bridges and 10 buildings described as «special targets.» Among the day's bag of transport casualties were 54 locomotives, 75 rail cars, and 200 motor vehicles destroyed or damaged. When Allied pilots attacked two columns of Germans fleeing east from Louvain, motor transport, horse-drawn vehicles, carts, and «everything on wheels» were inextricably mixed up on the escape route.

August was the greatest single month of successes against the Germans for the British 2nd TAF. This force knocked out 10,500 enemy vehicles, including 850 tanks during August, according to an official announcement today. It destroyed 71 German planes in combat, and damaged 48 more. A red letter day for the 2nd TAF was August 16, when they smashed 3,000 vehicles in the Falaise trap.

The lull continued in the German flying-bomb attacks, and it is now over 72 hours since a flying-bomb fell in southern England. Most of the flying-bomb sites in the Pas de Calais area are out of action, and with this menace eliminated, more RAF heavy bombers have been freed for other operations.

The British Air Ministry stated tonight that the enemy launched an estimated 370 flying-bombs against Britain during the week ending at 0600 hours this morning, causing a total of approximately 3,070 flying-bombs launched since the attacks began. (OWI - Reuter)

EISENHOWER BROADCASTS TO BELGIUM, LUXEMBURG

SHAEF, September 4 — «Today, the day of your liberation has begun,» General Dwight Eisenhower, Allied Supreme Commander, said this morning in a broadcast message to the people of Belgium and Luxembourg. The Supreme Commander continued:

Your long period of hardship under Nazi domination will soon be ended, as will the hardships of war, which People of Norway and the Netherlands, too, can be confident that your day of liberation approaches.

To all of you I say, be of good courage. Victory is assured.' (BBC)

FRENCH PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT IN PARIS

LONDON, September 4 — Nearly all members of the Provisional Government of the French Republic, as well as the bureau of the Consultative Assembly, arrived in Paris during the past weekend, a Times correspondent reported today.

General Charles De Gaulle is now in the midst of consultations for the reconstitution of his cabinet on a wider basis, the correspondent said.

In the city of Paris, the dispatch added, the food situation is still difficult, and there is a shortage of coal with a consequent lack of gas and electricity. (Reuter)

VERDUN VETERANS BRAND PETAIN TRAITOR

NEW YORK, September 4 — The powerful Society of French Veterans of Verdun has branded 83-year old Marshal Henri Philippe Petain as a traitor, after disavowing him as the Hero of Verdun.

The elderly Marshal will not be buried in the crypt reserved for him in the Douaumont Chapel, an honor reserved only for France's greatest soldiers.

Stripping him of all glory and honor, the Society accused Petain of meekly selling France to Hitler and of having lost faith in his native land.

Old Verdun soldiers, the Society declared, will never forgive Petain, and claimed he should have left France after the 1940 debacle, rather than become Hitler's catspaw.

In view of the indignation prevalent in Verdun, the Marshal, now said to have been whisked into Germany by the Gestapo, never visited the historic city in recent years, although before the present war he customarily officiated at the annual battle anniversary ceremonies and frequently found time to chat with the veterans. (OWI)

POLISH TROOPS' ROLE IN CLOSING FALAISE GAP

LONDON, September 4 — The Polish 1st Armored Division, commanded by General Maczek, sealed the Allied victory in Normandy by closing the Falaise gap, the only remaining outlet for the battered German 7th Army, it was reported today.

Opposing the full fury of two German SS corps, the Polish division started operations on August 15 when their tanks crossed the River Dives at two points northeast of Falaise. The same day they cut off the first of the last three remaining German escape roads and, in a brilliant maneuver, stormed southward toward the other two roads.

Polish artillery and tanks gained control of the second escape road, and the strategically vital village of Trun.

The battle of annihilation reached the crucial phase the following day. While some units were holding all the terrain gained, others, though hammered without interruption by the Germans, drove down to Chambois and the last road left open to the Germans.

Acting on Hitler's orders, two Elite SS corps made attack after attack, desperately trying to break the iron ring which the Poles forged around them.

It was at this stage that the 1st Polish Armored Division — operating five miles further east than the Canadians and Americans — withstood the entire wrath of a fanatical German onslaught. The gap was relentlessly pushed closed, and by the evening of August 21, German resistance ceased. (Reuter)

EISENHOWER BROADCASTS TO BELGIUM, LUXEMBURG

SHAEF, September 4 — «Today, the day of your liberation has begun,» General Dwight Eisenhower, Allied Supreme Commander, said this morning in a broadcast message to the people of Belgium and Luxemburg. The Supreme Commander continued:

Your long period of hardship under Nazi domination will soon be ended, as will the hardships of war, which are inevitable during the battle of pursuit. Such a war is now being waged on your soil.

The task of the Allied Armies is to harry and destroy the retreating enemy. This purpose will be pursued vigorously, so that the day of our final success may come sooner.

The armed forces of Belgium and Luxemburg form part of the Allied Expeditionary Force, and are fighting bravely for the freedom of their homeland. Those of you within this homeland can also serve in the battle. I know that you can be relied on to aid our purpose, whenever the opportunity occurs. Be assured that it is our purpose to do everything to restore peace and normal conditions throughout Belgium and Luxemburg at the earliest opportunity, so that their valiant peoples, once again masters of their own destiny, can live as free men in the families of free nations.

I should like to address another word to the people and leaders of France.

Your actions, behavior, and conduct have been exemplary throughout the difficult times through which we have passed together. You faced the trying weeks with fortitude and cheerfulness.

Much of our success is owed to the fighting qualities of your armed forces, and to the French Forces of the Interior, and to the assistance of the population.

Henri Philippe Pétain as a traitor, after disavowing him as the Hero of Verdun.

The elderly Marshal will not be buried in the crypt reserved for him in the Douaumont Chapel, an honor reserved only for France's greatest soldiers.

Stripping him of all glory and honor, the Society accused Pétain of meekly selling France to Hitler, and of having lost faith in his native land.

Old Verdun soldiers, the Society declared, will never forgive Pétain, and claimed he should have left France after the 1940 debacle, rather than become Hitler's catspaw.

In view of the indignation prevalent in Verdun, the Marshal, now said to have been whisked into Germany by the Gestapo, never visited the historic city in recent years, although before the present war he customarily officiated at the annual battle anniversary ceremonies and frequently found time to chat with the veterans. POLISH TROOPS' ROLE IN CLOSING FALAISE GAP

LONDON, September 4 — The Polish 1st Armored Division, commanded by General Maczek, sealed the Allied victory in Normandy by closing the Falaise gap, the only remaining outlet for the battered German 7th Army, it was reported today.

Opposing the full fury of two German SS corps, the Polish division started operations on August 13 when their tanks crossed the River Dives at two points northeast of Falaise. The same day they cut off the first of the last three remaining German escape roads and, in a brilliant maneuver, stormed southward toward the other two roads.

Polish artillery and tanks gained control of the second escape road, and the strategically vital village of Trun.

The battle of annihilation reached the crucial phase the following day. While some units were holding all the terrain gained, others, though hammered without interruption by the Germans, drove down to Chambois and the last road left open to the Germans.

Acting on Hitler's orders, two Elite SS corps made attack after attack, desperately trying to break the iron ring which the Poles forged around them.

It was at this stage that the 1st Polish Armored Division — operating five miles further east than the Canadians and Americans — withstood the entire weight of a fanatical German onslaught. The gap was relentlessly pushed closed, and by the evening of August 21 German resistance ceased. (Reuter)

NAZIS PLEAD FOR GUERILLA WARFARE

LONDON, September 4 — Germany today officially called for guerrilla warfare on a grand scale, as a reply to the Allied armies racing toward Germany.

The call was made in an article by Deputy Press Chief Suendermann, printed in Goebbels paper Der Angriff. The article, rebroadcast several times by the German News Agency, stated:

War will take on a completely different shape when the front line becomes one with the line set up at home by a people whose hearts are burning, and whose fists are strong. This is going to be a people's war and people are unconquerable.

If the Russians and Americans set foot on German soil, every village, every hillock, every cornfield, every farmhouse, will be a nest of resistance. Workers and peasants will leave the lathe and plough. Old and young must gladly enter the fray for the defense of the Fatherland.

The enemy will not find a single German cornstalk to feed him. No German mouth will give him information. No German hand will stretch out to help him. Every road or path will be destroyed as he comes. He will find nothing but hatred and destruction, and people will rise in wrath against those that want to steal their soil. (Reuter)

HOSTILITIES BETWEEN RUSSIA AND FINLAND CEASE

LONDON, September 4 — The Finnish government announced last night that hostilities between Finland and Russia would cease today at 0800 hours (0200 hours today Eastern War Time).

The cease-fire order was issued by President Carl Gustav Mannerheim as Commander-in-Chief of the Finnish Army, a communique said.

The armistice was announced only a few hours after the Mannerheim Government declared officially it would break off diplomatic relations with Germany and said that all German troops remaining in Finland after September 15 would be disarmed or interned.

Following is the text of the communique issued by the Finnish President:

«Under the terms of the agreement between the Finnish and Russian government, hostilities on the Finnish Army front are to cease at 0800 hours this morning.

«The President and Commander-in-Chief has issued orders to this effect.»

Announcement of the armistice was first broadcast to the Finnish people at 0500 hours (1100 hours Eastern War Time) yesterday. An hour later, leaflets bearing the text of the communique were distributed throughout Helsinki as its population went to work.

The armistice came three years and three months after Finland joined the Germans in the attacks on Russia.

The first detachment of General Rendulics' Army has left Finland, it was reported from Stockholm today.

A steady stream of motorised vehicles loaded with German troops have been observed moving across the Finnish-Norwegian border. (OWI-Reuter)

RED ARMY LIBERATES BRASOV IN TRANSYLVANIA

MOSCOW, September 4 — Russian and Rumanian units have liberated Brasov. Troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front, in co-operation with Rumanian forces, struck northward from Ploesti, and after battling through passes in the Transylvanian Alps, descended upon the big Rumanian road and rail junction of Brasov, 52 miles northwest of Ploesti.

Troops who drove the Germans from Brasov continued their advance and liberated over 150 other places on their way.

One hundred miles northeast of Brasov, on the eastern side of the Carpathians, other troops of the 2nd Ukrainian front wiped out the last remaining group of German troops who survived the encirclement at Kishinev. Of this German group, which was attempting to break through toward the west, 3,000 officers and men were killed, and 3,500 were captured, including the commander of the 370th German Infantry Division, Major General von Glisen.

To the south, on the northern bank of the Danube in the vicinity of Calarasi, a group of 6,000 German officers and men were captured by troops of the 3rd Ukrainian front. Tonight's Soviet communique said that a small part of these troops were remnants of routed German formations in the area of Braila. But the biggest part were sent to Rumanian territory from Bulgaria by the Germans, to attack Bucharest from the southeast at the time the Red Army was approaching the Rumanian capital.

The only other sector of the Russian front mentioned in tonight's Soviet communique was the region northeast of Warsaw, where Soviet forces made advances southwest of Lomza, 80 miles from the Polish capital and 30 miles from East Prussia. Here more than 100 towns and villages were liberated.

CZECHOSLOVAKS BATTLING GERMAN ARMOR

LONDON, September 4 — Czechoslovak forces are waging heavy defensive battles against German armored units in the directions of Zilina (Sillein) and Vrutky and in the Nitra (Neutra) area in western Slovakia, the sixth communique issued from Czechoslovak headquarters reported tonight.

Twenty-seven German tanks have been destroyed in the fighting.

In the mountainous region of central Slovakia, Czechoslovak units, together with patriot groups, are attacking the town of Poprad.

Czech forces are also battling for Trstena, near the Polish border on the railway line from Bratislava (Pressburg) to Cracow.

Other units are fighting for the towns of Lucenec and Levic (Leva), both of which have been in Hungary's possession since 1938.

The communique reported heavy fighting is in progress for the armament factory of Dubnica, belonging to the Skoda works, where Czech and French workers are taking part in the fight against German workers. The plant itself is reported to be in flames. Dubnica is in the Vah Valley north of Trencin (Trentschin), and over 10,000 Czech slave laborers are estimated to be working there.

In Bratislava, the communique said, the military academy, which was held by Czech forces, has been taken by overwhelming enemy forces, who drove back the heroic defenders.

In eastern Slovakia, the situation remains unchanged.

Strong German bomber and fighter activity continues over Slovakia. (OWI)

MOSCOW CALLS ON AUSTRIANS TO REVOLT

LONDON, September 4 — Radio Moscow yesterday called on Austrians to revolt, declaring that «Hitler's doom is near. The broadcast added:

«Now your hour has come to help the United Nations.

«Austrians, rise like one man against the Nazis. Hit hard and swiftly. Sabotage everything that has anything to do with the German war effort.

«Everyone of you should join the already existing resistance movement, and thereby hasten the victory which is around the corner.» (OWI)

LYON CLEARED OF ENEMY RESISTANCE BOURG LIBERATED

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 4 — Lyon was cleared of enemy resistance today, and French and American forces are pushing on north and northeast to overtake the fleeing remnants of the German 19th Army, it was announced here late tonight.

French troops are advancing along both banks of the Saône River, and American forces have occupied Bourg, 34 miles to the northeast of the great industrial center, with but slight contact with the withdrawing enemy forces.

The last reported action between the retreating German troops and their relentless American pursuers was at and near the village of Montrevel, 43 miles northeast of Lyon, where German tank forces attempting to screen the Saône Valley escape route clashed heavily with fast-moving American troops.

American forces wrested half of the small town's area from the enemy in a bitter two-hours' battle yesterday morning, only to have enemy forces counter-attack during the afternoon with fresh tank formations. Although the counter-attack was beaten off, the fighting around the town continued, it was said.

Farther south along this road paralleling the enemy escape route, other enemy forces still held out in desperate fighting to delay the American pursuit.

Epidemics in Warsaw

Polish forces are withdrawing from Warsaw, and will regroup elsewhere to continue the fighting against the Germans, General Bor announced today. His communique stated that this decision was taken because the patriots faced epidemics of typhoid and scarlet fever, acute shortages of food, and almost no ammunition. Typhoid and scarlet fever broke out in the city last week as a result of polluted water.

General Bor's headquarters also announced that patriot resistance in the Old City district of Warsaw had been crushed by overwhelming German superiority in manpower and armament after 34 days of bitter street fighting and heavy losses on both sides. The Old City is «in total ruin.» The center of the city is under heavy artillery fire, and is being subjected to incessant bombing. There are widespread fires.

(The German Overseas News Agency, quoting a Foreign Office spokesman, said today that «Polish patriots who are surrendering in Warsaw will be treated as POWs.»)

Meanwhile, a new Polish Patriot uprising against the Germans was reported by the Polish authorities in London today. In co-operation with Russian troops driving toward Warsaw from the east, Polish underground troops have risen in strength at Radom, 50 miles south of the Polish capital. (Reuter)

Although the counter-attack was beaten off, the fighting around the town continued, it was said.

Farther south along this road paralleling the enemy escape route, other enemy forces still held out in desperate fighting to delay the American pursuit.

Both at Certine, 16 miles south of Montrevel, and at Ceyzerat, a village to the southeast, and only 31 miles from the Swiss border, stiff enemy resistance was still being encountered.

Lyon was not immediately occupied by Allied forces, and definite information from within the great city was scanty, it was announced here. Patrol forces only entered the city yesterday, the Americans from the east and the French from the west, on the opposite bank of the Rhône which winds through the heart of the big industrial center. Only a handful of the score or more of bridges which span the Rhône and its tributary, the Saône, are intact, it was reported.

The German forces had fled through the city on to the north before the arrival of the Allied scouting parties, and the main forces of the French and American contingents continued in pursuit, by-passing the big, sprawling city. Some of the fleeing remnants of the battered German 19th Army were spotted north of Ville Franche, 15 miles north of Lyon, and were subjected to a punishing attack from the air.

French forces occupied the village of Ville Franche, only 22 miles south of Macon, in their advance up the west banks of the Saône River.

CARRIER PLANES DESTROYED 1,000 ENEMY VEHICLES

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 4 — Hellcat fighter-bombers from the American aircraft carriers Tulagi and Kasaan Bay destroyed «well over 1,000» enemy motor vehicles in attacking retreating German columns in the Rhône Valley and along its western approaches, it was announced here today.

One squadron alone, from the Kaiser-built carrier Tulagi, destroyed 487 German vehicles, ranging from tanks to ammunition trucks, and damaged 114 others, it was reported.

The Hellcats also destroyed or damaged 23 locomotives and 195 railway cars. They are also credited with destroying a 7,000-ton freighter, 16 enemy barges, and five trawlers, as well as 22 enemy fuel tanks.

The planes silenced two German forts and knocked out four gun emplacements and seven big coastal batteries, it was reported. They destroyed six enemy planes — every one they saw in the nearly three-week period since the original landings in southern France. (PRO)

FIVE GERMAN BATTALIONS SURRENDER TO FFI

ALGIERS, September 4 — Five German battalions in the Ardèche Department in southern France have surrendered to French Forces of the Interior who cut off their retreat, an announcement from General Jean Cochet's headquarters stated last night.

Other FFI units have liberated the town of Ruffec in the Charente Department in west central France, the communique from the headquarters of General Koenig, commander-in-chief of the FFI, reported today.

The communique also stated that the FFI are continuing their attacks in the center and southwest against enemy concentrations and convoys.

The FFI gave particularly effective help to American and French troops in the liberation of Lyon, the communique added.

Meanwhile, the FFI radio station in Vichy stated today that all property in the Clermont-Ferrand region belonging to Pierre Laval has been confiscated for the benefit of the state.

Laval had a home in Chateldon in the Puy de Dome Department, and among his possessions was the newspaper Le Moniteur du Puy de Dome which was published at Clermont-Ferrand.

All goods and chattels belonging to the former Vichy militia have also have been confiscated, according to the broadcast.

Units of the French Forces of the Interior have crossed the Italian frontier in the Alps and are now operating on Italian soil, the French military delegate for the southern zone, General Jean Cochet, said in a communique broadcast by the Algiers Radio yesterday.

The communique said that fighting continued east of the Alps, where the FFI forces are reported to be regrouping and re-arming in preparation for further attacks on the Germans.

In southern France, in the provinces of Langue d'Oc and Guyenne, FFI men are said to be establishing contacts with units of the old French African army.

The future of the French Resistance movement was outlined today by Emmanuel d'Astier de la Vigerie, Interior Commissioner of the French Provisional government. The Commissioner said some of the members of the FFI will continue to fight as regular soldiers, others will become [illegible] back to on units, while still others of the initial assault force, struck northwest to capture San Giovanni in Marignano, on the Ventena River, flowing into the Adriatic at a point just south of the Conca River. These forces then pushed on further northwest to cross the Conca River upstream from the original bridgehead. Tanks and infantry forces were then rushed forward in the wake of the attack troops to consolidate and expand the bridgehead over the stream.

Gradara and Cattolica, the two German strongpoints bypassed by the Canadian attack, and now isolated well behind the forward battle lines, are being systematically cleared, it was reported.

Farther inland across the Adriatic coastal corridor, British troops captured Monte Gridolfo and the villages of Meleto and Saludecio to the north, where German forces have been trying to stem the rush of 8th Army troops streaming through the 20-mile gap in the Goth Line.

These elaborate enemy defenses, intended to form one of the main buttresses of the Nazi's fortress Europe, yet broken within 24 hours after the all-out 8th Army attack, were «the most elaborate, the strongest and most trusted German defense work outside Germany itself,» an official statement said today. Modelled after the Siegfried Line on Germany's western frontier, now threatened by Allied advances in northern France, the Goth defenses were much more up to date, and incorporated many improvements over the Nazi's main fortress system built in 1940.

More than half a million conscripted Italian laborers were forced to toil on the works, as well as a complete Slovak division and many German labor battalions. Construction was begun as early as September a year ago.

On the 5th Army front, American forces thrust to within less than five miles of Lucca in advances which skirted the edges of the Monte Pisano massif, and further east, were within seven miles of Pistoia, also on the Autostrada following the northern edges of the Arno Valley from Florence to the Ligurian coast.

Fifth Army forces have now penetrated as far as nine miles north of the Arno in their general advance from Pisa eastward to Empoli, and hold the high ground dominating the important latter) highway connecting the towns on the northern fringes of the valley. In yesterday's gains, the small towns of Spicchio, Lamporecchio, Stabbia, and Pelanate were captured.

Along the central sectors of the front, Allied patrol forces were active, and in many places Allied troops are in direct contact with the Goth Line defenses through the Apennine heights. (PIO)

RAIL BRIDGES IN NORTH ITALY ATTACKED

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 4 — Both heavy and medium bombers of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force combined today to deliver a series of crippling blows against road and rail lines in northern Italy.

While up to 500 Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked rail bridges and marshalling yards on the Brenner Pass route from Germany, and the Tarvisio and Chiusa bridges in northeastern Italy, a record number of Mitchell medium bombers struck at nine bridges in the Milan area, hitting eight of the targets in simultaneous attacks.

TWO-MILE-DEEP BRIDGEHEAD OVER CONCA

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 4 — Canadian forces of the 8th Army, in a slashing, two-pronged attack, have crossed the Conca River to establish a bridgehead two miles deep and within seven miles of Rimini, Adriatic terminus of the Po Valley highway, it was announced here today.

The Canadian attack, which has scored gains of up to seven miles since its start on Saturday, knifed past German strongpoints, both along the coast and inland, to seize and consolidate a three-mile wide hold on the north banks of the Conca River beginning at a point 6,000 yards in from the adriatic sea.

The easternmost of the two Canadian columns which executed the attack captured the village of Pieve, south of Gradara, and then by-passed this German strongpoint to reach the coastal highway and push around the coastal town of Cattolica to cross the Conca at a point 1½ miles due west.

Strategic Air Force heavy bombers hit at rail bridges along the line leading from the Balkans in Hungary and Yugoslavia, scoring hits on spans across the Danube, the Sava, and the Tisza rivers.

The toll of enemy rolling stock was heaviest in the Turin area and westward to the French frontier, where German forces are nervously buttressing the Alpine defenses against a possible threat by 7th Army troops now overrunning nearly all southern France. HAVOC AS GERMANS RETREAT FROM GOTH LINE

WITH 8TH ARMY, ITALY, September 4 — The Goth Line is crumbling, just as other so-called "impregnable" defense lines have crumbled before in Italy, said a front-line dispatch from a UNN correspondent with the 8th Army today.

In spite of the still vigorous fighting on various sectors, the dispatch said, the foundations of the Goth line have been thoroughly shaken, and another German resistance front is rapidly being reduced to impotence.

The devastation wrought by the Germans as they are being driven northward is thus described by the UNN reporter.

"Little villages have been completely destroyed; houses have been reduced to unrecognizable heaps of rubble and debris, civilians have been left homeless and destitute, to wander about aimlessly and without purpose or destination; food stocks and supplies have either been looted or rendered useless.

"There are grim scenes all along the front. Misery and hunger, death and destruction are rife. With the retreating Nazis running amuck, ravaging and razing the countryside everywhere, the chaos is complete. Husbands are separated from their wives, mothers search blindly for their children; old men and women stumble haltingly for safety and succour.

"This is the almost indescribable situation that continually greets the advancing Allied forces, and this is the havoc which the Allied military welfare authorities are straightening out with a minimum of delay.

"Unable to cope with the military might of the Allied armies, the Germans are avenging themselves on the Italian people." (UNN)

CLARK VISITS PISA

PISA, September 4 — Lieut. General Mark W. Clark yesterday visited this historic city liberated by his 5th Army troops, who had saved the famous Leaning Tower from destruction, a United Nations News reporter wrote today.

General Clark personally inspected damage done by German artillery. The 851-year-old cathedral showed the marks of two mortar hits, both light, and one of its three bronze doors had what looked like a bullet hole. All six of the city's ancient bridges were blown up, the railroad station in the south section was completely destroyed, and the north drive along the River Arno, on which most of the city's hotels and shops are located, was extensively mined.

The UNN correspondent told of the German treatment of the population. He said:

"I learned that there has been no distribution of food in Pisa for 40 days. Utilities have been cut off for about the same period. There is no light, water, or gas, and of the two aqueducts which supplied the city, it is believed that only one will be usable in the immediate future.

"There are less than 15,000 (of the original 55,000) of the civilian population left. More than 100 civilians have been killed in recent weeks by German mines and booby traps, and only last night four civilians were killed during German shelling of the town.

"Pisa's shops are empty. There is little to be bought anywhere.

But already, the dispatch added, AMG officers are on the job, feeding, administering, and helping the hungry populace as much as possible.

The dispatch told of German brutality as reported by Italians. All men in the Monte Pisano area had been ordered by Nazis to report for forced labor by August 2, but instead, many hid in forests. A Fascist spy lured a band of these Patriots into a gulle where German flame-throwers burned 30 of them into ashes, including eight women.

In another incident, a priest accused of harboring escaped prisoners of war was killed and six others were taken from Pisa as hostages the correspondent said. (UNN)

In the Celebes, medium bombers struck at shipping, shipyards, and warehouses in the Lamboh area, destroying a 1,000-ton freighter. No enemy fighters were met, but two Allied planes are missing from intense anti-aircraft fire.

Other targets for the Allied planes included much-bombed Halmahera; Boela and Namlea airfields in Ceram; Lautem airfield in Timor; the Aroe Islands; and numerous targets in Dutch New Guinea and New Ireland.

CHINESE FREE VITAL SECTOR OF BURMA ROAD

CHUNGKING, September 4 — Chinese Expeditionary Forces fighting around 7,000-foot Mount Chungshan, the world's highest battleground, have wiped out six Japanese strongpoints, thereby making possible the re-opening of a vital sector of the Burma Road, a National Broadcasting Company dispatch reported today.

The eyewitness dispatch said the Chinese penetrated the Japanese positions at a point 16 miles west of the Salween River, where the Japanese have for some months been holding up the re-opening of the Burma Road by dominating the highway between the Salween and Lungling. The attack was carried out by "utterly fearless Chinese soldiers with American assistance and supplies," the dispatch added.

The Japanese garrison besieged by the Chinese in the Burma Road town of Lungling is still unrelieved. Another 1,000 Japanese troops were hurled into an effort to clear a road block 2½ miles southeast of Lungling, but the attack failed, a Chinese High Command communique said today.

A night attack by the Japanese garrison in Tengchung was repulsed, the communique reported. Japanese snipers in this ancient city's buildings are using ground-level embrasures as portholes from which to fire at the Chinese. As a counter-measure, the Chinese are pouring gasoline down the holes, then igniting the fuel with flame-throwers.

