BIOGRAPHICAL REPORTName: QUINTIERI, QUINTO
Mag. Baron

Country: ITALY

Region: Naples - Palazzo Quintieri, near S. Maria in Portico

Major Positions: Banker and landowner; Minister of Finance, third Badoglio Cabinet (21 April 1944 - 10 June 1944); proposed as technical representative to Washington with Raffaele Mattioli for discussion of economic problems, 25 Sept. 1944.

Date and Place of Birth: 1894, at Sorrento

Nationality: Italian

Family History: Luigi Quintieri, his father, founded the Bank of Calabria at Cosenza in 1910; he died in 1935. Quinto Quintieri is unmarried; lives with his mother and two unmarried sisters. Two married sisters and their families live on estates in Cosenza; one brother in Spain. Cousin of the Commissioner for Agriculture in the second Badoglio Cabinet, Luciferra.

Education and Work History

Degree in civil engineering, University of Naples.

Immediately entered business with his father, in the Bank of Calabria.

World War I, Lt. of Artillery.

He speaks English, French, Spanish, German and Russian (the last probably only slightly), and has traveled to England (extensively), France, Spain, Ireland, Norway, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Poland, Yugoslavia and the U.S.S.R. (2 months in 1934). He stated that his travel was primarily for pleasure - seeing different people, collecting books, and mountaineering.

1935, President of the Bank of Calabria, Cosenza, succeeding his father in this position. He also inherited many estates in Cosenza Province and is reputed to be one of the largest landowners in Southern Italy. He administers these estates himself, the primary culture is sheep and olives. His pre-war manner of living is described "as four months of the year in Naples, four months in Calabria, and four months traveling abroad."

World War II, served in coastal defense of Naples province; later transferred to Ministry of War in Rome, where he specialized in the recovery of Allied war material. He has the rank of Major.

Political History and Attitudes: Formal member of the Fascist Party, but kept himself quite apart from political life during the regime.

Quintieri is described as an old friend of the King and Badoglio. A monarchist, he is said to have wanted Badoglio to remain Prime Minister until the end of the war. He is close also to De Nicola and Croce, liberal leaders, and Nenni, the head of the Christian Democrats. He professes liberal and democratic tendencies, but he has no party affiliations.

During his office as Minister of Finance in the third Badoglio Cabinet (21 April 1944 - 10 June 1944), Quintieri's financial policy was described

as follows: 1) Desire for increase of Allied imports, especially food-stuffs; 2) Desire for an Italian credit in dollars and sterling to be set aside for use immediately and after the war, to reestablish Italian purchasing power in foreign countries; 3) Project of a tax on rural income and a raise in wages of city workers, in order to bring the two groups more closely in line; 4) Desire for the dollar-sterling-lira exchange rate to be altered in favor of the lira, as he considered the present rate inflationary.

His general opinions on Italy's position (while Badoglio's Minister of Finance) were described as follows: 1) Emphasis should be placed on the revival of finished goods and luxury industries and on the tourist trade, rather than on heavy industry; 2) Italy should be given access to foreign markets; 3) in favor of a free American port in Italy, in order to balance British and Russian Mediterranean interests with American; 4) belief that a Latin bloc would be impractical; 5) fear of French civil war, as he considers that the French have a natural tendency toward civil dissension and that they will be anti-Italian; 6) belief that Germany will be as strong as ever in 15 years, because of her industrial power, and because her enemies will not sufficiently repress her.

Quintieri was the Benoni Government's tentative choice for observer at the United Nations Monetary and Financial Conference at Bretton Woods. (June 1944)

Proposed by the Benoni Government as technical representative to Washington for discussion of Italian economic and financial problems. He has stated privately that economic construction is impossible in Italy without a "huge" loan from either Britain or the United States.

According to the interview source, Treves was a Jew of great wealth, and owned a great deal of land in the Province of Padua.

Political History and Attitude:

According to the interview source, Treves first was a convinced and enthusiastic Fascist. He gave the Party generous financial support. In order to combat Bolshevism, which, according to source, he felt seriously threatened his own means of livelihood. However, after the Fascist power was assumed, he was no longer an active Party member. In July 1932, source says he was told by the Party that if he wished to retain his position as a Jew, he must make an important contribution to the Opere Assistenziali del Partito. Source says that he came to regret strongly his early support of Fascism.

