SUBJECT : Agents' Equipment.

TO : See Distribution.

Attached are photographs of shoes which were issued to two SD agents in VERONA in late 44. As the issue was made from a central store, where a number of shoes of the same type were in stock it is possible that other SD agents will be found wearing similar footwear.

The following are the main characteristics of these shoes: -

1. Colour, brown.
2. Leather soles and heels.
3. Plain toes.
4. Large stitching thread on welt, widely spaced.
5. Similarity to American officers' shoes, but with slightly thicker sole.

SUBJECT:- Interrogation Technique in Respect of Suspected Enemy Agents

16 Feb 45

1. Our letter 1401/7/GSI(b) dated 26 Oct 44 dealt with the interrogation of known enemy agents, and set out in Appendices the points which should be covered in the course of such interrogations. The notes now forwarded herewith deal with the interrogation of suspected enemy agents, the "breaking down" of a suspect, the screening of refugees, etc.

2. In spite of the very considerable experience in interrogating and detecting enemy agents which has been gained in this theatre, conditions have been such that this experience has not been shared alike by all Counter-Intelligence agencies, but has tended to fall for the most part to those working in the larger cities, at RAPs, and on the main spy "high-ways" used by enemy agents to enter AOI.

3. Thus there are to-day certain CIC agents and FS NCOs to whom the interrogation of suspected enemy agents is a familiar matter, while others have had little experience of it.

4. While it is only possible to become expert through constant practice, an inexperienced interrogator can obtain satisfactory results by the systematic sifting of facts, provided that he follows a system and has a clear-cut idea of the points which he wishes to establish.

5. The attached notes have been compiled from material supplied by CI agencies with a wide experience of the interrogation of suspected enemy agents. It is hoped that they will assist those CIC agents and FS NCOs whose experience has not been so extensive.

6. The notes are divided into two parts - Part I dealing with data, observations and conclusions which have been assembled from the interrogation of many hundreds of suspects in ITALY, and Part II dealing with the actual technique of conducting an interrogation.

HQ 15th ARMY GROUP

INTERROGATION OF SUSPECTED ENEMY AGENTS

Part I - Characteristics of Suspects Encountered in ITALY

1. All persons arriving from EOT and all suspects, regardless of their innocent appearance or background, are possible agents until evidence to the contrary is obtained during interrogation. Therefore, since all enemy agents are necessarily liars because they are concealing their true identity or purpose, the first process in the screening of refugees and suspects for the purpose of detecting the enemy agent and then securing his confession is to select the liars from the non-liars.

2. The liars are many and their reasons for lying various; generally speaking, however, they fall into the following categories:-

(a) The deserter from the Republican Fascist Army.

(b) The deserter from the Royal Italian Army.

(c) The Black Market operator.

(d) The criminal or escaped criminal.

(e) The camp follower who seeks sympathy by falsely relating that he has but recently escaped from the Germans.

(f) The enemy agent.

3. Though it may be a comparatively simple matter to arrive at the conclusion that a suspect is lying, it is not so simple to decide into which category he falls. Experience has shown, however, that the stories told by suspects in each category tend to contain certain recognisable features. These are summarised below:-

(a) The deserter from the Republican Fascist Army

(i) Does not have to conceal the fact that he has crossed the lines; can account in detail for his journey through EOT to the front.

(ii) Explains away a long period of time by claiming employment by an organisation of which he cannot remember the manager, co-employees, policy, restrictions, etc.

(iii) Claims to have returned from imprisonment or forced labour in countries other than ITALY since 8 Sep 43.

(iv) Claims residence in towns in which units of the Republican Army are known to have been or to be in training or kept on have Headquarters.

51

(v) Possesses remnants of uniform or equipment.

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785016

select the items from the non-items.

2. The items are assigned their reasons for lying; various; generally speaking, however, they fall into the following categories:-

(a) The deserter from the Republican Fascist Army.

(b) The deserter from the Royal Italian Army.

(c) The Black Market operator.

(d) The criminal or escaped criminal.

(e) The camp follower who seeks sympathy by falsely relating that he has but recently escaped from the Germans.

(f) The enemy agent.