The new Japanese drive in southern Hunan Province, opened from the captured oil city of Hengyang, has made progress, according to Associated Press and United Press reports today. Three of the four Japanese columns spearheading the drive have continued to gain ground. The fourth enemy column, attacking from the south, was halted by the Chinese. The Japanese are now 25 miles southwest of Hengyang, and a severe battle is raging.

Allied troops advancing into western Burma in pursuit of Japanese forces retreating from India are approaching Tiddim, after clearing the highway of the enemy for a distance of 100 miles south of Imphal. Today's Southeast Asia communique announcing this, said only limited rear-guard resistance was being encountered in the continuing advance.

In northern Burma, Allied troops moving southward down the Mandalay railway were reported approaching Hopin, 35 miles southwest of Mogaung, after their capture of Pinlaw yesterday.

An area of more than 20,000 square miles of northern Burma — nearly one tenth of the entire country — has now been regained by the Allies and is under their control, it was announced yesterday. (OWI-Reuter)

SPAIN WILL NOT SHELTER NAZIS, AMBASSADOR SAYS

WASHINGTON, September 4 — "No one has ever contemplated providing a hiding place in Spain for the enemies of the Allied countries," said the Spanish Ambassador to the U.S., Juan de Cardenas, in a statement issued here last night.

CLARK VISITS PISA

PISA, September 4 — Lieut. General Mark W. Clark yesterday visited this historic city liberated by his 5th Army troops, who had saved the famous Leaning Tower from destruction, a United Nations News reporter wrote today.

General Clark personally inspected damage done by German artillery. The 861-year-old cathedral showed the marks of two mortar hits, both light, and one of its three bronze doors had what looked like a bullet hole. All six of the city's ancient bridges were blown up, the railroad station in the south section was completely destroyed, and the north drive along the River Arno, on which most of the city's hotels and shops are located, was extensively mined.

The UNN correspondent told of the German treatment of the population. He said:

«I learned that there has been no distribution of food in Pisa for 40 days. Utilities have been cut off for about the same period. There is no light, water, or gas, and of the two aqueducts which supplied the city, it is believed that only one will be usable in the immediate future.

«There are less than 15,000 (of the original 35,000) of the civilian population left. More than 100 civilians have been killed in recent weeks by German mines and booby traps, and only last night four civilians were killed during German shelling of the town.

But already, the dispatch added, AMG officers are on the job, feeding, administering, and helping the hungry populace as much as possible.

The dispatch told of German brutality as reported by Italians. All men in the Monte Pisano area had been ordered by Nazis to report for forced labor by August 2, but instead many hid in forests. A Fascist spy lured a band of these Patriots into a gully where German flame-throwers burned 80 of them into ashes, including eight women.

In another incident, a priest accused of harboring escaped prisoners of war was killed and six others were taken from Pisa as hostages the correspondent said. (UNN)

YUGOSLAVS RECAPTURE RIJEVICA

LONDON, September 4 — Patriot forces in Yugoslavia have recaptured Rijevica, in Montenegro, it was announced in Marshal Tito's communique today.

Bitter fighting is continuing between Partisan forces and German troops in Serbia, and the Partisans have forced German units to withdraw from positions in western Bosnia, the communique said.

Fighting in also continuing in Croatia and Slovenia. (OWI)

JAP AIR FORCE DRIVEN FROM MINDANAO AIRFIELDS

ADVANCE AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, September 4 — The Japanese Air Force has apparently been driven from the airfields of southern Mindanao, General MacArthur's communique announced today.

The Allied air forces continued to range far and wide over the southwest Pacific area.

For the second time in 24 hours, Allied heavy bombers, this time escorted by long-range Lightnings, made a heavy raid last Saturday on the port area and shipyards at Davao, capital of the southernmost island of the Philippines. The airfields at Lasang, Lincanan, and Sasa were also attacked. In all, over 130 tons of heavy demolition bombs were dropped, and great fires and explosions in all the target areas followed.

The escorting Lightnings were operating at the greatest distance in their history in this theatre. Enemy air opposition was negligible, and the only three Jap fighters

SPAIN WILL NOT SHELTER NAZIS, AMBASSADOR SAYS

WASHINGTON, September 4 — «No one has ever contemplated providing a hiding place in Spain for the enemies of the Allied countries,» said the Spanish Ambassador to the U.S., Juan de Cardenas, in a statement issued here last night.

The text of the statement follows:

Some days ago, the American press carried the story that an appeal had been made to the Spanish people exhorting them to oust the régime of Generalissimo Franco, and making several charges against his Government.

The Spanish Embassy, speaking in the name of the Spanish Government, wants to state that none of these accusations are true.

Spain has not been turned into a haven for French Fascists. Only a very small number of German customs officers, unable to reach Germany, have arrived in Spain, and they have been interned at once in the concentration camp of Miranda de Ebro.

No one has ever contemplated providing a hiding place in Spain for the enemies of the Allied countries.

The six German ships which arrived at Pasajes were immediately interned.

The Government of Spain wishes to stress once more the fact that the Spanish régime has nothing in common with National Socialism, which is condemned by the Church, while Spain's own regime is essentially based on Christian principles.

[Recent reports quoting «diplomatic quarters in Washington» said Hitler and other high-ranking Nazis were planning to seek refuge in Spain when they realized that unconditional surrender was inevitable.] (OWI)

LIBERATED ITALY

NAZI ROME COMMAND EXPOSED

ROME, September 4 — Nearly 800 Italians were shot, killed, or beaten to death and more than 1,000 severely injured by the German security command in Rome, the Allied Control Commission announced today.

The detailed ACC report, while promising full Allied punishment for every person listed on the rolls of the Einsatzkommando der SIPO und des SD der Rome (Commane) Post of Security Police and Service of Rome) at 155 Via Tasso, singled out three Nazi officials as chiefly responsible during its eight months of unbridled secret police terrorism.

They were: Obersturmbannfuehrer Herbert Kappler, Hauptman von Schutz, and Obergruppenfuehrer Karl Wolff.

The total of 1,390 victims does not include the welter of incidental murder, theft, violence, and blackmail perpetrated by Fascist Republican squads and members of the Italian SS (Schutz Staffel) with full cognizance of the German security authorities, who handled only the most important cases, the report said, adding:

«Practically no person who ever landed in Via Tasso escaped some manhandling. Persons clearly guilty of activity against the Germans were generally left pretty much alone and quickly shot. Persons who might, in the German's opinion, provide clues to further useful information were severely insulted, beaten, or tortured. If the resulting condition was such that the victim was as good as dead from his injuries, he was generally shot.»

1,300 Families Victimized

Already, the ACC disclosed, the Italian National Committee for Political Victims (Comitato Nazionale pro Vittime Politiche) of Rome has paid out in relief funds nearly 1,400,000 lire to some 1,300 families of officially documented and authenticated victims of German security methods — who were either shot, crippled, or, in some cases, deported to work in Germany.

These victims came through two main sources — persons caught in the dragnets periodically spread to round up forced labor, and through Italian informers. The price to informers for Jews was 5,000 lire a head. One Jewish family, di Consiglio, has six dead at German hands — Mose, Leone, Salomone, Cesare, Marco, and Franco, it was stated.

The ostensible reason for all this brutality was to carry out three German security orders, which the report listed as follows:

«The securing of military information concerning Allied movements, the suppression of activities sympathetic toward the Allies (such as attempts to secure German military data and to help escaped Allied prisoners of war, of whom it is estimated that between 5,000 and 10,000 passed through or were sheltered in Rome since the Armistice), and the elimination of the organized secret Italian "Resistance Front," with its groups and caches of arms, an ever-present threat to the security of the German position in Rome.»

This was Kappler's job though he was officially described as police attache to the German Embassy. The ACC says he was considered the most influential German security leader in Italy, having been formerly the chief executive security authority in Sicily and southern Italy. Both he and his chief aide and interrogator, von Schutz, are described as «ladies' men.»

Wolff was head of the SS and German police forces in Italy, and usually stayed in Verona, though he came down to Rome occasionally to see what Kappler was doing. The report adds that Wolff was directly responsible to the Reichsfuehrer of the SS, Heinrich Himmler, whose adjutant he had previously been.

Nazi Police Organizations

[illegible] official head — they are network of secrecy even in Germania, leaving the Gestapo to catch the public eye.

The way to the Via Tasso, the report said, often led through the Regina Coeli, the Queen of Heavens Prison, which the Germans combed for prizes to question. If the questioning was so forcible as to require medical attention for the prisoner, he was taken to the first aid station of the Terzo Braccio, the third wing of the Regina Coeli, to be treated by a German doctor.

There was an average of about eight patients a night, and when their injuries were recorded on little green cards they were curiously erroneous. The official account tells of an Italian Army major, Constanzo Ebert, brought in on 4 May 1944, treated as suffering from «enterolite amebica» (a form of tropical disease.) Actually, Ebert was suffering from a lividly-scourged back, three fractured ribs, and hemorrhages, and was in a comatose state. He recovered sufficiently for the Germans to shoot him on June 3, the day before the liberation of Rome.

The truth about the German atrocities here was recorded by Italian personnel of the prison's surgical infirmary. Examination of their entries by the ACC showed injuries ranging from fractured skulls, lacerations, broken arms, legs, and ribs to missing teeth not infrequently 6 to 8 — and occasionally burns on the head (the Germans using the singe treatment of burning off the eyebrows and parts of the hair of the head.) Practically all had bloody backs, from being suspended by ropes on nails and scourged with steel-tipped whips, and battered feet, from having been bastinadoed.

And most of the entries in the Italian ledger had these words in the reference column: «Reparto Tedesco.»

Typical Cases

Men who survived the Via Tasso treatment gave accounts which the ACC calls «probably, from German standards, fairly precise.» Luigi Didomenicantonio, who spent 33 days there, has lost his left eye from blows on the face. Angelo di Cola, who admitted he passed a rifle to another man, now has a crippled left leg. The specialty in his case was to tie him, bind his legs together, and drum upon them with a stick. Aldo Brunlassi, another passer of arms, was beaten on the feet so that he lost almost all the nails off his toes. Guido Paradin, a veteran of 63 days in Via Tasso, was made, with 22 other prisoners, to take an oath before Hitler's photograph never to reveal anything he ever saw or heard in Via Tasso. He was not beaten on 10 out of the 63 days.

Enrico Bianciflori now suffers from continual headaches; the Germans used to pound his head — against the wall. Raffaele Cioli received his whippings on a table — strapped and head hanging over the side. Fulvio Fornaioni used to have to run up the stairs in Via Tasso, being beaten as he ran. Guerino Urbani's torture consisted, in addition to the usual fist blows, of slaps, kicks and lashes, and of tying twine around the nipples and hair of his breasts and pulling the skin together. Major Giovanni Biancori does not have many teeth left, he lost them when the Germans, during his questioning, played tatoo on his gums with a short, slender iron rod, which sometimes slipped and tore off a tooth.

The SD technique, as practiced faithfully by the Via Tasso thugs, hardly varied even for those in clerical garb or general's uniform. A Dutch priest named Moesders was followed several times and dragged — screaming — from the Church of Santa Maria Maggiore (which enjoyed until that moment extraterritorial rights.) After several weeks of beatings by rubber truncheons, he was taken away to the north. General Filippo Caruso, one of five Italian Resistance generals snatched up in the last frantic days before the Via Tasso gang fled at 1700 hours on June 4, lost 13 teeth, in addition to having two ribs fractured, had his [illegible] his left leg wounded by

Nazi Police Organizations

All three were bound by one official band — they are SD men. The significance of this connection was emphasized by the ACC in these words:

«The importance of the Via Tasso security headquarters may best be appreciated by a brief recapitulation of the German security scheme. Under a central control, the German intelligence and security system has three main divisions.

«The first is that of the uniformed police, — Ordnungspolizei or ORPO, — which takes care of normal police matters such as keeping law and order, traffic control, and suppression of riots.

«The second is security police, both in uniform and in plain clothes — the Sicherheitspolizei or SIPO. This is again divided into, first, criminal police, — Kriminalpolizei or KRIPO, — and second, security state police — Geheime Staatspolizei or GESTAPO.

«The third and least heard-of division is that of the Nazi Party security and intelligence service — the Sicherheitsdienst des Reichsfuehrer S-chutz Staffel, or SD.»

The SD is supposed to contain the true elite of the Nazi Party, and is bound inextricably by faith and work to the Nazi scheme. Well organized and experienced, it is the only permitted security service of the Nazi Party. It works in a

Men who survived the Via Tasso treatment gave accounts which the ACC calls «probably, from German standards, fairly prosaic.» Luigi Didomenicantonio, who spent 33 days there, has lost his left eye from blows on the face. Angelo di Celio, who admitted he passed a rifle to another man, now has a crippled left leg. The specialty in his case was to jog him, bind his legs together, and drum upon them with a stick. Aldo Bricolassi, another passer of arms, was beaten on the feet so that he lost almost all the nails off his toes. Guido Paradisi, a veteran of 63 days in Via Tasso, was made, with 22 other prisoners, to take an oath before Hitler's photograph never to reveal anything he ever saw or heard in Via Tasso. Guerino Urbani's torture consisted, in addition to the usual fist blows of slaps, kicks and lashes, and of tying twine around the nipples and hair of his breasts and pulling the skin together. Major Giovanni Bianconi does not have many teeth left; he lost them when the Germans, during his questioning, played tafoo on his gums with a short, slender iron rod, which sometimes slipped and tore off a tooth.

The SD technique, as practiced faithfully by the Via Tasso thugs, hardly varied, even for those in clerical garb or general's uniform. After several weeks of beatings by rubber truncheons, he was taken away to the north. General Filippo Caruso, one of five Italian Resistance generals snatched up in the last frantic days before the Via Tasso gang fled at 1700 hours on June 4, lost 13 teeth, in addition to having two ribs fractured, had his head mashed with iron knuckles, his left leg wounded by repeated kicks, and two vertebrae of the lower spine injured by whippings, and suffered near-blinding of the left eye.

Women Opened Cells

General Caruso, who has just been released from a hospital, gained his freedom, along with the four other generals and the remainder of the Via Tasso prisoners, on June 4, after having been told by the Germans that they would be shot the next day. But the guards simply disappeared that afternoon, and the cells were opened by the residents of the nearby houses on Via Tasso, mostly women.

Via Tasso also figured in the Ardeatine Pits murder of at least — by German admission — 320 Italian hostages following the Patriot attack on an SS column which the Germans said took the lives of 32 men. The ACC statement says 270 of the victims came from Via Tasso, and the other 50 from Regina Coeli. When the Germans came to Regina Coeli, they found only 40 had been selected, so they got the other 10 from a group of common prisoners who were waiting in the superintendent's office to be discharged.

FASCISTS PURGED FROM AIR MINISTRY

ROME, September 4 — The Air Ministry announced today that its civilian and military employees who had been titled Fascists (squadrista, sciarpa littorio, marcia su Roma, etc) and those who were officers in the Fascist Militia, had been dismissed as of August 1.

About 10 people who, since 8 September 1943, have been and are still actively fighting the Germans, were not affected by this mass dismissal. (UNN)

MINISTERS STUDY SALARY INCREASES

ROME, September 4 — An increase in the salaries of state and private employees was the principal question examined at today's Ministerial Committee meeting presided over by Minister Without Portfolio Ruini. Present at the discussion were the Ministers of Finance, Industry, and Labor, as well as the Under Secretary of Agriculture and Minister without Portfoglio Togliatti.

The Committee agreed to the proposals of the Italian Confederation of Labor on the salary increases for laborers and private employees, and studied the pay raise proposed for state employees by the Minister of Finance. (UNN)

GRANARIES SUCCESSFUL IN FOGGIA PROVINCE

FOGGIA, September 4 — The results achieved in Foggia Province by the Granaries of the People are a noteworthy example of the mutual good will which has animated Allies and Italians alike in this important agricultural rehabilitation. The beginning of the campaign was preceded by two months of large-scale organization. The help of all branches of provincial activity was enlisted, and industry, transportation, and banks have striven to make the campaign a success.

The greatest Allied contribution was in providing transportation. Also very active in the work of the Granaries of the People was the Italian Army. Some 18,000 Italian officers and men participated in this large-scale agricultural undertaking.

It was estimated that a total of 160,000 metric tons of grain will flow into the Granaries of the People by the end of the harvest. This total represents an increase of 10,000 metric tons over the amount of grain turned in during the previous years of a corrupt Fascist administration.

POLITICS IN ITALIAN TRADE UNIONISM CONDEMNED

NAPLES, September 4 — Neapolitan trade union leaders, called together to meet with delegates of the British, American, and International trade union organizations, were admonished today to clear politics from the fields of labor, and to work for national unity without failing to give minority elements their rights of proportional representation.

Walter Schevenel, Secretary General of the International Federation of Trade Unions, chairman of the meeting, told Neapolitan leaders that the foreign group had come to advise and to help in the resurgence of a free, unhampered labor movement throughout Italy. He said:

"In order to realize the all-around desire for trade Organizations, and William Lawther and Thomas O'Brien of the British Trade Union Council — made a tour of the Naples port area. Their survey is scheduled to continue tomorrow with visits to factories in the Naples area.

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 4 — Today's communique: Allied Armies in Italy.

Allied Armies in Italy continue to make good progress on both flanks of their extensive battlefront.

British and Canadian troops of the 8th Army have now established a considerable bridgehead over the River Conca, where fierce fighting continues and good progress has also been made on the higher ground west of this bridgehead.

The Goth Line from Pesaro to a point 20 miles inland is now completely in 8th Army hands, and in places their troops have advanced to a depth of 12 miles.

West of Florence, troops of the 5th Army now command the two dominating features north of the River Arno, and hold a line overlooking the important lateral road running from Pisa to Florence, through Lucca and Pistoia.

On the remainder of the front, patrols of the 8th Army are extremely active, and in many places are in contact with the enemy in their Goth Line positions.

Seventh Army:

Advance elements of the 7th Army have entered Lyon, and have advanced well to the north and northeast of the important city after a drive of more than 200 miles since their landing in southern France. Enemy forces have mostly withdrawn from the city to escape encirclement.

Ville-Franche, some 15 miles north of Lyon, has been reached by French forces.

Northeast of Lyon, American troops threatening enemy roads of withdrawal have made further advances against still resistance at several points.

An enemy counter-attack at Montrevel, north of Bourg, was beaten off. (BBC)

WESTERN FRONT

SHAFF, September 4 — Today's communique:

Brussels has been liberated. Allied troops which crossed the Belgian frontier early yesterday morning rapidly freed Tournai, and pushed on to the north and east to enter the capital in the evening.

Farther west, other armored forces drove north through Bethune and Lillers, and reached the neighborhood of Aire.

In the Abbeville area, the River Somme was crossed on both sides of the town, which is now in our hands after some fighting. Our troops pushed on northward from the river.

North and east of Le Havre, we closed in on the main defenses of the port.

Some 40 miles southwest of Brussels, the Belgian frontier has been crossed by other columns advancing northeast. Elements are in the area of Chasleroi.

Farther south, an advance eastward has brought our troops to the vicinity of Namur.

Units following up this thrust have made other crossings of the Meuse River near Chalvines, 10 miles southeast of

«In order to realize the all-around desire for trade unions in Italy, politics should unconditionally be kept out of the union movement, both in its structure and its activities.

«The movement must be fully based on genuine democratic principles, with every union official, in regional chambers of labor as well as in the confederation itself, freely elected by the largest possible participation of the rank and file — and not chosen from appointing lists handed down from above.»

Schevenel stressed the seriousness of the task before Italian labor, and made it clear that exuberant manifestations will not suffice to carry the movement over the road toward solution of structural problems.

One of these structural problems, said the International Federation official, was that of giving minority groups a representation in labor councils which would secure for them a full consideration of their special problems.

Luigi Antonini, representative of the American Federation of Labor, told the meeting that the visiting group would carry home a full report of Italian difficulties, to obtain international assistance for the Italian people.

SHAFE, September 4 — Today's communique:

Brussels has been liberated. Allied troops which crossed the Belgian frontier early yesterday morning rapidly freed Tournai, and pushed on to the north and east to enter the capital in the evening.

Further west, other armored forces drove north through Bethune and Lillers, and reached the neighborhood of Aire.

In the Abbeville area, the River Somme was crossed on both sides of the town, which is now in our hands after some fighting. Our troops pushed on northward from the river.

North and east of Le Havre, we closed in on the main defenses of the port.

Some 40 miles southwest of Brussels, the Belgian frontier has been crossed by other columns advancing northeast. Elements are in the area of Charleroi.

Farther south, an advance eastward has brought our troops to the vicinity of Nancy.

Units following up this thrust have made other crossings of the Meuse River near Chalaines, 10 miles southeast of Commercy, and our troops are in Saint Mihiel.

Enemy road and rail movements in Belgium and the Pas de Calais area were attacked by fighters and fighter-bombers yesterday. Considerable numbers of motor vehicles, locomotives, and railcars were destroyed or damaged.

Six airfields in Holland were attacked by a strong force of heavy bombers.

The fortified area of Brest was the target for medium forces of heavy, medium and light bombers, which made a series of attacks in the morning and evening. Gun positions, ammunition and fuel dumps, and strongpoints were hit. (Reuter)

MOSCOW, September 4 — Tonight's communique:

Southwest of Lomza, our troops are occupied in fighting in over 100 populated localities, including Chrosti, Rusiewa, Baroise, Jarnoty, Tulichize, Role, Voslowo, Gury, Novye-Ves, Glugosedlo, Gaiglota, Plushi, and Tuzhe, and the railway stations of Jutike, Rubken, and Shepats.

In Rumania, troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front, in cooperation with units of the Rumanian Army, liberated from the German invaders the city of Brushov. Continuing to advance, troops of the same front liberated from the German invaders the following cities: Tinaja, Kampina, Virgovishke, Gaijeshki, and Titu, and also occupied over 150 other populated localities, including Doicheshki, Valemare, Discne, Irmate, and Shovanu, and the railway stations of Verte, Ilinleshutresesh, Brodau, Jatuga, Pushteni, Tinaja, Velemare, Komarnik, Kampina, Tshegonesbti, Jirgany, Konteshki, Titu, Kozukaru, Gaijeshki, Olovany, Glubzhe, Virgovishke, and Doicheshki.

During September 23, south of Bacau troops of the 2nd Ukrainian Front annihilated a grouping of enemy troops, which made attempts to break through toward the west. There were nearly 3,000 German officers and men killed, 3,500 were captured, among them the commander of the 370th German Infantry Division, Major-General von Gilsen. Thus, the last remnants of the German troops were liquidated from the complement of the encircled Kishinev grouping of the enemy.

During the fighting on September 1/2, in the area of the city of Kelerashi, located on the bank of the Danube, troops of the 3rd Ukrainian Front captured 6,000 German officers and men, among whom there are 18 colonels and over 100 other officers. It appears that a small part of the captured troops were remnants of the routed German formations in the area of Braila. The biggest part of the troops captured in the area of Kelerashi were thrown to the Rumanian territory from Bulgaria by the Germans to attack Bucharest from the southeast in the moment when the Red Army was approaching Bucharest.

On all other sectors of the front, reconnaissance activities took place.

During September 3, in aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 13 enemy planes were shot down.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 4 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Behind the Goth Line, Patriots relentlessly attack German troops in Tuscany, in Aemilia, and in the Marche region.

Around Genoa, the Garibaldi Brigades are withstanding the assaults of strong enemy formations. In the Via Aurelia, in full daylight, Fascist patrols have been disarmed. Phone communications have been interrupted near Chiavari. In Daviagna, the Laccio Bridge was blown up by Patriots, thus cutting the Genoa-Montoggio road, an important line of communication for the Germans. The Rossi tunnel, which linked the Valley of Bisagno with the Valley of Fontana, has been destroyed by the Patriots. German troops in Imperia are at present engaged by the Patriots, who are in control of the coastal region. During these operation, the Patriots of Viano Castello have chased the Germans from that town, and have captured from the enemy large quantities of war material.

A motorized Nazi-Fascist column, 1,000 men strong, fell in an ambush near Pieve di Teco. 100 Nazi-Fascists were killed.

In the Nervia Valley, the enemy, who had plundered and set set fire to several villages, were attacked by Patriots and forced to withdraw.

The barracks of the Fascist Republican Guards in Castiglione, Chiavari, and Bargone have been taken by Patriots, as well as a weapons depot and a food dump, which were ready for shipment to Germany. In Bordighera, the Patriots have captured a grain cargo ready for shipment to German troops in France.

In Bargagli, the Patriots have taken prisoner some German officials and have liberated a group of 60 men kept there to be deported to labor camps in Germany. In Plandipreti, the Patriots have defeated the local Fascist forces.

troops repelled numerous enemy attacks. Yesterday, the defenders of Brest again frustrated American attacks, supported by extremely strong artillery fire, tanks, and air forces. The enemy suffered high losses, particularly by the concentrated fire of the anti-aircraft guns of the Navy and coastal batteries of the Army. Local infiltrations into the glacis of the fortress were sealed off in fierce counter-attacks.

In the western and central sector of the Italian Front, our divisions withdrew from the Arno. Enemy reconnaissance formations following on the heels of our troops were repelled with heavy losses. In the Adriatic coastal sector, yesterday, the enemy attacked with fresh forces and large quantities of material. Our troops frustrated enemy attempts at breaking through, and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy.

In the southern and eastern Carpathians, Soviet attacks were repelled. In the Vistula bridgehead, west of Baranov, yesterday, fierce fighting was in progress. Northeast of Warsaw, lesser Bolshevist attacks remained unsuccessful. Between the Bug and Narew, the Soviets again attacked with concentrated infantry and tank forces, as well as strong bomber formations. Enemy attempts at breaking through were frustrated in grim fighting and 35 tanks were destroyed. In Lithuania and Estonia, several local Bolshevist attacks were frustrated.

Bombers again destroyed 15 planes on the ground on a Rumanian aerodrome, and damaged many others. Two sheds and a fuel dump were destroyed. Yesterday, enemy bombers, protected by overcasting clouds, launched terror attacks on Mannheim and Ludwigshafen. Enemy fighters, repeatedly violating the Swiss air space, penetrated western and southwestern Germany.

RUSSIA DECLARES WAR ON BULGARIA

MOSCOW, September 5 — At 2000 hours tonight, Radio Moscow announced that Russia had broken off relations with Bulgaria and declared that a state of war exists between the two nations.