Political History and Attitude: At the time the interview source knew Moro, he was not a member of the Fascist Party, but the source states that he later heard that Moro did join the Party. Moro has apparently never been active as a member; however, his position as Auditor would not have been possible if it had not been for at least Party approval. 102

Summary:

Professor Moro is an authority on Accounting and has been Auditor of a very wide range of Italian industries. There is no evidence of Fascist activity on his part. Because of his many posts as auditor, he must have been acceptable to the Party.

Political History: According to an interview source, Count Sagramoso is described as a "fascist" of proven fidelity, since in industry he always cooperated with the regime. The source, however, does not have any specific information about him politically.

SUMMARY: Count Sagramoso, as head of the Breda machine manufacturing works, has occupied an important position in the Italian industrial world. The firm has been a leader in the manufacturing of cast iron, tractors, trucks, machine tools and armaments. Sagramoso has also headed a number of firms controlled by Breda such as the Commerciale Siderurgica di Milano, the Elettrica Nazionale, and others. He has cooperated politically with the Fascist Regime through his industrial interests. He was a member of the Fascist Corporation for the mechanical and metallurgical industries. There is no further specific information on his political allegiance to the Fascist regime.

Interview: General (Air)Country: ITALYRegion: RomePosition: President and Administrator Delegate of Societa Ala Italiana (formerly Ala Littoria), October 1943.Birthdate: (about 1896)Nationality: Italian

Family History: "Modest Roman family," brother is a priest // the title of Monsignore, who had lived for many years in New York as head of parish of Italo-Americans and later retired to Rome.

Education and Work History: He had a rather limited education, according to an interview source.

In command of the aerial zone of Milan, 1937-38.¹
The Berlin Radio reported in October 1943 that General Gennaro Tedeschini-Lalli replaced Umberto Klinger as President of Ala Italiana, formerly Ala Littoria.^{2,3}

According to an interview source he owed his positions, not to personal merit but to favors from Balbo.

Political History: Chief of Cabinet in the Air Ministry under Marshal Balbo; (Adducci says: "He was known as the Marshal's shadow because he was so constantly near him." He accompanied Balbo in the Italian Delegation to the International Congress for Civil Aeronautics, Washington, 1928.
Anti-fascist from the beginning of the Regime, according to source.Summary: From the information available, General Tedeschini-Lalli's presidency of the Ala Italiana (a large air line) springs from his political and personal contacts with fascist officials, rather than from personal merit.
An interview source says that he was a fascist from the beginning, and became Chief of Cabinet in the Air Ministry under Marshal Balbo. He has apparently adhered to neo-fascism, and was appointed President of Ala Italiana by the new regime.

Education and Work History: According to the interview source, Parodi's business interests included shipbuilding, foodstuffs, machines, heating, insurance, etc. Among the most remunerative of his undertakings, according to source, are the fishing of Tuna concessions of Sicily.

According to another source, he is a well-known Fascist banker, owning approximately 80% of the stock of the Moto Guzzi concern. This has its principal plant at Mandello del Lario, its office distribution center at Como, and a subsidiary or assembly plant at Borgomanero. In peace time, it manufactures motorcycles. Since the war, the concern produced motor drive machine gun carriers.

Since 1940 and the interview source list Parodi as holding the following positions:

Chairman, Società An. Vittorio Emanuele Parodi, Genoa.
Chairman and Founder, Società An. Moto Guzzi, Genoa 1940
Councillor, Credito Italiano, Genoa
Councillor, Assicurazioni Generali, Trieste
Councillor, Società Agricola Italo-Somala S.A.I.S., Mogadiscio, Somaliland
Councillor, Sindacato Marittimo Italiano per l'Assicurazione degli Infortuni sul Lavoro della Gente di Mare, Genoa.
Councillor, Soc. An. Officine Termotecniche, Palermo
Councillor, Cassa di Risparmio e Monte di Pisto, Genoa

Cavaliere del Lavoro, 21 April 1940

Political History and Attitudes: Parodi, according to the interview source, never engaged in any political activity but tended merely to follow the general trend. Thus he joined the Party many years ago, without, however, having occupied any official position.