3. Though it may be a comparatively simple matter to arrive at the conclusion that a suspect is lying, it is not so simple to decide into which category he falls. Experience has shown, however, that the stories told by suspects in each category tend to contain certain recognisable features. These are summarised below:-

(a) The deserter from the Republican Fascist Army

(i) Does not have to conceal the fact that he has crossed the lines; can account in detail for his journey through ECZ to the front.

(ii) Explains away a long period of time by eliciting employment by an organisation of which he cannot remember the manager, co-employees, policy, restrictions, etc.

(iii) Claims to have returned from imprisonment or forced labour in countries other than ITALY since 8 Sep 43.

(iv) Claims residence in towns in which units of the Republican Army are known to have been or to be in training or that are to have Headquarters.

(v) Carries remnants of uniform or equipment.

The individual usually lies because he desires his freedom, but knows that he may be made a prisoner of war if his true identity is known; perhaps, also, he thinks that a worse fate than being classified as a prisoner of war awaits him if the truth is known. Assurance that the worst he could get is to be classified as a PW, or that not all who have served with the Republican forces are necessarily made PW, or that he can still be useful to ITALY by being incorporated in the Italian forces fighting with the Allies, will usually bring out the truth. This individual's all-consuming desire is usually to go to his family.

(b) The Deserter from the Royal Italian Army

(i) May claim to have crossed the lines, but cannot substantiate his story. May not even know where the front lines are.

(ii) Claims to have been repatriated from outside ITALY to Allied Occupied ITALY after the Armistice.

(iii) Claims employment or residence in localities where units of the Royal Italian Army are known to be in training or to have HQs.

(iv) Claims residence in towns recently liberated.

(v) Carries remnants of uniform or equipment.

This individual has usually served a lengthy period with the Italian forces and is disgusted with the treatment he is receiving or merely desires to divorce himself from the Army and return to civilian life. He will continue to lie as long as possible because, if the truth is known, he faces court-martial or at least a return to his unit.

(c) The Black Market operator

(i) Usually does not claim to have crossed the lines, but, if he does, can account in detail for his journey in EOT to the front.

(ii) Has recently left his home in AOI, but cannot give sufficient reason for leaving it. His home is usually a large city.

(iii) Is in possession of large sums of money, much of which is in Allied military currency.

(iv) Carries price lists or notes with figures on them.

This type of individual usually knows that he has violated AMG regulations and that he is therefore subject to prosecution and a jail sentence. He is invariably bull-headed even though his identity is obvious.

(d) The criminal or escaped criminal

(i) Usually does not claim to have crossed the lines, but claims that he was in a town other than his town of residence when it was overrun by the Allies.

(ii) Claims long residence in a town in which a penitentiary is located, e.g., VOLTERRA.

(iii) Claims to have changed his residence from his home town many years ago, but cannot give an adequate reason.

(iv) Claims persecution by the Fascists.

(c) The Black Market operator

(i) Usually does not claim to have crossed the lines, but, if he does, can account in detail for his journey in EAT to the forum.

(ii) Has recently left his home in ACT, but cannot give sufficient reason for leaving it. His home is usually a large city.

(iii) Is in possession of large sums of money, much of which is in Allied military currency.

(iv) Carries price lists or notes with figures on them.

This type of individual usually knows that he has violated AMG regulations and that he is therefore subject to prosecution and a jail sentence. He is invariably bull-headed even though his identity is obvious.

(d) The criminal or escaped criminal

(i) Usually does not claim to have crossed the lines, but claims that he was in a town other than his town of residence when it was overrun by the Allies.

(ii) Claims long residence in a town in which a penitentiary is located, e.g., VOLTERRA.

(iii) Claims to have changed his residence from his home town many years ago, but cannot give an adequate reason.

(iv) Claims persecution by the Fascists.

(v) Professes disregard of what is to happen to him and lacks fear of internment.

(vi) Lacks identity documents.

This type of individual has in many instances been released by the Germans, Fascists or Partisans before the expiration of his term and realizes that to disclose the truth may lead to his re-incarceration for the unexpired portion of his term.

(e) The camp Follower

(i) No evidence that he has crossed the front lines and, if he claims to have done so, cannot minutely describe his journey in EAT.

...../(ii)

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785016

(ii) Carries remnants of Allied military uniform or equipment or pictures and names of Allied soldiers.

(iii) Reacts to American slang.