The broadcast said that the Bulgarian Minister in Moscow had been handed a note on the Soviet actions.

The declaration of war came soon after the Soviet news agency today condemned the neutrality policy announced by Bulgaria's new Prime Minister, Constantin Muraviev. The policy of neutrality, charged the news agency, enabled the Germans to use the Bulgarian Black Sea ports as U-boat bases and threaten Soviet shipping.

«Bulgaria has now to choose between discarding her policy of neutrality and joining the camp of the democratic countries against Germany, or retaining her neutrality, in which latter case the Bulgarian rulers will be responsible for the consequences to the country.»

Text of Note

Germany, because she sees that to continue friendly relation with Germany will lead her to disaster.

The fate of Germany is sealed. Hitler has lost the war once and for all.

In such circumstances, it might be expected that Bulgaria would take advantage of her opportunities and, following the example of Rumania and Finland, would give up a pro-German policy, break with Germany, and join the anti-Hitlerite coalition of democratic countries.

But in spite of this, the Bulgarian Government even now refuses to break with Germany, and is carrying out a policy of so-called neutrality, on the strength of which it is continuing to give direct help to Germany against the Soviet Union by sheltering retreating German forces from pursuit by the Red Army, and providing them with bases on Bulgarian territory for the creation of new centers of resistance against the anti-German coalition on land, as well as sea.

The Soviet Government cannot regard this policy of Bulgaria in any other way than as the actual making of war in Germany's camp against the Soviet Union, in spite of the fundamental worsening of the war situation for Germany, and in spite of the fact that Bulgaria now has full opportunity, without fear of Germany, to break with her and thus save the country from ruin.

For this reason, the Soviet Government does not deem it possible to continue relations with Bulgaria. It breaks all relations with Bulgaria, and declares that, not only is Bulgaria in a state of war with the USSR, inasmuch as she had already been in a state of war with the USSR, but also that the Soviet Union henceforth is in a state of war with Bulgaria. RUSSIANS OCCUPY WYSZKOW POLES EVACUATE WARSAW

MOSCOW, September 5 — General Gregory Zakarov's 2nd White Russian Army thrusting forward in its new offensive between East Prussia and Warsaw, has occupied the fortress and large railway station of Wyszkow, and more than 150 other towns and villages. On a number of sectors, Soviet troops have reached the River Narew, which joins the Bug to flow into the Vistula down to Danzig. Wyszkow, on the Bug, is 40 miles northeast of the Polish capital.

General Zakarov's new drive across what one dispatch calls «the wet wilderness west of Bialystok,» coincides with a statement by Izvestia that «new blows will be dealt, and they will be overwhelming in force.»

« Bulgaria has now to choose between discarding her policy of neutrality and joining the camp of the democratic countries against Germany, or retaining her neutrality, in which latter case the Bulgarian rulers will be responsible for the consequences to the country. »

Here is the text of the Russian note handed to Bulgarian Minister Nicolas Stoyanov by Soviet Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotov:

For more than three years, Bulgaria has been actively assisting Germany in the war against the USSR.

The Soviet Government took into consideration the fact that the small country of Bulgaria was not in a position to resist the powerful armed forces of Germany at a time when Germany held almost the whole of Europe in her power.

The Soviet Government tolerated this situation. The Soviet Government even put up with the fact that Bulgarian ruling circles assisted the Germans to evacuate the Crimea, and helped to save the remnants of the routed German troops in the south of the Soviet Union.

However, in the summer of this year, the condition of the German armed forces became critical in the extreme. In the grip of the powerful pincers formed by the Soviet forces in the east, and by the Allied troops who landed in France in the west, Germany found herself in a catastrophic situation, and her beaten armies were in retreat on all fronts.

Germany has completely lost Italy. Germany has lost France. After that, Rumania fell away from Germany, and now even such a small country as Finland is deserting policy of so-called neutrality, on the strength of which it is continuing to give direct help to Germany against the Soviet Union by sheltering retreating German forces from pursuit by the Red Army, and providing them with bases on Bulgarian territory for the creation of new centers of resistance against the anti-German coalition on land, as well as sea.

MOSCOW ORDERS CEASE FIRE ON FINNISH FRONTS

MOSCOW, September 5 — Radio Moscow announced this morning that the Soviet commander facing the Finnish fronts would cease firing at 0800 hours today.

The announcement was the first official word from the Soviet capital on the end of Russo-Finnish hostilities, and conflicted with a Finnish report that fighting had ended yesterday.

The radio announcement said:

«During the night of September 4, the Finnish Government broadcast a declaration in which it stated that Finland had accepted the preliminary conditions made by the Soviet Government regarding the breaking off of relations with the enemy, and the withdrawal of German troops from Finland not later than September 15.

«Simultaneously with the declaration of the Finnish Government on the acceptance of the Soviet preliminary conditions, the Finnish Government announced the cessation of military operations on all Finnish-held sectors as from 0800 hours on September 4.

«In connection with the Finnish Government's acceptance, the Soviet High Command ordered the cessation of military operations on all Finnish-held sectors as from 0800 hours on September 5.»

German Evacuation Begun

Helsinki dispatches said that German troops have begun to evacuate the port of Aabo, and that preparations are being made for a similar departure from Uleaborg. The Nazi authorities in Finland are reported to have ordered all German cargo ships in Finnish waters to put to sea immediately.

In a midnight communique, Moscow announced that Russian naval bombers, attacking German ships withdrawing men and supplies from Finland yesterday, sank a 6,000-ton Nazi supply ship in the Baltic Sea, and sunk a high-speed landing barge and damaged two others in the Gulf of Finland.

Radio Stockholm said last night that the Swedish Government had agreed to supply Finland with certain foods and industrial raw materials following the «agreement» between Finland and Russia, and that other Helsinki requests were «being considered.»

In a dispatch from the Finnish capital to the London Daily Mail, a correspondent said that 20,000 Germans were frantically striving to get out of Helsinki last night. Elsewhere, the correspondent added, the Germans, in fear of being disarmed by the Finns, were seeking any available means of exit from the country. (OWI-Reuter) plan in eastern Europe. General Sosnokowski claimed attempts to achieve such coordination have failed.

The Polish Government in London called a special cabinet meeting today, and a spokesman was quoted as saying the meeting was concerned primarily with the plight of Warsaw.

Polish Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk conferred with British Foreign Secretary Antony Eden just before the cabinet convened.

The BBC said tonight that no official reply has been made to General Sosnokowski's allegation, but so far as information in London goes, it is known that General Bor's action was premature, and was made without coordination with the general Allied plan.

Although this was the case, attempts were made by British planes flying from Italy, some of them with Polish crews, to get supplies to the Underground forces in Warsaw. Only limited supplies could be delivered, however, and that at a heavy cost, a cost out of proportion to the help given.

FOUR DIVISIONS OPPOSING CZECHOSLOVAKS

LONDON, September 5 — Four German divisions are now fighting Czechoslovak forces, today's Czechoslovak communique stated.

The German divisions are strongly supported by tanks and aircraft, and the Luftwaffe is active over the whole battle area, the announcement said.

Five German tanks and 200 Germans were killed in fighting in the Nitra section, and bitter fighting is continuing for a railway tunnel near the junction of Zilina. (Reuter)

KING MICHAEL RESTORES LIBERAL CONSTITUTION

BUCAREST, September 5 — King Michael of Rumania issued a decree yesterday restoring to Rumania the liberal constitution abolished in 1938 by his father, the former King Carol. The royal decree will indirectly bring about the abolition of racial laws passed during Rumania's partnership with the ill-fated Axis, and many other anti-democratic laws.

The Associated Press said that this action may wipe out a number of conditions still standing in the way of an armistice with the Allies.

The Russians took into custody more than 800 German residents of Bucharest, including some diplomats and Gestapo agents. (AP)

FRENCH 18 MILES NORTH OF MACON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 5 — French forces pushing rapidly northward along the Saône Valley today reached the vicinity of Le Villars, on the west bank of the river, it was announced this evening.

Le Villars is about 18 miles north of Macon and only a few miles below Tournus. This, today's advance has placed our forces some 55 miles north of Lyon.

The enemy still continues to retreat hastily, as Allied troops advance quickly.

On the east side of the Saône River, American troops are making swift progress north and east of Macon.

American forces yesterday beat off sharp German tank-supported counter-attacks at Montrevel and advanced beyond the village, while French forces reached Macon and St. Bonnet de Bruyeres in rapid advances northward of the Saône Valley, it was announced today.

After fierce fighting Sunday around Montrevel, when our forces suffered some losses in casualties and prisoners, American troops yesterday made swift progress against slight enemy opposition. The enemy counter-attack was a desperate delaying action designed to screen the remnants of the German 19th Army retreating northward on Highway 6 toward Chalon and Dijon.

Other American forces occupied Bourg en Bresse, about

FINNISH CABINET GIVEN VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

WASHINGTON, September 5 — Finnish Premier Antti Hackzell's cabinet was given a vote of confidence by the Finnish Diet yesterday at the close of two secret sessions at which Hackzell «explained some measures» connected with Soviet-Finnish peace negotiations and supplemented his statement Saturday that his Government had asked German troops to quit Finland, Radio Helsinki said today.

The Helsinki broadcast said, «After the matter had been tabled for the next session, according to Diet procedure, the Diet gave the Government a vote of confidence by unanimously agreeing to pass to the ordinary agenda.» (OWI)

POLISH COMMANDER ON WARSAW PATRIOTS

LONDON, September 5 — The Polish Commander-in-Chief, General Sosnokowski, in an order of the day published here today and addressed to the Polish Underground Army under General Bor in Warsaw, accused the Allies of not having given sufficient supplies to the Polish Army in Warsaw.

The order, which was issued without the knowledge of the Polish Government, stated that General Bor is being blamed for not having foreseen the Russian halt before Warsaw, and that the Poles are being blamed for failing to coordinate their uprising with the whole of the operation.

The German divisions are strongly supported by armor and aircraft, and the Luftwaffe is active over the whole battle area, the announcement said.

KING MICHAEL RESTORES LIBERAL CONSTITUTION

BUCAREST, September 5 — King Michael of Rumania issued a decree yesterday restoring to Rumania the liberal constitution abolished in 1938 by his father, the former King Carol. The royal decree will indirectly bring about the abolition of racist laws passed during Rumania's partnership with the ill-fated Axis, and many other anti-democratic laws.

The Associated Press said that this action may wipe out a number of conditions still standing in the way of an armistice with the Allies.

The Russians took into custody more than 800 German residents of Bucharest, including some diplomats and Gestapo agents. (AP)

FRENCH 18 MILES NORTH OF MACON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 5 — French forces pushing rapidly northward along the Saône Valley today reached the vicinity of Le Villars, on the west bank of the river, it was announced this evening.

Le Villars is about 18 miles north of Macon and only a few miles below Tournus. Thus, today's advance has placed our forces some 55 miles north of Lyon.

The enemy still continues to retreat hastily, as Allied troops advance quickly.

On the east side of the Saône River, American troops are making swift progress north and east of Macon.

American forces yesterday beat off sharp German tank-supported counter-attacks at Montrevel and advanced beyond the village, while French forces reached Macon and St. Bonnet de Bruyeres in rapid advances northward of the Saône Valley, it was announced today.

After fierce fighting Sunday around Montrevel, when our forces suffered some losses in casualties and prisoners, American troops yesterday made swift progress against slight enemy opposition. The enemy counter-attack was a desperate delaying action designed to screen the remnants of the German 19th Army retreating northward on Highway 6 toward Chalon and Dijon.

Other American forces occupied Bourg en Bresse, about eight miles southeast of Montrevel, and having a peacetime population of about 18,000.

East of Montrevel, on the west bank of the Saône, French forces meanwhile reached the outskirts of Macon and St. Bonnet de Bruyères while pushing northward in the wake of the hurriedly retreating enemy. Advance French troops made no contact with the Germans in this area yesterday, the Germans having apparently withdrawn.

The French appeared to have turned northward after clearing Lyon of enemy resistance and repairing some of the bridges the Germans destroyed before evacuating.

Macon, some 38 miles north of Lyon, is a wine center of 16,000 population, and is an important road junction northward northeast and also to Montrevel and Bourg-en-Bresse, held by Americans. (PRO)

AMERICANS REPORTED ON SWISS FRONTIER

NEW YORK, September 5 — American troops have occupied Pontarlier on the western border of Switzerland and are driving on Belfort said an Associated Press dispatch quoted by Reuter today.

Pontarlier is 75 airline miles northeast of Macon, the most northerly point officially reported reached by the Allies advancing in central France. (Reuter-AP)

SALINS LIBERATED; POLES JOIN F.F.I.

LONDON, September 5 — While French Forces of the Interior continue to liberate towns and assist the Allied forces in widely separated parts of France, their activities have been particularly effective in the Doubs Department bordering the northwest frontier with Switzerland, said General Koenig's communique tonight.

The town of Salins, west of Pontarlier, has been occupied, and fighting continued between Besancon and Pontarlier. On the west coast, Les Sables d'Olonne, between La Rochelle and St. Nazaire, has been evacuated by the Germans, as well as Marans, only eight miles from the port of La Rochelle.

Some 40 miles southwest of Tours, French Resistance Forces captured the towns of Loudun and Richelieu, and the Chateau of Saint Aignan sur Cher.

Resistance troops in southeastern France are assisting the advance of Allied armies and are engaged in hard battles with German troops near the Italian frontier in Savoy.

Three hundred German officers and men have been killed by the FFI in this region in the last 10 days of fighting, and 50 prisoners have been taken, stated an announcement today from General Cochet's Southern Zone headquarters.

At the northern end of the Rhône Valley, the FFI continue to harass the retreating German columns.

Five Somme Bridges

The British general in command of the troops which liberated Amiens and Arras expressed his appreciation of the great help given by the French Forces of the Interior, to a correspondent of the Independent French News Agency yesterday.

The general said that if it had not been for the FFI, his forces would not have been able to seize intact the five bridges on the Somme, which were of great strategic importance in the development of the northern France campaign.

General Koenig's communique tonight announced that a Maquis group has been allowed to form an independent Commando unit in a French division.

Polish Resistance groups in France are to be incorporated into local units of the French Forces of the Interior, and Poles from the German Army are to be regrouped and treated as friends. Announcing this, a statement by General Koenig's headquarters broadcast by Radio Paris said that groups of the Polish Resistance organisation, composed largely of Polish refugees in France, have already taken part in action against the Germans. The organisation has now been ordered by the Polish Government in London to put itself at the disposal of local FFI commanders, and FFI leaders have received instructions to take Polish Resistance groups under their command. ALLIES HERDING NAZIS INTO POCKET OF GERMANY

SHAEF, September 5 — The strategy of the United Nations high command is now herding all the German armies into their last pocket — Germany itself. The Allied armies stand poised for a final blown from all sides.

The strategy of encirclement learned at Stalingrad, and later at Kharkov, Kiev, Briansk, and the Crimea, was repeated at Falaise and the River Seine. The Allies have now completed another encirclement, from the Somme to the Scheldt, encompassing all German troops left on the flying-bomb coast in France and Belgium.

Antwerp, liberated yesterday by troops of the British 2nd Army, was found in good condition, with port and industrial facilities almost intact. The second largest port in Europe, Antwerp will become the major supply base for the Allied armies racing toward Germany itself. Whatever over to the Allied soldiers as they entered, making it unnecessary for the British to do their own mopping up.

No official statement has yet been received as to the position of General Patton's American 3rd Army, who were last reported in Metz and Nancy. An Associated Press dispatch from the Franco-Spanish frontier stated that they had captured Aachen, northeast of Liege, and Saarbruecken, on the main road to Frankfurt. The Prime Minister of Luxembourg declared in London that Allied troops had entered Luxembourg.

[The German commentator Ludwig Sertorius, stated that Patton's army was massing in the Lorraine gap for a drive to the Rhine.]

A Stockholm report quoted by the Associated Press stated that American armored patrols had captured Perl, just inside Germany at the southeast corner of the Luxembourg frontier. French frontier reports said that American tanks had reached the outskirts of Strasbourg on the Rhine.

Correspondents stated that American forces are meeting steadily increasing German resistance as they get closer to Germany. Patrols operating in the vicinity of the Moselle River and around Nancy and Metz have encountered heavier opposition.

To the extreme right flank of the British 2nd Army, Canadian troops have crossed the Canche River at Etaples, Montreuil, and several other places, and are now within three miles of Boulogne from the southeast. Inland, Polish troops are near St. Omer, at a junction of roads leading from Dunkirk and Calais. More and more flying-bomb sites are falling into Allied hands in their battle for the Channel ports.

Press reports stated that the Germans are garrisoning Boulogne, Calais and Dunkirk in apparently grim determination for a fight to the finish. But with the liberation of Antwerp, the whole coast from the Somme to the Scheldt is isolated, and the Germans are cornered with their backs to the sea. Evidence indicates that German officers have deserted their men and have left for Germany, leaving their troops to defend themselves. (OWI-Reuter - AP-BBC)

KARLSRUHE, STUTTGART, LUDWIGSHAFEN BOMBED

LONDON, September 5 — Three west German cities in the path of the advancing Allied armies, Stuttgart, Karlsruhe, and Ludwigshafen, were today attacked by an Allied air fleet of over 750 American heavy bombers and 500 fighters.

Karlsruhe, just across the France-German frontier east of Metz, had been bombed only a few hours before by Mosquito bombers which dropped many 4,000-pound bombs in a seven-minute attack. The chief targets at Karlsruhe, a focal point for German supplies and reinforcements, were rail yards and repair shops.

At Stuttgart, also a vital transport centre, the Daimler-Benz aero-engine and motor transport factory was among the objectives.

At Ludwigshafen, the heavies aimed at German synthetic oil and chemical resources in a continued effort to strangle the enemy's oil potential.

Stuttgart and Karlsruhe were hit visually. Ludwigshafen, covered by cloud formations, was bombed by means of instruments.

75 Enemy Planes Destroyed

The United Press said German airfields in the Rhineland, unprotected by an adequate warning system, were an easy prey for the swarms of American fighters supporting the strategic attacks. Sixty German fighter planes were destroyed on the ground, and 15 which managed to take off were sent plunging back on their own aerodromes in flames. The bombers followed a route over Allied controlled territory where no enemy fighters or anti-aircraft fire would be encountered.

The second largest port in Europe, Antwerp will become the major supply base for the Allied armies racing toward Germany itself. Whatever damage the Germans have done to railways, quays, docks, cranes, warehouses, port equipment, and railway sidings, they could not have done enough to prevent the port's immediately becoming of military supply value to the Allies in Belgium, the Netherlands, and Luxembourg.

Although there has been no official confirmation that British forces have crossed the Dutch frontier to enter Breda, these reports are probably true. British troops have covered more than 210 miles in six days, an average of 35 miles a day. General Dwight Eisenhower broadcast a special «stay put» order to all refugees and expatriated persons in Belgium and Holland today, indicating the general direction toward which Allied troops are headed.

The city of Louvain, directly east of Brussels, was taken almost intact, as the Germans had little time to carry out demolitions.

One large pocket of Germans caught in the Mons-Charleroi area has been eliminated, yielding 9,000 prisoners from disorganized German forces. One division was reduced to three officers and 90 men, with only infantry weapons. Another division contained 800 men of all ranks.

General Gerard, commanding the Belgian Forces of Resistance, stated that his troops have swung into action against enemy units, taking them prisoner and handing them

Sixty German fighter planes were destroyed on the ground, and 15 which managed to take off were sent plunging back on their own aerodromes in flames. The bombers followed a route over Allied controlled territory where no enemy fighters or anti-aircraft fire would be encountered.

The 36-hour respite from German flying-bomb attacks on southern England ended early this morning. Today's bombs are believed to have come from hastily-constructed sites in Holland, the United Press said. The attack, which was not on a heavy scale, was met by alert defense crews who shot down many of the missiles.

In continued attacks on German shipping in Brest harbour, RAF Bomber Command have immobilized two more potential blockships in a position where they cannot obstruct the harbor, the Air Ministry news service reported today.

American Marauder medium bombers are now operating from bases in France, it was announced today. Fighter-bombers of the 9th USAAF yesterday shuttled back and forth in the Mons-Brussels area, and set a new record for the 9th TAF by destroying 918 German trucks, 757 horse-drawn vehicles, and 59 armoured vehicles.

Pilots estimated that there were thousands of vehicles in this «largest traffic jam in history,» completely vulnerable to the Allied air forces, and virtually unprotected by the Luftwaffe.

Slight enemy air activity was encountered near Charleroi, where an Allied reconnaissance plane was attacked by three German planes.

NAZI SPOKESMAN SAYS "THE TIME HAS COME"

LONDON, September 5 — The German forces radio military spokesman said tonight: The time has come to take radical decisions in the west. We have three tasks to solve: first, to lead the German forces in France back to Germany; second, to gain time; third, to build a hedgehog position from which Germany can launch a counter-attack.

First we must bring back German forces spread all over France. This will need all the resourcefulness our leaders can command. Gaining time is the condition of achieving the third task. This means that the German withdrawal must be carried out without regard to temporary successes. (Reuter)

"VON TIRPITZ" HIT AGAIN

LONDON, September 5 — Several new air strikes against the German battleship Von Tirpitz have recently been carried out by British naval aircraft, an admiralty communique revealed tonight.

The attacks against the Von Tirpitz in Alten Fiord, in northern Norway, were made over a period of several days by planes operating from aircraft carriers under the command of Admiral Sir Henry Moore, Commander-in-Chief of the Home Fleet.

Subsidiary targets in the Hammerfest area were also hit, the communique added.

The Von Tirpitz was attacked with bombs of large and medium size. Some hits were claimed but, owing to smoke screens employed by the enemy, it was not possible to observe results on any occasion.

During the course of attacks on enemy shipping, an anti-aircraft vessel was seen to blow up and a destroyer and tanker were set afire.

Damage was inflicted on 16 other enemy vessels, including three destroyers, a U-boat depot ship, two armed trawlers, and a large supply ship.

In addition to these successes, hangars and buildings at two aerodromes in the vicinity were set on fire, many gun positions were shot up, and a large oil tank left in flames. Six wireless stations were attacked.

Five enemy aircraft which attempted to interfere with the operations were shot down by British fighters. Four others were destroyed on the water, and two were damaged. Several enemy aircraft were destroyed or damaged on the ground.

In the operations, a British frigate, the Bickerton, was torpedoed and sunk, and 11 British aircraft were lost.

The naval planes which took part in the attacks included Barracudas, Hellcats, Seafires, and Corsairs. (Reuter)

50 ALLIED AGENTS PARACHUTED INTO BELGIUM

LONDON, September 5 — More than 50 Allied agents were parachuted into Belgium in advance of the entry of Allied armies, it was revealed here today at Allied headquarters.

It was also disclosed that the secret Belgian Army had prepared a number of special landing grounds through [illegible] supplies, armaments, and troops. As to pursue you. Begin to boycott your liaison officials those quislings paid by the German Labor Front to spy on you. You must force these traitors to give up their infamous business.

General Eisenhower stated that instructions to foreign workers will be given by radio and will be repeated by means of leaflets dropped by the Allied air force.

Germany, meanwhile, is mobilizing Alsatian and Baden workers for the fortification of spurs on the Vosges Mountains, north of the Belfort Gap, in a last attempt to check the Allied advance. Apart from overseers, all Germans have been ordered to put the Rhine, running down the German-French frontier, between them and Allied troops.

Krupp's «front line» factories in Alsace and the Siemens works and aircraft works have ceased production, and are packing their most important machines for transit to Germany.

All rail transport from Germany to France has ceased. Coal trains arriving at Mulhouse with fuel for German war factories in France, have been ordered to return. (OWI-Reuter)

KING GEORGE CONGRATULATES BELGIANS

LONDON, September 5 — In a congratulatory message to M. Pierlot, Belgian Premier, on the liberation of Brussels, King George VI said:

My government and my people have been glad to have you and your government in their midst during these past four years. They have watched with admiration the dignified bearing of your compatriots under the heel of the cruel foe and their ceaseless and heroic efforts to thwart his purpose.

The long night of oppression is now ending. May this auspicious moment mark the beginning of an era of peace in your beloved land. (BBC)

ROOSEVELT PAYS TRIBUTE TO BELGIAN PEOPLE

WASHINGTON, September 5 — President Roosevelt, in a statement issued in Washington last night, paid tribute to the Belgian people. The statement said:

«Brussels, capital of another freedom-loving people, has been delivered from four terrible years of tyranny — its second such period in a generation. The American people are filled with admiration for the imperturbable conduct of the Belgian people toward the hated invaders, and their unswerving devotion to the ideals which they share with the people of the United States and other United Nations.»

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said the Brussels liberation «is not only a symbol of German defeat — it is a challenge to all peace-loving men to ensure that never again shall the cities of the smaller nations resound to the tread of the aggressors' marching feet.» (OWI)

DE GAULLE GOVERNMENT MOVES AGAINST TRAITORS

PARIS, September 5 — Moving swiftly against treasonable elements, the De Gaulle Government has issued warrants charging Vichyite chiefs with collaboration with the Germany enemy, the Associated Press said Monday.

According to the AP, the De Gaulle Ministry of Justice said that warrants have been issued for Marcel Deat, Vichy labor and national solidarity head, Joseph Darnand, Vichy militia head, Jacques Doriot and Marcel Bucard, political leaders; and a number of other collaborationists.

This news followed the disclosure that the De Gaulle Government had unearthed a French branch of the German Gestapo. The United Press said Monday that it was announced that this French Gestapo is accused of murdering more than 1,000 persons and kidnapping General De Gaulle's own niece, of whom nothing has since been heard.

The UP dispatch said that among those being detained

EISENHOWER CALLS TO FOREIGN WORKERS

LONDON, September 5 — General Dwight Eisenhower, in a broadcast today, urged foreign workers in Germany to abandon their factories at the earliest opportunity, as the first step in a coordinated plan of cooperation with the Allied military offensive against Germany.

Warning them against Gestapo attempts to force them into premature actions, General Eisenhower said:

«The leaders of Nazi Germany will begin execution of their desperate plan to drag into the abyss with them the whole German people and foreigners residing in Germany. The Allied offensive against Germany is so well advanced that you can go over to action, not only to quicken the German defeat, but also to protect your own lives.

Also being held is a French gangster, Henri Chamberlin, alias Henry Lafont, who is said to have headed the organization, according to the UP.

The UP also said that it was announced Monday night that six men of the Darnand militia had been executed at Grenoble on Sunday as the result of the first court martial ordered by the De Gaulle Government.