SUMMARY: Parodi is an eminent industrialist who has been chairman of the Società Anonima Vittorio Emanuele Parodi and founder and chairman of the motorcycle company Moto Guzzi, and whose activity has extended to the fields of insurance and finance. According to the interview source, Parodi was rather indifferent to politics and merely followed the general trend.

Birth date and place: (about 1888)

Nationality: Italian; Catholic according to interview source.
Religion:

Family History: Married, with two sons. Both sons are employed in their father's companies: Gino, the eldest is on Board of Directors in the Sucreries et Raff. of Pontelongo, and Ivio is on Board of the Soc. Agricola degli Alcolici of Padua.

Education and Work History: Montesi had only a high school education. According to interview source, Montesi entered the Administration of the Societe Anonyme Sucreries et Raffineries de Pontelongo and succeeded in reaching the top position of Director General. Besides holding positions in all the following companies, he figured in many Committees, thus becoming one of the leading industrialists of both the region and the nation.

The Societe Anonyme et Raff. de Pontelongo is a sugar-producing and refining company, created many years ago in Brussels with Belgian capital by Mr. Raymackers of the Societe des Sucreries et Raff. de Roumanie. This plant is the largest sugar-producing and refining one in Italy, with its principal mills at Pontelongo, about 30 km. from Padua, and at Bottrighe, about 40 km. from Padua.

From the Notizie Statistiche for 1937 and the Biografia Finanziaria Italiana for 1933-34 Ilario Montesi is listed as holding the following positions:

1. President, Soc. An. Sucreries et Raff. de Pontelongo, Brussels, (Cap. 30,000,000 Bel. Fcs.) (1933-34)

10. Councillor, Soc. An. Italiana Produttori Alcool, Roma (Cap. 1936; L. 275, 000)

Political History:

Attitude

According to interview source, he was a Fascist, and became a well-known figure in Fascist industrial circles. The source states that Montesi wanted to become a Senator and contributed generously to all the Fascist institutions, and annually to the special exchequer of the Party, on behalf of the companies in which he belonged and for himself personally.

Summary:

As President of the largest sugar-producing and refining company in Italy and head of several other large sugar, distilling, and financial concerns of Padua, Montesi is a major industrialist in his field.

According to the interview source, he supported the Fascist regime financially and was Fascist in his political attitude.

PIRELLI, Alberto

Italian Government declared in 1935 that Italian enterprises must be placed under government control. Pirelli was against government intervention and for the independence of the large industries. It is also mentioned that most of the Directors of the Company were not particularly Fascist. A question asking applicants' religion was included in the employment blank of the Company in 1936 or 1937 (in the absence of Ugo Tagliacozzo, a Jew) and this became mandatory by government order in 1939.⁹

Pirelli had a "significant meeting" with Nicolo Zuccea, the student leader who replaced Vidussoni, when the latter was named Secretary of the Fascist Party.¹⁰

A Third interview source says that Pirelli is a respectable man (nearly all reports agree on this), and might be useful at some stage in causing disaffection among northern industrialists who, now as always, must be searching for a way to land on their feet.¹¹

It was reported by the NRC in August 1943 that Pirelli's concern submitted a detailed report of peace demonstrations in northern Italy to Badoglio.¹¹

SUMMARY: Dr. Pirelli heads, with his brother, the Italian rubber industry and is one of the great industrialists of Italy, international in his influence and connected with nearly every branch of Italian manufacturing and public works. He has been President of the Associazione fra le Societa Italiane per Azione for about twenty years; this position makes him the honorary head of Italian industry.

It may be assumed that Dr. Pirelli's industrial activity claimed all his attention, to the exclusion of any Fascist Party activity. The reports on his political attitude are ambiguous, indicating a tendency to serve whatever government might be in control of the country. His position on the National Council of Corporations was political, as well as professional, in nature and indicated his active support of Fascist economic policies.