(iv) Speaks Italian in the infinitive or occasionally uses an English word.

(v) Usually resident in ACT.

(vi) Is usually between the ages of 15 and 25.

(vii) Generally claims or be employed with some type of Allied military unit.

This type is usually an adventurer who has come up from Southern ITALY and on occasions will give a story of having come from ECT because he believes that this will attract sympathy. The story is usually exceedingly weak and easy to break.

(f) The enemy agent

(i) Evidence on his person or in his story definitely proving that he was recently in ECT.

(ii) Does not minutely account for his journey in ECT to the front; relates that he has travelled in successive stages in vehicles to the front, but inconsistencies exist in his description of the load, driver, type of vehicle, halts, etc.

(iii) Residence in in ECT.

(iv) Residence is now in ACT, but he cannot give sufficient reason for being away from it.

4. It should be noted that the enemy agent's story may contain any or all of the features listed above under other categories. However, of all the individuals who cross from ECT into ACT, it is only the enemy agent who need lie about the manner in which he reaches the front lines. It is only the enemy agent who is usually brought from the point of descent to the front in a German vehicle or under German escort, and it is, therefore, only the enemy agent who must manufacture a cover story for this part of his narrative.

5. If the interrogator is certain that the suspect was in ECT and recently crossed into ACT, and if the story relating the manner in which he came to the front lines is full of inconsistencies, then he can be regarded as a probable enemy agent. The suspect in his cover story may relate a trip which takes him close to enemy spy centres, suggesting that he was despatched from such a centre; his bearing, education, money, clothing, military history, etc, may further reveal causes for suspicion and place him as one being sent from a particular spy centre; BUT, should a lie be detected in his account of the final stage of his journey to the front, then that lie brands him as an enemy

(viii) Generally this is the explanation with some type of fitted military kit.

This type is usually an adventurer who has come up from Southern Italy and on occasions will give a story of having come from EGY because he believes that this will extract sympathy. The story is usually exceedingly weak and easy to break.

(c) The enemy agent

(i) Evidence on his person or in his story definitely proving that he was recently in EGY.

(ii) Does not minutely account for his journey in EGY to the front; relates that he was travelled in successive stages in vehicles to the front, but inconsistencies exist in his description of the load, driver, type of vehicle, halts, etc.

(iii) Residence in an EGY.

(iv) Residence is now in ADT, but he cannot give sufficient reason for being away from it.

4. It should be noted that the enemy agent's story may contain any or all of the features listed above under other categories. However, of all the individuals who cross from EGY into ADT, it is only the enemy agent who need lie about the manner in which he reached the front lines. It is only the enemy agent who is usually brought from the point of despatch to the front in a German vehicle or under German escort, and it is, therefore, only the enemy agent who must manufacture a cover story for this part of his narrative.

5. If the interrogator is certain that the suspect was in EGY and recently crossed into ADT, and if the story relating the manner in which he came to the front lines is full of inconsistencies, then he can be regarded as a probable enemy agent. The suspect in his cover story may relate a trip which takes him close to enemy spy centres, suggesting that he was despatched from such a centre; his bearing, direction, money, clothing, military history, etc. may further reveal causes for suspicion and place him as one being sent from a particular spy centre; BUT, should a lie be detected in his account of the final stage of his journey to the front, then that lie brands him as an enemy agent.

6. Consequently, a standard procedure can be followed in interrogating all such suspects. The interrogation should briefly cover subject's past schooling and military life and at least the names of all cities in which he has been since the Armistice. The chronological account should bring the subject from the date of the Armistice on 8 Sep 43 to the date of the interrogation: however briefly the earlier stages are covered, the five or six days prior to his crossing the front lines should be covered in minute detail, hour by hour, including descriptions of people, houses, food eaten, etc. If subject is an enemy agent and has been brought to the front lines by the Germans, it will be virtually impossible for him to recount a convincing story for these days.

become apparent. Do not, after the first hearing, allow your subject to "get away" with a lie, although for tactical reasons it may sometimes be as well how to return on it immediately.

(c) Suppression

If your subject is suppressing facts, put a question every time you suspect this to be the case. Let him know no period unaccounted for and cross-check dates. Switch from one eye to another to test him. A liar finds it easier to lie in strict chronological order.