The press association added that the Secretariat of Justice announced Monday that it had started proceedings against five Paris daily newspapers and three weeklies for publishing German propaganda. GERMANS COUNTER-ATTACK NORTH OF CONCA

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 5 — Strong German armored and parachute forces, remnants of once crack divisions, lashed out in a desperate counter-attack yesterday against the 8th Army troops pouring along the Adriatic coastal corridor toward the vulnerable Valley of the Po.

Led by lumbering Tiger, Mark IV, and Hornet tanks, in lunging and costly attacks, the veterans of the 1st German Parachute Division and the 26th Panzer Division fought savagely to hold back the advancing Canadian forces until German troops could be rushed from the central sectors of the Italian front to stem the drive threatening all north Italy.

Despite their heavy sacrifices, which included 17 tanks, the German forces were flung back, and Canadian forces pressed on for gains of over a mile, while British infantrymen, attacking farther west, deepened to more than four miles the expanding 8th Army bridgehead over the Conca River.

Misano, a small, nondescript town a mile to the north of the Conca River and two miles in from the sea, was the focal point of this savage, despairing struggle. Canadian forces first took the town on Sunday morning, and infantry and tanks filed through the streets to wheel around to the west to storm German positions on nearby Monte Gallera. Elements of the attacking Canadian forces moved forward on the Riccione road, toward the coast.

The German counter-attack against Misano came on Sunday afternoon, by which time the enemy had assembled the tank forces, previously held in reserve, and fresh infantry formations. These enemy forces were met about 1,000 yards north of Misano, on the narrow dirt road to the coast, in a fierce battle which lasted through the afternoon and the night.

Although fighting still continued just north of Misano yesterday, Canadian forces struck west to make further gains of over a mile in heavy fighting.

Farther inland, British forces, supported by Churchill tanks, advanced from the bridgehead across the Conca River near Morciano di Romagna, six miles in from the sea, to break through German defenses at San Clemente and push on to within 1,000 yards of Coriano, four miles north of the river. Isolated German resistance at Monte Maggiore, southeast of Morciano, was overcome Sunday and 73 enemy prisoners captured, but other German forces at Montefiore Conca, southwest of the town, still resisted yesterday. The town of Tavoleto, 5 1-2 miles southwest of Morciano, was occupied by Indian troops after moderate opposition Sunday night.

On the coast itself, 8th Army forces were reported to be pushing along the littoral road to the village of Abissinia, on the outskirts of the town of Riccione Marina, six miles from Rimini. German paratroopers were putting up a determined resistance along a two-mile ridge stretching between Abissinia and Misano to the south.

5th Nears Lucca

On the western coastal flank of the Italian front, 5th Army troops were reported to have captured the whole of Monte Pisano Ridge to approach within less than two miles of Lucca, junction point of six important roads.

Infantry forces have already reached the south bank of the Serchio River between Monte Pisano and the sea, and are within six miles of the Ligurian seaport of Viareggio. The Germans had prepared extensive minefields and demolitions in this area to hinder the Allied advance. Other foot soldiers pushed forward two miles along the main coastal road leading northwest to La Spezia and Genoa, to a point four miles southwest of Lucca.

With the seizure of Monte Pisano, dominating ground in this coastal sector, and advances south of Lucca and on both sides of Altopascio, the autostrada which is the east-west link between Florence and the coast is now under artillery fire, and of no use to the enemy at any point west of Pistoia, it was reported today.

Enemy forces were reported to be laying down heavy artillery fire on the right flank of the 5th Army, and to have staged several abortive air raids on Sunday night, in apparent attempts to slow the quickening drive up the Ligurian coast.

North of the Arno in the Florence sector, where enemy forces now have been forced back as far as eight miles, fierce fighting was reported. (PRO) gave excellent support to Allied ground troops in the Italian battle areas.

Liberators bombed the Avisio viaduct, five miles north of Trento, and the rail yards north and south of the town. In other attacks, Liberators pounded the Latisana rail bridge on the Trieste-Venice line, and the Casarsa bridge on the Udine-Treviso line, with good concentrations reported.

The attacks on the submarines which had recently been evacuated to Genoa were made by Flying Fortresses and resulted in fires being started as large columns of smoke were observed.

In attacking 18 bridges in northern Italy yesterday, Mitchells and Marauders reported hitting 16 of them, while in other sweeps behind the lines seven locomotives, 37 vehicles, and two barges were destroyed and 20 locomotives, 19 rail cars, and two tanks were damaged.

Outstanding results on at least eight of the nine difficult road and rail targets within an 80-mile radius of Milan attacked yesterday by the Tactical Air Force were confirmed by bomb strike photographs revealing many direct hits and damaging concentrations on almost all the objectives.

Yesterday's other tactical targets included transportation lines and bridges in the Alessandria-Florence-Florence-Genoa areas, in the Faenza-Florence line and a nearby road, pontoon bridges south of Mantova, barges in the areas of Parma, Pavia, and Cremona.

In Southern France, P-47 Thunderbolts destroyed or damaged 16 locomotives and two railroad cars six miles south of St. Etienne, while west and southwest of Dijon, 24 motor transports and three locomotives were destroyed.

Last night, RAF Wellingtons, Liberators and Halifaxes dropped many tons of bombs, including a number of 4,000-pounders, on the railway yards at Ravenna, starting several fires and a big explosion. The fire was visible for about 50 miles from the target area. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS ATTACK GERMAN RAIL LINES

LONDON, September 5 — Widespread attacks on Yugoslav rail lines, designed to cut off the German retreat from the Balkans, were reported in today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters.

Seven trunk lines leading to Germany through Croatia, Bosnia, Serbia, Montenegro, Slovenia, and Albania have been cut or damaged, the communique said.

The Zagreb-Karlovac-Ogulin line has been severed or damaged at 144 different points. The Zagreb-Sisak-Novska line was attacked at 102 places. Seven bridges were blown up on the Bihac-Kostajnica-Sunjax line in Bosnia.

The German strongpoint of Vehko Brdo was captured after a heavy battle, in which 400 Germans were killed and 10 trucks destroyed.

25 SHIPS, 85 PLANES OF JAPS DESTROYED

PEARL HARBOR, September 5 — Two crushing blows against Japanese air and naval strength were announced last night by the Allied commanders in the Pacific. A communique from Admiral Nimitz, commander-in-chief in the Pacific, announced an air and naval bombardment of Japanese bases in the Bonin and Volcano Islands in which 13 Japanese ships were sunk and 85 planes knocked out, while General MacArthur's communique announced the sinking or damaging of 12 more Japanese vessels near the Philippines.

The pounding of the enemy bases in the two groups of islands which are little over 1,000 kilometers from Japan itself, began with air attacks on August 30 against Chichi and Haha in the Bonins. The aerial bombardement — it was not disclosed whether the aircraft came from carriers, or the coast in a fierce battle which lasted through the afternoon and the night.

Although fighting still continued just north of Misano yesterday, Canadian forces struck west to make further gains of over a mile in heavy fighting.

Farther inland, British forces, supported by Churchill tanks, advanced from the bridgehead across the Conca River near Morciano di Romagna, six miles in from the sea, to break through German defenses at San Clemente and push on to within 1,000 yards of Coriano, four miles north of the river. Isolated German resistance at Monte Maggiore, southeast of Morciano, was overcome Sunday and 73 enemy prisoners captured, but other German forces at Montefiore Conca, southwest of the town, still resisted yesterday. The town of Tavelico, 5 1/2 miles southwest of Morciano, was occupied by Indian troops after moderate opposition Sunday night.

On the coast itself, 8th Army forces were reported to be pushing along the littoral road to the village of Abissinia, on the outskirts of the town of Riccione Marina, six miles from Rimini. German paratroopers were putting up a determined resistance along a two-mile ridge stretching between Abissinia and Misano to the south.

5th Nears Lucca

On the western coastal flank of the Italian front, 5th Army troops were reported to have captured the whole of Monte Pisano Ridge to approach within less than two miles of Lucca, junction point of six important roads.

Infantry forces have already reached the south bank of the Serchio River between Monte Pisano and the sea, and are within six miles of the Ligurian seaport of Viareggio. The Germans had prepared extensive minefields and demolitions in this area to hinder the Allied advance. Other foot soldiers pushed forward two miles along the main coastal road, leading northwest to La Spezia and Genoa, to a point four miles southwest of Lucca.

With the seizure of Monte Pisano, dominating ground in this coastal sector, and advances south of Lucca and on both sides of Altopascio, the autostrada which is the east-west link between Florence and the coast is now under artillery fire, and of no use to the enemy at any point west of Pistoia, it was reported today.

Enemy forces were reported to be laying down heavy artillery fire on the right flank of the 5th Army, and to have staged several abortive air raids on Sunday night, in apparent attempts to slow the quickening drive up the Ligurian coast.

North of the Arno in the Florence sector, where enemy forces now have been forced back as far as eight miles, fierce fighting was reported. (PRO)

BUDAPEST AND PO BRIDGES HIT

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 5 — Up to 500 heavy bombers today concentrated their attacks on key rail bridges around Budapest, while medium bombers of the Tactical Air Force continued their attacks on Po Valley Bridges.

Enemy fighters attempted to intercept Mitchell bombers in the course of the Po valley attacks, and one ME-109 was shot down in one of the few air battles over Italian targets in recent weeks. At least 10 bridges were knocked out during the day. One, the Ferrara rail bridge, was hit by heavy bombers for the sixth time in less than two weeks. (PRO)

BRENNER PASS RAIL TARGETS BOMBED

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 5 — Transportation targets on main enemy supply routes in Italy were successfully bombed yesterday by up to 500 heavies of the 15th AAF who struck at two rail bridges and two rail yards on the important Brenner Pass line.

Some of the planes attacked submarines in Genoa harbor, while other formations of medium and heavy bombers tion lines and bridges in the Alessandria-Piacenza-Genoa areas, in the Faenza-Florence line and a nearby road, pontoon bridges south of Mantova, barges in the areas of Parma, Pavia, and Cremona.

In Southern France, P-47 Thunderbolts destroyed or damaged 16 locomotives and two railroad cars six miles south of St. Etienne, while west and southwest of Dijon, 24 motor transports and three locomotives were destroyed.

Last night, RAF Wellingtons, Liberators and Halifaxes dropped many tons of bombs, including a number of 4,000-pounders, on the railway yards at Ravenna, starting several fires and a big explosion. The fire was visible for about 50 miles from the target area. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS ATTACK GERMAN RAIL LINES

LONDON, September 5 — Widespread attacks on Yugoslav rail lines, designed to cut off the German retreat from the Balkans, were reported in today's communique from Marshal Tito's headquarters.

Seven trunk lines leading to Germany through Croatia, Bosnia, Serbia, Montenegro, Slovenia, and Albania have been cut or damaged, the communique said.

The Zagreb-Karlovac-Ogulin line has been severed or damaged at 144 different points. The Zagreb-Sisak-Novska line was attacked at 106 places. Seven bridges were blown up on the Bihac-Knezajnica-Sunjax line in Bosnia.

The German stronghold of Veliko Brdo was captured after a heavy battle, in which 400 Germans were killed and 19 trucks destroyed.

The pounding of the enemy bases in the two groups of islands which are little over 1,000 kilometers from Japan itself began with air attacks on August 30 against Chichi and Haha in the Bonins. The aerial bombardment — it was not disclosed whether the aircraft came from carriers, or were land-based, possibly in the Marianas — lasted for three days. On the same day, the air attacks were followed up by warships which drove in to pour shells into the bases. The target in the Volcano Islands, which lie to the south, was the Japanese base at Iwo.

The naval bombardment continued through August 31, and the air attacks were carried out through one more day, until September 1. When it was all over, 13 Japanese ships had been sunk, four more probably sunk, and three ships and a sampan damaged. A total of 85 Japanese planes had been destroyed or damaged. American losses were not revealed.

Only two days later — on Sunday, September 3 — another American task force struck at Wake Island, hundreds of kilometers to the southeast. Admiral Nimitz' communique said that the force was made up of aircraft carriers, cruisers, and destroyers, which bombed and shelled the former American base.

The communique made no mention of results of the attack.

Further attacks have been made by Allied aircraft on Paramushiro in the northern Kuriles, Truk and Ponape in the Carolines, Nauru Island west of the Gilberts, and Mili

Wotje, and Maloelap atolls in the Marshalls, the communique announced.

Of the 12 Japanese ships sunk or severely damaged off Mindanao in the Philippines, a single Catalina flying boat accounted for six, General MacArthur's communique said. The Catalinas sank three and probably sank three more out of a convoy of eight which had been sighted in Davao Gulf in the southern Philippines. This was the third major attack on the Davao section in three days. The previous MacArthur communique announced that the Japanese Air Force had been driven from Davao and southern Mindanao.

The other six vessels of the day's score of 12 in this region were accounted for by air patrols covering the Mindanao area «by day and night,» the communique said.

In another heavy assault, Allied planes dropped 140 tons of bombs on the Dutch Celebes, sinking three more enemy vessels. It was the heaviest air blow ever dealt to the Celebes. Three of 20 Japanese planes which attmpted interception were shot down, and an additional 15 were destroyed on the ground. Warehouses were demolished and the entire target area was left blanketed with smoke and flame, the communique said. American losses were one heavy bomber.

In another of many widespread air attacks, 73 tons of bombs were dropped on Palau, starting large fires and explosions. One Allied plane was lost here. In a raid on Halmahera a freighter was sunk by Allied aircraft.

Japanese Uneasiness Mounting

In the face of constantly increasing Allied pressure, Japanese propaganda is revealing a mounting uneasiness. Radio Tokyo on Sunday, in its weekly summary of the war, warned the Japanese people that the Allies are preparing a «huge naval offensive from the Pacific against the Philippines and Formosa,» coordinated with «sustained» air attacks from China against Japan.

The radio forecast concerted moves by General MacArthur's forces and the American 7th Fleet against Mindanao. «At the same time,» Radio Tokyo said, «Vice Admiral Spruance's 5th Fleet and Vice Admiral William Halsey's 3rd Fleet are seeking operations against the Philippines, Formosa and the Bonins to the north, using the Marianas as stepping stones.»

The broadcast completed for its listeners the picture of a steel ring tightening around Japan by adding: «It may be assumed that in the northern Aleutians, Vice Admiral Frank Fletcher's 9th Fleet is preparing diversional operations. Also by increasing his strength in the western Aleutians, the enemy is now ready to come forth at a moment's notice.» (OWI-Reuter)

BRITISH CAPTURE SITTAUNG IN NORTH BURMA

KANDY, September 5 — British troops occupied the key Chindwin River village of Sittaung, in north Burma, without opposition today. They found many Japanese dead and a large amount of equipment in this village, which is about 70 miles southeast of Imphal and a base from which the Japanese launched their invasion of Assam. More than 1,000 enemy dead, mainly victims of starvation, were found along the road to Sittaung.

Thirty miles upstream, Allied patrols reached Thaungdut and found it abandoned by the enemy.

Further south, the 5th Indian Division advanced nine miles along the Imphal-Tiddim road. Allied patrols are pushing beyond captured Pinbow to the Hoom area. In six weeks the Allies have advanced from Maupur, 70 miles on the Tiddim Road.

Mutiny among the Japanese forces has been reported in the area of the Allied advance southwest of Myitkyina. [illegible] fighters, General Headquarters, has testified, it was revealed here today.

The prisoner reported that he had overheard a dramatic conversation between Der Fuehrer and General Hasenlocher in Munich, in which Hitler ordered, in cold and incisive tones, that «within six hours from now, I do not want that man Reichenau in the land of the living.»

Three days later, an official announcement stated that the Field Marshal commanding the German Army Group South had died of «heart attack,» the prisoner said. (PRO)

NAZI "INNER FORTRESS" HAS NO DEFENSE IN DEPTH

LONDON, September 5 — The British military commentator, Max Werner, writing in Saturday's Reynolds News, said:

The Germans are now talking of the Inner Fortress, and the defense of German soil. What else can Goebbels do?

But the German High Command knows that the defense of the German frontier is hopeless. The strategic depth of Germany is insufficient for defense in modern warfare, and the destruction from the air with the Allied air forces operating over short distances will be terrifying....

Allied superiority over Germany permits offensive operations of considerable size to be carried out. The past weeks have opened wide, irreparable gaps in the German defenses in the west and the east, giving the Allies all the space needed for maneuver, and setting the stage for a grand, synchronized finale. LIBERATED ITALY

BONOMI CALLS TO ITALIAN PATRIOTS

ROME, September 5 — Prime Minister Ivanoe Bonomi tonight issued a double call to duty to Italian Patriots, to destroy the enemy in occupied territory, and to restore law and order in liberated areas.

The Prime Minister emphasized the peacetime duties of the Patriot forces in what he termed «our second Risorgimento,» and outlined Allied military plans to cooperate with Patriots in the maintenance of public order and the reestablishment of law in areas freed by the advancing Allied armies.

The text of Mr. Bonomi's speech follows:—

I know I am speaking for all Italians liberated at last from the double Nazi-Fascist yoke, when I express my heart-felt gratitude to you for what you are doing for Italy in the heroic struggle destined to win back for us the goodwill of the world.

This struggle must go on, and must become ever stronger. Now that the present Allied offensive, in which Italian troops are participating, has for its objective the complete destruction of the enemy, you Patriots who are in the rear of the enemy must renew your efforts to destroy the enemy swiftly and completely.

Mazzini's Exhortation

Give no truce to the enemy. I will repeat to you Mazzini's words, of 1849, when he urged the Italians to rise up against their German oppressors:

«All bands,» he said, «must harass the enemy; they must steal from him sleep, food, stragglers, confidence; they must stretch around him an iron net that will throttle him and eventually extinguish him.»

These words that Mazzini spoke in the days of our first Risorgimento must be repeated in this, our second Risorgimento, that will lift up Italy out of the defeat to which she was condemned by 20 years of Fascist tyranny

Bombers of the 14th USAAF, operating in support of the Chinese, attacked Kinhwa, the base of the current offensive in Chekiang Province, and Liberators raided the Nanking railway yards. Medium bombers on night missions hit the Hengyang airfield runway and destroyed or damaged 150 trucks.

On the Yunnan front, the Japanese took the Chinese roadblock 2½ miles southeast of the Burma Road town of Lungling, a Chinese High Command communique announced. Japanese Zeros came to the aid of their besieged troops in Teoshung, but Chinese troops advanced despite the bombing and strafing from enemy ground forces. More than half the ancient city is now in Chinese hands.

This struggle must go on, and must become ever stronger. Now that the present Allied offensive, in which Italian troops are participating, has for its objective the complete destruction of the enemy, you Patriots who are in the rear of the enemy must renew your efforts to destroy the enemy swiftly and completely.

Mazzini's Exhortation

Give no truce to the enemy. I will repeat to you Mazzini's words, of 1849, when he urged the Italians to rise up against their German oppressor.

«All bands,» he said, «must harass the enemy; they must steal from him sleep, food, stragglers, confidence; they must stretch around him an iron net that will throttle him and eventually extinguish him.»

These words that Mazzini spoke in the days of our first Risorgimento, must be repeated in this, our second Risorgimento, that will lift up Italy out of the defeat to which she was condemned by 20 years of Fascist tyranny.

I know that the Allied Command in Italy appreciates the heroic effort of our fighters, who know how to face death to save their country and to liberate the world from the humiliating domination of Fascism and Nazism. I am also aware that measures have been taken to allow the armies to make use of the services of Italian Patriots who constitute, as has solemnly been declared, an integral part of the Nation, and who today are renewing their attacks against the German invader.

I want to speak of those Patriots who, after having fought in the sector occupied by the enemy, are, owing to the advance made by the Allies, in the liberated sector, and so out of the fighting regions.

It is their duty to be brave and excellent citizens. They will have to prove themselves orderly and hard-working citizens, capable of accomplishing equally well the no less arduous task of reconstruction.

I am aware that the great body of Patriots greatly wish to continue the struggle with their own formations side-by-side with the Allies. I wish it were in my power to satisfy this wish, but I fear that this is not possible.

War waged by regular armies is quite a different thing from actions fought by irregular formations. The principles followed by each are entirely different.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 780021

Naturally, it must be left to the discretion of advance commands to decide whether or not small Patriot formations may be used by them.

I am aware of the brilliant actions performed by Patriot patrols, actions which have deserved the praise of Allied commanders.

But the employment of Patriots along with the armies at the front can only be temporary, and can only affect small units, unless a complete transformation of fighting forces is effected.

The Allied Command asks Patriots to deliver their arms to properly designated authorities as soon as the sector in which the Patriots were operating is liberated. As a token of gratitude for the work accomplished by the Patriots, General Alexander ordered the distribution of a certificate signed by him to Patriots who have borne arms against the enemy, who have carried out acts of sabotage and who have furnished the military command with important necessary information for the carrying out of military operations. Certificates have already been distributed in various localities in Latium and Tuscany, and officers of the Allied Military Administration, together with heads of bands and representatives of Patriots, have been requested to compile lists of those deserving of this high testimonial of valor.

The Allied Command has rightly fought to do what must be done for Patriots the moment the sector in which the bands are operating is liberated.

Numerous measures have been taken by the Allied command to facilitate the transition from guerrilla fighters to the life of a private citizen or the life of the soldier enrolled in regular army units.

Demobilization Measures

I know that the transition is not easy. A person accustomed to taking risks and subject to the dangers of war bands does not easily resign himself to the orderly existence and the uneventful life of the peaceful citizen.

For this purpose, the Allied Command sent out measures intended to organize this necessary transition.

Measures have been undertaken by the Allied command for the benefit of Patriots who are in liberated sectors. First, special representatives are sent to establish immediate contact with the bands and their leaders. The representatives already selected have come from those who effectively participated in the Patriot actions. The Allied command has been careful to send two representatives at a time — one chosen from the Military Giunta of the Committee of Liberation, and the other from the Clandestine Resistance Front.

Second, officers of the Allied Military Administration have been authorized to avail themselves of the services of Patriots for the maintenance of public order and for reestablishment of law, which must be in force before an ordered civil existence is possible. This duty many bands of Patriots have already worthily carried out — a fact which is proof of the faith which the Allies have in them.

Third, the Allied Military Administration has provided for the immediate employment of a certain number of Patriots in works of military necessity which usually are begun in liberated territory. Thus Patriots may still render service to their country not only with arms, but also by the work carried out under enemy fire for the reconstruction of a bridge or a road.

The Allied command and the Italian Government have agreed to facilitate the enrollment of patriots into the Italian armed forces, for those who wish to continue to fight against the enemy. Every band leader is requested to give a list of those Patriots who wish to enroll in the Italian Army. Both the War and Air Ministeries have made arrangements to send officers to facilitate enrollment operations and to direct volunteers toward the recruiting officers of the Italian armed forces.

Patriots, Italy is trustfully watching you. In all fields

HISTORIC MONUMENTS SUFFER LITTLE DAMAGE

LONDON, September 5 — The historic monuments of Italy suffered little damage during the Allied advance between June 6 and July 13, according to a British War Office report issued yesterday.

Of the major towns and cities through which the Allied armies passed while driving the Germans northward, the following were found to be virtually intact: Assisi, Orvieto, Spoleto, Rieti, Montepulciano, Chieti, and Tuscania.

In Siena, two churches described as of «no artistic merit» were wrecked.

Of the 49 listed historical monuments only two — the 13th century bridge, Ponte San Giovanni, in Perugia, and the 16th century bridge at Rastia, were blown up by the Germans.

Viterbo suffered considerable damage, as did Zoccoli. Part of the cloister of the church of the Trinita was destroyed, as well as all but the apse of San Francesco. San Giovanni, in Zoccoli, was razed with the exception of the facade with its flying buttresses. Other churches, theaters, and palaces in Zoccoli were either destroyed or damaged.

Cortona, Chiusi, and Torquinio, all of them towns with many artistic buildings, escaped almost without damage, and that easily repairable. (UWB)

MEDITERRANEAN

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 5 — Today's communique:

Allied Armies in Italy:

Heavy fighting has taken place in the Adriatic sector, where troops of 8th Army have met strong enemy resistance north of the River Conca. Nevertheless, British and Canadian troops have considerably widened the bridgehead over this river, and valuable progress has also been made in the high ground on the left.

West of Florence, the 5th Army advance continues, and their leading troops are now approaching the towns of Prato and Lucca. The whole of the high ground south of the Lucca-Pistoia-Florence road is now in our hands.

North of Florence, British troops have made some progress into the high ground overlooking the city.

On the remainder of the front there is no appreciable change in the situation.

Seventh Army:

Seventh Army forces are continuing their rapid advance in the Saône Valley against ineffectual resistance and French elements have reached the outskirts of Macon and the town of St. Bonnet de Bruyeres farther west. East of the Saône, American troops have advanced beyond Montrevel.

Some 2,400 prisoners were taken by the French in their capture of Villefranche. The total of prisoners in the Southern France campaign is now passed 65,000.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Medium forces of heavy bombers yesterday attacked rail yards and bridges on main supply routes in northern Italy, and submarines in the harbour of Genoa.

Medium bombers also concentrated on communications lines attacking 18 bridges in northern Italy. Other medium and light bombers were active against gun positions in the battle area south of Rimini.

Fighters and fighter-bombers flew armed reconnaissances over northern Italy, attacking rail and motor transport, and provided close support for ground operations. Other fighter-bombers attacked factories north of Spezia, and ammunitions dumps in the Po Valley.

Medium and heavy bombers last night attacked rail yards at Ravenna.

In these operations, five enemy aircraft were destroyed and 12 of ours are missing. In addition to those previously reported, two enemy aircraft were destroyed on September 3.

MAAF flew over 1,300 sorties yesterday.

Naval:

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September 5 — Today's communique:

Antwerp has been liberated. In their two-day drive across Belgium, Allied armor entered the city yesterday, and by evening was clearing the dock area.

Early in the day, our troops to the south captured Louvain, Mechling (Malines), and Alost.

Other forces operating near the Franco-Belgian border took Lille.

North of the Somme, steady progress is being made. Our troops have reached Hesdin, Montreuil, and Etaples.

Allied forces in the Mons area of Belgium have eliminated a large German pocket southwest of the city. An estimated 9,000 prisoners were taken. Forty tanks and 1,500 motor vehicles were captured or destroyed by the ground and air forces. Local enemy pockets have been mopped up south of Tournai, and in the areas of Marchiennes, northwest of Valenciennes, and Villeroe, northwest of Mons.

Gains have been made south of Charleroi as far as Florennes and Beaumont.