Country: ITALY

Region: Milan
Office: Via Fabio Filzi 21 (1940)
Home: Via Ricordi 20 (1940)¹

Position: President and Administrator of Societa Italiana Pirelli; National Councillor to the Chamber of Fasces and Corporations (1940)¹; etc. (see below)

Birth Date and Place: 27 January 1881; at Milan.¹

Nationality and Religion: Italian; Catholic (according to an interview source).

Family History: son of Giovanni Battista Pirelli (who was a soldier with Garibaldi, a Senator, and founder of the rubber business of Pirelli, according to an interview source).
Giov. Batt. Pirelli was President of the Italian Rubber Confederation and member of the National Council on Workmen's Insurance; he was also head of the Labor Advisory Council. Piero's brother Alberto Pirelli (see report on him) is the technical head of Soc. It. Pirelli.²

Education and Work History: Piero Pirelli became manager of the Soc. It. Pirelli in 1904 when he was 23 years old.¹ Later he became President and Administrator of Soc. Italiana Pirelli, and still held that position in 1943.² According to an interview source Piero runs the financial end of the company, but is secondary to his brother, Alberto, in the technical and management aspects.

The revenues of the Pirelli enterprises come 50% from tires, 30% from electric wire and cable, and 20% from miscellaneous rubber products. As a tire producer, Soc. It. Pirelli ranks third in Europe. As a wire and cable producer it is one of the largest in the world. Its miscellaneous rubber products include over 400 different articles. The main manufacturing plant, just outside of Milan, known as the Bicocca Works, is the largest factory in Europe. There are numerous other plants in Italy and other places in the world.²

Important factories manufacturing wire and cable, tires and rubber goods are located in England, Spain, Argentina, and Brazil. Pirelli owns its own rubber plantations in

Political History and Attitude:

Piero Pirelli joined the Fascist Party in 1932.

From the 1940 Chi E? the following information is available on the political-economic posts which he has held:

National Councillor the Chamber of Fasces and Corporations, as a member of the council of the Corporation of International Commerce, representing the industrialists; Member of the National Council of Corporations; Vice-President of the Fascist Confederation of Industrialists; as President of the National Fascist Federation of the Corporations operating Electric Communications (Federazione Nazionale Fascista Mercanti Imprese) Comunicazioni elettriche).

According to an Italian chemist who was with Soc. Italiana Pirelli from 1925 to 1939, neither Piero nor his brother, Alberto, are "ardent" fascists.

Summary: As head of the Soc. Italiana Pirelli, Piero Pirelli, holds a key position in Italian industry and ranks as an industrialist of international importance. The Pirelli interests manufacture rubber, electric wire and cables, and numerous rubber products. Piero's positions in the many firms listed under work history above reflect the field of business enterprise over which the Pirelli interests have a high degree of control in Italy.

Piero Pirelli did not join the Fascist Party until 1932, ten years after it had seized power in Italy. Once having joined it, however, he accepted positions of the highest importance in the Fascist corporative state structure. As a National Councillor in the Chamber of Fasces and Corporations he held a key position in the Fascist control of Italian industrial life.

Political History and Attitude:

According to the interview source, De La Penne was a Deputy to Parliament for several years. He joined the Fascist movement in its initial stages and became one of its most open and enthusiastic supporters. The source states that he did not occupy any other political positions besides of deputy, but has throughout been a faithful and so called even servile supporter of Fascism.

Summary:

As President or Councillor of many of the most important Italian shipping companies, De La Penne was prominent in the field of navigation.

According to the interview source, he served the Fascist regime as Deputy and with his full sympathy. There is no evidence of any other party activity.

 Carta

According to the interview source, Donzelli joined the Fascist Party in its earliest days. His industrial aims to monopolize the paper industry of Italy coincided with the policies of the totalitarian regime.
 He was appointed a Senator by Mussolini in 1939.

Summary:

Senator Donzelli, with Luigi Eargo, has been in control of the paper industry of Italy. He was also a leading figure in the glass industry and held the presidency of the National Fascist Federation of glass Industrialists, and was President of the Agricultural Bank of Milan.

He joined the Fascist Party early, according to the interview source, and has held Fascist offices in Milan and as Deputy and Director of the National Fascist Federation of Paper Industrialists. He was Senator in 1939 by Mussolini.