(d) Keep one Hand and Keep His Undecided

Do not let your subject know how much you know or change your knowledge comes. By keeping him in the dark as to the extent of your knowledge, you will keep him guessing and afraid; and he will be worried if the origin of a piece of disconcerting information is concealed from him, since the unknown and the mysterious are always faintly awe-inspiring. Bring out facts when necessary to impress or startle him, but never for contemplation. If you get on to dangerous ground change the subject or break off the interrogation (you can always return when you have locked up the point). Above all, it is important to keep the initiative and to dominate the suspect throughout by creating an impression of omniscience; experience has shown that this is perhaps the greatest single factor in inducing a suspect to tell the truth.

(e) Point Attacks

It sometimes happens that a subject imagines himself suspected of things other than espionage or sabotage. To interrogate him rigorously on these other misdeeds (real or imagined) is often a very useful way of getting him to reveal the truth about his movements and occupations. In Italy a real or false charge of Black Market activity frequently leads to violent self-defence and the revelation of very useful facts.

(f) Bluff

Never bluff unless you are wholly sure it will succeed. If your bluff is called, you expose your own ignorance with consequent damage to your standing and reinforcement of your subject's morale.

(g) Control of Mood

It is important throughout the interrogation not to let the subject know your mind or your opinion of him. Any display of anger, contempt or condemnation must be done with a purpose and kept strictly under control. It is sometimes useful to pretend temporarily to believe what in fact you know to be untrue.

(h) Methods with Non-talkers

49

Subjects who instead of lying refuse to talk may do so for one or more of many reasons, such as fanaticism, fear, prudence, etc. In all cases of non-

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785016

Do not let your subject know how much you know or suspect from knowledge other than that obtained in the course of the present case. By feigning ignorance on certain points, you will often lull your subject into a false sense of security and he will frequently supply you with information which he would otherwise withhold. Be guarded in your remarks and do not permit your subject to draw you into any admissions or discussions. Remember that you are trying to get information from him, not to give it. Be careful not to express opinions as to the guilt or innocence of your subject. Do not tell your subject that you do not believe his denials of guilt. Do not tell your subject that you believe that other persons are guilty. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is telling the truth. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is lying. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is partially telling the truth. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is partially lying. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is telling the truth but withholding information. Do not tell your subject that you believe that he is lying but telling some truth

Declassified E.O. 12356 Section 3.3/NND No. 785016

4. Treatment

Suspects should be kept segregated until their interrogation is over or at least under way. Guards should be instructed that no friendliness is to be shown, no comforts given and no privileges allowed, unless instructed. All usual things must be held in reserve as rewards for co-operation. Extra blankets in cold weather, cigarettes, reading matter, exercise, companionship - these things are powerful weapons if used discriminately. On the other hand a minimum standard should be maintained, as an ill-fed, ill-housed suspect will have the opposite effect from that desired. Some suspects are best interrogated soon after they arrive and before they have had time to realise what sort of place they are in; others are best left isolated for a time. Complete isolation for a week is sometimes enough to break down all resistance.

5. General

In conclusion some general points:-

- Check your documents. They sometimes lie.

- Try kindness first. It often succeeds and when it does not, you can "turn nasty"; if you begin by being unpleasant you cannot better to mild without looking fool.

- Take note of details. It is generally these that give away secret stories.

- Never argue with a suspect. He may be a better dialectician than you are.

- One plan of attack at a time. "Combined attacks" may end in confusion.

- Never make promises. Simply say or imply that a man who tells the truth will naturally receive more consideration than one who tells lies.

- Be suspicious of "explanations". Anything which has to be "explained" is "shady".

- Be on your guard against discouragements, praise of the Allies and Democracy. If the subject had really believed in these things he probably would not be where he is.

1. Attached is photograph of a new type of radio transmitter/receiver likely to be used by enemy agents.

2. From the front, the set appears to be a normal commercial receiver, there being nothing on the dial or controls to indicate otherwise.

3. The transmitting and receiving units are each mounted on a separate chassis, the transmitting unit being at the right-hand end of the cabinet as shown in the second photograph.

4. To prepare the set for transmitting, it is only necessary to plug in the crystal, headset and key, connect the aerial and earth, and adjust the controls.

5. Such sets may be provided with a panel covering the back making them even more difficult to recognise.