In the upper Meuse Valley, our forces have advanced northeast of Saint Mihiel.

Farther south, there are no changes to report.

MOSCOW, September 5 — Tonight's communique:

During today, north of Tartu, our troops repelled enemy tank and infantry attacks, and inflicted on the enemy heavy losses on manpower and material.

Southwest of Lomza, our troops captured the city and large railway station of Wyszkow, and also occupied in fighting over 150 populated localities, including Ushnik, Kluchkova, Sbenye, Javi, Sokon, Kamenki, Lipianke, Gorova, Tumye, Jarye, Vincentova, Kahlavy, Graduva, Zatozhe, Pajova, and the railway stations of Zisnevo, Turko, Tashke, and Dalynye.

On several sectors, our troops reached the River Narev.

In Rumania, our troops occupied in the course of their advance the towns of Petushki, Grashova, Svobodye, Dragoneshki, and also over 200 other populated localities, including Velnye, Kolibushi, Tonodeshi-Otara, Turnou, Vilarovu, Pnoteshki, Krilovo, Brashanye, Nagora, and Jugoshary, and the railway stations of Petulagye, Nouremye, Pnoteshki, and Zeleshti.

On all other sectors of the front, reconnaissance activities took place.

During September 4, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 44 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 21 enemy planes were shot down. (Radio Moscow)

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 5 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In northern France, our troops opposed stubborn resistance to strong enemy assault detachments which, yesterday, punched major gaps into our lines. The fighting moved to the Antwerp and Brussels sectors, and grows hourly in intensity.

London was kept fast night under fire with "V-1's."

Heavy anti-aircraft guns of the Navy again shelled ports and barracks in southern England, as well as enemy battery emplacements with good success.

In the Ardennes, enemy attempts at crossing the Maas were smashed. Nort of Charlesville, enemy forces who had crossed the Maas were repelled in a counter-attack.

In the Ithone Valley our movements, despite enemy pressure, are being carried out according to plans.

Yesterday, grim fighting again developed around Brest. Our garrison again smashed all enemy attacks supported by strong artillery, tanks, and air forces.

In Italy, in the Adriatic coastal sector, our troops frustrated all enemy attacks. Local infiltrations were sealed off in a counter-attack. During the last five days of the major fighting, more than 200 tanks were destroyed.

In the southeastern part of Transylvania, the grim offensive and defensive fighting continues. In the forested Carpathians, Hungarian troops had a decisive share in successfully repelling several Soviet attacks.

At the Vistula bridgehead, northwest of Baranov, successful attacks, which lasted some days, resulted in a shortening of the front, despite stubborn enemy resistance.

Between Bug and Narew, the Soviets threw additional units into the battle. Grim enemy attacks were stopped in our deeply echeloned positions, and 74 tanks were destroyed.

In Estonia, between Lake Wirz and Dorpat, Soviet formations which had crossed the Embach were wiped out. At Dorpat, our troops repelled the Bolsheviks southward in fierce fighting in the forested area.

In the Lake area west of Libau, bombers brought down nine enemy planes when Soviet torpedo planes tried to attack a German convoy.

Last night, isolated enemy planes dropped bombs on Karlsruhe. (Radio Berlin)

Patriot activity behind German lines in the northern Apennines has been very intense. Enemy patrols are forbidden to carry on isolated actions in this sector, and violation of this order is punishable by death.

North of Pistoia, Patriots and Nazi-Fascists are carrying on a full-scale fight. Patriots have control over many strategic points in the Apennines and over several heights in the vicinity of Spezia. On August 9, near Vercelli, Patriots killed 162 Germans in the course of bitter fighting. A Fascist garrison was captured in Val Sabbia.

AMERICANS AND FRENCH ENTER LYON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 3 — Forward elements of French and American forces have entered Lyon, France's second largest city, after converging on the Rhone valley industrial center from three sides, it was announced here late tonight.

American forces, repeating the swift envelopment which cost the Germans such heavy losses south of the Drome River, have swept northward across the Rhone and the Ain northeast of Lyon to reach a point just east of Bourg-en-Presse, 34 miles northeast of the city and on one of the main German escape routes.

A screen of infantry and tanks have been hastily assembled and pushed forward to attempt to hold up the advancing American forces long enough for the broken fragments of the main German force to flee on northward, by any means available.

American forces closing in on Lyon from the south clashed with German troops in the vicinity of Venissieux, three miles from the edge of the great industrial city. Vienne, 15 miles south of Lyon on the road which parallels the Rhône River along most of its length from the sea, was reported occupied after pockets of resistance were overcome.

Pilots Hampered

On the west banks of the Rhône, French forces yesterday advanced rapidly to reach Lyon's outskirts after a swift thrust which captured the towns of Tournon and Serrieres, 47 and 30 miles respectively, south of the great industrial center, and Montfaucon, St. Etienne and St. Chamond, 45, 29 and 23 miles to the southwest.

German forces have now evacuated virtually all of southern France from Lyon westward to the Atlantic Ocean, it was officially announced. Although bad weather hampered air observation, it is evident that the German 19th Army and the other remnants of enemy forces from the south of France are streaming out north and northeast of Lyon in a desperate effort to make their escape to the German frontier.

Leading American elements, east of Bourg-en-Presse, are now within 130 miles of Chaumont, last reported captured town in the upper Saone Valley, where American 3rd Army troops are operating.

American forces advancing eastward along the Riviera, have reached the border of Monaco, neutral principality less than four miles from the Franco-Italian frontier.

The American thrust, which began when the German forces were struggling to escape from the Allied combined air and ground forces trap in the Rhône defiles between Montelimar and Livron, nearly a week ago, apparently took the German troops in the threatened area by surprise.

Only after American motorized columns had crossed the Rhône and the Ain rivers, to reach the vicinity of Meximieux, 18 miles northeast of Lyon, were the Germans able to muster a force of infantry and tanks to stage an unsuccessful counter-attack.

Infantry Seven

A number of clashes between Meximieux and Chalamont, seven miles to the north in the low, pond-dotted country between the Ain and the Saone rivers, were reported yesterday, as well as a skirmish just east of Bourg-en-Presse, but apparently only small enemy forces were engaged. The German formation which engaged American forces near Bourg-en-Presse consisted of only 75 men.

The evident German purpose, was to protect the bulk of the 19th Army, now savagely decimated and mostly on foot, which is endeavoring to make its escape northward to Macon and northeast through threatened Bourg-en-Presse.

PASSES TO PEACE

LONDON, September 3 — Sixty five per cent of the German prisoners taken by the Canadians from Lisieux to the Seine were found to possess leaflets, which are now being dropped in bombs by the Allies, advising them to surrender. The leaflets include safe conduct passes for those who wish to surrender.

Recently three Germans surrendered sharing one safe conduct pass between them, each clutching the precious document with one hand while holding the other hand in the air.

checked at the crossings of the Drome River and then subjected to one of the most merciless artillery and air pounddings in the history of the Mediterranean campaign.

Because of the narrowing of the Rhone valley by the outlying foothills of the Dauphine Alps and the Cevennes Mountains midway between Lyon and the sea, the German forces fleeing from the coastal areas were forced to pass through a 20-mile-long defile between Montelimar and Valence before they could gain the comparatively open spaces of the Isere, Saone, Ain and upper Rhone valleys.

Almost in the center of this hourglass through which the German columns were forced to retreat was the Drome River, an eastern tributary of the Rhone. At Livron, a small town on its north bank, were a road and a rail bridge where Highway no. 7 and the main line of the Paris-Lyon-Mediterranean crossed the shallow, sandy-banked stream. These bridges were the key in controlling the flow of the receding German tide in southern France.

The Tactical Air Force, which had knocked out every bridge across the Rhone from the sea all the way to Valence, deliberately abstained from hitting the Livron bridges, General Saville said. Instead they were left open, to form a channel through which the enemy forces might flow until it was time to attack them.

That time did not come until American forces had made their way swiftly and secretly up the Durance River thence into the valley of the Drome, to cut back westward to the Rhone and take up positions in the foothills overlooking the defiles through which the German hordes were beginning to pour.

Strategic Moment

With increasing American and French pressure to the south forcing up through the Rhone valley all the service troops, training personnel, air force establishments and German garrison forces in the whole of the south of France, and with this confused stream of vehicles, material and men sealed off on the west by the bridgeless Rhone and to the east by the Dauphine Alps foothills, lines with Allied artillery, the strategic moment for the destruction of the key bridges at Livron arrived.

Medium bombers destroyed them on August 27, to bring the long German columns to a confused halt, and to inaugurate for them a five day holocaust, in which 2,200 vehicles were destroyed, over 1,500 horses slain, and German 19th Army turned into a panic-stricken rabble ranging about madly to find some avenue of escape.

For two and a half days, fighter-bombers raced over the stalled columns to strafe and destroy, while well-placed guns in the hills to the east pounded away unceasingly.

Fire and Death

The statistics of the destruction have already been officially announced, but the grim testimony of the wreckage and corpse-strewn road along that stretch of the Rhone valley is probably the most graphic picture of military devastation yet produced by this war.

Even though bulldozers had been at work day and night in pushing aside the charred and twisted frames of trucks and carts and tanks and burying in great trenches the bodies of the German dead and their horses, this 20 mile stretch of road still reeks of fire and of death. On the railway lines and in the marshalling yards along the route, 20 trains lie in tangled disarray, including three de luxe cars which were the private sleepers of Nazi generals — lavishly fitted out, even to the inclusion of pianos.

From a low-flying plane with its cargo doors removed to provide better visibility, Allied correspondents were shown [illegible] narrow battlefield in a series of swiftly passing

ALLIES APPROACH GERMAN BORDER

SHAEF, September 3 — Units of the British 2nd Army today joined forces with the American 1st Army at Tournai, while the American 3rd Army has crossed the River Moselle to capture Metz, 30 miles from the German border.

By crossing the Moselle, American forward elements have completed an advance of about 20 miles per day for five days to reach Metz, which was occupied with little German resistance. Further south, American forces have entered Nancy, on the Marne-Rhine Canal, to bring them within 60 miles of the German border at Saarbruken.

In Belgium, late reports tonight place advance units in Namur, northeast of Maubeuge on the Sambre River, 35 miles inside Belgium. An Associated Press dispatch stated that veteran tank forces are driving on Mons in one of the war's great marches after crushing tank-led German resistance units. It stated that the columns were moving so fast that ordinary road maps were being used.

In seven days British and American armies have advanced about 115 miles the British speeding from the Seine west of Paris to the north and east of Arras, while the Americans raced from Paris itself into Belgium.

The Germans inside Belgium are completely disorganized and reconnaissance photographs show them evacuating Brussels, the capital. Captured German documents reveal that German units have been ordered to get back to the Siegfried Line as fast as they can, and, lacking transportation, they are instructed to leave their guns behind. In a broadcast to German troops in northwestern Europe a German army spokesman said that the slogan at the beginning of the sixth year of war is: "Our homes must be protected from the enemy."

Leaving Pas de Calais

Further back on the Somme, Canadian troops are in the eastern and western outskirts of the town of Abbeville and have established firm bridgeheads over the river between Abbeville and Pont Remy. They have reached Ailly le Haut Clouncbel, nearly three miles beyond the Somme.

To the northeast of the Somme, German troops are evacuating the Pas de Calais area, the flying bomb coast of France, in the path of the advancing Canadians, and with the British threatening to sever their lines of retreat. Masses of German transport are pouring out of Boulogne and there is vast movement on all roads leading east and southeast from the Pas de Calais.

While the Canadians are pressing up the coast, British troops under Canadian command are cleaning up the Le Havre peninsula and have drawn up before Le Havre itself. The German garrison is believed to consist of between 3,000 and 4,000 troops.

The nearest Allied army from Berlin is that of Russia, with only 320 miles to go from Warsaw. The western front is 385 miles from Berlin at Namur, Belgium; southern France, 595 miles from Berlin, at Voiron; and the Italian front, 590 miles from the German capital, at Pesaro. (OWI-Reuter)

From a low-flying plane with its cargo doors removed to provide better visibility, Allied correspondents were shown this long, narrow battlefield in a series of swiftly passing scenes, the very rapidity of which intensified the sense of devastation.

Allied planning for this attack was based on the «law of motion» which governs the movement of any vehicular traffic, General Saville said.

Vehicles Pile Up

Traffic will move regularly and evenly spaced along a smooth straight road, and can be dispatched so that it is strung out sufficiently that attack by aircraft proves impracticable; but once a «switchback» or some other delaying factor is introduced into the route, it causes the whole column of evenly spaced vehicles to pile up in a road block, waiting to negotiate the obstacle at a snail's pace.

To bring the columns to an absolute halt is not necessary from the air point of view, General Saville explained. Merely to slow the pace of the column at one point will suffice to pile up behind it the faster-moving vehicles completing their passage of the clear stretch. This done, either all the vehicles using the route must be governed by the speed at the one blocked sector, and thus reduce to a trickle the stream of traffic, or all may continue through at normal speed until they come to the obstacle, where they jam up and form an air target of extreme vulnerability.

It was this latter which occurred below Livron. The SHAEF, September 3 — The only thing slowing up the speedy Allied advance across France toward Germany and into Belgium is the difficulty of Allied supply keeping up with the racing columns the BBC said today.

Although the advance is somewhat slower, it is still fast enough to outspeed the news. There were unconfirmed reports that the Allied columns have thrust deep into Belgium. An unnamed French Patriot radio, quoted by the BBC, said American forces had already reached Namur, 25 miles inside Belgium and 35 miles southeast of Brussels on the Meuse river. The BBC added that if the Americans were there, they are in a position to outflank the Germans, who were reported to be evacuating Brussels and all Belgium.

It was reported that a Belgian Underground army of about 1,000,000 men has received instructions, but other than preventing the usual German demolition and killing a few stray Germans, they may have little to do.

The BBC reported yesterday that only one Nazi-controlled Belgian station was on the air, but today there was no sound from any station within the country. (BBC) assist the Allies to start up again the essential transport facilities for the onward march to Germany.

To the population of unliberated areas he said: «Do not attempt any mass rising. Help the local Forces of Resistance, and Belgians in key position, to hide or escape.»

To all Belgian citizens he stated that warnings and instructions by the Allied radio and leaflets distributed by the Allied air forces should be closely followed.

The message concluded: «This is the supreme moment. If all play their part, the liberation of Belgium will be quickly achieved.» (Reuter)

DAY AIR ATTACK ON BREST

LONDON, September 3 — Flying Fortresses numbering between 250 and 300 attacked enemy gun positions at Brest today. Another medium force of Fortresses, escorted by Mustangs, bombed targets in the Ludwigshafen sector of western Germany.

The Fortresses over Brest dropped 1,500 tons of explosives visually, mainly on fuel and ammunition dumps, bridges and gun emplacements. Results were described as «good to excellent.» Two planes were lost. The heavies attacking targets around Ludwigshafen encountered clouds, and bombs were dropped by means of instruments.

Last night RAF planes, in bright moonlight, attacked German vessels fleeing from French harbors to Belgian ports. They hammered relentlessly at what the British Air Ministry described as «an almost continuous stream of German vessels,» including everything from R and E-boats to largerized trawlers and merchant vessels converted into flakships.

Moonlight Strafe

The sea was rough, and instead of their full speed of 35 to 40 knots the E-boats were only making 25 to 30 knots, with heavy going. Despite the moonlight the attackers saw few results, for as they ended their attacks they weaved out to avoid the enemy fire from ships preceding or following their target. Four Allied aircraft are missing from this operation.

Fighter-bombers of the 8th USAAF yesterday continued their campaign against enemy transport in Belgium, Holland and France, despite bad weather, which prevented the planes from going out in force. Bad weather also slowed down Allied air operations against the fleeing German forces, but fighter-bombers flew about 150 sorties against the German Army near the Belgian border, destroying 90 motor vehicles.

Not a single flying bomb has been reported over southern England since Friday evening, and for the first time since June 16 the German communique made no mention of V-1.

Reports from the 2nd TAF tell of explosions in Boulogne, indicating that the Germans are leaving. A senior RAF officer said tonight: «If this is so, Calais will go as well. This in turn would mean the whole German rocket coast in France — with about 250 flying bomb sites in a belt from 10 to 15 miles from the coast — will be completely eliminated.»

German flying bombs yesterday morning fell in the Seine basin, within a radius of about 40 miles of Paris. Some casualties and slight damage were caused. Correspondents on the Belgian front reported seeing at least 10 bombs flying towards Paris, apparently from bases in the Lowlands.

8TH ARMY CAPTURES PESARO

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 3 — Canadian infantry and tank forces of the 8th Army, exploiting their break-through of the enemy's last defensive positions south of the Po, have thrust to within 12 miles of Rimini, Adriatic terminus of the transverse highway and rail line leading into the heart of northern Italy, it was announced today.

German forces, although disorganized by the powerful [illegible] the vaunted Goth

South of Cattolica, nine miles northwest of Pesaro, heavy fighting was also reported, as the German forces strove to push past the tightening Canadian cordon. At latest reports, Canadians had pushed to within three miles of Cattolica and the coast in this sector.

Nazi Division Decimated

Inland, British and Indian troops are fanning out through the breach in the Goth Line in the face of heavy enemy resistance, centered northwest of Monte Gridolfo, a village 12 miles southwest of Pesaro, and in the outskirts of the village of Taveletto, 16 miles southwest of the captured port.

The German 71st Infantry Division, which originally opposed the British forces now fighting 2,000 yards northwest of Monte Gridolfo, is virtually smashed as a fighting organization, and the enemy has been forced to rush reinforcements to try and fill this gap.

The part the fighter-bombers of the Desert Air Force played in the 8th Army's break-through was revealed today. As a result of a preliminary «softening» of the enemy defenses, only four out of 24 tank turrets in one portion of the lines were serviceable when 8th Army ground troops attacked. Leading troops found some of the enemy positions abandoned as a result of the savage air onslaughts, and captured them before the German garrison troops could make their way back to their posts.

Enemy Dazed

Elsewhere along the coastal defenses, enemy troops were dazed by the air and artillery bombardment, and either cowered underground or emerged unable to put up effective resistance to the Allied attacks.

The Desert Air Force planes also aided the advance on Tombe di Pesaro, and a South African Air Force pilot of the 40th Squadron not only carried out reconnaissance for Canadian tanks, but dispersed the crew of an anti-tank gun which had held up their advance. Other RAF planes strafed German tank forces and blew up several tanks, forcing the remainder to withdraw to the north.

Lack of aerial observation was one of the greatest weaknesses of the enemy defenses, and resulted in the German troops being caught up in the confusion of battle before they had made their normal final preparations. Because of the lack of observation, in sharp contrast to the excellent Allied reconnaissance, the infantry forces in the Goth Line's fixed positions were extremely vulnerable to envelopment and attack from the rear.

At one point in the battle a German infantry battalion rushed forward to stem the Allied drive, laid down a heavy attack on an unoccupied height, and after they had taken it, were in turn surprised by Allied troops who captured the positions.

Parachutists Routed

In another sector, German parachutists attacked the initial Allied bridgehead across the Foglia with only bazookas, expecting to be met only by tanks, were routed when they were attacked by infantry forces. Many of the extensive enemy minefields which had been prepared to guard the approaches to the Goth Line were left with warning markers giving away their exact location, and one causeway constructed over an anti-tank moat, thought to have been blown up when the German forces drew back, was found intact by advancing 8th Army troops.

More than 1200 prisoners have been taken on the Adriatic front since the advance across the Metauro river. Canadian forces have taken at least 700 of these prisoners.

In the Apennine stretches of the Goth defenses, leading troops of the 8th Army were reported to be in contact with main defenses from Pieve Santo Stefano across the Tiber and Arno valleys to a point two miles southwest of Prato-

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 3 — Canadian infantry and tank forces of the 8th Army, exploiting their break-through of the enemy's last defensive positions south of the Po, have thrust to within 12 miles of Rimini, Adriatic terminus of the transverse highway and rail line leading into the heart of northern Italy, it was announced today.

German forces, although disorganized by the powerful land, sea and air assault which pulverized the vaunted Goth line across the Adriatic coastal corridor, are still fighting back with desperation.

Eighth Army forces have completed the occupation of the Adriatic port of Pesaro, where British and Polish forces have been engaged for three days in savage street fighting with German parachutist troops. The Canadians, in a swift night advance, have struck toward the coast to the north to within 1,000 yards of the latteral road running the Adriatic.

Heights Captured

Pouring through the constantly enlarging breach in the Goth Line, Canadian forces have captured the key heights to the north, where German forces were attempting to stem the 8th Army break-through. The Canadians seized the heights of Tomba di Pesaro and Monteluro, roughly eight and seven miles west of Pesaro, on Friday evening, and then struck for the coast in a rapid night advance. The veteran troops of the German 1st Parachute Division, confused by the power and speed of the Canadian thrust, struggled desperately to extricate themselves from their positions to the south, and heavy fighting was reported at Gradara, two miles inland and some five miles north of the Foglia River at its nearest point.

abandoned as a result of the Canadian advance, but they captured them before the German garrison troops could make their way back to their posts.

In the Apennine stretches of the Goth defenses, leading troops of the 8th Army were reported to be in contact with main defenses from Pieve Santo Stefano across the Tiber and Arno valleys to a point two miles southwest of Pratovecchio Stia, northwest of Bibbiena. Patrol forces pushing two miles northwest of Bibbiena encountered no enemy forces.

East of Florence, north of the Arno River, 8th Army forces were still in contact with withdrawing enemy forces, although to the west no contact was reported.

Capture of Pisa

The highlight of the 5th Army action yesterday, was the capture of the historical city of Pisa and the continued advances all along the broad front, with our troops firmly across the Arno River. Before the day's end 5th Army forces had made gains in the coastal sector as well as further progress east of Pisa.

Enemy resistance to Allied advances was limited to mines, demolition and small covering forces supported by tank fire or selfpropelled guns.

Our troops struck at the Monte Pisano mass, mountain features affording the enemy full observation of the entire coastal sector, and threatened the German positions from the east and southeast.

Cascina, about eight miles east of Pisa and four miles north of Pontedera was captured yesterday while other Allied armor and infantry pushed forward into the lowland area east of Monte Pisano and eight miles directly north of Pontedera to take Orentano.

Late last night our leading troops were only two miles south of Altopascio, a junction for five important roads, one of which leads northeast to Pistoia.

Still further east, our advance forces reached a point only three-quarters of a mile south of Vinci, which is on the road leading north to Pistoia.

The famous Leaning Tower of Pisa was reported to be entirely undamaged. (PRO)

GOTH LINE BLITZED FROM AIR

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 3 — Supporting ground operations in Italy medium and light bombers of the Tactical Air Force yesterday for the sixth successive day attacked enemy positions along the Goth line and to the north of the battle area, with good results.

In strategic and coastal operations, Allied aircraft bombed enemy targets in southern France, Yugoslavia, and the Greek coast.

The objectives of Mitchell bombers yesterday were the three remaining rail lines between Germany and the Italian front. Hits on the three rail bridges in the central Po Valley were reported as three pontoon bridges over the Po River were destroyed.

In the Goth line positions, 43 motor vehicles and a locomotive were destroyed and five locomotives and one tank were damaged.

Up to 500 Liberators of the 15th AAF successfully attacked the Nis railyards, 140 miles southeast of Belgrade. Other Liberators bombed the Kraljevo railyards and rail bridge, 75 miles southeast of Yugoslavia's capital.

Formations of Lightnings and Mustangs struck at enemy communication lines at Cuprija and in the Nis-Belgrade area with excellent results: 82 locomotives, 154 vehicles, 113 railcars, 19 oil tank cars, 11 gasoline trucks and three other vehicles were destroyed. Damaged enemy transport included 24 locomotives, 70 vehicles, 133 rail cars, a small boat and two barges. (PRO)

MEDIUMS HIT TRANSPORT IN NORTH ITALY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 3 — Striking at road and rail targets over northern Italy, near the French border, Corsica-based fighter-bombers of the Tactical Air Force today destroyed six locomotives, strafed about 100 railroad cars, and severely damaged bridges near Mondovi and Genoa.

In addition, Thunderbolts cut railroad tracks and cratered roads in the Bologna area.

Meanwhile, up to 500 heavy bombers of the 15th USAAF supporting the Partisans, pounded road and rail bridges in Yugoslavia and Hungary. The following targets were successfully attacked: the Sava River rail bridge and the Pancevo rail bridge over the Danube, both at Belgrade, as well as the Sava road bridge in the capital; the Szeged and Szajol rail bridges over the Tisza river in Hungary; and the ferry slips at Smederevo, on the Danube, as well as ferry boats on the same run. NAZIS CALL THE 16-YEAR-OLDS

WASHINGTON, September 3 — Stockholm's Dagens Nyheter said today Berlin newspapers had announced that parades would be held throughout Germany yesterday and today so that all 16-year old youth « would be given the opportunity to follow their own inner calling to report as volunteers for the Fuehrer and the Reich. »

The German newspaper National Zeitung published orders of the North Westphalia Gauleiter, Alfred Meyer, announcing the total mobilization of all 14-year old school children and all High School and secondary school students from the fifth grade up for « special war tasks ». (OWI)

RUSSIANS ADVANCE IN RUMANIA

MOSCOW, September 3 — The Red Army is following up its initial 12-day lightning campaign in Rumania with a cautious advance against heavier German resistance. Scouting parties are scouring the countryside for hidden German concentrations. Pockets of Germans remaining in the rear areas are also being dealt with.

South of Bucharest, Russian troops entirely cleared a 40-mile stretch of the river Danube from Giurgiu eastward to Oltenita, and occupied a number of inhabited localities, including eight railway stations. Yesterday they invested the entire area down the Bulgarian border from the Danube to Constanza, on the Black Sea.

North and west of Ploesti, Soviet forces advanced and took more than 40 towns and villages. Russian troops are reported to be within 100 miles of Yugoslavia.

Enemy manpower losses on the 2nd and 3rd Ukrainian fronts during the 12-day Soviet offensive were 210,000 killed and 208,000 captured, of which only 97,100 were Germans. The enemy lost 351 planes, 956 tanks and self-propelled guns, 5,576 guns of various caliber, 3,251 mortars, 19,105 machine guns and 46,640 automobiles.

Tonight's Soviet communique said that on other sectors of the front there was reconnaissance activity and at some points fighting of local importance. Reuter's Moscow correspondent today cabled that Red Air Force pilots on reconnaissance found German transport services speeding up on the East Prussian-Polish frontier.

Raiding Parties

Meanwhile small Soviet raiding parties are operating on this frontier, working independently of land communication with base, and receiving supplies of food and ammunition from the air.