Political History:

Senator, 24 February 1934¹
 In 1920, he was on the Commission of Inquiry into Industry.
 After the March on Rome, he was sent on various important missions to Paris, London and the Ruhr.

According to an interview source, he is among those Milanese industrialists who gave powerful help to Fascism in its early stages.

SUMMARY:

Senator Falck has had a long and distinguished industrial career in steel and hydroelectric power industries. He is president of the large Milan Acciaierie e Ferrerie Lombardo Falck, and has held other presidencies and councillorships in smaller firms. In 1900 he founded the Association for Metallurgical Industries and was its president for 28 years.

His political activities have been closely tied to his industrial interests. In pre-fascist days he served as technical consultant to the Ministry of Arms and Munitions and in 1920 was on the Commission of Inquiry into Industry. He is reported, by an interview source, to have been among the Milanese industrialists who gave powerful help to Fascism in the beginning. Later he went on various important missions for the Fascist Government to Paris, London and the Ruhr. Mussolini nominated him to a senatorship in 1934.

FABBRICI, Giovanni 2

Summary:

Giovanni Fabbri is primarily a Fascist Party career man. He joined the movement very early and organized the Fascio of Novellara. Subsequently he directed the forces of this province in the March on Rome in 1922. Since then he has risen in the Party to the rank of a National Councillor in the Chamber of Fascia and Corporations. There is no report of his allegiance to the neo-fascist regime.

He was president of the Saving Bank of Novellara and administrative councillor of the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro in Rome. His other activities appear to have been directly related to cooperative and syndicalist organizations under the fascist organization of industry.

According to Chi-E 1940, Treccani founded the Dizionario
Biografico degli Italiani in 1925 as well as the Italian Encyclopedia. Treccani is a Cavaliere del Lavoro, and was made a Senator 8 September 1924 and a Count in 1937. He also made an excellent reproduction of the Bibbia di Borso and of the Figlia di Iorio by D'Annunzio.

Political history and attitude:

Source says that Treccani was an early Fascist supporting Mussolini even before he seized the government in 1922.
He was appointed Senator by Mussolini in recognition of his strong support of Fascism according to the interview source. The Source continues that, after being made Senator, Treccani never played an active role in politics, devoting all of his energies to the many enterprises in which he was interested.

Summary:

Senator Treccani is among the most important industrialists in the field of Italian textiles; he has also been prominent in editorial and publishing concerns. He is the founder of the Italian Encyclopedia and the Biographical Dictionary of Italians.

Professor Giordani is characterized by a source of unknown reliability as capable and ambitious.
Another source describes him as "An opportunist who enjoyed the confidence of the regime and who is said to have made a great deal of money."⁷

Summary:

Giordani is a capitalist by birth and residence, but is reported to have moved northward with the Fascists in the evacuation of Rome. He is an outstanding chemist; he taught physical chemistry at the University of Naples; in 1930 he became a member of the Italian Academy; in March 1943 he was appointed President of the National Council of Research. He has many articles to his credit in technical and Academy journals.

His business positions have included the two very important offices of vice-chairman, in Naples, of the Board of Directors of Montecatini, and vice-president of ILVA. He has held, also, councillorships in the Dalmine company, an artificial fiber firm, and the Corboglio steel works. In 1936 he became vice-

He has criticized the multiplicity of Allied agencies, some of which deals with a specific Italian industry. He has found that this close relationship tends to make the Italian industry dependent upon the Allied forces and weaken the government. He suggested that abolition of the public sector is the way of saving the Ministers to deal with their concrete members of the Allied government through the Italian Foreign Office.

Summary:

An Administrative Committee of the Fascist Government and the Italian Republic, Mr. Patrick has held highly influential positions in Italian Government.

He was active in connection to the Italian regime, joining it as late as 1943 and is considered a leader of the Action Party. A financial expert, he was recently suggested as a high level unofficial representative of the Italian Government in Washington. Public statements of his indicate that he is opposed to the multiplicity of Allied agencies in Italy and favors a plan of coordination through the Italian Foreign Office for the solution of problems arising between the Italian and Allied Governments.