Ahead of the Soviet lines on the northern and central fronts, Russian bombers operating from captured advanced air bases have launched a new softening up offensive.

On the occasion of the fifth anniversary of Germany's march into Poland, General Bor, commander of the Polish Home Army, yesterday broadcast a message of encouragement and praise to Polish forces fighting everywhere. He said Warsaw is fighting and will go on fighting, despite difficulties and hardships.

General Bor said: « It is five years today since Poland

Here, in Grenoble, he cabled, a free Press has rapidly been re-established and the powerful transmitter of Radio Grenoble is once again broadcasting to the world.

On August 24 the first edition of Les Allobroges appeared, replacing the ex-Vichy controlled daily paper Le Petit Dauphinois. The publishing of this paper was directed by two heroes of the Underground press who for months outwitted the Nazi and Vichy agents assigned to strangle the powerful Underground Press in this area. The first edition had a circulation of 150,000 copies.

Through the close co-operation of Allied and French technicians, Radio Grenoble was broadcasting free news to the world within a few hours of the liberation of the town.

Due to the ingenuity of the station staff, the station was left in first-class condition. Just before the Germans evacuated Grenoble, the staff received word from the FFI that a Nazi wrecking crew were on their way to the station to destroy all the tubes. The station engineers hurriedly installed old burned-out tubes specially saved for such an occasion and hid the good ones in the cellar. The Germans arrived and efficiently destroyed all the worthless tubes. After their departure the engineers replaced them and the station was ready to go on the air. (UNN)

JAPANESE SUICIDES AT SALWEEN

CHUNGKING, September 3 — The Chinese High Command announced today that the Japanese have failed in an attempt to relieve their garrison at Lungling, in Yunnan Province, and have suffered heavy casualties.

Frontal and flanking attacks by the Japanese attempting to force the Chinese from positions four miles northeast of Mangshih, overlooking the Burma Road, were also repelled, the High Command stated. More than 1,000 Japanese have been killed in the fighting in the past four days in the Lungling and Mangshih areas.

In fighting at Sungshan, the multi-peaked mountain barring the Chinese from using the Burma Road west of the Salween River, Chinese troops again used American flame-throwers against Japanese pillboxes. The attacks were successful and the Chinese claimed 147 enemy killed in the past two days.

Chinese troops taking enemy strongpoints in the besieged city of Tengchung have discovered the first instances of Japanese suicides on the Salween River front. A report from General Stilwell's headquarters said that one Japanese soldier took his life by shooting and another by hanging.

In northern Burma, patrols of the 36th British Division yesterday reached the village of Kyagyigon, more than half-way to Pinbaw and Hopin along the railway, said a communique from Kandy.

HEAVY BOMBERS HIT PHILIPPINES

ADVANCED AFHQ, NEW GUINEA, September 3 — The first heavy bomber raid on the Philippines since 1942 was reported in today's communique from General MacArthur's headquarters.

Allied heavy bombers dropped more than 100 tons of bombs on Davao airfields, causing considerable damage to runways, hangars and other military targets. Twentysix Japanese fighters and 11 bombers were destroyed on the ground. One Japanese fighter was destroyed in the air and two Allied heavy bombers were shot down by anti-aircraft fire.

Six hundred miles to the east, an even heavier raid was made on the key Japanese base of Palau, where Liberators dropped 137 tons of high explosive bombs on the airfield and waterfront installation. Large fires and explosions were caused. One Liberator failed to return.

Other Allied aircraft operated over a wide area including the Molucca Sea, where night patrols sank or severely damaged five freighters of about 1,000 tons each, and seven barges.

In less than a week, 28 Japanese ships and 50 barges have been destroyed or damaged in southwest Pacific waters. (OWI-Reuter)

PEACE PLANS IN FINLAND

STOCKHOLM, September 3 — The Finnish capital of Helsinki was quiet today following the break with Germany yesterday, the Swedish radio reported tonight.

It was stated that the Finnish peace delegation is preparing to leave for Moscow within the next few days to resume armistice discussions with the Russians, now that the Finns have taken the preliminary step of asking Germany to remove her troops from Finnish soil.

The dramatic Finnish announcement was made late last night in a radio address by Premier Antti Hackzell, in which he said, «It is becoming more and more obvious that Germany, to overcome her present difficult situation, must limit the field of her military operations and use the forces at her disposal to defend the homeland.»

BULGARIANS HOPE FOR EARLY PEACE

LONDON, September 3 — The Bulgarian Home Radio said yesterday that the new Bulgarian government formed around Premier Constantine Muraviev was believed to be «quite satisfactory» to the Allies and predicted an early resumption of peace negotiations in Cairo. Earlier negotiations there between Bulgaria and the United States and Britain were interrupted by the resignation of Premier Bagrianov.

The English-language Moscow News said editorially today that Bulgaria must enter the fight against Germany. The paper added: «The smashing of German defences in the south has created every opportunity for severing connection with Hitlerite Germany and turning against her.»

«Bulgarian rulers have perhaps decided that if they hide their heads in a hood labeled "neutrality" they will be able at one fell swoop to cover up all their sins, continue to deceive the people and, at the same time, nurse hopes of continuing to serve their old masters in Berlin. There is no time for such games. It is time to make the decision.»

In a broadcast last night the retiring Bulgarian Prime Minister, Bagrianov, said Bulgarians were dragged into the war against their will. As a result of the new situation which has arisen in the Balkans, he said, internal difficulties in Bulgaria have increased and indicated that his government resigned to facilitate clearing up of these difficulties in the interest of the Bulgarian nation. GREEK UNITY CABINET COMPLETE

CAIRO, September 3 — The Greek National Unity Cabinet was yesterday reported to be complete with the swearing in of five left-wing Ministers who arrived from Greece.

The new cabinet members, who took their oath of office before Prince Paul in the absence of King George, are: Professor Alexandor Svolos, Minister of Finance; Nicholas Askoutis, Communications Minister; Ilcas Tsirimokos, Minister of National Economy; J. Zevgos, Minister of Agriculture and Miltiades Porphyrogenis, Minister of Labor. Professor A. Angelopoulos was sworn in as Under Secretary of State for Finance. (Reuter)

LIST OF FRENCH QUISLINGS GROWS

LONDON, September 3 — Several prominent financial, judicial and military figures were among the Vichy collaborationists listed by the BBC last night as among those recently interned in France or removed from their functions.

The financiers include Rearé de Boisanger, Governor of the Bank of France; Jardel, Sub-Director of the Credits Fonciers; Ecovin, Collector-General of Taxes; Doufflace, Assistant Director of the Central Finance Administration; Chelepetre, Director of Economic Documentation for Direct Taxation; Francis Nillion, assessor of the Audits Court.

From judicial circles, the following were arrested: Jean Charles Legrand and Juliette Coubiecq, advocates at the Court of Appeals; Delile, President of the State Tribunal; Corvize, counselor at the Court of Cassation; Demoujane, Advocate-General at the Court of Cassation.

The military figures named by the BBC were General Herbillon, Vice Admiral Gouzelmo and Admiral de Laborde. (UNN)

STOCKHOLM, September 3 — The Finnish capital of Helsinki was quiet today following the break with Germany yesterday, the Swedish radio reported tonight.

It was stated that the Finnish peace delegation is preparing to leave for Moscow within the next few days to resume armistice discussions with the Russians, now that the Finns have taken the preliminary step of asking Germany to remove her troops from Finnish soil.

The dramatic Finnish announcement was made late last night in a radio address by Premier Antti Hackzell, in which he said, « It is becoming more and more obvious that Germany, to overcome her present difficult situation, must limit the field of her military operations and use the forces at her disposal to defend the homeland. »

Before Russia would entertain Finland's peace delegations it was stated that the Finns must first have all German forces removed from their boundaries. The Finnish government then asked the German military authorities in Finland to evacuate their troops before September 15, to which the Germans agreed, it was stated in last night's announcement.

A BBC broadcast late tonight said that German troops in northern Finland would probably be transferred to Norway, while those in southern part of the country would be evacuated through the Baltic. To date there has been no German comment on Finland's decision to quit the war as a partner of the Nazis.

According to the Suomen Sosialdemokraatti, the great majority of the nation had expected the Government's action. (OWI)

NEWS DROPPED TO ALLIED POW

LONDON, September 3 — Allied prisoners of war in Japanese hands are receiving news of the western front by air, the BBC reported today. The Liberators which attacked railways in southern Siam last Monday dropped thousands of leaflets telling British and Australian prisoners of the liberation of Paris.

During the trip airmen added late news, and their own comments in pencil. (BBC)

GREEK UNITY CABINET COMPLETE

CAIRO, September 3 — The Greek National Unity Cabinet was yesterday reported to be complete with the swearing in of five left-wing Ministers who arrived from Greece.

The new cabinet members, who took their oath of office before Prince Paul in the absence of King George, are: Professor Alexander Svolos, Minister of Finance; Nicholas Askoutis, Communications Minister; Ilias Tsirimokos, Minister of National Economy; J. Zevgos, Minister of Agriculture and Militades Porphyrogenis, Minister of Labor. Professor A. Angelopoulos was sworn in as Under Secretary of State for Finance. (Reuter)

LIST OF FRENCH QUISLINGS GROWS

LONDON, September 3 — Several prominent financial, judicial and military figures were among the Vichy collaborationists listed by the BBC last night as among those recently interned in France or removed from their functions.

The financiers include Beard de Boisanger, Governor of the Bank of France; Jardel, Sub-Director of the Credits Fonciers; Ecorin; Collector-General of Taxes; Dauffiace, Assistant Director of the Central Finance Administration; Chelepretre, Director of Economic Documentation for Direct Taxation; Francis Nilson, assessor of the Audits Court.

From judicial circles, the following were arrested: Jean Charles Legrand and Juliette Coublecq, advocates at the Court of Appeals; Delile, President of the State Tribunal; Corvise, counselor at the Court of Cassation; Deniaujane, Advocate-General at the Court of Cassation.

The military figures named by the BBC were General Herbillion, Vice Admiral Goussignac and Admiral de Laborde. (UNN)

VICHY LAWS ABOLISHED

PARIS, September 3 — All Vichy laws are now abolished in liberated France, a French correspondent said today. The laws abolished include the Vichy « Labor Charter », and the so-called « Corporations of Professions and families. » All special and local committees which had to do with enforcement of the labor charter were ordered to cease operations immediately. SUPPLIES FOR PRISONERS IN JAPAN

WASHINGTON, September 3 — Arrangements have been made for a Japanese ship to enter a Soviet port near Vladivostok to take on 1,500 tons of accumulated relief supplies for American and other Allied prisoners of war and civilian internees held by Japan, the U.S. State Department announced today.

The United States government has agreed to pay all costs connected with the transportation of these supplies to Japan, and has told the Japanese government it would be willing to reciprocate in distributing relief supplies sent by Japan for Japanese nationals in United States custody.

The present arrangement applies only to one boat, but the Japanese Government is being urged to accept further shipments overland through the Soviet Union and Korea or Manchuria, in case it should refuse to utilize the port near Vladivostok in the future.

«The United States government, for its part, has urged the Japanese Government to use this means by which we can make regular and continuous shipments of supplemental food stuffs, medicines and clothing,» the State Department added. (OWI)

ROOSEVELT LAUDS AMERICAN LABOR

WASHINGTON, September 3 — The greatest production achievement in the world's history was made possible by the determination of American labor to «safeguard liberty and to preserve their American heritage for coming generations,» President Roosevelt said in his annual Labor Day statement. He said: «American workers can observe this Labor Day in the proud knowledge that in the battle for production their free labor is triumphing over slave labor. Our soldiers, sailors and Marines are carrying on an amazing offensive all over the world. They are doing it with the finest weapons in the world — made possible only by the unwavering loyalty and unflagging resolution of the workers and managers of our industries.»

Stating that the battle lines in Italy, France and the Pacific were greatly dependent on the production miracle of labor, management and farmers, President Roosevelt said, «We now have the enemy on the run. Yet we must face the prospect that the hardest fighting and the biggest job of supply are still ahead of us. Our needs of the products of our industries, mines and farms are as urgent as ever.

«Our immediate job is victory and that will require the fullest utilization of our manpower in the production of the necessary weapons of war. American labor can be depended on to continue to devote itself primarily to that task.»

In the solution of post-war problems, — President Roosevelt said, the continued cooperation of free American workers and farmers will be needed.

«Once the forces of tyranny have been overcome, we shall be faced with difficult problems of transition from war to peace. There will be matters of international arrangements as well as internal economic and political problems which will affect our success in attaining a durable world peace — a peace which will contribute to the progress of mankind and will give to all who work and produce the opportunity constantly to better their own lives.» (OWI)

LUXEMBOURG PATRIOTS FIGHT

LONDON, September 3 — Luxembourg Patriots have joined Belgian Patriot forces in the Ardennes Forest, said a BBC broadcast yesterday.

The broadcast added: «The Belgian labor newspaper Le Peuple de Belgique has called upon union socialists in the Underground movement to obey the instructions of the Allied Supreme Command stating that the time for military action has come.» (OWI)

GESTAPO MASSACRED MAQUIS YOUTHS

NEW YORK, September 3 — The story of the massacre of members of the Maquis in Grenoble, before the city's liberation, was told today in a dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune. The massacre was discovered two days ago when a cloud-burst caused the earth over a mass grave to settle, and a young girl leading cows across a park saw a wedding ring flashing in the muck at the bottom of a bomb-crater.

The dispatch said the Gestapo rounded up Maquis suspects during the closing weeks of Grenoble's occupation by sounding an air raid siren and then hunting for suspicious groups of men remaining in the streets.

«No-one knew what happened after the Maquis men reached Gestapo headquarters,» the dispatch continued, «but on August 12 the Nazis marched them to the artillery park along with several deserters.

They were ordered to stand at the edge of two huge bomb craters. Then the Gestapo executioners blazed away with sub-machine guns. The victims toppled backward into the craters. Gestapo men tossed a couple of grenades into the pits before filling the holes with dirt. Then they drove a herd of cattle over the fresh dirt until it was crushed solid.»

German prisoners with picks, shovels and rubber gloves were set to unearthing the victims. The earth was removed from the bodies of three Maquis Patriots and six Poles and Czechoslovakian deserters. Nearby, in rough pine coffins, lay 23 Maquis youths removed from another pit two days earlier. (OWI)

FFI CAPTURE 2000 NAZIS

ALGIERS, September 3 — The FFI have intensified their attacks in all sectors lying in the path of the Allied advances, said an announcement issued at General Koenig's headquarters last night.

These attacks on German columns and garrisons have been particularly heavy in the Pas de Calais area, in the Ardennes and the Massif of the Argonne. The most important centers of these regions are reported to have been cleared of the enemy.

In the Haute Marne Department, the announcement said, the FFI have liberated the towns of Auberive and Arc-en-Barrois. Southeast of this area, the Germans have been driven from the Jura Department.

Most important FFI success reported in western France was the liberation of Angoulême, a rail center town about 70 miles northeast of Bordeaux.

PORT OF NAPLES CITED

WASHINGTON, September 3 — The port of Naples, which was systematically destroyed by the Germans a year ago, has become one of the foremost Allied military ports, the War Department announced here tonight.

The speed and efficiency of the reconstruction of the harbor was so successful that in the six-month period from October, 1943, to April, 1944, the port handled 2,375,229 tons of cargo, a figure just short of the peace-time record.

Every berth, pier and quay in the port had been crippled by the Germans and all throughfares, railway lines and passages in the port area had been blocked with rubble. Sewer and water lines had been demolished. Ships had been scuttled.

The War Department announcement stated that Transportation Corps port battalions are unloading daily four times as much as experts estimated could be unloaded there under war-time conditions. (OWI)

LABOR DELEGATES IN NAPLES

NAPLES, September 3 — A delegation of American and British trade union representatives arrived here yesterday to meet representatives of Italian trade unions. Most important FFI success reported in western France was the liberation of Angoulême, a rail center town about 70 miles northeast of Bordeaux.

Last night's announcement from the Algiers headquarters of General Cochet, military delegate for the southern France zone, revealed that on August 30 and 31 an FFI unit captured 2000 German officers and men, as well as large quantities of war equipment, in a series of attacks on retreating German columns in the Ardeche and Loire Departments. Another action mentioned in General Cochet's statement was a commando raid by six FFI men which preceded the capture of the town of Foix, southwest France town near the Spanish border.

A press dispatch from Lausanne today said that the FFI who recently captured the city of Annemasse, on the Franco-Swiss frontier, came upon a list of payments made by the Nazis to French collaborationists. The Gestapo, either by accident or design, omitted to destroy it. (Reuter)

POLISH PREMIER PRAISES WARSAW DEFENDERS

LONDON, September 3 — Polish Premier Mikolajczyk, speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting System yesterday on the anniversary of the German attack on Poland, said that Polish troops were fighting courageously on nearly all fronts.

«None are fighting with greater loyalty and courage to the homeland and the Allied cause than those battling in the ruins of Warsaw,» the Premier stated.

MEDITERRANEAN ALLIED AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, ITALY — A large part of yesterday's operations by tactical aircraft was closely co-ordinated with the ground offensive.

Medium and light bombers attacked enemy positions in the Goth Line. Fighter-Bombers and fighters were also active against strong points, gun positions and other close support targets in the Italian battle area.

Other medium bombers attacked railroad bridges in the central Po valley, while fighter-bombers attacked pontoon bridges over the Po, roads in the area between Modena and Rimini, and shipping off the northwest coast of Italy.

In southern France, although hampered by bad weather, fighter-bombers carried out attacks against rail communications in the Lyons area. Medium forces of heavy bombers continued the offensive against Balkan communications by attacking rail yards at Nis and Kraljevo and three bridges in the Same area of Yugoslavia. Fighters made strafing attacks on rail lines and roads in the Nis-Belgrade district, destroying a considerable amount of rolling stock and motor transport.

Last night our bombers attacked the rail yards at Ferrara.

In these operations, two enemy aircraft were destroyed, 20 of ours are missing.

ADVANCE AFHQ, Sept. 3 — Today's communique:

Allied armies in Italy:

The advance of the Allied armies in Italy continues. In spite of all endeavors by the enemy, troops of the 8th Army have considerably enlarged their breach through the Goth Line and have captured Pesaro, the eastern bastion of the enemy defences.

British and Canadian troops after very severe fighting are within three miles of the coastal town of Cattolica.

West of Florence, the 5th Army's attack has made rapid progress. American troops, having forced their way into the historic city of Pisa, are now over four miles north of this city while big advances have also been made into the high ground north of the River Arno.

Seventh Army:

American and French forces of the 7th Army are closing in on Lyon from three sides and threatening the enemy withdrawal routes north of the city.

On the east bank of the Rhone, American forward elements met with German resistance some three miles south of Lyon. The town of Vienne has been occupied.

Northeast of Lyon, our troops have crossed the Ain River and have clashed with enemy forces screening the withdrawal routes up the Saone Valley and northeast toward Bourg-en-Presse.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE HQ, AAI, September 3 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

Patriot activity behind the German lines increased as a result of the breakthrough of the Goth Line on a wide front. Enemy communications were subjected to continuous attacks.

Patriots of the Genoa region control the port of Diano Marina. Patriots of the Piedmont sector are engaged in fierce fighting against detachments of German troops who are attempting to keep open the highway which leads through Val D'Aosta to the Piccolo San Bernardo pass. The Piedmontese Committee of National Liberation, composed of well-armed and well-disciplined men, extended its control over other regions. Many workmen from Genoa and Savona joined Patriot units.

Large-scale fighting continues in the Emilian Apennines. In spite of enemy superiority in men and materiel, Patriots maintained control over the localities under attack, withdrawing only after contesting bitterly each foot of ground. In other sectors Patriots were successful in forcing the Fascists to retire in disorder, and inflicting heavy casualties.

Patriot losses were considerable. Among the fallen heroes was Vladimiro Bersani, commander of one of the Garibaldi Brigades operating in the Piacenza sector, noted for his daring and unrelenting anti-Fascist faith. When a new commander was chosen, the Garibaldi Brigade went back to the front lines. The «Justice and Liberty» Brigade distinguished itself in fighting during the first half of August.

Large-scale fighting took place in the region between Saluzzo and Cuneo toward the middle of August. The Garibaldi Brigades, with the help of Allied Air Forces, vigorously attacked enemy positions and concentrations of troops.

All electric lines supplying the city of Turin are controlled by Patriots, who are in a position to disrupt them at will. Important industries in Turin working for the Wehrmacht had to stop work. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 3 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In northern France, enemy attempts at crossing the Somme near Abbeville were frustrated. Yesterday, particularly heavy fighting raged north of Douai, north-east of Rethel and north of Sedan. The garrison of the fortress of Brest also yesterday repulsed all attacks of the Americans who were forced to reinforce their formations severely mauled during the past few days by fresh troops. Minor local penetrations in the forefield of fortifications were sealed off. The enemy suffered particularly heavy losses in bloody fighting. Alone in front of one of our companies, 150 enemy dead were counted.

On the march through the Rhone Valley toward the north, our troops passed through Lyon according to plan. Strong enemy attacks from the east were warded off by our troops on the flanks. One enemy battalion was annihilated.

During the night of September 2 patrol vessels of our Navy under the fire of English long-range guns repulsed numerous attacks by enemy E-boats and fighter-bombers, in the Pas de Calais. In these operations, one enemy E-boat was sunk and four enemy fighter-bombers shot down. One of our vessels was lost, and two others were damaged.

After five weeks of bitter fighting against enemy forces many times superior, the heroic garrison of the naval battery Ile de Cécembre under the command of the First Lieutenant of the reserve naval artillery Seuss, succumbed to the enemy superiority after the last usable arms and positions have been smashed by uninterrupted air attacks and ceaseless naval artillery fire.

In Italy, the enemy with the greatest employment of artillery and tanks continued his large-scale attacks on the Adriatic coast on a front 20 kilometers wide. Fighting was particularly fierce on the coastal road, north-west of Pesaro, in which enemy naval artillery also intervened. In unprecedented steadfastness our divisions yesterday prevented the enemy from breaking through toward north-west. Fifty-five enemy tanks were shot up.

In the southern and eastern Carpathians, fierce Soviet attacks were again repulsed.

On the remainder of the Eastern Front, there was greater fighting only north-east of Warsaw, where all Bolshevist attempts at breaking through were frustrated yesterday. Thirty-five enemy tanks were destroyed. The old city of Warsaw was completely cleared of insurgents following fierce fighting.

Battlepanes attacking a Rumanian airport destroyed eleven planes on the ground and a large hangar.

AMERICANS ENTER BELGIUM IN SWIFT THRUST

SHAEF, September 2 — American troops under the command of Lieut. General Courtney Hodges drove twin spearheads into Belgium today at 1100 hours, it was reported late tonight by an Associated Press correspondent.

In a drive northward, apparently from Laon, the American troops captured Maubeuge, France, five miles from the Belgian border, and continued their advance northward to capture the Belgian city of Tournai. They are now 25 miles east of the British 2nd Army, who were last reported at Lens.

The battle for Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany has begun.

Allied armor and troops are advancing swiftly, against no German resistance, along a 250-mile front from St. Valery on the coast to Verdun.

The German border via Metz and Saarbrucken is rapidly being approached by General George Patton's 3rd Army, which is racing toward the Moselle River through battlegrounds made famous a quarter of a century ago by American victories over the same enemy. The German air force last night showered high explosives on newly liberated Verdun, and the city is still smoking, it was reported tonight.

days, but they were given no time to dispose their forces. They left intact concrete fortifications, gun positions, strongpoints, supply dumps, and airfields. Hitler's armies have lost their communications and their leadership — they are rushing back to a defeated Germany.

To the rear of the advancing Armies, the Canadian Army has reached the Somme River near Abbeville, after capturing three bridges and isolating all Nazi resistance pockets to the south. There are not many German troops left in the triangle bounded by Abbeville, le Treport, and the Somme. At Abbeville, they are fighting only scattered rearguard actions. Polish units continued to drive eastward and are tonight just west of the city. Other units are strung back along the road from Abbeville to Neufchâtel.

British Near Le Havre

Farther back, British troops with the Canadian Army have thrust reconnaissance units through Le Havre Peninsula from Etretat on the coast to Harfleur on the Seine, just short of the great Atlantic port. At least one German regiment is believed to be entrenched in the port to protect demolitions being carried out on the dockside. Belgian units which had been advancing toward Le Havre have now left the Canadian Army, their destination undisclosed.

The last of the enemy troops south of the Seine in the Rouen area have been eliminated.

In the central sector there is heavy fighting in progress in the Forêt de Compiègne, the only German resistance met in the entire Allied advance. These German units, however, are engulfed by the rapid advances of the British and American armies.

Northeast of Laon, the American 1st Army has advanced 18 miles and liberated Montcornet on the Serre River. The shuttle service of trucks racing backward and forward to the front is bringing up infantry and supplies. Troops march for two days, 20 miles daily, then on the third day they are taken in trucks, giving them a rest before they reach the front.

Meanwhile, the Germans are still holding out in the Brittany ports of Brest, St. Nazaire, and Lorient. German forces at Brest are estimated at 20,000, with 11,000 at Lorient and nearly 10,000 at St. Nazaire.

Off the Brest Peninsula, the German garrison on the Isle of Cezembre has capitulated. The enemy strongpoint was previously able to dominate the entire St. Malo harbor.

ALLIES REPORTED 15 MILES FROM REICH

LONDON, September 2 — The German News Agency today reported fighting near the borders of Luxembourg at Thionville and at Longwy. Thionville is some 20 miles north of Metz, and but 15 miles from the German frontier. Longwy is some 40 miles northwest of Metz, and five miles from the Luxembourg frontier. No confirmation of such an advance has been issued by Allied headquarters. (Reuter)

WAR FRONTS

AMERICANS ENTER BELGIUM IN SWIFT THRUST

SHAEF, September 2 — American troops under the command of Lieut. General Courtney Hodges drove twin spearheads into Belgium today at 1100 hours, it was reported late tonight by an Associated Press correspondent.

In a drive northward, apparently from Laon, the American troops captured Maubeuge, France, five miles from the Belgian border, and continued their advance northward to capture the Belgian city of Tournai. They are now 25 miles east of the British 2nd Army, who were last reported at Lens.

The battle for Belgium, Luxembourg, and Germany has begun.

Allied armor and troops are advancing swiftly, against no German resistance, along a 250-mile front from St. Valery on the coast to Verdun.

The German border on Metz and Saarbrucken is rapidly being approached by General George Patton's 3rd Army, which is racing toward the Moselle River through battlegrounds made famous a quarter of a century ago by American victories over the same enemy. The German air force just night showered high explosives on newly liberated Verdun, and the city is still smoking, it was reported tonight.

British at Vimy Ridge

The British 2nd Army has swept through Arras, battleground of the last war, and has fanned out 20 miles to the northwest to liberate Fernes; to the north to the city of Lens; to the east to the Vimy Ridge on the road to Douai, the scene of a great Canadian triumph in the spring of 1918; and to the southeast, to approach Cambrai. They are within 18 miles of Armentieres and Lille.

Canadian troops and the Scottish 51st Highland Division, who roared into Dieppe yesterday to avenge the united raid of 19 August 1942, and found themselves involved in a battle of flowers, have advanced beyond Le Treport and are now in the city of St. Valery, at the mouth of the Somme River. They are probing almost at will in pursuit of German stragglers hitch-hiking back to the Siegfried Line.

Belgian, Dutch, and Polish units are side-by-side with the other Allies in driving the enemy back to Germany.

It is General Eisenhower's aim to get through German frontier defenses before any part of the survivors of the Wehrmacht in the west can get back to man the defenses of the Siegfried Line. It is every German soldier for himself in a desperate effort to escape. There are no more German army orders, corps commands, divisional instructions. The utter German confusion has left Belgium, Holland, and Luxembourg wide open for the Allies. There is no front.

Dazed, disorganized, and utterly bewildered German troops are being captured in all sectors — some heading toward Reims, some toward Paris. In the Aisne River area, the Germans might have delayed the Allied advance for west of the city. Other units are racing [illegible] from Abbeville to Neufchâtel.

FINNS ASK WITHDRAWAL OF NAZI TROOPS

LONDON, September 2 — Finnish Premier Antti Hackzell announced over Radio Helsinki tonight that his government has asked the Germans to withdraw from Finland. He said the Germans have agreed to do so.

MOSQUITOES BOMB BREMEN

LONDON, September 2 — Lancasters of RAF Bomber Command today dropped their bomb-loads on German shipping in Brest harbor.

Last night, RAF Mosquito bombers concentrated on targets in the northwestern German port of Bremen. Returning without loss, they left large fires blazing in this great German port, where some 49 Weser warehouses and three-quarters of the Atlas Werke shipbuilding yards were destroyed only a fortnight ago.

Other Mosquitoes during the night carried out a series of low-level attacks on rail, road, and canal communications in France, Belgium, and Germany, already bombed and strafed by fighters and fighter-bombers of 8th and 9th USAAF in daylight attacks this week. The low-flying night Mosquitoes spread confusion among the retreating German armies in northern France, shot up rail cars and trucks, and scored hits on 22 canal barges. Nine locomotives were destroyed on the Kaiserslauten-Saarbrucken railway line near Brussels.

Night-flying Mosquitoes of one base defense group of the 2nd TAF are now based in France, it was revealed today. Among the tasks allotted to them is the defense of Paris, as well as the defense of Allied armies and shipping.

Night fighting has now become so accurate through a new secret method in Allied hands that in the 12 weeks since D-day, night-fighting Mosquitoes of one base-defense group alone have destroyed 174 enemy aircraft over the battle area.

By this new method, the aircraft are controlled direct from the ground station. The controller can watch the path of the enemy bomber and the night fighter on a single piece of apparatus, and then give the fighter their relative positions. When the fighter is brought to within sighting distance of the bomber, the ground controller cooperates to achieve a kill.

65 Airfields Captured

More than 65 airfields formerly occupied by the German airforce in northern France have been captured as the Allies advanced through Brittany and Normandy and entered Paris. Approximately 25 other German-held airfields, in southern France near the Riviera coast, have either been captured or made untenable because Allied troops are too near.

No German flying-bombs have been reported over southern England either last night or today, but an Air Ministry announcement this morning reported the appearance of a new type of offensive weapon over England during the night. This was believed to be the lower component of a composite aircraft, released by the pilot controlling the aircraft from the upper part. Two of these aircraft caused little damage and no casualties. According to an Associated Press dispatch, the aircraft were of a type similar to those previously reported to have been used by the Germans in northern France, without success.

Details were announced today of 8th USAAF heavy-bomber activities during the month of August, and results of recent attacks by British and American bombers over German ports and industrial cities.

The 8th USAAF flew 22,700 heavy-bomber sorties in attacks on 26 German aircraft factories, 26 enemy oil plants, and 80 Nazi aerodromes in Germany, France, and the Low Countries. During these sorties, they dropped 47,500 tons of bombs.

8th USAAF headquarters, announcing these figures, added that during August they destroyed 631 German fighter planes, disabled 2,225 locomotives, destroyed or damaged 14,750 rail cars, and accounted for thousands of motor vehicles. The 8th USAAF lost 222 heavy bombers and 207 fighters in [illegible]

ENEMY SHIPS IN CHANNEL BLASTED

LONDON, September 2 — Three groups of German vessels attempting to break out of French Channel ports threatened by the advancing Allied armies were attacked by Allied warships late last night and early this morning.

Two enemy escort vessels were sunk, another is believed sunk, and numerous E-boats were hit.

A joint British and Netherlands communique announcing this said tonight that the German vessels were intercepted by light coastal forces of the Royal Navy, the Royal Canadian Navy, and the Royal Netherlands Navy.

Shortly before midnight, motor torpedo boats engaged a number of E-boats in the vicinity of Boulogne. They obtained numerous hits.

Light coastal forces of the Royal Netherlands Navy intercepted a small convoy off Blanc Nez, between Boulogne and Calais, and sank two escort vessels.

Soon afterward, a third group of enemy vessels was engaged off Calais by British motor torpedo boats. One of the enemy vessels was hit by torpedoes and is considered sunk. (Reuter)

NAZI CROSS-CHANNEL GUNS IN ACTION

LONDON, September 2 — Shells from German cross-Channel batteries exploded in the vicinity of Dover during the night. The warning lasted four hours, and the Germans fired between 100 and 150 rounds.

CHURCHILL PRAISES R.A.F. COASTAL COMMAND

LONDON, September 2 — Prime Minister Churchill, in a message to Air Chief Marshal Sir Sholto Douglas, commander-in-chief of the RAF Coastal Command, today congratulated all officers and men of the Command on their splendid work during the last three months. He said:

In spite of all the hazards of weather, and in the face of bitter opposition from the armament of enemy U-boats and escort vessels, your squadrons have played a vital part in making possible the great operations now going forward in France.

Working in close concord with the Allied navies, they have protected so effectively the host of landing craft and merchant vessels that the enemy U-boat campaign against them has proved a complete and costly failure. Many U-boats have been sunk or 'badly dropped' in these operations, in which squadrons of the RAF, of the Fleet Air Arm, of the United States Navy, and of the air forces of the Dominions and of our European Allies have all played their part. GERMANS FLOODING LOW COUNTRIES

LONDON, September 2 — The Germans have begun to flood large areas of the Low Countries, the BBC stated this afternoon. Previously, Allied airmen, returning from reconnaissance, had reported large floods between Antwerp and Rotterdam.

A few days ago the Dutch Government made its attitude very clear to the Nazis on the question of flooding. Their spokesman said, in part:

If Germany wantonly destroys so great a part of Holland's soil that it affects, for a long time, the possibility of its nine million people's living decently, it may be necessary to consider the cession, on behalf of Holland of an equivalent portion of German territory. (BBC)

Interpretation of reconnaissance photographs today revealed that Fortresses of the 8th USAAF virtually wiped out a highly important modern armament plant and a large radio factory at Weimar, southeast of Leipzig, on August 24, and also destroyed 11 headquarters office buildings and nine barracks adjoining the plants.

The great German naval port of Kiel, attacked five times in three weeks by British and American heavy bombers, sustained heavy damage to docks and industrial areas along the waterside, according to air reconnaissance photographs. The Air Ministry said that the naval arsenal, the headquarters and commander-in-chief's office, a naval barracks, and a gunnery school were all hit. Particularly heavy damage was done to the Deutsche Werke shipbuilding yards. (Reuter)

NAZIS ADMIT BATTLE OF FRANCE IS LOST

LONDON, September 2 — Captain Ludwig Sertorius, Nazi High Command spokesman and Berlin radio commentator, said today:

« The German High Command has made up its mind not to give battle in northern France. The withdrawal has been speeded up. »

Hitler's own newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, had this to say:

« There was not enough time to produce sufficient forces at the critical hour. The German High Command must not aim at helping German divisions now engaged in heavy battles in France. »

Said General Guderian, chief of the German General Staff:

« We are determined to keep the enemy from setting foot on German soil. » (OWI)

PLANES DROP LEAFLETS ON GERMAN TROOPS

HALF THE FLYING-BOMBS NEVER REACHED ENGLAND

LONDON, September 2 — The effectiveness of the flying-bombs failed German expectations, the correspondent for the London Daily Mail reported from France. Their main weakness is the very high proportion which fail to take to the air successfully, he said.

In Rouen, French citizens who have seen flying bombs launched said that about half never succeeded in crossing the Channel. Some would fly up into the air and then abruptly dive straight down and explode. Others swooped around in circles, eventually descending in the same manner.

A large proportion of those which do take off have been seen shot down by Allied fighters over France.

In short, the correspondent said, the V-1 was launched prematurely, which is an indication of the importance that Hitler attached to the necessity of obtaining quick successes that could be exploited as morale lifters among the German people. (Reuter)

BELGIAN MISSION READY TO ENTER HOMELAND

LONDON, September 2 — A Belgian military mission will be attached to the Allied troops when they enter Belgium, Belgian government officials announced yesterday.

LONDON, September 2 — The Belgian people were urged by the Belgian Government in London last night to aid the Patriot movement and at the same time maintain strict discipline and adherence to instructions reaching them through the channels of the Resistance organization.

FRENCH RESISTANCE INCREASES AHEAD OF ALLIES GERMAN OBSTRUCTIONISTS IN PARIS

LONDON, September 2 — Guerilla fighting between the French Forces of the Interior and the fleeing Germans has increased in all sectors in the path of the Allied advance toward Belgium, Luxemburg, and Germany.

The fighting has flared up particularly, said General Koenig's communique tonight, in the Pas de Calais terrain of the flying-bomb sites, and in the Ardenne and Argonne mountains on the way to the Low Countries and northwestern Germany. Here, ever-widening zones have been liberated.

General Dempsey reported that units of the FFI helped in the liberation of Harsaume and Albert, northeast of Amiens.

East of Troyes, resistance troops took Arc-en-Barrois and Auberive.

Canadian Paratroopers

French forces have pushed the Germans back completely from the Jura and the region south of the Doubs River. Reports from the Franco-Swiss frontier stated that Canadian parachute troops have been dropped to reinforce the FFI speaking Germans left behind when the main German army moved out. These Germans form a new kind of suicide battalion, created to hamper mopping-up operations and the organization of new administrative services.

These troops were carefully chosen from Germans who could speak French well enough to pass for Frenchmen, and were given civilian registration cards and civilian clothes. They are believed to have insinuated themselves so cleverly into the general pattern of Paris life that it will take many months of careful investigation to find them. (OWI-Reuter)

INTERNATIONAL RED CROSS ON MAQUIS

LONDON, September 2 — Events in France and other European countries have led the International Red Cross Committee in Geneva to issue the following statement today on the position of members of the Maquis and similar forces made prisoners of war:

The International Red Cross Committee in Geneva has always maintained that the principles of international law and of humanity should be respected and applied, even under very special conditions of war.

All persons who conform to the laws and customs of war, who have at their head a person responsible for their behavior, and who wear a sign which can be distinguished at a distance, are to be treated as regular prisoners of war if and when they fall into the hands of the enemy. It is recommended that their medical corps be respected as such. (PWB)

PARIS SPARED BOMBING DAMAGE

WASHINGTON, September 2 — American and British bombers have flown over and around Paris hundreds of times, but have never loosed explosives on the city proper, said a dispatch from the AP in Paris yesterday.

The dispatch said Allied planes dropped their loads only on military targets — the big railroad yards, airfields, the vast Renault motor works, and its subsidiary plants in the Paris suburbs.

The last big Allied attack on the approaches to Paris took place shortly after D-day, the AP said, when U. S. 8th Air Force heavy bombers caught the Villeneuve St. Georges yards jammed with cars as the Nazis started a frantic rush of supplies to the Normandy front. Extensive damage was caused there and at other railway junctions. Several main lines were blasted from time to time.

The heart of Paris, around the Eiffel Tower, was never touched, said the dispatch. Few, if any, of the historic buildings suffered any damage from air attacks. (OWI)

MARSEILLES, September 2 — Admiral de Laborde, commander-in-chief of the French naval base at Toulon in November, 1942, when the Germans invaded the then unoccupied portion of France, has been placed under house arrest on orders of French authorities, according to a dispatch to Reuter today.

The Admiral is alleged to be involved in the scuttling of the French fleet lying in the Toulon harbor, thus preventing its escape to join the Free French. (Reuter)

French forces have pushed the Germans back completely from the Jura and the region south of the Doubs River. Reports from the Franco-Swiss frontier stated that Canadian parachute troops have been dropped to reinforce the FFI in the area of Pontarlier, halfway between Belfort and Lake Geneva.

In Savoie, resistance forces have advanced down the last valley held by the enemy as far as Saint Jean de Maurienne. This brings them to within 20 crowflight miles of the Italian frontier, on the direct railway through Mont Cenis tunnel to Turin.

In the west, Angoulême has been occupied by the FFI. Angoulême, 70 miles northeast of Bordeaux, lies in area of the 15,000 Germans fleeing to the north. These German fugitives have no petrol and are commandeering all the bicycles they can find in an attempt to reach Alsace-Lorraine. Paris has broadcast instructions to the FFI to hamper the enemy's road and rail communications.

German artillery units from the Nimes area have received orders to return to Germany by their own resources, according to the statements of German prisoners.

Inside liberated Paris, victims of crimes committed by the French collaborationists have been urged to lodge written complaints to speed the punishment of traitors, while in the liberated departments the organization of «patriotic vigilance» committees have been formed to control national safety.

Among the difficulties confronting the Paris security authorities is the tracking down of several thousand French-

5TH ARMY LIBERATES CITY OF PISA
GOTH LINE BREACHED BY 8TH ARMY

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 2 — The city of Pisa was captured today by 5th Army forces, and its patrols have swept on to reach the Serchio River, four miles north of the historic city.

Swiftly-moving 5th Army flanking forces, which were by-passing Pisa to the east, threatened the enemy with encirclement and forced the Germans to evacuate the city. Heretofore, the enemy tried to resist the 5th Army's advance with heavy self-propelled gun fire and artillery.

The Goth Line, extending over 100 miles across the Italian battlefront, and last known enemy prepared defense line south of the Po River, was broken through yesterday by 8th Army troops on a 20-mile front in the Adriatic sector to a depth of three to four miles, it was officially announced today.

Meanwhile, the Allied Armies in Italy made other important gains north of Florence, in the upper Tiber, the Arno and north of Florence, as well as taking the initiative on the western end of the line where 5th Army tanks and infantry in force have crossed the Arno River in several places from the sea to Florence.

Thus, the breaching of the Goth Line marks the conclusion of still another very important phase of the Italian campaign which started on May 11 with the attack on the Gustav Line and in succession broke the Hitler Line, the Valmontone Line, and the line east and west through Lake Trasimeno, where the enemy offered stubborn resistance.

In the breached area, bitter fighting is in progress for the next ridge of high ground north of the Foglia River, about four or five miles behind the Goth Line, with the enemy forced to bring in reinforcements in a desperate effort to stop the Allied advance.

On the east coast, in Pesaro, Polish troops are battling German paratroops along the railway line and north of the Foglia River. Farther west, in the Montecchio area, Allied infantry forces across the river were joined by other tank forces and fought fiercely German tanks which had been rushed up to meet the threat. Still farther inland, bitter fighting continues south of Monte Gridolfo and at Monte Calvo.

The 8th Army advances continued all along the front with our troops pushing well forward onto the slopes of the hill masses across the Arno east of Florence, and reaching the outer fringes of Monte Calvana and Monte Giovi, both approximately 10 miles north and northeast of Florence. To the west of Florence, a flying column has broken through enemy lines to advance across the Arno to a point south of Calenzano.

After a lapse of some time, the 5th Army again took the offensive and early yesterday morning crossed the Arno River at many points and rapidly secured bridgeheads for the passage of armored forces. Along the entire north bank of the river, our troops found many mines.

Other 5th Army forces captured the town of Castelfranco, approximately midway between the west coast and Florence, and then continued northward.

Nearer the coast, Negro troops of the 92nd Infantry Division overcame enemy opposition to cross the river and advance to the southeastern slopes of the dominating Pisano hill mass. Here, the enemy has had excellent observation over the entire western coastal sector.

Still other 5th Army troops of the 100th Infantry Battalion made up of American soldiers of Japanese ancestry moved into the southwestern slopes of the Pisano mass.

Thus, the Allied Armies in Italy have made spectacular strides in all sectors in the last 24 hours of fighting, with the enemy suffering severe losses in men and equipment as compared to very slight Allied losses.

An official report this morning disclosed the full significance of the assault in the Adriatic area. The Goth Line, running as it does here across the Apennine chain, is in the most difficult country of all for attack, and, therefore, the breach is considered an outstanding success and a decisive victory for the Allied Armies.

The skill of the staff work which organized the moving of the troops through extremely difficult hazards, getting them out of various distant and distributed areas to concentrated areas where they unwound themselves and were deployed for attack cannot be overstressed, for it contributed considerably to the Adriatic achievement.

The full-scale attack on the Goth Line started on August 26, when troops of the 8th Army moved swiftly and silently into positions across the Metauro River and at other points along the front, and steadily drove the enemy back to his last prepared position — the Goth Line.

Then, on Thursday, the British, Canadian, New Zealand, South African, Indian, Polish, and Italian troops launched the powerful attack on the Goth Line in the Adriatic sector from Pesaro for 20 miles inland, and at the end of a 24 hour period had made the successful breach in the line. The Allied advances continue. (PRO)

NEW AMERICAN BRIDGEHEADS OVER ARNO

WITH 5TH ARMY, September 2 — Negro troops of General Mark Clark's 5th Army crossed the Arno River at [illegible] between Pisa and Florence yesterday, and the Balkans and the Po Valley, and last night the railway yards at Bologna were bombed.

Other targets in Italy included the Boara Pisani road bridge, 16 miles north of Ferrara, gun positions west of Pesaro, and roads, bridges, guns, and enemy positions in the battle areas.

In Hungary, Mustangs strafed the Debrecsen aerodrome, destroying 56 enemy planes on the ground and damaging many others.

In Yugoslavia, Flying Fortresses and Liberators attacked the rail bridges at Mezgraja, Mitrovica, and Kraljevo, as other fortress formations pounded the Nish airdrome with good results.

Coastal planes bombed enemy shipping in the northern Adriatic, in the gulf of Genoa, and also made successful sweeps over Yugoslavia and Albania. (PRO)

D.A.F. SUPPORTS GROUND FORCES

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 2 — In cracking the enemy Goth Line along the Adriatic sector of the Italian front, the Desert Air Force, long an 8th Army associate in past victories, gave all-out support to the ground forces yesterday.

With the aid of a few American Air Force squadrons, the Desert Air Force yesterday smashed the German defenses in the Goth Line with the full weight of its air power, making a total of about 800 sorties during the day and dropping some 500 tons of bombs. (PRO)

B.A.F. DESTROYS ENEMY RAILWAYS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 2 — Enemy railway targets suffered severe damage yesterday as the Balkan Air Force directed most of its weight on the German supply lines.

A Greek squadron scored hits at Zenica, in Bosnia, and other formations of Mustangs, operating in the Belgrade and Kraljevo area, bombed concentrations of rolling stock, and in addition strafed two goods trains and damaged a number of motor transports.

The Lonjic station, near Sarajevo, and the Brabina station were also successfully bombed by Spitfires.

On the Albania-Serbia border, the Debar Barracks, which have been attacked twice before, were again visited by rocket-firing Beaufighters which scored 18 hits and strafed the area with cannon fire. (PRO)

M.A.A.F. FLEW 56,647 SORTIES DURING AUGUST

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 2 — The tremendous striking power and versatility of the Mediterranean Allied Air Force was demonstrated during the month of August, in which strategical and tactical units flew 56,647 sorties, the majority against targets in southern France, Italy, and the Balkans.

TAF medium, light, and fighter-bombers dropped a total of 19,631 tons of bombs on enemy military objectives while flying more than 38,000 sorties. The fighter-bombers were credited with the destruction of 1,620 enemy motor vehicles, 102 locomotives were damaged, while roads and rail lines were cut in 401 places.

French-flown Marauders and Thunderbolts made 2,919 sorties, attacking communications with more than 1,480 tons of bombs.

Heavies of the 15th AAF flew 11,577 sorties during the month, dropping more than 26,000 tons of bombs. Lightnings and Mustangs on escort missions flew 6,767 sorties, and destroyed 135 enemy planes.

High-altitude bombing was inaugurated and proved

River at many points and rapidly secured bridgeheads for the passage of armored forces. Along the entire north bank of the river, our troops found many mines.

Other 5th Army forces captured the town of Castelfranco, approximately midway between the west coast and Florence, and then continued northward.

Nearer the coast, Negro troops of the 92nd Infantry Division overcame enemy opposition to cross the river and advance to the southeastern slopes of the dominating Pisano hill mass. Here, the enemy has had excellent observation over the entire western coastal sector.

NEW AMERICAN BRIDGEHEADS OVER ARNO

WITH 5TH ARMY, September 2 — Negro troops of General Mark Clark's 5th Army crossed the Arno River at several places between Pisa and Florence yesterday, and established new bridgeheads for armored units. They advanced to a dominating hill mass beyod the river, a special UNN correspondent said today.

The push started just before dawn, and its course lay through heavily mined areas on the opposite bank. Land mines in depth were encountered along canals and drainage ditches as the Negro elements advanced. German prisoners were taken. (UNN)

R. N. AIDS OPERATIONS IN ADRIATIC SECTOR

ADVANCE AFHQ, Italy, September 2 — Two British destroyers, HMS Loyal and Urdine, continue to give gunfire support to the 8th Army right flank operating near Pesaro, it was disclosed today.

Yesterday, the ships fired more than 300 rounds at German batteries, road junctions, and troop concentrations between Pesaro and Cattolica. All targets were well covered, it was stated. (PRO)

MAAF COORDINATES ATTACKS

ADVANCE AFHQ, ITALY, September 2 — Strong forces of 15th AAF escorted heavy bombers, numbering about 750 planes, yesterday attacked enemy military installations in [illegible] yesterday.

Meeting occasional resistance from enemy fighters and flying through generally intense ground fire, the 15th AAF lost 211 heavy bombers and 69 fighters during August. Bomber gunners shot down 127 German aircraft.

TAF also met scattered resistance, destroying 28 enemy planes in the air and many more on the ground during attacks on airfields in France. TAF lost 138 planes. (PRO)

YUGOSLAVS HITTING MAIN BALKAN RAIL LINES

LONDON, September 2 — Yugoslav Army of Liberation units in Serbia have been concentrating lately on key German communications lines which pass through Yugoslavia to various Balkan capitals, official reports disclosed today.

The 22nd Partisan Division have been actively attacking the main lines from Belgrade to Salonika and Sofia, it was stated. In addition, part of the 25th Partisan Division blew up a bridge on the main Sofia rail line where it crosses the Nisava River on the Bulgarian border, holding up traffic for three days. Other sections of the Belgrade-Salonika line have carried no through traffic since August 3, the reports added.

In this sector, it was said, «the Bulgars seem reluctant to give battle.»

Discussing Patriot sabotage of communications in Slovenia, the report pointed out that no attempt had been made to repair the section of railway between Gorizia-Ri-femberga-Trieste, which was destroyed in May of this year when two partisan groups, working at opposite ends, fought their way toward each other reducing garrisons and destroying the line on the way.

German morale in Slavonia is «sinking rapidly,» official sources declared, quoting reliable reports that 10 Domobran and two German anti-aircraft officers were executed recently at Brod for acts of sabotage. (PWB)

AMERICANS 15 MILES FROM LYON

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 2 — American troops today entered Vienne, 15 miles south of Lyon and an important road center, and also captured Beaurepaire, about 12 miles southeast of Vienne, in rapid advances northward on both sides of the Rhône River.

French troops, making swift progress, have passed Montluçon and Tournon.

American and French forces of the 7th Army moved forward yesterday, despite hampering scattered rains, and pursued the retreating enemy in the Rhône Valley south of Lyon.

The rains which fell on Thursday and Friday night added to the difficulties of operations over the extensive area, but the American troops managed to make progress to the northwest from the Grenoble area with some forces reaching beyond Voiron. Meanwhile, French forces passed St. Agrève, about 25 miles west of the Rhône River, making rapid progress against virtually no enemy resistance.

It was officially reported this morning that our troops north of Valence are 150 miles from many of the beaches where they landed 17 days ago, and our other forces beyond Grenoble are even further from their initial landings.

Action on Thursday and Friday in the Rhône Valley sector was largely limited to patrol actions on the east bank, particularly between Tournon and Bourg de Péage.

Reports from air observers and other sources disclosed that the enemy is building up his covering positions south and southeast of Lyon, and that substantial motor movements are taking place north and northeast from Lyon. The reports added that further activity has been noted in the area of the Alpine passes across the Italian frontier.

Prisoners taken in Southern France exceed 55,000. The French have taken 35,000 of these, capturing 15,000 at Marseilles and 10,000 in and near Toulon. (BO)

INFANTRY DIVISION HAS DISTINGUISHED RECORD

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 2 — The United States 3rd Infantry Division made its fourth amphibious landing in this war with two regiments landed at H-hour near Cavalaire-sur-Mer and St. Tropez, on the southern shores of France, on August 15.

This division won fame in the last war and was nicknamed the «Marne Division» by General Pershing.

On 8 November 1942, the «Marne» troops poured ashore on the beaches of North Africa.

On 10 July 1943, the three infantry regiments of the division landed on the beaches of Sicily, to begin the swiftly successful Sicilian campaign, with its beachhead expanded to more than 100 square miles by the end of D-day.

Nettuno came next, and here the «Marne» troops landed at 0300 hours on January 22. Then, after four grueling months on the Anzio beachhead, the division finally smashed the German defenses and captured Cisterna and Cori in three days. By the first of June, they had smashed the fresh Hermann Goering Division to bits.