According to the interview source, Marzotto joined the Fascist Party only by necessity. Source points out, however, that he was a deputy to Parliament. Source claims that he was not a very active deputy, and describes him as basically a "democratic Italian patriot."

He was created Count of Valdagne by the King in 1940.

He was arrested by the neo-Fascist government for "being a Badoglio follower and treacherous." He was turned over to the Special Tribunal for the Defense of the State. 4, 6

Summary:

Count Marzotto has been prominent in the Italian wool industry, holding the presidency and vice-presidency of several of the most important corporations. He had also been connected with banking, insurance and large stores in Florence and Milan.

His political attitude is uncertain, but it is probable that, although he was deputy to Parliament, according to the interview source, he is more academical than Fascist, since he received his title from the King and was arrested by the neo-Fascist for adherence to Badoglio in October 1943.

Member of the Committee of the Friends of Germany (1943).⁶

It is reported by a former executive of the Banca Commerciale Italiana that Mr. Ing. Frigoni was the only head of a large bank in Italy who got his position entirely through Fascist politics.

The same source states that Frigoni was a member of a special private committee which had final decision on matters dealt with by the confederation of banks. The other members of this committee were Mussolini and the Minister of Finance.

The Corriere di Sicilia reported on November 1943 that Frigoni had been arrested by the Allied Police in Naples.⁶

Summary:

Frigoni was President and Director General of the Bank of Naples. He also held various councillorships in the Banca Nazionale del Lavoro, the Assicurazioni Generali and several other firms.

His allegiance to Fascism dates from 1921 as Secretary of the Fascist Federation of Ravenna. In 1926-27 he was Under Secretary of Finance, then a National Councilor to the Chamber of Firms and Corporations. He also held various councillorships in political-industrial organizations. He is reported to have been arrested by the allies in Naples in November 1943.

CRITICAL REVIEW:

An interview source gives the following information:

After the first World War, when the Fascist Government first decided to establish commercial relations with the Russian Government, Dr. Marinotti was sent to Russia for a number of industrialists in Milan. He returned after several months, having accomplished the exchange of a few other Italian manufactured products for wheat, anthracite, and some crude oil.

At the same time that he became Managing Director of Sipa-Vicenza, Dr. Marinotti acquired the political position of Vice President of Milan. It is evident that his personal activities linked him closely with Fascism throughout the regime. It is considered autocratic, violent and unscrupulous and is disliked by the people.

The National Committee of Liberation in Northern Italy accused him, with several other leading industrialists--Giulio Cesare, Gianfranco Sordani and Senator R. Piprelli--of aiding the Germans to seize machinery and materials. He has reported as actively assisting the Germans.

On 4 March 1944, he was arrested by the Fascist Republican Guard in Milan and charged with having advised, in possible collaboration with the government's plans with regard to the socialization of industry. Marinetti had expressed his disapproval of these plans in a memorandum to the German Ambassador and to Mussolini. The arrest was ordered by the German authorities.

It is reported that his release was obtained by General Leyers, Chief of Staff for Armaments of the Wehrmacht, because of the necessity of his collaboration in northern Italian war production.

SUMMARY:

As Managing Director of Sella-Viscosa, Dr. Marinotti held "one of the most important industrial positions in the country." He has also been president or councillor of a number of other Milan concerns for artificial textiles.

He cooperated with the Fascist regime from the beginning. At one time, he held the office of Vice Podesta of Milan. Since the Armistice, he has been accused of active cooperation with the German seizure of Italian industry. He was arrested by the Fascists in March 1944 for having opposed the nationalization of industry, but was released by the German authorities in order that he might further collaborate.

POLITICAL HISTORY:

The same source, quoted above, says that he is a very intelligent and active man but his past has been thoroughly compromised both with Fascism and Nazism.²

Summary:

Ferrero de Guernatis-Venti Illia is one of the leading men in the airplane industry in Italy. An interview source states that his industrial connections are primarily with the Odero-Ruggio group. He is also connected with naval construction through his presidency of the Soc. An. Costruzioni Meccaniche di Taranto and two positions of Administrator Delegate in other naval and naval airplane construction firms. The same interview source says that he has concluded the agreements with Germany for construction of the Heinkel hydroplane in Italy.