Later, the division garrisoned and guarded Rome for two weeks.

After landing in southern France, the 3rd slashed ahead [illegible] days took more than 1,000

A small pocket of enemy resistance was cleared out at Olsenitsa (Oltenita), and the town, which lies east of already captured Giurgiu, was taken.

Ground operations on other salients were limited to reconnaissance, the Soviet communique said, adding that 23 German tanks were shot up during the day on all fronts, along with 34 aircraft.

In the air, Russian heavy bombers last night carried out what the communique described as a massive raid on the railway junction of Kretinga, northeast of the Lithuanian port of Memel. Bombs caused large explosions and huge fires.

A Rumanian communique issued tonight named four more German generals captured among 50,000 enemy troops taken by Rumanian forces. They were identified as Generals Stellarel, Busch, Buchard, and Von Lilienthal.

Reuter said thousands of Germans are roaming through the fields and forests of Rumanian territory overrun by the Red armies; that every man is out for himself, trying to escape from areas completely ringed in.

General Bor's Polish Partisan headquarters in Warsaw said today that fighting continues within the city. German troops were said to be retreating into the city from the direction of Russian lines around the Praga suburb. (OWI-Reuter)

CZECHS HALT NAZI DRIVE ON ZILINA

LONDON, September 2 — Czechoslovak Forces of the Interior reported tonight that they had halted a German assault on the large rail, road, and river junction city of Zilina, in northern Slovakia.

The Czechoslovak communique said also that bitter fighting has spread to eastern Slovakia, and that Hungarian armor has joined the Nazi forces in that sector.

Czech troops fighting within the present Hungarian frontier, in northern areas ceded to Hungary by Hitler, were said to have routed other Hungarian armored units. (PWE)

GERMANS SAY NEW BULGARIAN CABINET FORMED

LONDON, September 2 — The German News Agency, quoting what it described as trustworthy sources, stated today that Constantine Muravieff, former Minister of Education, is the new Bulgarian Prime Minister designate, Reuter reported today.

Muravieff was reported already to have formed his cabinet, in which the post of Foreign Minister is said to be held by Prof. Petko Stainoff, a former Minister of Railways.

Constantine Muravieff is a member and deputy of the Bulgarian Agrarian Party. He was private secretary to the famous Bulgarian peasant leader, Stambulinsky, who was murdered by a member of the extreme Right, and was Minister of War in Stambulinsky's cabinet in 1923. (Reuter)

MOLOTOV ENTERTAINS NELSON AND HURLEY

MOSCOW, September 2 — Foreign Commissar Molotov was host today at a luncheon in honor of American War Production Chief Donald Nelson and Major General Patrick Hurley.

The Americans thus wound up a stopover in Moscow on their way to China. They are assigned to a special mission for President Roosevelt. (OWI)

COMMUNIST GROUPS IN GERMAN GARRISONS

STOCKHOLM, September 2 — Communist groups have been organized among the German garrisons in Norway, reported the Stockholm newspaper, Svenska Dagbladet.

The paper added that the groups are in contact with elements of the Norwegian Resistance movements.

An order from the headquarters of the German 10th Army Corps, a copy of which has fallen into Russian hands, stated the main reason for the retreat of the German Army is the refusal of the infantry to fight. Tracts of demoralization have been noted, which «must be eradicated if the whole of the Northern Army Group is not to suffer a catastrophe,» added the order. (BBC)

ALLIED AIR ATTACKS ON THE CELEBES ANNOUNCED

ALLIED HQ, SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, September 2 — One Japanese merchantman was sunk and another severely damaged as Catalina flying boats continued their attacks on enemy shipping near the Celebes, stated today's communique.

The attacks were carried out on the night of August 29/30, when numerous barges were sunk. More than 35 vessels were destroyed by Allied planes during August in this area.

Japanese planes lightly and ineffectively bombed the new Allied airstrips at Sansapor, on the northwest tip of New Guinea on the night of August 30/31. The airfield lies some 200 miles southeast of Halmahera.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785021

Liberators attacked the much-bombed Japanese airfield at Cape Chater, on Timor Island, and enemy positions at Wewak, New Guinea.

United Press correspondents have described mass executions of 51 natives which took place on Guam. The Japanese captured these natives, who became members of a forced labor battalion. The Japanese killed by striking off their heads. (OWI)

JAP SHIPPING BASE MAULED IN FORMOSA RAID

CHUNGKING, September 2 — The target of American bombers which attacked the Island of Formosa on Thursday night was a large concentration of heavy Japanese ships.

A communique from General Joseph Stilwell's headquarters said today that Liberators of the 14th USAAF carried out the raid. They struck Takao harbor, an auxiliary port lying just below the naval base at Taihan, on the southwest shore of the island.

Direct hits were observed. Many vessels were destroyed, and others were damaged. Large fires were started.

In continuing assaults upon the coast of China to the west of Formosa — in the vital area controlling the East China Sea and approaches to the Philippines — American heavy bombers have struck again at Jap airfields around Hong Kong and Canton, and again at Hankow.

Over the Chinese interior, planes of General Claire Caennault's Chinese-American Wing struck at Jap communications and supply lines near Yochow and Kiukiang, destroying 100 trucks and several river boats. At Hankow they destroyed a rail station, shooting up two locomotives and other rolling stock.

In the Netherlands Indies, General Douglas MacArthur's air forces continued their assaults on the lanes of Jap shipping, sinking still another transport off the Celebes yesterday. During last month, MacArthur's patrol bombers averaged better than one Jap ship a day in the Celebes area alone.

In the latest attack on the Celebes harbor of Manado, night bombers got direct hits on concentrations of barges, and damaged two 1,000-ton coastal ships. Similar operations continued over the Talaud and Tanimbar islands, and against Jap areas of New Guinea and New Britain.

In operations of ground forces in Burma and China, the communiques reported no major changes today. The Allied advance continued north of Tiddim, in northern Burma. The Chinese made slight advances in the fight for Lungling, on the Burma Road.

From the puppet emperor of Manchuria, Henry Puyi, came a Hirohito-inspired warning that Allied attacks must be expected on the soil of his Jap-owned empire. Puyi called the war situation «grave.» Domei explained that he was saying this in «compliance with the wishes of Tokyo.» Hirohito issued a similar statement 10 days ago. (OWI)

JAPANESE ADMIRAL DIES

SAN FRANCISCO, September 2 — Japanese Admiral Shiro Takasu died in Tokyo today, according to the Japanese news agency, Domei.

The Japs said Takasu succumbed to an illness «contracted on the battlefield, in recent front line action with the Fleet.»

The last appearance of the Jap Fleet was in flight from waters around the Philippines, after it turned tail on the night of June 19. (OWI)

LATEST U.S. WAR CASUALTY FIGURES

WASHINGTON, September 2 — The total number of casualties of the United States armed forces since the attack [illegible] is 343,520, the Office of War Information

India, and the Colonies, total 33,573, including 29,361 deaths and 4,192 internees.

Civilian air raid casualties in the United Kingdom total 132,092, including 56,195 killed (or missing and believed killed), and 75,897 injured and detained in hospital.

The total for all casualties for the British Empire during five years of war is thus over a million. (Reuter)

GIRAUD REPORTED INJURED IN NORTH AFRICA

LONDON, September 2 — According to the Algiers correspondent of the News Chronicle, General Henri Giraud, former commander-in-chief of French Forces in North Africa, was seriously injured a few days ago when he was shot at at Mostaganemy near Oran, where he has been living since his retirement.

The correspondent said Giraud was returning home when a Senegalese soldier, one of the sentries outside his villa, fired at him. The bullet passed through both cheeks and broke a few teeth.

The attempt had no political background, it was said. (Reuter)

NAZIS CREATE STATELESS MINORITIES

LONDON, September 2 — There are at present between 350 and 500 thousand Jews who do not enjoy diplomatic protection of any state and have no country which under international law may not expel them, according to a pamphlet just published by the British section of the Jewish World Congress.

In dealing with this question of «statelessness,» the pamphlet said this problem is not confined to Jews alone. Whole categories of stateless persons unprotected by international law have been created by territorial changes in Europe and by mass «denationalization» for political or racial reasons in totalitarian states.

The pamphlet said these problems will undoubtedly come up at peace discussions. As a remedy to existing hardships imposed on these persons, the pamphlet suggests the annulment of Axis denationalization laws, the right to reject one's former nationality, the prohibition of mass denationalization under international law, the setting up of tribunals to settle doubtful cases of nationality, and the creation of an international authority for the protection against expulsion without good reason. ALLIED VICTORIES ASSIST REFUGEES

NEW YORK, September 2 — The Allied victories have assisted in the work of evacuating refugees and have had an effect, not only on neutral and occupied countries, but upon the Axis satellite nations as well, according to Mr. Joseph Schwartz, European chairman of the American Joint Distribution Committee, who arrived here yesterday.

Mr. Schwartz said that since 1 January 1944, the committee had succeeded in getting 8,000 refugees out of danger spots in Axis Europe, most of them from the Balkans. (PWB)

LATEST U.S. WAR CASUALTY FIGURES

WASHINGTON, September 2 — The total number of casualties of the United States armed forces since the attack on Pearl Harbor is 343,526, the Office of War Information announced yesterday. This total includes 76,706 killed, 163,648 wounded, 54,292 missing, and 48,874 prisoners of war.

The War Department report shows army casualties as of August 13 totalling 284,838, including 53,191 killed, 142,636 wounded, 44,643 missing, and 44,498 prisoners of war.

The Navy Department report as of yesterday, which includes Marine Corps and Coast Guard figures, shows casualties amounting to 58,682, made up of 23,605 dead, 20,962 wounded, 9,649 missing, and 4,466 prisoners of war. (OWI)

BRITISH EMPIRE WAR CASUALTIES EXCEED MILLION

LONDON, September 2 — Casualties in all ranks of British Empire forces during the five years of war now total 925,963, it was officially stated tonight.

This number includes 242,985 killed, including those who died of wounds or injuries; 80,603 missing; 311,500 wounded; 290,865 prisoners of war and internees.

These figures relate to forces of the United Kingdom, the Dominions, India, and the Colonies, but exclude civilian air raid casualties, those among merchant seamen, and deaths from natural causes.

Casualties among merchant seamen serving in British registered ships, including the nationals of the Dominions,

LONDON, September 2 — There are at present between 350 and 500 thousand Jews who do not enjoy diplomatic protection of any state and have no country which under international law may not expel them, according to a pamphlet just published by the British section of the Jewish World Congress.

In dealing with this question of «statelessness,» the pamphlet said this problem is not confined to Jews alone. Whole categories of stateless persons unprotected by international law have been created by territorial changes in Europe and by mass «denationalization» for political or racial reasons in totalitarian states.

The pamphlet said these problems will undoubtedly come up at peace discussions. As a remedy to existing hardships imposed on these persons, the pamphlet suggests the annulment of Axis denationalization laws, the right to reject one's former nationality, the prohibition of mass denationalization under international law, the setting up of tribunals to settle doubtful cases of nationality, and the creation of an international authority for the protection against expulsion without good reason. ALLIED VICTORIES ASSIST REFUGEES

NEW YORK, September 2 — The Allied victories have assisted in the work of evacuating refugees and have had an effect, not only on neutral and occupied countries, but upon the Axis satellite nations as well, according to Mr. Joseph Schwartz, European chairman of the American Joint Distribution Committee, who arrived here yesterday.

Mr. Schwartz said that since 1 January 1944, the committee had succeeded in getting 8,000 refugees out of danger spots in Axis Europe, most of them from the Balkans. (PWB)

NAZI COMMENT TODAY AND YEAR AGO

LONDON, September 2 — One year ago today, Joseph Goebbels said in Das Reich:

«The Feuhrer has succeeded, through a superior and masterful strategy, in smashing the stranglehold which encompassed us at the beginning of the war. Today, there is no longer any question of a menace to the territories of the Reich.»

Today, the Stockholm newspaper Morgontidningen quoted Propaganda Minister Goebbels as saying:

«If Germany loses, she will go under like a battleship with all batteries firing. Nobody will ask what is coming afterward; there will be no afterward. We will give the coming generation a glorious example of how a nation should go under.» (OWI)

TRIBUTE TO ALLIES

ROME, September 2 — Guido de Ruggiero, Minister of Public Education, today recalled that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill long ago outlined provisions for the protection and safeguarding of artistic monuments.

In a circular issued today to superintendents of historic monuments, he paid tribute to the invaluable work rendered by American and British scholars who, in the wake of the Allied Armies, take immediate measures for the safeguarding of damaged historic monuments from further destruction and for the collecting of art works which had to be placed in hiding places beyond the reach of German vandalism.

Minister de Ruggiero emphasized the need for continued collaboration between Italian and Allied authorities for the protection of cultural monuments. (UNN)

ALLIES HELP SOLVE SARDINIAN FOOD PROBLEM

CAGLIARI, September 2 — High Commissioner Pinna of Sardinia, in a talk illustrating the importance of the Granaries of the People, today recalled that at the end of 1943, Sardinia was without sufficient bread.

"Only the help of the Allies could have saved us from the spectre of hunger with its terrible consequences," he said.

The High Commissioner stated that from January to July, the Allies brought in 221,950 quintals of flour for the civilian population.

He pointed out also that Sardinia will have sufficient grain for its own consumption if all do their duty by turning over their grain to the Granaries of the People. It is the duty of Sardinians to make the greatest use of their own resources, he said. (UNN)

ADVANCE AFHQ, September 2 — Today's communique:

Allied Army in Southern France:

Hampered by scattered rains, 7th Army, American, and French forces have continued to press forward on the heels of the retreating enemy in the Rhône Valley south of Lyon.

American troops, meanwhile, have advanced from the Grenoble area to the northwest, some elements being beyond Voiron. Further limited progress has been made on the right flank where Contes, eight miles northeast of Nice, has been entered. The French, in their advance west of the Rhône, are beyond St. Agreve and Charmes.

The count of prisoners in Southern France has risen beyond 55,000, of whom the French have taken some 35,000, largely in the capture of Marseilles and Toulon.

Allied Armies in Italy:

The full significance of the recent fighting in the Adriatic sector can now be revealed. Moving swiftly and secretely from distant concentration areas into position, troops of the 8th Army started from south of the Metauro River on August 26 and have fought their way forward over 15 miles of most difficult country with increasing tempo of battle against stiffening resistance, driving the enemy back to his final prepared positions of the Goth Line, and inflicting heavy losses on him.

Without pausing, the 8th Army launched a series of powerful attacks against the Goth Line, and have now broken through the enemy's elaborately prepared defenses on a 20-mile front to a depth of three to four miles. Throughout this operation, the 8th Army has been admirably supported by its old associate in past victories — the Desert Air Forces.

Thus, the last known enemy prepared defence line south of the River Po has been successfully breached.

Heavy fighting continues, and the enemy has brought up fresh troops in his attempts to stop our advance. Fighting has not been confined to the Adriatic sector, as other 8th Army troops have continued their advance towards the Goth Line, making very important gains north of Florence.

Fifth Army have also seized the initiative, and American infantry, supported by tanks, have crossed the River Arno at many places between Florence and the sea. The advance continues.

Navy:

In these operations, four enemy aircraft were destroyed in the air, and 12 of our aircraft are missing.

Last night, our bombers attacked the rail yards at Bologna.

WESTERN FRONT

SHAEF, September, 2 — Today's communique:

Land: Dieppe, Arras, and Verdun were liberated yesterday by Allied forces. On the Channel coast, Allied troops entered Dieppe, where the enemy offered only slight opposition, and pushed northward to Le Tréport. Farther west, our troops have taken Bolbec and Fauville en Caux, and have entered Yvetot.

Armored thrusts northward from Amiens passed through Arras soon after midday, and by evening were established in strength north of the town. Another thrust captured the town of Doullens, and, farther west, our leading elements have reached the Somme southeast of Abbeville.

Light enemy resistance was met by Allied troops advancing northeast of Beauvais, and we have taken Coullemelle and Villers Tournelle, six miles west of Montdidier. Our advance through the Forêt de Compiègne met heavy resistance.

North of the Aisne River, armored elements have taken Montcornet, 18 miles northeast of Laon. Other units have entered Rethel, 20 miles northeast of Reims, and have made gains to the edge of the Forêt de Signy. Allied troops have occupied Verdun. They have crossed the Meuse River in the town, and, also between St. Mihiel and Commercy. West of the Meuse, forces which advanced through the Argonne Forest are in the areas of Baulny, Varennes, and Cermont.

Troops moving through the area north of St. Dizier have reached a point near the Rhine-Marne canal. Southeast of St. Dizier, armored units have advanced through the vicinity of Joinville.

Air: Enemy transport in the Low Countries and in northern France was attacked yesterday by fighters and fighter-bombers.

The targets included horse-drawn vehicles, tanks, locomotives, and barges.

Fighter-bombers also attacked ammunition dumps near St. Quentin. Targets for medium bombers were gun positions, strong points, and a motor park in the Brest area, troop concentrations near Abbeville, and railway yards at Givet, on the Franco-Belgian border.

Fighter-bombers continued their attacks on the island of Cezembre, off St. Malo, which has also been bombarded by HMS Malaya. Air observation was provided. (Reuter)

SOVIET

MOSCOW, September 2 — Tonight's communique:

During today, southeast of Bucharest, our troops completely cleared the enemy off the northern bank of the River Danube in the area of Olsenitsa-Poteshki, and also occupied the city and railway-station of Olsenitsa, and over 70 other populated localities, including Viruju, Buneshki, Kurkanu, Holmani, Vereshki, Rokoti, and Kopeshki, and the railway stations of Klarapeshki, Velbunashi, Vasilati, Turkanu, and Resheme.

Southwest and south of Constanza, our troops reached the Rumanian-Bulgarian border in the area from the River Danube to the coast of the Black Sea, and occupied over 60 populated localities, including Ostrov, Gerlitsa, Dunate, Ionterlia, Dombrenitsyn-Dunbalye, Indentundenka, Kobadin, Gubenyelye, and Tendenka, and the railway stations of Dgeneralchernya, Chentirla, Chobentye, Gatoshye, Kopagin, and Vodomilye.

Navy:

In his latest messages from Southern France, the naval commander reports that the disembarkation of troops and the unloading of their equipment is proceeding satisfactorily. The navy is also employed in opening ports and clearing minefields.

Nearly 900 prisoners of war, who comprised the garrison of the islands off Marseilles, were evacuated by 1000 hours on August 30.

Mediterranean Allied Air Force:

Strong forces of escorted heavy bombers yesterday concentrated their attack on rail communications in the Balkans. Among the objectives were four railroad bridges and four rail yards in Hungary and Yugoslavia. Formations also attacked the airdrome at Nish and a bridge in the Po Valley. Fighters of the Strategic Air Force carried out offensive sweeps over Hungary, Yugoslavia, and enemy-held Rumania, destroying a large number of enemy aircraft parked on Debrecen aerodrome, in east central Hungary.

Tactical aircraft flew armed reconnaissances and attacked objectives in the battle areas. Medium and light bombers attacked gun positions west of Pesaro, while fighter-bombers and fighters were also active against close-support targets in the Adriatic sector. Other aircraft attacked ports and shipping off the west coast of Italy and the Adriatic, as well as communications and guns in Yugoslavia.

MOSCOW, September 2 — Tonight's communique:

During today, southeast of Bucharest, our troops completely cleared the enemy off the northern bank of the River Danube in the area of Oltenita-Poteshki, and also occupied the city and railway-station of Oltenitsa, and over 70 other populated localities, including Yiruju, Budeshki, Korkanu, Holmani, Vereshki, Rokoti, and Kopeshki, and the railway stations of Klarupeshki, Velbinashi, Vasilati, Turkoan, and Reshene.

Southwest and south of Constanza, our troops reached the Rumanian-Bulgarian border in the area from the River Danube to the coast of the Black Sea, and occupied over 60 populated localities, including Ostrov, Gerlitsa, Dunate, Ionterlin, Dombrongrun-Dunbolye, Indentundenka, Kobadin, Guberyelye, and Tendenka, and the railway stations of Dgenerakbernyo, Cheotirfia, Chlobentye, Gatochye, Kopagin, and Vodomilye.

On all other sectors of the front, reconnaissance activities and, on several sectors, fighting of local importance took place.

During September 1, our troops damaged or destroyed on all fronts a total of 23 German tanks. In aerial combats and by anti-aircraft fire, 34 enemy planes were shot down.

On the night of September 1/2, our long-range Air Force carried out a massive raid on the railway junction of Kretinga, northeast of Memel. As a result of the bombardment, fires broke out, of which two were of large size, and military installations of the enemy were burning. In the northwest area of the junction, huge explosions were noted.

ITALIAN RESISTANCE FRONT

ADVANCE, HQ, AAI, September 2 — Today's Italian Resistance Front communique:

The battle of August 20-26 between German troops and elements of the Osoppo Division ended with the defeat of the enemy, who was forced to flee. The town of Faedis, which had been occupied by the Germans, was retaken by the Patriots the same evening. Other strong German formations, which had entered Nimis and where driving towards Torlano, San Gervasio, and Mount Croce, were stopped by two battalions of the Osoppo Division. The Patriots later received reinforcements, and defeated the enemy in hand-to-hand fighting. Later, the Germans returned to the attack on San Gervasio in an attempted encircling movement, which resulted in failure, due to the cooperation of a Slovenian battalion.

In the course of the battle, the Germans, with the support of tank forces, attempted to repair a bridge 800 meters long east of San Gervasio. The attempt was a failure, and the enemy lost two tanks. On August 28, a Patriot division launched a counter-attack and reentered the town of San Gervasio, and, shortly afterward, the town of Nimis. Enemy losses totaled 250 men.

At the end of July, in Spezia province, a Garibaldi division was attacked by 7000 Germans supported by artillery and tanks. The Patriots resisted the attack bravely, and forced the Germans to withdraw after a long and bitter fight; 1,500 Germans were put out of the fighting. Patriots lost 100 dead and 100 wounded. In the same region, other elements of the same division destroyed a bridge near Sfriciolo and Soliera.

Following acts of sabotage on the railroad bridge of Quincinetto, German columns are now forced to carry on complicated loading and unloading operations on both sides of the bridge. Near Gemona, in Udine Province, seven arches of a railroad bridge were destroyed. In the upper Adige region, Patriots attacked and burned 70 German trucks.

Patriot groups operating in the region west of Genoa have joined with American forces which crossed the French-Italian border at Ventimiglia. (UNN)

GERMAN

FUEHRER'S HEADQUARTERS, September 2 — The Supreme Command of the Wehrmacht announces:

In northern France, on the whole front, our troops, from Arras to the Verdun sector, continue to be engaged in grim defensive fighting. The enemy spearheads again and again were halted or smashed by stubborn resistance and grim counter-attacks.

Yesterday, the enemy, after having failed in his first attack on the Brest fortress, again attacked, with strong forces supported by numerous tanks and air forces, the western side of the fortress. The Americans, despite being continually reinforced, were everywhere repulsed. The enemy losses, during these fights, were particularly high. In the Rhône Valley, yesterday, all enemy attempts at overtaking our troops and blocking our movements in the Valence sector were frustrated. Despite strong enemy resistance, forces of the Navy sank two freighters totalling 15,000 tons off the coast of northwestern France.

Last night, heavy long-range batteries of the Navy shelled ports in southern England with good success. At St. Margaret, an enemy battery was so heavily hit when the Germans retorted to English long-range fire that only one gun continued firing.

London continues to be kept under retaliatory fire.

In Italy, in the Adriatic coastal sector, the power of the major enemy attack, yesterday, increased in fury. Our divisions, in grim fighting, inflicted particularly heavy losses on the enemy, and repelled all attacks except for one local infiltration, which was sealed off. Our troops again achieved a complete defensive success. During yesterday's fighting, 56 enemy tanks were destroyed.

From August 26 to 31, 904 terrorists were killed in action in the French rear during mopping up operations.

In the eastern Carpathians, our mountain troops frustrated Soviet attacks in fierce fighting, with bloody losses for the enemy. In the northwestern part of the Vistula bridgehead of Baranov, the Bolsheviks were pushed farther back despite stubborn resistance. Yesterday, northeast of Warsaw, the enemy, supported by strong tank and bomber as 167 guns and numerous other weapons. On the remaining parts of the eastern front, major fighting is reported only from the Schaken sector. In this sector, grim enemy attacks were smashed, with heavy losses for the Bolsheviks.

Bombers in low-level attacks on an enemy aerodrome in Rumania, destroyed 30 aircraft on the ground. Fifty other enemy planes were brought down in dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft guns.

In the Gulf of Finland, since the middle of July, our submarines successfully participated in surface and undersea attacks on Soviet naval forces.

On the eastern front, during the month of August, the Air Force shot down 1,571 enemy planes, 1,252 of which were brought down in dogfights.

During the day, enemy fighter squadrons penetrated the airspace of western Germany.

In Hungary, several localities also were attacked with bombs, or machine-gunned. During the night, isolated British planes dropped bombs on Bremen.

In the course of August, the Air Force destroyed 1,803 Anglo-American planes, 708 of which were brought down over the Reich territory in dogfights and by the action of anti-aircraft batteries. Three hundred and eighteen other enemy planes were brought down by naval forces, anti-aircraft guns of freighters, and anti-aircraft guns of the Navy. (Radio Berlin)

Poland: The Polish Prime Minister of the government in exile at London has offered the Kremlin the eastern part of his country in order to be accepted as a member of the Polish Bolshevik government at Lublin.

TRANSOCEAN AND D.N.B.

Italy: «The British command now seems to be considering a plan to support operations by landing in the coastal sectors of Rimini, Venice, Trieste, and the Istrian Peninsula, in order to get at the rear and flank of the defenders. In view of events in Rumania, this intention is doubtless accompanied by nervous political speculations concerning the northern Balkans.»

South France: Although Americans in the Rhône Valley continued their attacks in the Valence area, in the Isere and Drôme valleys, the majority of the German formations were able to reach the area north and northwest of Lyon.

North France: East of Amiens, heavy fighting took place in the Peronne area and near Albert, where SS Panzer Grenadiers inflicted grave losses on the attackers in furious street fighting. In the same area, massed Allied tank wedges pushed beyond Arras to the north, north-east, and north-west as far as the area west of Lens.

Eastern Front: «There was practically no fighting at the northern part of the eastern front. In the area north-east of Warsaw, the enemy continued his attacks, supported by artillery fire and battle planes.» Soviet troops are said to be «advancing» in Rumania toward the Bulgarian border.