There is no evidence of his holding fascist positions as such, but the interview source claims that he has been thoroughly compromised with both Nazism and Fascism.

Birth date and place: About 1871, Emilia.

Nationality and religion: Italian

Family History: Born of Aristocratic family of Emilia, married and father of three daughters and two sons.

Education and Work History:

Received his Doctor's degree in law at the University of Bologna, then practiced law for a brief time. Later, the source says that he entered the secretarial staff of the local Societa Bolognese di Elettrocita, controlled by the Belgian holding company SOFIMA, Societe Financiere des Transports et d'Entreprises Industrielles, in Brussels.
He was promoted, in time, to General Director of this company.
According to the interview source, Biancoli is exceptionally well-acquainted with the hydroelectric problems of the Emilia region and devoted his life to fighting "the strong and detrimental influence" of Count Volpi (q.v.) in the electrical industrial field in North Italy. Source says Volpi later compelled him to retire.

Political History and Attitude:

Count Biancoli, though a member of the Party, has never taken any active part in politics. The interview source states that he entered the Party without any feeling of approval or of sympathy towards the Fascist regime, "for which he never used kind words." Count Volpi was his acst bitter enemy, according to the interview source, and Volpi, upon coming into power, compelled Biancoli to retire.

Summary:

Count Biancoli, as Director General of the Belgian holding company Sofima, occupied a position of importance internationally, as well as in Italian industry. He is reported to be exceptionally well-acquainted with hydroelectric problems of the Emilia region.

(Cap. in 1936, L. 4,200,000)^{1&2}According to an interview source, Baron Mazzoni is a textile industrialist primarily and owns mills at Torre Pellice.³

Political History:

According to the same source, he "was known for his democratic ideas and for his anti-Fascist sentiments." He did not support the movement financially and his opposition "permeated and restricted considerably the outlets for his activity."³

Summary:

With the exception of his councillorship in the Pistoiese hydroelectric company, Baron Mazzoni has held positions in concerns of only average importance. An interview source designated him as primarily a textile industrialist.The interview source stresses his "anti-Fascist sentiments" as limiting his activity.

Political History:

According to an interview source, from the 1930s through to the group of militant industrialists who aided the rise of Fascism. It is stated that he remained uninvolved in the regime to the point of surviving and he was one of the first in the prohibition of the anti-Jewish laws. He excluded every Jewish employee from his vast organizations. He never took part in any party activity as such. Another well-informed source says that he has Fascist sympathies in his connections.

Summary:

Franco De Sapoli is president of the Soc. per l'Industria del Tessuto Stampato in Milano, according to one source the largest house in Italy for printing materials of any size. He has held several offices in various other real estate firms up to the head of the Grandi Opere and a chemical and pharmaceutical company. An interview source reports that his position as chairman of the board of directors of the Industrie Meridionali ed Aeronautiche Meridionali is due to the large amount of money which he invested in this firm. Another source refers him to be an official of the Banco d'America and Banco d'Italia.

Two independent interview sources agree on his support of Fascism. One of them states that he financially aided it.

Summary:

Frighesi di Rattalma is a leading figure in Italian financial and credit institutions. Among the more important positions are the president of the numerous societies: the D'Assicurazione Italiana, and the Finanziaria Assicurativa. He has also held a number of vice-presidencies and councillorships both in large Italian firms in Italy and outside of Italy (in Paris and Sofia). He undoubtedly has good international financial connections.

His political activities have been closely allied with his financial and credit interests. He has been a member of the Executive Committee of the Federazione Nazionale Fascista delle Imprese Assicurative, and has held councillorships in similar political-industrial Fascist organizations.

Birth date and place : (about 1898) 1

Nationality, religion : Italian, Catholic 1

Family History : Aristocratic family of Northern Italy; married children 1

Education and Work History :

Graduate of secondary school

Employee of Chiari & Sonzogni (travel bureau)

Founded Turisanda Company, travel agency with head offices in Gallarate (Milan), branches in a lot of principal Italian cities and correspondents abroad.

An interview source states that Count Ferretti, having many acquaintances in ecclesiastical circles, tried to organize his company particularly among Catholics. Count Ferretti-Cavalcare was in charge of the Rome office and Ferretti organized trips and cruises which he led (Bella Giann-Modellini was on one of his trips to India and Egypt). In 1937, he tried to establish an office in New York, but failed. In 1939, the Company languished, due to difficult international conditions and lack of support from the Catholic authorities.

Owner of Soc. An. Luigi Ferretti (Imprese Edile), Genoa, 1943 2

Political History :

According to an interview source, Ferretti's ardent Catholicism does not reflect conviction, but was used as a means of obtaining powerful support. The same source considers him a decided supporter of Fascism.

Summary :

Ferretti's most important position was his Presidency of the Turisanda travelling company. According to an interview source this company had agents abroad and was organized primarily through Catholic contacts.

Italy. The company languished after 1938. He also owned a small construction firm of his own.

The same interview source considers him a decided supporter of Fascism. His tourist agency apparently put him in close touch with Catholic and fascist circles.

NEGROTTI CAMBIASO, Federico--P

Summary

As President of "Italo", Marchese Negrotto Cambiaso held an important position in Italian shipping. The record indicates that he was influential in the exploitation of Italian Somaliland and in the fields of insurance and finance as well.

He was among the early Fascists, joining the Party during the year of the March on Rome, and served the regime as National Councilor until the fall of Mussolini.

Summary:

Dr. Orlando has held influential positions in a wide range of industries, the metal, railroad, electrical and mechanical construction. The Italian metallurgical concern and the electric and telephone concern "La Centrale" are of primary importance in Italian industry.

Except for the fact that he was able to hold leading industrial positions during the Fascist regime, there is no available evidence of Fascist sympathy or activity on Dr. Orlando's part.

 Councillor, Soc. An. Ristrettissima di Ristrettissima, Milan (1934)

Political History:

According to a report of August 1943, Scata is "more active in politics than Count Follini (President of Consiglio Italiano) - close to Fascist regime; personal friend of the Grandi."

Summary:

continued

Scata is vice-president of Credito Italiano, the second largest of the largest Italian banks and with one of the largest Italian industries, the Ristrettissima, a large industrial company. He has held councillorships in other financial institutions with his seat in northern Europe and the East and in the financial, shipping, construction and insurance industries.

There is no available record of Scata's having held any party posts, although a report (the only available evidence of his political attitude) states that he has been active politically, close to the Fascist regime and a personal friend of the Grandi.

Affiliation : 1

Birth date and place : Unknown (Venice)

Nationality : Italian

Family History : According to an interview source, he is of a "Good Venetian family", father a career Army Officer; three brothers (eldest died in Milan; youngest Guglielmo lived in Padua as Director of the branch of Pirelli Company; Giuseppe was associated with Tullio); married to girl of Scussa family, Rue Amikham 32, Cairo.

Education and Work History :

Interview source summarizes his career as follows: Engaged with his brother in activity of mining, business and exploration for the past 25 years in Africa (region stretching from Kenya to the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan).

Worked in the formation of the Istituto Siero-Vaccinogeno Etiopico (Ethiopian Institute for Vaccine and Serum), Addis Ababa. Tullio Pastori obtained from Haile Selassie a long concession for the preparation and distribution in Ethiopia of the serum to immunize livestock against "afta epizootica" (foot disease). A similar institute had been founded in Britain by the Italian Government at Massawa. The Pastori company failed, despite its importance as a distributor of smallpox serum as well as serum for livestock, and the brothers disappeared. 1927

Tried to obtain from the Ethiopian Government a concession for the salt mines of Asciato, the richest plain of Africa.

The first white man to cross the Dankalia from the coast to the Bati road and thus proved that a line of communication could be established on this route. Also made a study for the opening of the Asseb-Dessie road.

With the above-mentioned projects, he returned to Italy in 1929 to offer them to the Italian Government and to settle a dispute between himself and Cora, the Italian Minister at Addis Ababa. Succeeded in obtaining a passport and agreed to furnish the General Staff of the Italian Army with his vast information in preparation for the conquest.
